Q—Because your contract has a no-discrimination clause in it.

A—We can't try it. If the Navy, Army and Signal Corps with which we have contracts want to do something about it, they'll have to. We believe on the basis of fifty years' experience that it can't work.

U.S. Cartridge Co.

Makers of bullets; employs thousands of workers and a few hundred colored who are confined to jim-crow Building No. 202, with the result that there is jim-crow status, seniority and privileges for colored workers, and their employment is limited. Company defense: The jim-crow setup was initiated only after it was agreed to by colored organizations including the Urban League and the March on Washington Committee. In jim-crow building, colored workers are employed in top skills and have colored foremen and supervisors.

MISS BEATRICE MARSHALL

Answered ad in paper calling for 2,000 women to make bullets; no experience needed.

8-12-44

MR. TRIMBLE—What happened when you applied?

MISS MARSHALL—I was told they weren't hiring for Building 202, the colored building.

MISS BERTHA BROWN

Employed by company for six months and when layoff came, she was dismissed.

MR. TRIMBLE—Is it your contention that, because the company operates a jim-crow building for colored workers, you would still be employed if seniority rules had been enforced on a plant-wide basis?

MISS BROWN — Yes, because some white girls who have less than six months' experience with the company are still working.

MISS MARGEY FOSTER and JOHN JOYNER

Testified to being laid off despite seniority.

THEODORE BROWN

FEPC examiner.

Q—Did you have a conference with company officials about the lay-off of colored workers?

MR. BROWN—Yes, I was told colored were laid off on a ratio basis, according to population, and that there was one seniority roll for white workers and another for colored.

WILLIAM SENTER

Vice-president, United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America (UAW), CIO; testified that, back in 1942, the company began the policy of placing colored employees in a separate building, a plan it now admits is a mistake.

MR. TRIMBLE—What has been your experience with the situation?

8-12-44

MR. SENTER—The company is making every effort to solve its problems in the framework of a jim-crow setup and is failing.

It has followed the pattern set by the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce, which in July, 1942, issued a statement of policy to plants which would sooner or later have to utilize colored workers and recommended separate and jim-crow buildings, rest rooms, shifts, etc., despite contrary recommendations of our union and other groups. Because of jim crow, colored people suffer most when loyoffs come.

RAY SULLIVAN

General plant manager.

MR. TRIMBLE—Do all of your plants make the same kind of ammunition?

MR. SULLIVAN — No, but in 202, the colored building, the workers are employed in the highest skills, from foreman on down, and we initiated this setup only after a conference with colored groups. We now hire 10 per cent colored and 90 per cent white.

Q—What are your plans for long-range reconversion; will you try integration?

A—No, we'd do as we have done in the past — segregate colored workers first, then train them and then integrate.

Q—Wouldn't it be far better to start integration first?

A—No, the customs and community patterns influence what you can do.

8-12-44

Q—What organization agreed to the segregation plan?

A—I remember two, the Urban League and the March on Washington Committee.

TED McNEIL

Chairman of local March on Washington: The statement by company officials that the March on Washington Committee agreed to segregation is absolutely untrue. Our position has always been and will always be that segregation in itself is discrimination.

LARY Bows to FEPC; Will Hire Colored Operators

Afro American — Baltimore, Md.
8-19-44

By J. ROBERT SMITH

LOS ANGELES, Calif.—Representatives of the Los Angeles Railway Company, at a very late hour Wednesday night, agreed to bring its hiring policies into conformity with the President's Executive Order 8802, outlawing discrimination in employment.

The action followed the issuance of an order by the Fair Employment Practice Committee immediately after the close of its hearings here, directing the company to "cease and desist" from its refusal to hire colored persons and to promote those qualified to be motormen, conductors and bus drivers.

The agreement was reached in a closed conference held in the local FEPC offices between company officials, representatives of the union and members of the committee.

Under the agreement, the street railway company will take immediate steps leading to compliance with the order, working in co-operation with the FEPC regional director.

Labor Priority to be Restored

The FEPC agreed also to recommend to the War Manpower Commission that the company's labor priority rights, removed on March 24 last, be restored to it.

A statement issued by the committee following the conference said:

8-19-44

"It is understood that reasonable time will be necessary to eliminate the discriminatory practices found to exist, but if after a reasonable time the discriminatory practices have not been eliminated, the committee will take affirmative action to obtain compliance."

Following issuance of the statement, members of the committee entrained for San Francisco.

Hearings Opened Monday

The FEPC opened its three-day hearing in the State Building here Monday before an overflow crowd.

Under investigation were the alleged discriminatory hiring practices of the city's railway system (LARY) which has no colored motormen or conductors and four West Coast shipyards accused of being in collusion with the AFL Boilermakers' Union in denying full membership to colored workers.

8-19-44

Hubbard Fires Opening Gun

Opening gun in the railway case was fired by Maceo Hubbard, Philadelphia FEPC counsel, who drew from Mrs. Cortez Strange, senior U.S. Employment Service interviewer, the information that despite calls for workers, the company would hire colored men only as yardmen.

Mrs. Strange testified that she had frequently tried to get J. I. Finn, placement manager of LARY, to accept colored applicants.

Witnesses Support Charges

Supporting charges of discrimination against the transit company were the following who were denied jobs:

8-19-44

Mrs. Nora Sladen, 26, former conductor with the San Francisco Municipal Railway, who also instructed white and colored learners in that city and who testified she was told by Finn, "I am from the South and colored people are happier in domestic work;

James A. Herod, father of six children, who sought a job as motorman, but was told colored men were only acceptable as porters;

Job Bias Admitted

J. Stuart Neary, counsel for the company, who admitted that colored persons had been denied jobs as motormen and conductors, but contended that upgrading to these jobs would result in a work stoppage similar to last week's Philadelphia situation.

He said that if the company was required to end this discrimination, the government should assume responsibility.

Lockheed Gives Lie to Claim

Paul Wetcher, white, gave the lie to Los Angeles Railway Company's contention that a strike would follow the hiring or upgrading of colored persons to positions of street-car conductors or motormen shortly before the Fair Employment Practice Committee ended its hearings here Tuesday.

8-19-44

Mr. Wetcher, assistant personnel manager at Lockheed Aircraft, one of the plants cited before the FEPC three years ago, told the committee that today Lockheed hires more than 3,000 colored workers in all capacities such as clerks, stenographers and typists as well as in the skilled and semi-skilled field.

"We have no separate this or that in the plant," he added. "Everyone uses the same facilities and we have no racial problems. There have been no strikes, threats or work stoppages."

In an interview with this correspondent, Chairman Ross, at the close of the hearings, said:

templated by the Scanlon-Dawson-La Follette bill.

Imperative you urge community, Catholic, Protestant, Jewish, labor, civic and other leaders to wire their Senators immediately urging favorable vote for appropriation.

throughout the country and to local FEPC committees A. Philip Randolph and Allan Knight Chalmer, co-chairmen of the National Committee for a Permanent Fair Employment Practices Committee made the following appeal:

Appropriation for existing FEPC passed House Friday by only four votes. There is great danger that this may be defeated in the Senate this week. Loss of existing FEPC will not only be a great blow to national morale and to war effort, but will also greatly handicap our fight for the permanent FEPC con-

Seek Support For Defense — Chicago Permanent FEPC

6-3-44

WASHINGTON — In a wire to some 30 national organizations

FEPC Forces Company To Hire Negro Seamen

Peoples Voice—New York, N.Y.

Three Negro seamen who had been refused jobs by a southern steamship company were hired by that company last week following action by the FEPC Regional Office. According to Edward Lawson, FEPC Regional Director, the three men—Roy Jackson, a wiper, William Jackson, an able-bodied seaman; and Kenneth Mathias, a quartermaster—were referred to the vessel, a tanker, by the National Maritime Union on Tuesday, April 25.

When they reached the vessel they were advised that they could not be used because of their race. One of the engineers allegedly told Roy Jackson, "It would be better if you got another ship. This crew is from Texas. You know how Southern boys are." 5-13-44

Jackson replied, "I've sailed with them before. I don't mind."

"You can be stubborn if you want to," the engineer advised him, "but I wouldn't."

Jackson then called the NMU hiring hall and reported the incident. While he and the other colored seamen "stood by," an NMU patrolman attempted to straighten out the matter. Because technicalities in the union contract made an immediate settlement impossible, the FEPC Regional Office was advised of the incident and asked to intervene.

Samuel Risk, FEPC Examiner, boarded the vessel and after a lengthy conference with its Master, obtained an agreement that all three men would be hired immediately, with retroactive pay to the date on which they were first referred by the union hall.

A subsequent check-up indicated that all three men were so employed, and that they sailed as members of the ship's crew when it left port recently.

Evans Is Named FEP Director In 4th Regional Area

Defender—Chicago, Ill.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(NNPA)—The naming of Joseph H. B. Evans as acting regional director of region 4 of the FEPC this week followed close on the heels of the exposure of a reluctance on the part of the Director of Field Operations of the agency, Will Maslow, to name a Negro to the position vacated by Frank Hook who resigned to run again for Congress in Michigan. 4-29-44

Evans was associate director of the region and is in line for automatic promotion to the regional directorship. Mr. Maslow is reported to lean to the belief that a more effective job can be done in the region—covering Maryland, Virginia and the District of Columbia—by a white director with political connections.

In view of Evans' acquaintanceship with the problems of the region and the high efficiency rating given him by Hook, such a move would open the agency to a charge of discrimination which it is organized to combat.

White Southern Daily Speaks Out For FEPC

Daily World—Atlanta, Ga.

Equal Pay For Equal Work Is Termed Need

9-22-44

DURHAM, N. C.—(S N S)—A strong editorial in the Durham Morning Herald, Sept. 11, pulled no punches in striking at the favorite social equality argument against the creation of a permanent FEPC. Declaring such theories as this unfair, undemocratic and un-American, the editorial pointed out that "Equal opportunity has nothing whatever to do with 'social equality'—what ever those words mean. Equal opportunity means just what it says—a chance for every one according to his character and abilities, plus equal pay for equal work. This, and no more, is what the Fair Employment Practices Committee has stood for and does stand for.

9-22-44

"Now a strong fight is ahead if a permanent FEPC is not to be blocked. Hearings in the House and Senate committee rooms show that the Negro is still descriminated against. He still doesn't get the same pay the white man gets for the same work. He is still the first to go when there are cutbacks. And the Philadelphia transit strike showed that the blame isn't entirely management's. It goes deep into the ranks of union men and women who ought to know better.

"There are no new arguments against discrimination. There are just the old ones. It is unfair. It is undemocratic. It is unAmerican. Or, if such an appeal falls on deaf ears, we may find that it breaks down wage levels by creating a sub-marginal class. It creates racial strife in which the white man suffers just as much as the Negro—maybe more. It hurts us among our friends abroad. Wise, civilized and patriotic Americans will take their stand against it."

Warns Negro Problems In South Endangers The Jew

Defender—Chicago, Ill.

4-22-44

ATLANTA — (ANP) — Warning that the "Jew in the south cannot maintain his economic position while quietly and passively accepting discriminatory employment policies as applied to the Negro," A. Bruce Hunt, director of the southeastern regional office of the FEPC, told members of the Atlanta chapter, B'nai Brith, Wednesday that "your security and particularly that of your children depends upon the consummation of a national policy of non discrimination, supported by a strong, effective and articulate public opinion."

"This is so," Mr. Hunt continued, "because it is the pre-occupation of the white Gentile south with the submergence of the larger Negro minority group which has given you greater freedom here as compared with Jews in communities where they constitute the largest minority group." 4-22-44

The speaker, after reviewing the history of the FEPC and the reasons for its creation, warned that "discrimination in employment, as any Jew knows, may take many different forms, whether because of race, creed, color, national origin or alienage. The discrimination may be direct by an employer against an applicant for employment, such as refusal to hire, or through the protest of other workers.

"It may startle you to learn," asserted Mr. Hunt, "that only one out of every 10 Negroes is placed in war industries at better than common labor. A white worker has eight times as good a chance to start at a better than a common laborer job. Any newly employed woman worker has four times as good a chance as a Negro male. Surely in a war of jeeps, landing barges, planes, ships and transportation, this is a sorry sacrifice to prejudice."

Three Leaders In Conference Fifty Minutes

Daily World—Atlanta, Ga.

President Is Receptive To Racial Requests

10-1-44

By ERNEST E JOHNSON

WASHINGTON—(A Roosevelt conferred for 50 minutes with three Negro leaders Friday and promised them he would support action in the present congress on permanent FEPC legislation, early adoption of a bill to protect Negroes in the armed forces against violence, and said that the war department would shortly announce a change in policy regarding the controversial redistribution centers.

Walter White, Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune and Dr. Channing H. Tobias were the individuals who called on the President and informed him of the current displeasures of Negro people. As spokesman for the group, White declared the conference as "interesting and pleasant." He added that it was "strictly non-political" but left it to reporters to interpret its bearing upon the elections.

10-1-44

Regarding FEPC White said the President "pledged his support by saying 'I invented it.' " The group urged that the coalition bill now in committees of both chambers be made "must" legislation when congress reconvenes on Nov. 1.

The bill dealing with violence against Negroes in the armed forces has already passed the senate and is locked in the house judiciary. White said this bill is of "particular concern" to Negroes because there have been numerous assaults and killings of Negro soldiers, especially in the south. He cited the Spicely case in Durham where a bus driver killed a soldier, was tried and an acquittal was returned in 28 minutes.

White said the expected war department statement would announce "considerable abandonment of the segregation policy," and he added that "we were pleased with the change." No further hint of its contents was given.

A plea for an end to exploitation of colonial peoples was laid before the President also, especially those in the Pacific area. The NAACP secretary said he planned to visit India soon.

10-1-44

This is the first conference the President has had with Negro leaders since July, 1941, in which there has been a free exchange of views. It was as a result of that conference that the present FEPC was born. Since then the President has met with a group of ministers who sought to send Bishop John A. Gregg on a tour of army camps, and again early this year he greeted a delegation of Negro publish-

Gains In Negro Jobs Related By Deputy Of FEP

Defender—Chicago, Ill.

10-7-44

ST. PAUL, Minn.—Increased use of Negroes and other minority group workers during the war effort is a major step forward in democracy, George M. Johnson, deputy chairman of the President's Committee on Fair Employment Practice, said here last week. The post-war period can either entrench or nullify that advance, Johnson added.

Addressing the annual meeting of the St. Paul Urban League, Deputy Chairman Johnson said:

"Our minorities in America must have the pledge that not only will they have jobs in the post-war period but also, in the same measure as other workers, they will have jobs in keeping with their skill and ability. It is not enough to promise this act of justice; we must also seal the pledge with the full faith of the United States Government in the form of affirmative Federal action."

made "must legislation" in his 78th Congress. 10-7-44

Will Support Action

The President, according to Mr. White, indicated his approval and said he would support such action.

This is the first public indication given by President Roosevelt, who created the Fair Employment Practice Committee by executive order in 1941, that he favors and will support making permanent the agency he set up as a war measure to combat discrimination because of race, creed, color or national origin.

Action on the part of the House Labor Committee can be taken during the Congressional recess, and the legislation be ready for the calendar immediately upon return of Congress on November 14, White declared.

In Columbus, Ohio, at the National Urban League convention FEP Chairman Malcolm Ross told delegates that President Roosevelt favors early enactment of legislation for permanent FEPC.

Peace Problem

Ross said: "As chairman of the FEPC, I can assure you that President Roosevelt is deeply interested in these (post-war employment) issues, and I can assure you that he favors the early enactment of a permanent FEPC law so that the problem which we are now facing during the war may be effectively met in the days of peace." 10-7-44

The White House meeting also discussed pending legislation to make it a federal criminal offense to attack a person wearing the uniform of the American armed forces. The bill, S. 1127, is to amend an already existing law making it a federal offense to assault or kill certain federal officers. The present law, however, does not include members of the Army, Navy, or Marines. The amendment was proposed by the War Department and approved by the Department of Justice. It has passed the Senate, and is pending in the House Judiciary Committee.

The President was reported by the group to have pledged his support of this legislation.

Mr. White pointed out to reporters at the White House after the conference that this legislaion is of particular concern to Negroes because there have been numerous assaults upon Negro soldiers in the South: "The last killing of a soldier named Spicely in Durham, N. C.," he said, "who was shot and killed by a bus driver, was tried in a state court and the driver acquitted in 28 minutes."

Governor Defends Race Segregation

Defender — Chicago
10-21-44 911.

AUBURN, Ala.— (ANP) —The FEPC was attacked as "hostile to the genius of government" and segregation and the poll tax defended as necessary safeguards to southern economy by Gov. Chauncey M. Sparks speaking Tuesday before the 26th annual convention of Alabama Kiwanians.

He described the FEPC as a "thing as hostile to the genius of American government as any thing that has been brought up and put into practice within its whole history."

Racial segregation, he declared, is necessary to preserve the integrity of both the white and Negro races, and he said that "constant agitation, both through army regulations and through insistence of political preachers and vote seekers," has resulted in a spirit of suspension on the part of Negroes.

Dewey's Group Launches Drive On Intolerance

Call-Kansas City, Mo
6-16-44

ALBANY, N. Y.—Clothed with full legislative powers and a $25,000 fund with which to carry on its work, the New York State Temporary Commission on Discrimination will launch a state-wide probe of intolerance next Monday, June 19, it was revealed here this week.

Governor Thomas E. Dewey, whose action created the commission, is expected to appear in person or to send a special message to the commission at its initial meeting.

The commission, whose powers are the same as that of a legislative committee, has all the authority it needs to do a thorough job of investigating discrimination in the state and of developing necessary legislation to bring an end to this evil.

While the commission can establish a Permanent Fair Employment Practice Committee (FEPC) that is just one of the agencies it can create to provide greater opportunities to all the people of the state.

It is charged with responsibility with going even further than merely studying questions of discrimination in employment, but all other phases of life in which discrimination occurs, which "threatens not only the rights and proper privileges of inhabitants of the state, but menaces the institutions and foundation of a free democratic state."

6-16-44

Governor Dewey has expressed the hope that the commission would go to the heart of the problem and make recommendations for really comprehensive legistion. Members of the commission appear in the mood for just such a task. Their attitude is well summed up in statements by three of them, who spoke out boldly this week as to the commission's possibilities and their hopes for it.

Ready For Action

Mrs. Sidney Borg, vice president of the Federation for Support of Jewish Philanthropic Societies, said "In accepting membership on the New York State Temporary Commission on Discrimination, I do so with the hope and confidence that something can be accomplished to increase mutual understanding and create wider opportunities for all groups."

Frank L. Weil, distinguished New York attorney, said that, "The commission will address itself to the very great problem of discrimination and as a member of that commission, I shall, of course, participate in its work to the end that the commission can make an important contribution in eliminating racial and religious discrimination in the state of New York."

6-16-44

Samuel Hausman, Brooklyn textile manufacturer, spoke bluntly. He said, "I am definitely against any form of discrimination based on race, creed, color or national origin, and am glad to have the opportunity to serve on the Temporary Commission specifically formed to consider this problem."

The Case of the FEPC Bill

Amsterdam News - New York, N. Y.

A Senate Sub-Committee on Education headed by Senator Chavez (D., of New Mexico), last week reported favorably a bill to set up a permanent Fair Employment Practice Committee. It is believed that the entire Senate Education Committee will give immediate approval to the measure. Meantime, it is hoped that the House Labor Committee headed by Congresswoman Norton (D., of N. J.) will act favbrably on a similar House Bill so that both houses of Congress can have a chance to vote on it before this term ends. The House Labor Committee has been playing fast and loose with the bill and its members have been double-talking about it, though it is one of the most necessary pieces of legislation before Congress. 9-30-44

Now is not the time for anyone or any party to try to grab credit for passing a measure that would establish a permanent FEPC. The tremendous amount of job discrimination because of color and religion that has been aired during the war when every able-bodied man and woman is needed by industry is only a smattering of the amount that will obtain after the war, if something isn't done to prevent it. Inherent in this kind of discrimination is social and racial dynamite, the kind this country cannot afford at any time. There must be some sensible, fair and equitabe treatment of colored workers as well as white when the wheels of industry begin to turn at a peace-time speed.

That neither employers nor some of the unions will treat Negro workers fairly is a fact that has long since been proven. That the Federal Government can accomplish much to effect fair employment practices, regardless of color or religion, has been indicated by the fair amount of success hamstrung FEPC already in existence. Therefore, the only thing left to do is for Congress to pass the permanent FEPC bill now and not after the election when those who sorely want Negroes' votes will have no immediate use for them, or after the war ends when the possibility of the passabe of this kind of legislation will be lessened. 9-30-44

The Republicans came out boldly in favor of a permanent FEPC in their platform, thus squarely putting the Democrats on the spot. But the Democrats have a chance to prove that they, too, favor fair play in employment by leading the way in Congress for the enactment of the permanent FEPC bill now before it. The Republican congressmen, of course, should and must go along with the Democrats, if they really mean to put over the measure.

A bill that would outlaw job discrimination because of color or religion should be placed above mere politics. Now is the time for both parties to prove their honesty about wanting to set up a permanent government agency that would act to abolish job discrimination by joining in passing the FEPC bill immediately.

FEPC Acts On Lundeberg Defy

Daily Worker
New York, N. Y.

The Seafarers International Union, AFL, has been summoned by the President's Fair Employment Practice Committee to answer 25 charges of violating Executive orders 8802 and 9346, Edward Lawson, FEPC regional director, announced yesterday. Hearing is scheduled for 10 a.m. next Tuesday in the Bar Association Building, 42 W. 44 St.

Lawson said the FEPC for more than a year has been investigating complaints of anti-Negro practices, and for six months has been trying to persuade Harry Lundeberg, international president of the SIU, to bring the union's policy into conformity with that of the FEPC. 10-6-44

The SIU has a long and admitted record of Negro discrimination. Its 3,000 Negro members, with their jimcrow hiring halls, are assigned only to stewards' department on ships with which it has contracts.

The FEPC declares that this practice has resulted in delaying at least one ship scheduled to sail overseas with a convoy.

Discriminatory Practices

Daily World - Atlanta, Ga

By AFL Probed By FEPC

6-29-44

NEW YORK—(A N P) — The FEPC stepped in last week to investigate the case of Chief Carpenter John M. Stevens. Although a member of the AFL carpenters' union, and while his war activities took him to Naples, Sicily and the Anzio beacheads, Stevens was discriminated upon and ousted from two ships by the International Seafarers union, AFL, during the month of June.

According to a report, Stevens at first took his complaint before the SIU membership meeting where a union official, from the floor, advised that the union was not a "social group" nor one interested in social reforms and that neither the President nor the FEPC "can force white men to sleep in the same room with Negroes."

Stevens next move was to consult the FEPC; here an official said the agency plans to hold public hearings on at least a half-dozen complaints against the discriminatory practices of the union.

Chief Carpenter Stevens was educated in South Carolina and at Boston college.. He resigned as a member of the SIU, and according to an announcement, plans to join the National Maritime union, CIO, where he feels his chances of getting back to sea will be less difficult.

6-29-44

New Fight for FEPC

Daily Worker - New York, N.Y.

DURING the past few days the members of the United States Senate have received a petition from 100 prominent Americans. It asks the continuance of the Fair Employment Practices Committee and the quick passage of the $585,000 appropriation for its work this coming year. 6-10-44

This lead given by these outstanding citizens can spur us all into doing something effective for the FEPC. On May 26 the appropriation for this valuable agency passed the House of Representatives by a vote of 123 to 119. This slender margin in the lower house gives some measure of the bitter test the proposal faces in the Senate.

If the people assert themselves, however, they can make the Senate take the proper course. They can assure the continued life of the FEPC. While the proposal for a permanent FEPC may not injure the appropriation fight, it is important to concentrate on the latter for the moment.

Originally created by the President's executive order, the FEPC has done much in breaking ground for the employment of Negroes, Jews, Mexicans, and the foreign-born who would otherwise have been barred from the jobs which they obtained. This has aroused the enmity of powerful interests who want to keep the working forces of the nation divided, in order to assure a perpetual pool of cheap labor. Allied with them have been the polltaxers of the South. And in this alliance there is another member, the Republican Party's high command.

6-10-44

As strong as this alliance looks, the American people are stronger. The mobilization for the Negro Freedom Rally on June 26 in New York can serve as the mobilization for the passage of the FEPC appropriation. Let us all do everything we can to press for favorable action in the Senate, so that when we meet in the Freedom Rally it may be to celebrate a FEPC victory.

THE POINT IS THIS

By CLARENCE TOLIVER

(The opinions expressed by this columnist do not necessarily reflect the editorial opinion of the Washington Tribune.—The Editor.)

The FEPC and the CIO's Economic Objectives

Tribune - Washington, D.C.

CIO delegates to the tune of three hundred went to a conference at the Willard Hotel here last week-end and came out with among other things, a recommendation that the new Congress establish a National Planning Board as machinery to implement the economic Bill of Rights contained in President Roosevelt's message to Congress last January.

Of course, in the conference a number of other matters of paramount importance at this juncture of labor's political awareness were discussed.

However, for the purposes of this writing, I want to select one central significant fact which should be thought of in connection with the present FEPC controversy.

And that is this: The political actionists of the CIO resolved to make the wide implications of economic Bill of Rights the "basic objective of our national policy." 6-24-44

This puts emphasis on every one of the eight provisions of the new Bill of Rights, but particularly on the first one: "The right of every person to a job."

It seems to me that this was the answer Harry McAlpin should have given the President when the Chief Executive asked how he could give further support to the struggle the FEPC was making for survival.

* * *

For not only was the President's message to Congress in January a great social document on economic freedom, but it is also the creed by which reactionaries and tory Congressmen can be judged treasonable when they attempt to sabotage the rights of the American citizens.

Take the initial sentence of this document on the state of the Union:

"This Nation in the past two years has become an active partner in the world's war against human slavery.

"We have joined with like-minded peoples in order to defend ourselves in a world that has been gravely threatened with gangster rule.

"But I do not think that any of us Americans can be content with mere survival. Sacrifices that we and our Allies are making impose upon us all a sacred obligation to see to it that out of this war we and our children will gain something better than mere survival." 6-24-44

The President spoke of the guaranty of the original Bill of Rights of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. The message goes on:

"As our Nation has grown in size and statue, however—as our industrial economy expanded—these political rights proved inadequate to assure us equality in the pursuit of happiness.

* * *

"We have come to a clear realization of the fact that true individual freedom cannot exist without economic security and independence. 'Necessitous men are not free men.' People who are hungry and out of a job are the stuff of which dictatorships are made."

Speaking of the new Bill of Rights the President told Congress: "America's own rightful place in the world depends in large part upon how fully these and similar rights have been carried out into practice for our citizens. For unless there is security here at home there can be no lasting peace in the world."

Here are what I believe to be salient references to the great message to Congress which enbodied the new Bill of Rights. It is the essence of such thoughts as this that has influenced the CIO's Political Action Committee to endorse F.D.R. and Vice-President Wallace for re-election.

In so doing the Committee has under-written the Fair Employment Practice Committee. For the FEPC stands for everything implied in the new Bill of Rights and the January message to Congress . . . "that out of this war we and our children will gain something better than mere survival."

This is why we can say that the fight must go on from the Normandy beachhead to the building of a lasting peace. 6-24-44

* * *

SECOND BILL OF RIGHTS

Points in what he termed "a second bill of rights" laid before Congress in his January message follow:

"The right to a useful and remunerative job in the industries or shops or farms or mines of the Nation;

"The right to earn enough to provide adequate food and clothing and recreation;

"The right of every farmer to raise and sell his products at a return which will give him and his family a decent living;

"The right of every businessman, large and small, to trade in an atmosphere of freedom from unfair competition and domination by monopolies at home or abroad; 6-24-44

"The right of every family to a decent home.

"The right to adequate medical care and the opportunity to achieve and enjoy good health;

"The right to adequate protection from the economic fears of old age, sickness, accident, and unemployment;

"The right to a good education."

War News Camouflages Move to Knife FEPC

PM - New York, N.Y.

6-12-44

For Finish Fight In Senate But Lines Form

PM's Bureau

WASHINGTON, June 12.—The Fair Employment Practice Committee (FEPC) today faced a new struggle for survival.

An unheralded meeting of a Senate Appropriations Subcommittee voted over the week-end 3 to 2 to deny any funds to the agency that

Led by Poll-taxers

But none of these ironies appeared to have any effect on the "pure-white" poll taxers who were directing the war against FEPC.

Up till this year the FEPC has been supported by funds directly provided by the White House. However, heads of the agency as well as other Government officials were not too disturbed by enactment of legislation requiring the Leader of the crusade to put the FEPC is expected to break forth in the Senate within the next 48 hours.

Russell to Blame

Ironically, the Russell, Georgia Democrat and influential member of the Appropriations unit. In the closed-door causes of the Subcommittee Russell is understood to have played a key role in pressing for the decision that would doom the agency.

As on other sectors of the Washington front, the invasion news was behind which the camouflage were operating in foes of FEPC were fearful that the coup might be engineered this time because groups that have normally raised their voices in behalf of the agency shared the nation-wide preoccupation with military bulletins.

Supporters of FEPC were pleading for fullest production to support the fighting front and were entreating war workers to exert a supreme effort on the assembly lines. It came, too, at a time when men of all faiths and colors were battling shoulder-to-shoulder in the storming of Hitler's European Fortress.

The issue goes before the full membership of the Appropriations Committee today. Whatever the outcome of that session, a full-dress floor-fight over the future of the FEPC is expected to break forth in the Senate within the next 48 hours.

Committee to secure Congressional appropriations, feeling that this procedure would provide a stronger political foundation for the anti-discrimination fight.

But it looks now as if the Southern bloc has chosen this occasion for a final free-for-all on the whole issue of curbing racial bias at the factory gates. 6-12-44

The latest blow on FEPC occurred while the Committee and its supporters were pressing for legislation that would put the agency on a permanent basis. Malcolm Ross, Committee Chairman, testified Friday before the House Labor Committee and appealed for passage of the Scanlon-Dawson-LaFollette bill that would give the FEPC the same status as other full-fledged Government agencies.

In that hearing Ross pointed out that more than a million Negroes will be returning to civilian life from the armed forces at the war's end and that the problem of re-employment would assume new and grave proportions for the members of minority groups.

The action of the Senate Sub-committee, however, would not merely drive the FEPC from the post-war picture; it would halt its activitie immediately, permitting a resumption of prejudice-as-usual in key war plants throughout the country with resultant manpower losses. 6-12-44

From the time of its inception the FEPC has been under fire from Southern Democrats; each time it has narrowly escaped extinction. Observers believe, that this may be its toughest fight of all. Leaders of the anti-FEPC movement were reported to be offering a wide variety of "trades" to other legislators in an effort to sustain the Sub-committee's action.

Lasting FEPC Urged by Wise

Constitution
Atlanta, Ga.

WASHINGTON, June 13.—(AP)—Telling the House Labor Committee there is a "real Fascist peril," in America, Dr. Stephen S. Wise, president of the American Jewish Congress, said today failure to establish a permanent Fair Employment Practices Commission would multiply postwar employment difficulties. 6-14-44

America's "Fascist peril," he said, takes the form of discrimination in employment and of the "bitterest and filthiest anti-Semitism."

Asserting that race discrimination in employment was one of Fascism's most effective weapons, Wise told the committee, considering a bill to establish a permanent FEPC:

"The postwar difficulties are going to be grave enough without being gratuitously multiplied by reason of the failure of congress to make the FEPC permanent.

"The FEPC," he added, "has done a most worthwhile work. It has made millions of Americans feel that our government is not only fighting for democracy in Yugo-Slavia 6-14-44 but is preparing to battle for democracy at home."

Replying to a question of Representative Fisher, Democrat, Texas, Wise said he would rather take from the employer the right to hire and fire, by establishing an agency like the proposed FEPC, than to take "from any man" the right to employment.

Racism Hits Jews, Too

Specific charges of discrimination against Jews, according to the American Jewish Congress, include: 2-14-44

Difficulty in obtaining employment, regardless of qualifications, until war began; inability at present to secure employment after passing civil service examination, many who pass never being called;

Problems encountered in attempting to secure upgrading or salary increases; frequent "hazing" of Jewish workers due to management's policy of permitting anti-Semitism among employees to go unchecked;

Penalties imposed upon Jewish workers who took off high holy days, even though permission was sought and clear-cut ruling was refused; and consistent unwillingness of Labor Board and personnel officers at the yard to co-operate with the American Jewish Congress.

FEPC Voted Half a Million

Constitution
Atlanta, Ga.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—(AP)—The latest move by southern Democrats to abolish President Roosevelt's fair employment practices committee failed today when the Senate Appropriations Committee voted, 14 to 6, to restore the committee's $500,000 appropriation for 1945. 6-13-44

The fund had been voted down by a senate subcommittee, after it was approved earlier by the house.

In addition, the appropriations group turned down, on a 7-to-7 tie vote, a motion by Senator Russell, Democrat, Georgia, to prohibit the use of more than 25 per cent of the FEPC appropriations for salaries of Negro employes.

Senator Thomas, Democrat, Oklahoma, offered the motion in committee to approve the FEPC appropriations. The vote by which it carried was announced as:

For the appropriation: Democrats, Hayden, Arizona; Thomas, Oklahoma; Tymings, Maryland; McCarran, Nevada; O'Mahoney, Wyoming; Green, Rhode Island; Maloney, Connecticut; Chavez, New Mexico; Mead, New York; Republicans, Gurney, South Dakota; Brooks, Illinois; Reed, Kansas; Burton, Ohio, and Ball, Minnesota.

Against the appropriation: Democrats, McKellar, Tennessee; Russell, Georgia; Overton, Louisiana; Bankhead, Alabama; Maybank, South Carolina, and Republican Idlman, Oregon. 6-13-44

Senator Russell, asserting that six FEPC regional directors are Negroes, declared that "the majority of cases coming before FEPC are decided by field officers who are Negroes." He added that the purpose of his amendment "is to prevent future discrimination of this nature against white people by the FEPC in employing its personnel."

The tie vote by which Russell's motion lost showed the following for the motion: McKellar, Russell, Overton, Bankhead, Maybank, Holman and Reed. Voting against it were: Thomas, Green, Chavez, Mead, Gurney, Burton and Ball.

FEPC Closes 989 Cases in 6 Mos.; 1,957 Pending

Afro-American - Baltimore, Md.
2-19-44

War Plants Figure in 692 Complaints of Bias; Government, 288; Unions, 9

WASHINGTON

The President's Committee on Fair Employment Practice reported last week that during the last six months of 1943, the agency closed a total of 989 cases involving charges of employment discrimination because of race, creed, color or national origin.

During the same period, however, a progressively mounting number of new cases, averaging more than 300 a month, left the committee with 1,957 cases at beginning of 1944, Malcolm Ross, FEPC chairman, said.

Of the cases closed, 359 were adjustments in compliance with Executive Order 9346, banning employment discrimination. The remaining cases were dismissed by the committee or withdrawn by the complainant.

Colored Persons Hit Hardest

The 716 cases involving discrimination because of race (mostly colored) formed the largest category among the 989 cases. Discrimination because of creed (mostly Jewish) arose in 127, alienage was involved in 102, and national origin in 44 cases.

Among the cases closed, war industries accounted for a total of 692 complaints of discrimination, government, 288, and trade unions, 9.

208 Cases Dismissed

In addition to the 359 satisfactory adjustments, the closed cases consisted of 36 cases dismissed for lack of jurisdiction, 208 because of insufficient evidence, 256 on the merits, 123 withdrawn by the complainant, and 7 cases dismissed for other reasons.

"The 630 cases in those four categories," Chairman Ross said, "represented allegations of discrimination which would have remained as continuing disputes had they not been subjected to careful examination by a third party."

Summaries of Reports

Summaries of regional reports covering the Eastern area follow:

EDWARD H. LAWSON, acting regional director for Me., Vt., N.H., Mass., Conn., R.I., and director for New York: 2-19-44

1. Met failure to upgrade colored workers in numerous cases.

2. Most outstanding case is in New York area, where eight maritime unions are involved and eighty-five shipping companies are under investigation, for refusal to allow colored seaman to man ships.

[EDITOR'S NOTE: Harry Lundborg of the lily-white Sailors' Union of the Pacific is alleged to have asked the Smith Committee for an investigation of the War Shipping Administration, because it observed the policy of sending seamen on vessels regardless of color.]

G. JAMES FLEMING, Penna., N.J., Del.:

1. Usually use colored workers at lowest skills and are reluctant to upgrade them.

2. Discrimination particularly against women.

3. Evidence of tampering with efficiency records to cause dismissal and demotion of colored.

FRANK E. HOOK, D.C., Md., W.Va., W.Va., N.C., and Va.:

1. Employment record fairly good, but upgrading poor.

2. Have suspicions that efficiency records have been tampered with to prevent upgrading or cause dismissal.

Stop Quibbling Over FEPC Bills, Marcantonio Pleads

Afro-American - Baltimore, Md.

NEW YORK—Unified support of all Congressional bills for a permanent FEPC, rather than division through debating the relative merits of such measures, was urged this week by Rep. Vito Marcantonio (ALP, N.Y.). 2-19-44

Marcantonio's own bill and one introduced jointly by Reps. William L. Dawson (Dem., Ill.), Thomas E. Scanlon (Dem., Pa.), and Charles M. LaFollette (Rep., Ind.), have been widely discussed from the angle of preference, and there have been inferences of a conflict between the respective sponsors.

Conflict Denied

In a statement clarifying his position, Marcantonio said in part:

"I am giving my full support to all such bills. Congressmen Dawson and Scanlon have likewise shown their support of my bill by their signing of my House Discharge Petition No. 18 to force consideration by the House of my bill.

"There is no contradiction whatsoever between urging a member of Congress to support the demand for immediate hearings on the Dawson-Scanlon bill and asking him at the same time to sign House Discharge Petition No. 18 to force early consideration of my bill. 2-19-44

Amendments Possible

"The quickest way to get House action on any legislation for a permanent FEPC is by securing 218 signatures to my discharge petition. If this is done, it will be a simple matter to amend my bill to contain features of the other bills, or any new features not now contained in any exisiting FEPC bill.

"We defeat ourselves by debating what is good and what is bad in each bill at a time when our whole strength should be mustered to secure swift action in Congress on this vital subject."

FEPC Probe of Racism at Brooklyn Navy Yard Asked

Afro-American - Baltimore, Md.
2-19-44

Citizens' Committee, Jewish Congress Charge Discrimination Against Colored People, Jews

BROOKLYN, N.Y.—The Citizens' Anti-Discrimination Committee on the Brooklyn Navy Yard has asked the regional office of the Fair Employment Practice Committee for an "immediate investigation" of employment discrimination at the Navy Yard, Lorenzo Davis, chairman, announced last week.

Listing fourteen specific charges of discrimination against colored and Jewish workers, the committee asks a thorough probe of employment policies at the yard "to determine to what extent they are in violation of the President's Executive Orders 8802 and 9346.

The seven specific charges of discrimination against colored workers include:

Specific Charges Listed

Refusal to employ colored workers on labor boards or in employment offices; use of markings other than photos on identification badges to differentiate colored and white employees;

Refusal to upgrade colored employees, denial of salary increases, ignoring their seniority rights; excluding them from positions as instructors, supervisors or other positions of authority;

Discrimination against colored women in assignment to jobs; concentrating colored workers on night shifts—first shift to be affected by layoffs; intimidation of workers who report discrimination to authorities within the yard.

47d-1944

Foreign

Allies Bar Jim Crow Law In Germany

Defender — Chicago, Ill

LONDON.—There will be no Jim Crow in post-war Germany. 9-16-44

When Allied troops march onto German soil, American and British civil affairs officers are ready to immediately post a decree which will prohibit "any law which discriminates against persons on a basis of race, color or creed" and will stipulate punishment for failure to observe this order, it was learned here this week.

The plan for this directive which will be printed in large posters and placed in prominent spots in every German town occupied has been drafted by the Allied Military Government and wording of the orders agreed upon in advance of the march onto German soil.

In Chicago this week Edwin R. Embree, president of the Julius Rosenwald Fund, lauded the Allied anti-discrimination plans for Germany and added:

"It is fine that we are insisting on equality and decency in human relations in Germany. But does America regard democracy as only an export commodity? Is it too precious to use at home?"

Embree, whose organization annually contributes thousands of dollars to improve race relations in America, continued: 9-16-44

"These democratic rules will have to be enforced by an army that has segregation and discrimination in its own ranks, many of whose officers have insisted that Americans be discriminated against on account of race and color in England and other friendly countries where our troops are stationed. These democratic rules will be forced on Germany by a country which still has segregation by law in seventeen of its states, and discriminaton by practice in every state."

"How ironic that we are instituting in enemy countries customs we are not willing to follow at home," Embree said.

MANY WHITE TROOPS TRY POISON MINDS OF ALLIES

8-31-44

Some Have Even Resorted To Physical Violence To PREVENT ASSOCIATION OF NEGRO SOLDIERS WITH ALLIED POPULACE

New York — Racial friction between colored and white American soldiers overseas, although reflected to a marked degree [illegible] General Dwight Eisenhower's war effort and should be completely eliminated, said Walter White, NAACP secretary, in a nationwide radio talk over the Columbia Broadcasting System Sunday. 8-31-44

"The division in our ranks and the fomenting of racial and other antagonisms are postponing the day of victory," he declared. "They are creating doubt among our allies as to our sincerity when we assert that we are fighting a war for freedom for all peoples. Whoever causes the war to last one single day longer than necessary is as much a traitor to our country as one who sinks a troop ship or reveals military secrets to the enemy. If for no other reason than to win the war as soon as it is humanly possible and to save the lives of American men—perhaps among them the life of your son—it is imperative that any person, whatever his race, who causes trouble should be stopped. That will be done only if the people of America and their government stop evading or temporizing with this fundamental question whose solution is imperative if we are ever to have a world peace." 8-31-44

White, who spent 15 weeks in Great Britain, Ireland, North Africa and Italy, said he had traveled more than 20,000 miles and had talked with many officers, soldiers and civilians.

"The majority of American soldiers abroad have been decent Americans interested in but one objective —winning the war as speedily as possible and returning home. A surprisingly large percentage of them, both officers and enlisted personnel, are concerned over the bad name being given to the United States by the friction which some of their number have caused. A gratifyingly large percentage manifest deep concern about the world problem of race and the necessity of working out a solution to it. Many of these are from the South. But, unfortunately, a highly aggressive and vocal minority has sought to transplant patterns of racial behavior like that of the most backward states of the South to the countries where they have been sent as soldiers to fight a war against Nazi racial theories.

"Some of them have sought to poison the minds of the British, Italian, North African and other peoples against Negro Americans. They have told such stories as these: that Negroes are inferior, illiterate, diseased, and savages. Some of them have even used physical violence to prevent the association of Negro soldiers with British, Italian and other people. They have objected to the use of places of public accommodation such as pubs and restaurants by Negro soldiers. 8-31-44

"Such behavior has puzzled and antagonized many of the people of these countries. They have found it difficult to understand why some American soldiers should be so violent in their hatred of other American soldiers, especially when all of them are fighting in a common cause. They have resented the action of visitors presuming to dictate to them who they should or should not invite into their homes or associate with. Many of our allies are puzzled too by the American pattern of segregation. Repeatedly I was asked why the United States, fighting a war for freedom, should send abroad two armies—one white and one Negro. Generals Eisenhower and John C. H. Lee of the European theatre of operations were praised by Mr. White for issuing "unequivocal directives and taking other steps to eliminate the cause of trouble." 8-31-44

White scored the events of the past few months on the home front saying :"certain members of Congress have poured forth hate-filled tirades against the Commander in Chief of our nation and against racial and religious minorities, as vicious and intemperate in content and tone as any sent out by Goebbels from Berlin." He cited the politics in the soldiers' vote bill, the boasts of filibusters against the anti-poll tax bill, and the statements of defiance against the supreme court for its opinion in the Texas primary case. He also hit Congressman Andrew J. May of Kentucky for his threat against the War department which caused it to cancel its plan to distribute the pamphlet "The Races of Mankind." 8-31-44

White said, "as men approach actual combat and face the dangers of combat, they tend to discount many prejudices," and he praised the combat record of the 99th Pursuit Squadron and the work of Negro supply troops on the Anzio beachhead.

The radio talk inaugurated the nationwide membership campaign of the NAACP which opened May 1 and will close June 30.

Soldiers' Conduct Wins the British

By SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT

LONDON (ANP) — Good character and exemplary behavior of our soldiers in England have awakened the spirit of the British people to the democratic rights of colored people.

It has taken a horrible war to do it, but as a result, color prejudice in England is fast becoming an ancient institution.

In the big factories there is no suggestion of color discrimination, and newspaper reports of color prejudice are received with indignation.

When any local authority has endeavored to introduce a color bar at dances, this has usually resulted in a smaller attendance. It is reported that one band refused to play until the bar was lifted.

A letter to the Daily Worker gives an account of an elderly lady who was filled with apprehension when two colored soldiers were billeted to her home. She locker her bedroom door for the night.

These two soldiers served her tea in bed, prepared her breakfast, and tidied up the kitchen. "They are now the firmest of friends."

Thousands of colored Americans in the British underlend-lease. They are bright, well-situated and well-directed, but a recreation center, as good as the co-operation of the community allow.

No one can enjoy himself where he feels he is not wanted. Recently when I visited a delightful Red Cross club for coloured troops I wondered if that was the reason why so few soldiers were there.

Prejudice is a hardy plant and its seeds are easily scattered. Even States have accepted reactionary attitudes toward the colored people, held by some Americans, and if need be, die—have thus been slandered with no opportunity to reply, or find, as they some would in America, public and trans- voluble defenders to reply for over- them.

Subtly and gradually, through contact with Britons Colder to Afro Americans — Baltimore, Md.

Our Boys; Blame JC

London Writer Tells of Separate Clubs; Mayor Ignored Troops; Pleads for Tolerance

By S. L. SOLON

(From London's News Chronicle)

Are the colored American troops as happy today as they were in 1942 as allies and guests of the British people? The blunt and simple answer is: no. 7-15-44

I have recently talked to these troops chartered about Britain. I have seen the facilities available for their recreation and heard community leaders discuss the changes that have taken place in the attitudes of some Britons towards them.

I was told by a colored woman employed by the American Red Cross: "I never felt discrimination until I tried to get housing for an English home."

Separate Clubs Opened

The American Red Cross has opened colored staffed clubs, supported by funds from the American people, and the facilities from

Prejudice Transferred

Inevitably, in their contact with the British population, some Americans have sought to transfer these attitudes to their overseas hosts.

no fault of their own—the records show they are remarkably well-behaved troops—they have felt the mood of a community turn gradually cooler until an icy wall has barred them entirely from community life. 7-15-44

Mayor Ignored Troops

I know one community where the mayor publicly welcomed the incoming American white troops while the colored troops were entirely ignored. Far from their homes, families, communites, they have had few of the consolations, little of the companionship and still less of the welcome which have served the whites.

Britian has a heritage of tolerance and liberalism which has contributed vastly to freedom over the earth. It would be a mistake for Britons to assume that now, in deference to reactionary attitudes, it is time to sell that heritage short.

No soldier's morale has suffered from being given a clearer understanding of the liberal purposes for which we are fighting this war. 7-16-44

The morale of many thousands of soldiers can be affected by the conviction that the slogans under which they march to battle are meaningless for them because their skins are brown.

FOUND STUDIED EFFORT IN ITALY TO POISON MINDS OF POPULACE 5-11-44

Try to Transplant Racial Hate Wherever U. S. Troops Stationed

The Associated Press is exclusively revealing for for the first time sections of the report prepared by Walter White, executive secretary for the NAACP, for the war department dealing with his visit to North Africa and Italy. These disclosures are being made in two parts, of which this is the first.

by Ernest E. Johnson

Washington, May 9—(ANP) Walter White, executive secretary of the NAACP, returned to the states on April 15 from a 20,000 mile tour of two important theatres of operation on the other side of the Atlantic ocean. 5-11-44

Seven days later he layed before war department officials have a nine page report plus four exhibits covering his observations in North Africa and the middle eastern theatre in which he declared that his "first and strangest impression was the difference in racial attitudes in active theatres of war as contrasted with those in theatres of preparation for action."

In his conclusions White said in part: "Continuation of separation and discrimination is in part responsible for a less determined spirit in the army than is necessary to meet the very crucial days which lie ahead before this war is won," and added his "conviction that dark though the picture may seem at times, there is much ground for hope." 5-44

An earlier report covering his visit to the European theatre of operations, England in particular, was forwarded to the department early in February. The entire trip consumed 15 weeks and provided the association's official with a first hand picture of the conduct and experiences of Negro soldiers abroad. 5-11-44

Not only did he concern himself with the matter of morale, utilization of troops, but also social patterns which are being transplanted by American officers and enlisted personnel, and the ways and means they are using to indoctrinate the English and the Italian peoples with their own type of thinking.

White, however, found, as others who have returned from fighting areas, that proximity to danger has been a great leveler. He reported: "As men approach actual combat and the dangers of death, the tendency becomes more manifest to ignore or to drp off pettiness such as racial prejudice. At the Anzio beachhead, for example, men eat, sleep and asentsociate together with apparent complete ignoring of race or color of their neighbors. Memories of dangers shared appear to leave a greater tolerance." 5-11-44

He learned though that "dangerous rumors" are beginning to be spread in England as compared to the situation in in Italy regarding the combat ability of Negro soldiers. He attributed much of this to the heavy preponderance of service units in England whereas the presence and prowess of the 99th Pursuit squadron and the 332nd Fighter group have done much to dispel this erroneous thinking in Italy.

Regarding the conversion of the 2nd Cavalry division to a service unit, White said he had been called upon to speak to several thousand of the officers and men. "I have never in my life faced so down cast an audience," he reported. "Because of the circumstances of my presence in the theatre, I did not discuss, after consulting with Col. Trudeau, the details of the transfer which had just been made, but contented myself with saying that I was aware of the reasons for their unhappiness and would discuss it with the war department." 5-11-44

The spread of anti-Negro propaganda in the North African and Middle Eastern theatres was duly noted, but compared more favorably with the "dangerous spreading of such stories" in the European theatre, White said.

He brought back with him a leaflet which had been circulated in Naples purporting to be a Neapolitan street song to be sung to the tune of "The Cup of Coffee." According to the translation, it was entitled "Italian Women Arm in Arm with American Negroes." 5-11-44

White recommended that G-2 (army intelligence) "or other appropriate agencies of the government, be instructed to ascertain who is responsible for the writing, printing and distribution of this and another anti-Negro publication that will be mentioned later It is widely rumored in Naples that an American army colonel supplied the copy and paid for the printing of this leaflet. I did not have facilities or time to investigate this rumor But the existence of such a rumor, as will readily be seen, is harmful. Investigation and action should be taken to establish the truth or falsehood of this report." 5-11-44

The other instance mentioned by the NAACP official was the printing and posting in public places of Naples of a green placard with black lettering approximately 24 x 36 inches, allegedly under the auspices of the "Italian American Committee for the Preservation of the Italian Race." American soldiers reportedly had posted the sign. Here is an excerpt from the placard as offered in the White report:

"We Italian Americans, with deep pain must see that a certain feminine nucleus of Naples, having been dragged in the mire, dare to walk on the street with the Negro, and dares also to invite one home ——Now when will harsh reality enlighten you? When will your honor, your pride in being white and Italian incite you to justly scorn the Negro? ——You cannot understand how you humiliate us. All Americans speak thus: Look, the Italian people are fond of Negroes." 5-11-44

A third practice in Naples, White reported, was the supplying of manifestly forged orders to hotel proprietors forbidding them to admit Negroes. He submitted an exhibit of the order which indicated the hours when persons might visit a particular hotel, rates charged and the remark that "No Negoes" were allowed. The "order" was signed by an American army colonel. 5-11-44

Regarding such material White "strongly recommends that the war department instruct responsible subordinates to take more prompt and vigorous action against anti-Negro propaganda. This should be done,", he added, "not only to prevent trouble, but because such propaganda increasingly disturbs the peoples of the countries where the racial pattern of states of the deep south is being transferred by some American officers and enlisted men, and brings into question the sincerity of the United States in the war itself." 5-11-44

"There is further reason that the brightest of all impressions I bring back to the United States with me is the considerable number of American white soldiers and officers who see the global implications of the race question, and who are eager to do something about."

SPARKS' APPEAL IGNORED BY FDR

Post - Birmingham Ala

Governor Gets No Answer To Protest On Lifting Segregation Rule

8-29-44

By United Press.

MONTGOMERY, Aug. 29.—Stating that he regretted that he had received no answer from President Roosevelt to his protest of a War Department race segregation ban at Maxwell Field here, Gov. Chauncey Sparks said today that he hoped there were no political implications in the order.

He described the Army's ruling against racial discrimination in the military establishment's post exchange, theater, and buses as of "such vital importance" that it warranted immediate attention.

Sparks telegraphed the President on Aug. 24, protesting the order, and asked Air Force officials to hold the matter in abeyance until he received an answer.

The Alabama governor said that if any political implications were involved, "then we of the South will find it difficult to hold the South within its traditional Democratic allegiance in the years to come."

The segregation ban reportedly was sent to all Air Force installations.

8-29-44

Maxwell Field officials refused to comment on the order, but civilian employes have reported it still in effect.

1,000 Hit 'Army Scottsboro'

Daily Worker - New York N.Y.

8-29-44

More than 1,000 labor and civic leaders and organizations have appealed to President Roosevelt for clemency in the case of Frank Fisher, Jr., and Edward R. Loury, Negro soldiers framed on a rape charge in New Caledonia, the International Labor Defense announced yesterday.

The prisoners, originally sentenced to life imprisonment, are now confined at McNeil Island Federal penitentiary for terms of 10 and eight years respectively. They were convicted and sentenced by general court-martial in New Caledonia after the officer in charge of their preliminary investigation had recommended that rape charges against them be dropped for lack of evidence of coercion.

"To uphold the hand of the President in his effort to insure national unity and heighten the fighting morale of all Americans, we are asking for endorsements of this clemency appeal by leading Americans in every walk of life, in all parts of the country," it was stated by Congressman Vito Marcantonio, ILD president.

47d-1944

M. P. Brutality

Sergeant Shot In Soldier, MP Clash

Journal + Guide
Norfolk, Va., 6-3-44

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(NNPA)—Sgt. Wellington D. Abrams, of this city, was reported in critical condition from a gunshot wound suffered in an exchange of shots between colored troops and white military police at Brookley Field near Mobile, Ala., last week. Army public relations said Sgt. Abrams was shot accidentally "while assisting the military police."

The incident is reported to have occurred when white military police took a white civilian into the barracks of the Negro soldiers in an effort to identify a soldier the civilian alleged had robbed him.

Brig. Gen. James A. Mollison ordered all the colored troops confined to the military area. A white soldier was also reported seriously wounded.

Gen. Mollison, in the midst of the affray, is reported to have gone to the Negro barracks, unarmed, and called on the soldiers to surrender their arms. They did. 6-3-44

Mrs. Viola Abrams, wife of the injured sergeant, left for Mobile after being notified by the War Department of the shooting.

47d-1944

M.P. Brutality

Dining Car Crew Put Off Train By Marine Officer

Call - Kansas City Mo. 1-28-44

OGDEN, Utah.—(ANP)— Investigation of the removal of an entire colored kitchen and dining car crew from the Union Pacific's main train, 69294, by a white marine lieutenant and MP's at Lyndyl, Utah, on Jan. 8, is being made, according to Francis C. Franklin, secretary of an organization known as the Western Fair Employment Practice committee.

CAUSE OF INCIDENT

The incident which resulted in the removal of all colored members of dining car and kitchen departments is said to have started after mealtime when the tables were cleared and all members of the crew joined in some form of recreation, this time craps, or "dice." The white steward, whose name has not been disclosed, is reported to have participated which cost him approximately $45, a sum which he did not enjoy losing.

He became angry about his loss. Knowing that he could not possibly whip the entire crew, he realized that at least he could have his feelings assuaged by ordering them off the train on a charge of insubordination, failure to properly perform their duties, or any number of charges, Franklin contends. One of the crew is said to have refused to be removed, and angrily challenged the steward, whereupon the steward left the diner and returned with a young marine, second liteutenant and a number of white MP's.

After lining all of the colored crew against the wall, the youthful marine lieutenant tried out his choice "cuss" words, not forgetting to use the word "n.....," as he said, according to crew members:

"You damn 'n.....' ought to be all shot right here, but we will give you a chance. At the next stop I want you all to get off this train and when you get off I want you to start running like hell, or you may be shot in the back."

No effort was reported to have been made by the young marine officer to investigate both sides of the story. At the next stop, the crew left. Charges of insubordination were believed by W. M. Jeffers, president of the Union Pacific railroad, according to a bulletin issued the following day, Jan. 9, to all dining car employes from Omaha: 1-28-44

BULLETIN AND TELEGRAM

"On military train yesterday crew of colored cooks and waiters not performing work satisfactorily and one of the waiters attacked steward with knife, after which steward appealed to train commander who found food unsatisfactory and service poor, and when steward told him crew would not obey or do anything ordered of them, and after military officers had made inspection of diner, the officers ordered all waiters and cooks removed from train, which was done at Lynndyl, and military took charge of the train.

"In connection with this case, quote President Jeffers' telegram J-25 date:

"Referring removal on order U. S. Marine Corps officers in charge Main Train 69294, Lynndyl, Saturday evening, account gross insubordination and threatened violence to Steward, of the entire crew of colored waiters and kitchen men diner 3633."

Jeffers allegedly ordered Supt. Hanson, DC and H department, to get out by wire a bulletin to all DC and H department officials, stewards and supervisors about the case, describing it, and distinctly saying that the diner was taken over and "these men removed on orders of the military officers in charge of the train."

"I want it distinctly stated and brought to the attention of overy one of these colored employes in Union Pacific dining car service that this sort of conduct will not be tolerated and that if there is any repetition, they will be summarily discharged and ordered off the property at the nearest terminal and they will not be given accommodations or transportation," Jeffers telegram quoted in the bulletin, said. 1-28-44

HAVE MADE SACRIFICES

"Make it clear to them that this country is at war and they may anticipate that if there is more difficulty on these troop trains military authorities will take charge and remove them from the service; further that if there is any similar repetition on regular passenger trains I will instruct, that if it becomes necessary, armed guards be placed on each one of our diners to maintain order."

"Many people involved by this order and bulletin have been faithful employes of the Union Pacific for a quarter of a century," declared Franklin. "They have come west as pioneers just as members of other races. They have made all kinds of sacrifices to do so."

Notwithstanding the loyalty of many of these colored employes, men who have answered the call to return to work after being dropped by the company during the depression, Jeffers said, "I am not going to temporize with any such foolishness on the part of these crews, and they are either going to maintain a proper attitude at all times or get out of Union Pacific service."

Gilbert W. Haley, vice commander of the local colored chapter of the American Legion and vice president of the local waiters and cooks union, has been appointed as one of six members of the railroad investigating committee, Franklin revealed.

Benning Soldier Shot By M.P. on Atlanta Street

5-5-44

Arthur Gather, Negro soldier assigned to Fort Benning, is in a serious condition at Fort McPherson hospital as the result of bullet wounds he received early yesterday. Constitution - Atlanta, Ga.

While walking on Auburn avenue, Corporal Martin J. LePacik, military policeman, stopped Gather and asked to see his papers. LePacik started to examine them, when Gather broke and ran, the M. P. said. LePacik added he gave chase. As the Negro refused to stop, the corporal said he fired when he reached the corner of Hillard and Old Wheat streets. 5-5-44

Police first took Gather to Grady hospital and then transferred him to Fort McPherson.

COMMAND
Time-Chicago, Ill. 7-10-44

Object Lesson

Good Army men winced at the news: a major had been having military prisoners flogged. It was no extenuation of his conduct that he had been trying to restore discipline in a madhouse of a prison in a Mississippi Army camp. 7-10-44

Major Louis Rothschild Lefkoff, a misfit officer, was a reflection on his superiors' inertia: he had moved to new jobs and higher rank through a series of military failures. Finally found ill fitted for active command, Lefkoff was sent to Camp Van Dorn, a dreary clump of tar-paper barracks and huts some 50 miles south of Natchez as police and prison officer.

The general prisoners in his charge—all committed on serious offenses—were a rough lot. They refused to get up for reveille, held kangaroo courts and beat up fellow inmates, threatened Lefkoff's family. Lefkoff tried punishment—taking away all privileges, making them "walk the track" with heavy packs, depriving them of their mail. When nothing seemed to work, he lost his head.

He issued clubs to the prison guards, ordered them to beat up a recalcitrant prisoner. When the guards refused, he called in MPs. The nine ringleaders of the prison gang (six white men, three Negroes) were taken into a tar-papered room. While the major stood outside, armed with a pistol and a submachine gun, the MPs flogged the prisoners' bare backsides with weighted rubber hoses. One man had to be taken to the hospital. By nightfall, the story was all over camp—and Major Lefkoff's military career had ended.

Said the court-martial: "The offense was the result of malassignment and incompetency. . . ." Louis Rothschild Lefkoff was found guilty, dismissed from the service, sentenced to a year and a day at hard labor. For his superiors, who had joined in the superannuated Army game of passing the buck—no punishment.

Shore Patrolmen Beat Negro Soldier To Near Death At Grand Central

World - Memphis, Tenn.

BY NAT D. WILLIAMS

I saw a Negro soldier beaten half to death in the Grand Central Station at Memphis last Tuesday night 7-21-44

I was mailing the copy for the Friday issue of the Memphis World. I didn't have a chance to find the soldier's name. The Shore Patrol police were beating him too fast.

The soldier hadn't done anything I know because I walked up when the Naval Patrol officer started talking to him. The little black soldier was standing in the line holding his luggage... in the midst of a dense crowd .. in the Memphis Grand Central Station.

The Shore Patrolmen ...two of them .. walked up to him ..they said something to him .. he answered. They didn't like his answer. In a matter of seconds .. they had jumped on him. The short, stocky, dark-haired shore patrolmen was the aggressor.

The colored soldier tried to hold back the shore patrolman's arm, the one holding the wooden billet ....then the second shore patrolman struck him .. the black soldier did his best to protect himself ....when they finished with him ..amidst the pleading and crying of Negro women .. and even white women .. they beat the black man down to his knees.. .they beat him unconscious. 7-21-44

I walked up and wanted to know why they were beating him like that ...They told me to "shove off." The last I saw of the Poor Black soldier boy... he was being led off .. the Shore Patrolmen told me to "shove off" again ..I wonder if the short, stocky, dark-haired, shoreman would have been so "brave" if he had been in a company of black folk....Looking at that slack soldier....my God!.... What is Democracy?

Ten Negro Soldiers Reported Beaten By Police In Mississippi, War Dept. Told

Age-Herald, Birmingham, Ala. 4-18-44

A detailed list of ten instances in which Negro soldiers have been beaten severely either by military or civilian police in Greenville and Lyland, Mississippi during the past 21 months has been submitted to Brig. Gen. Robert H. Dunlop, in the Adjutant General's office of the War department by the NAACP.

In submitting the list which contained names, serial numbers and dates, the NAACP said these instances of "few instances" of attack on a soldier is an attack on the United States, whether perpetrated by a foreign or domestic enemy."

The letter cited the following victims of military police: Pvt. William P. Watkins, Pvt. Morris L. Murchison, Pvt. James Brown, Pfc. Amos Davis and a second beating of William P. Watkins now a corporal, on April 9, 1944.

The following victims of civilian police were cited to the Assistant General's office: Pvt. Harry T. Hackett, Pvt. Stuart Marks, Pvt. Robert L. Scott, Cpl. Theodore R. Taylor, and Pvt. Joe N. Lewis.

47d-1944

M.P. Brutality

Dining Car Crew Put Off Train By Marine Officer

Call - Kansas City Mo. 1-28-44

OGDEN, Utah.—(ANP)— Investigation of the removal of an entire colored kitchen and dining car crew from the Union Pacific's main train, 69294, by a white marine lieutenant and MP's at Lynndyl, Utah, on Jan. 8, is being made, according to Francis C. Franklin, secretary of an organization known as the Western Fair Employment Practice committee.

CAUSE OF INCIDENT

The incident which resulted in the removal of all colored members of dining car and kitchen departments is said to have started after mealtime when the tables were cleared and all members of the crew joined in some form of recreation, this time craps, or "dice." The white steward, whose name has not been disclosed, is reported to have participated which cost him approximately $45, a sum which he did not enjoy losing.

He became angry about his loss. Knowing that he could not possibly whip the entire crew, he realized that at least he could have his feelings assuaged by ordering them off the train on a charge of insubordination, failure to properly perform their duties, or any number of charges, Franklin contends. One of the crew is said to have refused to be removed, and angrily challenged the steward, whereupon the steward left the diner and returned with a young marine, second liteutenant and a number of white MP's.

After lining all of the colored crew against the wall, the youthful marine lieutenant tried out his choice "cuss" words, not forgetting to use the word "n....," as he said, according to crew members:

"You damn 'n.....' ought to be all shot right here, but we will give you a chance. At the next stop I want you all to get off this train and when you get off I want you to start running like hell, or you may be shot in the back."

No effort was reported to have been made by the young marine officer to investigate both sides of the story. At the next stop, the crew left. Charges of insubordination were believed by W. M. Jeffers, president of the Union Pacific railroad, according to a bulletin issued the following day, Jan. 9, to all dining car employes from Omaha: 1-28-44

BULLETIN AND TELEGRAM

"On military train yesterday crew of colored cooks and waiters not performing work satisfactorily and one of the waiters attacked steward with knife, after which steward appealed to train commander who found food unsatisfactory and service poor, and when steward told him crew would not obey or do anything ordered of them, and after military officers had made inspection of diner, the officers ordered all waiters and cooks removed from train, which was done at Lynndyl, and military took charge of the train.

"In connection with this case, quote President Jeffers' telegram J-25 date:

"Referring removal on order U. S. Marine Corps officers in charge Main Train 69294, Lynndyl, Saturday evening, account gross insubordination and threatened violence to Steward, of the entire crew of colored waiters and kitchen men diner 3633."

Jeffers allegedly ordered Supt. Hanson, DC and H department, to get out by wire a bulletin to all DC and H department officials, stewards and supervisors about the case, describing it, and distinctly saying that the diner was taken over and "these men removed on orders of the military officers in charge of the train."

"I want it distinctly stated and brought to the attention of overy one of these colored employes in Union Pacific dining car service that this sort of conduct will not be tolerated and that if there is any repetition, they will be summarily discharged and ordered off the property at the nearest terminal and they will not be given accommodations or transportation," Jeffers telegram quoted in the bulletin, said. 1-28-44

HAVE MADE SACRIFICES

"Make it clear to them that this country is at war and they may anticipate that if there is more difficulty on these troop trains military authorities will take charge and remove them from the service; further that if there is any similar repetition on regular passenger trains I will instruct, that if it becomes necessary, armed guards be placed on each one of our diners to maintain order."

"Many people involved by this order and bulletin have been faithful employes of the Union Pacific for a quarter of a century," declared Franklin. "They have come west as pioneers just as members of other races. They have made all kinds of sacrifices to do so."

Notwithstanding the loyalty of many of these colored employes, men who have answered the call to return to work after being dropped by the company during the depression, Jeffers said, "I am not going to temporize with any such foolishness on the part of these crews, and they are either going to maintain a proper attitude at all times or get out of Union Pacific service."

Gilbert W. Haley, vice commander of the local colored chapter of the American Legion and vice president of the local waiters and cooks union, has been appointed as one of six members of the railroad investigating committee, Franklin revealed.

Benning Soldier Shot By M.P. on Atlanta Street

5-5-44

Arthur Gather, Negro soldier assigned to Fort Benning, is in a serious condition at Fort McPherson hospital as the result of bullet wounds he received early yesterday. Constitution - Atlanta, Ga

While walking on Auburn avenue, Corporal Martin J. LePacik, military policeman, stopped Gather and asked to see his papers. LePacik started to examine them, when Gather broke and ran, the M. P. said. LePacik added he gave chase. As the Negro refused to stop, the corporal said he fired when he reached the corner of Hillard and Old Wheat streets. 5-5-44

Police first took Gather to Grady hospital and then transferred him to Fort McPherson.

COMMAND
[illegible]-Chicago, Ill. 7-10-44

Object Lesson

Good Army men winced at the news: a major had been having military prisoners flogged. It was no extenuation of his conduct that he had been trying to restore discipline in a madhouse of a prison in a Mississippi Army camp. 7-10-44

Major Louis Rothschild Lefkoff, a misfit officer, was a reflection on his superiors' inertia: he had moved to new jobs and higher rank through a series of military failures. Finally found ill fitted for active command, Lefkoff was sent to Camp Van Dorn, a dreary clump of tar-paper barracks and huts some 50 miles south of Natchez as police and prison officer.

The general prisoners in his charge—all committed on serious offenses—were a rough lot. They refused to get up for reveille, held kangaroo courts and beat up fellow inmates, threatened Lefkoff's family. Lefkoff tried punishment—taking away all privileges, making them "walk the track" with heavy packs, depriving them of their mail. When nothing seemed to work, he lost his head.

He issued clubs to the prison guards, ordered them to beat up a recalcitrant prisoner. When the guards refused, he called in MPs. The nine ringleaders of the prison gang (six white men, three Negroes) were taken into a tar-papered room. While the major stood outside, armed with a pistol and a submachine gun, the MPs flogged the prisoners' bare backsides with weighted rubber hoses. One man had to be taken to the hospital. By nightfall, the story was all over camp—and Major Lefkoff's military career had ended.

Said the court-martial: "The offense was the result of malassignment and incompetency. . . ." Louis Rothschild Lefkoff was found guilty, dismissed from the service, sentenced to a year and a day at hard labor. For his superiors, who had joined in the superannuated Army game of passing the buck—no punishment.

mestic enemy.

The letter cited the following victims of military police: Pvt. William P. Watkins, Pvt. Morris L. Murchison, Pvt. James Brown, Pfc. Amos Davis and a second beating of William P. Watkins now a corporal, on April 9, 1944.

The following victims of civilian police were cited to the Assistant General's office: Pvt. Harry T. Hackett, Pvt. Stuart Marks, Pvt. Robert L. Scott, Cpl. Theodore R. Taylor, and Pvt. Joe N. Lewis.

4-13-44

We submit that the War Department owes a duty to mend in the armed forces to protect them from abuse and violence when it sends them into camps and strange surroundings. An attack on a soldier is an attack on the United States, whether perpetrated by a foreign or do

Shore Patrolmen Beat Negro Soldier To Near Death At Grand Central

World - Memphis, Tenn.

BY NAT D. WILLIAMS

I saw a Negro soldier beaten half to death in the Grand Central Station at Memphis last Tuesday night 7-21-44

I was mailing the copy for the Friday issue of the Memphis World. I didn't have a chance to find the soldier's name. The Shore Patrol police were beating him too fast.

The soldier hadn't done anything I know because I walked up when the Naval Patrol officer started talking to him. The little black soldier was standing in the line holding his luggage... in the midst of a dense crowd .. in the Memphis Grand Central Station.

The Shore Patrolmen ..two of them .. walked up to him ..they said something to him .. he answered. They didn't like his answer. In a matter of seconds .. they had jumped on him. The short, stocky, dark-haired shore patrolmen was the aggressor.

The colored soldier tried to hold back the shore patrolman's arm, the one holding the wooden billet ....then the second shore patrolman struck him .. the black soldier did his best to protect himself ....when they finished with him ..amidst the pleading and crying of Negro women .. and even white women .. they beat the black man down to his knees. . .they beat him unconscious. 7-21-44

I walked up and wanted to know why they were beating him like that ..They told me to "shove off." The last I saw of the Poor Black soldier boy... he was being led off .. the Shore Patrolmen told me to "shove off" again ..I wonder if the short, stocky, dark-haired, shoreman would have been so "brave" if he had been in a company of black folk....Looking at that slack soldier....my God!.... What is Democracy?

Ten Negro Soldiers Reported Beaten By Police In Mississippi, War Dept. Told

Age - New York, N.Y. 4-28-44

A detailed list of ten instances in which Negro soldiers have been beaten severely either by military or civilian police, in Greenville and Lambert, Mississippi, in contained names, serial numbers and dates, the been submitted by the NAACP.

Robert H. Dunlop, in the Assistant General's office of the War department by the NAACP.

In submitting the list which only a "few instances" of 47d-1944

Soldiers

Race Friction Abroad Hampers War Effort

Defender — Chicago, Ill.

5-6-44

NEW YORK.—Racial friction between colored and white American soldiers overseas, although corrected to a marked degree by General Dwight Eisenhower, is still hurting the war effort and should be completely eliminated, said Walter White, N.A.A.C.P. secretary, in a nation-wide radio talk over the Columbia Broadcasting System Sunday, April 30.

"The division in our ranks and the fomenting of racial and other antagonisms are postponing the day of victory," he declared. "They are creating doubt among our allies as to our sincerity when we assert that we are fighting a war for freedom for all peoples. Whoever causes the war to last one single day longer than necessary is as much a traitor to our country as one who sinks a troop ship or reveals military secrets to the enemy. If for no other reason than to win the war as soon as it is humanly possible and to save the lives of American men—perhaps among them the life of your son—it is imperative that any person, whatever his race, who causes trouble should be stopped. That will be done only if the people of America and their government stop evading or temporizing with this fundamental question whose solution is imperative if we are ever to have a world of peace."

Overseas 15 Weeks

White, who spent 15 weeks in Great Britain, Ireland, North Africa and Italy, said he had traveled more than 20,000 miles and had talked with many officers, soldiers and civilians. 5-6-44

"The majority of American soldiers abroad have been decent Americans interested in but one objective—winning the war as speedily as possible and returning home. A surprisingly large percentage of them—both officers and enlisted personnel—are concerned over the bad name being given to the United States by the friction which some of their number have caused. A gratifying large percentage manifest deep concern about the world problem of race and the necessity of working out a solution to it. Many of these are from the South. But, unfortunately, a highly aggressive and vocal minority has sought to transplant patterns of racial behavior like that of the most backward states of the South to the countries where they have been sent as soldiers to fight a war against Nazi racial theories.

"Some of them have sought to poison the minds of British, Italian, North African and other peoples against Negro Americans. They have told such stories as these: that Negroes are inferior, illiterate,, diseased, and savage. Some of them have even used physical violence to prevent the association of Negro soldiers with British, Italian and other people. They have objected to the use of places of public accommodation such as pubs and restaurants by Negro soldiers.

"Such behavior has puzzled and antagonized many of the people of these countries. They have found it difficult to understand why some American soldiers should be so violent in their hatred of other American soldiers, especially when all of them are fighting in a common cause. They have resented the action of visitors presuming to dictate to them who they should or should not invite into their homes or associate with. Many of our allies are puzzled too by the American pattern of segregation. Repeatedly I was asked why the United States, fighting a war for freedom, should send abroad two armies—one white and one Negro." 5-6-44

Generals Eisenhower and John C. H. Lee of the European Theatre of Operations were praised by Mr. White for issuing "unequivocal directives and taking other steps to eliminate the cause of trouble."

White scored the events of the past few months on the home front saying, "certain members of Congress have poured forth hate-filled tirades against the Commander-in-Chief of our nation and against racial and religious minorities, as vicious and intemperate in content and tone as any sent out by Goebbels from Berlin." He cited the politics in the soldiers' vote bill, the boasts of filibusters against the anti-poll tax bill, and the statements of defiance against the Supreme court for its opinion in the Texas primary case. He also hit Congressman Andrew J. May of Kentucky for his threat against the War Department which caused it to cancel its plan to distribute the pamphlet "The Races of Mankind."

White said, "as men approach actual combat and face the dangers of combat, they tend to discount many prejudices," and he praised the combat record of the 99th Pursuit Squadron and the work of Negro supply troops on the Anzio beachhead. 5-6-44

The radio talk inaugurated the nation-wide membership campaign of the NAACP which opened May 1 and will close June 30.

RADIO TECHNICIANS PUT INTO LABOR BATTALIONS

Afro, N.Y., N.Y.

In line with Secretary Stimson's admission that the Army has a policy of converting Negro combat troops and technicians into service troops, is the revelation that a group of Negro radio operators and technicians was recently changed over into a labor battalion.

The information came to the N. A. A. C. P. in a letter from a Negro sergeant.

The irony of the situation was heightened by the fact that German war prisoners stationed near these Negro troops are said by the sergeant to be receiving better treatment than United States Negro soldiers.

The letter declares:

"When the division was shipped to———, we were left in Fort———; later we learned that we were coming to this camp to form a battalion. Since our troop was composed mostly of radio operators and radio technicians, we were reasonably certain that it would be an operations battalion because a construction battalion hasn't any place for communications men. Upon our arrival we find that we were going to be formed into a construction battalion after being merged with the ———F. A. All the training that the men in this battalion must learn is something about climbing poles and digging holes. In other words, we are in a labor battalion with a glorified title. We aren't kicking because we have to climb poles and do some hard work, but we figure if we are qualified for a certain type of job we should get it if possible and I know the Army needs radiomen.

"A lot of us have asked for transfers, but all we run into is red tape and that is when an enlisted man loses his case.

"There is a trend in the Army, at the present, to transfer all the Negro soldiers from the Army Ground Forces and put them into the Army Service Forces no matter if they are qualified for other types of work.

In this camp we are also forced to live in an area that should be condemned. All our sanitary facilities are outside and across the street in a poorly heated building. The barracks we live in are heated by two stoves, one at each end of the barracks

"The reason the boys are hot under the collar is due to the fact that there are German prisoners (here) and live better and are getting better treatment than we are getting at the present.

"We would appreciate it if you are able to look into the matter."

News Chronicle Blames Whites

AFRO American

Baltimore, Md.

Americans Brought Hate Over, It Says

5-13-44

NO WELCOME NOW

Problem Endangers Success of War

WASHINGTON

A recent United Press dispatch quoted the London News Chronicle as saying that the many thousands of colored soldiers in Britain, who were received warmly by the British people on their arrival two years ago, are now barred from community life here because anti-colored prejudice among white American troops has infected the British public.

In a long article, by a staff correspondent, the newspaper said:

"Colored American troops constitute the largest colored population Britian has ever known, and the present situation poses a problem vital to the morale of these troops as well as to the development of Anglo-American relations." 5-13-44

Super-Secret Order

One of the things Walter White, executive secretary of the NAACP, who recently returned from a fifteen-week tour of war fronts, discussed with War Department officials, last week, it is reported, was a super-secret order handed down to the law enforcement officers in Great Britain to the effect that British women in uniform are to be discouraged from appearing in public with American colored soldiers.

When the soldiers first arrived in Britain, an order to the effect that there was to be no color line was put in effect. After protests from American whites, however, the British succumbed and issued an order prefaced with the words "in the interest of harmony, therefore, it is suggested . . ." etc. 5-10-44

The order is tempered with a suggestion that it is all right to entertain colored soldiers in British homes "where difficult situations can be met more easily."

(Continued on Page 12. Col. 8)

Courier-Pittsburgh, Pa.

Speaking of discr[illegible]tion, a corporal writes me In-dia: "The Red Cross the colossal effrontery to up separate Red Cross cl[illegible] or white and colored Am[illegible]n soldiers in Calcutta, and also to forcibly expel and insult some of the colored fellows in my outfit, who, unknowingly, entered this club for whites . . . They built a club for us and named it Club Carver . . . A few Indian associates tell me that we've got no kick, since the same thing happens to them and in their own country." Apparently the Four Freedoms "everywhere" are being delivered by Jim Crow. 4-1-44

'No Colored' Signs Not in Naples

Afro American

Baltimore, Md.

5-6-44

WASHINGTON

The War Department has been unable to locate Col. James E. Manley in the Naples area.

A check of all headquarters, including British, machine records unit, Central Postal Directory and Allied Central Commission there, failed to reveal any record of such an officer, it advised the AFRO.

Prompted by AFRO Story

The department instituted a search for Colonel Manley following publication of a story in the AFRO of January 15, stating that a "no colored" notice was posted in a Naples hotel, signed by Colonel Manley.

An investigation, conducted by the commanding general at Allied Headquarters in Naples, found also no hotel at which "no colored" signs were posted.

47e-1944

★ ★ Sons And Daughters Of The Revolution ★ ★

Journal + Guide - Norfolk, Va. 2-19-44

J. ROANE

SGT. NICKENS

MILDRED WILLIAMS

JAMES LAFAYETTE

MATTIE OLIVIA CUMBER

G. B. FOSTER

RUTH MEALY

These are "sons and daughters of the American Revolution," descendants of men who fought for our national independence. James Lafayette, spy to General Lafayette, was one of those who fought. Born a slave in New Kent County in 1760, he died a free man in 1832. Ruth L. Mealy of Irwin, Va., is a descendant of James Mealy of Goochland County, private soldier in the Continental Army, who fought with the regulars at Yorktown. Mildred Brown Williams of Petersburg, Va., is the great-great-granddaughter of Abram Brown of Charles City County and collateral descendant of Freeman and Isaac Brown of Charles City County, soldiers on many battlefields in the Revolution. Mattie Olivia Cumber of Richmond, Va., is a descendant of the 17th and 18th century free family of Cumbers of Charles City, James City, and New Kent Counties, four members of whom fought in the Revolutionary War. Sergeant Royal Nickens of Kilmarnock, Va., member of the Armed Forces in the present World War, is a descendant of the 11th century free family of Nickens of Lancaster and Northumberland Counties, nine members of whom fought in the Continental Army and State Navy for the cause of American independence. Joseph J. Roane of Templemans Cross Roads, Va., is a descendant through his grandmother to the 18th century free family of McCoys of Westmoreland County, two members of whom, James and Bennett, were private soldiers in the Revolutionary struggle. Geraldine Banks Foster, of Richmond, Va., is a descendant in the sixth generation of John Banks of Goochland County, cavalryman in the 1st Light Dragoons, and a collateral descendant of Jacob Banks, brother of John, private soldier and wagoner.

THE OLD 8TH

Courier - Pittsburg, Pa 2-19-44

Well-Trained Regiment Sacrificed on Altar Of Army Jim-Crowism

By HORACE R. CAYTON

THIS IS the story of the shame of a nation. This is the story of "Fascist-like" minds in high places. This is the story of the betrayal of a regiment and the knifing in the back of the hopes and aspirations of thirteen million black people. This is the story of a "sneak attack" on our institution of democracy. This is the story of the Old Eighth Illinois Regiment. This isn't a new story. You've read about it before. You know the facts. It's worth re-telling.

Mr. Cayton

The Old Eighth Regiment had a proud history as a fighting outfit. In the first world war it was known as the 370th. In spite of the opposition of many prejudiced white officers who refused to fight by the side of it, it won the battle honors three times and the regimental colors were decorated with the Croix de Guerre. It fought with the French and fought well and was proud and jealous of its reputation.

CERTIFIED FOR COMBAT DUTY 2-19-44

After the war the tradition of the Old Eighth was kept up and for 25 years a group of young fellows, and some who were rapidly becoming not so young, continued to drill and to practice and to perfect themselves in every way against the time when they might again have to protect their country. They had a tradition behind them; they had a reputation to live up to. This was no plantation army with soldiers dragging their gun in the dust. This was a proud, smart, snappy, alert outfit commanded by capable officers.

EARLY IN 1941 the outfit was inducted into active service and became the 184th Field Artillery. In November of 1942 the regiment passed all of its tests and was certified for combat duty by General Lear. Then followed some months of inactivity and finally the order came in January of 1943 that the regiment was to be divided into two battalions: the 930th and the 931st. Even after this division, training continued and both battalions passed the second army field firing test.

REDUCED MEN TO MENIAL TASKS

Now let's stop for a moment and sum up. Here is a group of well trained fellows with good backgrounds — no illiteracy here, no heavy concentration in a low psychological aptitude bracket—good clean boys with education. Here also is a regiment that has had a history as a fighting organization. At this point they had been well trained—over-trained. In fact they had been in training so long that something had to be done. So what did our War department do? 2-19-44

IN August of 1943 between 400 and 500 men from both the 930th and 931st battalions were transferred to service units—that means labor units. These were the men that had been in training for nearly two years as field artillery men. They were specialists and General Lear had passed them a year before. Now they were reduced to the ranks of common labor perhaps because the War department thought they might be able to fight and acquit themselves and their race with credit and fame. That's just one thing this man's army is not going to stand for now—letting Negroes have the glory of battle.

FOLLOWS WASTEFUL JIM CROW PATTERN

And the tattered remnants of the old 370th, the proud Eighth Regiment, the smart 184th Field Artillery is now under strength as to men and over strength as to officers, marking time until the high command may think up some other way to demoralize and humiliate it.

I COULD go on about the waste of time and equipment and of human resources. When we can't get building materials for people who haven't decent homes because the army is using them and then we see the army throw away a whole regiment of soldiers with all their training, it doesn't make much sense. But as wasteful as is the present reckless, almost criminal, expenditure of men and materials to maintain the jim crow pattern, it's nothing to the harm which is being done in building up the bitter hatred and defeatism in the minds of these thousands of young Negroes. 2-19-44

We, you and I, and the reactionary high command, and the men of good will, and all the others of us who go to make up this country, will have to suffer for the sins against the black youth of America we are now allowing to be perpetrated.

The Negro Soldier

Tribune - Washington, D.C.

The War Department is releasing a film, "The Negro Soldier," produced under the direction of Col. Frank Capra, Signal Corps, and written by a young Negro. 3-4-44

In 40 minutes the film purports to tell the story of the Negro's contribution to the various wars in which this country has been engaged, beginning with the battle of Bunker Hill on through our activity in the present world conflict.

The film was reviewed here in the War Department auditorium by a select group of Negroes, representing a cross-section of Negro life in Washington. It was proclaimed by some who reviewed it as "wonderful," and by others as "propaganda."

Inasmuch as we have a jim-crow Army, and live generally under jim-crow conditions, the film was an excellent portrayal of the Negro's contribution under segregated circumstances to a jim-crow America. Any other type of presentation would have been ficticious.

The picture naturally, to be factual, had to be jim-crow throughout. Its setting was in a jim-crow church in Harlem. Its narration was delivered by a dark-skinned Negro, clothed with the robe of a clergyman preaching a sermon to an all-Negro congregation. The musical scores were all spirituals, sung by an all-Negro choir. All of the participants in the film were Negroes.

The picture therefore should be a welcome document not only to theaters that cater to mixed audience, but to lily-white audiences of the South in particular. For in this film the South will see a historical document of segregation extended to the Armed Forces. 3-4-44

Inasmuch as the South has no objections to the Negro fighting in the war, if on a segregated basis, this film should be "must" on the list of every Southern theatre. For it will show that, although under the stigma of second-class Americanism, the Negro has distinguished himself in every major battle in which this country has been engaged, and but for that participation and valor, every war would have been lengthened at the expense of more white lives.

The film will show to the South the Negro "in his place," under the auspices of the Federal Government, which will permit the South to argue that if the Federal Government can foster and finance segregation based on race, even to the extent of filming it, the South has the same right.

We hope the day will come, if there must be wars, when the War Department will be able to film "The American Soldier," in which the Negro will be pictured fighting as an American side by side with other Americans, of whatever race, creed or hue.

This is not a Caucasian war; not a Negro war. It is an American war. Our soldiers are not white soldiers; not Negro soldiers, but American soldiers.

But under American traditions, even though we are fighting one war against a common enemy, we have the paradox of the soldiers being compelled to fight the battle from two camps—one for white and the other for black. They are drafted that way; fight that way; win that way; and filmed that way.

If the War Department's sister, the Navy, was to film "The Negro Sailor," we would find the film picturing all Negro sailors in the kitchen of our ships, peeling potatoes, frying eggs, and waiting tables around which are seated their white compatriots. It wouldn't show Dorie Miller shooting a gun at Pearl Harbor, for indeed, Miller was "out of his place." Because of pressure, however, he was promoted from a messman one class to a messman another class.

Unless it is for the purpose of letting the South know that the Federal Government is perpetuating and extending its system of segregation and jim-crowism, we can see no useful purpose to which "The Negro Soldier" can be put.

Jackson Journal+Guide — Washington, Lincoln And The Negro Soldier

Norfolk, Va. 3-4-44

THE month of February focuses attention on American's two greatest statesman — George Washington and Abraham Lincoln.

Each of these distinguished persons became entangled in the race question. Because of the very close relation and entanglement of the Negro race with Lincoln, Negro History Week is properly celebrated in the month of his birth.

DR. JACKSON

Washington served our country as commander-in-chief of the Continental army during the Revolutionary War; Abraham Lincoln served it as president during the Civil War. Serving in time of war and serving at a time when most Negroes were slaves, both of these statesmen were confronted with the question of arming the blacks at the beginning of these conflicts. In the attempt to settle this question both leaders adopted the same policy — each declared that the war he was directing was not a war to interfere with slavery, and therefore not a war to allow the colored man to enlist. In both the Revolutionary War and the Civil War, Negroes were forever to remain in slavery and, like bond-slaves and the unfree classes the world over, they were not to bear arms.

SLAVES IN BOTH WARS FREE NEGROES

Falling under this ban with the slaves in both wars were the free Negroes. They too, because of their color, were not to fight. All told, then, on both occasions the war being waged was a white man's war.

But notwithstanding the claim that each of these wars was a white man's war, each finally became a war in which all men might fight. It was in recognition of the participation of the black man as a soldier that we celebrated Negro History Week this year with the Negro soldier as the main theme.

The celebrants drew their facts from history books which abound with reference to the participation of Negroes in the war for American independence and in the war to save the union. Bancroft, the noted historian, devotes space to the Negro soldier in the Revolution; and Woodson, of course, dwells at length on this soldier in all of our wars.

ENEMY MADE BID FOR NEGRO SUPPORT

Each of these wars became a struggle in which all men could join the army because of the force of circumstances. Not to allow Negroes to fight might lead to the losing of the war. Not to allow them to fight on the American side of the Revolutionary War, might lead to their fighting on the British side; and not to allow them to fight on the side of the union in the Civil War, might lead to their fighting on the side of the Confederacy. On both occasions the enemy was making a bid for Negro support.

The British generals were issuing proclamations of emancipation and invited them to come over and fight; the Confederate generals were not emancipating but they were using the blacks heavily as laborers and they finally invited them also to fight. In this desperate effort the Southerners were too late; for Lincoln, the Northerner, beat them to it by being the first to ask Negroes to enlist.

FOOTBALL BETWEEN TWO OPPOSING TEAMS 3-4-44

The Negro was thus a football between two opposing teams. In both games the final decision of "Captains" Washington and Lincoln was something like this: "It is better to have the blacks fighting with us than to have them fighting against us." Their final decision led to the Negroes enlisting in the latter half of each war game.

They were no longer to sit on the bench and beg to enter the contest; rather they were to enter and to help the American side in the Revolutionary War and the union side in the Civil War. In each case their aid was a factor in helping the winning side to reach its goal. Five thousand Negroes fought in the war of Washington; 178,000 fought in the war of Lincoln.

Each of these wars became a struggle in which all men could fight because each was a struggle for human freedom. They began as wars for "white" freedom only; they ended as wars for "black" freedom also. Washington and Lincoln were compelled to make them wars of freedom for all; for if they did not, the enemy might win the war. As an outgrowth of the talk of liberty during the Revolutionary War all slaves in the North were afterwards made free and a sprinkling of slaves in the South became free also.

FOUGHT FOR THEIR OWN FREEDOM 3-4-44

Advancing much further in the conception of freedom during the Civil War, Lincoln conferred it on practically all Negroes during the middle of this struggle and he combined his proclamation of emancipation in 1863 with an invitation to the freedmen to come over to his side and fight to the bitter end in 1865. In both wars, then, Negroes fought for their own freedom.

The Revolutionary War and the Civil War were blessed events in the history of the Negro because each event marked a milestone in his upward struggle for freedom. Washington and Lincoln were likewise blessed statesmen in the history of the Negro, for though they were blinded to begin with, they showed a high degree of wisdom by changing their policy to enrolling the Negro soldier who in turn fought for benefits to his race.

"The Negro Soldier" Movie

Amsterdam News — New York, N. Y.

Announcement has been made by the War Department that the official film. "The Negro Soldier" is ready for distribution to theatres, and that all persons who wish it shown in their cities should ask individual theatre managers to book the picture. 3-25-44

The film is regarded as the best screening on the Negro in American life that has ever been made and puts emphasis on the World War II. Already some difficulty has been encountered in trying to get the larger theatres to show the picture.

Two reasons are given for the trouble. The first is that the film shows the Negro in too favorable a light to impress theatres in the South on account of prejudice, and many theatres in the North and Middlewest are reluctant to show it for fear their audiences would not approve. The other reason is the fact that the film is not a full length picture and yet is too long for a regular news short. Up to now there has been stiff opposition to the plan to 'cut' the film by Major Frank Capra who made it, and Negro audiences that have seen it. 3-25-44

But because of its importance, both from a historical point of view as well as for morale-building reasons, it is the consensus of opinion among all groups that it should be given the widest possible showing. With this in mind an appeal is being made to the War Department to use its influence to have the film shown, meanwhile, citizens' committees should be formed to put pressure on stubborn exhibitors. It is just that imperative that the picture be shown.

White G. I.'s Like Film of Negro Soldiers

Amsterdam News, New York, N.Y. 3-25-44

If anyone is skeptical as to whether or not the documentary film, "The Negro Soldier" won't be accepted by white as well as Negro patrons, then we reprint excerpts from an Army camp newspaper, a camp where an all white audience of G. I.s witnessed the show.

"TRIBUTE: After more than two years in wriggling through red tape what he actually is, a dignified and four and one-half months in time production, the WD's "The Negro of war, an excellent soldier. Be- Soldier" emerges as worth all the fore this documentary was pro- time involved in getting it on film, duced too many citizens of this na- for it's the best portrayal of the tion were unaware of this—after colored race's participation in the they see it they can no longer re- building and maintenance of this main blind to the truth." democracy that has ever been made as a graphic footnote to our national history. The film will be shown to the armed forces and to civilians, too. 3-25-44

"It is worth everyone's attention.

47e-1944

The Negro Soldier (U.S. Army Signal Corps). This short moving picture has been two years in the making. The War Department authorized the film, but Lieut. Paul Vogel, the chief cameraman, had to do his job with old cameras which he pilfered (for the occasion) from Universal. During the shooting of one snowy sequence these tired machines froze up and he had to use an Eyemo 16 mm. 3-27-44

As anyone can see who knows or cares anything about the seriousness of the subject, the makers of the film have not included any of the dynamite implicit in a truly forthright treatment of the subject. There is no mention of segregation, of friction between Negro soldier and white soldiers and civilians. But Carlton Moss, a Negro who wrote the film's script, was overall adviser for the production and acted in it, assured white friends who were discouraged by its mildness that the picture would mean more to Negroes than most white men could imagine.

Sneak-previews for Negro soldiers proved that Mr. Moss was right. At first the men, who have learned to expect veiled contempt in most Hollywood handling of Negroes, froze into hostile silence. But after 20 minutes they were applauding. For just about the first time in screen history their race was presented with honest respect. Many wanted to know: "Are you going to show this to white people?" Asked why, they replied: "Because it will change their attitude." 3-27-44

The Negro Soldier opens in a Negro church with the sermon of a Negro preacher (Carlton Moss). From its first moment, it is arresting. For the preacher is no Uncle Tom. He does not talk minstrel-show dialect or advise his flock that, for those who bear their afflictions meekly, there will be watermelon by & by, or the Hall Johnson Choir in the sky. He talks sober, unrhetorical English, and before long he is reading aloud (from Mein Kampf) some of Hitler's opinions about those "born half-apes." While he reads, the camera moves among his listeners, quietly contradicting Hitler by the most powerful shots in the film—the intent faces of proud, enduring, mature human beings.

They continue to listen gravely while their minister tells them of the Negro's part in the making of America. The screen fills with historical paintings and with statuary, with bits from U.S. films which record the Negro's work in U.S. industry and warfare. They nod and smile when a mother interrupts to read a letter from her boy at camp. Then the screen fills with his Army story, from the day of his induction, and with images of Negroes at work in all branches of the service.

With deep feeling, the Negro congregation sings Onward, Christian Soldiers. In 46 minutes there has taken place on the screen (despite the bitter facts left out) a brave, important and hopeful event in the history of U.S. race relations.

They're Ganging Up on Texas

Daily Worker - New York, N.Y. 3-26-44

By Robert Minor

THE most important split in a convention of the Democratic Party of Texas was in 1859 when Sam Houston was denied the nomination for governor.

To make Texas a state in the Union had been the life's ambition of old Sam, father of the Texas revolution, victorious commander-in-chief of the Texas army, twice-elected President of the Republic of Texas after its separation from Mexico, and then senior Senator at Washington after Texas had become a state. He wanted to keep it so. He had fought the slave power on the Kansas-Nebraska Bill, and had been defeated for reelection as Senator.

When the slavery issue came to a crescendo in 1859 and the effort was made to have Texas secede from the Union and join the slave-state Confederacy, old Sam came back into politics like a tornado to fight against the proposed destruction of his lifetime dream. 5-26-44

To beat the old General, his past was raked up. Even thirty years after the old man's death, when I was a small boy, someone warned me not to boast of being related to Sam Houston because "that man" was a Negro-lover and had run away from home at 16 years of age to live with the Cherokee Indians and had grown up to young manhood as an Indian adopted as a member of the tribe; he had been what they called a "renegade" and a "squaw man."

The Democratic convention refused the nomination to the old father of Texas, and nominated a secessionist.

Houston Goes Out Alone And Beats the Machine

So Sam Houston went out by "the cars," as they called the new railroad, and by stage-coach and on horseback from town to town and ranch to ranch as an independent candidate for Governor of Texas on the platform of keeping Texas in the Union.

Texas is big—you could travel almost a thousand miles in a straight line and still be in Texas, and the old man of 66 years rode and talked—and beat the machine.

The majority voted to keep Texas in the Union and elected Gen. Sam Houston as governor to see that it was done. But a lot of candidates than ran for the State Senate and House as supporters of Houston who were in fact merely getting into office that way. And they ganged up against him as soon as they were in. They took Texas out of the Union.

In March 1861 Gov. Houston refused to swear allegiance to the slave-owner's Confederacy. He was deposed from the governorship and as the war broke out he went off alone to his last two years of life. My mother used to tell me that she, as a small child, remembered old Sam Houston riding up to her father's farm on the Arroyo Cibolo (Buffalo Creek) in Wilson County, wearing an Indian blanket around his shoulders as he always did, and alighting from his horse on to the old red sandstone horseblock in front of the farmhouse. She heard her father, who was a country doctor, Gray Jones Houston, discussing earnestly with Old Sam. 5-26-44

Who won? Texas is in the Union. That shows that Sam Houston won.

Texas Paid Price Once; She Must Not Again

Because Sam Houston didn't win immediately, life in Texas was thrown back by half a century. In the biggest war that had even been fought up to that time, the blood of her sons watered the fields not for the welfare of Texas, but for stagnation, economic decline and two generations of less abundant life, fewer schools and poorer ones, wasted resources, retardation of industry and all the other things that Texas didn't want.

Sam Houston died in 1863 twenty-two days after Vicksburg and Gettysburg had turned the scales of the war. So Texas stayed within the greatest country the world has ever known, and grew to be its most rapidly advancing state.

Anyone who was born in Texas and lived there must always love that tremendous land of prairies and mountains and swamps and cactus and horned toads and strong six foot men and good women.

And because Texas is and must remain all of this, Texas and Sam Houston's United States must win this war in 1944.

They are ganging up to split the state now. They are trying to help break up the national unity by breaking the unity of the biggest of its forty-eight states.

Texas Will Win This Fight Too

They will fail. Texas is becoming an industrial empire of great cities and towering buildings of steel and concrete and stone and solid red and yellow Texas brick. In winning the war we are building our Texas to be a land of more abundant life. Democracy is necessary for this. Whether you know it or not, I know that the whole vile Jimcrow system and the peonage and all the other reeking remnants of the greatest curse my Texas ever knew — slavery — are beginning to pass, and with accelerated speed they will pass inevitably and quickly and forever. 5-26-44

Because the penalty would be the loss of all the progress that we have made in the past eighty years but especially in these past five years in which the electric touch of modern industry has begun to make the beauty of this land shine brighter for all.

Fight it out, people of Texas! The whole world knows you are for the Commander-in-Chief and for the victory and for the powerful life that is symbolized when the sun rises over the prairies.

Before the fight is over more people than Martin Dies will rub their eyes and wonder that the Texas' people white, black, of Anglo-Saxon and Mexican blood, all, can be decent, intelligent, patriotic Americans, as good as any, if not better. Sam Houston's ghost, even now, they say, with that old Indian blanket around his shoulders, is riding at night around Fort Sam Houston, where I was born, peeking into the tents to inspect the thousands of the best and tallest and strongest and bravest young new Texas boys sleeping off the hard day's training for the war they are going to do more than their share to win.

Pic Traces Negro's Part In U. S. Wars

Courier - Pittsburgh, Pa. 2-26-44

By HERMAN HILL

HOLLYWOOD—Press preview showings of "The Negro Soldier," film story of the participation of Negro Americans in the various wars engaged in by the United States, were held last Monday at 20th Century-Fox studio. An ultra favorable opinion-reaction by members of the fourth estate, indicated that the 45-minute picture might easily prove to be one of the most outstanding and factual characterizations of the Negro ever made in the flicker city.

It is the writer's candid observation that if—the film, which by the way is available to movie houses free, is properly distributed throughout the nation—it will be worth its weight in gold.

Our concept of "proper distribution" is not merely to Negro-attended community show houses, but in predominantly white-attended theatres as well. Granting that showings in race houses will be of tremendous morale value—the success or failure of the planned message will depend largely upon white patrons seeing the film.

A War Department presentation, made by the Special Coverage Section, United States Army Signal Corps, under the supervisiion of Col. Frank Capra, the picture was directed by Capt. Stuart Heisler formerly of Paramount studios. Chief characters are men and women of the armed forces of the United States. The heroes are Pvt. Robert Brooks, one of the first American soldiers to die in World War II; Capt. Colin Kelly, Sgt. Meyer Levin and Dorie Miller.

Supporting players include Sgt. Clyde Turner, Carlton Moss, William Broadus, Bertha Wolford, Lt. Norman Ford and Clarence Brooks. The choir is under the direction of Jester Hairston. Maj. Eddie Dunstedter conducts the Army Air Force orchestra.

DEEDS OF THE RACE TRACED 2-26-44

Tracing in a spine-tingling sequence manner, the picture brings to life Negro Minute Men at Lexington and Concord; Peter Salem, hero of Bunker Hill; Prince Whipple, at Valley Forge with General Washington; Negro sailors with Perry at Lake Erie; Negro troops with Andrew Jackson at New Orleans; the famous Massachusetts 54th regiment of volunteers in the Civil War; the Ninth and Tenth Cavalry, 24th and 24th Infantry at San Juan Hill; Negro troops in action in a basic training scene. The main part of the story deals with Negro soldiers in the present war, and presents them in all phases of the service. Battle-front scenes abroad are pictured. Smartly garbed WAC's parade. An actual follow-through of an inducted man's basic training proves most interesting.

MAKING NEW PAGES

Amsterdam News
New York, N.Y.

479

2-5-44

The Wars Of America Have Brought Great Benefits To The Negro .....

Virginia Negroes In The Revolutionary War

Journal & Guide - Norfolk, Va
2-19-44

By LUTHER P. JACKSON

VIRGINIA NEGROES, five hundred or more strong, fought in the American Revolution during the years 1776-1781, and the descendants of a portion of them still live in this State. Some of these descendants still live in the very counties where their free ancestors 170 years ago enlisted in the Continental Army and State Navy to fight the British and to establish the independence of America. Thus they are sons and daughters of the American Revolution, although they could hardly join these patriotic societies.

Among the families in Virginia today who descend as the "great-great" and "great-great-great" grandchildren of Revolutionary soldiers and seamen are the following: Beckets of Accomac County; Battles, Barretts, Bowles, and Goings of Albemarle; Browns, Harrises and Cumbers of Charles City; Lemons of Glouchester and Mathews; Banks, Cousins, Coopers, Howells, and Mealys of Goochland; Cumbers and Wallaces of James City; Nickens, Pinns, Woods, and Weavers of Northumberland and Lancaster; Lesters of Lunenburg; Chavises of Mecklenburg; Cuffees of Norfolk and Princess Anne and the Roanes of Westmoreland and its shores.

Participating thus in so many engagements they naturally fought under all the generals so noted in American history. They were under Washington, Greene, Lafayette, Baron Von Steuben and many others. Certain Negroes, especially Saul Mathews and James Lafayette, two distinguished spies, received the highest praise of these well known commanders.

From this war the Negro combatants received many benefits. Some of the slaves received their

FOUGHT IN ALL LEADING BATTLES

In company with Negroes from other states the Virginia soldiers fought all over the country in all of the leading battles of the time on land and on sea. They were at Valley Forge, Brandywine, Monmouth, Charleston, Savannah, Guilford Court House, Eutaw Springs, and finally at Yorktown. They enlisted in the various regiments of Virginia and they enrolled on fifteen or more of the vessels built by the State to defend freedom and many of the free Negroes were granted pensions, granted land, and granted pay for their services.

WARS HAVE BENEFITTED THE NEGRO 2-19-44

The Revolution was a boon to the Negro in America for out of this struggle, with its emphasis on the rights of man and the equality of man, he was granted privileges previously unknown. A foothold in business enterprise, the liberty to preach, the privilege of establishing churches, the privilege to read and write, and the right to own and sell property, were among the advantages which came to Negroes because of the Revolution, and especially because of their participation in it.

Tribune, Savannah, Georgia
NEGRO SOLDIERS -
Those black doughboys who lie buried in the soil of France, those who still fight there and elsewhere on foreign soils, are carrying on the tradition as old as the history of their country. Crispus Attucks, Peter Salem, Salem Poore were among the first American patriots to fight with conspicuous bravery for their country. There is a long list of them in which are included the Negro heroes of the war of 1812, the Mexican War, the Civil War, the Spanish American War, World War I and to which will be added those of North Africa, Italy, France, India and the South Pacific. They have served and are serving in all branches of the armed forces; in the Navy, Air Corps, Anti-Aircraft, Field Artillery and Paratroops, fighting valiantly despite restrictions and frustrations which would dampen the ardor and courage and hopes of less loyal and earnest men. And in these wars the Negro soldier has had to endure segregation, discrimination and acclaim given grudgingly and sparingly lest he feel and display the pardonable pride a soldier should feel. Moreover, while he has fought and fights, the demagogues on the home front keep alive the tricks, extra-legal and illegal though they be, to prevent his enjoying the citizenship he is entitled to. Notorious contradictions and evil consciences cannot hope for a lasting peace.

47f-1944

F.D.R. CANCELS ARMY JIM-CROW

Guardian—Boston, Mass.

Mister Jim Crow was again tossed out on his ears when this week the President canceled War Department plans for segregated rest centers for colored veterans in New York and Chicago. 10-7-44

The original order called for redistribution and recreation centers in hotels at noted vacation sites and said that war-weary soldiers would be given two weeks rest at Government expense. Colored soldiers were thus to be assigned to Hotel Theresa in New York and Hotel Pershing in Chicago.

Upon announcement of the Jim Crow program more than a score of colored leaders wired a protest to the President against the segregation proposal and asked for an appointment to discuss the matter. Friday of last week the President received at the White House a delegation of three signers of the project, Mrs Mary McLeod Bethune, Walter White and Channing Tobias. He told them, according to report, that the first information he had about the War Department's plan to segregate wounded and battle-worn soldiers on the basis of color came in their telegram and that he had at once instructed the War Department to abandon the segregation program and establish centers in Northern states without restriction.

It is understood that colored and white soldiers will be admitted on an equal footing at such swank holsteries as Lake Placid Club, Lake Placid, N. Y. and at Santa Barbara, California and Atlantic City, N. J. Whatever the official arrangements may be, the three leaders who interviewed the President expressed themselves pleased and satisfied with the change. Walter White said it was one of the greatest victories over discrimniation in the Army. Boston, Mass.

10-7-44

THE HORIZON

By P. L. PRATTIS

Treatment of Casualties in Army Hospitals at Home Creates War Dept. Problem

Courier, Pittsburgh, Pa.

5-20-44

(The views expressed in this column are those of the writer and do not necessarily express the editorial opinion of The Pittsburgh Courier.—The Editors.)

ANOTHER Army problem emerges. It is going to require intelligent and sympathetic handling by the War Department and by officers in the field. It is a new type of problem, one that could scarcely have been foreseen, and yet one that might have been expected, the system (segregation) being what it is. The new problem involves the handling of Negro casualties. The problem of casualties is difficult from any angle you take it, Negro or white. The majority of the casualties, from home-front training centers and from the battlefront, are neuro-psychiatrics, commonly referred to as "N. P.'s". These are men who suffer from nervous disorders and cannot be traced to any organic source. There are thousands of these men, white and black, in the Army and Navy today and thousands are being returned to civilian life each month. They are "tough" cases, in and out of the Army. They require most sympathetic handling and, their emotional condition being what it is, even that kind of handling is not enough. And yet it is the responsibility of the armed forces and of civilians to do all they can to help restore these men to normalcy.

Mr. Prattis

FANCIED WRONGS

THE problem is complicated where Negroes are involved. Every slight, every neglect, every mistake, attributed to Army officers, doctors or nurses, is liable to be magnified by such a Negro casualty, as by a white, and to be interpreted, because of the discrimination he has suffered in training, in terms of prejudice. The white soldier may fancy wrongs where no wrong exists, but the Negro soldier, through no fault of his own, will be sure to feel that the fancied wrongs done him are because of his color. That is especially true where he is segregated from white soldiers in hospitals and he has no chance to see the same fancied wrongs visited upon the white soldiers.

Furthermore, there is more than a 50-50 chance that the Negro soldier is going to be right. Emotional break-downs are no respecters of person. They attack six-foot, 200-pounders with the same insidious confidence and competence that they attack the sickly-looking little runt. But it is difficult for the average person, even the average doctor or nurse, to accommodate himself or herself to the notion that an otherwise healthy person may have an unaccountable derangement of the nervous system. That is true, whether the patient is white and the observer is white, or the patient is black and the observer is black. The chances are that it is much more true if the patient is black and the observer is white. I am not sure how sympathetic I'd be if I saw a white guy who looked like Max Baer always folding up when the test came. And I am not confident that there are many white people, professional and non-professional, who have a feeling or a fear that when a Negro looks like Joe Louis and yet complains he can't carry through with the drill or detail schedule, he is dissembling. He may not be "putting on" any more than a similarly unbalanced white boy would be.

CHARACTER REFERENCES

THIS tendency on the part of whites in the Army is observable in the discharges the men are given. The white boys are given excellent and good character references. The colored boys are given fair and poor character references. Not in all cases, but the proportion seems to be out of balance. These character references seem to reflect a feeling that if the Negro boy had wanted to do the job, he could have, but he has contrived in ways that are strange to white folks to beat the system and to force the Army, reluctantly, to return him to civilian life.

But all the cases are not covered by these victims of nervous disorders. There are actual battle casualties, of men who have lost a limb, or an eye, or who have suffered burns. Their injuries and their presence in the hospital attest the fact that they had been called upon, placed in a position, to make the supreme sacrifice for their country. Whether black or white, they deserve the utmost consideration. The ethics of the medical and nursing professions decree that all who are sick should be given the utmost in service. But where these boys are concerned, there is even a stronger compulsion than the ethics of the profession. These injured boys have been placed in jeopardy that these doctors and nurses and others on the home front might live. The sacrifice of life or limb has been made, in part, for those who must care for them when they return. That is true even of the black boys. The black boy has given his limb as much for the white nurse or white doctor as he has for his own mother and father. It would seem, therefore, that the attitude of those who serve them should be almost contrite, rather than arrogant, bossy and indifferent.

PROBE NEEDED

IT seems wise to call the attention of the War Department to the growing seriousness of the problem involving colored casualties because the letters reaching Negro newspapers these days reflect the extent and the nature of the problem, one that might easily be overlooked by officials in Washington. It certainly would not be amiss for the Inspector General's Office to investigate and study it.

Hit Jim Crow in Soldiers' Hospital

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Elimination of discriminatory practices of the United States Soldiers' Home hospital in accommodations provided Negro Veterans of the regular Army, was requested in a letter by William H. Hastie to Major General Frederick W. Coleman, governor of the federal institution.

The Call Kansas City, Mo.

Under signature of the president, of the N.A.A.C.P., Mr. Hastie said, it is submitted that this practice is undemocratic and un-American in principle and contrary to the practice of the regular army which does not require segregation in its hospitals for soldiers.

10-20-44

"Moreover, with the attention of the nation now fixed on the tremendous problem of just and honorable provisions for the accommodation of veterans after this war, it is particularly important that the United States Soldiers' Home be in all ways a wholesome example of the most desirable administrative practices.

"It is respectfully urged that the existing situation be considered by the administration of the Soldiers' home and, if necessary, by the governing Board of Commissioners with the view of eliminating the segregation of Negro veterans in the Soldiers' Home Hospital."

47f-1944

ARMY HOTEL

Courier — Pittsburgh, Pa.

Under Jim-Crow Policy Takes Largest Negro Hotel And Causes More Suffering

By HORACE R. CAYTON

(The views expressed in this column are those of the writer and do not necessarily express the editorial opinion of The Pittsburgh Courier.—The Editors.)

A SITUATION has resulted in the Army which is even more dangerous and vicious than the segregation and discrimination which it has previously practiced. Many of the boys are coming back from the front and need rest while they are convalescing. Although the Army maintains no jim-crowism in its hospitals in certain sections of the country, it is determined to house these Negro heroes in existing Negro communities regardless of how badly overcrowded the communities may be and what a hardship it might work on civilians and soldiers alike.

9-16-44

Mr. Cayton

Let me take one example to show you what I mean. Chicago's Negro community is one of the most overcrowded in the country. The population density, that is, the number of people per square mile, is 90,000 in the Negro community while in adjacent white communities on either side, it runs from 30,000 to 35,000. The community is hemmed in by restrictive covenants so that Negroes cannot move out and as the population of the area has increased since 1940 from about 275,000 to at least 350,000 and is still increasing at the rate of nearly 2,000 a month, housing conditions are intolerable. People coming to the city have slept in railroad stations, families of five or six are living in basement coal bins with no windows. During the past year a number of people have been burned to death because they were living in fire traps, as no other accommodations were available. Just recently three young babies were burned to death in a house that was so overcrowded that it was in violation of every city ordinance to protect the health and safety of the people. Every housing authority, the Mayor's Committee on Race Relations, every governmental official, is aware of the conditions and realize how serious they are. Most people expected a riot here this summer, and it was the consensus of opinion that the lack of housing facilities would be the principal cause.

9-16-44

ARMY TAKES OVER LARGEST HOTEL

Now let's look at the program of the Army. They apparently, or at least Major General Henry Aurand, commanding general of the Sixth Service Command, is determined to house Negro troops returning to the United States as convalescents or those on rotation leaves, in the Negro community. He therefore acquired the largest Negro hotel in the city for this purpose. Even though the Army realizes, as it does full well, the desperate overcrowding which endangers the health and demoralizes the community, it is willing to take away this amount of housing in order to maintain its jim-crow policy.

MY argument isn't that these soldiers shouldn't be given consideration. It is utter folly and rank and blind prejudice, however, to take away additional housing facilities from a community which everyone knows is in desperate need of housing.

PROBLEM SHOULD GO TO GENERAL MARSHALL

Here's what the Metropolitan Housing Council of Chicago stated, "When you have more than 300,000 people bottled up and forced to live in indescribably horrible, hazardous, and unhealthy quarters, piled up on top of one another, you have all the ingredients for an explosion. We cannot afford to ignore this festering sore any longer." But the Army now, in order to maintain its jim-crow policy even to returning war heroes, takes additional space from these people.

9-16-44

THIS is a problem which I refer directly to Truman Gibson, Civilian Aide to the Secretary of War. Gibson should take this to General Marshall, for General Aurand's lack of social insight may be the last straw for the Negroes that are paying exhorbitant rents to live in coal bins without windows. The Army took over Chicago's largest downtown hotel and it can do it again. Certainly it can go to other sections of the city that are not suffering from overcrowding, and house our heroes whether they are white or black.

USS George Washington Carver Hotel Opens For Negro Seamen

Weekly — New Orleans, La.

7-8-44

Opening of the U. S. S. George Washington Carver Hotel, 837 Iberville Street, for American Negro seaman, was announced last week by Jack Kamaike, port area executive of the United Seamen's Service.

The building contains 27 rooms with accomodations for 60 to 80 guests per night and is completely staffed by Negroes. The first colored seamen was registered last Wednesday.

7-8-44

"This is a definite step forward in meeting the demand for seamen now [illegible] much needed to man [illegible] leaving the Port of New Orl[illegible] and other Gulf and Easter[illegible]s" Mr. Kamaike said. "Wit[illegible]ening of the U. S. S. C[illegible]ve, named in honor of the grea[illegible] Negro scientis[illegible], New Orleans now [illegible] a centrally located facility for housing these seamen convenient to the 'shipping out' offices of the war shipping administration, the shipping company offices and the various maritime union hiring halls."

The United Seamen's Service also operates the U. S. S. Carol Hotel, 3628 St. Charles Avenue and the U. S. S. Senator Hotel, 208 Dauphine Street, for white seamen.

[illegible] HOTEL [illegible] SEAMEN IN NEW O[illegible]N, LA.

NEW ORLEANS, La. (ANP).—After a long fight, the USS George Washington Carver Hotel was opened here for seamen with a colored staff.

Nipped in the Bud

Tribune — Washington, D.C.

The Army plan to take over the Theresa Hotel in New York and the Pershing Hotel in Chicago, for the purpose of establishing jim-crow redistribution centers for returning Negro soldiers was nipped in the bud by the President this week, much to the dismay of the War Department and the satisfaction of Negroes.

10-7-44

The plan now calls for integated centers in those States where segregation based on race is illegal.

Why the War Department, in the first place, would go into cities like New York and Chicago, where segregation is taboo, and seek to institute a pattern unknown in those communities, is one for the sages to answer.

Of course, as usual, this segregated plan had the blessing of those few Negroes who stood to benefit thereby.

The set-up at the Pershing Hotel was to be staffed from top to bottom by Negro officers, with Col. West Hamilton already designated as commanding officer.

Now the commanding officer of anything has power, and those in the Army know that Army "C.O." is tops. And so, we find Colonel Hamilton issuing laudatory phrases concerning the proposal.

Said the Negro Colonel:

"This is something entirely new in the history of the Army and will be the only station of this kind in the country with colored personnel to handle the entire complicated task of reassignment of Army personnel."

10-7-44

This week, the Army, on White House Orders, retracted their plans, and tenants who had been served with notices to vacate from these hotels were told to stay in. Negro officers who had been detailed to fly to training centers were sent by rail back where they came from.

10-7-44

The Secretary of War has a Negro aide on his staff. The Selective Service System has a Negro executive assistant. If the advice of either was sought we know the War Department was advised against its plan in its early stages. If that advice

We know that the colonel could not be expected to publicly criticize Army policy, but he is under no obligation to bless its policies when he know them to be in violation of the principles of democracy for which these soldiers are asked to give their lives.

Fortunately, Mrs. Crystal Brd Fauset to the contrary notwithstanding, we had three Negroes who were able to sit at the desk of President Roosevelt and acquaint him with the inside goings on in the War Department, and exact from him a promise to break it up.

Mr. Walter White, Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune and Dr. Channing Tobis are to be congratulated for taking this matter directly to the President for immediate action.

47f-1944

ARMY HOTEL

Courier — Pittsburgh, Pa.

Under Jim-Crow Policy Takes Largest Negro Hotel And Causes More Suffering

By HORACE R. CAYTON

(The views expressed in this column are those of the writer and do not necessarily express the editorial opinion of The Pittsburgh Courier.—The Editors.)

A SITUATION has resulted in the Army which is even more dangerous and vicious than the segregation and discrimination which it has previously practiced. Many of the boys are coming back from the front and need rest while they are convalescing. Although the Army maintains no jim-crowism in its hospitals in certain sections of the country, it is determined to house these Negro heroes in existing Negro communities regardless of how badly overcrowded the communities may be and what a hardship it might work on civilians and soldiers alike.

9-16-44

Mr. Cayton

Let me take one example to show you what I mean. Chicago's Negro community is one of the most overcrowded in the country. The population density; that is, the number of people per square mile, is 90,000 in the Negro community while in adjacent white communities on either side, it runs from 30,000 to 35,000. The community is hemmed in by restrictive covenants so that Negroes cannot move out and as the population of the area has increased since 1940 from about 275,000 to at least 350,000 and is still increasing at the rate of nearly 2,000 a month, housing conditions are intolerable. People coming to the city have slept in railroad stations, families of five or six are living in basement coal bins with no windows. During the past year a number of people have been burned to death because they were living in fire traps, as no other accommodations were available. Just recently three young babies were burned to death in a house that was so overcrowded that it was in violation of every city ordinance to protect the health and safety of the people. Every housing authority, the Mayor's Committee on Race Relations every governmental official, is aware of the conditions and realize how serious they are. Most people expected a riot here this summer, and it was the consensus of opinion that the lack of housing facilities would be the principal cause.

9-16-44

ARMY TAKES OVER LARGEST HOTEL

Now let's look at the program of the Army. They apparently, or at least Major General Henry Aurand, commanding general of the Sixth Service Command, is determined to house Negro troops returning to the United States as convalescents or those on rotation leaves, in the Negro community. He therefore acquired the largest Negro hotel in the city for this purpose. Even though the Army realizes, as it does full well, the desperate overcrowding which endangers the health and demoralizes the community, it is willing to take away this amount of housing in order to maintain its jim-crow policy.

MY argument isn't that these soldiers shouldn't be given consideration. It is utter folly and rank and blind prejudice, however, to take away additional housing facilities from a community which everyone knows is in desperate need of housing.

PROBLEM SHOULD GO TO GENERAL MARSHALL

Here's what the Metropolitan Housing Council of Chicago stated, "When you have more than 300,000 people bottled up and forced to live in indescribably horrible, hazardous, and unhealthy quarters, piled up on top of one another, you have all the ingredients for an explosion. We cannot afford to ignore this festering sore any longer." But the Army now, in order to maintain its jim-crow policy even to returning war heroes, takes additional space from these people.

9-16-44

THIS is a problem which I refer directly to Truman Gibson, Civilian Aide to the Secretary of War. Gibson should take this to General Marshall, for General Aurand's lack of social insight may be the last straw for the Negroes that are paying exhorbitant rents to live in coal bins without windows. The Army took over Chicago's largest downtown hotel and it can do it again. Certainly it can go to other sections of the city that are not suffering from overcrowding, and house our heroes whether they are white or black.

USS George Washington Carver Hotel Opens For Negro Seamen

Weekly — New Orleans, La.

7-8-44

Opening of the U. S. S. George Washington Carver Hotel, 837 Iberville Street, for American Negro seaman, was announced last week by Jack Kamaike, port area executive of the United Seamen's Service.

The building contains 27 rooms with accomodations for 60 to 80 guests per night and is completely staffed by Negroes. The first colored seamen was registered last Wednesday.

7-8-44

"This is a definite step forward in meeting the demand for seamen now [illegible] much needed to man [illegible] leaving the Port of New Orl[illegible] and other Gulf and Easter[illegible]s" Mr. Kamaike said. "Wit[illegible]ening of the U. S. S. C[illegible]ve, named in honor of the grea[illegible] Negro scientis[illegible], New Orleans now [illegible] a centrally located facility for housing these seamen convenient to the 'shipping out' offices of the war shipping administration, the shipping company offices and the various maritime union hiring halls."

The United Seamen's Service also operates the U. S. S. Carol Hotel, 3628 St. Charles Avenue and the U. S. S. Senator Hotel, 208 Dauphine Street, for white seamen.

HOTEL O[illegible] TO SEAMEN IN NEW O[illegible]

NEW ORLEANS, La. (ANP).—After a long fight, the USS George Washingon Carver Hotel was opened here for seamen with a colored staff.

Nipped in the Bud

Tribune — Washington, D.C.

The Army plan to take over the Theresa Hotel in New York and the Pershing Hotel in Chicago, for the purpose of establishing jim-crow redistribution centers for returning Negro soldiers was nipped in the bud by the President this week, much to the dismay of the War Department and the satisfaction of Negroes.

10-7-44

The plan now calls for integated centers in those States where segregation based on race is illegal.

Why the War Department, in the first place, would go into cities like New York and Chicago, where segregation is taboo, and seek to institute a pattern unknown in those communities, is one for the sages to answer.

Of course, as usual, this segregated plan had the blessing of those few Negroes who stood to benefit thereby.

The set-up at the Pershing Hotel was to be staffed from top to bottom by Negro officers, with Col. West Hamilton already designated as commanding officer.

Now the commanding officer of anything has power, and those in the Army know that Army "C.O." is tops. And so, we find Colonel Hamilton issuing laudatory phrases concerning the proposal.

Said the Negro Colonel:

"This is something entirely new in the history of the Army and will be the only station of this kind in the country with colored personnel to handle the entire complicated task of reassignment of Army personnel."

10-7-44

This week, the Army, on White House Orders, retracted their plans, and tenants who had been served with notices to vacate from these hotels were told to stay in. Negro officers who had been detailed to fly to training centers were sent by rail back where they came from.

10-7-44

The Secretary of War has a Negro aide on his staff. The Selective Service System has a Negro executive assistant. If the advice of either was sought we know the War Department was advised against its plan in its early stages. If that advice

We know that the colonel could not be expected to publicly criticize Army policy, but he is under no obligation to bless its policies when he know them to be in violation of the principles of democracy for which these soldiers are asked to give their lives.

Fortunately, Mrs. Crystal Brd Fauset to the contrary notwithstanding, we had three Negroes who were able to sit at the desk of President Roosevelt and acquaint him with the inside goings on in the War Department, and exact from him a promise to break it up.

Mr. Walter White, Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune and Dr. Channing Tobis are to be congratulated for taking this matter directly to the President for immediate action.

had been followed, all of this unfavorable publicity, which the Hitler crew enjoys, could have been avoided.

Why have Negro officials in these departments if their advice is not to be followed? The War Department knows by now that whether or not it backs up these advisors, Negroes will. And during this election year, according to the testimony of Frank R. Kent, the columnist, the barking of Negroes carries more weight than the whites in all of the Southern States combined.

Army Abandoning Jim Crow In Redistribution Centers

Tribune — Washington, D.C.
10-7-44

By HARRY McALPIN

President Roosevelt told a delegation of Negroes on Friday that the Army had considerably abandoned its segregation proposal in the establishment of redistribution centers for overseas veterans returned under its rotation system.

While refusing to reveal details of the plan, all three of the persons—Walter White, Channing Tobias, and Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune—said they were pleased with the change.

This jimcrow program originally planned by the Army, which included taking over the Hotel Pershing in Chicago and the Hotel Theresa in New York City as Negro centers, were protested by Negro organizations and citizens in both cities.

Several of these protests were directed to the President. Both White and Tobias were among the twenty six New Yorkers who wired protests to President.

The proposed seizure of the Hotel Theresa was exposed first by the NNPA.

10-7-44

It was under pressure from the White House, the NNPA has learned, that the Army revised its plan for the jimcrow centers. Announcement of the revision has been expected for several days from the War Department, but at the end of the week had not been made.

The new plan, however, is reliably reported to provide for complete integration, by assignment, in the centers at Lake Placid, N.Y., and at Atlantic City. The latter place recently has been added to the five resort centers where forty nine hotels already had been selected by the Army.

10-7-44

None to Go to Dixie

In New York City, the center will be integrated on a volunteer basis. Returned overseas veterans, white and colored, may express a prefence for New York. They will be housed indiscriminately in the same hotels.

A new center, not yet selected, will be opened on the West Coast.

In view of the social and recreational pattern of the program and the necessary community contacts and cooperation outside the hotels to make the program a success, no Negroes will be assigned to centers in the South. Otherwise, and except for volunteer requests to be sent to New York City, the men will be assigned to centers nearest their homes.

10-7-44

While no announcement has been made, it is believed the Army will abandon both the Pershing and the Theresa hotel sites in Chicago and New York City, respectively.

In Chicago, where steps have been taken toward the actual physical seizure of the Pershing and occupants notified to be out by October 1, the Army is known to have sent a representative to study the community reaction and to learn whether abandonment of the project is advisable.

The Chicago Sun, daily newspaper, has denounced the seizure of the Pershing, and the Mayor's Committee on Race Relations in Chicago has recommended the hotel be left to fill a critical civilian housing need.

10-7-44

Somervell Objects

This reversal of position has come only after the Army, through Lieut. Gen. Brehon Somervell, chief of the Army Service Forces, and his staff, put up a stiff and bitter figght for a week to retain a segregated arrangement. The fight continued even after the Army was told by the White House to work out its own new plan, but only within a very definite framework which would provide for integration.

The first sign of weakening on its jimcrow plan came when the Army was informed of the results of an "off the record" meeting called by General Terry, commanding officer of the Second Service Command, with a group of outstanding citizens in New York City. These citizens protested against the jimcrow policy outlined by the Army, against the taking of the Theresa which helps meet a stringent housing problem in Harlem, and against the use of a second-rate hotel for Negroes while white soldiers would be brought back to luxury-type hotels located in resort centers.

10-7-44

Following Gen. Terry's report to the War Department, all further Army action was held in abeyance as affected the Theresa, though the decision to take it over definitely had been made and Terry's meeting presumably was for the purpose of giving out this information.

10-7-44

The redistribution centers are being set up to provide a means of relaxation for battle-weary soldiers, lifted out of the hell of war overseas. Efforts are made to get the men in a mood to re-turn to combat. ..They are given the best of food, provided dental and medical care, and undergo a series of psychiatric interviews to determine their best classifi-cation for them in the Army. But, mainly, they are encouraged to forget all about war for about two weeks and have a "helluva gogod time."

10-7-44

Other than the Theresa and the Pershing hotels, which the Army had planned to take over for Negroes, it had already taken 49 hotels in the resort centers at Miami Beach, Fla., Ashville, N. C., Hot Springs, Ark., Lake Placid, N. Y., and Santa Barbara, Cal. To these have been added proposed centers in Atlantic City, N. J.

BIAS IN ARMY PROTESTED

Times — New York, N.Y.

Negro Council Urges President to Bar Any Discrimination

9-19-44

The National Negro Council in a telegram signed by Edgar G. Brown, director, urged President Roosevelt yesterday in his capacity of Commander in Chief to stop segregation of and discrimination against returning Negro veterans.

The telegram asked the President to countermand the order of the War Department barring Negro soldiers from fifty-six Army rest centers in Miami, Hot Springs and other resorts. It also declared the Council's opposition to the establishment of "Jim Crow" quarters for Negro veterans in Negro sections of Chicago, Harlem or at Howard University in Washington.

"We believe such action by the War Department grossly unfair and discriminatory and negates the very principle of democracy for which these men have fought," the telegram read.

NAACP HITS JIM CROW IN U. S. SOLDIERS' HOME HOSPITAL

Evening Star — Washington, D.C.
10-19-44

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Elimination of discriminatory practices of the United States Soldiers' Home hospital in accommodations provided Negro veterans of the regular army, was requested in a letter by William H. Hastie to Major General Fredrick W. Coleman, governor of the federal institution.

Under signature of president, of the the D. C. NAACP, Mr. Hastie said, "It is submitted that this practice is undemocratic and un-American in principle and contrary to the practice of the regular army that does not require segregation in its hospitals for soldiers. Moreover, with the attention of the nation now fixed on the tremendous problem of just and honorable provisions for the accommodation of veterans after this war, it is particularly important that the United States Soldiers' Home be in all ways a wholesome example of the most desirable administrative practices.

10-19-44

"It is respectfully urged that the existing situation be considered by the administration of the Solders' Home and, if necessary, by the governing board of commissioners with the view of eliminating segregation of Negro veterans in the Soldiers' Home hospital."

J.C. Wash Rooms in Army Hospital

Afro American 7-15-44
Baltimore, Md.

BALTIMORE — That separate rest rooms are provided for colored and white women employees at the Valley Forge General Hospital at Phoenixville, Pa., was admitted this week by an Army public relations officer.

Replying to an AFRO query, Col. James Wharton, of the Third Service Command public relations office here, said:

7-15-44

May Use Same Rooms

Due to the great number of employees in the dietetic department of this installation, there are separate rest rooms provided. Male colored and white persons use the same facilities.

"There are two rest rooms for female colored and white employees who have mutually agreed to utilize separate rest rooms. There has been no discord, discussion, or argument."

Colonel Wharton also admitted that there are no colored persons employed in an administrative capacity at the hospital, but said that if any should qualify for such

3,126 Admitted to Tuskegee Hospital

Atlanta Daily World — 11-1-44

ATLANTA — A total of 3,125 patients were admitted to the Veterans Administration Facility at Tuskegee, Ala., during the fiscal year ending June 30, Col. Eugene H. Dibble, manager of the facility, told the Service School for Officers here Wednesday.

During the same period, 2591 officials, clerical employees and custodial workers were discharged either directly, upon completion of examination and observation, transferred to other facilities on trial visits, deaths or while on leave of absence.

The station staff is composed of 844 employees, he said, including 27 physicians, 2 dentists, 77 attendants, nurses, 266 hospital attendants, 90 dietary employees, the remainder consisting of administrative

47f-1944

TRAINING INJURED WAR VETERANS

Defender — Chicago, Ill.

3-25-44

3-25-44

At Northington General hospital, Tuscaloosa, Ala., this type of recreation is one among many factors making up the reconditioning program of the hospital which refits the patients, most of them from overseas combat zones, to resume their military duties or return to civilian life. Shown left to right, are: Pfc. Johnnie Malone of Port Gibson, Miss.; Pvt. Moses Whitley, Baltimore, Md.; Pfc. Albert Grigsby, Jefferson, Texas; Pfc. George W. Williams, of Springfield, Ga.; Pfc. Elbert Doss of Birmingham, Ala., and Pvt. Harvey Wesson Jr., Memphis, Tenn.

Federal Housing Project Open To In-Migrant Workers

Journal + Guide
Norfolk, Va.
5-6-44

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Accommodations in the Federal Public Housing Authority's war housing project, Millside, in Wilmington, Del., reserved for Negro war workers and their families in Wilmington, have been made available to in-migrant war workers in nearby Elkton war plants, it was announced by Oliver C. Winston, director of Region III of the Federal Public Housing Authority.

The release of such existing housing accommodations makes immediately available adequate ... for in-migrant Negro wa... workers in Elkton, who have been forced to live in crowded and insanitary facilities, some of which are located at considerable distance from their places of employment. At the same time, adequate transportation services are available between Wilmington and Elkton to assure these workers of convenient low-cost transportation between home and job.

5-6-44

The completion of large war contracts in the Wilmington locality has precluded any possible use of such reserved war housing accommodations by its local industries. Accordingly the administrator of the National Housing Agency has terminated an assignment to Mr. Winston for the construction of two projects for a total of 100 permanent-type family units for Negro families in Elkton.

The Millside project is operated for FPHA by the Wilmington Housing Authority.

ARMY TO DROP JIM CROW IN VETS CENTERS

Defender — Chicago, Ill.
10-14-44

Pershing, Theresa Hotels Abandoned Under New War Dept. Plan

(Defender Washington Bureau)

WASHINGTON—The War Department officially announced this week its abandonment of the Army proposal to set up Jim Crow redistribution centers for returned Negro veterans in the Theresa hotel in New York and the Pershing hotel in Chicago.

Direct intervention from President Roosevelt brought the revision in policy.

Although there was no specific mention of the two big Negro hotels, the announcement stated: "In order to avoid taking over additional hotel facilities in housing shortage areas, Negro returnees will be processed with white returnees through existing northern redistribution centers."

The official announcement says: "The War Department announced today that its program of processing soldiers in Redistribution Centers on their return to the United States from combat areas overseas will be altered and expanded through the utilization of existing Army camps. 10-14-44

"The expansion is necessitated by a growing volume of soldiers sent back home by the Army's Air, Ground and Service Forces. At present, hotel facilities are being utilized in the Redistribution Program, where the returning veterans are housed while resting and being processed, re-oriented, reclassified and reassigned. These hotel facilities, however, are taxed to capacity, and it is becoming increasingly difficult to find additional hotels which would be suitable quarters for the establishment of Redistribution Centers."

On the matter of the previous jim-crow plan, the announcement declares: "ending the establishment of the camp type Redistribution Centers, and in order to avoid taking over additional hotel facilities in housing shortage areas, Negro returnees will be processed with white returnees through existing northern Redistribution Centers. Thereafter, all returning soldiers, white and Negro, certified by a medical officer as being most in need of this type of accommodation, will be housed in hotels retained for convalescents in the same manner in which they are at present being cared for in the hospitals or convalescent centers." 10-14-44

Assurance has been given by Assistant Secretary of War McCloy that Negro medical officers will be included in the program for determining whether Negro soldiers should be "certified" as being "most in need of" the hotel type of accommodation. 10-14-44

As for the Army camp phase of the Redistribution Center program proposed for the future, the Army says: "Under the new Redistribution Program, certain of those Army camps which are better situated and more attractive will be selected for use as Redistribution Centers. Many such camps are becoming available through the movement of troops overseas."

Says Democracy Is a Fact in New Veterans' Hospital

AFRO-AMERICAN
Baltimore Md.

By VERNA ARVEY

(For Calvin's News Service)

From the lips of nurse's aides and Red Cross workers in the Birmingham General Hospital in Van Nuys, Calif., has come a heartening tale of the excellent race relations that exist in this newest hospital for overseas casualties, the fifty-seventh of its kind in the United States. 12-2-44

And it is, fortunately, all true, for I visited the installation and saw that the colored patients were everywhere completely integrated into the life of the hospital and that many of them had formed firm friendships with the white patients.

All of them were so lacking in self-consciousness about the whole matter that it wasn't even necessary to ask questions about it. They all regarded themselves and each other as Americans who had done a good job for their country. The hospital is entirely unconcerned about racial matters. When the returned servicemen arrive, they are classified by wards, according to the nature of their ailments, not according to their racial origins. As a result, practically every section of the hospital has men of several racial origins living together cheerfully and with no friction whatsoever.

At one time, the neuro-surgical ward contained white, colored, Mexican and American-born Japanese patients. In the officers' ward at the present time there are two colored and one Filipino officers along with the others. In this ward, just now, there happens to be a white officer who commanded colored troops in Africa. He had nothing but the highest of praise and admiration for their out-

Says Democracy a Fact at veterans' hospital
By VERNA ARVEY for Calvin's News Service
From the lips of nurse's aides and Red Cross workers in the Birmingham General hospital in Van Nuys has come a heartening tale of the excellent race relations that exist in this newest hospital for overseas casualties. And it is true, for I visited the installation and saw that the colored patients were everywhere completely integrated into the life of the hospital, and that many of them had formed firm friendships with the white patients and with no friction whatsoever.
At one time, the neuro-surgical ward contained white, colored, Mexican and American-born Japanese patients. In the white Southerner who is a staunch Democrat. Arguments? They argue all day long. But never over racial matters—always over politics!

That seems to be the majority opinion in the Birmingham Hospital, for it is like a big country club, equipped with two theatres, telegraph station, library, and many other fine features. It covers 150 acres has 100 buildings and is so large that one can walk for eight miles through the corridors without re-tracing one's steps.
The commanding officer, Col. Irvin C. Miller of the Medical corps, a man of vision and courage, was in command at the Tripler General Hospital, Pearl Harbor, at the outbreak of war. For his outstanding work in saving the lives of many wounded, he was awarded the Legion of Merit.

matter that it wasn't even necessary to ask questions about it. They all regarded themselves and each other as Americans who had done a good job for their country, not as men with one or the other skin coloring.
The hospital is entirely unconcerned about racial matters. When the returned service men arrive they are classified by wards, according to the nature of their ailments, not according to their racial origins.
Colored GOP, White Democrat
In one ward there is a colored Republican in a bed next to a standing work in the war.

During the past several weeks there has been a lot of fun in the orthopaedic ward. One white bed patient had a guitar, another a banjo. A colored patient nearby managed to find a hollow box, two sticks and two lemons. He fastened the lemons on the ends of the sticks and found he had a mighty effective drum. So he sang and drummed while the others played their instruments, and a new jazz band was born.

The Birmingham Hospital is like a big country club, equipped with two theaters, telegraph station, library, attractive mess halls and many other fine features. It covers 150 acres, has 100 buildings and is so large that one can walk for 8 miles through the corridors without re-tracing steps or going out in the open.

Ft. Huachuca Hospital

Defender — Chicago, Ill.

One Of Nation's Finest

5-20-44

By LANGSTON HUGHES

Fort Huachuca on the Arizona-Mexican border contains America's largest encampment of colored troops. It contains the world's largest Negro hospital, military or civilian. This hospital, Station Hospital No. 1, is headed and entirely staffed by Negroes.

Col. M. O. Bousfield, formerly with the Julius Rosenwald Fund in Chicago, is its Commanding Officer. Under Col. Bousfield are some of America's most distinguished men of medicine, colored or white. The eminent colored physicians heading Station Hospital No. 1's various departments are all outstanding specialists in their fields.

Lt. Col. Roscoe C. Giles, formerly of Provident hospital in Chicago, head of the Surgical Department, is one of our country's great surgeons. Lt. Col. Harold W. Thatcher, head of Medical Service, is a distinguished young physician, for a number of years associated with Dr. Lawless, famous dermatologist of Chicago.

The hospital's executive officer is Lt. Col. DeHaven Hinkson of Philadelphia. (His home and family were recently pictured in color photos in the Ladies Home Journal.)

Have Excellent Staff

Others on the excellent staff which Col. Bousfield has assembled include Maj. Phillip T. Johnson, chief of the Orthopedic Service, formerly at Howard; Maj. Raphael Hernandez, head of the Neuropsychiatric Section, formerly professor at Meharry Medical school; Maj. William E. Allen, head of X-Ray, former chief of X-Ray at Phillips in St. Louis; Capt. J. Owen Blache of St. Louis, chief pathologist; Capt. William A. Weathers, head of the Genito-Urinary Section; Capt. Ronald N. Jefferson, chief of Contagious Diseases; and chief nurse, Lt. Mary L. Petty.

5-20-44

The Dental Unit of the hospital is headed by Maj. Ralph Teabeau with six dentists in the outfit. The hospital also has a Red Cross Unit headed by Miss Thelma T. Hawes with a staff of 13, and nine volunteer Grey Ladies from the civilian community of army wives on the Post. The many dining halls of the hospital and the ward diets are supervised by the chief dietitian, Delma F. Thompson.

Station Hospital No. 1, serving the Negro soldiers of Fort Huachuca, is an enormous installation covering several acres. Its various units are connected by miles of corridors. Some of the straight corridors are well over a half mile in length.

A stranger visiting the hospital cannot get about without a guide. Unlike several other army hospitals I have visited, all the connecting corridors of this Huachuca hospital are covered, protected against the desert sun, wind, and sand.

Barracks For Personnel

Besides the customary wards, there are barracks for the medical personnel, the nurses, the orderlies, and the various workers. There are also within the confines of the hospital, PX shops, a barber shop, a beauty shop, and a cafe and soda fountain. There are recreation halls, gyms, movies, and a library, also outdoor fields for exercise and baseball.

5-20-44

The size and extent of the hospital area are breath-taking. It contains 944 beds for patients, and is the only army post hospital entirely managed and staffed by Negroes in America.

The hospital also has a number of special training schools and classes. It has a Medical Officer Replacement Pool, sometimes containing as many as a hundred men, from which Medical, Dental, and Administrative Officers are sent to other camp establishments.

The 9th Service Command school for the training of WACs as medical and surgical technicians is also located here. Its graduates are sent all over the country. There is, too, a WAC school for Physical Therapy Aides, and a similar school for civilians enrolled through Civil Service.

The physical therapy department of the hospital under Maj. Johnson interested me greatly. I spent a good part of an afternoon there learning how soldiers who have been ill for periods of three weeks to perhaps many months, are brought back to physical health during convalescence, and their morale and confidence stimulated.

5-20-44

Those whose arms or legs have been useless, are taught to use them again. All sorts of wheels, pulleys, and other apparatus for exercising the various extremities from a single finger or ankle to a whole arm or leg, lined the walls of one of the rooms shown me.

There are two gymnasiums. One is equipped with treadmills, bikes, rowing machines, weights, bars for reconditioning. The other has punching bags, mats for tumbling, and apparatus for more advanced exercising. There are three physical culture experts in charge, one who, formerly conditioned Hollywood stars — for all sorts of talents are now found among the enlisted men in the army.

Before a soldier is released to duty, so Maj. Johnson told me, he must pass a rigid hospital health test, and the results are carefully noted down on his chart. He must run a hundred yards, chin himself a given number of times, also push up from the floor.

5-20-44

He is tried at the standing and the running broad jump. And physicians or hospital attendants accompany him on mild hikes, gradually extended to five, then ten, then fifteen miles. When the convalescent soldier is released by the Physiotherapy Department of Station Hospital No. 1 he is ready for release from the hospital entirely and fully capable of performing his tasks with his military outfit again in the line of duty.

Aided By Red Cross

Maj. Johnson's staff is aided in their re-conditioning program by the Red Cross and their Gray Ladies who teach bed exercises if the patient is still abed, or who engage him in mild games, dancing, or light athletics if he is ambulatory.

They also carry on programs of education and reading, or the development of a patient's hobbies. If illiterates are convalescing, a portion of their time is given over to learning to read and write under the patient guidance of the ladies of the Red Cross, or other instructors provided by the Physiotherapy Department.

5-20-44

Maj. Johnson took me down a long corridor whose doors opened into a series of rooms equipped with the most modern scientific electro-therapy, hydro-therapy, and thermo-therapy apparatus. In these rooms patients receive violet-ray and massage treatments such as can only be found in the most expensive of civilian hospitals or nursing homes. I saw also the equipment for baking, sweat baths and hot quartz treatments, all of the most modern design.

Later in the afternoon, Dr. Giles — Lt. Col. Giles — showed me through Surgery, a section of the hospital austere in its simplicity, roomy, and spotlessly clean. He showed me shelves of instruments laid in long rows, sterilized, shining, ready for the operating room. I saw immaculate closets of gauzes and bandages. I was deeply impressed with the quiet and the antiseptic cleanliness of the surgical rooms, and the brisk efficiency of the attendants and nurses.

5-20-44

Lt. Col. Giles is a Diplomat of the American Board of Surgery. He has working with him an expert staff of surgeons. Frequently there are four or more major operations a day. Since Fort Huachuca is an isolated post, maternity cases of the wives of officers or enlisted men are also accepted.

I was told of a little new-born baby who had just arrived, prematurely, weighing only five pounds and being fed with a medicine dropper, but who was thriving and doing well.

"Its little feet are so cute and so cold," one of the nurses said, "that I am going to knit it some little boots."

5-20-44

Finds Friendliness

I found a warmth and friendliness among the personnel of Station Hospital No. 1 that was more than professional. I dined with a table of younger medical men, a jovial crew. I lunched with the nurses, a wholesome, happy looking group of women from all over the country.

I made a couple of records with convalescent patients in one of the recreation halls, and listened to one of their own recordings of barber shop chords. I read some of my humorous poems to a group of convalescents under Physiotherapy who laughed out loud every time I mentioned Georgia or Mississippi. I had dinner another day at Col. Bousfield's table and talked at a genial meal with some of the top staff members.

Col. Bousfield, who heads the management of this enormous hospital, is a tall distinguished-looking man, ruddy faced, with a small goatee. His eyes sparkle behind his glasses. He has a sense of humor. But he has also a sense of the great responsibilities of Negro officers and men in the armed forces of America. He believes in his job.

5-20-44

Many White Officers

And he believes in the potentialities for achievement, further training and experience for his large staff, and for the mutual education of both the Negro and white military men in their contacts on the Huachuca Post where there are many Southern white officers who have never known before colored men of the calibre of those on the staff of Station Hospital No. 1.

Like the vast extent of Tuskegee Institute when seen for the first time, like the bigness of Niagara Falls first seen, Fort Huachuca's Station Hospital No. 1, spreading over acres of Arizona desert in miles of pavilions and corridors, peopled with distinguished and efficient doctors, neat and competent nurses, white-coated orderlies, grey-uniformed Red Cross ladies, patients abed or afoot in their red robes, this hospital is impressive in a way no visitor can ever forget. It's a proud achievement for the U. S. Army and for America.

Says Democracy Is a Fact in New Veterans' Hospital

American — Baltimore, Md.

5-13-44

By VERNA ARVEY

(For Calvin's News Service)

From the lips of nurse's aides and Red Cross workers in the Birmingham General Hospital in Van Nuys, Calif., has come a heartening tale of the excellent race relations that exist in this newest hospital for overseas casualties, the fifty-seventh of its kind in the United States.

And it is, fortunately, all true for I visited the installation and saw that the colored patients were cial origins. Colored GOP, White Democrat everywhere completely integrated into the life of the hospital and that many of them had formed friendships with the white Southerner who is a student

That seems to be the majority opinion in the Birmingham Hospital, for it is like a big country club, equipped with two theatres, telegraph station, library, and many other fine features. It covers 150 acres has 100 buildings and is so large that one can walk and is so large that it, for eight miles through the corridors without re-tracing one's steps.

5-13-44

The commanding officer, Col. Arvin C. Miller of the Medical Corps, a man of vision and courage, was in command of the General Hospital at the Tripler General Hospital, Pearl Harbor, at the outbreak of war. For his outstanding work in saving the lives of many wounded, he was awarded the Legion of Merit.

In one ward there is a colored self-consciousness about the whole matter that it wasn't even necessary to ask questions about it. They all regarded themselves and they had done a good job for their country of the Arvin C. Miller of the Medical Corps, a man of vision and courage, was in command of the General Hospital at the Tripler General Hospital, Pearl Harbor, at the outbreak of war. For his outstanding work in saving the lives of many wounded, he was awarded the Legion of Merit.

In one ward there is a colored Democrat. Arguments? They are in a bed next to a Republican in a bed next to a student. They argue all day long. But never over

47f-1944

Negroes fight homes for war workers

Tribune — Los Angeles, Calif.

CHICAGO—Despite a hearing set in federal court for September 12, work has begun last week on a governmental housing project for Negro war workers in the exclusive West Chesterfield community of well-to-do Negro home owners.

The most unique case on record, erection of the 250 houses for Chicago war workers has been fought for several months by a West Chesterfield Citizen committee, headed by a Dr. J. E. Walker, Southside dentist. Charging that federal and city housing officials, by erection of the project, would ruin the finest Negro residential development in the United States", a petition in behalf of 7 property owners for vacating of an order condemning lots in the area, has been filed. 8-28-44

The West Chesterfield community located between 91st and 95th streets and State Street and South Parkway, now contains 71 homes, erected in the last five years and ranging in cost from $6,000 to $14,000. The Chicago housing authority claims the war workers' homes will average $6,000 and would compare favorably with the average of the Chesterfield homes. However, property owners in the sector claim that under the Lanham Act, the average cost of homes, federally financed, is now limited to $3,000.

The property owners admit that new homes for Negroes are needed but contend a 400-acre area, south of 95th street and West of South Parkway, is available where as many as 5,000 dwelling can be erected without detriment to property values.

To House Overseas Veterans

Call — Kansas City, Mo.

But Citizens See Inequality In Facilities

9-22-44

By HARRY McALPIN

WASHINGTON, D. C. — (NNPA) — In actions led by O. T. Shelton, head of the new tenants' organization, telegrams of protest were sent to the secretary of war, Gen. Aurand, 6th Corps area, Mayor Edward J. Kelly, the NAACP and Sens. G. Wayland Brooks and Scott W. Lucas. The resolution said, among other things:

"It is rank discrimination in view of the fact that the army now has the Congress, Auditorium, and numerous other hotels available where no housing shortage exists; and having just returned the Stevens hotel back to the civilian channels at a great loss to the taxpayers, that they would take the Pershing hotel, which is obviously inadequate, we repeat is rank discrimination.

A Dangerous Precedent

"The assemblage feels that you are now establishing a dangerous precedent, contrary to the ideals for which men, white and black, are yet fighting and that this action in which evidently you concur would dissipate the ideals for which they are offering their lives." The message was signed by O. T. Shelton, chairman and C. P. Reed, counsellor.

The Pershing hotel is one of many hotels that will be seized by the army for a re-distribution center for overseas veterans. Negro soldiers in the Chicagoland area will be sent to a reception center at Fort Sheridan, then will be given a 21-day furlough, which will be followed by assignment to a re-distribution center where they will live in comfortable surroundings until re-assigned to army duties. 9-23-44

The decision to use the Pershing hotel is the result of a conference between high ranking army officials and explained by Truman K. Gibson, civilian aide to the secretary of war to local newspapermen recently.

While white soldiers might be housed comfortably in the beachside hotels of Miami, it was brought out that current race practices would greatly imperil the happiness of Negro soldiers and their wives. The decision to bring Negro soldiers to Chicago, where there are less race tension and prohibitions, was reached and agreed upon.

A 500-room modern hotel, the Pershing is located in the heart of Chicago's better colored residential district. Plans have been completed for transforming the hotel into a sort of glamor resort by enlarging the dining room, refurnishing its ballroom and employing a full hotel staff to make it possible for the returning vets and their wives to frolic in a highly sophisticated atmosphere, it was learned.

The Theresa is the second Negro hotel to be taken over for this purpose. The week before, the Pershing Hotel in Chicago was taken.

The loss of the Theresa for civilian use will be a severe blow to Harlem's housing problem for both in and out-of-towners. The hotel was constantly filled to the rafters, and reservations were more difficult to obtain there than at the McAlpin, the Pennsylvania, the New Yorker, the Commodore, the Edison, and many other of the "downtown" hotels. 9-22-44

A Jim Crow Feature

The principal grudge of Negroes is not that the hostelries are being taken over for the benefit of soldiers who have been undergoing the hell of war. They see a great injustice, however, in the Army taking accommodations in the heart of Negro belts, where housing conditions already are acute, whereas for the whites the Army is taking over the luxury accommodations at resort centers, which in no way affects the day-to-day living of the white civilian.

"Negroes", said one leader, "are not unwilling to make any sacrifice in the interest of the war and for the benefit of their soldiers. But in a democracy, one expects the sacrifices to be somewhat evenly distributed."

The jim-crow feature of the centers for Negroes is being severely criticized, also. No such segregation is practiced in the redistribution centers set up by the Army Air Forces.

Pershing Tenants Protest

CHICAGO. — (ANP) — A newly organized Pershing Tenants league, composed of tenants of the Pershing hotel, struck back at the army last week when they adopted a resolution in protest to the war department's seizure of the hotel for the housing of Negro soldiers. 9-22-44

Leaders Protest Army Move To Lease Theresa

People's Voice — New York, N. Y.

9-23-44

Reports that the Army plans to take over Theresa Hotel as a post-war demobilization center for returning Negro oversea veterans drew "most vigorous protest" this week from twenty-six Negro leaders of Harlem who called upon President Roosevelt to block the plan. The threat to Theresa Hotel in already overcrowded Harlem was revealed following last week's announcement that the Army has already acquired Pershing Hotel, on Southside Chicago, for one of the proposed two jimcro demobilization centers. Mr. Walter Scott, Manager of Theresa Hotel, refused to confirm or deny reports of the Army plan. It was learned from reliable sources, however, that Army engineers have already been assigned to survey the building. 9-23-44

A telegram sent to President Roosevelt by the protesting Harlem leaders pointed out that "white soldiers brought back from overseas for recreation and relief from battle strain are to be given approximately two weeks each at . . . luxurious hotels and resorts," but that "Negro soldiers are required to go to Theresa Hotel in New York's Harlem, and Pershing Hotel in Chicago's Southside," a joint telegram sent to President Roosevelt this Monday urged him "most vigorously to instruct the War Department to abandon its plans to set up segregated institutions for returning Negro soldiers."

The telegram to President Roosevelt was signed by the following:

A. A. Austin, Commissioner Samuel Battle, Judge Jane Bolin, Herbert Bruce, Harold Burton, Lt. Lewis Chisholm, George Cohron, Henry Craft and Charles A. Collier, Jr. 9-23-44

Additional signers include Frank Crosswaith, Judge Hubert T. Delaney, Fred Dickens, Rev. S. T. Eldridge, Alphonse Heningburg, Edward S. Lewis, Louise McDonald, Fronk Montero, Rev. A. C. Powell, Jr., Mrs. Ruth Logan Roberts, Cecilia C. Saunders, George S. Schuyler, Dr. Channing H. Tobias, Ludlow Werner, Walter White, Doxey A. Wilkerson and Dr. Louis T. Wright.

Expect Pershing And Theresa To Stay In Private Hands

Defender — Chicago, Ill.

10-7-44

By HARRY McALPIN

WASHINGTON — (NNPA) —President Roosevelt told a delegation of Negro leaders Friday that the Army had abandoned its segregation proposal in redistribution centers for returned overseas veterans.

While refusing to reveal details of the plan, all three leaders—Walter White, Channing Tobias, and Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune—said they were pleased with the change.

The jim crow program originally planned by the army, which included taking over the Hotel Pershing in Chicago and the Hotel Theresa in New York City as Negro centers, was protested by Negro organizations in both cities.

It was under pressure from the White House that the army revised its plan for the jim crow centers. 10-7-44

Plan Integration

The new plan is reliably reported to provide for complete integration by assignment in the centers at Lake Placid, N. Y., and at Atlantic City.

In New York City, the center will be integrated on a volunteer basis. Returned overseas veterans, white and colored, may express a preference for New York. They will be housed indiscriminately in the same hotels. The same is expected to be the practice in Chicago.

A new center, not yet selected, will be opened on the West Coast.

In view of the social and recreational pattern of the program and the necessary community contacts and cooperation outside the hotels to make the program a success, no Negroes will be assigned to centers in the South. Otherwise, and except for volunteer requests to be sent to New York City, the men will be assigned to centers nearest their homes. 10-7-44

Will Abandon Hotels

While no announcement has been made, it is believed the army will abandon both the Pershing and the Theresa hotel sites in Chicago and

N. Y. Meeting 10-7-44 definite framework

zens protested against the jim crow ovide for integra- policy outlined by the army, against the taking of the Theresa which helps meet a stringent housing probof weakening on lem in Harlem, and against the use n came when the of a second-rat hotel for Negroes d of the results of while white soldiers would be d" meeting called brought back to luxury-type hotels ommanding officer located in resort centers. ervice Command, Following Gen. Terry's report to outstanding citi- the War Department, all further k City. These citi- army action was held in abeyance
Saturday that the Pershing will not be taken over.
New York City, respectively.
In Chicago, where steps have been taken toward the actual physical seizure of the Pershing, occupants were given an indefinite ex-tension of time to get out.
The Chicago Sun denounced the seizure of the Pershing, and the Mayor's Committee on Race Relations in Chicago has recommended the hotel be left to fill a critical civilian housing need. The Sun said within a very definite framework which would provide for integration.
The first sign of weakening on the army's jim crow plan came when the army was informed of the results of the "off the record" meeting called by Gen. Terry, commanding officer of the Second Service Command, the War Department, all further outstanding citizens in New York City protested against the jim crow policy outlined by the army, against the taking of the Theresa which helps meet a stringent housing problem in Harlem, and against the use of a second-rat hotel for Negroes while white soldiers would be brought back to luxury-type hotels located in resort centers.
Following Gen. Terry's report to the War Department, all further army action was held in abeyance out its own new plan, but only as it affected the Theresa, though the decision to take it over definitely had been made and Terry's meeting presumably was for the purpose of giving out this information.

The redistribution centers are being set up to provide a means of relaxation for battle-weary soldiers, lifted out of the hell of war overseas. Efforts are made to get the men in a mood to return to combat. They are given the best food, provided dental and medical care, and undergo a series of psychiatric interviews to determine the best classification for them in the army. But mainly, they are encouraged to forget all about war for about two weeks and have a "helluva good time." 10-7-44

Other than the Theresa and the Pershing hotels, which the army had planned to take over for Negroes, it had already taken 49 hotels in the resort centers at Miami Beach, Fla., Ashville, N. C., Hot Springs, Ark., Lake Placid, N. Y., and Santa Barbara, Cal. To these have been added proposed centers in Atlantic City, N. J.

Heroic Sergeant Decorated For Saving His Pal

Daily World - Atlanta, Ga.

Medal Pinned On His Chest By Gen'l Clark

10-1-44

WITH THE FIFTH ARMY, ITALY — (SNS) — At a special formation at Fifth Army headquarters in the field near the Italian front, Sergeant Thomas W. Northcross, of Nashville, Tennessee, recently received the Soldier's Medal for heroism, the War Department reported today.

The medal was pinned on Sergeant Northcross by Lieutenant General Mark W. Clark, commander of the Fifth Army, during Salerno Day, September 9, ceremonies commemorating the anniversary of the Fifth Army's invasion of Italy.

Sergeant Northcross was awarded the medal for his heroic action last June near the port of Piombino, Italy, when he swam 150 yards out into the sea to rescue a drowning soldier who had been seized with cramps. Sergeant Northcross' quick action saved the man's life.

The son of Mrs. Mary Brown, 12 North Hill Street, Nashville, Sergeant Northcross has been in the Army more than two years. He is section sergeant with a Negro trucking company, and is in charge of 16 men and vehicles.

In a year and a half overseas his outfit, one of the outstanding transportation units in the Fifth Army, has driven over 1,000,000 truck miles in convoying troops and supplies through North Africa, Sicily and Italy. 10-1-44

The unit, which includes more than a hundred Negro soldiers from all parts of the States, and five white officers, is commanded by Captain Aldo E. Garoni, 361 Sterling Street, North East, Atlanta, Georgia.

Sergeant Northcross was graduated from Pearl High School in Nashville, where he won a letter in football.

For Heroism

Commercial Appeal - Memphis, Tenn.

10-6-44

For heroism displayed when he saved a shipmate from drowning on D-Day, although he himself was wounded, Steward's Mate 1-c Arthur Jones, Memphis Negro, was decorated with the Silver Star by Capt. Ogden D. King at Naval Hospital at Charleston, S. C. Jones, a Manassas High School graduate who lives here at 2143 Stovall, was serving aboard a destroyer whose crew was compelled to abandon ship under heavy frie of German shore batteries in Normandy.

—Navy Photo

Jim Crow Vet Centers Protest Grows

Leaders From Harlem, Chicago Blast To FDR Against Army Discrimination

Amsterdam News - New York, N.Y.

9-30-44

Negro leaders from New York to Chicago have been sending in the last few days bitter protests to Commander-in-Chief Roosevelt against the latest discrimination program proposed by the United States Army. That order has not yet been officially proclaimed, but it will be put into practice like all the others before the order is made public, they believe.

Reliable sources state that black overseas veterans scheduled for demobilization and rehabilitation will henceforth be housed in such colored hotels as the Theresa in New York City and the Pershing Hotel in Chicago. The same sources state that white soldiers under similar orders will come home for recuperation from their wounds and battle fatigue or discharge to swank hotels at the nation's famous watering places in Miami, Lake Placid, Santa Barbara, Calif., and Hot Springs, Ark.

Denounce Injustices

The angry leaders have denounced this cruel injustice to colored doughboys and their race on two counts:

The first of these relates to the unequal, segregated accommodations to be given wounded and worn out black service men. It is apparent that it is inconsiderate and inhumane for these men to return to such conditions after they have made a supreme sacrifice for their country. 9-30-44

Secondly, for the United States Army to command here the two best colored hotels in New York and Chicago, is to do the congested civilian population a great injustice. One must know the crying lack of decent hotel accommodations for Negro people to realize what it means to take the Theresa and Pershing Hotels from them.

This latest affront to Uncle Sam's black fighters follows a long line of such outrages. It follows the long prison term sentences to the five soldiers who balked at discrimination in a Southern Army camp. Under pressure these sentences have been reduced by the high command in Washington.

Former United States Army Chaplain J. Benjamin Dove, of New York City, has been retired to inactive service for his heroic complaint against racial abuse and discrimination in Southern Army camps. Rev. Dove is now crusading against these conditions after protesting in vain to the Commander-in-Chief. 9-30-44

Another glaring case was that of the colored soldiers recently hanged in England by the United States Army when British law does not make the crime of rape punishable by death. The stench from the sentence of death for three colored soldiers, court martialed for rape in Caledonia, still rises to high heaven. The woman was a harlot.

'Defender' Attacks Plan

The famous Fighting Fifteenth of New York, now the 369th Regiment, United States Infantry, one of the crack new regiments in the Army, has constantly been denied combat duty and has long been doing guard duty in Hawaii. The same story of discrimination runs the entire gamut of the service for colored fighters in the Army, Navy and Air Forces. 9-30-44

The Chicago Defender, as well as all the other militant Negro organs, some of whom are supporting the fourth term for the Commander-in-Chief, takes this trenchant blast at this latest Army order. The Defender says editorially in the issue of September 16, 1944:

"Next to General Eisenhower's spectacular advance through France, the most amazing thing about the U. S. Army continues to be its cockeyed inconsistent racial policy.

"Newest of its one-step-forward, two-steps-back tactics on the color problem comes in its plans for redistribution of Negro veterans returning from the battlefronts. The War Department has decreed a strictly Jim Crow setup in sending veterans back to civilian life."

Is This Discrimination?

Chicago Hotel Seized For Army Rest Center

Courier - Pittsburgh, Pa.

9-16-44

CHICAGO, Ill.—Having designated Chicago's Pershing hotel as the first redistribution center for Negro officers and enlisted men of the Army ground and service forces returning from overseas, the War Department deviates from its recently announced policy of abolishing segregation in the use of recreational facilities by Army personnel, general said. Maj. Richard Jones, former Chicago department store superintendent, will be in charge of special services and public relations.

The Chicago center will probably be staffed with a crew of Negro officers and enlisted men now stationed at Camp Ellis, Illinois, who will be housed most likely at the nearby Mansfield Apartment hotel, according to General Ardrand, commanding general, Sixth Service Command. The commander of the post has not been selected, provide facilities in a pleasant at troops may relax of overseas serv-creational appor-

g reclassified for 9-16-44
War Robert ed last Thursday
nder way for es-bution centers for shortly after Gen-
unced the estab-
Chicago hotel as centers.
nnouncement, the has processed all white and colored de redistribution
c City, N. J. Rehas leased resort ville, N. C., and t the latter icially announced eterans would be housed on a cost basis.

mosphere, where troops may relax from the strain of overseas service and enjoy recreational opportunities while being reclassified for future action. 9-16-44

Undersecretary of War Robert Patterson announced last Thursday that plans were under way for establishing redistribution centers for colored soldiers, shortly after General Aurand announced the establishment of the Chicago hotel as the first of these centers.

Prior to this announcement, the Army Air Force has processed all of its personnel, white and colored through the same centers at Atlantic City, N. J. Redistribution stations are not crowded beyond capacity at the time, but pointed out that veterans—not the Government—must defray their wives' expense, who will be fed and housed on a cost basis.

9-16-44

WIVES MAY STAY AT REST CENTERS

According to the Army's plan, returning veterans will be sent from ports of embarkation to reception centers near their homes, where partial pay and,

AFFORDS RELAXATION FROM OVERSEAS SERVICE

Establishment of these centers is a part of a recently announced pro

Homes & Hospitals

Non-Segregation Idea Carries Out FDR Promise

Theresa And Preshing Hotels Not To Be Seized

By HARRY McALPIN

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(NNPA) Official announcement of the abandonment of the Army plan to use the Theresa and Pershing Hotels in New York and Chicago, and to abolish its jimcrow proposal for Negro soldiers was made by the War Department here on Sunday.

The announcement did not mention the two hotels by name but said "in order to avoid taking over additional hotel facilities in housing shortage areas, Negro returnees will be processed with white returnees through existing northern Redistribution Centers."

For almost a month after President Roosevelt received protests concerning the proposed seizure of the Pershing and Theresa Hotels for jimcrow centers and ordered the Army to work out new plans which would eliminate segregation, the War Department has been trying to work out a "face-saving" statement for release.

PLAN FURTHER REVISED

The plan envolved in consultation with White House representatives, as exclusively revealed by the NNPA last wek, was further revised when Secretary of War Stimson reviewed the new proposal and determined that inadequate provisions had been made for the large numbers of soldiers who would be returned to this country come V-Day.

The official announcement says: "The War Department announced today that its program for processing soldiers in Redistricution Centers on their return to the United States from combat areas overseas will be altered and expanded through the utilization of existing Army Camps.

"The expansion is necessitated by a growing volume of soldiers sent back home by the Army's Air, Ground and Service Forces. At present, hotel facilities are being used in the Redistribution Process where the returning veterans are housed while resting and being processed, re-oriented, reclassified and reassigned. These hotel facilities, however, are taxed to capacity, and it is becoming increasingly difficult to find additional hotels which would be suitable quarters for the establishment of Redistribution Centers," the announcement states.

PROCESSING TOGETHER

On the matter of the previous jimcrow plan, the announcement declares, "Pending the establishment of the camp type Dedistribution Centers, and in order to avoid taking over additional hotel facilities in housing shortage areas, Negro returnees will be processed with white returnees through existing northern Redistribution Centers. Thereafter, all returning soldiers, white and Negro, certified by a medical officer as being most in need of this type of accommodation, will be housed in hotels retained for convalescents in the same manner in which they are at present being cared for in the hospitals or convalescent centers."

Assurance has been given by Assistant Secretary of War McCloy that Negro medical officer will be included in the program for determining whether Negro soldiers should be "certified" as being "most in need of" the hotel type of accommodation. Without this assurance, this is viewed as a weak spot in the program, offering a loophole to keep Negroes out of the hotel centers after the camps are established.

The "same manner" referred to in connection with hospitals, and convalescent centers is one of full integration of white a nd Negro soldiers. This program of non-segregation in these phases of the Army's program has been in effect all along.

ARMY CAMP PHASE

As for the Army camp phase of the Redistribution Center program proposed for the future, the Army says: "Under the new Redistribution Program, certain of those Army camps which are better situated and more attractive will be selected for use as Redistribution Centers. Many such camps are becoming available through the movement of troops overseas."

Persons familiar with the usual Army plan of operation are cautioning Negroes to watch closely to see that when this phase of the Army program is put into effect that Negroes are not herded into Southern camps where their opportunities for relaxation and recreation will be hampered by the traditions and customs of that section.

The upshot of the Army's announcement for the present is that Negroes will be integrated in the centers at Lake Placid, N. Y., and Atlantic City, N. J.; that the Pershing and Theresa Hotels will not be seized as originally proposed; and that a tremendous step has been taken in combatting jimcrow in the Army.

47f-1944

Hospitals

How Ft. Huachuca Wages Fight On Social Disease

Defender — Chicago, Ill.

5-27-44

By LANGSTON HUGHES

The Crusaders, returning from their wars in the East, are credited with having first introduced syphilis into Europe. From the beginning of military history, commanders have considered as one of their major problems that of sex and soldiers.

Men in the army are always men away from home. Men in the army are often men on the move. Men in the army, any army, are the target and prey of promiscuous women selling their bodies for gain. Prostitution is one of the great problems of any army.

The French army during World War I approved organized inspected commercial prostitution. The Japanese army in this war is said to carry with their troops contingents of commercial women. The American army has chosen to outlaw prostitution, and to institute a program of health education and venereal disease control.

At Fort Huachuca, America's largest concentration of Negro troops, the venereal disease control program is in the hands of Capt. John J. Goldsberry, brilliant young Negro graduate of the Harvard School of Public Health. Col. Edwin M. Hardy, post commander, has taken an intensive personal interest in this control program, and it is due to his backing that amazingly excellent health results have been achieved at Fort Huachucha within the year.

At Station Hospital No. 1

I spent an afternoon with Capt. Goldsberry at his offices in Station Hospital No. 1. Capt. Goldsberry is the venereal disease control officer for the entire post of Fort Huachuca. The post population, fluctuating as it is according to the number of troops in quarters, is sometimes equal to that of any city in Arizona except Phoenix or Tucson. Fort Huachuca is a large army post containing within its borders, besides male soldiers and WACs, a large number of civilian workers. Just outside the gates of the Fort is the village of Fry.

5-27-44

It is obvious that the control of disease in any given community involves the entire population. The population of the Fort Huachuca area consists then of the military; the civilian workers on the post—clerks, laundry workers, laborers, and others; army wives, and visitors; and the population of Fry.

Fry was formerly one of the most disreputable areas to be found near any large army post in America. However, Col. Hardy threatened to invoke the May Act so, with the aid of local health officers, new Arizona laws, and military pressure, the notorious Hook, the prostitution section of this desert village, has been closed. Most of the women are gone and the Hook is off limits to soldiers. This step alone has reduced the venereal contraction rate at Fort Huachuca by more than 80 per cent. At a recent periodic medical inspection, not a single new infection for that period was reported.

Civilians Should Help

The army alone, however, cannot fight with complete effectiveness the battle against commercialized vice. Col. Hardy agrees with Capt. Goldsberry that the moral pressure of the better elements in civilian communities near army camps must be brought to bear on local situations. Graft and corrupt public officials may often prevent the cleaning out of vice areas unless prodded by civilian public opinion. Since Capt. Goldsberry is directly concerned with the problems of Negro soldiers, he feels that Negro civilians have a deep responsibility toward these soldiers, in that commercialized vice, with its trail of infectious diseases, be cleared from communities near military camps.

American public schools in most sections of our country have been very backward in sex education. The army is now furnishing education in sex hygiene to millions of young men. By the mediums of lectures, motion pictures, and reading matter they learn that venereal diseases are not the result of "strain" or "bad blood," but are definitely diseases contracted from careless, unclean, infected persons. They learn that commercial women are dangerous. That such women may eventually kill or cripple more men than a machine gun. They learn the value of continence. Failing that, of cleanliness and prophylaxis.

For the protection of all Fort Huachuca's soldiers, but particularly for those men who cannot or will not profit by the lessons of the army's sex education program, Capt. Goldsberry has devised and keeps on file an elaborated system of charts, maps, and records of all venereal cases on the post, military or civilian, of the women from whom the infections were contracted whenever it is possible to secure their names and addresses, and of all possible sources of infection in the camp area.

5-27-44

Spot Infection Sources

On the wall of the V. D. Control Office there is a map with colored pins marking the city of each known source of camp infection, whether in this country or just south of the Mexican border. Public health officials in these cities are requested to clean out or round up the infected women for treatment. Capt. Goldsberry reports very helpful collaboration from the health officials in the Mexican cities of Nogales, Naco, and Agua Prieta.

For purposes of identification when a soldier cannot remember the name of the woman from whom he picked up an infection, Capt. Goldsberry has a file of photographs of many of the public women in towns and cities within a hundred mile area of Fort Huachuca, both Mexican and Negro. It is amazing how physically ugly many of these women are. Capt. Goldsberry hopes shortly to be able to put his finger on all known sources of infection in the Southern Arizona region. Such sources are almost entirely without the camp area.

Educational movies and lectures for all soldiers on the post are also available to civilian workers. The post newspaper, The Apache Sentinel, is cooperating with this program by offering a weekly prize of $10 for the best soldier essay on some aspect of venereal disease control. In its issue of March 31, Pvt. Walter Gray of the 758th Tank Battalion writes concerning syphilis, "Ask yourself this question, 'What can I do to avoid this disease?' . . . A defense worker loses man-hours, time and money, while a soldier loses training hours, time and money. Both are impeding the war effort."

5-27-44

Warn of Social Disease

The Art Department of Fort Huachuca's Special Services is producing an excellent series of silk-screen posters warning of the dangers of gonorrhea and syphilis. Some of these brightly colored posters are designed by Pvt. Lew Davis. Other posters are designed by the wife of Capt. Goldsberry who is a graduate of the Boston Art school. The posters picture Negro figures and are slanted to appeal to the Negro soldier and civilian worker.

Each soldier going on furlough from Fort Huachuca is given a little booklet, The Furlough Soldier, by order of Post Commander Col. Hardy, gotten out by Capt. Goldsberry's office. This booklet warns anew of the dangers of promiscuous contacts, and instructs the soldier in how to care for himself. It also appeals to his manliness to return to camp clean, rested, refreshed, and a good soldier.

5-27-44

Fort Huachuca's venereal disease control program has now reached such a point of popularity with the men that companies compete for places on the camp honor roll as being free of disease for the month. The Special Service Division works intensively to provide athletics, entertainment, and personal recreation for the men in camp. Just outside the gates the USO club at Fry does its best to furnish amusements, games, dancing, and refreshment. These activities are a great aid to the V. D. Control Office which continues to expand its activities against the army's ancient snake in the grass, venereal disease.

47f-1944

Hospitals

Carter Describes 332nd's Field Hospital, Only Fully Equipped Unit in 15th AAF

Afro-American — Baltimore, Md.

9-16-44

By ART CARTER

AFRO War Correspondent with U.S. Troops in Italy

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

ALLIED AIRBASE IN ITALY (By Air Mail) — Far off the dusty runway rises a small rectangle of pyramid tents plainly marked by huge red crosses — military sign of medical men two of which resemble miniature "big-tops" of the circus, long and narrow.

Together they form the field hospital of the 332nd Fighter Group. Within the confines of the canvas-tops, one paved with brick, the others floored with wood, is all the medical equipment possible to use in the field.

This field hospital, under direction of the group flight surgeon,

Maj. Marshbanks

Maj. Vance H. Marshbanks, Jr., is the only fully-equipped field unit in the 15th AAF, and has been especially praised by the force's medical authorities. "The trend here is preventive rather than curative," declared Major Marshbanks during a tour of the dispensary, 36-bed aid station, unit pharmacy, X-ray tent and dental laboratory. "No man should get sick," added the major, the only coloerd group flight surgeon in a combat organization.

Squadron flight surgeons are: Capts. William E. Allen of Columbus, Ohio, Meharry Medical College, '41; Bascom S. Waugh, of Camden, N.J., Meharry, '35; Arnold H. Maloney, Jr., son of a Howard U. professor, University of Indiana, '38. 9-16-44

Major Marshbanks, a retired army captain and a 1937 graduate of Howard University College of Medicine, was once resident physician [illegible] and, Ore.; Carl [illegible] Woods, Ma[illegible] Pa., and Vincent Mitchell, Mou[illegible] Clemens, Mich. The other thirteen, all second lieutenants, are:

Jimmie D. Wheller, Rosevill[illegible] Mich.; Henry Peoples, Hampt[illegible] graduate of St. Louis; Earl [illegible] Lane, Wichliffe, Ohio; Boland [illegible] Moody, Cambridge, Mass., studen[illegible] Elbert Hudson, Los Angeles;

Hannibal M. Cox, Chicago; M[illegible] [illegible]on S. Hays, Los Angeles; Harc[illegible] M. Morris, Portland, Ore.; Joh[illegible] H. Porter, Cleveland; Roosev[illegible] Stiger, Jackson, Mich.; Willia[illegible]

one year's service within the continental limits of the United States and completion of 50 hours of flying in a military aircraft — flying as passengers not pilots.

Assignment for overseas duty earned for each the designation as flight surgeon, an appointment based on the physicians' stability, tactfulness, personality and technical knowledge in aviation medicine.

Their Duties the Broadest

Their duties are broader than those of a military surgeon, who is a member of the commanding officer's special staff and supervises all medical activities in his organization. 9-16-44

In addition to the military surgeon's duties of medical administration, sanitation, first aid, professional practice and advice, the flight surgeon is charged with care of the flyers.

Indirectly, they choose the flying personnel, for they decide when a pilot should fly and when he should not, maintain them through training phases and "keep em flying" in combat.

These flight surgeons are confidantes of the flyers. Their psychological konwledge must be profound, both theoretically and practically, and not the least important, is that they must be familiar with the effects of flying environment.

Flying environment includes details about the effects of the airplane, its motion and its altitude (atmospheric variations in oxygen, pressure and temperature) and the use of survival techniques and equipment.

Psychological Treatments

By far, the most absorbing phase of the flight surgeon's work is the prevention, diagnosis, treatment and disposition of cases involving emotional disturbances.

After months of combat, such cases pop up with increasing rapidity, and the surgeon must exert a mother's influence and care for upon his decision the question of whether a flyer goes home or stays to fly again in combat is often answered. 9-16-44

The group dispensary where the surgeons work and which is the centralized station for the group is equipped for eye, ear, nose and throat examinations, routine physical examinations; X-ray, fluroscopy, foreign body localization, first aid (shock treament), minor surgery and medicine.

36-Bed Station

The 36-bed aid station takes care of cases that require short periods of bed rest, and serious cases are sent to general hospitals.

Each squadron also maintains a unit dispensary, which takes care of minor cases within the outfit. In the dental department, Captain Beck handles extractions, remedial relief for aches and other minor oral defects. 9-16-44

Besides care and treatment of men from the group, the medical unit is frequently called upon to render emergency service for bomber casualties, when bullet-filled ships find it necessary to make emergency landings at their base.

No Epidemics in 2 Months

They also handle malaria control and other general problems of sanitation, and to their credit there has been no outbreak of an epidemic of any kind in eight months' overseas duty for the group.

Sgt. Leroy Harrell, 37 N.Y. University graduate, who ran his own bacteriological laboratory in NYC, is the unit's pharmacist, while Cpl. John L. Hill, Tuckahoe, N.Y., dental assistant, did similar work in civilian life. 9-16-44

Lt. Eugene Sills, Washington, is administrative assistant to the flight surgeon. Others attached to the headquarters section are:

T/Sgt. Felix James, New Orleans; Sgt. Moses L. Potter, Monroe, La.; Sgt. Arthur H. Bruce, Los Angeles; Pfc. Luther T. Friday, Detroit; Cpl. William Alexander, Richmond; Cpl. Howard P. Vennabel, NYC, and Pfc. Theodore Thompson, Louisville, Ky., are also attached to the headquarters section.

Scattered among the various squadrons' medical detachments are:

Sgts. Lewis W. Jackson, Wester, Pa., and Willie Jaggers, Rock Hill, S.C.; Cpls. Carl H. Bradford, Birmingham; and Eugene Weatherspoon, Selma, Ala.;

S/Sgt. Broadus N Butler, Mobile, Ala.; Cpls. Thomas O. Fuller, Dallas; Frederick M. Clark, Corona, N.Y.; S/Sgt. William E. Whitlow, Jr., Chicago; Cpls. John H. Davis, Cleveland, Ohio; and Claude E. Smith, Cincinnati; 9-16-44

Preventive Medicine the Trend in Outfit Headed by Major Vance H. Marshbanks

9-16-44

Arnold H. Maloney, Jr., of Wash[illegible] and First Lieutenant Walter L. McCraery, pilot of San [illegible]o, Texas.

Captains Allen, Maloney and Bascom S. Waugh.

Capt. William K. Allen of Columbus, Ohio, makes X-ray examination in a field hospital of the fighter group commanded by Col. B. O. Davis ,Jr.

Ft. Huachuca Hospital Earns Higher Rating

Ft. Huachuca, Ariz.--Station hospital No. 1, commanded by Col. Aidian O. Bousfield, has been given a new official rating, according to an announcement last week by the war department. Under the new designation, it will known as the Army Service Forces Regional hospital.

The new set-up places the hospital midway between the station hospital class and the general hospital designation, and is viewed as a compliment to the excellent staff under Col. Bousfield. It is now among 50 other hospitals in the continental United States moved up into a newly created division of general hospitals which functions as hospitals of the interior.

The hospital will take over the functions of a general hospital, such as formerly carried out in the continental United States, for everything except reception of overseas patients. The name "general hospital" will continue to serve for reception of overseas patients and to give specialized services in cases of tuberculosis, neuro-surgery and similar special conditions. However, many patients who were formerly sent away to "general" hospitals for final medical treatment before being discharged will receive that final type treatment here.

Tribune--Philadelphia, Pa. 6-17-44

More Jim-Crow Hospitals for Veterans Considered

Afro-American Balt., Md. 12-23-44

WASHINGTON

The Veterans' Administration is planning the construction of additional jim crow hospitals of the Tuskegee type in the South.

This disclosure was made by Maj. Gen. Frank T. Hines, Administrator of Veterans' Affairs, before the Deficiences Appropriations Committee of the House during hearings on the first supplemental appropriation bill for 1945.

Consideration Revealed

General Hines said:

"We are going to have a problem undoubtedly of providing another Tuskegee Hospital, or a solid colored hospital, probably more, in the Mississippi-Alabama area.

"There are a large number of colored troops from that area. The Board (the Federal Board of Hospitalization) is studying all of that now."

Opposition Ignored

The subject of segregated facilities for colored veterans, it was learned, has been broached by General Hines in conferences between him and colored individuals who have talked with him concerning the employment of colored administrative personnel in the central administrative offices in the District of Columbia and in regional offices in the field.

Upon these individuals expressing their opposition to segregated facilities, it was said, General Hines dropped the subject.

It was also pointed out to him, it was learned, that the Army and Navy maintain no segregated general hospitals for their white and colored personnel.

Establishment of a separate hospital for colored veterans after World War I was bitterly opposed by colored people and white Alabamans. After its establishment, colored veterans who were sent there from the North bitterly complained.

Convenience a Factor

The policy that the Veterans Administration follows in the location of new units is to place the unit in an area where it will serve the greatest number of veterans, endeavoring to shorten the distance of travel not only for the veteran but for his family who want to visit him at one of those facilities.

Both tuberculosis and neuropsychiatric patients are cared for at Tuskegee hospital.

5% of Patients Are Colored at D. C.'s Walter Reed Hospital

Afro-American-Baltimore, Md.

All Soldiers Get Best of Medical Care; Red Cross Policy of Jim Crow, Lack of Barbers and Entertainment Are Sore Spots

2-26-44

By MICHAEL CARTER

WASHINGTON, D.C.—The stretcher bearers who brought him into Walter Reed Hospital were white. When they lowered the stretcher to the floor and walked off the patient asked them not to forget his overnight bag which was in the ambulance.

The soldier looked embarrassed lying on the floor. He stared disconsolately at his bag which was placed near his head and occasionally looked up at passers-by. A few minutes later he was whisked into the admitting room.

From the time the hospital doors close on him until he leaves under his own steam he will not experience any serious jim crow or official anti-race humiliation.

Since he is still in the American Army he will, of course, be treated as a "colored soldier," but so far as medical attention, personal consideration and general treatment are concerned, he will be treated as an American soldier.

Official Policy

He will be placed in a ward with white soldiers. When he is able to walk about, he will eat, cafeteria style, in the general mess hall, will use the same toilets, the same recreation hall and the same nurses will massage him. Such is the official policy of the hospital.

Native Nazism will bite him only when he wants to get a hair cut, or when he wants to go to a dance on the post. Obviously he will find many prejudiced inmates and a number of similarly prejudiced nurses and doctors.

The lieutenant who escorted me through the wards and grounds made every reasonable effort to show me that he was personally fair and was only interested in the AFRO's getting a true picture.

When a good-natured woman phoned to offer twenty gifts, he told his secretary to select ten white and ten colored recipients. According to the percentage of colored soldiers only four should have received gifts.

None of Walter Reed's many colored employees holds an executive job. All I saw were porters or kitchen workers and orderlies. There are several white WACS in the building, but no colored WAC has ever been seen there.

At the beginning of the war, the hospital contained 1,500 beds. Today it has 3,000. A new addition has been set up at Forest Glen, Md., where there are a large number of the colored convalescents. A regular bus service takes them into Walter Reed for clinical treatment. 2-26-44

Only about 5 per cent of the total patients are colored. Less than 1 per cent are battle casualties. In three days I found only one colored battle casualty. The few others were either on furloughs or passes.

Best Medical Treatment

Any soldier who gets into Walter Reed is a lucky man. Medical treatment here compares with the high quality of treatment in Russian Army hospitals. Soldiers have been known to collapse, deliberately, in Union Station to get in.

Any soldier who becomes ill in Washington is automatically taken to Walter Reed. The hospital's fame is international. It is equipped with the latest devices for all types of surgery and healing.

A giant electro-magnet will extract foreign particles from the eye, and penicillin is produced and used in the hospital. The occupational therapy rooms are fitted with numerous devices to restore self-confidence and dexterity.

No Discrimination

The devices are as simple as weaving to complex machines to re-establish finger muscles. There is no evidence of discrimination in the use of or application of these instruments. If a patient needs them he uses them. Medical attendants seem to be quite as interested in curing colored soldiers as white.

Among the fancy instruments in the occupational therapy rooms is a jig saw operated by foot power. Frequently the pedals are placed just out of reach so the patient must stretch his legs to operate the saw.

There are whirlpool baths, heat treatments, giant wheels to exercise shoulder muscles and massages. Soldiers told me that whites frequently were distressed at the sight of a white nurse massaging a dark shoulder. Officially no one pays attention to such protests.

Lack of Recreation

All patients wear reddish colored jumpers and trousers and are not required to salute officers. Even General Patton could not demand a salute from a hospital-clad soldier.

Chief complaint from our soldiers is the lack of recreation in which they can participate without embarrassment. The Red Cross, which handles most of the recreation, is upset about the prospect of mixed dances.

White groups, making party arrangements through the Red Cross, have been known to specify "no colored soldiers."

Ignore Some Soldiers

"It is sickening to see wealthy white clubs come in here and pass out gifts. They deliberately ignore colored soldiers.

"Of course, they can't pass you up if they are giving things to everybody in a ward, but they make you feel that they are giving only out of duty and not because of appreciation for our help in winning the war. 2-26-44

"It's just as bad when a group of colored girls offers to give a party for our soldiers only."

This club, which was formed at the Lucy Slowe Hall, offered to entertain colored soldiers.

The Red Cross said it would have to include white soldiers. Since the Red Cross had not insisted on the presence of colored soldiers when white clubs were giving parties, the club refused to give that party.

Gave Gift to Friend

The same soldier told me, "Sometimes colored individuals or groups come here to give presents and ignore the white soldiers. Once I gave my present to a white soldier who had been friendly with me.

"I tried to explain why my people had passed him up, but got embarrassed and walked away. Suppose he had tried to explain the actions of his people?"

The Red Cross shows no consistency in its policy. The result is boredom and confusion for the patients.

Barber Shortage

The other sore point is the business of getting a hair cut. One incident, descriptive of the many, follows: A barber passed through a ward cutting the hair of several white patients. A colored soldier asked for service and was told, "I don't cut colored people's hair."

A captain, hearing this, did not force the barber to cut the man's hair, but said, "If I had a pair of scissors I would cut your hair myself," and arranged to have a colored barber come in.

Frequently a genuine feeling of unity exists between patients. Morale is raised by the feeling of acceptance in the American pattern. The soldier forgets that he is colored and his white friend forgets that he is supposed to be infinitely superior—until barber shop time.

Then the old national custom of discrimination pops up and the white soldier remembers all the things he has been taught.

No Colored Papers

Inmates may borrow from the 4,000-book library. Bed patients have the use of a ward truck that brings books to them. But only "nice" books which are not controversial, and which do not advocate racial equality or other dangerous, un-American ideals, are available. This definition is given by the civilian librarian.

"Native Son," "The Grapes of Wrath," and similar titles are not considered "nice." Several hometown papers are taken, but no colored paper is allowed. The librarian finds them too exciting.

"Colored soldiers read a good deal along religious lines. But we don't want to give them any propaganda on race or equality. We find that sort of thing makes for argument," the librarian said.

Nevertheless, the soldiers I talked to wanted to see some colored papers. 2-26-44

"My AFRO was taken from me and several fellows followed the soldier who took it. As they passed from sight I heard them saying, 'I'm next on it,' one said."

Like Boogie-Woogie

The only time general fraternalization is shown between inmates in the recreation hall is when colored soldiers play boogie-woogie. Whites surround the piano six deep and absorb the music. They will not, in general, listen to anything else.

In the recreation room is a large telephone room where booths are ample in size and number. An operator places the call and signals the soldier who wants it. Booths are equipped with swivel chairs and free cigarettes. Some have amplifiers on the receivers for the hard of hearing.

Others are big enough to allow a man on a stretcher or in a wheel chair to get in.

Although only 5 per cent of the patients are colored, about 50 per cent of the men who visit the white chaplains are colored. According to the chaplains, most of them are confronted with personal problems. Several said they saw no difference between the needs or problems of white and colored soldiers.

No Peculiar Problems

Ranking next were domestic and financial difficulties. No chaplain admitted having encountered any race problem. The chaplain's chief duty, as described by one of them, "is not so much to let the man have his way, but to reconcile him to the Army way."

An amateur radio station, nicknamed WRGN (Walter Reed General Hospital), is manned by an all-white volunteer crew. Through it radio programs are piped to each bed.

Considering the location of the hospital, our soldiers are given fair treatment, although there are plenty of minor grievances.

So, if your soldier is at Walter Reed General Hospital, you can be assured of decent treatment to him. Both medical and social treatment will be above par.

To date there have been more than 172 patients, including many from the fighting area, that are handling a haven of rest and security here. All cases are most-ly general medical, with an occasional surgery case listed.

One of the latter cases was a "skin-grafting" operation which was successfully performed on Pvt. Fred Poole by Capt. Arthur H. Thomas of Philadelphia, the hospital's chief of surgery and executive officer.

Huachuca Hospital Gets Higher Rating

Daily World Atlanta, Ga.

8-8-44

FORT HUACHUCA, Ariz. — (ANP) — Station Hospital No. 1, commanded by Col. Midian O. Bousfield, has been given a new official rating, according to an announcement last week by the war department. Under the new designation, it will be known as the Army Service Forces Regional hospital.

The new set-up places the hospital midway between the station hospital class and the general hospital designation, and is viewed as a compliment to the excellent staff under Col. Bousfield. It is now among 30 other hospitals in the continental United States moved up into a newly created division of general hospitals which function as hospitals of the interior.

New Hospital Opens in SWP

Afro-American Baltimore, Md.

D.C. Physician Heads All-Colored Staff of 28

6-10-44

HAS 17 BUILDINGS

Baltimore, Philly, Medics in Group

N.J.

AT AN ADVANCED BASE, NEW GUINEA.—America's only overseas hospital with an all-colored staff was opened recently at this base, which is less than three hours' plane ride back of the fighting lines.

Headed by Major Arthur H. Simmons of Washington, D.C., formerly of the staff of Freedmen's Hospital and the Howard University Medical School faculty, the hospital will take over the functions of a general hospital, such as formerly carried out in the continental United States, for everything except reception of overseas patients. The name "general hospital" will continue to serve for reception of overseas patients and to give specialized services in cases of tuberculosis, neurosurgery and similar special conditions. However, many patients who were formerly sent away to "general" hospitals for final medical treatment before being discharged will now receive that finial type treatment here.

There are movies five times per week, a recreation hall for all, and a beautiful green lawn surrounds the area. The site overlooks the sea which can be seen for miles.

6-10-44

Philly Man Chief Surgeon

In addition to the officers, there is a staff of enlisted men attached to the personnel headed by 1st Sgt. Watt G. Saunders of Los Angeles, Calif., and Willie J. Yeldell of Stroud, Okla., sergeant major in charge of administration.

6-10-44

17 Buildings

A few months ago, the present hospital site, of about five or more acres, which is more than 900 feet above sea level, was a huge jungle, but today more than seventeen buildings dot the hillsides, including about ten wards, two mess halls, a dispensary, headquarters' office, and quarters for the personnel.

hospital's staff includes thirteen officers, and fifteen registered nurses.

other medical officers,

Group from Hauchuca

Before coming overseas, the physicians were attached to a hospital at Fort Huachuca, Ariz. After spending about six months at a hospital somewhere in Australia, the staff arrived here about Easter to begin operations.

A visitor walking through the wards and the other buildings is amazed at neatness and general healthful atmosphere in a place so recently opened.

This was made possible by the doctors and nurses, donning their fatigue clothes, and becoming painters overnight, interior decorators, electricians, carpenters, and general laborers, and helping to make the place comfortable for the incoming patients.

Staff Members

Mmbers of 'the staff in addition to Major Simmons and Captain Thomas are: 6-10-44

Capts. Rotan Lee of Montclair, N.J., ward officer, chief of anesthesia and assistant surgeon; Joseph H. Mitchell of Los Angeles, radiologist and registrar; 1st. Lt. William S. Hendricks of Los Angeles, adjutant, public relations olicer and assistant registrar;

Capts. Robert P. Randolph of Durham, N.C., chief of medical service and malariologist; Kenneth E. Fletcher of Jacksonville, Tenn., chief of service of urology and assistant surgeon; and John W. Skinner, chief of dental service:

BALTIMOREAN IN GROUP

First Lts. Barnett M. Rhetta of Baltimore, medical officer of general medical ward, formerly at Freedmen's Hospital in D.C.; Jacob A. Frye of Montclair, N.J., medical ward, laboratory and assistant sanitary officer; Charles R. Joseph of Brooklyn, N.Y., ward officer; Edward C. Booker, detachment commander and supply officer;

Second Lt. Lowell H. Burrell of Detroit, Mich., transportation, mess and assistant detachment commander; and First Lt. William C. Rogers of Philadelphia;

NURSES LISTED

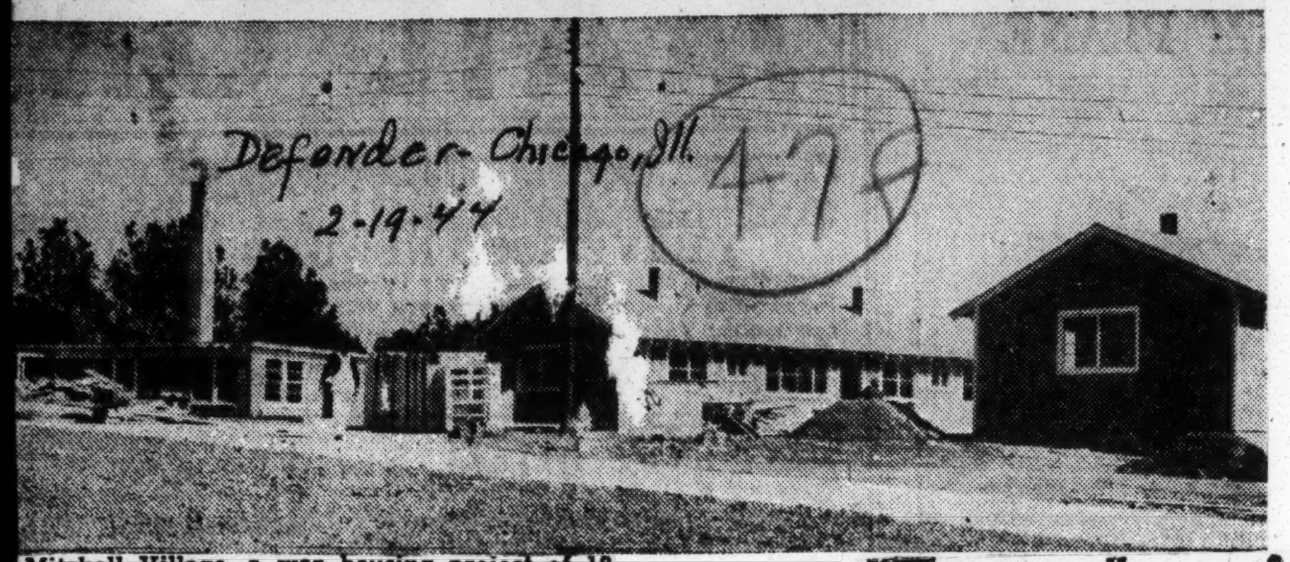
The nurses are:

First Lts. Birdie E. Brown, principal chief nurse, formerly of Harlem Hospital; Alberta L. Smith of Kansas City, Mo., chief nurse-medical supervisor; Louise Miller, surgical and operating room supervisor, formerly of Harlem Hospital; Bessie P. Evans of St. Louis, Mo., hospital dietitian; 6-10-44

Second Lts. Marjorie S. Mayers of Harlem Hospital, head nurse, medical ward; Beulah L. Baldwin of Harlem Hospital, nurse in charge of surgical ward; Geneva H. Culpepper of Wadley, Ala., surgical nurse, formerly of Harlem Hospital; Elena A. Townsend of Long Island, N.Y., operating room nurse, who also worked at Harlem Hospital;

Second Lts. Jean L. Hamilton of Kansas City, Mo., Claudia Matthews, of Dallas, Tex., Thelma L. Fisher, of Rothburg, Mass., Dorothy O. Branker of Nashville, Tenn., and Prudence L. Burns a former public health nurse of Kansas City, Mo.

NEW TUSKEGEE PROJECT HONORS 99TH PILOT



Mitchell Village, a war housing project of 18 buildings and 100 apartments, was opened for occupancy at Tuskegee Army Air field, Ala., this week. The project which will house civilian war workers, enlisted personnel and officers, was named in honor of Lt. Paul Graham Mitchell, first member of the 99th Pursuit Squadron killed in action overseas.

PLAN 146 HOMES FOR NEGROES IN TWO PROJECTS

Tribune
Chicago, Ill
6-18-44

Chicago, Evanston Units for War Workers.

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

Simultaneously with the recommendation by the National Association of Real Estate Boards thruout the country that they program better housing for Negroes, two big housing projects for colored families were announced yesterday for Chicago and Evanston. They will represent a total investment of $844,000 and provide living quarters for 146 families of war workers. Both will be privately financed.

Newton C. Farr.

Newton C. Farr, of Farr & Co. and president of the Chicago Civic federation, is president of the George Washington Carver Gardens, Inc., which will build and sell the 56 living units to be built in the block bounded by Michigan av., 37th st., Wabash av., and 37th pl. The former mansions of the late P. D. Armour Jr. and J. Ogden Armour once occupied the Michigan av. frontage.

Will Face Garden Court.

Designed by Skidmore, Owings & Merrill, Chicago architects, the project will comprise six two story brick four flat buildings fronting on Michigan and Wabash, and 32 row houses facing on a central garden court, with rear entrances on 37th st. and 37th pl. 6-18-44

The $344,000 project is being financed with FHA insured loans thru the Advance Mortgage corporation. Each house and flat will have a separate loan amortized over 25 years. The two flat buildings will sell for $12,000, the four flats for $24,000, and the houses for $6,250.

Will Build Near High School.

In Evanston a big housing project is to be built near the Evanston Township High school, on both sides of Leland av., between Emerson and Church sts. It will contain 90 homes arranged in row houses of two to six units each. They will each contain three bedrooms and rent for $50. Fall occupancy is sought.

Designed by Architects Charles and Arthur Schreiber of Rogers Park, the project will represent an investment of $500,000, Charles Schreiber, president of Architectural Homes, Inc., owner of the development, reported. Arthur Schreiber is secretary of the corporation.

Teacher's Idea Resulted In 300 New Homes For Atlanta

World- Memphis, Tenn.
6-9-44

Fairview Terrace Emerges As One Of State's Largest Projects

ATLANTA, Ga.—(SNS)—When Fairview Terrace, one of the country's outstanding communities for Negro War workers, is completed this fall, it will provide more than 300 modern homes for families in Atlanta, Georgia, the National Housing Agency announced this week.

Half the homes already have been completed and are occupied. When the last house is finished, the homes will represent an investment by private enterprise of over $1,250,000. The project was organized and carried out by Negroes and is financed by an Atlanta institution with mortgages insured by the Federal Housing Administration under Title VI of the National Housing Act.

STARTED IN 1942

Fairview Terrace got its start in the spring of 1942, after a Negro school teacher, Miss Mattie Weaver, had received notice to vacate her quarters in a public housing project because her salary was too high for a tenant of that project. She could find no other decent housing available in that area at a price she could afford. So she took her problem to R. E. Matheson, FHA State Director for Georgia, at the FHA's Atlanta office.

Mr. Matheson and his staff knew this condition existed. They also knew that not a single loan incurred through the Atlanta office on a home owned and occupied by a Negro family had been foreclosed. Accordingly, they were confident that a considerable number of livable homes for Negroes could be built and financed safely under the FHA mortgage insurance program. 6-9-44

One of the leading Negro contractors of Atlanta, W. H. Aiken, had built a number of homes under teh FHA program. The Atlanta Federal Savings and Loan Association had made about half of its $2,500,000 of mortgage loans on Negro homes, many of them built by Mr. Aiken.

AGREEMENT REACHED

Accordingly, Mr. Matheson held a conference with Mr. Aiken and officials of the association. The result was Mr. Aiken's decision to develop a tract of land in the neighborhood of Atlanta University into a new and permanent residential community, but temporarily war workers families. This action was made conditional on the approval of the development under the local war housing quota of the National Housing Agency, that the FHA would help guide the developers, and that the association would do the necessary FHA-insured financing.

Agreement was reached on all these points and the planning started.

The site for Fairview Terrace is high, well-drained ground, already in a zoned area, and with the street plan fixed by the city. It is convenient to churches, schools colleges, employment centers and shopping districts. The general plan, adapted tc the street pattern was laid out with the aid of FHA land planning consultants to meet FHA neighborhood standards, with protective convenants, paved streets sidewalks, curbs, and gutters; connection with the city sewer system; gas, water, and electric systems; and two small recreational areas.

HOUSES SOUND

The houses are designed to be sound, attractive and comfortable, measuring up to FHA minimum construction requirements under wartime limitations on the use of critical materials. Each house has hot and cold running water, sanitary flush toilets, bathtubs, central heating systems, modern fixtures, gas and electricity. 6-9-44

The ultimated result will be the largest housing project for Negroes built under the FHA program in Georgia, comparing favorably with other communities of similar rent and price ranges in the Atlanta area.

Fairview Terrace was planned for 306 family dwelling units, consisting of 206 single-family homes and 50 duplex houses. All the duplex houses have been completed and the 100 dwelling units occupied at a rental of $39.50 a month each. More than half of the single family homes have been completed, sold, and occupied and the others are scheduled to be completed this fall. These homes have a price range from $3,900 to $4,400, with FHA-insured mortgages of from $3,510 to $3,960. Monthly payments, which include principal, interest, hazard insurance and taxes, range from $26.59 to $30. 6-9-44

Most of the families occupying these homes came from substandard neighborhoods and houses, but the monthly payments in Fairview Terrace are well within their means. Those who are buying their new homes under the FHA plan had the necessary down payment of 10 percent of the FHA valuation, or were acquiring it under a lease-option agreement; also, they had a credit reputation acceptable to FHA and were earning steady incomes sufficient to carry the monthly payments, with enough left over for living requirments.

Race Gets Only 1 Percent of War Housing

Tribune-Miami, Fla.
2-8-44

WASHING[illegible] D. C. (C)—Pri[illegible] industry [illegible] rated completely [illegible] granted. [illegible] allocated f[illegible] units are fi[illegible] show that f[illegible] industry/ha[illegible] units for w[illegible] race though[illegible] of the popu[illegible] the 17,000 [illegible] population. Then, too, out of the 17,000 units the government has allocated for Negroes, only 3000 units are finished. However, figures show that for white housing, private industry has completed most of the units for which priorities have been granted. [illegible] housing completed has [illegible] for less than 1 per cent of the war [illegible] left over for living requirments.

Zoning Bars War Housing For Negroes

Herald—Miami, Fla.

An attempt to remove the last remaining barrier to construction of a 50-unit housing project for war-working negroes in the Coconut Grove area will be made July 8 when the St. Alban's Housing Co. will request rezoning of a 20-acre tract from a white to negro and from single to multiple dwelling classifications. 6-18-44

Recently purchased by Fred Howland, Miami contractor, and head of the housing firm, from the Protestant Episcopal Chuch. South, a small negro parish, for $21,000, the property is bounded on the north by Thomas ave. and on the east by Douglas rd.

Half of the adjacent property to the north of the site is occupied by negro dwellings, with the other half taken up by an incinerator. Across from Douglas rd. on the east are negro houses and a negro cemetery. A park for negroes, negro school and unimproved property lie west of the project site, but a restricted white residential area adjoins the negro housing property on the south, just north of Kumquat ave.

Major bone of contention over the project is its proximity to the white dwellings on the south, but to offset this difficulty the housing company has agreed to create a 74-foot buffer strip between the two areas, deeding it to the owners of adjoining white property, if they want it, or to the city for a park.

Present plans of the promoters are to build 50 duplex homes for 100 families of negro war workers with each structure on a 5,000 square foot lot suitably landscaped.

All buildings are to be of concrete block construction with asbestos roofs, each living unit to contain a large living room, two bedrooms, kitchen, dinette, bath and front porch. They will be plastered on the inside and stuccoed on the outside. Hot and cold running water, stoves and refrigerators will be installed in each unit.

$225,000 PROJECT 6-18-44

Estimated cost of each house will be between $4,200 and $4,500 making a total of $225,000 to be spent on the project, half of it going to labor. Negro labor will be used wherever possible, company officials said. Plans for the house already have been approved by the Federal Housing Administration.

Several meetings of protest have been called by white residents of Coconut Grove to oppose the project, but housing company officials contend that more than the necessary 10 per cent of property owners have signed waivers to permit the matter to be taken before the Miami Planning Board.

The land has been owned by the negro church since 1907. Classified as a "secondary fire zone" or negro zone until 1941, the tract was reclassified "not within a secondary fire zone," which is tantamount to being a white zone. 6-18-44

The petition for a change in the zoning classification will be presented to the planning board by Malcolm B. Wiseheart, attorney for Howland.

WILLOW RUN AND THE NATIONAL HOUSING AGENCY

Defender—Chicago, Ill.

Last week, Negro war workers' families began to move into Willow Run, the site built with public funds, intended originally to house workers employed at the Bomber Plant operated by the Ford Motor Co. 7-22-44

The policy of restricting occupancy of this project to white workers has been a target for criticism not only by Negroes but liberal groups throughout the Detroit area as well as nationally.

It is most certainly a welcome step forward in the policies of the National Housing Agency, headed by John B. Blandford, Jr., in announcing that Willow Run henceforth would be made available to Negro war workers who are eligible for housing under NHA regulations.

In announcing the new NHA policy, according to the official statement made by William K. Divers, NHA Regional Representative, "the program was approved following a series of conferences with the Detroit Housing Commission, the Victory Council, representatives of the UAW-CIO, Citizens Planning and Housing Committee, and other organizations in the Detroit area." It is of extreme significance to note that several Detroit organizations supported NHA in removing the racial bias which had formerly prevailed at Willow Run.

The National Housing Agency is to be congratulated for recognizing the importance of providing housing for eligible war workers, irrespective of Jim Crow commitments and pronouncements which may have been formerly made. We hope the present NHA policy in Willow Run will apply elsewhere in the country. 7-22-44

While we hail the progressive step on the part of a federal agency, we must point out that considerable work still remains in correcting the attitudes of other federal officials, who are charged with executing newly announced policy. Negroes must be united with labor and other liberal groups to demand that the federal government adopt a democratic policy in its relationship with all minority groups.

Simultaneously, with the announcement removing racial bias at Willow Run, another important development was the approval of 1,000 additional units for war workers in the Detroit area, making a total of 3,298 dwelling units for Negro war workers to be made available during the next six months or approximately 500 new dwellings per month for the balance of the year. The Detroit Victory Council has offered its assistance to the government in the selection of sites for this new program. 7-22-44

What has been done in Detroit can also be accomplished in Chicago. Under the leadership of Mayor Kelly, the National Housing Agency, the Chicago Housing Authority and progressive private builders, other projects similar to Altgeld Gardens should be developed to house Negroes and other new areas should be opened to break the iron ring which now restricts most Negro families to in intolerable, unsanitary conditions. Restrictive covenant agreements and the iron ring creating a Negro ghetto must be smashed.

Soumet Project For Negro War Workers Eases Housing Shortage

Weekly—News Orleans, La.

8-26-44

The local branch of the Urban League continues to chalk up gains for Negroes in New Orleans, and its most recent achievement came through the efforts of its Community Planning committee—housing for colored war workers. In its efforts to alleviate the suffering of Negroes in the community. the Urban League raises the morale of the race, making Negroes better citizens and New Orleans a better place for all men, regardless of race, to achieve happiness.

For some time, homes were going up all over New Orleans for war workers and white families were moving into the new houses. During this period. only the needs of white workers were considered. The Urban League, through its Community Planning committee, conducted a short survey and found that the Negro population of New Orleans had increased well over 30,000. These people had come to New Orleans to work in defense plants. They had come to an already over-crowded community and were forced to leave under conditions unfit for human habitation. Working on the theory that if people are not housed properly, they cannot work efficiently and regularly, the League began working on a plan to obtain homes for Negroe families moving into New Orleans. 8-26-44

To accomplish their work, the committee members held conferences with local, regional, and national officials of the Federal Housing agency. Even after a project had been authorized and a location agreed upon ,the committee had to survey the area and assist in perfecting a plan for 66 families that had lived as "squatters" for years in that community.

Through the work of the committee, Negroes have acquired the Soumet Project of approximately 300 homes and about 200 hutments for Negro industrial war workers. Families are already occupying the projects and many are purchasing homes that are being offered for less than $4,000. 8-26-44

The Community Planning committee of the Urban League are: George Washington, chairman; Dr. George N. Snowden, C. Joseph Decuir, Spencer Elliston, Robert N. Perry, and Monroe T. Stringer.

Housing Project for Negroes

Private businessmen of Columbus, Ga., have contributed $52,500 to apply against the purchase of a site for a housing project for Negro war workers, the National Association of Housing Officials reports.

The city and county governments, in addition, have pledged an additional $45,000 in the form of works related to the development of the project site, according to the association.

Housing officials report that this is the only instance where local businessmen have made actual cash contributions to public housing.

By making up the difference between the cost of the two sites, the development committee was able to assure realization of a direct slum clearance operation during the construction of the new war housing. Also, use of the new site will contribute to the progress of the city plan, since it involves the straightening of a creek and the development of a bordering parkway.

A community center, including recreational rooms and the office of the housing project, are included in the site plan.

To be constructed by the Federal government on a close-in site now occupied by some of Columbus' worst housing, the 160 family war housing project will revert to low rental housing after the war, when ownership will be vested in the local municipal housing authority.

The $52,500 contributed was raised by the Greater Columbus Development Committee, an organization of local businessmen, and will make up the difference between the cost of the chosen site and a less expensive site outside the city previously selected by the municipal housing authority within the limits of the funds available from the federal government.

47f-1944
Danville, Va., Register
February 6, 1944

Housing Available For Colored Labor In Seacoast Area

There is ample housing facilities in the Hampton Roads areas for colored labor wishing to go there to work in fertilizer plants, it was announced by colored ministers, Revs. W. P. Keen and H. B. Moore, who went there on a survey trip.

This inspection trip was sponsored by six fertilizer manufacturing concerns in the Hampton Roads area working in cooperation with the War Manpower Commission in an effort to correct the impression that housing facilities cannot be found for workers.

Arrangements have also been made whereby the Danville office of the U. S. Employment Service can issue releases to the seasonal tobacco workers in this area to work in the fertilizer plants until the 1944 tobacco season opens in Danville.

War Housing

'Ideal War City' Fought Negro Defense Housing

PM-New York, N.Y.
3-19-44

Meriden Wrangled 4 Months to Keep War Workers Out

Special Correspondence

PM Exclusive

MERIDEN, Conn., Mar. 18.—This city of 45,000, which has been designated by the WMC (War Manpower Commission) as the "Nation's Ideal War Community," is typical in its faults as well as its virtues.

Although Meriden's record in mobilizing its resources for war apparently entitles it to the honor, the town wrangled for four months before a handful of Negroes who were to be brought in to work in the war plants were permitted to live here.

About six months ago, when labor shortages were critical, several of the plants, including the New Departure ball bearing plant, agreed to hire Negroes from outside the state. But when the question of housing them came up, busines and real estate interests balked.

Plenty of Room

There was plenty of room for them in Gala Terrace, a Federal Housing project of some 150 units, only about a half of which were occupied, but its tenants and the surrounding community—all white—protested that letting Negroes in would turn the neighborhood into a "black belt."

Another plan to house the Negroes also was rejected. Charles Harris, a much decorated veteran of the last war and a fruit merchant in Meridan, proposed that the Negroes move into an old office building he owned in the center of town, which was being converted into apartments. Harris, who is Jewish, told local housing officials that "I know what discrimination is like. Let them live in my property." 3-19-44

Plan Blocked

The merchants blocked the proposal, charging that the Negroes would reduce values of some of the most valuable properties in town.

The final responsibility to find accommodations for the Negro families fell to Hollis D. Immick, secretary of the Meridan Chamber of Commerce, local director for the War Housing Authority and the National Housing Administration, which operates the housing project.

Despite opposition, Immick ruled that the Negroes could live at Gale Terrace in a separate wing of the project. Seven Negro families have been living there for two months, and no trouble of any sort has been reported. And two more families are scheduled to move in next week.

War Manpower Commissioner Paul V. McNutt will pay tribute to the city Monday, when he leads a delegation of Government officials to Meridan. His speech will be broadcast over NBC.

As part of the fanfare, the world premiere of the movie Main Street Today will be presented at Meridan by its producers, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, which is financing a junket from New York of movie critics, reporters and photographers to attend the showing.

500 Feet Too Near Negroes For Tampans

Journal-Guide
Norfolk, Va.
1-1-44

So Housing Project For War Workers Is Reduced In Size

Staff Correspondence

TAMPA, Fla.—Among the thing the President found on his desk on returning from the Cairo and Teheran conferences was an allocation for a $2,300,000 war housing project here, which he approved last week—but southern racial bias has caused the original number of units to be reduced from the originally planned 500 homes.

Members of the board of aldermen here objected because three of the big apartment buildings would have to come within 500 feet of Ponce de Leon Courts, a white development. They were eliminated. 1-1-44

The original cost was estimated at $1,900,000 but increased materials costs brought about an increase to the $2,300,000 figure. Work on the projects is expected to begin before February 1.

PERMANENT TYPE 1-1-44

The project is strictly for war-worker housing—Tampa is an important shipping, shipbuilding and industrial center—but the units will be of permanent construction. After the war they will be used as low-rent units to improve the admittedly bad housing available here for Negroes.

One project, North Boulevard Homes, is already occupied by Negroes here, having been erected before Pearl Harbor as a slum clearance aid.

The two tracts selected total 40 acres northeast and southwest of the intersection of Lake avenue and 22nd street. Buildings will be of one and two story constructions.

SITE SELECTED

The Federal Public Housing Authority said the site was selected because it is in the heart of the largest Negro section here and because it will be well served by electricity, water, transportation and Negro schools.

Fifty-one colored homes on the sites will be moved, not razed as in peace-time slum clearance construction. 1-1-44

Upon completion the new unit wil bring to 1,000 the number of government housing units for Negroes here. North Boulevard Homes consists of 520 units.

Negroes Get Housing Aid

Detroit Free Press
Detroit, Mich.

Eight Mile-Wyoming Projects to Be Built

BL LEO DONOVAN
Free Press Staff Writer

Development of a greatly enlarged community in the vicinity of Eight Mile and Wyoming as a temporary remedy for the long acute Negro housing shortage was promised Sunday by Sherwood L. Reeder, area director of the Federal Public Housing Authority.

More than 1,500 dwelling units—temporary war housing projects, including mobile homes, demountable houses and multiple family structures—will have been completed or under construction in the area by the end of July, Reeder predicted. 6-5-44

SCHOOL IS PLANNED

Serving the community will be an additional school building, a large community center, a new fire station and a block of neighborhood stores.

The land for the residential development all has been acquired by the FPHA, Reeder reported. Much of it was owned by the State Land Board, which had witheld a section of it from public sale for almost three years at the request of the City Plan Commission, which contemplated a model community in the area bounded by Eight Mile, the alley west of Birwood, Pembroke and the alley east of Greenlawn.

A compromise agreement, opposed only by the commission, provided for the release of 109 lots in the southeast section for private construction. Approval was voiced by the Federal Housing Administration, the State Land Board, the FPHA and the Detroit Housing Commission.

300 ALREADY BUILT

Three hundred temporary dwelling units have been built and are being occupied just west of the original model site. A contract for construction of another 124 similar type dwellings has been let and an additional 285 mobile homes, constructed by the Palace Coach Co., will be erected and available for occupancy no later than July 1, Reeder said.

In Royal Oak Township, just west of Wyoming and south of North End Road, there will be erected 475 demountable houses which are being moved here from LaPorte, Ind., where they were no longer necessary to house war workers on an arsenal contract, Reeder announced.

OTHERS ARE PLANNED

Also north of Detroit between Eight Mile and North End, west of Wyoming, an additional project for 399 temporary dwelling units will be built. Alternate bids on wood panel and concrete block construction will be taken because of the lumber shortage, Reeder said. 6-5-44

While most public improvements, including sewer, water, light and gas utilities, are in the Detroit area of the projects, the new Negro community north of Eight Mile will require installation of sewers, sidewalks, fire hydrants and some new roads, Reeder explained.

COURT WILL ACT TODAY ON PLAN TO BAR HOUSING

Tribune-Chicago, Ill.
3-28-44

Federal Judge Walter J. La Buy will be called upon this morning to determine whether government contractors shall continue with construction work on war emergency homes in the West Chesterfield community on Chicago's south side despite the protests of Negro residents there.

Home owners in the community, said to be one of the finest Negro home developments in the United States, petitioned the federal court to set aside an earlier order of Judge Elwyn R. Shaw, which condemned lots in the community for the erection of 250 emergency homes for war workers. 8-28-44

This petition had been set for hearing on Sept. 20. Contractors went into the community on Aug. 19, destroyed some war gardens and started construction work on basements. Atty. Aaron Payne asked Judge Michael L. Igoe for a restraining order pending action on his earlier petition. Hearing the injunction plea was assigned by Judge Igoe to Judge La Buy.

Teacher's Idea Resulted In 300 New Homes For Atlanta

Atlanta Daily World Atlanta, Ga.

Fairview Terrace Emerges As One Of State's Largest Projects

When Fairview Terrace, one of the country's outstanding communities for Negro War workers, is completed this fall, it will provide more than 300 modern homes for families in Atlanta Georgia, the National Housing Agency announced this week. 6-4-44

Half the houses already have been completed and are occupied. When the last house is finished, the homes will represent an investment by private enterprise of over $1,250,000. The project was organized and carried out by Negroes and is financed by an Atlanta institution with mortgages insured by the Federal Housing Administration under Title VI of the National Housing Act.

STARTED IN 1942

Fairview Terrace got its start in the spring of 1942, after a Negro school teacher, Miss Mattie Weaver, had received notice to vacate her quarters in a public housing project because her salary was too high for a tenant of that project. She could find no other decent housing available in that area at a price she could afford. So she took her problem to R. E. Matheson, FHA State Director for Georgia, at the FHA's Atlanta office.

Mr. Matheson and his staff knew this condition existed. They also knew that not a single loan incurred through the Atlanta office on a home owned and occupied by a Negro family had been foreclosed. Accordingly, they were confident that a considerable number of livable homes for Negroes could be built and financed safely under the FHA mortgage insurance program.

One of the leading Negro contractors of Atlanta, W. H. Aiken, had built a number of homes under teh FHA program. The Atlanta Federal Savings and Loan Association had made about half of its $2,500,000 of mortgage loans on Negro homes, many of them built by Mr. Aiken.

AGREEMENT REACHED

Accordingly, Mr. Matheson held a conference with Mr. Aiken and officials of the association. The result was Mr. Aiken's decision to develop a tract of land in the neighborhood of Atlanta University into a new and permanent residential community, but temporarily war workers families. This action was made conditional on the approval of the development under the local war housing quota of the National Housing Agency, that the FHA would help guide the developers, and that the association would do the necessary FHA-insured financing.

Agreement was reached on all these points and the planning started. 6-4-44

The site for Fairview Terrace is high, well-drained ground, already in a zoned area, and with the street plan fixed by the city. It is convenient to churches, schools, colleges, employment centers and shopping districts. The general plan, adapted to the street pattern, was laid out with the aid of FHA and planning consultants to meet FHA neighborhood standards, with protective convenants, paved streets, sidewalks, curbs, and gutters; connection with the city sewer system; gas, water, and electric systems; and two small recreational areas.

HOUSES SOUND

The houses are designed to be sound, attractive and comfortable, measuring up to FHA minimum construction requirements under wartime limitations on the use of critical materials. Each house has hot and cold running water, sanitary flush toilets, bathtubs, central heating systems, modern fixtures, gas and electricity.

The ultimated result will be the largest housing project for Negroes built under the FHA program in Georgia, comparing favorably with other communities of similar rent and price ranges in the Atlanta area.

Fairview Terrace was planned for 306 family dwelling units, consisting of 206 single-family homes and 50 duplex houses. All the duplex houses have been completed and the 100 dwelling units occupied at a rental of $39.50 a month each. More than half of the single family homes have been completed, sold, and occupied and the others are scheduled to be completed this fall. These homes have a price range from $3,900 to $4,400, with FHA-insured mortgages of from $3,510 to $3,960. Monthly payments, which include principal, interest, hazard insurance and taxes, range from $26.59 to $30. 6-4-44

PAID 10 PERCENT DOWN

Most of the families occupying these homes came from substandard neighborhoods and houses, but the monthly payments in Fairview Terrace are well within their means. Those who are buying their new homes under the FHA plan had the necessary down payment of 10 percent of the FHA valuation, or were acquiring it under a lease-option agreement; also, they had a credit reputation acceptable to FHA and were earning steady incomes sufficient to carry the monthly payments, with enough left over for living requirments.

Mitchell Village At Tuskegee Honors Fallen Airman Of 99th

Journal & Guide. Norfolk, Va. 2-19-44

TUSKEGEE, Ala. — While the Warhawks of the 99th Pursuit Squadron were winning new laurels in the embattled skies over Italy this week, the pioneer Negro unit of the U. S. Army Air Forces was scheduled to receive an added honor at Tuskegee Army Air Field on February 15, the Federal Public Housing Authority and the War Department have reported to the Office of War Information this week.

On that date, Mitchell Village, a war housing project constructed by the Federal Public Housing Authority at the airfield, will be officially opened.

The unit is named for Lieut. Paul Graham Mitchell, first member of the 99th Pursuit Squadron officially reported killed in action overseas.

Plans for Mitchell Village, a project of 18 buildings and 100 apartments, were completed while the all-Negro air squadron was still in training at Tuskegee Army Air Field, but actual construction was not begun before the unit joined other Allied air forces in North Africa.

The plans were drawn by Edward C. Miller, architect, with the firm of McKissack and McKissack serving as associate. The contract was awarded to the Bierney Jones Construction Company.

NAMED BY COMMANDER

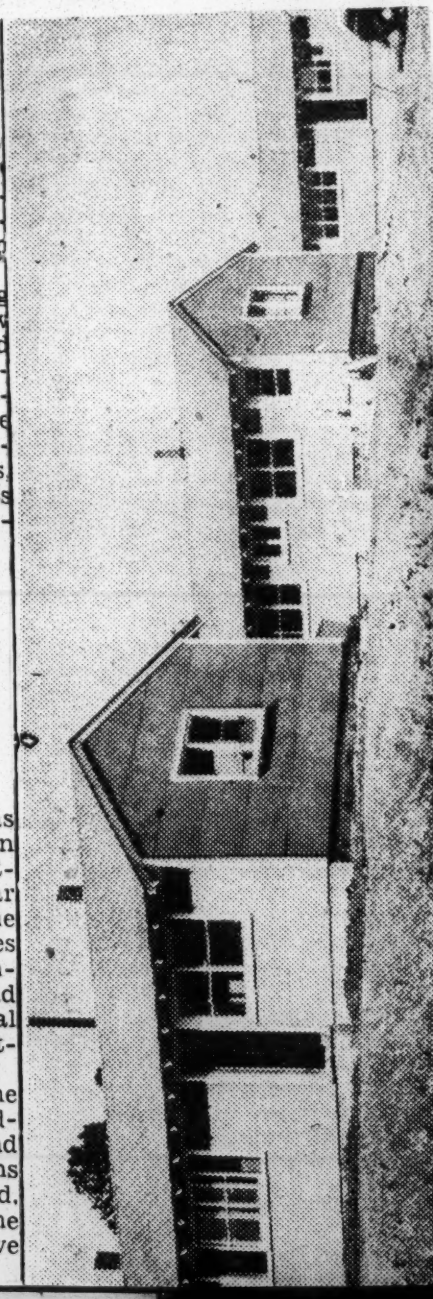
As the work progressed, John P. Broome, EPHA Director of Region IV, asked the Commanding Officer to suggest a name for the project, and the Commanding Officer suggested a tribute to Lieutenant Mitchell who was killed in action September 11, 1943.

The modern project, covering 21.4 acres on a hill above the low level of the base, will be occupied by civilian war worker of the airfield, enlisted personnel and officers up to and including the rank of captain. Only the civilian residents will pay for lights, water, and heat, but civilian rents have been adjusted to civilian income.

One hundred families will be housed in the project which includes a large community building and one two- and three-bedroom apartments. The community building has general offices, a clinic and an assembly room for entertainments.

The 99th Pursuit Squadron has recently figured prominently in the fighting above the Anzio-Netuno beachhead near Rome. War Department reports show that the unit shot down eight Axis planes on January 27, 1944; four on January, 28, one on February 7 and three on February 8 for a total of 16 enemy planes in the fighting over Italy. 2-19-44

Between January 15-28, the War Department said, the squadron made 231 effective sorties and dropped seven and one-half tons of bombs. During this period, squadron casualties included one plane lost, two missing and five damaged.



VILLAGE NAMED FOR FALLEN FLIER—A village section of a housing project for civilian war workers at Tuskegee Army Air Field has been named in memory of the late Lt. Paul Graham Mitchell, killed in action with the 99th Fighter Squadron in North Africa. The name was recommended by his commanding officers

Tuskegee Housing Project To Honor Lost 99th Pilot

Defender- Chicago, Ill. 2-19-44

TUSKEGEE, Ala. — While the pioneer Negro unit of the U. S army air forces was scheduled this week to receive an added honor at Tuskegee Army Air Field, Warhawks of the 99th Pursuit Squadron were winning new laurels in the embattled skies over Italy.

47g-1944

Jewish Group Unveils Portrait Of First Pilot Killed In Action

Widow Of Sidney Brooks Present At Exercises

Daily World - Atlanta Ga
3-16-44

Painting Will Hang On Walls Of Karamu House

CLEVELAND, Ohio — (SNS) — A unique manifestation of interracial understanding reached its climax here last week when an oil painting of Lt. Sidney P. Brooks, Cleveland airman and the first Negro pilot killed in the war, was presented to Karamu House, a Negro community center, by the Cleveland B'nai B'rith War Service Council in the presence of white and Negro civic and educational leaders.

Commissioned by B'nai B'rith, the portrait was first unveiled before the entire school assembly of Central High School, of which Lt. Brooks was a alumnus. Leo M. Ascherman, member to B'nai 'B'rith's National War Service Committee, presented the portrait, which was accepted by Russell Jelliffe, director of Karamu House.

WIDOW PRESENT 3-16-44

Others present at the exercises were Mrs. Lucille Brooks, widow of Lt. Brooks; Mr. and Mrs. T. Brooks, his parents; J. W. Brooks, his brother; R. W. Watson, principal of Central High School; Dilworth Lupton, Cleveland Press columnist; Alfred A. Benesch, president of the Cleveland School Board; Superintendent of Schools Charles Lake and Ormonde A. Foote, editor of the Cleveland Herald. The portrait, the work of Elmer Brown, art director of Karamu House, is now being exhibited at public and private high schools throughout Cleveland.

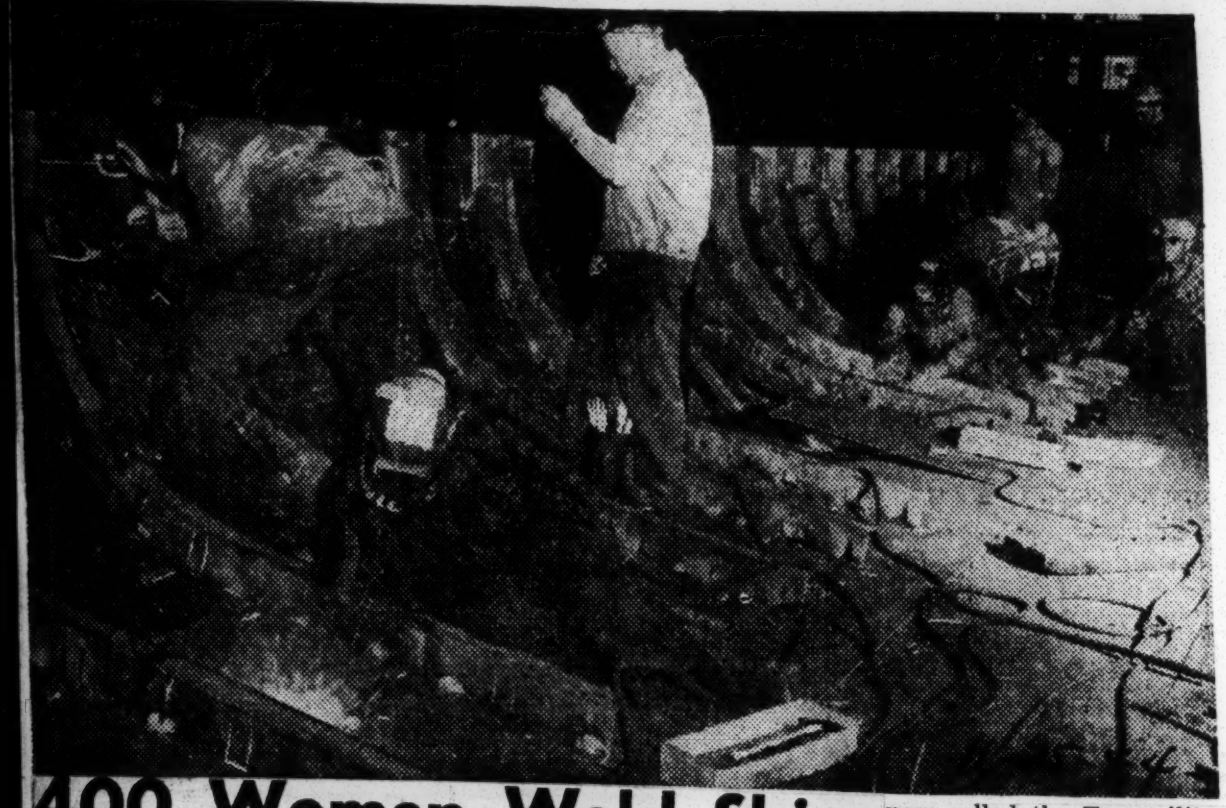
In a letter to M. Ascherman, Mrs. Brooks said "this means so very much to us and his loved ones, and to our race as a whole. We do so much appreciate your most gracious gift. It was very, very kind of you, and I just had to try, somehow, to express my thanks—our thanks — with the words that I find so inadequate at a time like this. Thanks so much again to you and your organization. Perhaps, yet, there may come about the existence of the true democracy — among the peoples that folks like you and us dream of."

AWARDED AIR MEDAL

Lt. Brooks, who was a member the Army Air Forces first all-Negro fighter squadron, was killed in action last September in North Africa. He was awarded the Air Medal with Oak Leaf Cluster for aiding in fighting off German bombers attempting to raid Pantelleria. 3-16-44

Presentation of the portrait of Lt. Brooks was accompanied by an announcement from Mr. Ascherman that B'nai Ba'ith has furnished 20 recreation facilities for Negro military personnel at various Army installations throughout the country.

47h-1944



400 Women Weld Ships For Victory At Sun Co.

Tribune—Philadelphia, Pa.
11-25-44

CHESTER, Pa.—One of the jobs women seem very good at in war plants is welding. Sun Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Company, as other plants, has found this to be a fact.

Sun Ship employs many women welders. Since November of 1942 women have been receiving training in welding and have been working as welders and welders' helpers at Sun Ship. At present about 50 per cent of the women employed in that yard or approximately 400 women are working as welders or welders' helpers.

The work of these women may take them anywhere in the Yard or anywhere on the hulls and ships.

11-24-44

There are those who say the work is hazardous. It is not hazardous if the welder observes safety standards—wears protective clothing, wears a welding mask and helmet, wears suitable eye protection, and a respirator.

The women employed in this department express and show an interest in their job. Many of them say: "Not only am I helping the war effort, but I've learned new skills and I have been able to buy many longed-for things.

In the picture are women welders at Sun Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Company, Chester. These women are welding stiffner angles on the bilge section of a car float. The welders include B. Showell, E. Malloy, R. Cooper, E. Lewis and A. Roane.

Standing on the hull and supervising the job is assistant welding foreman, Al Wagner. The two men at the extreme right are C. Brinkley and N. Key, shipfitters.

11-28-44

One-Sixth of Hospital Ships Made by Negroes

Call—Kansas City, Mo.
11-24-44

CHESTER, Pa. — Six hospital ships launched during 1944 at the Sun Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Company are the newest units in the United States Armed Services' Fleet of 36 new hospital ships having a capacity for approximately 22,000 patients, it was disclosed last week in a report released by the American Merchant Marine Institute.

The six Sun-built ships are the Marine Lion, which has been rechristened the Benevolence, the Marine Walrus, now the Consolation; the Marine Hawk, now the Haven; the Marine Beaver, now the Repose, the Marine Owl, now the Sanctuary, and the Marine Dolphin, now called the Tranquility.

Each of the vessels was built in the No. 4 Yard at Sun Ship predominantly Negro-Employed, and cost approximately $3,000,000 each. After launchings and test runs, the ships were taken over by the Government and outfitted for hospital service.

Many of the other ships in the hospital fleet were drawn from the merchant marine, according to Frank J. Taylor president of the Institute. He said that in 1939 the Army had no hospital ships and the Navy only one.

Painted white from smokestack to waterline, the ships travel fully lighted at night over routes not used by big convoys.

11-24-44

They average 600 beds each and are the floating equivalent of a seven to nine-story hospital covering a city block, the Merchant Marine Institute report stated.

The ships are completely equipped with operating rooms, dispensaries, pharmacies, laboratories, refrigerating rooms, sterilizing units and wards for the treatment of all types of war illnesses, physical and mental.

Electricaly operated "mechanical cows" provide milk and ice cream.

Dining halls, lounges and recreation rooms complete the services available to hospitalized fighting men.

Vessels Average

600 Beds Each; Fully Equipped

Atlanta Daily World

Boats Equal To Seven To Nine-Story Building

Atlanta, Ga.
11-24-44

CHESTER, Pa. — (SNS) — Six hospital Ships launched during 1944 at the Sun Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Company are the newest units in the United States Armed Services' fleet of 36 new hospital ships having a capacity for approximately 22,000 patients, it was disclosed last week in a report released by the American Merchant Marine institute.

The six Sun-built ships are the Marine Lion, which has been rechristened the Benevolence, the Marine Walrus, now the Consulation, the Marine Hawk, now the Haven; the Marine Beaver, now the Repose; the Marine Owl, now the Sanctuary, and the Marine Dolphin, now called the Transquility.

BUILT IN YARD FOUR

Each of the vessels was built in the No. 4 yard at Sun Ship—predominantly Negro-employed, and cost approximately $3,000,000 each. After launchings and test runs, the ships were taken over by the Government and outfitted for hospital service.

Many of the other ships in the hospital fleet were drawn from the merchant marine, according to Frank J. Taylor, president of the Institute. He said that in 1939 the Army had no hospital ships and the navy had only one.

Painted white from smokestack to waterline, the ships travel fully lighted at night over routes not used by convoys.

They average 600 beds each and are the floating equivalent of a seven to nine-story hospital covering a city block, the Merchant Marine Institute report stated.

COMPLETELY EQUIPPED

11-24-44

The ships are completely equipped with operating rooms, dispensaries, pharmacists, laboratories, refrigerating rooms, sterlizing units and wards for the treatments of all types of war illnesses, physical and mental.

Electrically operated "mechanical cows" provide milk and ice cream.

Dining halls, lounges and recreation rooms complete the services available to hospitalized fighting men.

Women Invade Electrical Field While Working at Sun Ship Yards

Tribune — Philadelphia, Pa.

11-18-44

Prior to the war era the field of electricity was for all practical purposes left almost entirely to men. Not only were women not actively engaged in electrical work, but there was no thought of their entering this field at all. Now we find in Sun Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Company, as in many other war plants, that there are many women working in the electrical department.

The girls who are making good at this work in Sun Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Company represent many previous occupations. A great number of them were waitresses, domestics, and bus girls; some had previous experience in clerical work; a few were in school preparing for the teaching profession.

The jobs of some of the girls are very responsible in nature as that of Ernestine Taylor—3rd class electrician. Miss Taylor hooks up the gun fire control panel. In case of emergency the guns need not be manned but can be fired from this panel. On the panel which Miss Taylor hooks up there are 568 connections—84 of these connections are telephone connections. There are connections to signal systems, firing system to guns, telephones to guns, lighting circuits to guns, lookout and Captain's station, the engine room, and the gun fire control room (here is the heart of the gun system).

Another young woman who holds a very responsible position is Miss Dorothy Arbeary. Miss Arbeary is a cable expeditor. She must be always on the alert as she must order different types of cables for different types of wiring. She must see that the right size and type of cable is delivered to the right boat and on time.

11-18-44

In the maintenance department the girls work on ship generators; they do welding repair—as fixing welding lines and putting handles on welding rods; they splice wires together; and often take care of the temporary light system.

On the boats they hook up I C control panels, put wire on terminals, fix lugging wire, and hook up lighting boxes.

In the shop they work as handimen, drill press operators, on the hand thread tapping machine, ordering material and taking care of blue prints.

Colored women are proud of their sisters who have been given opportunities such as these girls in the electrical department at Sun Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Company.

Emmett Bailey, Leader in the electrical department, working with a megger as one electrician and three electrician's helpers look on. The megger is a machine which tests for any bare wires or any grounds.

11-18-44

Left to right: Bailey, formerly a window cleaner; Lucy Mosnee, electrician's helper, formerly a bus girl in a restaurant; Ernestine Taylor, 3rd class electrician, a fountain girl in a drug store; Gladys Washington, electrician's helper; and Toyia Furness, electrician's helper, was a waitress in a hospital.

They are standing in front of a gun fire control panel. ...

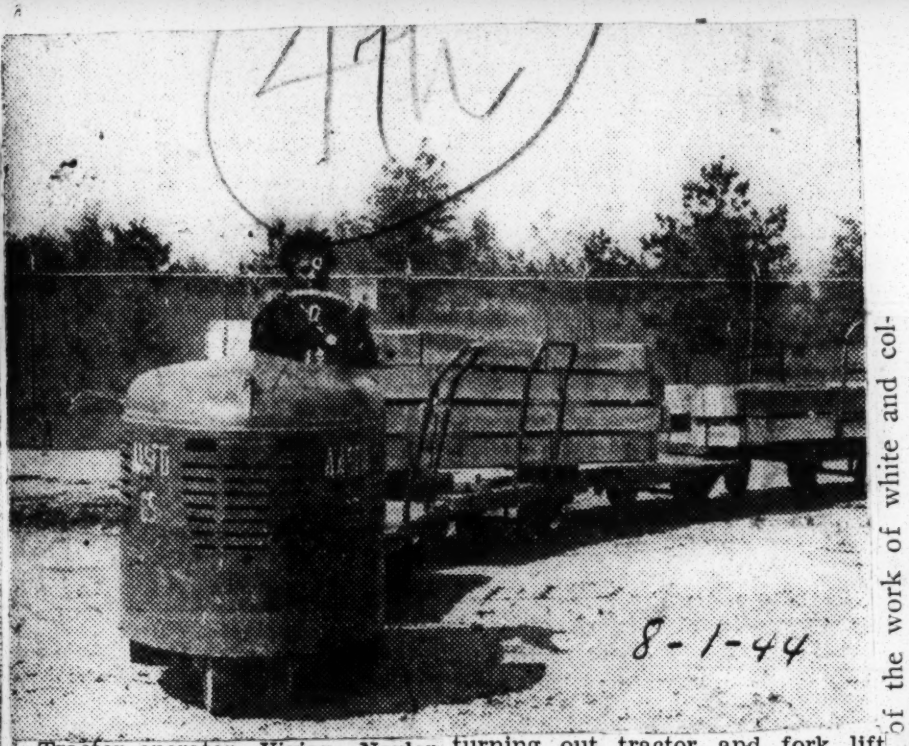
47h-1944

Our Women Do Their Part

Daily World—Atlanta, Ga.

8-1-44

KEEPING PACE WITH THE MEN, many of whom they have replaced due to current shortages, colored women are filling many important war jobs at the Atlanta Army Service Forces Depot huge Armys 'supply hub' of the South-east. Mesdames L. Bradie Wangfield and Freddie May Ashley, both of Atlanta, are two of the many colored women who have found new employment along the opportunity to do their bit towards winning the war.



8-1-44

Tractor operator Vivian Naylor, of Jonesboro, Georgia is one of the many women of above-average capabilities 'graduated' from the the Depot's school which has been turning out tractor and fork lift truck operators every bit as efficient as the men they have replaced.

Daily World—Atlanta, Ga.
8-1-44

Messenger Roxy Grier of Atlanta, Georgia is loading up for another round.

8-1-44

KEEPING A CLOSE CHECK ON VITAL WAR SUPPLIES is checker Virginia Matthews of Atlanta.

Head Of War Plant Demonstrates Way To Win On 2 Fronts

Amsterdam News—New York, N.Y.
4-8-44

Smelting Company Official Doesn't Just Talk About Democracy—He Puts it to Work

CHICAGO (ANP)—Abraham Rubin, vice president of the National Smelting Co., of Cleveland, recently proved himself a real anti-fascist, pre-labor employer, in his fight against racial discrimination and by giving Negroes full equality in job opportunities and upgrading at his 100 per cent war plant.

At his war plant which employs 1,400 Negro and white workers, Negroes work as foreman supervising white workers; white and Negro workers take training courses in skilled trades side by side; the chairman of the executive shop committee is a Negro and the plant physician is a prominent Negro doctor. Negroes are active in all parts around the plant.

4-8-44

Declaring that he is eager to see mixed teams in the major leagues, and segregation abolished from armed forces, Rubin believes that such changes would aid in bringing about an early end of the war. Rubin, a thorough pro-unionist, insists that a strong labor movement is a major bulwark against fascism.

Debunks 'Race Myth'

His workers are 100 per cent organized by the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers union, CIO. Union leaders and plant executives serve on a labor management committee, which actively promotes employee health and welfare, athletic programs, safety measures against industrial accidents.

American democracy."

Rubin, 52 years old, started as an errand boy in the smelting plant he now heads, 30 years ago. He strongly advocates "equal job opportunities for all."

Local Girl 1st Welder Instructor

Tribune—Philadelphia, Pa.
7-17-44

Miss Annie Mae West, has been promoted to the position of instructor of welders in 26 Philadelphia Navy Yard.

Miss West is the first person of color to receive this position, and her duty calls for supervision of the work of white and colored men and women.

The Shop is supervised by the Master Shipfitter and the shipfitting department. Miss West's appointment is a notable one and it is hoped that it will lead to other appointments.

WOMEN FILL IMPORTANT JOBS IN ATLANTA—In an effort to combat current manpower shortages, the Atlanta Army Service Forces depot, Atlanta, Ga., is recruiting colored women for lighter labor and for semi-skilled jobs. A school is being conducted, too, for women of above-average capabilities. In top photos, left to right: Lucille Moore, a fork-lift truck operator, stacks vital war supplies; Virginia Matthews, keeps a close check on war supplies, and Vivian Naylor, of Jonesboro, Ga., stacks pallets and other war supplies. In bottom photos, left to right: L. Bradie Wangfield and Freddie May Ashley, two of the women who have found new jobs in the depot, and Roxy Grier, a messenger at the depot.

NEGRO-OWNED WAR PLANT IS MAKING MILITARY CLOTHES

CLEVELAND, July 13—(ANP)—The American Enterprises association Inc., one of the few Negro-owned and operated war plants produces military garments under United States army and lend-lease contracts.

Tucked away on the second floor of the Hart building, the five month old plant employs 135 skilled, unskilled and clerical workers of all races and creeds, resembling a miniature united nations.

The room is alive with the constant droning of 110 power-driven sewing machines, buttonholers and fed-off-arm machines operated by Negro, Italian and Spanish women.

A Polish foreman moved from worker to worker giving assistance wherever needed.

From its initial contract of 16,000 completed garments the plant has graduated to a contract calling for 30,000 garments, Olander J. Smith, president, said this week.

"Since March the United States quartermaster inspection division has not rejected a single garment of the association. They have given us a perfect production record," Mr. Smith said.

"Cleveland was chosen as the site for this plant because of the fine reputation it has in race relations."

Kenneth Tato, personnel director, said that all employes were hired on the basis of qualifications for the job. He said that they have no union trouble nor do they expect to fire any racial group after the war.

"We do have the same problem that other plants have in recruiting trained precision workers," he said.

Mr. Smith was born in St. Paul, Minn. He attended the University of Wisconsin and received his law degree from Northwestern university.

Married and the father of two daughters and two sons, Mr. Smith has one son serving in the army in England. His family still lives in Toledo where he formerly worked for housing authorities.

War Training Schools

This is a nation whose physical strength has been built upon technical skills, inventiveness, and scientific management. Survival and progress in this war and the hope of the future peace will also have to rely in the physical realm upon these processes, which have startled the world with American productiveness. Before World War II Negroes had been largely maneuvered away from the technical skills. The necessities and the upheavals of the war have removed some of the barriers. One outstanding factor in this process has been the war training schools, an excellent example of which is the one conducted in Houston under the local supervisorship of S. B. Byars. The original sponsor was the Houston Independent School district, but more lately the Houston college for Negroes.

A recent announcement of the Houston War Training school shows that "more than 2300 persons have completed short unit courses in six trades and the majority have accepted employment locally and throughout the nation, contributing their labor to supplying the armed services with ships and many other types of war material." When to the Houston accomplishment is added the accomplishments of other war training schools over the country, it is not hard to visualize the fact that these new technical skills have made it possible for Negroes to make large contributions to the war program, and to be better and more useful citizens in the peace which will follow war.

47h-1944

MAYOR GREETING 'MISS NEGRO VICTORY WORKERS'

The Misses Aurelia Carter (left) and Edna Rucker with Mr. La Guardia at City Hall

Co-winners of the title "Miss Negro Victory Worker of 1944," Miss Aurelia Carter of Yonkers and Miss Edna Rucker of Detroit were received yesterday by Mayor La Guardia at City Hall.

Miss Carter, 22 years old, is an electric welder at the Otis Elevator Company plant at Yonkers and Miss Rucker, 27, is employed at the steel foundry unit of the Ford Company River Rouge plant, at Dearborn, Mich. They will receive national merit awards at the Negro Freedom Rally in Madison Square Garden on June 26.

They Won 'Victory' Awards

Two attractive "Miss Negro Victory Workers for 1944"-will help draw the crowds to the big Madison Square Garden meeting of the Negro Freedom Rally on Monday, June 26. Those two girls from Ford's River Rouge Plant in Detroit and the Otis Elevator shop in Yonkers are winning the hearts of New Yorkers already.

Mayor LaGuardia greets the girls at City Hall at 11:45 a.m. this morning and a round of other festivities will follow until next Monday's meeting.

Both girls are active unionists. Miss Edna Rucker, the Detroit girl, is recording secretary to the new steel foundry unit of Ford local 600, United Automobile Workers, CIO. And Miss Aurelia Carter of Yonkers is recording secretary to the Otis local 453 of the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, CIO.

Miss Edna Rucker told the Daily Worker yesterday that she is enjoying her stay, but she misses her friends at River Rouge, where she has been breaking records in getting blood for the Army and Navy as chairman of her CIO unit's blood donor committee.

With too much energy to get tired she is an active member of the local's Political Action Committee and has been elected a delegate to the Michigan State Federation of Labor, and is shop editor of the Steel Foundry unit's paper Ford Facts.

Miss Carter, the other co-winner of the Negro Freedom Rally's contest, gives gives most of her time to union war work, after finishing a ten-hour shift as an electric arc welder.

The first Negro girl welder to work in the Yonkers plant, she takes the job in her stride, tends a victory garden in her backyard, serves on the local's Political Action Committee, on its inter-local social activities committee, helps out as a servicemen's hostess, buys war bonds, belongs to the executive committee of the American Labor Party of Yonkers, is secretary to the financial secretary of the Bethany Lutheran Church of Yonkers

Hagerstown Has Only All-Negro Aircraft Plant

HAGERSTOWN, Md.—This city enjoys the distinction of having the only all-Negro aircraft plant in the United States. It is the Fairchild Aircraft Corporation which has been operating for 17 months under an entirely Negro personnel.

It's young general supervisor, Kenyon E. Evans, 25 years old, came to Hagerstown in June, 1942, and opened up a defense training school where he and a few others held classes every night.

Then with the first five who finished, they set up a shop which has grown now to 148 employees—all colored. They do small parts in sheet metal for the PT19's and UC61A cargo vessels.

The only white men in the shop are the three company inspectors, the army and navy inspectors being colored, too. They have made a commendable showing in the production line as Fairchild will testify. The Army and Navy "E" Flag flies from the flag-pole, and under it a "Minute Man" flag.

Miss Edna Rucker, one of the two "Miss Negro Victory Workers for 1944" appearing at the Negro Freedom Rally, Monday, June 26, at Madison Square Garden, is recording secretary of the new steel foundry unit of Ford Local 600, United Auto Workers, CIO.

How Brooklyn Navy Yard Bars Colored Promotions

Mechanic Says He Had to Step Down When White Men Refused to Work Under Him

By SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT

BROOKLYN, N.Y.—It was six o'clock in the evening and the trolley was very crowded. Most of the passengers were defense workers from the Brooklyn Navy Yard, and as we stopped at each corner we picked up more people going home after a day's work.

It had been my misfortune to be on this Flushing Avenue trolley, and, although I had a seat, I found myself being pushed and leaned on by those standing.

Seated next to me near the window was a colored man who was obviously a Navy Yard employee, as I could see by the badge that he wore on his overcoat.

At Yard 8 Years

To pass the time, I engaged him in some casual conversation, and before I realized it this man was revealing inside information which proved to be quite interesting.

"I have been working at the yard for eight years," he told me; "I was always a mechanic and came to work here with many years of experience.

Blames Employees

"There's one thing I learned here, and that's that the white employees are just as much to blame as the Navy Yard officials for the color discrimination. What can the officials do if the whites refuse to work along with the colored men when I was just another employee? That's what happened in my case.

"When I was first hired I got a trainee's rating. It took me three years to earn a promotion despite my experience. From then on I was to the next grade and for all the work done in his section or unit, which is usually composed of twelve men.

"He must be an excellent mechanic and be responsible only for the time I worked out of the title of first class instructor of our unit left for the Army. By every right—seniority and experience—I was entitled to take his place. Frankly I was a little surprised and somewhat pleased when I was appointed as instructor.

"But I didn't take into consideration what the white workers in my unit thought about this action.

Whites Refuse to Work

"I found that the men who were willing to work along with me when I was just another employee refused to work under me once I became instructor. They all ganged up and went to the supervisor and asked for transfers to other units. They made no bones about the reason why.

"One white man said that he wouldn't take orders from a 'n----r' for any money.

"The supervisor approached me and seemed confused about what he should do. I asked him whether it was possible to let these men go to other units and transfer others to my unit who would be willing to work for me.

"He told me that it was impossible, that these men were used to their jobs and experienced in that particular type of work and that he didn't want to break up an entire unit just for the sake of one man—meaning me!

Had to Step Down

"I knew what that meant. I had to step aside and consent to a white man's taking the job—a man who didn't have my mechanical abilities and who certainly wasn't entitled to it ahead of me by seniority or by any other reasons.

"Of course, I was burned up for a couple of months, but I had to get over it or quit my job. So I swallowed my pride and feelings and went back to work. 3-4-44

"If this happened to me, it must have happened to many other colored men in the Navy Yard. It means they'll never get a break."

Quit CIO Union

I asked this man, who preferred to remain anonymous, whether he was a member of any union in the yard. He said that he used to belong to the CIO union but that he quit it when they refused to take any action for him on a number of grievances he had had.

"I don't blame them," he explained. "The unions have no strength when they deal with the U.S. government. The government just has no respect for labor outfits. That goes for the AFL, too, which is also represented in the yard. 3-4-44

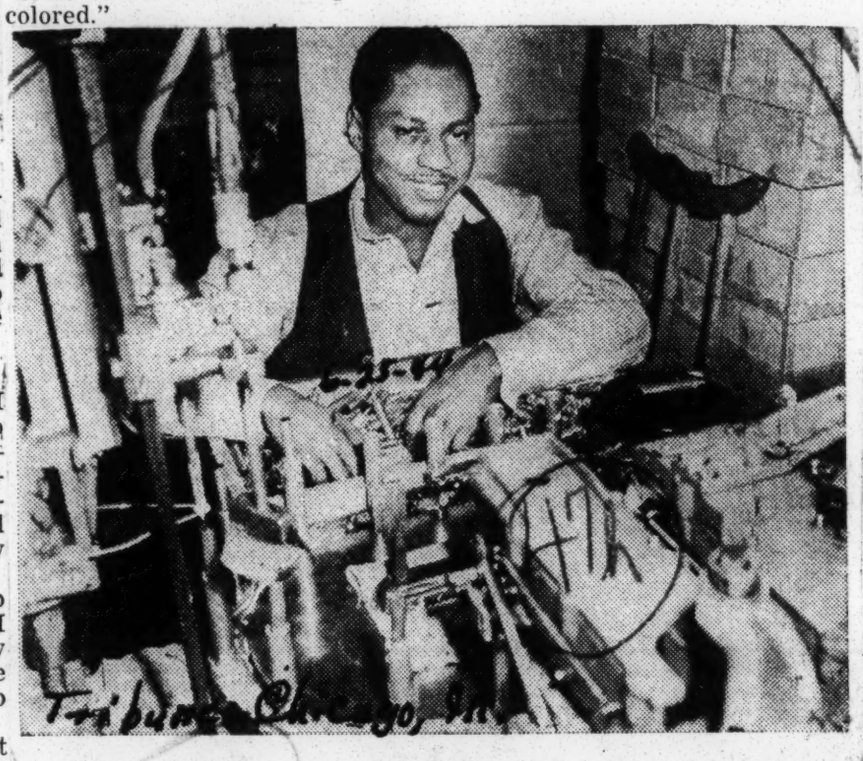
Workers Need Education

"I know of some cases where colored girls are hired as mechanic learners and are given brooms and dust cloths to clean up the place. When they complain to the supervisors they are told that all work in the Navy Yard is important no matter how menial it is, even sweeping up, and that you have to learn to take orders in the Navy and carry them out.

"This kind of answer hardly clears things up for them, but what can you do? Maybe we shouldn't expect too much of the management when white employees themselves need some education on working with colored.

As we turned into Graham Avenue the man got off the trolley, but not before I had made an appointment to see him the following night at his home.

When I went to see him we talked until midnight about the whole Navy Yard situation without hitting ony any solution. At this writing the thing that keeps popping up in my head is what he said about whites needing "some education on working with colored."



Wilbur Lightfoot, 28, 4415 Calumet av., is paralyzed in both legs, but he makes $60 a week operating a tube filling machine at the Barr plant. The machine requires only the use of hands. At home Lightfoot further develops finger dexterity by playing the violin. 6-21-44

THE GOOSE THAT LAYS THE GOLDEN EGG IS LEAVING

Register—San Antonio, Texas

DEVELOPMENTS of recent weeks should occasion some very sober reflection on the part of those persons who have seemingly thought that high-paying war jobs, and the acute labor shortage in many fields, because of war conditions, are going to continue forever. 3-17-44

Not only the experts, but the serious-minded observers of the general citizenry should know, now, that we have reached the peak in war-worker requirements, that we are now on the down-grade, that layoffs and shut-downs have occurred, are occurring, and will continue to occur.

The Office of War Information has reported that December, 1943, was the first month since the United States entered the war that industry experienced a net loss in its working force.

Excluding layoffs, fifty-four workers quit, were drafted, or were discharged for every fifty-one hired. Industry suffered a net loss of three workers per thousand in December, the first overall loss since Pearl Harbor. If layoffs were included, the net loss would be twelve per thousand.

The quit rate was the lowest of any month in 1943, but, in contrast, the layoff rate was the highest reported since July, 1942, and the rate of new hiring was the lowest reported since 1941. 3-17-44

Although, however, labor turnover remains a serious problem, often impeding war production and actually causing a net reduction in the working force of many war plants which, in order to meet their schedules should be increasing their working force, the handwriting appears on the wall.

And let the Negro not be disillusioned. The practice has always been that he is the last to be hired, the first to be fired, and, despite some gains he has made during the war emergency period, this practice will, more or less, continue. Let us not forget that nothing short of a presidential executive order opened the doors of many war plants to Negro workers, even in this emergency.

Last week, in Detroit, more than three hundred Negro workers were laid off by a war plant. The layoffs, of course, resulted from cutbacks in war production, fulfillment of some war contracts, and renegotiation of others. A complaint has been entered that Negroes were laid off out of proportion, that seniority rights had been juggled. There will be more of this as time goes on.

It is obvious that the Race must prepare itself for what is to come—possibly it may not be for many months, it may be weeks, possibly days. 3-17-44

Now, as never before, the Negro should use every dollar to the best possible advantage, save, practice thrift, for a rainy day is coming, not only for the Negro, but for all America. The Negro, of course, will get a more thorough drenching than any group.

Let the Race prepare itself, for the goose that has been laying the golden egg is on her way out.

Eight War Plants Charged With Unfair Labor Policies

World—Memphis, Tenn.

Cartridge Co. Fired Negroes With Seniority

States Cartridge Co., refused to reinstate these Negro workers just because they were colored.

9-4-44

ST. LOUIS—(ANP)—"The practice of some plants here of refusing to hire Negro workers is too frequent for the good of the war effort," Paul Connole, St. Louis States Employment Service office manager, said in comment of his required report to the FEPC on the conduct of plants holding government contacts in regard to Negro or white workers.

According to Malcolm Ross, F. E. P. C. chairman, the hearings will be conducted by the full membership of the committee. The F. E. P. C. counsel will consist of Ernest C. Trible and Frank D. Reves, staff members.

8-4-44

The seven plants charged with refusing to hire Negro workers are Amertorp Corporation; Bussman Manufacturing Co., Wagner Electric Corporation; St. Louis Shipbuilding Steel Company, McDonnell Aircraft Corporation and the McQuay-Norris Manufacturing Co.

Connole's report revealed that eight war plants were discriminating against the Negro in their employment programs. Hearings are scheduled for August 1 and 2.

While seven of the companies are charged with refusing to employ needed and available Negro war workers and with refusing to promote Negro workers to jobs in which they could exercise their special skills, one of the companies was charged with having dismissed its Negro employes during a recent work shortage when workers with less seniority were retained. The eighth plant, the United

7h-1944

They Lay Claim To Riveting Championship

The team of Misses Elizabeth Vernando and Cleo Glover have set a record of driving 104 one-eighth inch rivets in 120 seconds at the Burbank, Calif., plant of Lockheed Vega Airplane Company. This team works on both bay doors for the PV-1 Ventura bomber, among the first American planes consistently to bomb the Japanese homeland of Paramushira, northermost bastion of the Nippon OWI.)

5-24-44

Set Example For Men

Women War Workers Answer Nation's Call

Courier- Pittsburgh Pa.

1-22-44

By STANLEY ROBERTS, Courier Poll Analyst

Side by side with men, women today are performing similar duties in the nation's industrial war effort. And there is little doubt that they have proven their worth. One of the first questions raised by doubtful employers before the existing manpower shortage was: "Will the output and efficiency of the woman worker measure up to that of a man?"

That question has been definitely answered. A considerable body of evidence has proven that the woman worker is as satisfactory as a man in most instances, and in some, even more so, particularly in operations that require care in measurement and delicate handling.

Having demonstrated her ability, the woman worker is now coming in for much speculation as to how long her tenure in the industrial world will last. Questions such as the following are constantly being asked: "After the war will women return to the home?"—"Will women be thrown into the post-war labor market in competition against men?" These provoke a series of most interesting discussions and this week The Pittsburgh Couriers Bureau of Public Opinion asked colored America:

"Do You Believe Women Will Leave Industry in Great Numbers After the War?"

72.4% said "Yes"
10.8% said "No".
26.8% were uncertain

Women pollees were almost unanimous in the contention that the "weaker" sex had demonstrated their worth on the assembly lines of American factories, but most felt that the situation was temporary.

"We like the new freedom, the good money and the gained recognition," said one. But many of my friends, in talking over the problem, agree that the joys of building and maintaining a home is more fun than the work at the plants. In fact, we feel the responsibility of assuming our duties once more at the family fireside."

"We have taught the men a great lesson," said another. I think we have gained in their appreciation and respect."

Men were mostly concerned about the competition in post-war jobs. "I do not believe there will be enough work to go around after the war," said one. "And the normalcy of peacetime living will demand that the women re-enter the home to once again establish a typical and happy American family."

1-22-44

The unusually large numbers of "uncertain" answers was attributed to the newness of the situation. In this group many felt that every woman desired to help win the war, but would not venture an opinion on whether womanpower would be needed afterwards.

Colored Texans Establish Own War Industry Plant

Journal & Guide - Norfolk, Va.

1-15-44

FT. WORTH, Tex.— (ANP) — Carver Industries, the nation's first all-Negro small parts plants, is now doing sub-contract work for precision metal parts of the U. S. Navy. Excluding the director, the plant is manned entirely by woman power, another distinguishing feature of the establishment.

The plant, named for the great scientist, George W. Carver, is the brain child of Elmer Williams, member of the training and employment committee of the Negro Welfare Council, former NYA director for Negroes and founder of the Vocational Preparedness Association.

William began work on the idea last March when it became apparent that the skills of Negroes, trained in the East Lancaster War Training school, would not be utilized by many local war plants.

The plant is now under the direction of Joseph E. Baker, electrical engineer, formerly employed in the engineering department of Douglass Aircraft Corporation Santa Monica, Cal. Baker took over after Williams was inducted into the Army a few weeks ago.

1-15-44

SIX SONS IN ARMY, NEGRO MAKES ARMS

Post-Birmingham, Ala.

By United Press.

METUCHEN, N. J. — The commander-in-chief of a one-family army, Mrs. Malissia Johnson, Middletown, N. Y., has become an expert on the disassembling and reassembly of small arms at Raritan Arsenal, near here.

7-6-44

The 45-year-old Negro mother, who has six sons in the Army and two other children at home, is one of 100 mothers who are working in the arsenal small arms shop. Five of her six sons are overseas.

Texans Establish Own War Plant; Named For Late G. W. Carver

Courier- Pittsburgh Pa.

1-15-44

FORT WORTH, Texas—(ANP)—Carver Industries, the nation's first all-Negro small parts plants, is now doing sub-contract work for precision metal parts of the U. S. Navy. Excluding the director, the plant is manned entirely by woman power, another distinguishing feature of the establishment. The plant, named for the great scientist, George W. Carver, is the brain child of Elmer Williams, member of the training and employment committee of the Negro Welfare council, former NYA director for Negroes and founder of the Vocational Preparedness association.

IDEA NEARLY 1 YEAR OLD

Williams began work on the idea last March when it became apparent that the skills of Negroes, trained in the East Lancaster War Training school, would not be utilized by many local war plants.

The plant is now under the direction of Joseph E. Baker, electrical engineer, formerly employed in the engineering department of Douglass Aircraft corporation.

School Founded To Train Women Now Operates As Business Firm

By JAMES H. YOUNG

In October 1941, Young's Textile School was started at 517 north 55th street. It was established in an attempt to train women so that they might fill jobs fast being created in the Quartermaster Depots of Army and Marine Corps. Our women were desirous of holding such jobs but had not been given the opportunity to gain experience needed. At the time I was employed as an investigator in the Inheritance Tax Department at City Hall. Many persons would bring applications to me to fill. Upon investigation I found that many had only experience as homestic help to offer. I knew then that something had to be done. On December 9, two days after "Pearl Harbor," with ten machines we started classes of two hours each, six classes per day. They were attended nicely. We taught one hundred and eighty pupils, most of whom secured work from the Quartermaster Depot of the Army and Marine Corps.

Later with the Government's creation of a training system my school was discontinued. I then started actual manufactur-Empire Dress Company, designing. My first order was for Ap-ed and cut these outfits and Mr. ple Storage Company. It includ-Holmes gave me my start and ed jumpers and caps for the has cooperated with me in every drivers of the fleet of trucks. way possible, financially and Mr. Griffin, head cutter for otherwise. 1-15-44

We then obtained work from H. H. Rosenbaum of 123 n. 5th street. We had a complete shop of thirty machines. Our contract finished with this firm in June. Later we obtained another contract for Marshall Frock The production manager showed us his mass production system and today we have a complete shop with experienced operators.

We are members of the Waist and Blouse Contractors Association, the only colored firm to be so affiliated.

We need and welcome the further cooperation of the Negro people of Philadelphia to make this a big enterprise.

Women Operate Key Jobs In Industry; More Needed

Journal and Guide. 2-12-44
Norfolk, Virginia

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Mrs. Rosalie Ivy, an energetic young woman, works in mud, but she's neither a pottery worker nor a maker of mud pies. She's a "Pan Man" in a giant Gary, Ind., steel mill, and mixes a special mud used to seal the casting hole thru which molten iron flows from a blast furnace.

In the entire steel industry few women, or men either, are "Pan Men," for this is a rare job. 2-12-44

Mrs. Ivy belongs to that growing list of women war workers who have replaced men in jobs for the first time. The Women's Bureau of the U. S. Department of Labor recently compiled a list of some of the odd jobs held by such women.

HIGHEST RATING

Among those listed in this group is Evelyn Samuels, who went to work at the Brooklyn Navy Yard last year when they hired women mechanics for the first time in 41 years. In the Civil Service examinations given for Navy Yard jobs Miss Samuels received 99, the highest rating of any of the 6,000 women tested.

Doris Wilson, Hunter College student and Brooklyn resident, was another high-ranking applicant in the same examination. Both Miss Samuels and Miss Wilson were assigned to the instrument division where binoculars, telescopes and range finders are reconditioned.

Sarah T. Francis, formerly a presser in a laundry, is not only the first woman in the country to be employed as chipper and caulker, but the first in the history of shipbuilding. She is working at the Todd Shipyards in Hoboken, N. J.

Mrs. Susie T. Glover of Georgia holds a unique job for a woman. She was probably the first woman train announcer in the United States. Mrs. Glover started her railroad career 25 years ago doing odd jobs, icing and watering the train, cleaning up the station's carpenter shop, etc.

Her job as caller started accidentally when the station master asked her not to let anybody miss a train. She got copies of all schedules and began memorizing them. Today her voice is part of the essential station noises. Journal and Guide Norfolk, Virginia

RUNS STEEL BURNER

At the Bartlett-Hayward plant in Baltimore, Md., a woman runs a steel-burning machine. It is an intricate machine, 25 feet long and six feet high, which cuts huge plates of steel for use in six different kinds of anti-aircraft guns. The acetylene torches which cut two parts at a time must be set and guided with precision. The operation must have a dozen or more controls set exactly right. 2-12-44

One of the most unusual jobs held by a colored woman in war industries is that assigned to Ethel Maxwell Williams of St. Paul, Minn. Mrs. Williams is assistant to Cecil E. Newman, director of Negro personnel for the Twin Cities Ordnance Plant at New Brighton, Minn. Her work includes labor relations, personnel adjustment, race relations and related spheres of administrative activity.

Last spring this plant was employing more than 17,000 workers, 700 of whom were colored. They work at a variety of jobs and include supervisors, stenographers, machine operators, nurses, photograph technicians, draftsmen, machine adjusters, movemen, janitors and matrons.

The pre-war theme song of the aircraft industry was "Men Only." Shortly before Pearl Harbor some 4,000 women were employed in the entire aircraft industry—and most of them were in sewing jobs. By September of 1943, however, the tune had changed, more than 340,000 women were at work in the industry in airframe, engine, and propeller plants. Another 4,000 were employed on gliders.

IN KEY JOBS

The cannon and small arms plants also were considered men's domain before our entry into the war. A study of the Women's Bureau in the summer of 1942, of four government arsenals and four private firms showed, however, 11,000 women among the 75,000 employees. This number has been greatly increased within the past year.

The need for women war workers is still acute, and there is still a need and opportunity for women in civilian jobs to transfer to war work.

47h-1944

Armless Welding Wonder

Daily Work — Atlanta, Ga. 10-19-44

10-19-44

Termed "most dependable and industrious," James Murray 41-year-old armless night shift worker in the Industrial Canal plant of Higgins Industries, Inc., New Orleans, is speeding the output of giant ship hulls. Murray, who has two sons overseas, lost both arms in a railroad accident at Conroe, Texas, several years ago when he was trapped between two box cars. Using artificial arms, he graduated from the training school and Xavier University on July 21 and was immediately hired by Higgins Industries on the basis of his above average training record. Since his employment he has established an enviable record as a welder. (Higgins Industries Photo from OWI).

Toward Freedom

Daily Worker — New York, N.Y.

IN REFUSING to face squarely the special problem of Negro layoffs during the period of reconversion from wartime to peacetime production, the labor movement is courting disaster.

10-2-44

The problem arises out of the fact that racial discrimination in employment prevented the early entrance of Negro workers into war jobs in most industries. If strict seniority is followed in postwar layoffs, hundreds of thousands of Negro war workers, "the last hired," will again become "the first fired."

Such a development, of course, would be a terrific economic blow to the Negro people. They would be forced again, as during the Hoover depression, to bear the main brunt of that temporary unemployment which the reconversion period is sure to bring.

10-2-44

But the Negro people would not be the only victims of such a development. In this new period of our history, the postwar mass discharge of Negro workers from their jobs very easily could, and probably would, lead to the general disruption of the largest and most progressive trade unions, rendering them entirely incapable of protecting the economic interests of either white or Negro workers, and greatly weakening the essential organized labor base of our whole American democracy.

By Doxey Wilkerson

This was not true after World War I, when the Negro newcomers to northern industry had been prevented from entering the unions in great numbers by the traditional craft and racial exclusiveness of the AFL. The apparent interests of the unions were not seriously armed by the postwar discharge of most Negro war workers

* * *

NOW, however, hundreds of thousands of Negro war workers are within the unions, and are in the process of building new and wholesome relations with their white fellow unionists. Moreover, the continued strengthening of Negro-white unity within the labor movement and of Negro-labor political collaboration in the community generally is absolutely necessary for organized labor and for our country as a whole.

10-2-44

But if the reconversion period brings a gross disproportion of layoffs to Negro workers, there is nothing anyone can say or do that will not drive a deep wedge between white and Negro workers within the unions, and between organized labor and the Negro people in the political arena. Trade unionists could argue all they want to about the abstract principle of "seniority," but their words would mean nothing to Negro trade unionists faced with breadlines or to Negro voters whose collaboration organized labor must continue to strengthen.

Negroes and Reconversion
The Seniority Question

If after this war the masses of Negro workers are again the "first fired," the trade unions will probably be split wide open by racial conflict. They will be easy prey for every kind of disrupter, within the unions and without, who sees an opportunity to exploit the racial issue to the detriment of the unions. And there would be no effective defense.

10-2-44

THIS problem is serious, but it can be solved in advance, through agreements to modify the application (not the principle) of seniority so as to assure that Negro workers will not bear a disproportionate share of postwar cutbacks. Yet no union, not even the great progressive CIO unions which have been holding conventions during the past few weeks, has faced this problem squarely.

They would do well to heed the warning of the London Tribune, which comments: "The forces of reaction in America can be counted on to make the most of the postwar situation by stirring up resentment between the white proletariat and the Negro proletariat. . . . Unless the unions can cope adequately with this problem, the Century of the Common Man may turn out to be the Century of the Comman Man's enslavement."

Seniority Rules Fail to Aid Negro

The adjustment of seniority rules in some plants to prevent heavy layoffs of Negroes during the reconversion period was recommended today by the National Negro Congress after a survey of seniority ratings at the Sperry Gyroscope Co., Great Neck, L. I.

"Our survey shows that Negroes have gained very little seniority in war plants," Thelma Dale, acting secretary, said. "Under the present regulations, a far higher proportion of Negroes than whites will lose their jobs in cutbacks."

The Sperry plant was chosen for a test survey because of a long fight by the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers Union, CIO, to overcome discriminatory practices against Negroes, she said.

"While seniority adjustments are not necessary everywhere," Miss Dale said, "the unmodified application of seniority rules would in many places . . . freeze prewar discriminations into postwar industry."

Fully Equipped

Memphis World — Tenn.

Boats Equal To Seven To Nine-Story Building

11-24-44

CHESTER, Pa. — (SNS) — Six hospital Ships launched during 1944 at the Sun Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Company are the newest units in the United States Armed Services' fleet of 36 new hospital ships having a capacity for approximately 22,000 patients, it was disclosed last week in a report released by the American Merchant Marine institute.

Tenn

The six Sun-built ships are the Marine Lion, which has been rechristened the Benevolence, the Marine Walrus, now the Consulation, the Marine Hawk, now the Haven; the Marine Beaver, now the Repose; the Marine Owl, now the Sanctuary, and the Marine Dolphin, now called the Transquility.

BUILT IN YARD FOUR

Each of the vessels was built in the No. 4 yard at Sun Ship—predominantly Negro-employed, and cost approximately $3,000,000 each. After launchings and test runs, the ships were taken over by the Government and outfitted for hospital service.

Many of the other ships in the hospital fleet were drawn from the merchant marine, according to Frank J. Taylor, president of the Institute. He said that in 1939 the Army had no hospital ships and the navy had only one.

Painted white from smokestack to waterline, the ships travel fully lighted at night over routes not used by convoys.

They average 600 beds each and are the floating equivalent of a seven to nine-story hospital covering a city block, the Merchant Marine institute report stated.

COMPLETELY EQUIPPED

The ships are completely equipped with operating rooms, dispensaries, pharmacists, laboratories, refrigerating rooms, sterlizing units and wards for the treatments of all types of war illnesses, physical and mental.

Electrically operated "mechanical cows" provide milk and ice cream.

Dining halls, lounges and recreation rooms complete the services available to hospitalized fighting men.

Vessels Average 600 Beds Each;

Negro Getting Skilled Jobs in Shipyards

Tribune — Washington, D.C.

Navy Yards Absorbed Many Earlier in War Emergency

5-13-44

Non-white workers in the nation's shipyards, 96 per cent of whom are Negroes, now total 157,874, as compared with the 10,909 non-white workers employed in the whole industry in 1940, the Office of War Information disclosed this week following a survey of ninety-six shipyards and naval establishments.

The 1944 employment of non-white workers exceeded by more than 4,500 the total number of 153,364 persons listed as working in the whole shipbuilding industry by the 1940 U. S. census. The non-white shipyard workers now constitute 10.9 per cent of total employees as compared with 6.5 per cent in 1940.

South Lags as Usual

Although Southern employers have shown a reluctance to upgrade Negro workers and elevate them from the unskilled categories, other yards have shown considerable progress, said the OWI.

5-13-44

The increase of non-white employment at the Sun Shipbuilding and Drydock Company in Pennsylvania, where thousands of Negroes are now working, is typical in some respects of the expansion of non-white employment in a number of new and enlarged shipyards.

In July, 1941, this firm employed only 750 Negro workers, confined mainly to unskilled and semi-skilled work. Demands for increased production and draft inroads on the working force caused the Sunship to start large-scale recruitment of Negro workers and the upgrading, through in-plant training, of hundreds of Negro cleaners and sweepers in its laboring departments.

On March 1, 1944, the company reported that 12,049 non-white workers constituted 39.7 per cent of its total working force, and that more than 7,000 unskilled Negro workers had been trained in the yards for skilled positions.

5-13-44

Sixty per cent of the non-white workers were employed in the "all-Negro" yard at Sunship, while 40 per cent were integrated in threo ther yards.

Kaiser Employs 11,284

Non-white workers are playing an important part in the West Coast shipbuilding industry. Seven Kaiser yards in that area employ 11,284, the largest number.

An analysis of the survey shows that private shipbuilders, however, have lagged considerably behind naval establishments in offering job opportunities to Negroes.

"The most rapid war-time expansion of non-white employment," the OWI says, "occurs in the U. S. Navy Yards in the early days of the defense and emergency."

5-13-44

During the year before Pearl Harbor, the Navy yards employed 100 per cent more Negroes than were at work in 1940. The survey pointed out that the Navy is absorbing Negroes into a variety of skills early in the war program, made it easier for the yards to take on larger numbers as the program expanded. One naval establishment has now doubled the number of Negroes employed in 1940.

wards for the treatment of all types of war illnesses, physical and mental.

11-25-44

Electrically operated "mechanical cows" provide milk and ice cream. Dining halls, lounges and recreation rooms complete the services available to hospitalized fighting men.

Call—Kansas City Star

5-26-44

CHAMPION RIVETERS AT LOCKHEED.—The team of Miss Elizabeth Vernando and Cleo Glover have set a record of driving 104 1-8 inch rivets in 120 seconds at the Burbank, Cal., plant of Lockheed Vega Airplane company. This team works on bomb bay doors for the PV-1 Ventura bomber, among the first American planes consistently to bomb the Japanese homeland of Peramusiro, northernmost bastion of the Nippon home defenses. Their record has been attested by Joseph M. Alvey, group supervisor, who conducted a special time test. When asked how they attained such a high degree of efficiency, Miss Vernando said, "You can become efficient doing anything if you have rhythm in your work." Miss Glover echoed, "You gotta have rhythm."—OWI Photo.—Story on Page 3.

5-26-44

Negro Crew Constructed Six Hospital Ships Now In Active Wartime Service

Amsterdam News — New York, N.Y.

11-25-44

CHESTER, Pa.—Six hospital ships of 36 new hospital ships having a launched during 1944 at the Sun Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Company are the newest units in the capacity for approximately 25,000 United States Armed Services' fleet patients, it was disclosed last week in a report released by the American Merchant Marine Institute.

The six Sun-built ships are the Marine Lion, which has been re-christened the Benevolence; the Marine Walrus, now the Consolation; the Marine Hawk, now the Haven; the Marine Beaver, now the Repose, and the Marine Owl, now the Sanctuary. Many of the other ships in the hospital fleet were drawn from the Transatlantic Merchant Marine, according to Frank J. Taylor, president of the Institute.

Each of the vessels was built in the No. 4 Yard at Sun Ship—pre-viously, Army had no hospital ships and the Navy had only one.

Completely Equipped

They average 600 beds each and are completely equipped floating equivalent of a two-nine-story hospital city block, the Merchant Marine Institute report stated.

The ships are completely equipped with operating rooms, dispensaries, to pharmacies, laboratories, refrigerating rooms, sterilizing units and the eating rooms.

11-25-44

Built In Yard No. 4

47h-1944

Number of Negroes In War Jobs Mounts

The Worker—New York, N.Y.
2-20-44

By Eugene Gordon

The National Urban League and he Fair Employment Practice Committee last week gave us some significant figures on Negro employment.

The League, having surveyed 300 war plants, reported that last year "the movement of Negro workers into war industries throughout the nation continued with accelerated speed, both as to numbers and in the type of work for which they were employed." It added that, because of necessary restrictions on information, no more than estimated figures on the total number employed could be given.

That estimate, however confirms the oft-repeated fact that this anti-fascist war, being a people's war of national liberation, is liberating, also, the economically-restricted Negro worker; and it proves to the skeptical that this war, being different from the first world war, will bring about different results for the Negro people.

The FEPC report came in the form of a statement by Malcolm Ross, national chairman, following a meeting of regional directors in Washington. This report tends to back up and sustain the two points made just above.

The League said that in June, 1943, the War Manpower Commission revealed that 6.7 per cent of the 14,673,000 workers employed by industries were Negroes. About 1,000,000 workers, in other words, were Negroes, according to the WMC.

The WMC report did not, however, include all war production industries. It follows, therefore, that the total would be somewhat higher—if the figures from the other industries be were included. The Urban League declares that more recent estimates place the percentage of Negro workers at 8.3, owing to the fact that employment of Negroes has increased since the WMC report of last June. The League declares:

". . . Reliable estimates of total war production employment place the number of workers at approximately 20,000,000. From these reports it is apparent that at least 1.500.000 Negro workers are currently engaged in war production and other essential war employment. Additional increase in Negro employment is anticipated in areas of severe labor shortage, mainly the Eastern Seaboard, the Middle West and the Great Lakes regions." 2-20-44

The FEPC regional directors' reports, tallied up, went something like his. During the last six months of 1942 it closed a total of 989 cases having to do with discrimination against job applicants. These applicants were chiefly Negroes and Jews. The remaining were other creeds and foreign-born.

During that six months, however, "a progressively mounting number of new cases, averaging more than 300 a month, left the committee with 1,957 cases at the beginning of 1944." Three hundred fifty-nine of the 989 cases closed were adjustments in compliance with Executive Order 9346. That order forbids war-job discrimination. The remaining cases were dismissed by the FEPC or withdrawn by the complainant.

The largest category among the 989 complainants was discrimination because of race, numbering 716 cases. Discrimination because of creed (mostly Jewish) involved 127 cases; foreign-born, 102, and national origin, 44. There were many cases closed in addition to the 359 satisfactorily adjusted; 36 dismissed because of lack of jurisdiction; 208 because of insufficient evidence; 256 on the merits; 123 withdrawn by complainants, seven dismissed for other reasons. 2-20-44

The Urban League figures prove that, owing to the anti-fascist nature of this war, more Negro workers than ever before are now integrated in industry. The FEPC figures prove that it is an agency by which these gains may be held after the war. The Negro worker, therefore, made more secure than ever by his trade union affiliation, will be given further security by the fact that there is a Fair Employment Practice Committee.

The workers' task remains, chiefly, while integrating themselves in the trade union movement, to achieve a permanent and a legally constituted FEPC. That means pressure for passage of the permanent FEPC bills now before Congress.

Texans Operate Own War Industry

Daily World—Atlanta, Ga.
1-15-44

FT. WORTH, Tex. — (ANP) — Carver Industries, the nation's first all-Negro small parts plants, is now doing sub-contract work for precision metal parts of the U.S. navy. Excluding the director, the plant is manned entirely by woman power another distinguishing feature of the establishment.

The plant, named for the great scientist, George W. Carver is the brain child of Elmer Williams, member of the training and employment committee of the Negro Welfare Council, former NYA director for Negroes and founder of the Vocational Preparedness Assn.

Williams began work on the idea last March when it became apparent that the skills of Negroes trained in the East Lancaster War Training School would not be utilized by many local war plants.

The plant is now under the direction of Joseph E. Baker, electrical engineer, formerly employed in the engineering department of Douglass Aircraft Corporation Santa Monica, Cal. Baker took over after Williams was inducted into the army a few weeks ago.

1-15-44

Accomplishment Is Outstanding, Writer Concedes

Daily World
Atlanta Ga.
1-15-44

Unskilled Men Soon Acquire Highest Skills

CHESTER, Pa.—(ANP)—"Training the Negro for the Production Front Line," is the subject of a five-page elaborately illustrated [illegible] section which sets forth the story of the unique performance which has taken place on the banks of the Delaware river.

The story, appearing in the Dec 1943, issue of Machinery, organ of the Design, Construction, Operation of MetalWorking and Allied Equipment manufacturing groups, was written by the magazine's associate editor, Holbrook L. Horton who visited the Sun Shipbuilding plant to evaluate the organization's program with respect to its shipyard No. 4.

WORKERS TRAINED

Hollbrook set down what the editors referred to as concrete evidence of an outstanding accomplishment in the field of job training, starting from scratch, with only a few white foremen and leaders in an over-all program where trained workers are manning an entirely new shipyard "Those workers," Horton states "have been taken from unskilled Negro jobs and have been taught to build merchant ships from bow to storm and from keel to stack." 1-15-44

The illustration of this special article include a young Negro, formerly a laborer, making the complete layout for an engineering gage board from a blueprint and a workman forging a large davit to shape under a steam hammer, with a Negro crew leader, rated a first class forger.

HAS SIGNIFICANCE

The article by Machinery is brought to the attention of the public because of its national significance in a field heretofore closed to trained Negro workers The magazine, published with the ccoperation of the U. S. Maritime commission, has its headqaurters in New York.

Negroes in Shipyards Exceed All Records

PM—New York, N.Y.
5-10-44
By ELIZABETH DONAHUE PM Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, May 10.—The OWI today disclosed that Negroes now working in the Nation's shipyards outnumber the total peacetime employment of all workers in the industry.

In a special survey of 96 shipyards and naval establishments, the OWI concluded that non-white workers, 96 per cent of whom are Negroes, now number 157,874 as compared with the 10,909 non-white workers employed in 1940.

Although Southern employers have shown a reluctance to upgrade Negro workers and elevate them from the unskilled categories, other yards have shown "considerable progress," the OWI declared. 5-10-44

The Kaiser yards on the West Coast are reported to have offered the major employment to Negroes in skilled and semi-skilled jobs.

An analysis of the OWI survey shows, however, that private shipbuilders have lagged considerably behind naval establishments in offering job opportunities to Negroes. While the shipyards have had the most phenomenal growth of any wartime industry the total percentage increase in workers is 888 as compared with 1463 per cent over 1940.

The most rapid wartime expansion of non-white employment, the Non-white employment in the U. S. same period shows an increase of over 1463 per cent.

Navy in absorbing Negroes into a variety of skills early in the war program, made it easier for the Negroes to take on larger numbers as the program expanded.

One naval establishment has now doubled the number of Negroes employed in 1940. 5-10-44

Negro Top Riveter At R. I. Shipyard

Daily World—Atlanta Ga.
5-3-44

PROVIDENCE, R. I. — ANP) —A gang of riveters at the Wa'sh-Kaiser shipyard, led by Donald Turner, set a record at the yard the past week, when they drove 2514 rivets on the day shift. Turner himself led his crew by accounting for 515 rivest on Liberty ships being built by the yards. Officials of the shipyard pointed out that 800 rivets would have been considered a good day's work for a crew of that size in the allotted time. There were three others in Turner's crew.

Turner is a graduate of Central High School in Providence, and attended Rhode Island Boys' State at R. I. State college for a year. He served in the army for a time, but was discharged due to a slight disability. He is the son of Robert Turner of Providence, and his wife is the former Gladys White of Oakland, R. I.

Nationwide Campaign To Retain Jobs In Post-War Period Planned

Dangers On Home Front Considered

Daily World - Atlanta, Ga. 2-3-44

NEW YORK CITY — (SNS) — Retaining job gains made in war industry and planning for the post-war employment of Negro workers highlighted plans completed this week for nation-wide observance of the National Urban League's Twelfth Vocational Opportunity Campaign to be held from March 12 through 19. The home-front dangers which will face Negro veterans and civilians as the country re-adjusts to peacetime economy will also be considered.

Negro youth and adults will be rallied under the slogan, "THE FUTURE IS YOURS—PLAN AND PREPARE!" The Campaign will be devoted to consideration of vocational problems such as job training and placement, membership in trade unions, absenteeism and efficiency on the job. It will also consider the problems of race tensions and ways of improving race relations throughout the country. 2-3-44

DRIVE NATIONWIDE

Forty-eight affiliated brancnes of the National Urban League, and Negro schools and colleges and other community groups and institutions will conduct activities during the week. Special radio programs on local stations and over coast-to-coast networks have already been arranged to reach the general public.

Announcement of the Campaign was made from the League's headquarters at 1133 Broadway, New York City, by Ann Tanneyhill, Secretary of the Bureau of Vocational Guidance. "The Vocational Opportunity Campaign this year is important," she said. "For eleven years the National Urban League has used its annual Vocational Opportunity Campaign to impress upon young and adult Negro Americans the need for training in the present for security in the future. These reasons are more important today than ever before. The world is changing before our very eyes and people must change with it in order to face tomorrow with any degree of confidence—with any certainty of a secure place as working, contributing citizens of society.

"Negro workers and workers must face the war and post-war world with the knowledge that, first, there will always be a place in civilized society for the trained, capable worker. Secondly, that this place will be enlarged or dimished in direct proportion to the cooperative effort and planning made by Negroes themselves—and between Negroes and their white fellow-citizens. Third, the influence of government in providing employment and social security will be increasingly important. Fourth, the influence of organized management and of organized labor can be brought into a common interest center at the point of the Negro's job application."

SHOULD BE CONCERNED

Continuing, Miss Tanneyhill stated, "It is up to each individual to be vitally concerned about his own place as a citizen. Our Campaign slogan this year—"THE FUTURE IS YOURS—PLAN AND PREPARE!" therefore has broad and deep significance. The question of full employment versus the unemployment of millions is directly tied up to the things we will consider during the Campaign, such as job training and re-training; adjustment on the job; membership in labor unions; and relationships with fellow white workers.

"We shall be concerned with four groups: the war disabled; the men and women returning from our armed forces in normal physical condiiton; the displaced war industry workers; and the youth just coming of age as workers. As minority group member. Negroes will suffer. We must be articulate in planning for what we want in the post-war world, and what we have a right to expect—complete integration with other Americans in our democracy. This means to us the opening of full opportunities for vocational training and job placement; the elimination of discriminatory practices in American industry; the equalization of educational opportunities; the assurance of full citizenship rights and a just share of civic benefits and cultural opportunities; the removal of restrictions upon social mobility; and the removal of the stigma of inferiority which has been placed upon us by the attitude of many white Americans. These are the things we want—these are the things for which we must plan."

During the Campaign staff members of the National Urban League will travel to racial tension areas throughout the country and confer with educational authorities, civic and governmental leaders, labor union officials, and representatives of management.

Negro Employment 15 Times Greater Than '40, OWI Reveals

Daily Worker-New York, N.Y. 5-10-44

There are 15 times as many Negroes in American shipyards today as in 1940 and the total as of March 1 was greater than the entire peacetime employment, the Office of War Information disclosed yesterday.

Statistics from 96 yards and naval establishments list non-white employment (96.9 percent Negro) at 157,874 as of March 1 as compared to 10,099, the over-all 1940 job total, the OWI said.

The increase is even more striking in percentages. While shipbuilding jobs generally increased 888.8 percent, Negro employment leaped 1,463.2 percent. Total employment in the 96 yards surveyed is 1,516,783.

Nine yards reported Negroes constitute more than 16 percent of all employed; three said they constitute more than 30 percent. The three are Sun Shipbuilding, Chester, Pa.—39.7 percent; Alabama Shipbuilding Repair Division, Mobile—33.9 percent; North Carolina Shipbuilding Construction Division, Wilmington—30.2 percent. 5-10-44

UP-GRADING PROGRESS

Most of the Negro shipbuilders, dividual production m

100-Year Old Yet Job In This One

Daily World Of Atlanta, Ga.

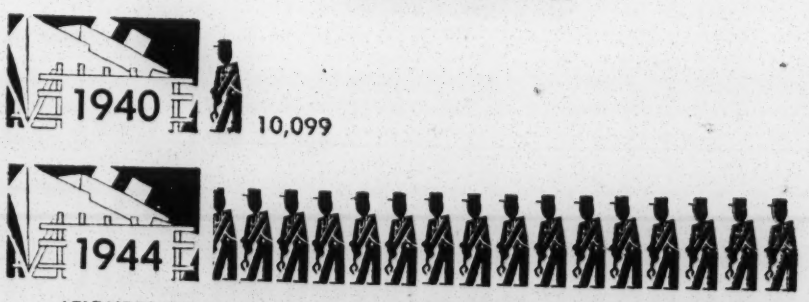
KANSAS CITY, Mo. 1-11-44 June (ANP)—"I fought in the Civil war and there is no reason why I should't work in this one," declared 100-year-old Green Young when doctors said he was a bit below par for work at the Pratt-Whitney engine plant, Friday.

The centenarian came here from his home in Holden, Mo.

e said his first 26 years were spent as a slave in Lexington, Ky.

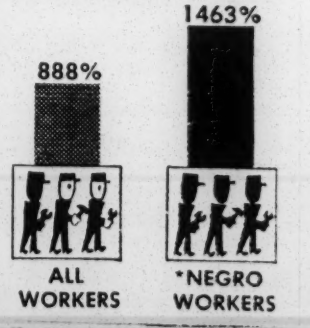
MORE *NEGRO WORKERS EMPLOYED IN SHIPYARDS

NUMBER EMPLOYED



*FIGURES COVER ALL NON-WHITE WORKERS, 96% OF WHOM ARE NEGROES

RATE OF INCREASE IN EMPLOYMENT, 1940-44



47h-1944

Defense Training

TEACHING WELDING CAUSING OUSTING OF TOWN'S NEGROES

Argus — St. Louis, Mo.
6-23-44

NEW IBERIA, La., June 19—Two doctors and two business leaders, heads of the local NAACP, were terrorized, beaten and driven from this deep South Metropolis over the fostering of a Welding School for members of their race. The victims are Dr. E. L. Dorsey, whose $65,000 hospital was dismantled and patients removed, one dying from fright; Dr. Irma G. Pleisor, dentist; Dr. Lewis H. Williams and J. Leo Hardy, NAACP president and father of two sons in service in the South Pacific. Two of the victims are officers of a Federal Credit Union that has bought $65,000 in bonds.

Others required to leave were Dr. H. O. Scoggins, owner of a drug store; Franzella Volter, teacher, Octavia Tilly, Jr., insurance salesman. 6-23-44

The removal of the two doctors left the Negro population without medical aid and two patients are reported to have died.

The (WMC) opened a white welding school. Thru complaints to the FEPC by Negro leaders, a similiar school was opened by Negroes.

47h-1944

Newest Negro Skipper

Daily Worker-New York, N.Y.
2-23-44

CAPTAIN JOHN GODFREY

Negro Captain Lauds Harmony Aboard Ship

2-23-44

Daily Worker-New York, N.Y.

Capt. John Godfrey, third Negro American to command a mixed American crew, was back from a foreign port yesterday with a story of delivering the goods without trouble—either from the Nazis or those that ape them, the inciters of race hatred.

Introduced at a press conference called by Edward Lawson, regional director of the President's Fair Employment Practices Committee, the captain indicated that it might have been just good luck that the trip was free of attack by Nazi subs but that harmonious relations between Negro and white can be achieved anytime management and labor are ready to lay aside prejudices.

His ship, the Robert L. Vann, is manned by an all National Maritime Union crew, and his white Chief Engineer, Paul Rohfling, and his Negro First Engineer, Harry B. Forte, were at the captain's side to tell about them at the press conference.

Rohfling was enthusiastic about the way the crew cooperated. "I wouldn't want to deal with better men," he said. He added that United Fruit Co. officials, under which the Robert L. Vann sails, indicated that they were very pleased, too.

"We have all shown we can make a go of delivering the goods without consideration of race, creed or color," the Chief Engineer commented proudly. 2-23-44

He and the captain reported the burial at sea of Chief Officer Adolphus Folkes, a Negro who was stricken with a heart attack. Folkes was a lieutenant commander in the Naval Reserve. Discrimination, which still continues in the Navy, would have prevented him from taking up his reserve commission. But in death he got full Naval honors. Enlisted men in the Naval gun crew buried him with the full salute that is the highest Navy honor, they said.

However, generally speaking, in spite of the good experiences of the Robert L. Vann, discrimination is still rampant in war shipping, Mr. Lawson disclosed. The more than 6,000 Negro trained seamen and licensed men are still forced to waste needed manhours because some companies discriminate or contend that unions they deal with would object if Negroes were hired, the FEPC head said. The committee, a government enforcement agency, is pressing for removal of the barriers.

Merchant Marines

Negro Soldier Finds Real Help In South

Post
Birmingham, Ala.

I want to say something about race relations. I am a colored American merchant seamen from the Northern states. My shipmate (another colored merchant seaman) and I arrived in Birmingham, going to Baltimore to catch our ship. When we arrived, holding bus tickets all the way to Baltimore, we found we were stranded, due to a strike in the bus company. We immediately tried one or two well known relief agencies here. They could help only stranded men of the armed forces, although we, too, are serving our country. 1-1-44

We were about to believe all we had heard about treatment of Negroes in the South, but a policeman told us to contact Ensign Vaughn, officer in charge of the U. S. Maritime Service in Birmingham. In fact, the policeman took us to the building.

After we met Ensign Vaughn and explained our situation to him, he immediately dropped everything and got busy on the telephone. He called a half dozen numbers before he began to get results. He enlisted the aid of The Post and eventually contacted Mrs. Doty of the Travelers' Aid Society. 1-1-44

With the help of the three of them, we got our tickets to Baltimore. Ensign Vaughn wished us good luck and got us under way. The next time I hear anyone say that white people in the South will refuse to help a colored person I am going to tell my story. This is one of the reasons we in the Merchant Marine are proud to serve under officers like Ensign Vaughn.

Mr. Westbrook Pegler has said a lot about Communism in the Merchant Marine. Those who want him can have Mr. Pegler and his gripes—as for us, we will take Ensign Vaughn and his helping hand.

V. DUPONERONE,
Baltimore.

Harmony Prevails Aboard His Ship

Daily World-Atlanta, Ga.
3-1-44

NEW YORK — (ANP) — Capt. John Godfray, master of the Liberty ship Robert L. Vann, can prove beyond question that Negro and white officers and seamen can and will work together on merchant vessels without friction, he told reporters at a press conference in the FEPC office here Monday afternoon.

As a concrete illustration, he cited the recent successful overseas voyage of his ship. Full details of the voyage could not be revealed for security reasons, but Capt. Godfray told enthusiastically of the fine work of the officers and crew. The ship's first mate, Adolphus Folkes, died of heart failure on the bridge, Capt. Godfray said, and was buried at sea with full honors, including a salute by the ship's navy gun crew. As a result the entire officer personnel had to be advanced to fill the vacancy.

4-h

IN COMPLETE HARMONY

Many of the ship's personnel thus took over duties they had never before assumed, the skipper explained and it was their efficient performance in this crisis which warrant his warmest praise. Never before, he said, had he seen Negro and white officers and men work together in such complete harmony. 3-1-44

Capt. Godfray, veteran of 23 years' sea experience, was called back to active service by the War Shipping administration early in 1943 after being in retirement for 10 years. Prior to his retirement he had served as master of vessels of varying tonnage on Carribean runs for more than seven years.

Despite his long experience and his possession of a master license, Capt. Godfray was unable for more than a year to obtain a command, apparently because of his race.

NO DIFFICULTIES

The FEPC, informed of the situation, made an investigation. Subsequent negotiations with the United Fruit compnay resulted in the assignment of Capt. Godfray to command the Robert L. Vann.

"We have no difficulties," Capt. Godfray told reports. "Everything went fine, and there was a very good feeling among the officers and men. I was impressed by the fact that the white commander of the navy gun crew ordered his men into full dress regalia, and they gave Chief Officer Folkes the highest honors possible to a merchant officer by firing a salute."

That Man Mulzac--Every Time He Ships Out He Makes History

Daily Worker-New York, N.Y.
3-31-44

By Art Shields

Skipper Hugh Mulzac of the S.S. Booker T. Washington did some life saving on his last trip to the war zone.

In fact he probably saved the lives of every man on the ship, says Henry Krensdorf, chairman of the ship's committee. But Captain Mulzac isn't satisfied with less than a foot to spare the vering that saved the big ship.

MULZAC AS TEACHER

But Captain Mulzac isn't satisfied on the bridge in the delicate maneuwith an under water superb Negro captain ducked a blow. Sunken ships snare war cargoes in training his crew. some of these harbors. And Captain "The skipper taught a class in navigation," said Henry Krensdorf, "He's a swell teacher. He

It happened in a North African harbor. The port was crowded with ships when a storm struck with fury. The "Booker T." was dragging its anchor. Other vessels were dragging theirs' too. A collision that would have blown up the ship was a split second away when the skippers' skill told us to continue our studies by correspondence, when we left the ship. That's how he learned navigation," he said.

CAPT. HUGH MULZAC

Some crew members tell me, however, that the narrow escapes are not the main story.

"The high point of the trip," said a seaman, "was the party we gave to the people in ——, a North African port."

Two thousand French folks, Spaniards, Arabs, and British and American soldiers and sailors took in the party.

They helped eat the "Booker T.'s" sandwiches and their singers and dancers and actors joined in the fun making.

"Some shows!" said the seaman. "An American swing band and a French workers' orchestra were competing. Comic solos and skits we had too. Every one was happy."

The French Red Cross, the American Red Cross and the British Naval Hospital authorities were happy too when each got one third of the proceeds. 3-24-44

The chief doctor at the British hospital was so happy that he called his staff together when Captain Mulzac came with the money, and said something like this:

"This is a wonderful thing you've done," he told the Negro captain. If everyone felt and acted like you the war would have ended long ago.

"We'll always appreciate your spirit.

"And if any seaman on the Booker T. Washington gets sick we'll send the whole staff to help him."

FRIENDSHIP

The French trade union movement in the port presented the NMU crew with a plaque of friendship which has been turned over to the NMU headquarters in New York.

And till the ship left the port the American seamen, both Negroes and whites, were welcome guests in the workers' homes.

The seamen want me also to tell of the warm friendship between them and the American troops, both Negro and white, that they spent much time with on this trip. But that is a story that one of the crew should write out himself.

We're waiting to get it.

Incident in the Arabian Sea

PM's Picture News
New York, N. Y.

ARTHUR MCBOWMAN told us a pretty good story the other day. It was the story of his escape as a merchant seaman from a Liberty ship torpedoed by a Japanese submarine March 29 in the Arabian Sea.

We sat across a table from Arthur at National Maritime Union headquarters. He is a 19-year-old Negro whose large eyes look serious even when he smiles. An NMU "torpedoed" pin was in the left lapel of his new-looking Navy blue suit. He talked quietly. 7-9-44

"It was 4:20 p.m., he said. "I was just

PHOTO BY SKIPPY ADELMAN

Seaman Arthur McBowman (story above) starting to take a shower. Suddenly, I heard a loud boom and felt the ship rock. The room was filled with a funny-smelling steam. I thought maybe a boiler had blown up. I yelled, 'What's going on?'"

The engine room had been blown out of the ship.

"I saw all the fellows running by. I didn't even take a towel. Just grabbed my life jacket and ran on deck. The ship wasn't sinking very fast. I went to my station, at the aft fall (rope for lowering a lifeboat.)

Thought about chow time

"The ship was dead. There wasn't any noise that I can remember. I don't remember what I said. Some of the guys were getting cans of tomato juice to take aboard the lifeboat. The chief officer was telling Sparks to continue sending the SOS from the lifeboat. 7-9-44

"I thought how it was almost chow time. And we were gonna have fresh pineapples for dessert that night. We'd been trying to get the cook to give them to us for days. Then this had to happen. I got mad for a minute or so."

Scarcely had the boat pulled away, with Arthur still feeling provoked about those pineapples, than the Japanese sub surfaced—less than 50 yards away.

"I thought they'd come over and ask questions," said Arthur. "Even in Action in the North Atlantic, they come over and ask questions."

"What did they look like?"

"Like the movies," said Arthur. "They were all lined up on deck in neat formation. They had on snappy looking khaki uniforms. They looked like they got dressed up for the occasion. They had tommy guns."

Then the Japs started to shoot at the men in the boat. Arthur and the others dived overboard. They had to leave the badly burned 78-year-old chief engineer in the boat. The men kept the lifeboat between themselves and the sub.

Three days in a boat

"One of the Japs was looking at us with high-powered glasses. Another was taking movies."

"What did the camera look like?" we asked.

"Like Paramount's Eyes and Ears of the World," said Arthur.

The Japs did not leave till 8 o'clock that night. When the men climbed back into the boat, they found it riddled with machine-gun holes but none of Arthur's companions had been hit. The men in another lifeboat, though, are still missing.

Arthur knew his boat was heading toward India, "but only the chief officer knew how many days off we were and we didn't ask him. It's better when you don't know."

Three days after the torpedoing they were picked up by the San Calia, a British-manned Liberty ship, which took them to Karachi, India. From there, they went to Boston as passengers on a transport.

Arthur's story of the torpedoing ended there but we wanted to know how he felt about the war. "I'd rather not say anything about it," he answered. We asked why—did he think this was a "white man's war?"

"I'd rather not talk about it," said Arthur. "The fellows on the ship were always together. We went every place together."

"What about the stories that the Japanese don't want to fight Negroes?"

"The boys in India talk about it," said Arthur. "They say the Japs don't shoot Negroes."

"Weren't they shooting at you in the water?" 7-9-44

"Sure," said Arthur. "Sure, it's all Japanese propaganda. They want to divide us over here. But . . ." he paused.

"My mother tried to teach me not to hate anyone," he said. "We had a southern boy on our ship. He didn't like me in the beginning. If I sat near him, he'd get up and move. Once I asked him what was the matter with me. He said, 'It's just the way I was brought up.' After a week or so, we were working together, and he forgot all about it."

On 'Washington'

Daily World-Atlanta, Ga.

7-20-44

Ensign Joseph Banks Williams of Maryland, first Negro to graduate from the U. S. Merchant Marine Cadet Corps, has been assigned to active duty on the S. S. Booker T. Washington, first Liberty ship named for an outstanding Negro American, the War Shipping Administration announced this week. (Official WAS Photo from OWI)

Mutiny

Officer at Mutiny Trial Calls 50 'Afraid to Work'

Survived Explosion, Balked at Again Loading Ammunition

By RODNEY GUILFOIL,
United Press Staff Correspondent.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 30.—Fifty Negro seamen, all survivors of the Port Chicago explosion that took 327 lives last July, refused to load ammunition at the Mare Island Navy Yard because they said "they were afraid," Cmdr. Joseph Tobin, USNR, testified at their court-martial.

The men, who are charged with mutiny, have been on trial for 15 days before a seven-man board of naval officers at Yerba Buena Island.

Cmdr. Tobin, a prosecution witness who was in charge of loading operations at the Mare Island depot, said that the 50 men refused to load a ship about to depart for the South Seas.

Some Returned to Work.

They were part of a group of 257 Negro sailors who refused to handle ammunition. The remaining 207 eventually returned to work.

Cmdr. Tobin said the incident occurred Aug. 9, about a month after two Liberty ships blew up in the harbor at Port Chicago.

The prosecution witness testified that some of the men said "they were afraid" and others simply refused to load the vessel. Some, however, said they were physically "too small to load ammunition" and they wanted "sea duty," Tobin said.

Lt. Ernest Delucchi, a division officer in charge of the loading platform at the depot, said there had been a general conspiracy to bring about the mutinous action. He said he had argued with the men when he became aware they were unwilling to load the cargo and finally said:

"Everyone who is going to work, stand over here by me."

All except four of the 50 moved over to his side, he added, but after he had returned from telephoning for orders on what to do with the four, all had moved back again.

Threatened with Violence.

Several of the men who testified as prosecution witnesses said they had signed an agreement to refuse to work and that those who said they would work anyway were threatened with violence.

Jack Crittenden, seaman second class, one of the accused, corroborated testimony of other witnesses for the defense that they never had received direct orders to load explosives. He said he was one of a crowd of men who signified they were willing to resume work after hearing a speech by Adm. C. H. Wright, 12th Naval District commandant, on Aug. 11 in which he reminded them of their duty.

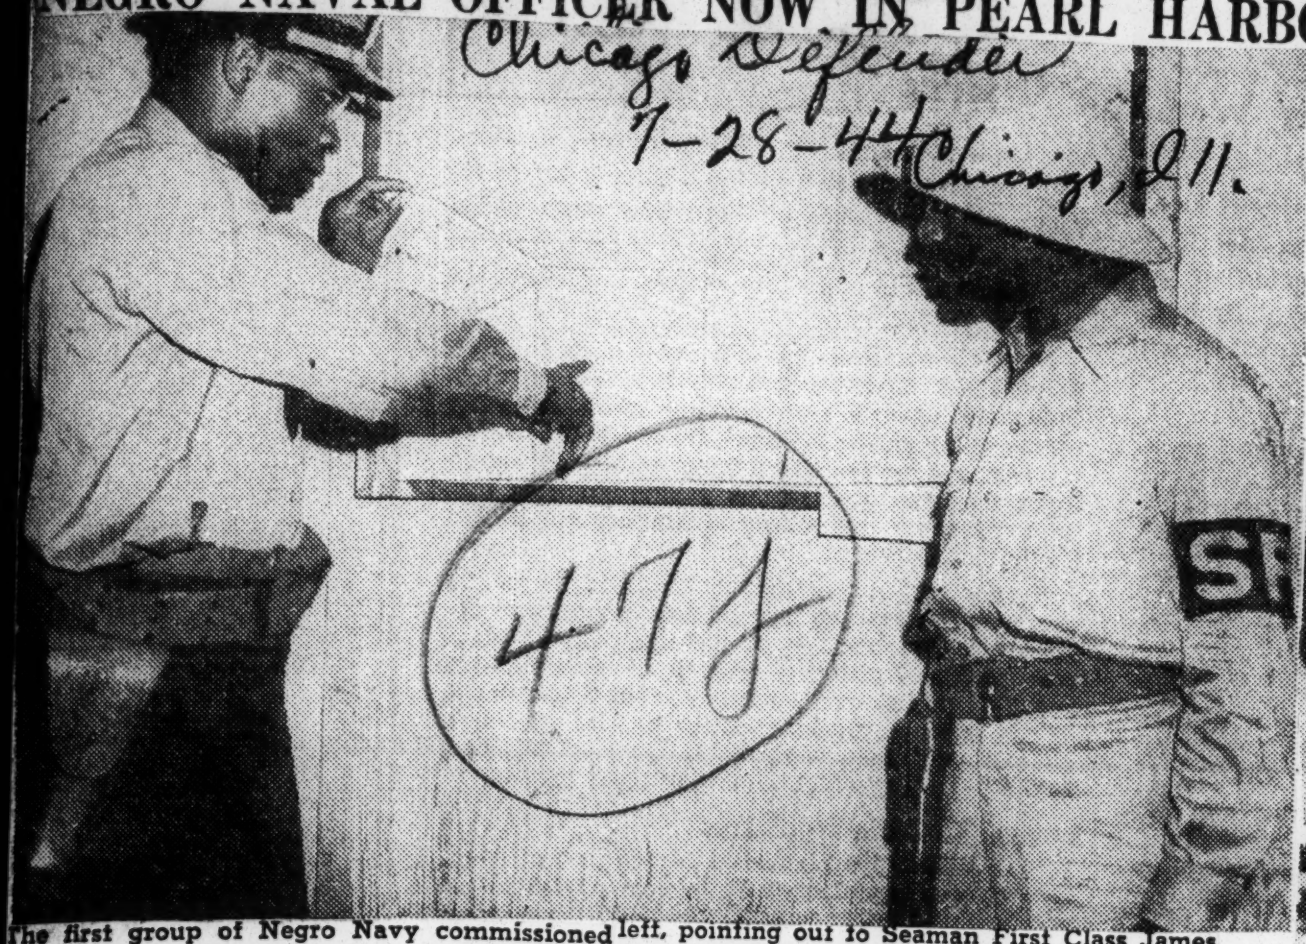
The trial of the 50 men marks the first trial for mutiny in this war and the first time so many persons have been tried at the same court-martial.

47j-1944

NEGRO NAVAL OFFICER NOW IN PEARL HARBOR

Chicago Defender
7-28-44 Chicago, Ill.

47j



The first group of Negro Navy commissioned officers to be assigned to duty outside of continental United States have arrived in Pearl Harbor. Hawaiian Territory and will serve in the fourteenth naval district. Ensign Jesse W. Arbor, a graduate of Arkansas State college and former tackle on the football team, is shown at left, pointing out to Seaman First Class James Gustus, Baltimore, Md., something important on the bulletin board. Ensign Arbor was among the first Negroes to be commissioned in the U. S. Naval Reserve at Great Lakes Naval Training Station, Illinois. He is 29 years old and has served on a mine sweeper before being commissioned.

21-Year-Old Steward's Mate Cited By Coast Guard For Downing Nazi Planes In Africa

Age—New York, N.Y.
8-12-44

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Coast Guard Headquarters this week hailed a new hero — a fighting steward's mate who took his crack at the enemy by downing one Junkers 88 during the Allied invasion of North Africa and assisting in the destruction of a second Nazi plane in the same engagement.

The fighting steward's mate was John R. Smith, 21-year-old former cook's helper of Cincinnati, Ohio. His exploit was confirmed this week by Lt. Comdr. J. W. Paine, who, at the time of the North African invasion, was serving as fire control officer on the famed U.S.S. Samuel Chase, Coast Guard-manned transport.

According to Commander Paine, Smith was manning a gun on the CHASE when the transport approached Algiers. Attacked by Nazi planes, the youth scored a direct hit, downing one Junkers 88, and then directed his fire towards a second plane, which also drew the fire of another gun crew before crashing into the ocean.

Discussing the engagement, the fire control officer said: 8-12-44

"The gun crews composed of Negro steward's mates were a revelation and cannot be praised too highly for their enthusiasm, alertness and proficiency. Apparently they also possess visual accuity in semi-dark conditions inasmuch as many of the attacks occurred during twilight, and the colored crews always detected and reported approaching enemy aircraft before the other crews, increasing considerably the possibility of a successful defense against such attacks."

The U. S. S. Samuel Chase, on which Smith was serving, is one of the most famous ships of this war. The Coast Guard-manned transport, which served as flagship in the Sicilian invasion, has paticipated in hundreds of actions. Because it has always landed all of its troops without the loss of a single man, it has been nicknamed the "U. S. S. Lucky."

8-12-44

In announcing Smith's achievement, the Coast Guard called attention to its current campaign for the volunteer enlistment of 1,700 Negro youths in the Steward's Mates Branch. These volunteers, like Smith will have a battle station.

Ship Named for Him
AFRO-American
Baltimore, Md.
1-6-45

WILLIAM COX, the first colored man in Georgia for whom a Liberty ship has been named and launched. A merchant seaman for more than twenty-five years, Cox, born in Cairo, Ga., lost his life when the SS David H. Atwater on which he was a fireman was sunk in 1942. His widow, Mrs. William Cox of Savannah, christened the SS William Cox.

ENSIGN COOPER
Sublett and Reagan both were in the first class to be trained at the Hampton Navy School reporting there in September 1942. While serving later as [illegible] officers, they were selected for officer training at Great [illegible], Ill. (Guide Photo by Pvt. Bernard Young Jr.)

THREE OF TWELVE Negro H. Downes, commander of the present at the time the above naval officers, first in the his- school. Left to right: Com- picture was made, is Ensign tory of the Navy, have been as- mander Downes, Ensign Frank George Clinton Cooper of Wash- signed to the Naval Training Ellis Sublett of Evanston, Ill., ington, N. C. (below). Prior to School at Hampton Institute, and Ensign John W. Reagan of entering the Navy, Ensign Va. Two of them (above) are Chicago, Ill. The third officer (Ohio) University and at being welcomed to their new Cooper taught at Wilberforce assignment by Commander E. assigned to Hampton, but not Hampton Institute. Ensign

47j-1944

Graduates of Radioman School at Great Lakes

No. 1—Left to right are Walter Lott, Chicago; Eddie James, Bronx, N.Y., and Roosevelt Smith, Edwards, Miss., three of the eleven graduated from the Radioman School at Great Lakes, Ill., and advanced from seaman second class to seaman first class during special exercises recently. No. 2—Alwan Griffith, New Bedford, Mass., who was presented a special certificate as honor man of his class with an average of 87.70 during the special exercises at Camp Robert Smalls. No. 3—Ralph Sears, Los Angeles. No. 4—Daniel Morgan, Youngstown, Ohio. No. 5—Ulysses Rodney, New Orelans. No. 6—Donald Johnson, Corapolis, Pa. Other graduates were Oliver Brown, New York City; Horace Walker, Brooklyn, N.Y.; Frank Armstrong, also of Brooklyn.

AFRO-AMERICAN Baltimore, Md.

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md. 8-19-44

Thousands of Army, Navy Men Reviewed

N. Y. National Guardsmen, Other Easterners Among Group Seen

By VINCENT TUBBS

HONOLULU--President Roosevelt, General MacArthur, Admiral Nimitz and many other high-ranking Army and Navy officers saw thousands of colored Army and Navy troops at work in review on this rugged island of Oahu during inspection intervals of their three-day conference July 26 to 29.

The President left the Hawaiian Islands indicating firm confidence in the ultimate defeat and unconditional surrender of Japan.

lined up along the route of the Presidential party's journey through historic Schofield barracks, tan yanks were among the thousands who stood rigidly at attention as their supreme commander drove through the camp grounds to the review field where he saw and addressed fighting verterans of the 7th Division who have beaten the Japs in battles from Attu to Kwajalein.

GREETINGS FROM HOME

Addressing his remarks to all in hearing distance he said in part:

"I want you to feel---at least in theory---that I am bringing each and every one greetings from his own home at this spot which, thank God, is still a part of the United States.

On the outer reaches of the parade grounds, hundreds of tan Yanks thrilled at the sound of the President's voice carried to them through loud speakers and waited patiently for a close glimpse of him as the party left the camp. Dividing his time between talks with top men of the armed forces, the President toured the multitudinous defenses of this island from giant Pearl Harbor to outposts high in the surrounding mountains. 8-19-44

New Yorkers in Group

Crack troops of a famous New York National Guard unit, veteran chemical warfare troops, seasoned engineers and hundreds of others lined the highways near their camps to render the highest military courtesy to the supreme commander-in-chief.

"We didn't really see him," Pfc. Williams Breckham, Pvt. Robert Ham and T/4 Warern Peterson, New Yorkers, said. "We can't look to left or right when at attention, our guns were slung over our left shoulders and we saluted with our right hand. The car went past so fast we couldn't really see who was in it but we know it was the Presid[illegible] all right."

Oth[illegible] who, more fortunate[illegible] feast[illegible] their eyes hungrily the big chief, included Cpl. Ja[illegible]s Caldwell, AFRO scribe, who has resided here since 1929 and is now a member of a chemical warfare unit; Pvt. Charles Edmondson, 1306 Madison Avenue; Sgts. Ohara Rice, 1025 Arlington Avenue; Timothy Harris, 1202 N. Central Avenue, Baltimore; and Cpl. James Gibson, 2213 First Street, Northwest; Cpl. Clarence Morgan, 2803 Eleventh Street, Northwest, and Sgt. Edward Wright, 5 K Street, Northeast, Washington.

Officers Present

Capt. Leroy Roache, 1711 Euclid Street, Northwest: First Lt. John Posey, 916 French Street, Northwest, Washington, company commanders in an engineer outfit, were others along with Lt. Roslyn Henley, 4236 S. Dakota, Washington; Lt. Sam Norton, East Orange, N.J.; Lt. Brooklyn McMillian, Newark, and Capt. John Woodruff, Connellsville, Pa., of the crack NYC ack-ack unit, who put their troops through courtesy paces as the President looked them over. 8-19-4[illegible]

Key figures in the President's war strategy talks were Genera[illegible] MacArthur, SWPA commande[illegible] who, in coming here, saw th[illegible] President for the first time si[illegible] the beginning of the war; Admiral Chester Nimitz, commander of the Pacific fleet; Admiral William Halsey, commander of the Third Fleet, and Lt. Gen. Robert Richardson, commander of the Army forces in the Central Pacific.

Confidence Expressed

In a press conference before leaving the island, the President said that the conference and inspections here were extremely successful and that plans for future operations leave him more confident than ever about the outcome of the Pacific war.

An interesting sidelight on the Chief Executive's visit, which was doubtless a closely guarded secret in the States, is that it was as well known as the shining sun here. Crowds lined the streets for hours during each day and cheered wildly.

However, censors were so strict that a person on the adjoining island of Molokai could not have known of his presence here until security premitted the current release of stories.

Negroes Manning U.S. Navy Ships

Amsterdam News
New York, N.Y.

11-25-44

In Pacific Area

By HARRY McALPIN

WASHINGTON, (NNPA) — The Pacific [illegible] possibility that Negro-manned ships are participating in the great naval battle of the Pacific around the Philippine Islands came to light when the Navy Department announced belatedly last week that cargo ships, oilers, and miscellaneous vessels, since August 9, the Navy began to assign Negroes in general service to [illegible] part, partially, 25 large auxiliary [illegible] vessels. Most of these ships, the Navy says, are in combat areas, and substantially all of the fleet trained in the Pacific.

these vessels, say[illegible] petty officers assigned to non-rated men have been assigned to the vessels too.

The latest figures of the number of Negroes in the Navy show 148,749 enlisted men and 22 commissioned officers as of September 30, 1944.

Among them are [illegible] coxwains, gunners mates, quarter[illegible] carpenter's mates, yeomen, [illegible] machinist mates, radic men, sound [illegible] electrician mates, and shipfit[illegible] ratings, a proportionate number of graduates of class A ser[illegible] who have been trained for advancement to petty officer [illegible] vice schools who operate the ship[illegible] ships, machinist mates, electrician [illegible] ships. Beside

Questions Arise On WAVE Policy After Announced Recruitment Cut

What the future of the Negro woman in the WAVES will be, now that three have already joined the corps, is a question on the minds of many. Announcements following their news of their acceptance indicate that the Navy has ordered sharp cutbacks in the recruitment program. Capt. Mildred Manfee, highest ranking officer of the group, has been quoted as saying that they will enjoy whatever degree of integration "local conditions indicate."

Only 500

As of Dec. 1 not more than 500 recruits a month will be accepted. The present rate has been closer to 4,000 a month, a press officer explained. The announcement of the acceptance of Negro women Capt. McAfee explained that it was done because there is actually work for them to do.

The women will be trained in the same school although it is not clear at the moment whether or not it will be Hunter college in New York. Plans in general for WAVE training are in the midst of being changed, it was pointed out.

On Segregation

Asked about segregation in sleeping quarters, Capt. McAfee said, "The Navy is making no statement about how it is going to administer its own internal program. It is definitedly assumed the people are coming in withour discrimination but whether or not the particular procedure happens to put Negroes thogether in one place is something else the Navy is not going to make any definite comment on its actions.

They will, however, be trained in the same classes, she added.

At the moment applications for commissions are being received from Negro women, and other enlistments will begin about Jan. 1. These are being processed in the "usual way" it was said. Miss McAfee was evasive in some of her answers to questions regarding segregation, but it was made apparent that local conditions rating and job qualifications were to determine assignment upon completion of training.

Amsterdam News, N. Y. C. 11-25-44

47j-1944

Mixed Crew On USS Mason Made Good The Hard Way, Says Writer

Journal + Guide — Norfolk, Va.
10-7-44

By THOMAS W. YOUNG
Guide War Correspondent
(Copyright. Reproduction Forbidden.)

ABOARD THE USS MASON AT SEA—(Delayed)—The crew of the USS Mason, with no special talent for demonstrating that the two races can work and live and fight together harmoniously and effectively, is doing a surprisingly good job of showing that the principles of democracy can work at home as well as abroad.

It appears obvious that the Navy chose the men to run this ship solely for their abilities to man a destroyer escort in its ceaseless pursuit of enemy submarines. The officers are well trained, some of them seasoned two years or more of sea duty.

But they have no peculiar aptitude for wrestling with sociological problems such as the one which made necessary a separate warship for Tan Yanks in Navy Blue to do their fighting on. Yet that very circumstance may turn out to be the best thing that ever happened to the USS Mason. 10-7-44

For if this mixed crew, chosen in a routine way without regard to background, environment or attitudes on the race question, makes a success of this effort, then it will follow that any other mixed crew the Navy might wish to get together will certainly do no worse.

The officers' home towns dot the map of the U. S. from border to border and coast to coast. They hail from Connecticut and Washington, North Dakota and Pennsylvania, Texas and Iowa, Massachusetts and Virginia and Illinois. 10-7-44

CHANCE TO DECLINE

But when the enlisted men size up their officers —as soldiers and sailors inevitably do— the southerners stand high on their list of all-right guys.

Among the white enlisted men we find a chief radioman from New Orleans, La., electrician's mates from Oklahoma and Kentucky, a storekeeper from North Carolina, a gunner's mate from Kansas and a chief motor machinist's mate from Alabama assigned to the Mason because of their longer training and combat experience to help season the Negro Bluejackets. 10-7-44

This mixed array of Americana gets along excellently well and makes an effective fighting team. And most of these officers and men were told before they went aboard what kind of an assignment it was, and were given the opportunity to decline it. Only two or three did.

An inspiring example of what this warship and others like it can do to promote the principles we are fighting for is the team of Paul F. Clotts and Charles T. Kelly, one white and the other colored. Their responsibility is maintenance and repair of all communications equipment. 10-7-44

Clotts is from Cleveland, Kelly from Chicago. Both are superb technicians, intelligent, methodical, tireless. Clotts, particularly, is a wizard at diagnosing and correcting troubles in this equipment. They work together as a team and during spare moments study together (see cut).

One day early in this cruise I came across the two of them feverishly working on one of the anti-submarine devices with its intrals laid bare. Their minds were on the job so they didn't see me making preparations to take their picture. 10-7-44

Flash! A brilliant light momentarily lit up the room for my picture as the flashbulb "exploded." It was totally unexpected by Clotts and Kelly as they probed among the maze of wires and electrical connections. I suspect their reaction was considerably more violent than that of the average person who, while installing a new fuse at home, hears the sharp crack of current jumping across space.

Cold beads of perspiration rolled down their faces as they looked at each other, probably asking themselves just how many thousand volts they escaped that time. When their glance fell on me and my camera, I imagine I looked a little sheepish and apologetic.

RADIO "HAM" 10-7-44

"Phew!" they both said at the same time and went back to work hesitantly and cautiously. After that I always gave a warning before shooting off flashbulbs around men working on electrical gadgets.

Kelly was an electrician by trade around Harrisburg, a suburb of Chicago. So many people asked him to fix their radios when he came to install lights and wires that he decided it might make a good business. In no time at all he was up to his neck in it.

And in due course he became inevitably a radio "ham" with an amateur's license. Then he got a job as operator for a local radio station and was doing right well when the Japs attacked Pearl Harbor.

Two days later, on December 9, Kelly went to the nearest Naval recruiting office to offer his services to his country. His patriotism was rewarded with the frank announcement that there was no place in the Navy for him except in the messmen's branch. 10-7-44

Kelly thanked them and said he'd come back if they ever had a job for him along his line of work. He did come back, almost the same day, the Navy announced it would begin training Negroes in other branches of the service.

Any man that anxious to serve his country was a dead ringer for the Mason crew. And here he is, throwing punches with both hands.

Journal + Guide — Norfolk, Va.
10-7-44

10-7-44

MIXED TEAMS—Radio technicians Paul F. Clotts, white, and Charles T. Kelly (above) study latest data on intricate communications equipment during maiden combat cruise of the USS Mason. At left are Thomas J. Kea, fireman 1c, Chicago, and Marion L. Holland, white, Tulsa, Oklahoma, electrician's mate 1c, shown during leisure moment of Mason's trip. Kea's father, a physician serving in the Medical Corps, was killed in action at Salerno. Holland had been in six major engagements during his 22 months in the Pacific before joining the Mason crew. (Exclusive photos by Journal and Guide war correspondent).

Navy Will Use More Negroes

Courier — Pittsburgh, Pa.
4-1-44

SAN FRANCISCO—In this city to study with naval district commanders, the more effective use of Negro personnel, Commander E. H. Downs said the U. S. Navy plans a substantial increase in the number of Negroes assigned for special preparation at the naval training school at Hampton institute, which he commands, and will draw from its enlisted personnel for commissioning of colored ensigns.

"All ratings open to white personnel are open equally to colored personnel with advancement in rate dependent on ability to meet the standard Navy tests," Commander Downs also said.

Coast Newspaper Says Mutiny Case Too Harsh

The Peoples Voice — N.Y. N.Y.
12-2-44

SAN FRANCISCO—An editorial, clearly expressing disapproval of the severity of sentences imposed on the 50 Negro seamen charged with mutiny for failure to load ammunition at the Mare Island depot last August 9, appeared in the Nov. 2 issue of the San Francisco Chronicle: "We have been mulling this matter over for several days. We have been thinking about the real nature of fear. Fear is not a crime. Fear can in some circumstances have the effect of a crime and in some grave circumstances must be punished as a crime.

"These Negroes who refused to load the munitions ships following the Port Chicago disaster were not plainly overcome by fear. They were not persuaded except to the extent that their fear overcame whatever responsibility they had.

"Considering then that fear and Thoroughly convinced of the innocence of these men, the NAACP through its special counsel, Thurgood Marshall, has requested opportunity to file a brief and appear personally when the case is referred to the Judge Advocate General's division of the Navy Department for review in wartime, Washington.

Attorney Marshall will also file a brief and appear personally when the case is referred to the Judge Advocate General's division of the Navy Department for review in wartime, Washington.

12-2-44

Navy Reviews 19 Negroes' 'Undesirable' Discharges

Case Involves Men Called Unfit At Trinidad 'Jim Crow' Seabee Base

By CHARLES A. MICHIE
PM's Bureau

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—A five-man Navy Board of Dismissals and Discharges is sweating gently in Temporary Navy Building No. 2. It has on its hands one of the hottest racial issues of World War II.

Before the GI Bill of Rights became law, the Navy dismissed with "undesirable" discharges 19 Seebees. Arthur Garfield Hays, Seabees, for reasons which have counsel for the Civil Liberties not yet become clear. The 19 sea- Union, is appearing for the seamen. men, all Negroes, were given "yel- All four reiterated the facts that low" discharges, denoting "unfit- they had been invited to the CO's ness" and "ineptitude," after they office and spoke only when asked attended an "off the record" meet- questions.

ing in their commanding officer's quarters in Trinidad. They are petitioning for honorable discharges.

The story is this:

Eleven of the men were requested to come to the office of Comdr. James Cantey, Jr., and told to unburden themselves of any gripes they had on their chests. They complained in mild fashion about the slowness of promotions for Negroes and the fact that leaves were few and far between.

Segregation

There was no complaint about segregation, although facilities for whites and Negroes were marked in a manner understood only by the men in the camp. Negro witnesses said they knew they were not welcome where the sign said "first class and chiefs" although they knew these facilities were patronized by white enlisted men. They went to the portals marked "enlisted men." Nor did they object to the arrangement, they said.

In Cantey's office, they said, they were queried about their troubles—in a camp of 800 Negroes and 200 whites. They did not speak up until questioned, Isaac G. McNatt, 27, told the Navy board. This is described in the bill of particulars of the Navy as "a seditious meeting." The men who were given "undesirable" discharges "without honor" — not so severe as a dishonorable discharge — are petitioning for honorable discharges. McNatt claims it may mean the difference between acceptance and non-acceptance by the New York Bar Assn. and another petitioner fears for his medical degree

Case Outlined

Four Negroes went on the stand at the hearing after the Navy had outlined its case for dismissal of the

"What makes it tough for the Navy Board is that if it reverses the decision of the naval commander in the Trinidad area they will have hundreds of similar cases on their hands. If they find against the petitioners in the current case they will be in even worse shape, because evidence yesterday fails in every respect to measure up to even the broad outlines of the clause in the Naval Manual under which they were dismissed.

The "Bill of Particulars" charges that the men:

¶ Participated in seditious meetings.

¶ Refused to obey orders.

¶ Gave vent to outspoken radical

¶ Used inciting tactics in handling groups of men.

¶ Attempted sit-down strikes.

¶ Threatened sabotage.

Flat denials met all charges. When the men were asked to come to the CO's office they were told that the "best educated men" in camp were being summoned.

Two of those discharged had rather lurid records. The rest had "no offenses for which they had been punished."

At the first meeting, Oct. 26, 1943, Cantey listened to the complaints of his men. A day later, the same men listened to the comments of an unnamed regimental commander who said he wouldn't have any of "these petty gripes" under his command. Cantey did not rise to say he had invited the men to air their grievances during the poration of the regimental commander, according to the evidence

Bawled Out

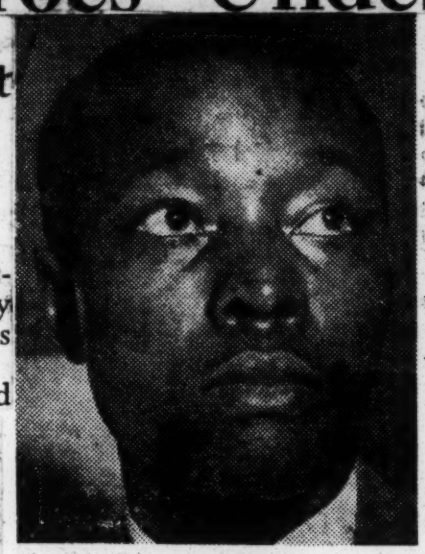
At the first meeting the chaplain of the camp in Trinidad—where the boys were building an air-strip and other facilities—was empowered to form an inter-racial committee to iron out differences. This the anonymous regimental commander objected to. He "bawled them out" for "forming committees and attending conferences," McNatt told the board.

Every one of the Negroes who attended the meeting in Cantey's office was dismissed with either "inaptitude" or "unfitness" discharges. Both bar the men from civil service employment and many other jobs. The fact they were in the "brig" in New York before getting their discharge papers doesn't help, either.

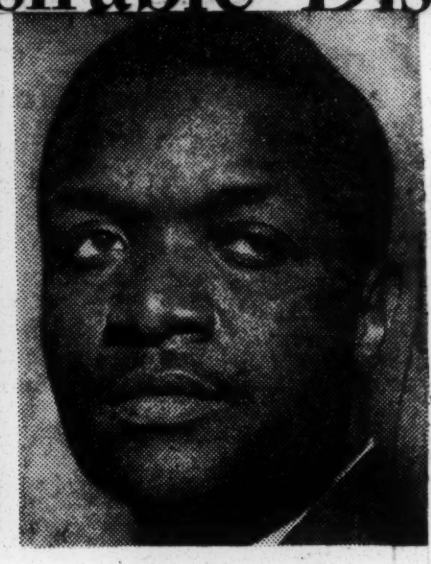
Harvey Steele, Clarence O. Clarke, and Robert Louis Mills told the same story as McNatt. They were invited to the meeting and they were not guilty of any of the other charges of disobedience, "inciting" tactics with groups of men or to sabotage attempts or sit-down strikes. None of them ever heard of attempted sabotage or sit-down strikes, they told the board.

Mills didn't even know there was any trouble until he was told to pack, he said. He didn't even attend the "seditious" meeting in the CO's office. He said he didn't fail to "adapt himself to the military way of life"—a blanket charge against the dismissed Seabees.

Capt. Anton B. Anderson, chairman of the board, said in a preliminary statement that after evidence had been taken it would require two or three weeks before a decision could be expected.



Isaac McNutt



Harvey Steele

Democracy in Command Performance at Hampton

Afro American — Baltimore, Md.
5-13-44

Commander Says "I Want My Men to Be Part of the Team (U.S. Navy) Not Apart from It"

By FRANK E. BOLDEN
NNPA Correspondent

HAMPTON, Va. —We have long sought the "cup of the Holy Grail" in the navy. A reasonable facsimile exists here at the United States Naval Training School on the campus of Hampton Institute. I saw democracy give a command performance.

The school is one of the two Class A service schools — the other being at Great Lakes — where colored candidates with special aptitudes and skill along mechanical and technical lines receive advanced training in electricity, forging and welding, Diesel engineering, carpentry, shipfitting, coxwain's duties and as cooks and bakers.

Nowhere else in the navy can colored coxwains be trained.

Under the command of Capt. E. H. Downes, USNR, of Dover, Del., who bears a striking resemblance to Thomas Mitchell and Pat O'Brien of cinematic fame, this unit of the training program of the navy bids fair to answer many questions regarding the integration of colored men into this branch of the service.

Not Considered "Colored"

Here, the trainees are not considered as colored sailors, but as sailors of the United States Navy. Said Commander Downes: "I want my men to be part of the team and not apart from it." The motto of this naval base is "Competency gains respect" and by this means the men in training hope to prove that they do belong.

Graduates of the school are strikers (working towards) for ratings as petty officers, but some of them hold this rating on leaving the school. 5-13-44

In this category are: Berkley D. Williams, MoMM 1/c (motor machinist's mate-first class) of Washington, D.C., who is skilled in both the Diesel and electrical fields, and 28-year-old Joseph W. Gilliard, M 1/c (metalsmith) of Greenville, S.C.

Gilliard started the first ceramic class at his alma mater, Hampton, and is now in charge of the model shop — his products now being used by many other naval training schools and large industrial concerns throughout the country — where visual aid models are made for use in the courses of instruction.

Others, like James S. Barham, Csp (T) of Graham, N.C., and a Hampton grad, now instructing in shipfitting, received their petty officer's ratings when they volunteered for military service.

School Opened in 1942

The school was officially opened September 12, 1942, with a beginning class of 128. Since that time some 2,500 have graduated and are now giving their services in our great two-ocean navy. Attending the school at the present time are 800 trainees. As each class graduates a new one enters. Numerous letters from officers have been forwarded to the command here attesting to the competence of the men who were trained at this base. Five of the ment usually find assignments elsewhere.

Yes, here is one spot in the navy where democracy is not a rumor. It is working fine — and below the Mason-Dixon Line.

Hampton men are proud of their training and are looking forward to doing their share for victory.

few weeks, white officers command colored personnel here for indoctrination, "the proper way," and to themselves with the way men respond to demo- eatment.

mmand does not tolerate o exercise opposite ideas ubject. Those who do sure up to this require-recently commissioned colored en- about 4 per cent out of each class. signs are Hampton N.T.S. prod- Sixteen weeks are required to ucts. complete the course. In practi-

Those assigned here either pos- cal work it is equivalent to that sess high educational qualifica- of two years in the average col- tions or practical experience lege, more emphasis being placed gained in civilian life. In gen- upon practical work than upon eral, they hail from sections of the theory. The curricula has been country where educational standards are relatively high. The essentials. percentage of failures averages,

Americanizes White Men — not measure

4 47j-1944

Powell Is Second Of Race Made A Warrant Officer

Journal + Guide — Norfolk, Va.
6-17-44

GREAT LAKES, Ill. — Warrant Pay Clerk Willie Powell, the second Negro to be appointed a warrant officer has reported to Great Lakes Training Center for duty. Powell, who is forty-four years of age, and has served more than twenty-three years in the Navy was at sea when the first group of Negro officers was appointed. He is the only Negro regular Navy man who has been appointed.

This veteran Navy man, a native of Cordova, Tenn., was raised in St. Louis where he first enlisted in the Navy as mess-attendant, during the first World War. He was assigned to service on the Panaman, a merchant marine ship transporting troops.

After a short tenure of service on the Panaman he was advanced in rate to ship's cook, second class; he held this rating when he was transferred to the destroyer U. S. S. St. Clair carrying troops to France.

He served aboard the St. Clair and the destroyer Yarbrough during his second hitch, in the Navy and earned the rating of ship's cook, first class. His third enlistment sent him to the Asiatic Fleet where he served until 1932.

6-17-44

MADE CHIEF STEWARD

From 1932 until 1935 he was in the Yangtze River Patrol serving his fourth hitch. Upon returning to the states in 1935 he was made chief commissary steward and placed in charge of the experimental shop and classroom of the cooks and bakers school at San Diego, Calif.

After serving in this capacity for three years he was assigned to the Light Cruiser U. S. S. Cincinnati and was subsequently transferred to the Fleet Reserve after 20 years and five months service.

Powell was recalled from the Fleet Reserve for action in World War II early in 1941 and assigned for duty aboard a troop transport. He was in the North African invasion and was under continuous fire during landings at Dakar, Oran and Casablanca.

When notified of his appointment as a warrant officer he

6-17-44

W. O. WILLIE POWELL was in the South Pacific area transporting troops to New Guinea war zones. He reported to Great Lakes on May 24, 1944 to be sworn in the following day for temporary duty at this station.

6-17-44

Warrant Officer Powell has the Good Conduct Medal, World War 1 Victory Medal, and battle stripes for three major engagements in World War II. His present duty assignment is assistant to the commissary officer, in charge of the 14th Regiment General Mess.

50 Navy Negroes Jailed for Mutiny

Leader Enquirer
Columbus, Ga.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 18—(AP) Initial sentences of imprisonment for 15 years were imposed on 50 Navy enlisted men convicted on one specification of mutiny for refusing to load ammunition, 12th Naval District Headquarters announced today.

Rear Adm. Sarleton H. Wright, USN, commandant of the district, ruled however, that mitigating circumstances in some cases justified reduction of the sentence to eight years.

11-19-44

All the men are Negroes. Their court martial was held at Yerba Buena Island, San Francisco Bay, last month.

Partially Man Large Vessels

Daily World — Atlanta, Ga.
10-5-44

WASHINGTON — (ANP) — A large number of Negroes serving outside of the category of mess attendants are participating in the naval action in the Philippines, it became known here on Friday with the announcement by the navy department that on August 9, the navy began assigning Negroes in general service to man partially 25 large auxiliary vessels.

"Most of these ships are now in combat areas as part of the fleet train in the Pacific," the official announcement said. "Approximately 500 Negroes are currently assigned to these ships, both as petty officers and non-rated men."

The 25 vessels of the following type: store ships, ammunition ships, cargo ships, oilers, and miscellaneous auxiliaries. Petty officers assigned to these vessels include substantially all ratings required to operate the ship among them coxswains, gunner's mates, quartermasters, store keepers, carpenter's mates, yeomen, machinist's mates, radiomen, soundmen, electrician's mates, ship-fitters.

This is the first statement from the navy department that Negroes who have been trained for various skills have been given an opportunity to perform duties in line with their training. As far as had been known, graduates of the Great Lakes Training School near Chicago had been assigned to port installations.

10-5-44

When a check of the names of the Port Chicago disaster was made, it was found that out of the more than 200 seaman killed, large number of them were men with other than general service ratings.

The recent announcement said that besides graduates of Class "A" service schools who have been trained for advancement to petty officer ratings, a proportionate number of non-rated men have been assigned to the vessels listed.

Navy Puts Negro Sailors On 25 Combat Vessels

Defender — Chicago, Ill.
11-4-44

WASHINGTON, D. C. (NNPA) —The possibility that Negro-manned ships joined in the great naval battle of the Pacific around the Philippine Islands came to light when the Navy Department announced last week that since August 9, the Navy began to assign Negroes in general combat service to man partially 25 large auxiliary vessels.

Most of these ships, the Navy says, are in combat areas, and part of the fleet trained in the Pacific.

Approximately 500 Negroes are currently assigned to these ships both petty officers and non-rated men. The 25 ships are of the type of store ships, ammunition ships, cargo ships, oilers, and miscellaneous auxiliaries.

The petty officers assigned to these vessels, says the Navy, include substantially all ratings required to operate the ship. Among them are coxswains, gunner's mates, quartermasters, carpenter's mates, yeomen, machinist mates, radio men, sound men, electrician mates, and shipfitters.

11-4-44

Beside graduates of class A service schools who have been trained for advancement to petty officer ratings, a proportionate number of non-rated men have been assigned to the vessels too.

The latest figures of the number of Negroes in the Navy show 148,749 enlisted men and 22 commissioned officers as of September 30, 1944.

Booker T.'s Mate Afro American Made 4th Captain

Baltimore, Md.

NEW YORK—The fourth colored man to win a master's license and the fourth given command of an American war vessel, Capt. Clifton Lastic this week was placed in command of the S.S. Bert Williams, which was launched recently.

12-16-44

Formerly chief mate of the Booker T. Washington under Capt. Hugh Mulzac, Captain Lastic, a native of the British West Indies, has spent thirty of his forty-four years at sea.

Naturalized in 1937

The captain, who served on British vessels during World War I and in the years until 1937, when he became an American citizen, served fro several years on one of the three ships operated by the City of New York.

An old friend of Captain Mulzac, having sailed with him in 1920, Captain Lastic made seven trips with the Booker T., including the maiden voyage. Starting as second mate, he was chief mate when the ship separated from its convoy and arrived in port two days ahead of it.

Eighteen Men Graduated From Aviation Metalsmith School

Atlanta, Ga. Daily World
12-12-44

GREAT LAKES, Ill.—Nov. 23 — Eighteen men were graduated from the Aviation Metalsmith School, Camp Robert Smalls, of the U. S. Naval Training Center, Great Lakes, Ill., when a special graduation was held in advance of the bi-monthly ceremonies to enable the men to go to their posts ahead of schedule. Eugene R. Moore, Oklahoma City, Okla., was the honor graduate, leading his class with an average of 90.42. The honor man and two others were advanced in rating from Seaman, Second Class, to Aviation Metalsmith, Third Class, and the remaining men were advanced to Seaman, First Class.

Lt. Comdr. R. C. Cline, Education and Information officer of the Service School Command, was the principal speaker. He told the men they were to be congratulated for three reasons, first: because they are the Navy's best, in that only one man in three who finished Recruit Training has the aptitude and ability to qualify for Service School; second, the field is not only fascinating but most necessary to the prosecution of the war, and, thirdly, this field will offer an opportunity for work after the war. He told the men that they would soon join their shipmates who by their efficiency and morale had paved the way for them. This

Navy Bars Negro Defender — Chicago, Ill. Nurses; Needs 500

2-3-44

WASHINGTON — (ANP) — "The 217 are on duty with the army, the services continually maintain representative said. This condition ey need nurses, yet we get exists in spite of the fact that "thou- of refusal back constantly," sands of qualified Negro nurses are Charlotte May, of the Na available."

Qualified Negro nurses are barred from navy nurse corps and only tional Association of Colored Graduate Nurses told the Senate education and labor sub-committee Thursday.

The American Red Cross on the same night issued a call for 4,000 additional nurses in September. Basil O'Connor, Red Cross chairman, explained that the navy will continue to recruit 500 nurses each month while the army during the month of September alone, will endeavor to get an added 4,000 nurses.

I Was A Seabee

Age - New York N.Y.

(Reprinted from "Politic")
By ISAAC McNATT

PART II

7-8-44

Life on Shipboard

Aboard ship, we were quartered according to rating. This resulted in one or two incidents. The captain of the ship was told that first-class petty officers and chiefs would go into one hold and lower ratings into the others. He probably realized this was our particular "Navy" way, but ordered the lists made up accordingly. As a result, the three or four white yeomen below first-class were quartered with the Negroes and the Negro first class steward was quartered with the whites. While the white yeomen soon found reason to be transferred to the other hole without trouble the steward was threatened with immediate bodily harm if he didn't "get outa here".

Whereas at the base we had been accustomed to two chow halls, here there was only one. Consequently, all whites, those in other units aboard ship being influenced by the conduct of the whites in ours, lined up and ate first. We ate last. For the first two meals, several of our fellows didn't get any food at all, as it ran out before all were served. From then on, they always got something, though it frequently was not what the first through the line got. On two or three occasions when chicken was served, the last one through got, not even the neck of the chicken, but whatever was handy to the cooks.

7-8-44

During the day, most of the troop passengers had no regular duty except for short intervals. Therefore, we lined the rails watching the waves, the horizon, and other ships in the convoy. The second day out at sea, a long line was stretched across the ship, from the port to the starboard side. From it dangled pasteboard signs. They read: "Only first-class men and chiefs forward of this line". This meant that all Negroes were restricted to the rear of the ship, even up on the main deck. Who was responsible for the sign? The crew members didn't know, said they had never seen any such signs before, and if their ship was beginning such practices, they would resign from the Merchant Marine when they returned home, or at least get a transfer. One or two of our officers were approached on the subject. "This is an Army transport," they said, "must be an Army custom." The Army chaplain was approached. He knew nothing of it. Finally, after our Commanding Officer was approached, the sign was removed. Great cheers went up from the fellows.

7-8-44

At last we were overseas, disembarking at our Carribean base. We settled in a reception center while we began to build our own quarters preparatory to our main task.

At the Caribbean Base:
3 Chow lines

Buildings went up and roads took shape where there had been mud, jungle, and morass. Constant tropical storms vied with intense heat to make the work more difficult. Instead of coming back to the base for meals, the fellows all ate at a nearby naval air station. For the first two or three meals, they filed into the chow hall in the order in which they happened to get in line. The second day, the Negroes, who did all the actual work while the whites supervised, were ordered to stand aside and let the whites eat first.

7-8-44

After this had happened once or twice, the Negroes found that they had to stand in line during the entire lunch hour, never having a chance to rest, while the white fellows had half an hour in which to relax. The fellows refused to eat. A high officer of the base intervened and asked one of our officers why he followed such a policy. He replied that such were his orders. However they worked out a policy whereby the Negroes ate in a separate line, and the whites in our unit lined up with the crew members of the station, all white. But the station crew were so displeased at the attitude assumed by our whites that they refused to eat with them. As a result, three chow lines were formed, one for us, one for he station crew, and one for our superior whites.

When living quarters were completed, all of us moved into them, with the same patterns of segregation we had followed back in the States. For the first time since boot days, we were separate from all other naval units, with our own Ship's Service Store, our own recreation buildings. For the first time since boot days, too, a sign went up in the ship's service. This time, instead of saying, "Colored and White" as in boot days, it said: "This line for enlisted men".

7-8-44

No one, however, was fooled. Everyone knew what was meant, for even chiefs and first-class men are enlisted men. Also, the handful of whites who were below first class rating always fell into the first-class line. The sign this time was no hastily scrawled pasteboard affair, but was prettily painted in bold red letters against a white background. A Negro guard was posted to see that this sign was adhered to.

For the first week the store was in operation, the "enlisted men" refused to buy cokes and beers there. Instead, they went to the nearby air station or to the Army PX where it was a case of first come, first served. When the Supply Officer at the N.A.S. was threatened with a beer shortage, he asked our fellows why they didn't buy beer at their own store. The answer he got was that we didn't have any beer. Upon investigation, he discovered that not only was there plenty of beer at our store but that his helpers had been trying to borrow beer from it to replenish his rapidly declining reservoir.

Toward the end of the week, we noticed two or three strange "gold-braids" inspecting our ship store. On Saturday the two pretty signs disappeared, and our fellows discovered that there was some beer in our Ship's Store, after all.

7-8-44

Negro Marines At Camp Lejeune Learn New Aquatic Training

Age - New York N.Y.

12-23-44

CAMP LEJEUNE, N. C. — Not by mere chance are fighting Marines amphibious. Not by accident are they able to retain under hostile conditions at sea that measure of cool, level-headedness essential to ampibious warfare. Such efficiency comes only through training Montford Point's new aquatic training program for Negro Marines is dedicated to that purpose. The objective of the course is to develop the amphibious military efficiency of the individual by training him quickly to keep afloat and to swim satisfactory distances under adverse conditions — as a result, reducing mass panic and loss of life at sea.

Minimum requirement for personnel of Fleet Marine Force units is the ability to swim 200 yards; and, in addition, satisfactory completion of a course of at least five hours in combat swimming. This covers instruction in methods of swimming in oil and debris, the use of clothing and inflated life rafts as aids, handling of packs and weapons in water, and the correct procedure to be followed in abandoning ship.

The Marine learns a side stroke which enables him, without becoming panicky, to calmly administer necessary self-aid. He is able to massage the pain-ridden leg, or exercise the knotting muscles of an arm.

12-23-44

He develops skill in swimming backwards, treading water. In so doing, he keeps his head above water. Thus he has a good view of what happens around him. In addition, he clasps his hands back of his head, fingers at the base of the skull. In this position, he wards off shock from explosions to his stomach muscles, which are weaker than the back sinews.

Skill and cool-headedness are necessary to survive when swimming in a sea lashed by heavy breakers. The final stage of the combat swimming course covers surf swimming. In this stage of training, Marines learn how to swim in breakers, how to meet swift currents, what to do when there is a coral, and what distance to swim, if at night, from comrades. Throughout this stage of instruction, "leathernecks" become used to swimming with arms and ammunition.

12-23-44

One hundred and sixty-nine years of brilliant fighting tradition established on land and at sea is back of the Marine Corps unrivaled fighting achievement through training of every individual member from the advancing "boots" to the courageous, trained "Devil Dog" who has had his baptism of fire in the assault wave that storms the beach. Each individual under combat instruction knows that there is a sound motive for the Marine Corps' elaborate preparation for training, for each phase of the rugged training itself. He knows that there is an over-all reason for requiring him to learn the art of combat swimming. He realizes that it is a step taken to prepare him and the organization he serves with to be numbered among the finest amphibious warriors to charge the enemy.

Lt. Sidat-Singh Memorial is Set For May 7th

Amsterdam News N.Y.

Famed Athlete and Flyer To Be Honored at Center

4-22-44

On May 7 at 3:30 p.m. the Harlem Defense Recreation Center will hold - memorial service for the late Lt. Wilmeth Sidat-Singh.

Lt. Sidat-Singh, former star athlete of Syracuse University was attending Howard University Medical School when the United States declared war. He enlisted and was assigned to the Tuskegee Flying School where he received a commission as 2nd Lieutenant in the United States Army Air Corps. He was assigned to the 332nd Fighter Squadron, all Negro fighter group commanded by Lt. Col. Benjamin D. Davis at Selfridge Field, Mich.

While on a routine training flight, Lt. Sidat-Singh's plane developed engine trouble over a lake. Although he was considered an expert swimmer, it is believed he became entangled in his parachute when he hit the water and was drowned.

Ludlow Werner, editor of the New York Age, and a member of the board of managers of the Center is chairman of the memorial services which will be held in front of the Center on Seventh Avenue and will be broadcast.

Outstanding personalities will include Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia, Ossia Solem, coach of Syracuse University, Douglas G. Hertz, sports promoter, Eyre Saitch, former captain of the Rennaissance basketball team, Miss Dorothy Maynor, the "Winged Victory" chorus, directed by Lt. Leonard DePaur, and the Coast Guard Quartet. A plaque will be presented to Mrs. Sidat-Singh by Mrs. Willie F. Parris, director of the center.

Through the cooperation of Mitchel Field, a flight of planes will pass over when taps are sounded.

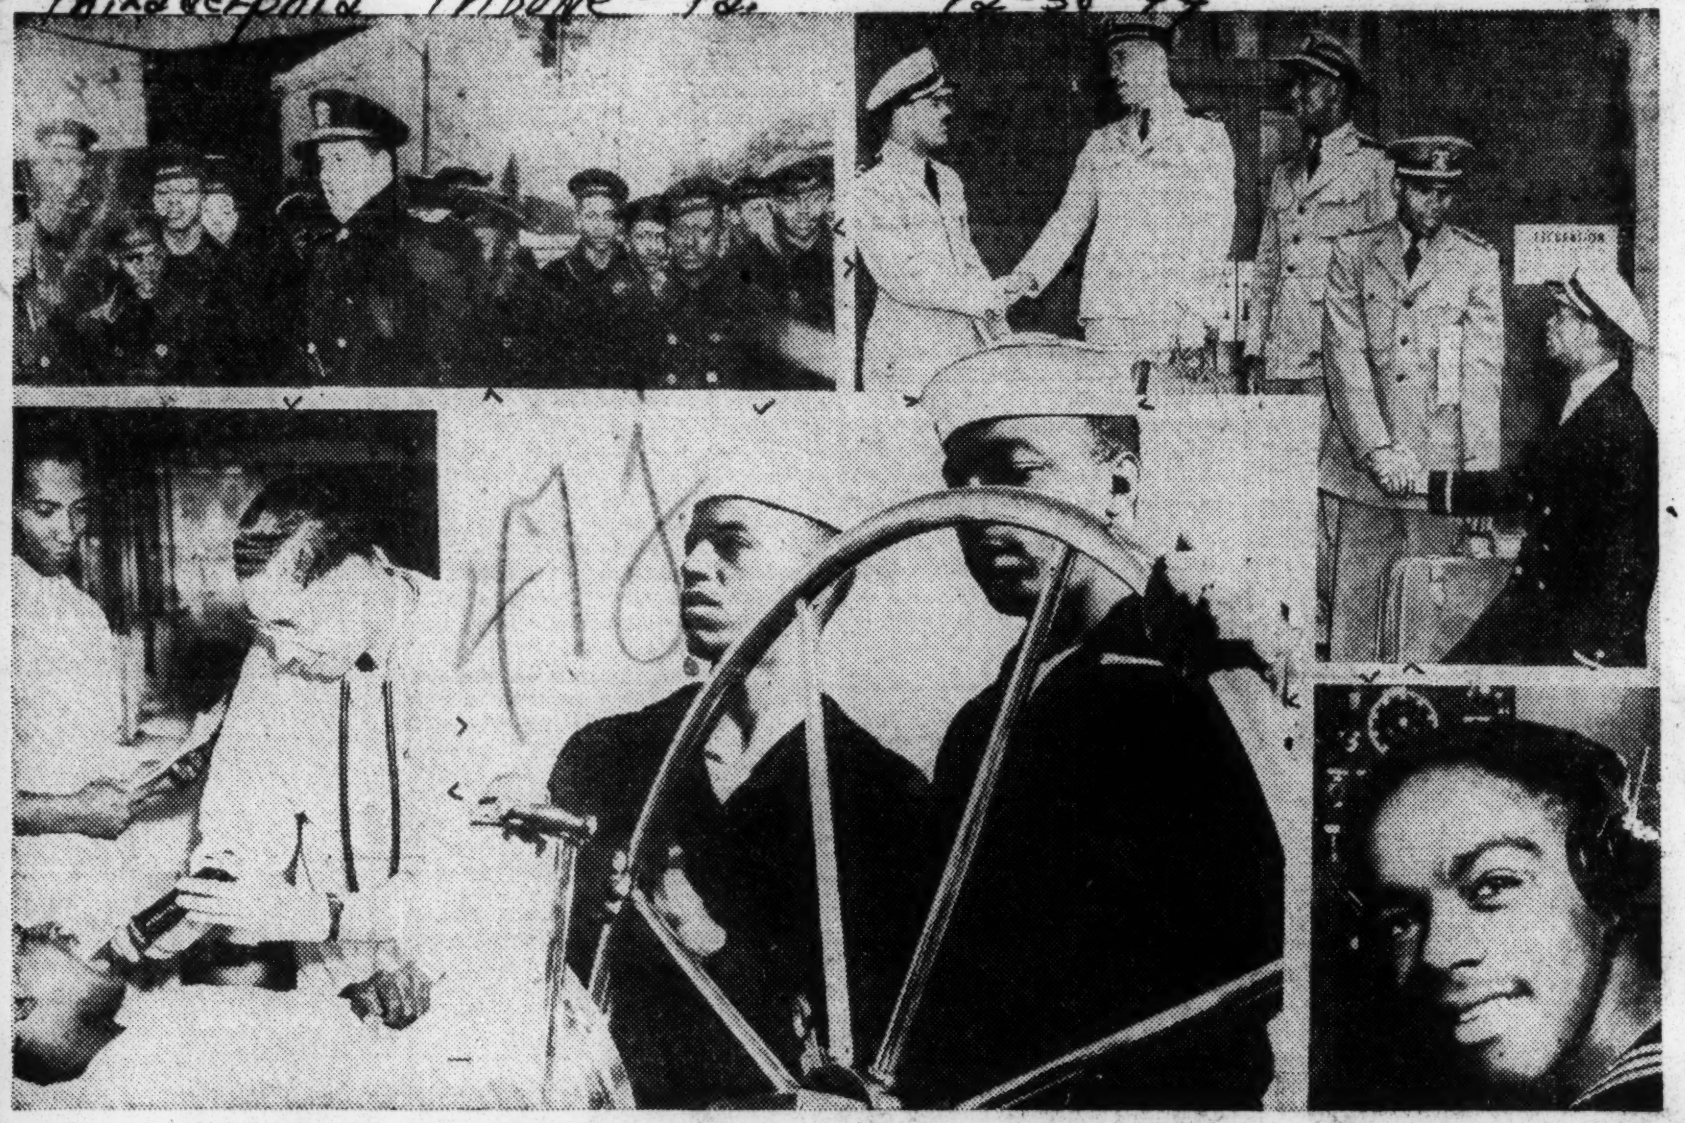
The members of the committee for planning the affair are: Ludlow W. Werner, chairman, Cold. Edward O. Gourdin, Samuel A. Allen, Comm. Samuel J. Battle, Mrs. Willie F. Parris, George Gregory, Elfreda Douglas, Barbara Watson, Frank Forbes, and Col.

12-23-44

47j-1944

Navy Firsts For 1944

Philadelphia Tribune Pa. 12-30-44



GREAT LAKES, Ill.—Upper left. For the first time in Naval history a vessel with a predominantly colored crew, the USS Mason, was commissioned and after a routine shakedown cruise went on duty with the fleet. The skipper, Lieutenant Commander William M. Blackford, Seattle, Washington, is shown with members of the crew on the dock after the commissioning ceremonies last March.

The first colored Naval officers were commissioned last March. In the picture at top right, Ensigns Reginald E. Goodwin (left), Washington, D. C., and Samuel E. Barnes (right C., and Samuel E. Barnes (right), Oberlin, Ohio, are shown bidding farewell to Boatswain Charles B. Lear, Keokuk, Iowa and Ensign Jesse W. Arbor, of Chicago, Ill., who were being detached from the U. S. Naval Training Center here. Ensign Arbor and Boatswain Lear were assigned to duties in Pearl Harbor thus becoming the first Negro Navy officers to serve outside continental United States. In the center is Ensign Dalton L. Baugh, Pine Bluff, Ark., now an officer aboard ship in the Atlantic.

During 1944 for the first time colored physicians and dentists were commissioned in the Medical and Dental Corps of the U. S. Naval Reserve. Lt. (jg) Arthur L. Thompson, Senior Medical Officer of the dispensaries in Camps Lawrence and Robert Smalls, U. S. Naval Training Center here, is shown (lower left) examining a recruit patient. Almost three-fourths of the hospital corpsmen on the staff of these dispensaries are colored.

In August, the Navy began to assign colored men in general service to man partially twenty-five large auxiliary vessels most of them in the Pacific combat areas. Trained Bluejackets like those shown in the center picture have been selecected to serve on these ships. Mark Elmer Jones, Quartermaster, Second Class of 526 Center street, Indianapolis, Ind. and George W. Meekins, Seaman, Second Class of 403 New Pittsburgh avenue, Baltimore, Md., are pictured at the wheel of the United States Training Ship, Dallas, at the U. S. Naval Training Center here.

Thousands of colored men in 1944 were graduated from the Camp Robert Smalls Service Schools, where they were trained in Navy trades. Typical of these men is Daniel Morgan, Seaman, First Class of 510 west Royen avenue, Youngstown, O. shown in photograph, lower right, who was graduated from Radiomen School. —(Officia U. S. Navy Photos).

Hobart Pit. Enterprise
Seattle, Washington

Calif. Daily Disapproves Sentences of 50 Negroes

11-29-44

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif.—An editorial, clearly expressing disapproval of the severity of sentences imposed on the 50 Negro seamen charged with mutiny for failure to load ammunition at the Mare Island depot, last August 9, appeared as follows in the November 2 issue of the San Francisco Chronicle:

"We have been mulling this matter over for several days. We have been thinking about the real nature of fear. Fear is not a crime. Fear can in some circumstances have the effect of a crime and in some grave circumstances must be punished as a crime.

"These Negroes who refused to load the munitions ships following the Port Chicago disaster were plainly overcome by fear. They were not per se mutineers except to the extent that their fear overcame whatever responsibility they had. Considering then that fear and failure to do a duty because of it cannot be encouraged in wartime, we sitll believe that the sentences imposed on these men were altogether too severe. We do not believe that the honor of the United States Navy as a fighting, fearless force would have been impaired by sentences ranging from one-half to one-third of those given."

Thoroughly convinced of the innocence of these men, the NAACP, through its Special Ciuncil Thurgood Marshall, has requested opportunity to file a brief for hearing before Rear Admiral Carlton H. Wright, C. O. 12th Naval District. Attorney Marshall will also file a brief and appear personally when the case is referred to the Judge Advocate General's division of the Navy Department for review in Washington.

Recruits At Great Lakes Learn Latest Methods Of Fighting Fire Aboard Ship

Tribune — Philadelphia, Pa. 11-18-44

11-18-44

GREAT LAKES, Ill.—Garbed in the Navy's traditional foul weather clothing these sailors, (left, top) are attacking this burning oil storage tank from the lee side using the Navy all-purpose nozzle for extinguishing the blaze. These practical demonstrations of fire-fighting are all under the supervision of a trained instructor who has finished one of the Full Scale Navy Fire-Fighting Schools. Pictured are, left to right: Edward Tynes, AS, 1808 Frederick Place, S.E., Washington, D. C.; Hilton L. Wilson, AS, 440 Belmont street, San Antonio, Texas; William D. Harris, AS, 6214 south Ada street, Chicago, Ill.; Russell Howard, AS, 215 west High street, Gettysburg, Pa., and Lawson Bell, Sp(F)3c, instructor of the group.

11-18-44

Recruit crew of fire-fighters (right, top) poised and ready to combat a blaze started aboard one of the simulated ship decks at the Fire-Fighters Unit, U. S. Naval Training Center, here. Flames, smoke and water provide a realistic setting to the training routine given the recruits at the recently opened practice unit. Pictured left to right: William Haywood, AS, General Delivery, Delray Beach, Fla.; Willie Procher, Star Route No. 1, Georgetown, South Carolina; Lawson Bell, Sp(F)3c, instructor of the training crew; Joddie Walton, Bldg. 1735-A Bellevue square, Hartford, Conn.; Oscar Rayam, Rt. No. 1, Box 87, Lake Park, Ga.; Keith McKenley, Route No. 5, Anderson, S. C. ....

Certificates indicating that they have completed the course in fire-fighting for recruits of the U. S. Naval Training Center, here, are being presented (bottom, left) to these Bluejackets by Lieut. W. L. Mayer, Officer-in-Charge of the Fire-fighting Unit at the Center. The Recruits are, left to right: WILLIAM R. BROWN, AS, 3609 Market Street, Philadelphia, Pa., and Eddie B. Allen, AS, Route No. 2, Canton, Miss.

11-18-44

....Blazing oil tanks give the necessary realism to the training of the recruits at the Fire-Fighters Training Unit, U. S. Naval Training Center, here. Sizing-up and plotting the extinguishment of fire according to approved Navy methods is important in the training of these men. Fires such as the one shown in the photo provide conditions similar to those under which these sailors might have to combat fire at sea. —

GREAT LAKES, Ill.— Since fire aboard a ship at sea represents one of the greatest dangers facing a crew, every recruit is required to take part in practical demonstrations at the Fire - Fighters Training Unit recently opened at U. S. Naval Training Center, Great Lakes, Illinois. Due to the extremely hazardous nature of this type of conflagration and the limited facilities available aboard ship to combat fire, a great deal of stress is being put on the teaching of fire-fighting methods used on modern sea-going craft.

11-18-44

The practice unit set up here at the U. S. Naval Training Center is constructed so as to give the sailors experience in handling every conceivable type of conflagration. Simulated aircraft carriers, compartments, and oil tanks are ignited with gasoline and oil to provide all the possible realism, and the recruits learn to fight all types of fires with all the latest and most modern equipment used on the huge sea-going craft as well as the smaller ships.

11-18-44

One hundred thirty-nine officers assist in putting the men through their training paces, and the well-equipped 400x500 foot plot which most of the day belches forth voluminous clouds of black acrid smoke and searing fire is the scene of training for approximately 720 men a day. The training begins with a movie which portrays detailed information concerning the cause and origin of the different types of fires that occur aboard ship, equipment used to combat them and how this equipment is used.

This is followed by a brief period in the classroom where the men are instructed in the actual operation, maintenance and re-charging of foam-making gear, fog-nozzles for oil and gasoline fires, carbon-tetrachloride and carbon dioxide extinguishers, portable pumps and the latest types of rescue breathing apparatus. Emphasis is placed upon the chemistry of fire, the use of forcible entry tools, and ladders. All of the equipment is standard and approved by the Bureau of Ships. Garbed in their foul weather suits, the sailors brave the smoke and fumes pouring from the hatches and the blazing tanks in their practice demonstrations in fighting fire. They are shown how to size-up a fire and plot its extinguishment or isolation according to approved Navy methods.

11-18-44

Lieut. W. L. Mayer, a veteran smoke eater of 23 years experience, former Captain and District Fire Chief of the St. Paul, Minn., Fire Department is the Officer-in-Charge of the Fire-Fighting Unit at the Center. He has a staff of experienced instructors who have received thorough training in one of the Navy's Full Scale Fire-Fighter's Schools.

47j-1944

Whites Work Without Pay On Xmas To Build Ships Honoring Negro Sailors

Defender — Chicago, Illinois

BRUNSWICK, Ga. — If this is Georgia's idea of a "white Christmas"—may all her Christmases be white.

For the Christmas spirit struck Jim Crow with a vengeance here this week.

Some 1,000 white Georgia shipworkers here will celebrate Christmas by working without pay to build two Liberty Ships named for Negro merchant seamen.

The strongest interracial spirit to strike above or below the Mason Dixon line began here early this week at the J. A. Jones Construction yards.

The Yuletide spirit began when a handful of shipfitters hit upon the novel idea of presenting the government with a Christmas gift.

Free Turkey Dinner

Within a short time the spirit spread to welders and crane operators and to every department in the plant. By Christmas eve, more than 1,000 workers had signed up to work free on Christmas Day. The privately managed shipyard cafeteria promised a free turkey dinner to the crews. One of the concerns furnishing welding supplies wired from New York that the day's materials would be sent at no cost.

12-30-44

The two Liberty Ships under construction at the company which will benefit by the interracial spirit of the white workers are the S. S. Robert J. Banks and the S. S William Cox.

The Robert J, Banks is named in honor of a Negro messman who was lost on the S. S. South America which was torpodeod and sunk April 10, 1942. Banks was born in Philadelphia on May 29, 1927. His mother, Mrs. Julia Lively, lives at Healy's Post Office, Va.

The S. S. William Cox is named for a Negro fireman on the S. S. David A. Atwater, which was shelled and sunk April 2, 1942. Cox is survived by his widow, Mrs. Arlee Cox, of 559 Indian street, Savannah, Ga.

The two Negro seamen were among three included in the naming of the last 100 Liberty Ships, the United States Maritime Commission announced this week. This makes a total of 18 Liberty Ships

List of Dead at Port Chicago

Call — Kansas City Star

SAN FRANCISCO. — (ANP)— Names of Negro sailors missing since the mysterious blast last week here, were reported by the navy department, Friday. The blast, which occurred while stevedores were loading shells aboard ships for the war fronts, is being investigated by naval authorities and civic and labor organizations.

The names of those listed by the navy are:

7-28-44

Akins, James Cleo, S 2-c, mother, Bernie James, Miami, Fla.; Allen, Clarence Jr., GM 3-c, mother, Marcie Lee Oliver, Natchitoches, La.; Asaro, Leslie K., S 2-c, mother, Alberta Asaro, Chicago; Ash, Isalah Jr., S 2-c, mother, Johnnie Ruth Jordon, Chattanooga, Tenn.; Aker, Leonard, GM 3-c, wife, Harriett Dunn Baker, Baton Rouge, La.

Bacon, David Sr., S 1-c, wife, Luvenia Bacon, Jacksonville Beach, Fla.; Bailey, Henry William, S 2c, wife, Lizzie Harris Bailey, Chicago; Barnes, David Jr., S 2-c, sister, Eva Mae Barnes, Bluefield, W. Va.; Battle, Joseph, S 2-c, mother, Sally Battle, Detroit, Mich.; Beason, Raphel Orval, S 2-c, wife, Juanita Beason, Palestine, Texas; Bell, Silas, S 2-c, wife, Mat Lillian Bell, Ft. Worth, Texas; Blackwell, David Edwin, S 2-c, mother, Addie Gray Blackwell, Crowe, Va.; Blaylock Thimon, S 2-c, wife, Willie M. Blaylock, Oakland, Cal.; Borders, Johnnie C., S 1-c, wife, Delores Borders, Tampa, Fla.; Born, James Henry, CM 1-c, wife, Mary Catherine Born, Port Chicago, Cal.; Bowden, L. T., S 2-c, mother, Aggie Osborne Bowden, Clay, La.; Boyce, Charles Louis, S 2-c, father, Willie Boyce, Oakwood, Norfolk, Va.; Brower, Alvin Jr., S 2-c, mother, Clara Brower, Tyler, Texas; Bridges, James, S 2-c, grandfather, Steve Bridges Sr., Natchitoches, La.; Brooks, Walter Lee Jr., S 1-c, mother, Blanche Brooks, St. Louis, Mo.; Broome, Johnnie Lee, F 1-c, father, Charlie Broome, Bushnell, Fla.; Burnett, Ernest Lee, S 2-c, mother, Camellia Burnett, Moffett Road, Crichton, Ala.

7-28-44

Craig, Norman Hamilton, S 2-c, mother, Evelyn Craig, Washington, D. C.; Calvin, Wilbert, S 1-c, mother, Amanda Calvin, Bessomer, Ala.; Carlin, Lawrence Louis, S 2-c, wife, Leola Gascon Carlin, Plaquemino, La.; Carter, Robert Andrew, S 2-c, sister, Mador Vallarta, E. Chicago, Ind.; Clark, Eddie Lewis, S 2-c, father, L. T. Clark, Meridian, Miss.; Coffee, Eugene Jr., S 1-c, father, Eugene Coffee, Bessemer, Ala.; Coleman, Bill, F 1-c, mother, Viola Cole, Deridder, La.; Coley, Enos, S 2-c, wife, Elnoria Barney Coley, Oakland, Cal.; Cooley, Frank, S 1-c, mother, May Lue Cooley, Memphis, Tenn.; Conner, Arthur Alexander, S 2-c, father, Erly Conner, Long Island, N. C.

Evans, William Lee, S 2-c, wife, Mamie Miles Evans, Norfolk, Va.; Evans, Horace, S 2-c, mother, Annie Bell Waiters, Buffalo, N. Y.; Evans, John Henry, S 2-c, father, Samuel Evans, Farrell, Pa.; Evans, Ananias, S 2-c, wife, Lula Toy Evans, Chicago; Eusory, Luther, S 2-c, father, Charlie Eusory, Flovilla, Ga.; Ervin, Junios Calvin, S 2-c, son, James Calvin Harris, c-o Lillie Mae Harris; Edwards, Hobert Lee, S 1-c, mother, Emma Maybelle Edwards, Maryland Heights, Mo.; Edwards, Bunton Ivan, F 2-c, father, Rev. Aquila Beauragin Edwards, Montclair, N. J.; Ebenezer, Arthur Lee, S 2-c, mother, Bertha Ebenezer, Nacogdoches, Texas.

Doyle, Rayfield David, S 2-c, sister, Queen Doyle, Miami, Fla.; Davis, Willie, S 2-c, wife, Olivia Andrews Davis, Woodland, La.; Davis, Floyd McKinley, mother, Hattie Lougenia Davis, Trenton, N. J.; Davis, Henry Joseph, S 2-c, wife, Dorothy Davis, Portsmouth, Va.; Dixson, Nathaniel, S 2-c, mother, Maggie Dixson, Grenada, Miss.; Dunbar, Herman, S 2-c, father, Edward Dunbar, Burton, S. C.; Daniels, Horace, S 2-c, wife, Lula Mae Daniels, Atlanta, Ga.; Dansby, Huby, S 2-c, father, Hugh Dansby, Homer, La.; DeVaughn, James Lloyd, S 2-c, wife, Rosa Lee DeVaughn, Jacksonville, Fla.

7-28-44

Cross, Eddie Lee, S 2-c, wife, Josie Mae Cross, Moultrio, Ga.; Crump, Jesse V., S 2-c, mother, Viola Collson Crump, Lumberton, N. C.; Curtis, Herman Lee, S 1-c, father, Edward Curtis, Selma, Ala.

Felisbrot, John Baptist Jr., USNR, S 2-c, father, John B. Felisbrot Sr., Middletown, N. Y.; Ferguson, Robert Lewis Ferguson, S 2-c, father, L. Ferguson, N. Y.; Fields, Clarence Sinclair, GM 3-c, wife, Alma Fields, Charleston, S. C.; Finney, Jessie, S 2-c, mother, Lena Finney, Milledgeville, Ga.; Forkner, Matthew Jr., S 2-c, wife, Shirley Mae Forkner, New Orleans, La.; Francis, Joseph Robertson, S 1-c, wife, Catherine Francis, St. Louis, Mo.; Franklin, Ford Sumpter Jr., S 2-c, wife, Margie Franklin, Oakland, Cal.; Frazier, Artis James, S 2-c, sister, Margaret Frazier Anderson, Moultrio, Ga.; Freid, Elmer Bertie, CM 1-c, wife, Gertrude Freid, Port Chicago, Cal.

Gaines, Ennie L., S 2-c, father, Lanzie Gaines, Lavonia, Ga.; Gant, Elger, S 2-c, wife, Mrs. Eloise Gant, Derwood, Md.; Gibson, John Samuel Jr., S 1-c, (GM,) father, John Gibson Sr., Baltimore, Md.; Gilbert, Jethero, S 2-c, father, Joe Gilbert, Mansfield, La.; Glenn, Samuel Jr., S 1-c, mother, Anna Glenn, Columbus, Ohio; Goudelock, Lewis Dennie, S 1-c, father, Boyd Goudelock, North Braddock, Pa.; Graham, Harry Lloyd, S 2-c, mother, Sally Geneva Graham, Trenton, N. J.; Green, William Henry, S 1-c, mother, Dasie Green, Petersburg, Va.; Grinage, Ross Burl, S 2-c, wife, Florence Grinage, Washington, Pa.

Hamm, Emeral, S 2-c, father, Lewis Hamm, Richmond, Va.; Hamilton, A D., S 2-c, grandfather, John Parks, Starkville, Miss.; Hamilton, Ernest Eugene, S 2-c, father, Charles Hamilton, Blythedale, Pa.; George R. Hammond, S 2-c, father, William Hammond, Philadelphia, Pa.; Hannah, John Wesley Jr., S 2-c, sister, Gloria Hannah, Chicago; Hardway, Joe Henry, S 2-c, wife, Opal Reeds Hardway, Greenville, Ga.; Harding, John Lloyd, S 2-c, mother, Carrie Louis Harding, Jacksonville, Fla.; Harris, B. C., S 2-c, wife, Carrie Harris McDowell, Ala.; Harris, Roscoe Alexander, S 2-c, mother, Mary Harris, Chester, Pa.; Harrison, Phillip Harold, S 2-c, mother, Ruth Jacobs, Detroit, Mich.; Harvey Jr., Clifford, S 2-c, mother, Ella Adkisos, Manchester, Ga.; Hayes, George George, S 1-c, mother, Mary Elizabeth Hayes, Franklin, N. C.; Haywood, D. C., 2-c, wife, Eloise Foster Haywood, Alexandria, La.; Hector, Douglas Lee, S 1-c, sister, Eva Mae Hector, Jacksonville, Fla.; Higginbotham, David Lee, S 1-c, wife, Ardella Higginbotham, Vallejo, Cal.; Higgs, Bobbie Richard, S 1-c, wife, Hattie B. Higgs, Bailey Rd., Pittsburg, Cal.; Hill, Cluster, S 1-c, mother, Beulah Lee White, Neelyville, Mo.; Hills, Joseph, S 2-c, wife, Albertia Henry Hills, New Orleans, La.; Hite, Charles William, S 2-c, wife, Elizabeth Hite, Louisville, Ky.; Holden, Rudolph Valenteen, S 2-c, father, Henry L. Holden, Jackson, Miss.; Holley, Stanford, S 2-c, father, Charlie Holley, Philadelphia, Pa.; Holmes, Eldred Lar, MOMM 3-c, (T), mother, Sadie Holmes, Batesburg, S. S.; Howard, Milton, S 2-c, mother, Mattie Howard, Dayton, Ohio; Howard, Frank James, S 2-c, mother, Emma Howard, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Hudson, Earl Howard, S 2-c, mother, Willie Gentry Travis Hudson, Paris, Tenn. Hughes, Glen, S 2-c, father, Melvin Hughes, Ethel, Miss.; Hughes, Leroy, S 2-c, wife, Cleora Hughes, Muskogee, Okla.; Hughes, Theodore, Lawrence, S 2-c, father, Jason Hughes, Houston, Texas; Humphrey William Jr., S 2-c, father, William Humphrey Sr., Kansas City, Kas.; Hunt, Ross Dee, S 2-c, wife, Curley Bee Hunt, Arlington, Texas; Hunt, Eave, S 2-c, mother, Alberta Hunt, Dacusville, S. C.; Hunter, Rudolph William, S 2-c, wife, Dora Lee Hunter, Oklahoma City, Okla.

7-28-44

Ingram, Lorey, CM 3-c (T), mother, Mrs. Gladys Ingram, Covington, Ky.

Jackson, James, S 2-c, mother, Francis Asken Jackson, Wilmington, N. C.; Jackson, James Edward Mason, GM 2-c, wife, Susie Elizabeth Jackson; Jackson, Levi Randol, S 1-c, mother, Olive Jackson, Steubenville, Ohio; Jackson, Paul Eugene, S 1-c, wife, Leona Catherine Jackson, Oakland, Cal.; Jackson, Robert Albert Jr., S 2-c, father, Robert Albert Jackson, Oakland, Cal.; Jackson, Robert Albert Jr., S 2-c, father, Robert Albert Jackson Sr., Bronx, N. Y.; Jackson, Samuel Jr., GM 3-c, wife, Johnnie Lee Jackson, San Francisco, Cal.; Jamison, W., S 1-c, mother, Mary Elizabeth Jamison, Anacosta, D. C.; Jennings, Willie, S 1-c, brother, George Jennings, Ensley, Ala.; Johnson, Clarence, S 2-c, wife, Irene Jones Johnson, Simmesport, La.; Johnson, Earl Thomas, 3 2-c, mother, Alberta Johnson, Remlik, Va.; Johnson, Gabe, S 1-c, wife, Fanny Johnson, Royce City.

Peete, Robert Fulton, S 2-c, mother, Georgiana Stevens, Peete, Suffolk, Va.; Perry, Lester Lee, S 2-c, father, John Perry, Conyers, Ga.; Person, Joe Herman, S 2-c, legal guardian, Ethel Murphy Person, Newport News, Va.; Phillips, Alfred, S 2-c, wife, Sarah Phillips, Pike Road, Ala.; Pickett, Charles, GM 3-c, mother, Emma Pickett, Greenville, S. C.; Porter, Houston, S 2-c, mother, Judie Howard Porter, White Castle, La.; Porter, McCoy, S 2-c, mother, Minnie Peterson, Cleveland, Miss.; Potts, David William, S 2-c, wife, Beatrice Brown Potts, Portsmouth, Va.; Powell, Samuel Harry, SM, 3-c, brother, Andrew Powell, Washington, D. C.; Preuitt, Joe Clarence, GM 2-c, wife, Willie May Preuitt, Houston, Texas.

Reid, Arthur Jr., S 2-c, sister, Margaret Reid, Charleston, S. C.; Rhodes, James Elton, GM 3-c, father, John H. Rhodes, Paducah, Ky.; Richardson, Clyde Franklin, S 2-c, father, Jacob Richardson, Columbia, Mo.; Roberts, James Allen, S 2-c, daughter, Shirley Mae Roberts, c-o Katie Roberts, Louisville, Ky.; Roberts, Mango, S 1-c, mother, Marie J. Roberts, Jacksonville, Fla.; Robinson, Alphonso, MOMM 3-c, mother, Addie Newton, New Orleans, La.; Robinson, Fred Jr., S 2-c, mother, Mary Gillian, Westfield, N. J.; Rogers Eugene James, S 1-c, mother, Mattie Elle Ray, Greensboro, N.

7-28-44

Scott, Carl Clifton, GM 3-c, mother, Jessie Mae Scott, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Sanders, Robert, S 2-c, wife, Pauline Sanders, San Francisco, Cal.

Johnson, Harold, S 1-c, mother, Mrs. Anna Bell Johnson, New York, N. Y.; Johnson, Henry Lee, S 2-c, father, Levi Johnson, Grenada, Miss.; Johnson, Milton Frank, S 1-c, mother, Mrs. Claudia Johnson, General Delivery, Marshville, Ga.; Jones, Daniel Lancaster, S 1-c, mother, Carrie Jones, Washington, D. C.; Jones, Ivery Lee, S 1-c, mother, Nellie Jones, Jacksonville, Fla.; Joseph, Henry Jr., S 1-c, mother, Mrs. Mable Jackson, D. C., S 2-c, wife, Clara Ollie Jackson, Texarkana, Texas.

Kearney, Samuel, S 1-c, wife, Mildred Rogers Kearney, Raleigh, N. C.; King, Calvin, S 1-c, (SCB), father, Colonel King, Detroit, Mich.; King, Clifton, S 2-c, wife, Ice Pop King, Ringold, La.

Land, Verna, S 2-c, wife, Eva Rodgers Land, Norfolk, Va.; LaPorte, Sidney Joseph Jr., S 1-c, mother, Katie May LaPorte, General Delivery, Romeville, La.; Law, Willie Jr., S 1-c, mother, Viola Law, Jacksonville, Fla.; Lawson, Cleo, S 2-c, mother, Lela Lawson, New York; Leslie, Claudius William, S 2-c, wife, Laura Campbell, Norfolk, Va.; Lewis, Aaron, Augustus, S 2-c, mother, Partha Lewis, Mt. Vernon, N. Y.; Lewis, T. S 2-c, wife, Ineta Lewis, Tyler, town, Miss.; Long, Lemuel McKinley, S 2-c, wife, Mrs. Agnes C. Long, Baltimore, Md.; Lyons, Roberts, S 2-c, mother, Winne Nash, Beaumont, Texas.

Makins, Beattie John, S 2-c, mother, Savannah Makins, Greenville, S. C.; Martin, Russell Edward, S 1-c, father, Osee Martin, St. Louis, Mo.; Martin Alonzo, S 2-c, father, Ben Martin, Medina, Ohio; Massie, Daniel, S 1-c, grandmother, Anna Wesley, Jacksonville, Fla.; Matthews, Lawrence Jr., S 1-c, mother, Mrs. Margaret Mathews, Mobile, Ala.; Mayfield, Charles Alvin, S 2-c, mother Arlean Mayfield, Lake Charles, La.; McClam, Mitchell, S 1-c, grandfather, F. L. McClam. Lake City, S. C.; McFarland, Clarence K., CCM, wife, Elnora McFarland, Washington, N. Y.; Melton, Calvin, S 1-c, sister, Hannah Melton, Washington, D. C.; Miller, Ernest Charles, S 1-c, mother, Mrs. Irene Miller, Chicago Heights, Ill.; Miller, Ira Jr., MOMM, S 2-c, grandmother, Virginia Harvin, Jacksonville, Fla.; Miller, Otis Kenneth, S 2-c, mother, Willie Lucy Cutts, Jacksonville, Fla.; Moore, Marshall, S 2-c, wife, Rosie Lee Moore, Tuskegee, Ala.; Moore, Thomas, CM, 2-c, mother, Lettie Moore, Pineville, Ky.; Moore, William Paul, S 2-c, USN, wife, Pearline Moore, Norristown, Pa.

Neal, Eddie Lue, S 2-c, wife, Beulah Neal, Troy, Ala.; Nettles, Willis, S 2-c, mother, Marie Nettles, Youngstown, Ohio; Nixon, James Henry, S 1-c, mother, Zilphia Nixon, Wilmington, N. C

Otey, William Houston Sr., S 2-c, (SSMB), wife, Ophelia Otey, Nashville, Tenn.

7-28-44

Packer, Auguster, S 2-c, mother, Mary Packer Hobbs, Lower Peach Tree, Ala.; Passchall, William Floyd, S 1-c, (SC), wife, Maryln Taylor Passchal, Knoxville, Tenn.

Saunders, Wesley, S 2-c, wife, Martha Saunders, Bronx, N. Y.; Sheckles, Joseph Jackson, S 1-c, wife, Victoria Sheckles, Chicago; Sims, Willie, S 2-c, mother, Mary Taylor, Collinston, La.; Smith, Isaac Ebenezer, S 1-c, mother, Katie Smith, Alexandria, Va.; Smith, James Parker, S 1-c, mother, Thelma Smith, Louisville, Ky.

Taylor, Ellis, S 1-c, mother, Mary S. Taylor, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Thomas, Calvin Burnett, S 2-c, mother, Mabel Cornelia Thomas, Trenton, N. J.; Tolson, Joseph Marcella, S 2-c, father, Isaac Tolson, Hertford, N. C.; Towles, Maxie Daniel, HA 2-c, mother, Erma Christian Towles Owens, Washington, D. C.

Van Dunk, Nervin Lester, S 1-c, wife, Delores Van Dunk, Oakland, Cal.

Wade, Isaiah, S 1-c, mother, Essie Wade, Jonesboro, Ark.; Walker, Charles Jr., S 2-c, sister, Carrie Bell Walker, Kenner, La.; Walker, Walter Lee Jr., S 2-c, aunt, Annie Bell Walker, Ensley, Ala.; Walker Woodrow Luther, S 2-c, mother, Odella Murton Robert, Helena, Ark.; Warren, William Claude, GM 2-c, wife, Janetta Warren, Hutchinson, Kas.; Washington James L., S 2-c, mother, Lizzie Bradley Washington, Minden, La.; Washington, Woodrow Sr., F 2-c, wife, Edith Washington, St. Elmo, Tenn.; West, Daniel, GM 3-c, mother, Louella Adams, Columbus, Ohio; White, Joseph Bailey, S 1-c, mother, Mollie Lee Richardson, Houston, Texas; Whitmore, Arthur, S 2-c, mother, Vera Whitmore, Little Rock, Ark.; Williams, Mitchell Jeanette Fay Adelbert, S 2-c, mother, Philadelphia, Pa.; Wilson, Williams, Maryland Eugene, S 2-c, father, Mary-land Wilson, Baltimore, Md.; Wilson, Oliver, CM 3-c, grandmother, Mary Jane Jones, Springfield, S. C.; Wilson, Samuel David, S 2-c, brother, Beth-el, N. C.; Woods, Manuel Wilson, General Delivery, S 2-c, mother, Annie Woods, James Edward, Washington, D. C.; Wright, Walter Eugene, S 2-c, father, Walter Wright, Cincinnati, Ohio; Wyatt, Charles Edward, S 2-c, sister, Addie Mae Wyatt, Richmond, Va.

THE LIVING SOUTH

Chicago, Ill. 12-2-44

By HAROLD PREECE

A Floating Democracy

racial discrimination unfortunately is going virtually unnoticed. It is in the U. S. Merchant Marine, perhaps the outstanding example where Negroes and whites eat, sleep and live together as jobs being done in this great country to break down hundreds of ships sailing the seven seas.

And of all the vessels in the Merchant Marine, perhaps the outstanding is the S. S. Booker T. Washington, skippered by Captain Hugh Mulzac. This is a floating democracy and I believe no better description of the Booker T. could be given than by John Beecher, a descendant of Harriet Beecher Stowe, former regional director of FEPC in New York and until recently purser on the Booker T.

In connection with the Political Action committee drive to reelect President Roosevelt, Beecher has done a piece on the Booker T. that I should like to pass on to readers of this column. Here it is:

This is about Capt. Hugh Mulzac, one of the best Americans of my time. I sailed under him, as one of his officers, on the S. S. Booker T. Washington for more than a year, and I know what I am talking about. I have seen him do a job for America. Nobody has done a better one in this or any other war that we have fought for our own and other people's liberty. History will remember him. Right now I want to introduce him to his contemporaries.

Maybe I should take time out at this point to announce that I am a Negro man. Everybody of course knows that Hugh Mulzac is a Negro. These distinctions of skin color are thought by some to be of importance, though not by me, and not by the new American people these years are breeding. Hugh Mulzac and I are Americans; that's what's important. That is the ground upon which we meet and work together.

As an American, Hugh Mulzac cares about what happens to his country and wants the right thing to happen, the right thing for everybody in it, whatever their skin color. But man of action that he is, he doesn't stop at wanting. He thinks and works at it. Nobody I know has a better head on his shoulders, not only for navigating a ship through tricky waters when a gale is blowing or finding a position in mid-ocean—no skipper living can beat him at that—but for figuring out the right course for the American ship of state, and who should steer her on that course.

Back Home Now

HUGH MULZAC has just brought the S. S. Booker T. Washington in from her seventh trip to the war. For two years now he has been on duty night and day. I have watched him during those black nights in convoy when we played blindman's buff with the ship ahead and the high octane tanker abeam, we with block busters in the forward hold and 500 troops below we wanted to deliver safe and sound, so they could kill Nazis. Whole rows of nights when the skipper didn't sleep.

There were other nights, too, bright with the ocean moon, when depth charges shook the engine room deck plates as the destroyers fought the wolf-pack nosing for an opening to get at us. At dusk they slipped through and nailed one of our companion ships. We heard the torpedo thud home, saw the red distress lights flash on, then black out forever as the hull plunged under, leaving only two lifeboats tossing like chips on the huge dark sea. But always the Booker T. Washington got through.

Hugh Mulzac has a long rest coming to him after two years of such nights, but he is not taking it. He is going to spend his furlough ashore, working to see that the right thing happens to his country this November. The first thing he did upon getting home to New York was to accept Chairman Sidney Hilman's invitation to join the National Citizen's Political Action committee. I myself saw these two fine Americans shaking hands on their pact to work together.

It was then that Capt. Mulzac said: "I am most happy and proud to become a member of the National Citizens' Political Action committee. On the S. S. Booker T. Washington we have a Political Action committee and every man aboard is a member of it. We know the issues in this campaign and the records of the men who are candidates, and we have made up our minds. On my ship we are every one of us agreed that President Roosevelt is the only man to steer our country on the hard and dangerous course ahead. So far, he has taken us through in spite of sabotage by members of his crew in Congress. What we have got to do is keep him for the rest of the voyage, until we drop anchor in the harbor of total victory and lasting peace. And we must give him a better crew in Congress. Anything I can do to help reelect President Roosevelt and get a Congress that will work with him and not against him, I am ready and willing to do."

A New Chapter

THIS IS Hugh Mulzac, speaking as an American. As a Negro, who on his way to personal greatness and national honor has had to suffer all the humiliating trials which a blind and dying part of America has put in the path of the Negro, he has this further to say: "After all, I can't forget that it was the Roosevelt administration that gave me my chance to do what I wanted to do, and was capable of doing, for my country as master of the S.S. Booker T. Washington. I honestly believe that the only real future for the Negro people, as a part of the American people, toward having their full share in the government of our country and an equal opportunity in our industries is through keeping at the helm the man who has proved himself by his acts to be our greatest friend in the presidential office since Abraham Lincoln."

LIVING SOUTH—

This world is one and so are its people. No one knows this better than Hugh Mulzac, who for more than 40 years has been exploring every corner of it as a seaman. "What happens in Morocco, or in Italy or Java," he says, "is just as important to me and to all Americans as what happens in New York or Texas or South Carolia. You can't solve the problems of America without solving the problems of the whole world. President Roosevelt has shown that he knows this, too, that what we have go to do is work out a plan of peace and abundance for all the world. That is why we must keep him, for the sake of all the world's people."

These are the things Hugh Mulzac says, and he is ready to back them up with work. He is determined to see that we don't get on the wrong course next November.

Once they came close to getting the Booker T. Washington. Down through the acrid smoke screen which blanketed the harbor the enemy bomber dropped a flare right over us, lighting up our decks loaded with cargo. Troops were sleeping below and we had high explosives aboard. We could hear the bomber coming back, diving in for the kill. But the flare burst in air, shot out, the smoke rolled back to hide us from view and the bomb went wide.

Hugh Mulzac and the S.S. Booker T. Washington have started not just a new chapter but a new volume in our American history. Just read it....not so many years from now.

Navy Personnel Satisfied at Bennett Field Air Base

Afro American — Baltimore, Md.
6-3-44

Colored Men Hold Petty Officer Ratings; No Discrimination at Mess; Many Opportunities

By FRANK E. BOLDEN
NNPA Correspondent

FLOYD BENNETT FIELD, N.Y.—To this U.S. Naval Air Station, fighter and bomber planes used by the navy on fighting fronts all over the world and by our allies also are sent to be tested before shipment.

The base, under the command of Capt Newton H. White, Jr., is one where the colored personnel, in general, is satisfied with the station-assigned to them and many fear the day when they may be assigned elsewhere.

Instead of "keeping them frying" as messmen, men stationed here are helping to "keep them flying" a s aviation machinist's mates and seamen who perform duties ranging from maintenance to manning crash boats (designed to service disabled seaplanes around the base). 6-3-44

Fourth of Men Colored

Approximately one fourth of the enlisted personnel is colored (the exact total cannot be disclosed for security reasons) and most of it came from boot camps at Great Lakes and Sampson Naval Base. The first group came here one year ago.

All recruits arrive as second class seamen and receive their advanced ratings here after they have qualified. When these men leave here they are sent to receiving stations and from there to new assignments.

Colored and white personnel have general mess together—first and second class petty officers in the West mess hall and third class P.O.'s and seamen in the East mess hall. 6-3-44

Have Separate Barracks

The two races do not sleep in the same barracks but the colored have equal accommodations with their own masters-at-arms.

In the barracks that I visited, Coxswains Clarence (Leafy) Robinson of Pittsburgh and a former member of the crack Center Avenue Y swimming team, and Arthur H. Griffin of Wilmington, Del., are masters-at-arms. Robinson is also the only colored member of the championship base swimming team.

The trainees get instruction from white teachers in aerial free gunnery (firing from a movable turret while flying in a plane), ship identification, sighting, turret training, practical experience on the firing range and in the assembling and repairing of such planes and their engines.

Men Fond of Flying

Each trainee who spends a minimum of 4 hours per month in the air gets a 50 per cent increase in pay and our men go for their air time in a big way.

A trainee who is striking for an aviation machinist mate's rating (AMM) is usually assigned to service in the store room first so that he can acquaint himself with plane parts. As he progresses, he is put to work in the shop under the tutelage of a white petty officer and trains until he is advanced. 6-3-44

Later he becomes a plane captain in charge of a crew, made responsible for a plane or planes as the case might be, must see that the 30,- 60- and 120-hour checks are made thoroughly and must effect all repairs before the plane is ready for assignment to combat.

T. A. Johnson, San Antonio, Tex., and Jacob Dubose, Philadelphia, are both AMMs 3/c and plane captains in charge of crews and planes. Their superiors rank them "excellent" and well on their way to the top of the rated list. They are assigned to the flight division.

Others Noted at Base

I also met William McDanniel, Detroit; John Boyd, Pittsburgh, and E. M. Langley, also of Detroit, all AMMs 3/c, and Daniel S. White, S 2/c, Birmingham, Ala.; Thomas Evans, S 1/c of Kansas City, Mo. White is in Ships Service as an apprentice tailor and Evans serves on a rescue boat. 6-3-44

In the metal shop, Debreckley Barnes, S 2/c, Cincinnati, and Argel Daniels, AMM 3/c, Detroit, are both doing spot welding.

Working as one hangar crew were Charles D. Cooper, Chicago; Sylvester Keeler, Columbus, Ohio; Paul Burton, Reading, Pa., and George Watson, Brooklyn, all AMMs 3/c, and proud of their jobs and ratings as petty officers.

Over in the planning division on the tractor crew was Beasley Hall, S 2/c, Jackson, Miss.; James Henderson, S 2/c, Los Angeles, and on the truck driving detail handling the ever dangerous high octane fuel were John Franklin, S 2/c, Atlanta, and his companion, John Shea, AMM 3/c, white, of Boston. 6-3-44

Many Opportunities

When a sailor has been here for at least two weeks, he is given a questionnaire by the master-at-arms to fill out. He lists his previous schooling and experience and chooses any two of the various services available. The personnel officer then assigns him after matching the questionnaire against his induction record.

The majority of the men feel that they are "getting a break" here and that they are a part of the American combat team. Many are satisfied to remain here for the duration and more than six months afterwards.

This base is proof for the navy that morale is no problem when the enlisted personnel is treated like sailors of the fleet and not designated otherwise. Hampton and Floyd Bennett bases at least permit colored naval personnel to crawl—later, it hopes, to walk, with the permission of those in command.

Navy Admits Jim Crow Cars For New Waves

Defender—Chicago

The Navy has a problem—how to transport 50 Negro WAVES from Chicago to Hunter college on the same train with 50 white recruits without upsetting its Jim Crow policy. 12-30-44

The Negro recruits are the first to be taken into the service in the 9th Naval District since the Navy opened the door to Negro WAVES in October. At that time the Navy announced there would be no Jim Crow units established in the training centers.

But WAVE recruiting headquarters in Chicago admitted that the Negro contingent "will probably be segregated from the white recruits while on the way to New York. Naval officials were "dis-revealed that there were four that branch of 675 enlisted men. date, there were rines in the serv-

Negro officers in the service and 3,675 enlisted men. As of the same date, there were 15,771 Negro marines in the service.

Sept. 30, and 42 Negro officers. The Coast Guard revealed that on June 30, 1944, there were

Navy Dept. announced that there were 18,749 Negro enlisted men in the Navy proper on

WASHINGTON — During

Oct. 21,

47j-1944

Third Negro Ensign Of U. S. Coast Guard

Age — New York, N.Y. 5-6-44

Ensign Harvey C. Russell, Jr., third Negro to attain the rank of commissioned officer in the U. S. Coast Guard, was the only member of his race to graduate from the Coast Guard Academy, New London, Conn., in the class of February 1944. He has since been commissioned an Ensign and assigned to the Boston District of the U. S. Coast Guard.

Ensign Russell is the son of Prof. and Mrs. H. C. Russell, Sr., of Louisville, Ky., and a graduate of Kentucky State College. He also did post-graduate work at the University of Michigan.

U. S. Coast Guard Photo From OWI.

5-6-44

Combat Assignment

Journal + Guide — Norfolk, Va.

Guide Correspondent With Tan Yanks In Navy Blue Aboard Destroyer Escort During Trip Across Atlantic Ocean Guarding Convoy

9-2-44

By THOMAS W. YOUNG

U. S. War Correspondent
(Copyright. Reproduction Forbidden)

ABOARD THE USS MASON AT SEA—(Delayed)—Tan Yanks in Navy blue have taken their place beside Uncle Sam's fighting men of the Army Air Forces who are now battling Nazi pilots in the skies over Europe and of infantry and armored regiments of the 93rd Division, fighting Japs through the jungles of Pacific islands.

Now it can be said accurately that Negroes are fighting "on land, on sea, and in the air," in combat units of United States forces engaged in the world-wide struggle for democratic principles.

Negro bluejackets of the Navy are the latest to receive their baptism as a combat unit. The destroyer escort USS Mason, manned by a predominantly colored crew of specialists and technicians, is nearing an East Coast port after successful completion of its first combat assignment.

WITH DESTROYER-ESCORT TASK FORCE

The Mason was part of a task force of destroyer escorts which shepherded a convoy of merchant ships from an East Coast port last June across the German submarine hunting grounds of the Atlantic Ocean to Allied ports in Europe. Not a ship was lost. Nor did either the merchant vessels or escorting warships sustain even the slightest damage as a result of enemy action.

This odyssey was both the fulfillment of a promise and the answer to a question. Several months ago the Navy Department announced that one of its new destroyer escorts and a patrol craft would be manned by Negro crews. In March of this year the USS Mason was commissioned at Boston, Mass., and complemented with a predominantly Negro crew. Since then practically nothing has been heard of this destroyer escort.

9-2-44

GOES TO WAR—HISTORY IS MADE

During the weeks and months intervening, however, its crew was being trained and conditioned, and the vessel itself subjected to a routine "shakedown" to test her fitness for combat duty.

One June 14 she left an Atlantic Coast port and took her station in a formation with other similar destroyer escorts to guard a convoy of merchantmen loaded with vital war materials across the Atlantic. That was the fulfillment of the Navy's promise to send colored bluejackets to sea as fighting men on a fighting ship.

AN ANSWER TO SOME QUESTIONS

And for the Negro public it helped to answer the oft-asked question, "what is becoming of all the highly trained specialists and other rated men turned out at Great Lakes and the Hampton Naval Training School?" Some of them are now on the Mason helping to rid the oceans of enemy submarines.

As these Negro bluejackets went to sea to set a new precedent and to break down an age-old policy which had restricted their service on U. S. warships to the steward's (formerly messmen's) branch, still another precedent was established when this reporter put to sea aboard the USS Mason on its maiden combat voyage as the first Negro fully accredited as a Navy war correspondent aboard a warship.

The full story of this historic voyage—its dangers, its exciting moments, its humor and pathos, its realism flowing from the sincere and unselfish devotion to duty by the crew and from their unrealized or frustrated ambitions—will be told in the columns of this paper during the next several weeks.

9-2-44

HIGHLIGHTS OF FIRST VOYAGE

With the war against the deadly submarine menace in the Atlantic swiftly coming to a close, it becomes increasingly difficult for the hunters of these underseas raiders to locate and destroy their prey. On the trip across no U-boat attacked our convoy or challenged the might of the escort warships

How did the Mason crew race this uncertain destiny during the hours and days of suspense as they waited for lightning to strike?

9-2-44

What kind of fighting sailors do these Negro bluejackets make?

How well do they master the intricate technical devices and scientific machinery used in anti-submarine warfare?

How did these colored sailors get along with the experienced white petty officers and chiefs in the crew with whom they worked and ate and slept during this first combat operation of the USS Mason?

These and other similar questions can be answered, in part at least, on the basis of facts observed by this correspondent during the seven-week maiden voyage recently completed. The answers will be given in a series of exclusive articles to follow.

San Diego Naval Base Has "Benevolent" Segregation

Afro-American — Baltimore, Md.

6-10-44

Commander a Liberal, Barracks Divided on Basis of Race; 80 Per Cent of Men Colored

Tour of Naval Bases

By HERMAN T. SMITH
NNPA Pool Correspondent on U.S. NAVAL FRONTIER BASE, destroyer escorts, was to return to the United States, without a convoy, as a "killer group." This time we were to go off the defensive and take the offensive. We were going out looking for the enemy, to find him and destory him.

This was something new. The tactics of an escort group with a convoy to deliver is to get the ships to the other side, avoiding submarines if possible and fighting them only when they bring the fight to you.

But now we were the hunters and the U-boats were the hunted. How well would we be able to fight them when we tracked them down?

HOW CREW FACED THE SITUATION

As this fleet of DE's headed westward across the North Atlantic, executing maneuvers and formations throughout the day and night, we all experienced that feeling of tense expectancy which usually proceeds a great dramatic moment.

COMES A THRILLING BREAK

Then came one of the greatest thrills of the entire trip when we learned that our task force, consisting entirely of San Diego, Cal. — Although generally referred to as the San Diego Naval Base, this area is not one huge naval base but instead there are several separate U.S. Naval Bases operating near each other here.

Each base here has a different function, different personnel and a different command and I understand that there are some colored men stationed on most bases throughout the area.

My clearance here was for the Frontier Base so this report is about activities there.

80 Per Cent of Men Colored

This base is, like Thompkinsville, a working base and services most of the craft operating in or out of this immediate area. About 80 per cent of its personnel is colored, and is performing important functions in all of the shops on the base.

Colored and whites live in the same barracks together, but on separate sides, eat in the same dining room on separate sides, but completely integrated in every other phase of base activities.

My first few hours here were spent with three colored petty officers who served as my escort. They are: Jerome Kimbrough, Y1c, of Chicago; Layton Thompson, Y3c, Detroit; and Rufus Brown, Y3c, Lima, Ohio. 6-10-44

Meets Commander

I also met Commander Corlyle Craig, commanding officer, at a baseball game surrounded by a group of wildly cheering colored and white enlisted men. The game was between service teams and each team had some white and colored members.

I met him later in the Diesel engine repair shop, crawling out of a huge Diesel motor on which colored and white machinists were busily at work.

In this shop I talked with George A. Penn, MoMM3c, of Muncie, Ind., graduate of Tenn. State Teachers' College; Robert Ezell, MoMMM3c, St. Louis, Mo., and F. C. Jackson, CMoMM, San Diego, Cal.

On the bridge of the signal tower I found an all-colored crew working under a white retired officer who had been recalled to duty after thirty-three years in the service. 6-10-44

This tower controls all traffic in the harbor, receives and sends messages by visual signals in code and controls the conditions of alert and fire control in case of an air raid.

14 Men in Tower

The colored men stationed at this important post are:

John W. Watly, S1c, NYC; Russel F. Hicks, S1c., Indianapolis; Charles F. Hamilton, QM2c, Jacksonville; William P. Watson, S1c, New Brunswick, N.J.; Eugene Walker, S1c, Pittsburgh; Robert L. Spurling, S1c, Vancouver, Wash.; Robert T. Hawkins, S1c, Chicago; Thomas B. Cunningham, Richmond, Va.; Allen Anderson, S1c, Carrier Mills, Ill.; Jack O. Laflore, QM2c, Detroit; Karl H. Long, Cleveland; H. N. Jackson, S1c, Detroit; James F. Hawkins, QM2c, Horton, Kan., and Vernon Gilbert, QM2c, Providence, R.I.

Out of the 14 colored men stationed here two have been recommended for commissions. Seven of them are high school graduates and the other seven are college men. 6-10-44

Commander a Liberal

Commander Craig, an old naval man, finished Annapolis with the class of 1916, hails from North Carolina, was classmate of Commander Armstrong and, like Armstrong, was one of the few naval men who fought for the acceptance of colored men in all branches of the navy.

He is close to his men and has shown his feeling about the race question by some of the things he has done to protect colored personnel from growing race intolerance in San Diego, as well as his treatment of them on the base.

The case of Walter V. King, S2c, of Philadelphia, is a typical example of the rising tide of racial intolerance in San Diego and the interest Commander Craig is taking in his men.

The Case of the Kings

After Seaman King was sent here from Great Lakes, his wife moved here from Philadelphia to be near him, secured employment in an influential white family in San Diego and had suitable quarters in the home for her husband to share with her.

So when King finished his work on the base days, he had permission to visit his wife in town nights. 6-10-44

After calling on his wife several times, King and a white boy began to meet each other and ride into town together nights.

An Unpardonable Error

One night about two weeks ago, King left the base late, rushed to the place where he usually met the other man, saw some one standing there in the darkness, and said, "Here I am, let's go."

But on this particular night both boys were late and instead of the other fellow it was a white girl to whom King had addressed his remarks.

She became frightened, threw her pocketbook into his face and ran screaming in one direction and King in the other.

When the commander heard of the incident and that police were looking for King he sent for the police and the girl.

In his office the girl admitted that she was excited, that the boy didn't bother her, refused to press charges and the matter was dropped.

White Dailies Stir Hatred

About three days after this, the tale goes, the daily papers ran the story, stating that the girl had been assaulted by this boy. The police then, so I am told, sought the sailor's arrest on the charge of attempted attack.

Commander Craig secured a lawyer for Mr. King, arranged for bail up to $10,000 and in co-operation with the sailor's wife's employers, planned libel suits against the papers. 6-10-44

Subsequently, the police refused to press the charges and the whole case was dismissed.

The radio shack on the base has all-colored personnel, highly praised by the base command. Included are: Felix S. Anderson, RM2c, Wilmington, N.Y.; Harold D. Shelby, RM3c, Chicago; and John Green, S1c, Louisville, Ky.

The radio shack is one of the most closely-guarded places on the base.

85 MARINES WIN PROMOTIONS

Defender — Chicago, 3-25-44 Ill.

By PVT. W. FRANK BARFIELD

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C.—Eighty-five Marines, members of the Montford Point detachment of this U. S. Marine Corps Training Center, have been promoted to higher ranks.

Seven of the Marines were promoted to sergeants, 27 to corporals and 51 to privates first class.

The list of promotions follows:

To Sergeant: Herbert C. Bonds, Chicago; Leroy Brooks, Detroit; Alton L. Brown, Newark, N.J.; James A. Hill, North Chicago, Ill.; Lionel Johnson, Alexandria, La.; Juddie R. Stewart, Albany, N.Y.; Milton M. Victory, Baltimore, Md.

To Corporal: Charles H. Anderson, Louisville, Ky.; Herbert W. Anderson, Glasgow, Va.; Charles N. Bartee, East Bernard, Tex.; James S. Beal, Meridian, Miss.; Lee C. Blackmon, Vredenburgh, Ala.; George Conner, Birmingham, Ala.; Charles Clinton, Hartford, Conn.; Bruce Davenport, Philadelphia, Pa.; Aurelieu C. Fournox, New Orleans, La.; Eugene Griffin, New York, N.Y.; Robert A. Halfacre, Memphis, Tenn.; Cornelius Horsey, Baltimore, Md.; Charles C. Jackson, Atlanta, Ga.; Samuel D. Jordan, Washington, D.C.; Robert L. Knox, Concord, N.C.;

Roscoe Marshall, Fostoria, Ohio; Willie C Mayes, Washington, Ga.; Robert S. McGee, Chicago; Edward J. McCoo, Chicago; William L. Overton, Brooklyn, N.Y.; Franklin S. Price, Jamaica, N.Y.; Wallace A. Ringgold, Baltimore, Md.; James H. Shamburger, Coal Bluff, Ala.; Thomas W. Snowden, Philadelphia, Pa.; Ralph R. Turner, Madison, Ill.; Horace Whitted, Alcoa, Tenn.; James R. Stevens, Newark, N.J.

To Privates First Class: George A. Cherry, Lorain, Ohio; Jeremiah Claybrooks, Thorpe, W.Va.; Joe S. Maxwell, Jenkins Jones, W. Va.; James J. Williams, St. Louis, Mo.; Frank A. Adams, Cleveland, Ohio; Leon J. Anderson, Kansas City, Kans.; Clifton H. Ashe, Cambridge, Mass.; Judson Beal, Miami, Fla.; Samuel M. Bolton, Chicago; William Brewer, Chicago; Clifton Brewster, Baltimore, Md.; Stewart L. Brooks, Winchester, Va.; Donald Brown, Chattanooga, Tenn.; Jessie W. Brown, Chicago. 3-25-44

Joseph D. Broadnax, Plant City, Fla.; Joseph D. Braley, Dodge City, Kans.; Willie Blackmon, Eudora, Ark.; Henry W. Bishop, Blevins, Ark.; Joseph L. Carpenter, Hutchinson, Kans.; John H. Chambers, E. Orange, N.J.; Louis A. Chippey, Wilmington, Del.; Herman D. Clarke, New York, N.Y.; Francis E. Goodridge, Boston, Mass.; James M. Green, Richmond, Va.; Clarence Harris, Baltimore, Md.; E. J. Harris, Birmingham, Ala.; Hurd Hill, Laurel, Miss.; Raymond L. Hill, Manchester, Ga.; George Hillmon, Waco, Texas; Joseph M. Hubbard and Lawrence A. Hubbard, both of Richmond, Va.; James H. Jackson, Jamaica, N.Y.; Robert W. Jackson, Detroit, Mich.; Sherman L. Jackson, Washington, D.C.;

Russell Johnson, Louisville, Ky.; Henry L. Jones, Holt, Ala.; William L. Jackson, Chicago; James E. Kelly, Salisbury, N.C.; Charles E. Keyes, Baltimore, Md.; George Lewis, Cedar Grove Station, Shreveport, La.; Aaron W. Lloyd, Detroit, Mich.; Robert Smith, Buffalo, N.Y. 3-25-44

Arnet Streetr, Prestwick, Ala.; Godfrey W. Taylor, Newark, N.J.; William H. Travis, Chicago; Edward B. Thomas, Quitman, Ga.; George B. Van Dross, Philadelphia, Pa.; Arthur Victory, Fernandina, Fla.; Maxwell S. Virgil, Jamaica, N.Y.; Gordon E. Warnick, Jersey City, N.J.; Horton T. Ward, Birmingham, Ala.

THE NEW NAVY POLICY

Defender — Chicago, Ill.

On the newly announced changes in naval policy which provides for the commissioning of Negro officers and for colored seamen on combat ships have been fully tested, we will withhold our appraisal of them. 3-25-44

If honestly administered, giving colored seamen and officers an opportunity to prove their metal, these changes will be a considerable improvement over past policy. If on the other hand, they are intended as a sop to palliate the Negro people just before election, they will deserve our bitter condemnation.

In the light of the record of the Army, the sister branch of the service, it is only natural that we be extremely cautious in evaluating this new Navy program.

We can remember that during the hysterical days of late 1940 and early 1941, when the nation was first attempting to build a juggernaut of military might under provision of the conscription act, the Army heralded a new era of democracy. Negroes were to be admitted to all branches of the service. There was to be no limitation on their opportunities for advancement. The elevation of B. O. Davis, Sr., to the position of brigadier-general was hailed as a symbol of the heights to which we could rise. As a safeguard against discrimination and mistreatment, a Negro was appointed as civilian aide to the Secretary of War. In theory at least, he was to have access to Secretary Stimson to bring personally to his attention grave incidents of mistreatment. 3-25-44

As the war has progressed, however, full extent of the so-called opportunities have been brought forcibly home to us. Boys trained as artillery-men, for tank destroyer units, and for armored cavalry service, have been suddenly transferred for overseas duty as engineers, stevedores, and quartermasters. Officers have been denied promotions and the privilege of commanding troops in combat. The same General Davis which we so proudly hailed, presents a sorry comic-opera spectacle running around the country making inspections in which he fails to see the plight of his black brother. Negro soldiers and officers alike hold him in utmost contempt. Then to excuse its own deception, the head of the War Department comes out with a statement branding Negroes as unqualified for the higher branches of army service.

These are the tactics we are hoping the Navy doesn't intend to use. This much at least is in their favor. To date they have been honest in their prejudice and have not hid behind a tissue of inaccuracies to support their discrimination. 3-25-44

When Secretary of Navy, Frank Knox, was visited some time ago by a group of leading Negroes demanding complete integration into all phases of the service, he denied their request on the grounds that Negroes, if given an equal opportunity would rapidly rise above some white men to positions of command.

It was apparently this possibility which has made the Navy so reluctant to give us a chance.

18 Finish Navy's Metalsmith School

Afro American Baltimore Md.

GREAT LAKES, Ill.—Eighteen men were graduated recently from the Aviation Metalsmith's School, Camp Robert Small, of the U.S Naval Training Center.

Eugene R. Moore of Oklahoma City, Okla., was the honor graduate, leading his class with an average of 94.42. He and 2 other graduates were advanced in rating to aviation metalsmith, third class, and the remaining men were advanced to seamen, first class.

The group included, in addition to Moore, are: 12-2-44

Venton Brooks, Weokuk, Okla.; Caesar McIntire, Philadelphia; John E. Von, Trenton, N.J.; Leonard A. Jackson, Atlantic City; Oscar C. Black, Detroit; Irvin L. Brown, Cleveland; Ernest Hunt, Chicago; William E. Richardson, Los Angeles; Velton A. Gamble, Weokuk, Okla.; Ulysses S. Wright, Kansas City, Kans.; Floyd D. Sims, Hartford, Conn.; Carlyle D. Jones, Brooklyn, N.Y.; Freddie J. James, Oakland, Calif.; Cyril C. Mosely, Mobile, Ala.; Wilbur Haley, Columbus, Ohio; Grendler S. Stallon, Philadelphia, and Henderson D. Walker, Houston, Tex.

47j-1944

Pres. Roosevelt Approves Plan For Race WAVEs

Daily World—Atlanta, Ga.
10-20-44

Navy Plan Calls For Immediate Recruiting Moves

By HARRY S. MCALPIN
(White House Correspondent of the Atlanta Daily World and NNPA)

WASHINGTON—President Roosevelt Thursday approved a plan submitted by the Navy Department providing Negro women in the WAVESs.

The announcement was hailed as one of the most forward steps for Negroes in their long struggle to eliminate discrimination in the armed forces of the country. The plan calls for the immediate commissioning of a limited number of especially qualified Negro women to serve as administrative officers. They will assist in the subsequent planning and supervision on the program which will be administered as an intricate part of the Women's Reserve.

Enlistment of Negro women will be undertaken as soon as the plans have been completed, and it is presently indicated that the first recruits will enter training shortly after January 1.

Officer candidates and enlisted women, according to the announcement, will be trained at the existing schools for the training of WAVEs. These schools are Hunter College in New York City and Smith College in Northampton, Mass.
10-20-44

The number to be enlisted will be determined by the needs of the service, the Navy announced.

The insistence that Negro women be admitted to the ranks of the WAVEs and SPARS and Women's Marine Corps had been of long standing, being brought again to the forefront last week at the three-day workshop of the National Council of Negro women which closed session in Washington Sunday. The Council had asserted its leadership in contending that Negro women be admitted on an integrated basis to every branch of military service.

10-20-44

The Negro press and other organizations had long asked and insisted on the late Secretary Frank Knox and other high Navy administrators to open the naval reserve branches to Negro women. The Thursday announcement was considered a victory on the part of liberal and patriotic agencies.

Two-Year Fight Won At Last

Call—Kansas City, Mo.
10-27-44

Negro Women To Be Integrated, Not Segregated

WASHINGTON. — At long last and on the eve of the election, President Roosevelt late Thursday, Oct. 19, approved a plan submitted to him by the Navy department providing for the acceptance of Negro women into the WAVES.

For two years, ever since the women's reserve was created, Negro organizations have waged a relentless battle against the policy of excluding Negro women from all military organizations except the WAC.
10-27-44

The Coast Guard announced also Thursday that it will follow the general policy of the Navy in accepting Negro women in the SPARS. No announcement was made by the Marines.

The Navy plan calls for the immediate commissioning of a limited number of especially qualified Negro women to serve as administrative officers. They will assist in the subsequent planning and supervision of the program for Negro women which, according to the official statement, "will be administered as an integral part of the Women's Reserve."

Training After Jan. 1

Enlistment of Negro women will be undertaken, the Navy said, "as soon as these plans have been completed and it is presently indicated that the first Negro recruits will enter training shortly after January 1."

Officer candidates and enlisted women will be trained at existing schools for the training of WAVES. The number to be enlisted will be determined by the needs of the service.

The existing facilities for WAVES are at Hunter college in New York and Smith college in Northampton, Mass.

The plan as adopted by the Navy department is said to be substantially that presented to it by the National Non-Partisan Council on Public Affairs of the Alpha Kappa Alpha sorority.

The campaign for the admission of Negro women on an integrated basis in the Navy has been waged by the sorority, with the cooperation of other organizations. Many conferences, public meetings, mass petitions and activities to encourage Negro women to apply for admission formed part of the campaign.

10-27-44

Commended By N.A.A.C.P.

"We are happy to see our efforts finally crowned with success and glory," said Miss Norma Boyd, head of the A. K. A. Non-Partisan Council. "It was inevitable that the demands of our armed forces would ultimately compel a relaxation of the bar that has been held against us by a few ill-advised but influential people in the Navy department."

The Non-Partisan Council is now urging qualified Negro women to take advantage of the opportunity for officer training.

In a statement regarding the Navy's plan for immediate commissioning of qualified Negro women, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People said:
10-27-44

"The NAACP is pleased to learn that the ban against colored American women in the WAVES at long last has been abolished, a policy the association has urged upon the Navy department since the establishment of the WAVES in 1942. We trust that the announced plan of training Negro women in existing schools means no segregation and we hope that this policy will be extended to establish a new and more democratic principle in the American armed services by integration of colored WAVES into regular units instead of being assigned to jim crow ones. We further hope and urge that the United States Coast Guard and the Marine Corps will also open their doors on an unsegregated basis to qualified Negro women."

Perform Service Tasks In Pacific

Courier—Pittsburgh, Pa.
10-28-44

By FLETCHER P. MARTIN
(NNPA War Correspondent)

PACIFIC FLEET HEADQUARTERS — (By Courier) —Reliable sources close to this headquarters revealed recently that although Negro members of the Marine Corps in the Central Pacific area had seen combat, the immediate trend does not point toward continued usage of these troops in a combat capacity. However, it was pointed out, plans are subject to change daily, if the situation warrants.

Past history of the Pacific war has openly revealed that original strategy has been changed in several instances. At Saipan, when the enemy drew his forces up for a fanatical defense of the coral bloc, service troops took to their rifles. During the second campaign on Bougainville, as the enemy hammered at the small American perimeter, troops performing a general service mission also took up the cudgel.
10-28-44

A CRUEL WAR

It is agreed by many that the war with the Japanese is one of the cruelest in human history; and as American forces drive closer to the coast of China the fighting becomes more intense, more rugged, more gruesome. Military censorship has not tried to hide this fact. Before the current unpleasantness ends, perhaps all available, able-bodied Americans in service on this side will be flung into the fray, one way or another.

The question has been repeatedly asked why colored troops, combat units, now stationed in this command, have not been committed to action. It isn't that these men are blood-thirsty, as one correspondent has pointed out, but they have been trained for combat. On several occasions they were alerted. At the present, they wait on their guns.

PERFORMING GENERAL SERVICE JOBS
10-28-44

From information received at fleet headquarters, it was learned that colored troops in forward areas are mostly performing missions of general service. Very little specific information has filtered through on these troops. Headquarter's spokesmen, generalizing on the subject, stated that most of them are in secured areas, garrisoned. This would seem to indicate that in Admiral Chester W. Nimitz's thrust across the Pacific these troops have helped unload the material, construct the airstrips, lay the roads which are destined to lead finally to Tokyo.

Service units have valiantly performed, and continually perform, their task. The men (Negro men) who have the guns, wait to perform theirs. It isn't that the command doesn't have reasons for the prevalent policy, if it can be so termed, but they refuse to even hint an explanation. Thus, the arising of questions in some quarters. Perhaps it will be argued that no explanation has to be made, but the questions still crop up.

LONG TENURE IN PACIFIC THEATRE
10-28-44

One fact is outstandingly apparent. The Japanese have won the war in China. Despite the heroic effort of ill-supplied Chinese troops during the last eight years, the ruthless enemy is coming out on top, at the present. And the more ground he gains in China, the harder will be our task.

This writer believes, as has been stated in several dispatches, that the time will arrive when Negro troops will be used on a wholesale in the Pacific. Perhaps China, in Formosa, in the Philipines. But many of them questioned don't believe it. As a result, they look forward to returning home. This is foundationed on a long tenure in the Pacific—waiting to fire the millions of dollars of equipment in their care.

Not One Officer in Marines

Afro American
Baltimore, Md.
8-19-44

Refused Commissions, Combat Unit Busted

MANY COMPLAINTS

Saipan Battle Proves Training Inadequate

By W. A. BROWER
Editor, Richmond AFRO

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. — Last October when an AFRO representative visited this training center for Marines, he found many colored members of the 18,000 in the corps in an agitated state over the treatment accorded them.

Unfolding a cluster of complaints, they charged:

That the training they were getting was not the same given other men in their branch of service and that the training they had received was inadequate;

That a limited number of men had been assigned to units in training for combat duty and all others had been shunted into the steward's branch or depot and ammunition companies, described as "oversized working parties";
8-19-44

Denied Chance to Qualify

That they were denied opportunity to qualify for commissions or the warrant officer grade and that they are barred from Marine Corps specialist schools;

That a scheme had been devised to have white NCO's assigned to colored units outranking all colored non-coms, and

That colored MP's were given token assignments only outside the camp in the jim-crow sections of Jacksonville, nearest town to Camp Lejeune.

Most Charges Still Stand

Although mitigated somewhat, most of these charges still stick, according to the best sources among the men.
8-19-44

The most illuminating tipoff on the quality of training some of the men received before being shipped overseas is discernible in a recent article in Time Magazine. Referring to the Battle of Saipan, the article recorded an incident of a colored marine who handed his buddy a grenade and told him to a group of the enemy jumped into a fox hole beside a grenade.

He Learns in a Foxhole

The white marine and he learned the lesson well. But, the article pointed out, as the "pineapple" it well as the colored marines did in enemy and killed liquidating Japs they were even article said. which they were trained—as serv- t on to say that ice and supply troops. acquitted them The only bonafide colored combat unit overseas is a defense battalion, which is doing anti-aircraft work.

Part of this particular organization— a seacoast unit, which, using the 155-mm. gun, established several marine corps records for long distance firing while in training here—has been dissolved.

Says Death of Secretary Knox Will Have Little Effect on Negroes in U. S. Navy

Call—Kansas City, Mo
5-5-44

By ERNEST E. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON. — (ANP) — No matter who is appointed to fill the vacancy occasioned by the sudden death of Navy Secretary Frank Knox early Friday morning, the wider utilization and integration of Negroes in the navy is not going to be any faster than it has been, in the opinion of persons conversant with the picture.

Certainly if James V. Forrestal, under secretary of the department until he became acting head the past week, is appointed this will hold true, is the concensus. Forrestal is variously credited with being the individual, more than Col. Knox himself, who has "run" the department. Actually, "the navy runs the navy," as one observer phrased it.

Forrestal is 52 years old. He began his naval career in 1917 when he enlisted as a seaman, second class. During World War 1 he served in the office of naval operations here at a time when Franklin Roosevelt was the assistant secretary of the navy.

He was made one of the President's "anonymous" administrative assistants in 1940 but remained in the job briefly before accepting the post of under secretary. He has been primarily responsible for construction work in the department. 5-5-44

Press Conferences Lively

In the course of the past winter Secretary Knox admitted to newsmen that there were some things that he could not do because navy brasshats just would not go along with him. How much he personally sought to utilize and integrate Negroes into that branch of the service may not become known until after the war.

His press conferences were generally lively. Questions prepared for early submittance were never required as is the custom at the war department. Frequently he joked with reporters at his semi-weekly conferences, and never hedged on answers to questions designed to draw information from him regarding Negroes. 5-5-44

Typical of the late secretary's directness was the answer to this reporter's question on Dec. 12 when he wheeled around in his chair and declared "You know exactly what we are trying to do. We are trying to avoid mixing crews on ships. That puts a limitation on where we can employ Negro seamen. We are using them for crews of small shore and harbor craft and for shore duty, but we are not mixing crews."

Opportunities Opened

In the period during which Col. Knox directed the affairs of the department, Negroes have seen opportunities gradually opened to them outside the rating of mess attendants and cooks. Today there are 22 commissioned officers in the navy, and three in the coast guard. Two anti-submarine vessels, a destroyer escort and a patrol chaser, are largely manned by Negroes crews, and will ultimately be in full charge of colored officers. 5-5-44

The training station at Great Lakes is rated one of the best in the country, and is turning out seamen with skills. There are more opportunities for non-commissioned ratings also. The complete bar of the marines has been wiped out, and according to one informed source, this branch of the service, in the short time it has had to work with Negroes, has done "better than any other part of the department."

Negroes Still Denied

Insofar as women are concerned, however, Negroes are still denied admittance to the WAVES, the SPARS or the marines. Col. Knox's view on this was always that until Negro men are in positions where they may be relieved by a WAVE and the like, the Negro women will not be accepted. 5-5-44

Cmdr. Van Ness is in charge of Negro personnel in the bureau of navy personnel, and is said by those who know him to be confident that he has done a wonderful job, in fact, "better than that done by the war department." The navy has no equivalent to the latter's civilian aide to the secretary.

Various organizations interested in Negroes in the navy have frequently pointed to Rear Adm. Randall Jacobs, chief of the bureau of navy personnel, as the "stumbling block." He has been described as "unspeakable on this Negro question." The general feeling then is that until he is shaken, no department secretary is going to be able to do much for the advancement of the Negro in the navy.

All-Negro Navy Patrol Boat Rescues 5 Sailors

Defender—Chicago, Ill.
8-12-44

SAN FRANCISCO — The alert crew of an all-colored Navy patrol boat saved the lives of five sailors off a sinking raft and won the praise of their commanding officer, Comdr. Robert B. England, last Wednesday. The heroic action of the rescuers has become part of the service record of each man.

Members of the patrol boat crew threw life rings to the struggling men, two of whom had gone down twice, and took them to the Yard dispensary where they were given medical attention.

The five sailors on the raft were caught in a strong tide about 9 p.m. and started to drift toward the Causeway. The men, thinking the raft was going to crash into the Causeway, attempted to swim to the dredge pipe line. Two of them were seized with cramps and had gone down twice when the patrol boat came along. The men were off a Yard-built vessel. 8-12-44

Members of the rescuing crew were J. W. Powers, coxswain; S. E. Stroughter, S1c; G. A. Churchill, MM3c; and A. Allen, S2c. The five sailors who owe their lives to the quick thinking Negro sailors were John L. Stubbs, F2c; Frank Dow, S2c; Charles Fritschy, S1c; L. B. McLellon, GM1c and W. R. Flowers, S2c.

On Tuesday, the hero crew was called before Captain A. G. Cook Jr. Captain of the Yard, for meritorious mast. A letter of commendation from Comdr. Robert B. England, enlisted and barracks officer, was read. It pointed out that the tide of Mare Island Channel is extremely strong, making swimming very dangerous. 8-12-44

In praising the work of the crew, the Commodore wrote:

"This patrol boat composed entirely of Negro enlisted personnel showed alertness, resourcefulness, and its ready and efficient action in rescuing these five men was in keeping with the best traditions of the Naval service."

50 sailors face death penalty

Tribune—Los Angeles, Calif.

SAN FRANCISCO—With death the maximum penalty under the law, the Navy Thursday opened court martial proceedings here against 50 Negroes charged with mutiny for refusing to handle ammunition in the loading of a naval vessel. 9-18-44

It marked the first time in American naval history that so many defendants had been simultaneously tried during a single court martial, the first mutiny trial of a Negro, and records similarly failed to disclose a formal American Navy court martial in which mutiny was the charge.

The 50 sailors, all of whom survived the Port Chicago explosion in which 327 persons were killed last July, assertedly refused to load an ammunition ship at Mare Island Naval Ammunition Depot on Aug. 9, prior to the ship's departure for the South Pacific. All 50 defendants were present Thursday for the proceedings. 9-18-44

Cmdr. Joseph Tobin, U.S.N.R., in charge of the loading operations at the Mare Island depot, was the day's first witness.

He recalled the ship's arrival on Aug. 8, his order that it be loaded, beginning at noon the following day, the refusal of 50 men to proceed.

Tobin said he talked with the men, individually and in groups, after they had refused the order actually given by Lt. Ernest Delucchi, division officer.

Some of the men, Tobin added, openly admitted "they were afraid;" others simply gave a point blank "no!" without any reason; others gave a variety of reasons: that they were physically "too small to load ammunition," that they "wanted sea duty" instead. 9-18-44

At that point, Cmdr. Tobin testified, he warned the men that they must obey a naval order, pointing out that "women nearby are doing equally dangerous jobs." The men, he said, nevertheless continued in their refusal to load the ship, which eventually was loaded by others. 9-18-44

Lieutenant Delucchi was next on the stand, disclosing that on Aug. 8, during muster, one Negro sailor dropped from the ranks, and later several score others likewise dropped from the ranks.

At this stage, Delucchi explained, the men already had been informed that they would load ammunition on the following day.

He confirmed the fact that they had been at Port Chicago during the explosion there; that some had been sent to Shoemaker Hospital to recuperate, while others had remained at Port Chicago Ammunition Depot to "help clean up things." On July 30, they were ordered to Mare Island. 9-18-44

During the mustering, Delucchi said, "other members of other divisions were looking on—a very unusual procedure." He said members of these other divisions had shouted to the men on muster: "Don't work—don't do it."

After the men broke ranks, they later were ordered to reform, which they did. On the following day, however—Aug. 9—they definitely refused to load the ammunition, a few moments before the scheduled deadline—noon.

PERSONNEL

Trial's End

Time Mag.

The court-martial, scrupulously conducted, had heard evidence for six weeks. Last week it announced its verdict: the 50 Negro sailors accused of mutiny at the Mare Island naval depot (TIME, Oct. 2), were guilty. Neither the extent of their guilt nor the sentence was announced. Until the findings have been transcribed in longhand (Navy regulations) and sent to Washington for review, even the 50 would not know their fate.

News of the "guilty" verdict—in the first such mutiny trial in U.S. Navy history—brought charges from Negroes that Negro sailors were victims of discrimination and a demand for an investigation of circumstances leading up to the case. The 50 had refused and persisted in refusing to load ammunition after an explosion of two munition ships had killed 327 persons at nearby Port Chicago, where the 50 had formerly been based. Navy officers sternly insisted that such conduct could not be tolerated in wartime, no matter what the excuse.

The Navy had already tried 207 other Negro sailormen and found them guilty of disobeying orders on the same rebellious occasion. Unlike the 50, the 207 had not persisted in their refusal to load explosives. Punishments (also unannounced) were undoubtedly lighter.

• • •

To five Negro bluejackets who had behaved with exceptional courage during the Port Chicago disaster, Rear Admiral H. Wright last week awarded Navy and Marine Corps medals.

47j-1944

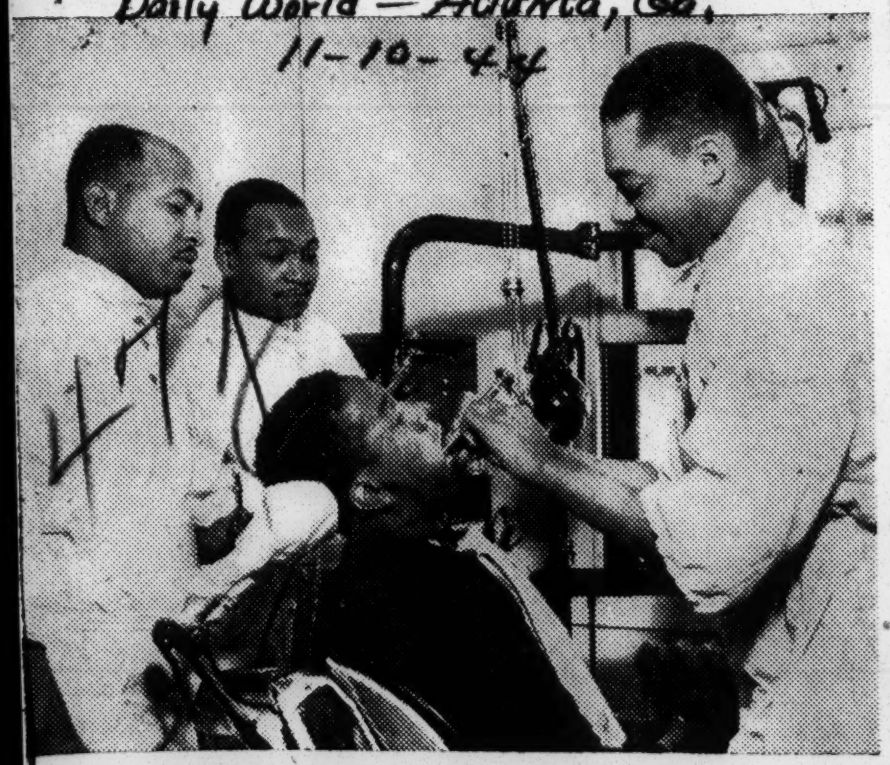
AMERICAN SCENE

Tribune — Chicago, Ill.
10-1-44

FIFTY SAILORS, charged with mutiny for failure to handle ammunition at the Mare Island, Cal., depot, on trial by court-martial at San Francisco.

First Navy Dentist At Work

Daily World — Atlanta, Ga.
11-10-44



GREAT LAKES, Ill.—Examining the mouth of one of the recruits at the U. S. Naval Training Center, here is Lt. (jg) Thomas Watkins, Jr., of 426 North McDowell Street, Charlotte, N. C., the first Negro to be commissioned in the Dental Corps of the Naval Reserve. He was commissioned September 23rd in Philadelphia, Pa., and reported for duty here November 1st. Lt. Watkins received his DDS degree from the Dental School of the University of Pennsylvania and his Bachelor of Arts degree from Harvard University where he won his school letter as an athlete. He is a member of the Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity and the National Dental Honorary Society, Omicron Kappa Upsilon. His parents are Dr. and Mrs. Thomas Watkins, Sr., of Charlotte, N. C. Assisting the first Negro Officer in the Dental Corps of the Naval Reserve are: Thomas E. Johnson, PhM3c, Snow Hill Institute, Snow Hill, Ala., and Lecester Jones, PhM3c, 4929 Sheriff Rd., N. E., Washington, D. C. In the dental chair is Andrew T. Johnson, AS of Richmond, Ky.—(Official U. S. Navy Photo)

11-10-44

Att'y Thurgood Marshall Reports On Mutiny Trial

10-17-44

Finds Men Failed To Act Because Of Blast Fears

Daily World
Atlanta, Ga.

YERBA BUENA ISLAND, Calif. —(SNS)— After listening to three days' testimony of the 50 Negro seaman charged with mutiny for refusal to load ammunition at the Mare Island depot, August 9, Special NAACP Counsel, Thurgood Marshall declared. "These men are being tried for mutiny solely because of their race or color."

Following an urgent telephone call from Joseph James, president of the local NAACP Branch, asking that National Office assistance be given the defendants immediately, Mr. Marshall flew to San Francisco where he has been reviewing testimony and interviewing the men. In his report of proceedings thus far he charged:

"The last of the defendants was on the stand today and the defense might close its case tomorrow. The Port Chicago explosion was on July 17th and many of the accused were in Port Chicago at that time. Many of them were hurt. On August 9th they were transferred to another Island and told to fall in for work, meaning loading ammunition .They did not. Their officers including the Admiral talked to them. Then their officer asked them the following: 'All of you who are willing to obey all lawful orders stand fast. All who are not fall out and give your names to the officers.' Some stood fast and others fell out. Those who fell out were arrested. There were 257 altogether but it ends up that only 50 are charged with mutiny.

11-10-44

of the accused men handled winches, one had ten months experience, two had two months experience ... all experience was with ammunition a week and ammunition.

"Lieutenant James F. Coakley, the one who directed former assistant prosecutor of the winch as to Alameda County, California, under the ammunition in- the present Governor Warren is ... No wonder they the Judge Advocate. He asks each to load ammunition. of the accused who is from above testified that since the the Mason and Dixon line 'Where operator of the affair they were you from?' He never asks any munition. They did not mean to how to lower the to the hole ... No

NOT CONSIDERED ORDER

"The men take the position that disobey an order. the above statement by the offi- "A typical example of their were all afraid to cer was not considered by them testimony is that of Seamen Bor- Every man testified to be an order and what they have who is just seventeen. He Port Chicago affair meant by their actions was that had enlisted when he was 16: was 'afraid to load ammunition.' Three they did not, want to load am-of the good southern boys the question. Today he asked one of the accused where he was from and the man said, "Chicago.' He asked him where he took boot training, the boys replied, "Great Lakes.', whereupon Coakley said, 'Didn't they teach you to address officers as Sir? Why can't you say, Sir to me?"

(Continued from Page 1)

"There is not sufficient evidence of mutiny or conspiracy

"There is no evidence of refusal to obey a direct order

"These men are being tried for mutiny solely because of their race or color" 10-17-44

The meaning of Mutiny, under which these men are being tried is—"collective insubordination with intent to disobey a lawful command In order to find defendants guilty of mutiny it is necessary for prosecution to prove there was collective insubordination which consists of a persistent and concerted refusal or omission to obey orders, or to do duty None of these men appears to have conspired collectively to disobey or perform duty with insubordinate intent.

Prosecution Sags at Mutiny Trial

Afro American
Baltimore, Md.

By RALPH MATTHEWS

9-30-44

SAN FRANCISCO.— As an ugly sequel to the Port Chicago blast which killed 300 navy men and civilians recently, fifty colored sailors are on trial at Treasure Island, charged with mutiny for refusing to load ammunition on a ship in defiance of military orders.

The trial, in its seventh day Thursday, hit a snag when Judge Advocate Lieut. Com. Frank Coakley seemed destined to failure in his effort to prove a conspiracy through an array of witnesses who testified against the men.

Safeguards Wanted

Most of the witnesses testified that the men were not unpatriotic nor did they conspire to mutiny but were actually afraid to handl ammunition until given some a: surance that they would be protected against a recurrence of the Port Chicago tragedy. 9-30-44

Among those heard Thursday were Fireman 1/c Feodus Ship, Fireman 1/c William H. Shannon, Clarence Morgan and Joseph Morgan. The names of the fifty defendants were not available.

The mutiny trial has caused widespread interest on the coast although it is not generally known that the defendants are colored.

Says Navy on Trial

The People's World, a labor daily, said editorially, today (Friday):

"It must be frankly admitted that every one of the defendants is colored and this fact, far from adding to the weight of evidence against them, by its very promulgation shifts the burden of proof upon the navy itself, because it is the navy which is on trial.

"Are the fifty enlisted men considered in the same category, enjoying the same privileges and responsibilities as all other navy enlisted men? The answer is 'No.'

"They are segregated in a jim-crow unit, denied chance of promotion, confined to manual labor in a home port. 9-30-44

"The Treasure Island court-martial must be turned into a trial of the United States Navy if victory ovre fascism is to be won."

Navy Diver

Journal & Guide
9-16-44

Norfolk, Va.

Carl Henry Crawford has been trained at U. S. Naval Training Station, Ship Salvage, New York, to become the first Negro salvage diver in the U. S. Fleet. When inducted in November of last year he was employed at the New York Navy Yard, Brooklyn, N. Y. Later he designed a torpedo patch (a patch composed chiefly of chemicals designed to seal holes below the water's surface) which was approved for experimental practice at San Diego, Calif.

Women Credited for Breaking Navy Jim-Crow

Afro American
Baltimore, Md.

By HARRY McALPIN

WASHINGTON

The recently announced plan of the Navy to accept colored women in the WAVES is the culmination of a long struggle conducted by women all over the country and headed by a small group of progressive women in Washington. 10-28-44

Spearheading the group through the Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority's Non-Partisan Council was Mrs. Thomasina Johnson, the council's legislative director. Associated with her in the fight were Miss Elsie Austin, former national president of the Delta Sigma Theta Sorority; Mrs. Jeanetta W. Brown, on leave as executive secretary of the National Council of Negro Women; Mrs. W. Stuart Nelson, wife of the dean of the Howard University School of Theology; Dr. Dorothy B. Ferebee, prominent physician and civic worker; Miss Dorothy Height, former executive secretary of the Phyllis Wheatley YWCA here; and Mrs. Pauline R. Coggs, executive secretary of the Washington Urban League. 10-28-44

These women, forming a committee of themselves, began concentration on the fight about a year ago, though efforts had been exerted by them and their organizations since the inception of the WAVES.

August Agreement

Most of these women have known since early August that the announcement was coming. This was brought out in a statement by Mrs. Nelson, who when informed of the Navy Department's release said, "I have known that Capt. McAfee (head of the Waves) was working on such a plan for some time. I did not feel free at the time to discuss it, but I have known it since the first part of August. The Navy head agreed to that type of plan."

She went on to say she was very pleased on the matter of the Navy seeing it fit to take such a position in integrating colored women into its service. She paid tribute to Capt. McAfee and the "forward-looking group of women" under her leadership. She said she felt the women in the Navy Department were prepared to take a stand "slightly in advance of the stand the men have traditionally taken." 10-28-44

Miss Austin, when informed of the announcement, said: "I am certainly very glad it has happened. I trust that the announcement carries with it a policy of full and complete integration of colored women without the establishment of separate colored units. I am confident that the women who are given this opportunity will more than make it worthwhile."

Sailor On Stand Accuses Prosecutor Of Death Threat To Get Confession

Tribune — Philadelphia, Pa.
10-14-44

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif.—(ANP)—Fireworks in the navy mutiny case, involving 50 colored seamen who are facing death for refusing to load ammunition after 300 seamen died in the Port Chicago naval explosion, were started last week when opposing counsel clashed over defense testimony.

The fireworks started when Alphonso MacPherson, a defendant, took the witness stand and pointed to Lt. Comdr. Jas. F. Cockley, prosecutor, saying: "That man, during pre-trial questioning, told me to 'come clean' and added that if you don't you probably will get shot." 10-14-44

Cockley stiffened and charged that the defense was attempting to inject statements to show that he was unfair and said the testimony was "hitting below the belt." In defending the testimony of his client, Lt. Gerald Veltmann, defense counsel, denied the witness had been influenced. MacPherson confirmed the statement.

Rear Adm. Huge Osterhaus, president of the court martial board, broke the row by remarking that MacPherson had not been shot and suggested, "let's get some lunch."

Cecil Miller, a section leader at Port Chicago, testified that he would not obey an order to lead ammunition if he were to receive it.

"You know you are looking down the barrel of a gun right now,'" said Miller Matthews, seaman second class, in telling about the remarks of an officer at Camp Shoemaker who was taking statements of men charged with refusing to lead the ammunition. "If you don't want to tell me the truth about what you know I'll put you down as a ringleader." The prosecutor, Cmdr. Cockley, took exception to this testimony, charging the defense with again bringing insinuations of intimidation of the prisoners into the trial.

Seaman 2-c Freddie Meeks, the 25th member of the accused group to take the stand, testified that he had made a statement to the effect that he was willing to obey any orders that would help "this country win the war, and would go to the front," but that he was afraid to load ammunition.

"You have a 50-50 chance when you are loading ammunition," Meeks said he told an officer at Camp Shoemaker. 10-14-44

Charles S. Widemen, seaman 2-c, testified that he told an ensign at Camp Shoemaker where the alleged mutineers were held that he did not know exactly what mutiny was, but that he could be shot for "making mutiny." Widemen, a baker escaped the Port Chicago explosion because he was confined to sick bay eight days before the tragedy with a rupture from injuries he received while loading the munitions.

When authorities asked Widemen if he would return to loading ammunition after he recovered, he replied that he was undecided, he testified. He was ordered to join the group of alleged mutineers for his indecision. He made a written statement expressing his fears of the task he said. A conviction of mutiny with it a penalty of death before a firing squad.

Three Negro Captains, 8,000 Seamen on Ships

People's World — New York, N.Y.
9-2-44

More than 8,000 Negro merchant seamen are working on ships carrying materials to the fighting fronts, among whom are three ship captains, it was reported in the Herald Tribune this week in an article signed by Edgar T. Rouzeau, Negro member of the reportorial staff. The ship captains, all of New York, are Hugh Mulzac, Adrian Richardson and John Godfrey, each of whom has a number of Atlantic crossings to his credit, and mans a racially mixed crew. Clifton Lastic of New York holds a chief mate's license, nine men hold second mate's and six hold third mate's licenses. In addition there are two chief engineers, three first assistant engineers, three first assistant engineers that ship assignments have had not been for the availability given to six pharmacist's of competent Negroes to complete and a large number of radio the officer roster of crews.

electricians and other ans; and that Craig S. Atlantic Coast director itment, expressed the view any ships would have had tpone sailing dates if it

Twelve Mercant Marine officers been given have been assigned to the SSmates and a Booker T. Washington and the SSofficers, John Murphy, and twenty are on technicians; other ships manned by white offi- Vincent, of recruitment cers and seamen. 9-2-44

Mr. Rouzeau says further that that many the War Shipping Administration to postpone

47j-1944

NEGRO "WAVES"

Age — New York, N. Y.
10-28-44

ANOTHER significant victory for those who have been urging and fighting for the complete integration of Negroes in the war effort was scored Thursday when President Roosevelt announced his approval of a plan providing for the acceptance of Negro women in the women's reserve of the Navy.

"The plan," according to the Navy Department announcement, "calls for the immediate commissioning of a limited number of especially qualified Negro women to serve as administrative officers. They will assist in the subsequent planning and supervision of the program for Negro women which will be administered as an integral part of the women's reserve. Enlistment of Negro women will be undertaken as soon as these plans have been completed and it is presently indicated that the first Negro recruits will enter training shortly after January 1. Officer candidates and enlisted women will be trained at existing schools for the training of WAVES. The number to be enlisted will be determined by the needs of the service."

This announcement by the Navy Department comes as welcome news, because it marks the removal of another barrier against Negroes who are anxious to give their all in the service of their country. The opportunity afforded Negro women to enter the WAVES moves the whole race forward and gives heart to those fighting for first-class citizenship to continue the fight until that day when Democracy will be all that the world implies.

10-28-44

It is particularly gratifying to read in the announcement that Negro recruits and officer candidates will be trained at existing schools, rather than in special schools. It is gratifying because it will boost the morale of all Negroes in service and out.

The fight against the traditional policy of the Navy has been a long and hard one. It meant that any advance that the Negro was to make would have to be made despite the long tradition. There can be no gainsaying the fact that Negroes have made progress in the Navy. The large number of Negroes now serving as officers and enlisted men of all ratings is eloquent proof of that progress. This latest announcement removes the doubt that existed in the minds of many that the Navy was becoming liberal. It should also remove any doubt that exists as to President Roosevelt's desire to utilize all the available strength and resources of the country in this war which all hope will be the last war to end all wars.

10-28-44

The New York Age joins in paying due tribute to President Roosevelt for once more responding to the will of the people to make democracy a reality, not a myth.

THE NAVY'S ACCEPTANCE OF NEGRO WOMEN

The Nation — New York, N. Y.
10-28-44

in the Waves is a long-overdue step which will be welcomed by all who have been fighting against discrimination in the armed forces. It is announced that a limited group of specially qualified Negroes will be commissioned immediately and that enlistments will start shortly after the first of the year. The colored Waves will be trained in existing establishments, where it is to be hoped no segregation will be practiced. The Navy has a good opportunity to attack Jim Crowism by integrating new recruits, after they are trained, in existing units. The Coast Guard has announced that the Naval ruling includes enlistment in the Spars; it is to be hoped that the Marine Corps will quickly follow suit and open its doors on an unsegregated basis to qualified Negro women.

All Sailors Treated Alike at Olathe

Call — Kansas City, Mo.
10-27-44

By ESTELLA M. BLANKINSHIP

"Prejudice Takes a Holliday" is the feature shown daily at Olathe Naval Air Station, Olathe, Kas., where Negro sailors play stellar roles. They are handling delicate airplane parts and engines as easily as they were handling pots, pans and skillets three years ago when the Navy began its "Open Door" policy.

The nation can be proud of the ease in which the "gold braids" have achieved racial cooperation on this station. Today, October 27, marks another year of integration of the Negro in the Navy program. This is "Navy Day." On this day Navy personnel are invited by groups of civilians to speak, parade and give information to the public about the duties and functions of the Naval organization.

Going "aboard ship" at Olathe Naval base is a lesson in race relations that might well be copied by those who say, "it can't happen here," and certain race baiters who believe colored and white can't live together in peace and harmony enjoying the same privileges.

10-27-44

Aviation Primary Purpose

The base is ideally planned and constructed to meet the needs of a naval group engaged in aviation pursuits. Coming into this area, one is amazed at the length and breadth of the outlay. The buildings, built to accommodate several thousand men, are complete in detail to care for the group. The administration building, the first conspicuous building in the area, has rooms for officers of the ship's company. Here the ship's orders are issued daily.

With aviation the primary purpose of the base, Negroes participate in the program to a great degree. At Olathe, air cadet training has been discontinued, but there is now an expanded program of the Naval Air Transport service. Here plane commanders are being trained to pilot 4-engined R5D Douglas Skymasters for naval air service all over the world. There are also scheduled flights daily from the field carrying cargo and personnel toward the battlefront.

10-27-44

Negro sailors service these planes and do all detail and repair work on these engines which are carrying the war to the European and Pacific theaters of operations.

In Various Capacities

Heading the list of Negro machinists at Olathe is Lamar Shipp, AMM 1-c, a graduate of Iowa State university. As a civilian he was employed by the U. S. Department of Agriculture in Chicago and was a licensed pilot. In the navy for 20 months, he is leadman for a group of machinists at the Olathe base. Other men working as machinists are Conrad Hammond, a former post-office employe for 13 years from New York city, in the navy for 14 months; William L. Veney, AMM 3-c, in the service for 15 months, a fabric decorator in Brooklyn, N. Y., before joining up; Herman Allen, stationed at Olathe for 3 months, was a photostatic operator as a civilian and attended Alabama State college; Earl Hadley, AMM 3-c, of Kansas City and James Wynder of Harrisburg, Pa.

To compliment this work in aviation, Negroes are working on this base as motor machinists, stewards, messmen, musicians, athletic directors and in numerous other capacities.

Leaving the giant hangars in the base, the bus driven by motor machinists carries you around the spacious grounds. Driving during the day are Negro sailors, along with white sailors and WAVES who are stationed there.

Going into motor transportation, we found there K. O. Neeley, f 1-c of Chicago who had worked in the Pullman shipyards; James Carper, f 1-c of Charleston, W. Va., a student at West Virginia State college before he was drafted; Thomas Stephenson, MOMM 3-c of Kansas City who formerly worked at the quartermaster depot here. In Kansas City he lived with his mother, Pearl Stephenson, at 2527 Olive. Also working in this department was Reginald Thompson, f 1-c of Washington, D. C., who had been employed at the government printing office and James Brown of Newport News, Va., who had been chauffeur for the mayor of the city. These men work along beside white sailors daily and are given the same privileges of making higher ratings in this field.

10-27-44

All Negro Band

Behind all this work which is necessary for the carrying on of the war are the morale groups stationed here. The band for the base is an all-Negro aggregation, recruited in a body in Cincinnati, Ohio. White sailors of the base are a common sight "sitting in" with the group when they play programs or just hold "jam sessions."

The aggregation plays Bach, boogie and martial music with ease. Leading the group is Jos. Hayes, mus. 1-c, the son of a Methodist minister who took his musical training at Oberlin and later studied at Boston Conservatory.

10-27-44

The band plays concerts once or twice a month for the entire base personnel and dance music each day for dinners. All musical programs are planned and performed by the band. Monday, October 16, was the second anniversary of their stay at the base. The group still has 19 of the 20 men recruited in Cincinnati. Among them are: Ben Williams, Mus 2-c, Dayton; John Harvey, Youngstown, Mus 2-c; Harvey, an outstanding athlete, who was top man in a column called "Meet Your Mates," this week in the "Flying Jayhawk," the base publication. He holds both a BS and MA degrees from Ohio State. The article was written by Norman Kerr, saxophone and clarinet player from Cincinnati and M 3-c.

10-27-44

Other bandmen are Reginald Morgan, Columbus, Ohio, Mus 3-c; Richard Garrett, Louisville, Mus 2-c; Carl Stewart, Louisville, Mus 2-c; Edward Armstrong, Louisville, Mus 2-c; Louis Jackson, Mus 2-c Louisville; Gerald Reeves, Evansville, Mus 2-c and former sideman for Louis Armstrong's band; Richard Neely, Cincinnati, Mus 3-c; Joseph McRae, Youngstown, Ohio, Mus 1-c and master of arms for the group and assistant to Hayes; Chester Holland, Mus 3-c, Dayton; Jarvis Woodley, Mus 3-c, Columbus; Jesse Holliman, Columbus, Mus 3-c; George Barker, Louisville, Mus 3-c; James McCarthy, Middleton, Mus 2-c; John Pittman, Dayton, Mus 2-c and Guy Truly, Cleveland, Mus 3-c.

10-27-44

To keep "all hands" happy at Olathe they must be properly fed and housed and able to have certain liberties. These are not problems here. The men sleep in barracks furnished with double deck beds called "sacks" by the sailors. Their clothing is kept in individual lockers and showers and large washrooms are provided. These barracks are two-story buildings. The two floors are called upper and lower decks by the men.

At the barracks, all men are required to arise at 6 o'clock. Lights areout in the barracks at 10 p. m. In each barrack master-at-arms keep discipline. With 108 men under their direct supervision these men are selected carefully. At the barracks we visited Herbert Cooper, s, 2-c of Kansas City who lives at 2127 Flora and Heywood Scarbor of Norfolk, Va., who take over these duties.

10-27-44

In a portion of the upper deck a barber shop has been set up with J. W. Osborne, a barber in civilian life of Washington, D. C., in charge. With more than 300 customers, Osborne opens his shop every day for the benefit of the Negro personnel on the base.

Recreation facilities at the base are "tops" and open to "all hands," white and colored. The recreation building in the center of the base has a pool room, educational office, a library, bowling alley. Ship's service and cafeterias. In a gigantic auditorium facilities are ample and draw both ing the list of facilities for the men and officers. Top-men's use is the gymnasium in es are the features. These movies are another building on the base. Here the men play indoor games and have the use of a swimming pool 170 yards in length with sliding side doors which can be raised in summer. Outside this gymnasium is a stadium for baseball and football.

To keep up morale in this field Charles Browner, Spa 2-c of Philadelphia and former promotion manager for the Philadelphia Afro-American, is in charge. His duties embraces teaching the men physical hardness, welfare and recreation and recruit training. He is aided by Simmie Rayford, Spa 3-c of Chicago, a former amateur boxer there. 10-27-44

Continuing the rounds we see Negroes driving a heavy supply truck. These men were storekeepers and work in the supply department. They were D. S. Wilson, S 2-c of Cleveland and W. R. Rand, S 1-c of Chicago, former postoffice employe there. Both men had attended storekeepers school at Great Lakes.

With more to see every minute in this tour of inspection a new building on the grounds was the Station Chapel. The chapel was erected to accommodate the men in their religious pursuits, this building was dedicated in September with Aaron Moore, St. M 2-c who formerly lived in Kansas City, singing a solo. Here again "all hands" are included.

At Bachelor Office quarters a goodly portion of Negro personnel is stationed. They too, are doing a good job in service. Here a group acts as stewards and messmen. They are headed by Chief Petty officer, Roosevelt Butler of Kansas City, Kas. A number of Kansas Citians are working in this branch. 10-27-44

Returning to the administration building, we find housed another important morale building, the base newspaper called "The Flying Jayhawk." Staffed by ex-newspaper men, news is gathered and printed according to value, barring no individual. Lt. James Sweet, a veteran newspaperman and naval public relations head, seeks to keep the ship's company on an even keel through the written word.

In charge of Negro personnel on the base is Lt. (19) R. A. E. Eddleman. Eddleman has worked with Negro groups since his induction into the Navy and held a post as supervisor at Great Lakes before being transferred to Olathe. A former credit manager with Commercial Credit he lived in Jackson, Miss., and was graduated from college in that state. At Olathe since July, 1944, he has aided in the integration program for Negroes and has refused to accept any manner of segregation or discriminatory treatment for his men. 10-27-44

In order to achieve this program the command of this station has been in complete accord with its features. Commanding this station is Commander H. J. Brow, while Commander V. A. Dorrell, is commanding officer of VR-3. Heading the welfare department is Lt. G. C. Getgood, who has the interest of "all hands."

Rounding out a tour of a Naval base in honor of Navy Day was a surprise, a pleasant one, when we find that under the democratic system "democracy in action" can be called the watchword at Olathe Naval Air Station.

Negro WAVES

Free Press — Detroit, Mich.
10-26-44

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Navy announced Thursday night that President Roosevelt has approved enrollment of Negro women in the WAVES.

ating in 1940. While in school, she was drill leader on the ring committee, and on the senior council. She has been employed as an inspector by the Dewey and Almy Chemical Company. Navy life will not be entirely new to Miss Freeman. She states that in the Civil War her grandfather, Abraham Fenno, was in the navy.

11-16-44

Two Officer Candidates And One Enlisted Woman Sworn Into Navy Reserve

Iowa Bystander

Iowa Bystander — Des Moines, Iowa

Washington—Three Negro women, including two officer candidates and one enlisted recruit, were sworn into the Women's Reserve in Boston and New York City, Monday morning, November 13, under a Navy Department plan, approved by the President, for the acceptance of Negro women into the WAVES. 11-16-44

The first Negro woman in the First Naval District to complete her application and be sworn into the Women's Reserve was Miss Jane A. Freeman, 22, of 164 Walnut avenue, Roxbury, Mass. She was sworn into the service as an enlisted WAVE at 8 a. m. Monday by Capt. L. D. Causey, USN retired, Director of the Office of Naval Officer Procuremenet at Boston.

Two hours later in New York City, two other Negro women were sworn into the service as apprentice seamen and officer candidates by Lt. Rosamond D. Selle at 33 Pine street. They were Miss Harriet Ida Pickens, 35, of 260 West 139th street, and Miss Frances Eliza Wills, 28, of 315 West 113th street, both of New York City. 11-16-44

To Hunter College

Miss Pickens and Miss Wills were scheduled to report to Smith College for training on November 15. Upon successful completion of training, Miss Pickens will be commissioned Lieutenant (j.g.) and Miss Wills will be commissioned an ensign. Miss Freeman, the first Negro enlisted WAVE in the New England area, will be one of the first group of Negro recruits to enter "boot" training at Hunter College, New York City, about January 1, 1945.

Miss Pickens graduated from Smith College in 1930 with A. B. degree cum laude and did graduate work at Columbia University from 1930 to 1933—no degree. From September 1931 to June 1932, she was an instructor at the Bennett College for Women in Greensboro, North Carolina. From 1934 to 1939, she was a project supervisor under the recreational program for WPA in New York City. From June 1939 to the present, she was executive secretary of the Harlem Tuberculosis and Health Committee in New York City. Miss Pickens was born in Talladega, Alabama, on March 17, 1909. 11-16-44

Former Social Worker

Miss Willis graduated from Hunter College in 1938 with a B. A. degree. She received a M. S. from the University of Pittsburgh, in 1934. This degree was in biology, social administration, speech and dramatics. From 1936 to 1940, she worked in the employment department of the Y.W.C.A. on West 137th street, New York City. From February 1940 to September 1941, she was a secretary in the New York Protestant Episcopal Mission Society. Since November 15 last year, she has been a case worker for the State Charities Aid Association in New York City. This work is primarily devoted to investigation of families in connection with child adoption. Miss Wills was born in Philadelphia, Pa., on October 8, 1916.

Miss Freeman is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas T. Freeman of Roxbury, Mass. She attended Roxbury Memorial high school, gradu-

No Jim Crow Units At New Training Posts

Defender — Chicago, Ill.
10-28-44

WASHINGTON.—President Roosevelt approved last week plans submitted by the Navy for the acceptance of Negro women in the Women's Reserve Corps of the Navy.

Following close on the heels of the Navy's announcement of this new policy, the Coast Guard gave notice that it would adopt the Navy policy and accept Negro women in its reserve units. The Marines, which like the Coast Guard is an official branch of the Navy, has not announced its plans.

Navy officials assert there will be no Jim Crow units established in the training centers for the newly recruited personnel. The first enlistments are scheduled for shortly after Jan. 1.

The Navy in announcing the shift in policy regarding the WAVES offered no further explanation than the matter "has been under consideration for a long time." 10-28-44

The plan calls for the immediate commissioning of a limited number of "especially qualified Negro women" to serve as administrative officers. They will assist in the subsequent planning and supervision of the program for Negro women which will be administered as an "integral part of the Women's Reserve."

Enlistment of Negro women will be undertaken as soon as these plans are completed.

Officers' candidates and enlisted women, the announcement states, will be trained in "existing schools" for the training of WAVES. The number of women enlisted for both the WAVES and the SPARS will be determined, Navy officials say, "by the needs of the service."

The Navy's decision came after a long fight by women's groups throughout the country, among them the National Non-Partisan Council on Public Affairs of the Alpha Kappa Alpha sorority under the leadership of Thomasina Walker Johnson, legislative representative. 10-28-44

The plan finally adopted followed very closely that of the outline presented by Mrs. Johnson to Secretary of Navy Forrestal, in which she stated that her organization was deeply concerned about the urgency of establishing a completely non-racial and unsegregated policy in the utilization of qualified women in the WAVES, SPARS and Marines.

Comments from women's organizations on this newly announced Navy policy are as follows: Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune, president, National Council of Negro Women, "The National Council of Negro women rejoices with the women of America in the democratic admission of Negro women into the WAVES and the SPARS. It is another demonstration of what a united, continuous effort on the part of a minority group can do in pressing for justice and in meeting the opportunity for service to the country and to the world.

"We feel that Capt. McAfee's heart has always been on the right side, and her efforts in helping to bring this recognition of justice to our group will not be forgotten by us. 10-28-44

"We pay our tribute of gratitude to the persistent efforts of our National Non-Partisan Council on Public Affairs of the AKA sorority for the gigantic work that they have done in helping to see this bill through.

"Our untiring President was only waiting for the opportunity to extend further the long arm of democracy to Negro women in this instance, and accord them the rights of other women. 10-28-44

"It is our task now to select the finest and best women among us to give representation to Negro women in the fine set-up of the Navy."

FDR Okays Negro Women in Naval Reserve

Daily Mirror — New York, N.Y.
WASHINGTON, Oct. 19 (UP)—The Navy tonight announced that the President had approved a plan for acceptance of Negro women in the Women's Naval Reserve.

The plan, submitted by the Navy, calls for immediate commissioning of a limited number of specially qualified Negro women to serve as administrative officers. They will assist in further planning and supervision of the program for Negro women which will be administered as an integral part of the WAVEs. 10-20-44

47j-1944

Negro Naval Personnel Is Praised For 'Coolness - Braveness' During Blast

By Stander — Des Moines, Iowa
7-27-44.

Praises Negro Personnel

Washington — Negro Naval personnel attached to both the Naval magazine at Port Chicago, California, and the Naval ammunition depot at Mare Island Navy Yard, California, acquitted themselves with "great credit," during the explosion at Port Chicago Monday night, according to Captain Merrill T. Kinne, U.S.N.R. Commanding Officer.

"Under those emergency conditions," he said, 'regular members of our complement and volunteers from Mare Island displayed creditable coolness and bravery."

Captain Kinne said it was difficult to single out individuals who participated in rescue and preventive operations at Port Chicago. Four Negro enlisted men did, however, move boldly into a danger area around boxcars loaded with ammuniiton and quell flames, he said. 7-27-44

They were: Richard L. McTere, Seaman, First Class, of Detroit, Michigan; William E. Anderson. Seaman, First Class, of Chicago, Illinois; E. S. Allen, Seaman, First Class, of Detroit, Mich.; John Andrew Haskins, Pharmacist's Mate, Third Class, of Washington, D. C.

Some 200 Negro sailors volunteered at once at the Ammunition Depot, Mare Island, for service at Port Chicago during the emergency Monday night.

Rear Admiral Carleton H. Wright, U.S.N., Commandant of the Twelfth Naval District, stated July 20:

"I am gratified to learn, as was to be expected, Negro personnel attached to the Naval magazine, Port Chicago, performed bravely and efficiently in the emergency at that station last Monday night. 7-27-44

"These men, in the months that they served at that command, did excellent work in an important segment of the District's overseas combat supply system. As real Navy men, they simply carried on in the crisis attendant on the explosion. in accordance with our service's highest traditions."

Navy Lists 213 Dead

The Twelfth Naval District of the Navy Department this week made public the names of 213 Navy personnel missing and presumably dead in the explosion of the U. S. Naval Magazine, Port Chicago, Calif.

The list contained the names of nine Naval officers, 203 Naval enlisted personnel and one Marine enlisted man. It did not include merchant ship, naval armed guard, Coast Guard or civilian personnel. No Iowans were listed. 7-27-44

Declaring their conduct outstanding, Captain Kinne named the following men as having been observed in courageous pursuit of their duty: Richard E. Webb, Gunner's Mate, Second Class, of Chicago; Bernard N. Clagett, Gunner's Mate, Second Class, of Los Angeles; Ivan A. Hoyle, Motor Machinist's Mate, Second Class, of Chicago; James A. Martinez, Carpenter's Mate, Second Class, of Shreveport, Louisiana; Floyd E. Scarborough, Motor Machinist's Mate, Third Class, of Washington, D. C.; Harry Fortune, Seaman, First Class of Philadelpha, Pennsylvana; Wayman R. Nelson, Motor Machinists's Mate, Third Class, of Kansas City, Kansas; Robert Lee Williams, Electrician's Mate, Third Class, of Lexington, Kentucky; William T. Haris, Shipfitter, Third Class, of Bloomfield, New Jersey; William H. DeWitt, Seaman, Secosd Class, of Pittsfield, Massachusetts; Edward Harrington, Pharmacist's Mate, Third Class, of New York City; Archie B. Covington, Hospital Apprentice, First Class, of Chicago.

7-29-44

The California Eagle newspaper published at Los Angeles estimated "at least three hundred and eighty-eight Negro sailors were among those killed" in the explosion on July 17.

"Port Chicago, formerly Bay Point, is about 19 miles from Oakland, and houses about 1,500 Negro sailors. The entire town consisting of the barracks, one theater, two beer taverns, a post office, and the railroad station, was demolished. A new mess hall and three new barracks just comlpeted were also destroyed. No Negro families live in the town itself," the California paper revealed.

NAVY PHYSICAL TRAINING INSTRUCTORS

Defender — Chicago, Ill. 7-29-44

7-29-44

7-29-44

The staff of the physical training and recreation department of the 14th regiment, Camp Moffett, Great Lakes Naval Training Station, Ill. Seated: Ensign Samuel E. Barnes, Oberlin, Ohio; standing, left to right: Wilbur C. Wallace, Sp(A)3c, Washington, D. C.; Kenneth O. Wilson, Slc, St. Paul, Minn.; Ozzie Simmons, Sp(A)3c, Chicago, Ill., and Floyd Bates, S2c, Flint, Mich.

Treated Without Discrimination

Lt. Edward Swain Hope Shatters Navy Tradition

Courier — Pittsburgh, Pa.
7-8-44

By EVELYN SHERRER, New York Bureau

CAMP ENDICOTT, R. I.—With quiet and unassuming strength, Lt. Edward Swain Hope, of Civil Engineer Corps in the Volunteer Service of the U. S. Naval Reserve, is shattering a tradition which, for more than a century, tabooed the existence of a Negro naval officer. He is the highest ranking Negro in the Naval service. He has been for six weeks. He is not a curio or a monstrosity. He is not being given the "silent treatment." He is not being patronized. Happily, for the portunities. I'm just being paid taneous announcement was made as hydro-electrical engineer with Naval Reserve and the Negro. he off on what I've preached for that 10 staff officers were needed the Electrical Bond and Share is primarily a naval officer, nothing years." company. 7-8-44 more, nothing less. 7-8-44 How did he get into the Navy? How did he become an officer? in the Naval Reserve, Lieutenant was superintendent of build-
MADE OWN "BREAKS" Why is he in the Navy? Lt. Hope puts it this way: Strangely, significantly, he qualified for the job, sought it and got it. ings and grounds at Howard uni-
"Negroes ought to enter fields, take advantage of new op- In February, when the Navy an- there since 1931, when he had returned to the commissioning of a group of Negro ensigns, a simul- at the time. He had been about enlisting wasn't too easy.
nounced the Reaching a definite decision to this country from Ha- Lieutenant Hope said. "My wife wii. In Brazil he had been employed out how we and the two boys could get along on a junior grade salary. We finally decided we could, and I filed the initial papers." From that point on, Lieutenant Hope says, there were papers and papers and more papers to be filed; letters of recommendation, birth certificate, etc. Somewhere along the line, an officer said, "he looks good, but his eyes!" Lieutenant Hope wears glasses and his vision is not exactly 20-20. But he was granted a waiver on this score, and finally the phone call came. The one telling him to report at Indoctrination school at Camp Endicott May 20.

OPPORTUNITY FINALLY COMES

Seated in the office of Com. L. M. Blanche, USNR, personnel officer here, Lieutenant Hope spoke modestly, even reticently, of a distinguished background and career. He is soft-spoken, warm, gently humorous and gracious. He de-emphasizes his own importance and emphasizes the importance of Negroes trying their wings over new fields, equipping themselves for new jobs. "And if a man is equipped for a job that isn't usually allotted to Negroes, it's his duty to get out and get that job," he feels. 7-8-44

TOP NAVY MAN — Lt. Edward Swain Hope, CEC-V (S), USNR, is the highest-ranking Negro in the Naval Reserve. Presently stationed at Camp Endicott in Rhode Island, he is completing officer's training courses to qualify for one of any number of assignments open to him. In civilian life, Lieutenant Hope distinguished himself here and abroad in the field of civil engineering.—Solomon Photo.

GOOD FAMILY MAN

Frequently, and at the most unexpected moments, Lieutenant Hope made references to his wife and the two boys, Edward, Jr., and James Lynn. It would seem that his whole naval career was devoted to them. Mrs. Hope is the former Marion Conover, of Boston.

Despite his intensive training and experience in civil engineering, Lieutenant Hope, like thousands of others, is attending officers training school to qualify for duty on the station force. He is studying naval regulations, seamanship, physical training, among a host of other courses. The entire course should be completed in 12 weeks. Wherever he is finally placed depends upon his marks. Commander Blancke indicated that at present, Lieutenant Hope is near the top of his class.

PLENTY OF STUDY

The lieutenant and everyone else at the station "hit the deck" at 6:30 a. m. From 6:45 to 7:30 is breakfast. Classes are held from 8 'til noon. After lunch, from 1 'til 5 o'clock, there are more classes. From 5:30 to 6:30 is supper. Thereafter, the men's time is pretty much their own. But Lieutenant Hope finds that most of this "free" time is spent in study. There is a great deal of studying to be done. For instance, his class covered naval regulations, which are incorporated in a huge volume, in a one-week period. 7-8-44

INEXPENSIVE SETUP

Lieutenant Hope is tremendously impressed by the food at the station. It costs him only 70 cents a day for his meals. (Officers pay for their own meals. However, married officers do not pay for their rooms.) He lives with the officers in a two-story barracks in a double-decker bed.

The lieutenant exhibits little-boy enthusiasm when he talks of the varied recreational facilities at the station. "Why, we have good, first-run movies quite often—and there's tennis." 7-8-44

Of his role in the Naval Reserve, superior officers are unanimous in their opinion that "he is carrying a burden and carrying it well."

Urges Review Of Mutiny Trial

11-6-44

Convinced of the innocence of the 50 Negro sailors charged with mutiny for failure to load ammunition last August 9 at the Mare Island depot in California, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People will request opportunity to file a brief to be heard before Rear Admiral Carlton H. Wright, C. O., Twelfth Naval District. In addition, it will also file a brief and appear personally when the case is referred to the Judge Advocate General's division of the Navy Department for review in Washington. New York, N. Y.

STEAMROLLER

The fact-finding board deliberated only 45 minutes in finding the men guilty. The particular charge of which they have been convicted or the length of the sentences imposed has not been announced and probably will not be until Rear Admiral Wright and the Reviewing Board in Washington has examined the record for legal sufficiency. The evidence in mitigation, however, reveals that 44 men on trial had perfect conduct ratings of 4.0 and that over half of them were under 21 years of gae. 11-6-44

Special Counsel Thurgood Marshall of the NAACP spent 12 days investigating circumstances and reviewing testimony of the seamen during their trial at Yerba Buena Island, Calif. It is his opinion that the men are innocent of the charge of mutiny. Daily Worker

160,000 Negroes in Navy

L.A. Calif. Tribune

GREAT LAKES, Ill.—There are more than 160,000 Negroes in the Navy, most of whom received their basic training at Great Lakes. 11-3-44

Forrestal Gets Queries Raised By Legal Counsel

World-Memphis, Tenn. 10-24-44

Asserts Real Cause Of Trial Is Not Apparent

NEW YORK — (SNS) — As a result of the action of the Twelfth Naval District in singling out an even fifty Negro sailors to be charged with mutiny for refusal to load ammunition at the Mare Island depot, August 9, Special NAACP Counsel, Thurgood Marshall, has requested through and impartial investigation by the Navy Department, in his letter to Secretary, James V. Forrestal.

After spending twelve days investigating circumstances and reviewing testimony of the Seamen being at Yerba Buena Island, California, Mr. Marshall declared "These men are being tried for mutiny solely because of their incidental."

CAUSE HIDDEN 10-24-44

Not spare in his commendation, however, of the splendid defense being made on behalf of the defendants by Lieutenants Gerald E. Veltman, Mr. Marshall alleged that the most significant factors underlying the real cause of accusations brought against the Negroes, were not apparent. Mindful of the issues at stake, Mr. Marshall said in his letter to Secretary of the Navy, Forrestal, "In addition to attending the trial, I made an investigation as far as possible into the incidents leading up to the Port Chicago explosion and conditions immediately prior to the alleged refusal to obey orders, resulting in the present trial. I, of course, realize it would be impossible to make a thorough investigation since I am a civilian."

ASKS PROBE

"There are many factors involved in the working conditions in the Twelfth Naval District which could not be brought out in the court martial.

I am convinced that there are sufficient facts involved to warrant a thorough and complete investigation by your office as to the following conditions, which existed in the Twelfth Naval District; 10-24-44

"1. Why is it that the only Naval personnel loading ammunition regularly were Negroes with the exception of their officers and petty officers?

"2. Why is it that Negro seamen, many of whom have had special training in such schools as gunnery schools, were nevertheless relegated to the duty of loading ammunition?

"3. Why is it that these men were not given any training whatsoever in the dangers to be found in loading ammunition?

"4. Why is it that men with no prior experience whatsoever were given the duty of handling winches in the loading of ammunition when civilian longshoremen were not permitted to handle winches on ammunition unless they had had several years' experience in winch handling.? 10-24-44

"5. Why is it that Negro seamen with no prior experience in ammunition were given the job of hatch tender in the loading of ammunition?

MEN WERE RACE

"6. Why is it that officers 'raced' their gangs in contests in the loading of ammunition?

"7. Why is it that one of the accused, Seamen Green, while suffering with a broken wrist, despite the fact that the Navy doctors ordered him on the sick list, was not placed on the sick list, but was ordered to load ammunition?

"8. Why is it that Negro seamen who had been loading ammunition and who were at Port Chicago at the time of the explosion were not given any leave whatsoever as a result of this explosion, but were forced to return to the duty of loading ammunition? A Psychiatrist from the United States Navy testified at the court martial proceedings that such an explosion as occurred at Port Chicago would have a lasting effect upon the minds of the men who were near the explosion. 10-24-44

GIVEN MENIAL TASKS

"Practically all of the Negroes at Port Chicago were trained at great length and were led to believe that they were being trained to serve as regular seamen. This they are anxious to do. When these men were assigned to Port Chicago instead of being given an opportunity to serve in whatever branch of the service they might find themselves fitted, they were, solely because of their race or color, restricted to the task of loading ammunition and other menial tasks.

"As a result of the action of the Twelfth Naval District in releasing some of the men who allegedly refused to obey orders, shipping 150 of the men to the Pacific around the middle of August, the giving of summary courts to some of the men and the singling out of an even 50 to be charged with mutiny, Negro members of the armed forces, as well as Negro and white civilians, believe that a thorough, complete and impartial investigation by your office is essential at this time.

"We have been receiving reports in this office for several months and my investigation in the Bay Area seems to justify all of the complaints we have received concerning the discriminatory policies being practiced by the Twelfth Naval District. 10-24-44

"In this request for an impartial investigation we by no means wish to reflect at all upon the manner in which the actual court martial proceedings are being conducted. It is for that reason we believe the investigation is necessary."

Navy Negroes In Sea Battles

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5. — The Navy Department's announcement last week that there were 148,749 Negro enlisted men and 22 officers, the largest in United States history, has started speculation here as to how many actually man ships in combat. Negro Navy personnel has previously been confined to the steward's department. 11-6-44

500 IN BATTLE AREA

About 500 Negroes are currently assigned, both as petty officers and as non-rated men, to ships now participating in the naval battles around the Philippines, according to the announcement. The vessels are of the type of store ships, ammunition ships, cargo ships, oilers and miscellaneous auxiliaries.

Negro petty officers aboard these ships include coxswains, gunners' mates, quartermasters, carpenters' mates, yeomen, machinist mates, electricians' mates and shipfitters.

47j-1944

They Guard Sea Lanes

Tribune – Philadelphia, Pa. 9-23-44

9-23-44

The safety of a ship or its success in battle often depends on the skill and alertness of a radio operator. Here we see Bluejackets of the Camp Roberts Smalls Service Schools, Great Lakes, Ill., receiving and recording messages. These students are future radiomen of our Navy. Left to right, Lyndall Elliott, RM2c, 804 east 3rd street, Metropolis, Ill.; Charles Ballard, S2c, 304 west 121st street, New York City; Leroy Austin, S2c, 524 Monroe street, Buffalo, N. Y.; Alwyn Griffith S2c, 2402 Acushnet avenue, New Bedford, Mass., and William Patton, S2c, 551 South Orange street, Media ,Pa. (Official U. S. Navy Photo).

Camp Smalls Trains 300 Radiomen In Two Years

9-23-44

GREAT LAKES, Ill.—In the past two years, Camp Robert Smalls Radioman Service School here has turned out over 300 colored Radiomen giving them 19 weeks of intensive training that would normally cost approximately $1,000.

Prospective Radiomen, in addition to learning to send and receive the International Morse Code, are required to type a minimum of 40 words a minute, and are taught how to operate and maintain the intricate radio equipment found aboard modern Men-O-War. Their course includes instruction in elementary electricity wave propagation and an explanation of the electron theory. They are acquainted with construction and operation of batteries, generators, vacuum tubes and all the machines with which they work. . . for radiomen must be able to make minor repairs on the apparatus they use.

Each man entering his fifteenth week of school is assigned each day to a four hour watch on the Ninth Naval District Training circuit. While on this watch he sends and receives messages in code.

The Radio School in Camp Smalls is supervised by Lt. (jg) F. H. Lemmon, USN, under the direction of Captain H. R. Harris, USNR, Commanding Officer of the Service Schools Command.

9-23-44

In commenting on Radiomen trained at Camp Smalls, Captain Harris states: "With the training they have received here, our graduates have creditably handled the jobs assigned to them afloat and ashore. The skills they have learned have enabled them to make a valuable contribution to the winning of the war. I am sure they will find these same skills as useful when they return to civil life and peacetime conditions."

Hope Made First Naval Lieutenant

Afro American Baltimore, Md.

WASHINGTON

Edward S. Hope, civil engineer and superintendent of buildings and grounds at Howard University, became the Navy's first colored lieutenant following his swearing in at the Navy Department and assignment to the Civil Engineer Corps on Monday.

Lieut., Hope was sworn in by Lieut. Com. H. B. Atkinson, USNR, executive officer of the Office of Naval Officer Procurement, at exercises attended by his wife, Mrs. Norma C. Hope, and his two sons, Edward, Jr., 9, and J. Lynn, 5.

5-20-44

Lieut. Hope, who holds a degree of doctor of education in personnel administration, is the first of the ten staff officers whose pending appointment was announced several weeks ago by the Navy Department.

Three Years in Brazil

He served for three years in Brazil as hydro-electric engineer for the Brazilian subsidiary of the Electric Bond and Share Co. of N.Y. and as junior engineer with the highways division of the New York State Department of Public Works.

6-20-44

He also holds degrees of A.B. from Morehouse College and B.S. and M.S. in civil engineering from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

He is a member of the American Association of Engineers, the National Technical Association, and Kappa Delta Pi of Columbia University.

To Report to R.I.

After he was sworn in, Lieut. Hope was ordered to report to Davisville, R.I., for indoctrination and assignment to duty in connection with Seabee training.

His appointment follows the commissioning at Great Lakes, Ill., of eleven ensigns from enlisted personnel. The other nine staff officers will include two each in the chaplain, dental, medical and supply corps and one more in the civil engineer corps.

Intimidation Is Charged To Prosecution

Daily World – Atlanta, Ga.

10-12-44

Men Say They Were Threatened With Execution

SAN FRANCISCO—(A N P)—Fireworks in the mutiny case, involving 50 Negro seaman who are facing death for refusing to load ammunition after 300 seamen died in the Port Chicago naval explosion, were started last week when opposing counsel clashed over defense testimony.

The fireworks started when Alphonso MacPherson, a defendant, took the witness stand and pointed to Lt. Comdr, James F. Cockley, prosecutor, saying:

"That man, during pre-trial questioning, told me to 'come clean' and added that if you don't you probably will get shot."

COCKLEY STIFFENS

10-12-44

Cockley stiffened and charged that the defense was attempting to inject statements to show that he was unfair and said the testimoney was "hitting below the belt." In defending the testimony of his client, Lt. Gerald Veltmann, defense counsel, denied the witness had been influenced. MacPherson confirmed the statement.

Read Adm. Hugo Osterhaus, president of the courtmartial board, broke the row by remarking that MacPherson had not been shot and suggested "let's get some lunch."

Cecil Miller, a section leader at Port Chicago, testified that he would not obey an order to load ammunition if he were to receive it.

10-12-44

"LOOKING DOWN BARREL"

"You know you are looking down the barrel of a gun right now," said Miller Matthews, seaman second class, in telling about the remarks of an officer at Camp Shoemaker who was taking statements of men charged with refusing to load the ammunition. "If you don't want to tell me the truth about what you know, I'll put you down as a ringleader." The prosecutor, Cmdr. Cockley, took exception to this testimony, charging the defense with again bringing insinuations of intimidation of the prisoners into the trial.

Seaman 2/c Freddie Meeks, the 25th member of the accused group to take the stand, testified that he had made a statement to the effect that he was willing to obey any orders that would help "this country win the war, and would go to the front," but that he was afraid to load ammunition.

"You have a 50-50 chance when you are loading ammunition,' Meeks said he told an officer at Camp Shoemaker.

10-12-44

EXPRESS FEARS

Charles S. Wideman, seaman 2/c, testified that he told an ensign at Camp Shoemaker where the alleged mutineers were held that he did not know exactly what mutiny was, but that he could be shot for "making mutiny."

Wideman, a baker escaped the Port Chicago explosion because he was confined to sick bay eight days before the tragedy with a rupture from injuries he received while loading the munitions.

When authorities asked Widemen if he would return to loading ammunition after he recovered, he replied that he was undecided, he testified. He was ordered to join the group of alleged mutineers for his indecision. He made a written statement expressing his fears of the task, he said.

A conviction of mutiny carries a penalty of death before a firing squad.

NAACP Hits Navy In Mass Trial Of Fifty

Houston Informer 9-30-44

WASHINGTON, (ANP)—Warning that the Navy's ing ammunition, the NAACP wired 50 Negro enlisted ng of bitter resentment over the Forrestal last week, urging that V. in California last avy policy of segregation and as- ment at Mare Island, Cal., over cin- igning Negroes exclusively to haz- in naval history, as hear- tinued policy growing out of seg- ardous jobs of loading and unload- every precaution be taken to pre- vent increased feeling and possible strife in the mass courtmartial of ing charges of disobedience of ord- regation and of assigning Negroes exclusively to hazardous jobs o loading and unloading ammunition Further informed that proposed mass court martial of 50 Negro sailors who allegedly refused assignment will greatly aggravate situation. In view of previous conflict in that area, particularly at Vallejo, urge every necessary precaution be taken to avert strife."

Winners of Petty Officers' Award at Great Lakes

Afro American — Baltimore, Md. 7-1-44

Company Commander John H. Dobbins, seaman 1c, of Corpus Christi, Tex., and his staff of apprentice petty officers of "Rooster" award at the Great Lakes Naval Training Station. The award, given to the best company in a battalion five times in succession, qualifies members of the unit for the Hall of Fame. The "A" flag shown in the photo was award for superiority in athletics. In the group, left to right are, front row, Earl Parke, Portsmouth, Va.; James A. Brown, Washington; James B. Hardy, N.Y.C.; and Hezzie Williams, Chicago; back row, Alexander M. Baynard, Norristown, Pa.; Raymond Logan, Philadelphia; Edward D. Walton, Sp(A)2c, (sub-commander), Chicago; John H. Dobbins, S/, Corpus Christi, Tex., Co. Commander; Jesse Perry, Chicago, and George W. Walker, N.Y.C.

LOADERS OF TNT PROTEST ON DANGEROUS JOB;

Plaindealer — Kansas City, Kan.

"ONLY NEGRO" SAILORS WORK

9-22-44

B-U-L-L-E-T-I-N

San Francisco.—It was reported here this week that fifty Negro sailors, who refused to go back to work to the dangerous "For Negroes Only" job of loading lethal navy ammunition following the disastrous Port Chicago explosion which claimed 323 lives went on trial for their lives in a navy court-martial, facing a charge of mutiny.

They made clear that they were not protesting the loading of ammunition but the fact that they were segregated and that only Negroes are assigned to this most dangerous work.

A military court on Yerba Buena island in San Francisco bay is hearing the mutiny charges against the men for which the maximum penalty is death. It is expected the trial will last a week.

9-22-44

Hastings, Neb.—Eight Negro sailors were dead or missing and 47 others injured in the tragic explosion here on Friday that rocked this 48,000-acre naval ammunition depot, blowing out a huge hole, 550 feet long and 25 feet deep.

The dead or missing, as listed by officials of the Ninth Naval District in Chicago, are as follows:

Leslie Williams, S-1c, Route 3, Box 233, Atmore, Ala.

Freeman Lorenzo Tul, S-1c, 513 Young street, Poconoke City, Md.

Willie Williams, S-2c, General Delivery, Atmore, Ala.

Daniel Casey, S-2c, 530 Roosevelt avenue, Carteret, N.J.

Frank William Davidson, S-2c, Lincolnton, N. C.

Samuel Burns. S-2c, Route 3, Box 65, Delhi, La.

Clarence Randolph, S-2c, Route 1, Box 201, Bartow, Fla.

Ulysses Cole Jr., S-2c, Box 663, Ida Bell, Okla. 9-22-44

A ninth sailor victim among the dead or missing was Bert Edward Huton, S-2c, (white), of Hastings

When first aid was rushed to the scene following the terrific blast, 27 civilian employes of the depot were given medical attention. It was expected that all but four of the civilian casualties would be discharged by Tuesday.

Of the others hurt by the explosion, 20 enlisted men were given medical attention but their injuries were reportedly not serious. Two of this number were Negroes.

Heard 100 Miles Away

The detonation was heard at McCook, 125 miles from Hastings and also at Jamestown, Kans., 100 miles distant. Window panes in 23 downtown Hastings stores were broken and the Spencer Park school, a war workers' housing project, suffered "considerable damage."

9-22-44

Concerning the cause of the blast, Gunner L. C. Anderson, officer in charge of the station, said that he and several other men were loading ammunition into a box car when they noticed a small fire. He said:

"We attempted to fight the fire with a hose, but it quickly got out of control and we ran for the safety barricade.

"Just as we jumped behind the barricade the whole building blew up. It sounded like all hell had broken loose. Had it not been for that barricade, the whole plant might have gone up."

Negro WAVES

Daily World — Atlanta, Ga.

9-22-44

The Navy's acceptance of Negro women to the WAVES is a long overdue step and will be welcome by all of us involved in the fight against color and racial discrimination, both in the armed forces and in civilian life.

It is announced that a limited number of specially qualified Negroes will be commissioned immediately and that enlistment will begin shortly after the first of the year. Negro WAVES will be trained in existing establishments, where we fondly hope, no segregation will be practiced. In this move, the Navy has a golden opportunity to attack this policy of Jim Crowism by deciding to integrate new recruits after they are trained, in existing units.

The Coast Guard has announced that the Navy includes enlistment in the SPARS. Now let us hope that the Marine Corps will follow suit and begin opening its doors to qualified Negro women on an unsegregated basis.

First Chaplain In Navy Is Assigned

Daily World — Atlanta, Ga.

9-22-44

GREAT LAKES, Ill.—(SNS)—Lt. (jg) James Russell Brown, Navy's first Negro Chaplain reported for duty at the U. S. Naval Training Center, Great Lakes.

Shortly after his appointment in June, Chaplain Brown was sent to the Chaplain's School at William and Mary College, Williamsburg, Va., for an indoctrination course. After completing the eight-week course at William and Mary, he was sent to the Bureau of Personnel in Washington, D. C., for short while and was subsequently attached to Naval Procurement Offices in Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, and Detroit, before reporting to the Great Lakes.

Lt. (jg) Brown, one-time pastor of St. Luke's AME Church, Kansas City, Kansas and former Dean of Bishop Williams School of Religion at Quindaro, Kansas, has been assigned for duty as the Protestant Chaplain at Camp Robert Smalls, one of the two camps where Negroes are trained at this time.

The Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority, together with a number of other organizations, are to be congratulated in their fight for this achievement. The action of the Navy has, thus opened up a new frontier for Negro women and likewise presents them with definite challenge.

47j-1944

First Colored-Manned Subchaser Prepares for Action Against U-Boats

Afro American — Baltimore, Md.

6-3-44 6-3-44 6-3-44

First members of their race to man a submarine chaser, the crew of the U.S.S. PC-1264 is shown receiving instruction in gunnery, depth-charge attacks, and deck and engineering duties on the shakedown cruise of the new 173-foot escort vessel which was commissioned April 25, 1944. At top left, several crew members hold rifle practice on deck. In the top center, two lookouts, Seaman 1st Class J. Boggs (far left) and Seaman 2d Class A. Richards, scan the horizon with officers on the flying bridge. While at top right, Yeoman 2d Class P. J. Davis takes the wheel in the pilothouse as Quartermaster 3d Class A. R. Cork makes an entry in the rough log. At bottom left, a few crew members relax from their heavy duties at chow time in a corner of the general mess. In bottom center, Quartermaster 3d Class A. R. Cork (rear) exchanges blinker messages with another ship, while Seaman 2d Class M. Coleman reports to the bridge by battle telephone. At lower right a depth charge which has been rolled off the fantail explodes astern during a practice submarine attack. The U.S.S. PC-1264 includes 53 colored seamen and eight white petty officers in its crew. It Will be eventually manned by an all-colored crew.

3500 Colored Sailors Train at Stewards' School in Md.

Do Work of Petty Officers, Refused Ratings; No Colored Papers, Whites Use Libraries

AFRO-AMERICAN - Balt., Md. 5-27-44

5-27-44

By FRANK E. BOLDEN
NNPA Correspondent

BAINBRIDGE, Md. — Hard by the Susquehanna River and spread out over some 1100 acres is the Bainbridge Naval Base where approximately 3500 colored sailors are in training for duties as stewards and stewards' mates.

It is the only steward's school in the country and only colored men are in attendance. The white enlisted personnel here is studying for assignments in radio and signal work.

As steward's mates our men will learn to serve table in the officers' mess and take care of the officers' quarters and laundry.

Those who make the grade of steward will, besides supervising the work of the steward's mates, take charge of the officers' mess, arrange menus, prepare food, supervise the purchase and service in general and keep this department ship shape.

Finds Dissatisfaction

This installation, under the command of Capt. C. F. Russell, is unlike others that I have visited in that the majority of the colored personnel have a gripe which the base cannot eliminate because it is one for the Naval high command to consider. 5-27-44

The gripe concerns the status of one who must serve as a steward or steward's mate. This branch of the service offers the same amount of pay as the seaman's complement, but does not carry ratings which give authority and privileges.

A third class petty officer in the seaman's branch rates over a chief steward regardless of the steward's years of service.

A few exceptional cases have been transferred to the seaman's branch and the privilege of "wearing the eagle" has done much to improve the morale. 5-27-44

An example of what follows from such a system can be seen in the physical conditioning program, for instance, where colored steward's mates, having finished the course for physical instructors, are serving as assistant or substitute instructors for both colored and white but without ratings.

White Only Get Ratings

All the rated staff is white (petty officers) and the colored assistants are first, second and third class steward's mates.

George Bragg, StM 2/c, Stanford, Conn., high honor man in his class here, graduated some eleven weeks ahead of O. S. Wilson, white, formerly an AS 2/c, who is now an instructor Spt. (A). Bragg taught Wilson and graded him during his fifth week of service. 5-27-44

Today as a petty officer, Wilson has authority at $96 per month, and Bragg continues to do a good job at $54, with no advanced rating.

Similar cases are those of Albert Sheridan, StM 2/c, of Indianapolis, and Jesse Spaights, StM 2/c, of Helmar, N.J., both of whom were professional boxers in civilian life, graduated from physical instructor's school and are also doing a very capable job as assistants, but with no ratings which carry authority.

Jim Crow in Mess Hall

The two units comprising the steward's complement have equal but not the same sleeping mess and recreational accommodations.

In one chow hall where colored and white (the few here belonging to the seaman's branch) petty officers dine and where the steward's mates get practical experience in serving officers there is segregation between the two races and rank does not appear to be the reason.

Going through the library I noticed that there were no colored newspapers, journals nor digests, that the library personnel was white and that white sailors were lounging around on the settees in the "colored library." I was informed authoritatively that colored men "do not, as a rule, frequent the white library."

The canteen employees in the colored unit are also white. Those here in training feel that since "it has been deemed best" for them to have such segregation that colored employees would be more in keeping with the "old line" policy.

Stewards' School Staff Colored

For the purpose of general instruction there are white, rated instructors in charge of the new recruits. However, the staff of the stewards' school, headed by Walter J. Douglass, CSt, of Corona, N.Y., and a veteran of forty years' service, is colored.

The colored personnel stand watch as units and because of this the men get only two out four opportunities for liberty. The white watch, not having a segregated section, gets three out of four opportunities for liberty on the basis of a four-week month.

Each of the regiments has a band, but the white band only is recognized and rated as such. The colored band also has the "duties" of a bugle corps, but is not considered as the colored regiment's band because no regiment can have two bands and the white has already been designated as such.

No Segregation Found at Staten Island Naval Base

Afro-American Balto. Md. 5-27-44

Third of 4000 Men There Are Colored; All Live, Eat, Work and Play Together

By HERMAN T. SMITH
NNPA Pool Correspondent

STATEN ISLAND, N.Y. — Democracy really works at the U.S. Naval Frontier Base at Thompkinsville, located under the shadow of the Statue of Liberty, a short 20-minutes, five-cent ferry ride from downtown New York City.

Tompkinsville is a working and not a training base, and according to Captain John M. Gill, commanding officer, nearly one third of the approximately 4000 men here are colored.

Colored and white seamen here live in the same quarters, eat together, use the same recreational facilities, and work together according to their ratings and skills.

Race's Handicap

Captain Gill, who is about 60 years old and a native of Oswego, N.Y., said he thought the main handicap of colored men in the Navy was that their race "has not been a sea-going people."

"To be around boats is to know them," he said, "and time, training and experience plus hard work are the only factors on which a man can advance in the Navy." 5-27-44

The commander was emphatic in saying that there shall be no segregation or discrimination on his base other than what the men themselves work out.

Work in All Capacities

I found colored men operating tugs, high-powered cranes, and other machines. There are colored yeomen such as Y/3c Benjamin Fry, from Cleveland, Ohio, and storekeepers, including SK/3c Eddie Bernard, Indianapolis, Ind., and SK/3c Warren W. Mariner, Brooklyn, N.Y.

In the machine shop, where colored men number about 9 per cent of the total personnel, are Theodore Pack, MM/2c, East Liverpool, Ohio; Ellis W. McCauley, MM/2c, Port Arthur, Tex., and Wilbur Tucker, MM/2c, Enterprise, Ala.

In the ship fitting and metalsmith shop, I met Louis Durald, M/2c, a former carpenter from New Orleans, La., and Stanley McMullin, M/2c, Trenton, N.J.

Twelve of the seventy-five workers in the electric shop are colored including Ashton J. Bird, EM/2c from Baton Rouge, La., who works on batteries and the wiring of motors.

Easterners on Tugboat

On board a net tender I talked with Willard Bland, MM/1c, of Chicago, and five other colored men.

On a Navy tugboat I found colored men performing almost every task. Frederick D. Dennis, QM/2c, of Brinkley, Ark., a former school teacher, keeps the ship's log, ship's charts corrected, files crew's weekly muster and keeps crew's pay accounts. On this same boat are Lester E. Honey, S/1c, from Camden, N.J.; Robert Gadson, S/1c, NYC; and Ferrol Gibbs, F/1c, Washington, D.C.

Michigan Grad at Base

The most highly trained seaman I met on the base was Henry A. Martin, Spo/2c, of Chicago, whom Captain Gill classed as one of the most important men on the post.

As oil specialist second class, Mr. Martin's duties are to test all oil used in the motors of ships and other machines operating in or out of the base. He has a degree in chemical engineering from the University of Michigan.

One Commissioned

J. E. Hare of Fort Pierce, Fla., recently was recommended for a commission from this base, and is now serving temporarily as ensign at Great Lakes.

The P.C. 1264, recently commissioned Naval patrol chaser with large colored crew, was out firing at the time of my visit but I glimpsed her coming in the harbor as I was leaving the base.

All-Colored Staff Mans Steward's Mates' School

Afro-American 5-27-44 Balt. Md.

121 Companies Complete Courses Taught by College-Trained Men at Bainbridge

By FRANK E. BOLDEN
NNPA Pool Correspondent

BAINBRIDGE, Md. — Among the remedial schools established here to teach the inductee the fundamentals of education in the shortest possible time, the school for steward's mates with its all-colored staff is outstanding.

All incoming steward's mates are given a literacy test of approximately fourth-grade level. Men requiring instruction are then divided into two groups, "literate but handicapped" and "illiterate or nearly so."

The instructors, most of whom have college degrees or records are volunteers from companies in training and hold all classes after regular hours. Wherever possible, they work with the same groups throughout the course.

A Pure Navy Course

The course of instruction is based entirely on Navy indoctrination and Navy terms are used almost exclusively. Visual education has been found to be an invaluable aid in the courses.

From September, 1943, to the middle of April, 12,094 men had been tested and 121 companies had completed the course. Of the total 2,407 were literate but handicapped and 2,180 were illiterate or nearly so.

Most from Southern States

Most of the men tested represented nine Southern States, Pennsylvania and New York. The majority of them were single with an average age of 18-20 years.

A brief of the roster appear as follows:

Specialist-Teacher

H. M. Jefferson, Sp (T) 2/c, New York, graduate of Johnson C. Smith College; and F. E. Lewis, Sp (T) 3/c, Marshall, Tex., graduate of Wiley College, both petty officers transferred from the steward's to the seaman's branch;

S. L. Coffee, Ck 3/c, Kansas City, Kans., who attended Washburn College; V. B. Elwin, StM 1/c. Hamilton, Bermuda; D. M. James StM 1/c, Los Angeles, a typist; 5-27-44

Ex-Teacher in Texas

L. S. Collins, StM 2/c, Houston, Tex., a graduate of Wiley College and an ex-teacher at Booker T. Washington High School in Houston; L. B. Prater, StM 2/c, Orange, Tex., a graduate of Wiley College, with twelve consecutive years of teaching experience, who has taken the exam for petty officer's rating Sp (T);

O. C. Turner, StM 2/c, Dallas, Tex., graduate of Bishop College, and a former State and field supervisor for insurance companies, who is striking for a petty officer's rating;

V. D. Varnado, St 3/c, Los Angeles, who attended Jackson College; B. E. Coln, St 3/c, Philadelphia, who attended Livingston College and took post-graduate work at the University of Pennsylvania.

To gain advanced ratings that carry with it some measure of authority the men will have to transfer to the seaman's branch. They feel, however, that the transfer will not occur now because of the urgent need for their services ashore and at sea.

Act To Halt Navy Ban On Race Women For Service

Chicago, Ill. Defender 5-13-44

By VENICE SPRAGGS

WASHINGTON — Slighting of the Negro woman by certain auxiliaries of the United States armed forces appeared due for a change when a resolution calling for investigation of Negro women's status in relation to those auxiliaries of the Navy, Marine Corp and Coast Guard was introduced in the House last week by Rep. William A. Rowan (Dem., Ill.).

The resolution authorizes and directs the Committee on Naval Affairs to act as a whole or by subcommittee to make a complete study and investigation. It has been referred to the House Committee on Rules.

The resolution was brought about largely through the efforts of the Alpha Kappa Alpha National Non-Partisan Council of which Thomasina Johnson is legislative representative.

In a statement made by Mrs. Johnson last week, she said, "We consider this a definite step toward securing the admittance of colored women in these auxiliaries." She pointed out, however, that it will take a relentless and vigorous struggle to get the measure reported favorably by the House Rules Committee.

47j-1944
Newport News, Va. Press
April 7, 1944

Negro Applicants Sought By C. G.

Negro applicants between the ages of 17-18 are being sought by the U. S. coast guard for a limited number of vacancies in the rating of steward's mate. Those accepted will be enlisted as a steward's mate third class and later may attain petty officer status.

Base pay is $50 per month and upon enlistment each recruit is given $136.66 clothing allowance. Free medical attention is provided members of the service and their dependents. Each man is eligible for 30 days leave of absence with pay yearly besides regular liberty.

Negro applicants may enlist in the coast guard at the recruiting office, room 203, new postoffice building, Norfolk, or postoffice building, Baltimore, Md.

Enlistment For Negroes Opened By Coast Guard

News-Post-Norfolk, Va.

The Coast Guard announces the opening of volunteer enlistments of Negro boys between the ages of 17 and 18 years, for immediate training. 4-30-44

Applicants who are accepted for enlistment will be sent to Curtis Bay, Md., for their basic training. Advancements in ratings are encouraged since theer are now many Negro officers and chief petty officers in the service. Applicants for enlistment in the Coast Guard must present a birth certificate.

For further information, call in person or write to the U. S. Coast Guard Recruiting Office, 1808 Third Avenue, North.

Coast Guard

Coast Guard Boasts

Daily World. Atlanta, Ga.

First Negro Officers

5-28-44

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(SNS)—The first branch of the Naval Service to commission Negroes, the U. S. Coast Guard now has the highest percentage of commissioned and non-commissioned Negro officers in the armed forces, U. S. Coast Guard Headquarters reported this week.

With approximately 4,000 Negroes on March 31, 1944, a total of 968 colored men were officers. Two of these officers had been commissioned as lieutenants and another as ensign. The others included warrant officers, chief petty officers, and first, second and third class petty officers.

The high percentage of Negro officers was revealed by Coast Guard Headquarters in connection with the current drive for the volunteer enlistment of 1,700 Negro youths, 17 years of age, in the Steward's Mate branch of the service.

Pointing out that promotions will be rapid in this branch, and that Negroes work and fight side by side with ather Coast Guardsmen, the Coast Guard stressed the fact that steward's mates may work themselves up through the ranks as well as all other Coast Guard recruits.

Proof of such advancement was cited in the case of Lt, Clarence Samuels, the first Negro commissioned officer in the Naval Service. Lieutenant Samuels entered the Coast Guard service originally as a steward's mate. In the years which followed, he advanced steadily through the ranks until he became warrant officer and boatswain at the Manhattan Beach training station. Appointed to the board of education there ,he served as instructor in practical seamanship and regulations. Following a recent tour of duty in the active war zones, Lieutenant Samuels is now studying for further advancement at Fort McHenry, Md. 5-28-44

The other two commissioned Negro officers in the Coast Guard, Lt. Joseph J. Jenkins of Detroit, Mich., and Ensign Harvey C. Russel, Jr., of Louisville, Ky., are both graduates of the United States Coast Guard Academy at New London, Conn., where both entered through competitive examinations. Both are now on active duty.

Negro officers in the U. S. Coast Guard on March 31, 1944—the majority of whom entered the service as steward's mates included:

Commissioned Officers
Warrant Officers
Chief Petty Officers	4
First Class Petty Officers	20
Second Class Petty Officers	28
Third Class Petty Officers	43
Total 5-28-44	96

In urging 17-year-old Negro youths to visit the Coast Guard recruiting offices in their local communities for possible enlistment headquarters listed the following advantages: fast advancement valuable training for a postwar job and action aboard ship at battle stations.

Because the size of the Coast Guard is limited by law, only 17-year-old youths volunteering for the Steward's Mates branch can enter the Coast Guard at this time. It is impossible, at present, to join the Coast Guard in any other way, either by draft or enlistment: In ,the future the Coast Guard may open 17-year-old enlistments in other branches of the Service.

Coast guardman paints Negro invasion scenes

Los Angeles, Calif.—Tribune
6-26-44

WASHINGTON — Exploits of Negro coast guardsmen on dangerous and essential missions — including landing operations in Europe and other invasion points —are being vividly recorded by a Negro combat artist now serving on a North Atlantic patrol vessel, U. S. Coast Guard headquarters announced in Washington.

The fighting painter is Coast Guardsman Jacob Lawrence, steward's mate second class, who before his enlistment was one of the most celebrated artists in New York City. Of the 26-year-old youth, Coast Guard headquarters said:

"He simply paints vividly and proudly of the work his race is doing aboard ship on dangerous and essential missions all over the seven seas to speed the winning of the war Lawrence is a quiet, intelligent and extremely modest person—he lives to paint—but is not impressed with this assignment as a combat artist to the exclusion of all else. He quietly and efficiently fulfills the duties of his rate, that of steward's mate second class—attached to the officer's mess." 6-26-44

Lawrnece won unusual acclaim in his field prior to entering service with the U. S. Coast Guard. His labor migration portfolio, which a magazine reproduced in color in 1941, brought him national prominence and was followed by a one-man show of watercolors titled "Harlem" at the Downtown Gallery in New York City.

Lawrence has painted since childhood, but obtained his first recognition on a WPA art project. Later he studied under Charles Alston, former OWI artist now in the armed services, and received several fellowships and a scholarship at the American Artist school in New York.

Negro Youths Wanted For Coast Guard

Daily Times
Valdosta, Ga.

Headquarters of the U. S Coast Guard in Washington, D C. has announced that the opportunity for Negro youths of seventeen years of age to enlis in the Coast Guard and serve as steward's mates has been extended for at least another month. The Coast Guard announcement stated that, while a large number of young men had already enlisted for this service the need for men for this duty had increased so greatly both at sea and at the Coast Guard stations, that there were still many openings and still ample opportunities for rapid advancement in the service. 5-25-44

Information on the service and application for enlistment is available at the Coast Guard Recruiting Station, Room 203 Federal Building, Jacksonville Florida. The recruiting office is remaining open until six o'clock in the evening during the next several weeks to accommodate Negro youths employed in the daytime.

The young men receive three months basic training at the Coast Guard Training Station, Curtis Bay, Maryland, near Baltimore and are then assigned to their stations as steward's mates, from which they may advance to Chief Petty Officer or may become commissioned officers if their service proves them to be exceptionaly well qualified. 5-25-44

Negroes have played a part in heroism and service in the Coast Guard in this war out of all proportion to their numbers. They have featured prominently in several of the Coast Guard's dramatic surface battles with enemy submarines and in several instances were principally responsible for the reserve of torpedoed merchant seamen.

SETTING A TREND for post-war Democracy, this interracial quartet, composed of U. S. Coast Guardsmen, is fast making a national name for itself. Directed by Homer Smith of Southernaire fame, the four men plan to continue their musical unit after the war. They are in demand for high-class entertainment and especially for morale-building performances for Uncle Sam. The boys have started a fund for themselves, each one chipping in from his own pay envelope, for they cannot receive compensation for their services. The fund has now reached $1,000. It is reserved to tide them over a training period at the close of the war. They are left to right: Frank Boyle, pianist; Homer Smith, tenor; Martin Boughan, second tenor; Thomas Lockard, baritone, and James Lewis, bass.

Peoples Voice-New York, N.Y. 2-15-44

CHARLES W. DAVID JR.
Call-Kansas City, Mo.

Coast Guard Hero Acclaimed

Loses Life After Saving Officer

3-10-44

U. S. Coast Guard Headquarters in Washington, D. C., this week related in detail how a Negro mess attendant aboard a Coast Guard combat cutter gave his life to save his executive officer and others during dramatic rescue operations in the North Atlantic.

The central figure in the story, one of many heroic incidents that followed torpedoing of a transport last year, was Charles W. David Jr., 26, of 1324 Prospect Ave., New York city, a mess attendant, first class, aboard a Coast Guard cutter. He died of pneumonia following his exertions and exposure.

David dived repeatedly into icy seas, in total darkness, to haul survivors to safety and finally rescued Lt. Langford Anderson, the executive officer, who had gone overside to set an example for his rescue crews. The air temperature was below freezing at the time, and the water temperature only slightly above. The sea was building up before a rising wind.

Shadowed by Submarines

Four or five submarines were known to have been shadowing the convoy at the time the transport was hit and sunk, and the rescue operations were conducted under the ever-present hazard of a new attack. During her own rescue work, the cutter acted as a screen for another cutter similarly engaged. 3-10-44

Many of the survivors, on life rafts, in life boats that were awash, or buffeted in life jackets, were unconscious or semi-unconscious and unable to aid themselves. The rescue crews went overside on cargo nets, working in the pounding seas to snatch men from boats and rafts, and to rig bowlines with which they could be lifted to the deck. The nets from which they worked steadily iced up.

"David was over the side on at least three occasions," Lt. Anderson said, "and due to his extreme strength he facilitated the task of getting survivors aboard who were frozen to such a degree they were like logs."

Breaks Strangle Hold

Lt. Anderson, slight of build, was working on the lower net when he was siezed by a desperate drowning man and pulled under the water. David sensed the situation, dived from the net, succeeded in breaking the survivor's strangle hold on his officer, and rescued both. The cutter picked up 49 living men from the torpedoed ship.

Son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles David, Bronx, New York, the Coast Guardsman was a graduate of the Bronx Vocational high school. His wife, Kathleen W. David, lives at 343 W. 122nd St., New York city, with their only son Neil Adrian.

The cutter at the time of the story, was in command of Lt. Comdr. Ralph R. Curry of the Coast Guard. 3-10-44

The officer David rescued, Lt. Anderson, later became commanding officer of the cutter. He figured in the news recently when, as skipper of the Comanche, he was instrumental in saving the lives of 29 men from the foundered army ship Nevada.

Harvey Steele, 26, and Isaac G. McNatt, 27, both living in New York the grounds of unfitness. This prejudicial type of discharge has denied them mustering out pay and other rights and privileges provided for veterans of this war. It has for veterans of this war. It has also made it impossible for them to resume their normal place in civilan life, barring them from many schools and opportunities for employment. Steele, after passing all his examinations for a civil service job, was told he could not be hired because of his type of discharge. McNatt, who is studying law at night, can not be admitted to the New York Bar because of it.

Eulace Peacock, Now in Coast Guard Is Praised by 'Beating Gun' Man

Call-Kansas City, Mo. 7-14-44

By AL MOSES

NEW YORK. — (ANP) — He's a member of the United States' coast guard and a fine brother-of-a-laddie he is . . . bee-jabbers (pardon my Irish or Gaelic) racing for the BHT subway trains, of a busy mawning (morning.) . . . Eulace Peacock, an immortal of Temple (Philadelphia) university, is the subject who seems to go on forever and forever. 7-21-44

Time was when track authorities were saying that the one man in the world who appeared to have the well-known "Indian sign" on incomparable Jess Owens. . . . was this same . . . Eulace Peacock. That was back in 1936, the year when Herr (Schicklegruber) Hitler, of Chermany (Germany), was calling America's brilliant Negro athletes who were showing up his Nazi-murderers-protem, "black auxiliaries."

No greater sprinter or broad-jumper than Eulace Peacock ever breathed, unless it was, as I've often stated, Owens.

In this year of 1944, we find Peacock being crowned . . . National AAU Pentathlon Champion, piling up 2,852 points in winning three of the five major events at Elizabeth, N. J, Peacock won the broad jump, javelin throw, and 200-meter dash. Eight years since the Berlin Olympic games and this classy brown hercules continues to stand out in the athletic firmament . . . like a sore thumb. Highly intelligent, personable and a hale fellow well met, Eulace Peacock is a definite credit to his race and to the branch of his country's services.

SHOWED SCOFFERS

For years a lot of self-styled white writing experts, have poked fun at Leroy (Satchel) Paige. Paige, sort of a legendary figure in the annals of Negro baseball in this country, has been made the brunt (supposedly good-natured), of most of the whimsies some writers can conjure up. 7-21-44

But during the first week of July, the elongated one who toils in the livery of the Kansas City Monarchs team, won what amounted to rave notices from New York writers of—all stature.

Discharged Seabees Ask For Review Of Cases Under New Act

Age-New York, N.Y. 9-2-44

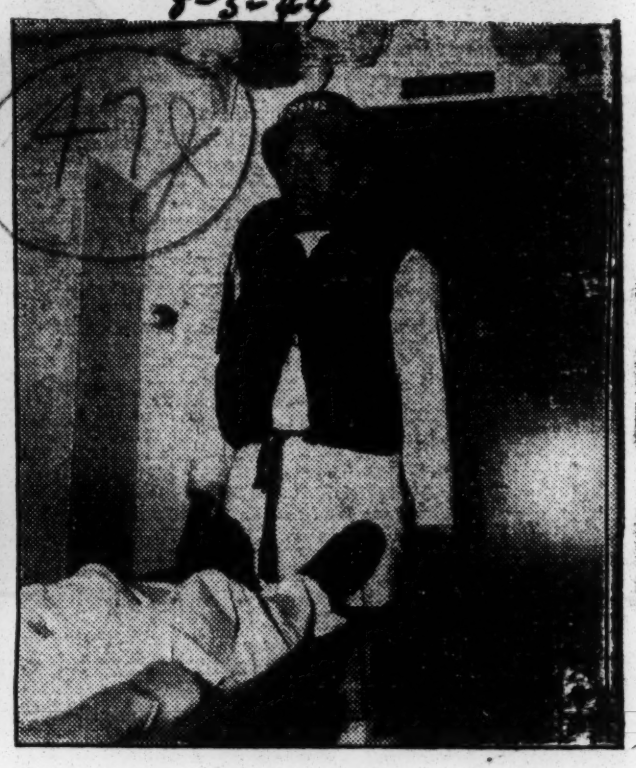
In one of the first, if not the very first, requests for a hearing as provided for under the Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1944, more Forces announced Monday.

The Lynn's Committee is handicommonly known as the G. I. Bill of Rights, two of the 19 Seabees who were discharged without hearing last October after they had complained of intolerable jim crowing conditions at their Caribbean base, had their cases and will provide counsel for them at the hearings. All previous appeals, including letters to President Roosevelt proven by no avail 9-2-44

17-Year-Old Negro Youths Urged to Join U. S. Coast Guard

Washington Tribune Washington, D.C.

8-5-44



8-5-44

SEEKING THE VOLUNTARY ENLISTMENT of 1,700 Negro youths in the steward's mate branch, U.S. Coast Guard Headquarters recently called attention to the fact that 17-year-old volunteers in this branch will also get a crack at the enemy. At left, top, Coast Guardsman Excell McGee, seaman first class, of Chicago, does a quick change from his job in his ship's tailor shop to his battle station as a stretcher bearer in sick bay. At left, bottom, Coast Guardsman Browning Lutter, steward's mate third class, Chicago, is shown making the flash from galleyman to gun-talker when general quarters alarm is sounded aboard his Coast Guard assault transport somewhere in the South Pacific. At right top, Steward's Mates James Spruill, Elizabeth City, N.C., and J. D. Chambers, Baltimore, are shown with three other members of their 20 mm. anti-aircraft gun crew aboard a Coast Guard assault transport in the South Pacific. At right, bottom, two other fight Coast Guardsmen, Coxwain John Wyatt, left, St. Louis, Mo., and Gunner's Mate Sterling Parker, Camden, N.J., help themselves to generous portions when "Chow Down" rings over their combat cutter in the sub-Artic. Seventeen-year-old Negro youths who want a real crack at the enemy are urged to visit their local Coast Guard Recruiting Offices immediately.—Official U.C. Coast Guard Photos.

Coast Guard Hails New Hero As Crack Shot

Daily World—Atlanta, Ga.

8-6-44

Negro Gun Crews Draw High Praise Of Ship's Officers

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(SNS)—Coast Guard Headquarters this week hailed a new hero—a fighting steward's mate who took his crack at the enemy by downing one Junkers 88 during the Allied invasion of North Africa and assisting in the destruction of a second Nazi plane in the same engagement.

The fighting steward's mate was John R. Smith, 21- year-old former cook's helper of Cincinnati. His exploit was confirmed this week by Lt. Comdr. J. W. Paine, who, at the time of the North African invasion, was serving as fire control officer on the famed U. S. S. Samuel Chase, Coast Guard-manned transport.

8-6-44

SCORES DIRECT HIT

According to Commander Paine, Smith was manning a gun on the CHASE when the transport approached Algiers. Attacked by Nazi planes, the youth scored a direct hit, downing one Junkers 88, and then directed his fire towards a second plane, which also drew the fire of another gun crew before crashing into the ocean.

Discussing the engagment, the fire control officer said:

"The gun crews composed of Negro stewards' mates were a revelation and cannot be praised too highly for their enthusiasm, alertness and proficiency. Apparently they also posses better visual acuity in semi-dark conditions inasmuch as many of the attacks occurred during twilight, and the colored crews always detected and reported approaching enemy aircraft before the other crews, increasing considerably the possibility of a successful defense against such attacks."

FAMOUS SHIP 8-6-44

The U. S. S. Samuel Chase, on which Smith was serving, is one of the most famous ships of this war. The Coast Guard-manned transport, which served as flagship in the Sicilian invasion, as participated in hundreds of actions. Because it has always landed all of its troops without the loss of a single man, it has been nicknamed the "U. S. S. Lucky."

In announcing Smith's achievement, the Coast Guard called attention to its current campaign for the volunteer enlistment of 1,700 Negro youths in the Steward's Mates Branch. These volunteers, like Smith, will have a battle station, the Coast Guard pointed out and will play an active part in all engagements.

Coast Guardsman Smith is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Smith, who live at 3119 Borrman Avenue, Avondale, Cincinnati, Ohio. His wife, Mrs. Jane Elizabeth Smith, lives at 543 West Ninth St., Cincinnati. Born April 6, 1923, he attended Lincoln Public School in that city and worked as porter, a construction laborer and cook's helper in a restaurant before joining the Coast Guard. 8-6-44

HITS THE TOP

Courier—Pittsburgh, Pa.

Ensign Harvey C. Russell, Jr., is the first Negro of Kentucky and the third Negro in the United States to attain the rank of commissioned officer in the U.S. Coast Guard. He was the only Negro graduated from the Coast Guard academy, New London, Conn., February 23. 4-1-44

The son of Prof. and Mrs. H. C. Russell, Sr., Louisville, Ky., the Coast Guard ensign is a graduate of Kentucky State college. He has done graduate work at the University of Michigan.—Spain and Sydnor Photo.

5 Who Tried Jimcrow Banned From U. S. Ships

Daily Worker—New York

Five Klu Klux Klannish disrupters who turned a merchant ship into a hell role for two Negro seamen will never sail again. N.Y.

The U. S. Coast Guard has lifted the seamen's papers of two of the men already and the other three will be dealt with promptly, the National Maritime Union reports.

The announcement was made yesterday by Thomas Christensen, director of the NMU's Foreign Flag Department. He helped bring the charges. 10-2-44

The two Negro seamen were threatened with lynching. Their possessions were stolen and wrecked and they were insulted daily.

One of the Negro seamen was the bosun—the foreman of the deck gang. The other was an ordinary seaman. They had made a couple of trips with the S. S. Ormandale, a Panama flag tanker of the Keystone Shipping Co. All was going well. The two men were getting on splendidly with their shipmates till a quintet of loud-mouthed "White Supremacy" propagandists signed on.

HANG NOOSES

The five Ku Klux hoodlums refused to take orders from the Negro bosun.

They hung hangmen's nooses over the door when the Negro seamen turned to. When the captain cut down the nooses the hoodlums hung them up again. This happened several times. 10-2-44

The captain, however, didn't take any steps against the disrupters. And day by day the Negro seamen saw a new noose staring them in the face and ran into anti-Negro slogans scrawled all over the ship.

One of the Ku Kluxers even used the bosun's bunk for a toilet and his passport and Coast Guard pass were slashed to ribbons by someone who broke into his suitcase.

WASHINGTON ACTS

The Coast Guard merely asked the captain to pay off two of the trouble makers when the union first took up the matter after the ship came to port.

But the union asked Coast Guard headquarters at Washington to take stronger action. And the papers were lifted. 10-2-44

"The men working on the foreign flag ships have shown wonderful unity in keeping the ships sailing against Hitler and Japan," said Christensen. "The Union will protect them against any one who tries to disrupt them."

Daily World - Atlanta, Ga 1-2-44

47

Daily World - Atlanta, Ga 1-2-44

NAVY PROMOTIONS ARE ON THEIR WAY

Secretary Of Navy Approves Jim Crow By Naval Stations

AQC - New York, N.Y. 1-1-44

In a letter to the NAACP, Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox in effect approves of jim crow within the limits of naval stations.

On November 19 the NAACP wrote Knox reporting complaints from the Norfolk, Va. Naval Air Station that buses running within the station for the convenience of Navy personnel compelled Negroes to sit in the rear and whites in the front. Knox in his reply, said:

"With regard to the matter of alleged segregation on buses at the Naval Air Station, Norfolk, the Navy Department is making every effort to handle matters pertaining to enlisted personnel so that there will be a minimum of embarassment to both white and Negro. In all cases, however, the procedure which will best further the interests of the Navy is of primary importance, and the administration of personnel will always be handled with this primary objective in mind."

Secretary Knox also admitted that he had received several complaints on the insignia for chief cooks and stewards, who are either Negro or Filipino. This insignia, which heretofore has been the same as other chief petty officers in the Navy, has been changed so that men in these ratings are wearing a small "c" on their sleeves with three short straight bars underneath. The regular chief petty officers of the Navy have three chevrons and an eagle. Secretary Knox declares: "Obviously the purpose has not been to differentiate between white and Negro Chief Petty Officers as there are many Negro Chief Petty Officers in various ratings other than Chief Cooks and Chief Stewards, all of whom wear the Chief Petty Officer uniform."

Secretary Knox, in addition, makes the following astonishing statement: "In addition, Negroes are eligible for advancement in any of the many ratings in the Navy and all those who reach the status of Chief Petty Officer will wear the uniform of their rating."

FIRST NEGRO ENSIGNS
[illegible], New York, N.Y.

Sirs:

I was shocked to see your picture of a group of Negro naval officers (LIFE, April 24). MAY 15 1944

Every real American will bitterly resent the breaking down of our great naval traditions.

There is no place for the black man in our white Navy, and there is moral and political dynamite in trying to mix the white with the black.

It is hard to realize that there could be any one person in this country powerful enough to force this thing down our throats, but the day of reckoning isn't so far off.

J. L. JONES

Great Neck, N. Y.

Sirs:

Your picture of the 12 commissioned Negro naval officers was an inspiration to many who hope that America can and will be a mean absolute democracy

I know that I would be proud to salute any of them.

RONALD SPIERS, USNR
Naval Training Unit, Dartmouth College, Hanover, N. H.

Ensign Assigned To SS Booker Washington

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(SNS)—Ensign Joseph Banks Williams, first Negro to graduate from the U. S. Merchant Marine Cadet Corps, has been assigned to active duty on the SS BOOKER T. WASHINGTON, first Liberty ship named for an outstanding Negro American, the War Shipping Administration announced this week

Mr. Williams, who received his diploma at the U. S. Merchant Marine Academy, Kings Point, N. Y., in June 3, 1944, was sworn in as an ensign in the United States Naval Reserve on July 3, 1944, and was assigned to active duty on his own request.

Mr. Williams graduated from Hampton Institute before receiving appointment as Cadet—Midshipman of the U. S. Merchant Marine Cadet Corps. After completing the basic course, he was assigned to the SS BOOKER T. WASHINGTON for sea training. During the period from December 20, 1943 to March 13, 1944, and while in training as Cadet—Midshipman, he served as Acting Third Officer of the SS BOOKER T. WASHINGTON, first ship of its kind with a Negro skipper, Capt. Hugh Mulzac, of Brooklyn, N. Y be trained and qualified. They will replace the white ratings in their specialized billets, so that the entire were eventually will be Negroes.

Governor of Saltonstall and Mayor Tobins spoke briefly after the impressive ceremony as did Julian D Steele director of the Armstrong Homenway Foundation and local president of the NAACP who previously had presented the crew with a member of musical instruments, for which he was warmly thanked. 3-22-44 of Seattle

ckford, USNR, gton, assumed command of as soon as Captain Grady d the commissioning orders hen department. His crew y consists of 169 Negroes e first U. S. Naval vessel rew, the Destroyer Escort full commission Monday at Roman C. Grady, U. S. N., arger of the two new anti-submarine vessels largely composed of Negroes.

First War Ship With Race Crew Put Into Service

Daily World - Atlanta, Ga 3-22-44

By JIM HEWLETT

BOSTON, Mass.—(ANP)—With a cold bitter wind ac- M. Blackford companying a steady snowfall on this first day of spring Washington, he first U. S. Naval vessel with a predominantly Negro the ship as s crew, the Destroyer Escort U. S. S. Mason, was placed in ublished the full commission Monday at Boston Navy Yard by Captain of the then Roman C. Grady, U. S. N., captain of the yard. This is the presently com arger of the two new anti-submarine vessels with crews and 44 white largely composed of Negroes. Lieutenant Commander William as soon as Negro personnel can New York.

There was a moistness in the eyes of some of the colored workers who with their white comrades braved the bitter cold to witness the ceremony but above and beyond all a note of pride for absenteeism is low among them and they had kept this secret.

They sensed that not only was this something they had helped fashion with their own hands and skill to be manned by their own boys but that this was their opportunity to show the world they were just as capable under a welder's hod as machine gunning an enemy plane and just as efficient at turning lathe as running down an enemy submarine.

New Sub Hunter Launched, Crew Has 53 Negroes

Daily Worker
New York, N.Y.
4-26-44

The second naval vessel to be manned by a predominantly Negro crew, the PC 1264, was placed in commission yesterday at a Navy pier in New York City and soon will be on the high seas hunting down Axis submarines.

A sleek 173-foot sub hunter of a type used largely for escort duty, the vessel carries 53 Negroes in her ship's company, including several rated as first and second class petty officers.

Like the destroyer escort Mason, recently commissioned in Boston with a largely Negro crew, it is officered by whites and the crew includes eight white petty officers classed as instructors. As soon as Negro sailors qualify through experience and training they will replace these white petty officers, the Third Naval District asserted. Negro officers are not yet available, the Navy added, but a number of Negroes have been commissioned in the Navy in recent months.

The PC 1264 was placed in full commission by Commander H. F. Sasse, U. S. N. (Ret.) assistant to the Captain of the Yard, Navy Yard, Brooklyn, N. Y, He head the commissioning orders of the Navy Department in the presence of the entire ship's company mustered in dress uniform on the fantail of the ship, and Lieut. Eric Purdon, U. S. N. R., commanding officer, then assumed command.

Yard, Brooklyn, N. Y. He read the tional ensign at the mainmast, the Union Jack at the jackstaff at the bow, and the commission pennant were broken simultaneously and the ship's watch was set.

The crew members have been especially trained for their duties at the Submarine Chaser Training School, Miami, Fla. 4-26-44

In connection with the commissioning of the PC 1264, the ship's crew has been "adopted" by the Harlem Branch, New York City, Defense Recreation Council, in accordance with a policy originated last year for the crews of amphibious craft.

They're Appointed Ensigns Of The Navy

Daily World-Atlanta, Ga.
3-21-44

Above are nine of the men appointed to the temporary rank of Ensign D-V (S), U. S. Naval Reserve, to rank from February 23, 1944, and directed to report to Great Lakes for temporary duty under instruction. They are, left to right, front row: Graham Martin, Indianapolis; Jesse Walter Arbor, Chicago; John Walter Reagan, Los Angeles; Back row, Reginald Goodwin, Washington, D. C.; Dennis D. Nelson, Nashville, Tenn.; Phillip G. Barnes, Washington; Samuel E. Barnes, Trenton, N. J.; and Dalton L. Baugh, Little Rock, Ark. (Navy Photo.)

Fourteen Appointed Ensigns And Warrant Officers In U. S. Navy

Daily World- Atlanta, Ga.
3-21-44

Ordered To Report To Great Lakes For Temporay Duty

WASHINGTON— (SNS)— The Navy Department here announced names of fourteen Negroes appointed to temporary rank of ensign and warrant officers at Great Lakes, following up the recently announced policy of selecting candidates for commissioning as line officers in the U. S. Naval Reserve.

The twelve ensigns, all deck volunteers specialists, U. S. Naval Reserve, include Jesse Walter Arbor, Chicago; Dalton L. Baugh, Little Rock, Ark.; James E. Bare, Jacksonville, Fla.; Samuel E. Barnes, Trenton, N. J.; Frank E. Sublett, Chicago; John Walter Reagan, Chicago; Dennis D. Nelson, Nashville, Tenn.; William S. White, Jr., Chicago; George C. Cooper Richmond, Va.; Phillip G. Barner, Washington, D. C.; Graham Edward Martin, Indianapolis, and Reginald E. Goodwin, Washington, D. C. Two Saturday warrant officers are Boatswain Charles Byrd Lear, U. S. N. R., Canton, Mo., and Acting Pay Clerk Willie Powell, U. S. N., San Diego, Calif. 3-21-44

All were ordered to report to the commanding officer at Great Lakes for temporary duty under instruction. Upon completion of this course of training the officers will be assigned to duty initially either at the U. S. Naval Training School, Great Lakes, the ship's authority to whom all officers and enlisted men turn when they want the name of "some good reading," as he puts it.

More Books For Ship's Librarian

Daily Worker, New York, N.Y.
4-26-44

librarian and chaplain's assistant.

ABOARD A U. S. COAST GUARD TROOP TRANSPORT

(SPECIAL) — When someone asks the timeworn question, "Read any good books lately?," Ernest B. Lewis, seaman, second class, has them in his spare time—and is all ready with the answer when the ship's officer asks him: "All of them."

For Lewis, one of the many Negro Coast Guardsmen contributing so much to the war effort, has an opportunity to read every bestseller that comes out. He is ship's

Born in Marion, S. C., but now a resident of Mt. Vernon, N. Y., Lewis started his career in the Coast Guard as a mess hand, but soon after the ship's officers learned of his excellent education, they gave him the library to supervise with additional duties as assistant to the chaplain. 8-3-44

Lewis, who is 30 years old, took his boot training at Manhattan Beach Training Station, N. Y., and also served with the Port Security Detail in New York. He worked at Ellis Island, N. Y., as hospital guard, taking care of neuropsychiatric patients.

Lewis is married to the former Lila Davis of Mt. Vernon, and lives at 350 Union avenue, Mt. Vernon. He enlisted in the Coast Guard Aug. 30, 1943, and has two brothers, George and Clark Lewis, in the Army.

He was educated at Tuskegee Institute, Ala., and Morehouse College, Atlanta, Ga., majoring in sociology, and he hopes to be able to get into social work after the war. "There's a big field in this," he said, "and the need for trained workers will be great."

MOREHOUSE ALUMNUS

title patients—a Civil Service job—before entering the service.

There was a moistness in t h e eyes of some of the colored workers who with their white comrades braved the bitter cold to witness the ceremony but above and beyond all a note of pride for absenteeism is low among them and they had kept this secret.

They sensed that not only was this something they had helped fashion with their own hands and skill to be manned by their own boys but that this was their opportunity to show the world they were just as capable under a welder's hod as machine gunning an enemy plane and just as efficient at turning lathe as running down an enemy submarine.

New Sub Hunter Launched, Crew Has 53 Negroes

Daily Worker
New York, N.Y.
4-26-44

The second naval vessel to be manned by a predominantly Negro crew, the PC 1264, was placed in commission yesterday at a Navy pier in New York City and soon will be on the high seas hunting down Axis submarines.

A sleek 173-foot sub hunter of a type used largely for escort duty, the vessel carries 53 Negroes in her ship's company, including several rated as first and second class petty officers.

Like the destroyer escort Mason, recently commissioned in Boston with a largely Negro crew, it is officered by whites and the crew includes eight white petty officers classed as instructors. As soon as Negro sailors qualify through experience and training they will replace these white petty officers, the Third Naval District asserted. Negro officers are not yet available, the Navy added, but a number of Negroes have been commissioned in the Navy in recent months.

The PC 1264 was placed in full commission by Commander H. F. Sasse, U. S. N. (Ret.) assistant to the Captain of the Yard, Navy Yard, Brooklyn, N. Y, He head the commissioning orders of the Navy Department in the presence of the entire ship's company mustered in dress uniform on the fantail of the ship, and Lieut. Eric Purdon, U. S. N. R., commanding officer, then assumed command.

Yard, Brooklyn, N. Y. He read the tional ensign at the mainmast, the Union Jack at the jackstaff at the bow, and the commission pennant were broken simultaneously and the ship's watch was set.

The crew members have been especially trained for their duties at the Submarine Chaser Training School, Miami, Fla. 4-26-44

In connection with the commissioning of the PC 1264, the ship's crew has been "adopted" by the Harlem Branch, New York City, Defense Recreation Council, in accordance with a policy originated last year for the crews of amphibious craft.

They're Appointed Ensigns Of The Navy

Daily World-Atlanta, Ga. 47
3-21-44

Above are nine of the men appointed to the temporary rank of Ensign D-V (S), U. S. Naval Reserve, to rank from February 23, 1944, and directed to report to Great Lakes for temporary duty under instruction. They are, left to right, front row: Graham Martin, Indianapolis; Jesse Walter Arbor, Chicago; John Walter Reagan, Los Angeles; Back row, Reginald Goodwin, Washington, D. C.; Dennis D. Nelson, Nashville, Tenn.; Phillip G. Barnes, Washington; Samuel E. Barnes, Trenton, N. J.; and Dalton L. Baugh, Little Rock, Ark. (Navy Photo.)

Fourteen Appointed Ensigns And Warrant Officers In U. S. Navy

Daily World- Atlanta, Ga.
3-21-44

Ordered To Report To Great Lakes | On Temporay Duty

WASHINGTON— (SNS)— The Navy Department announced here Saturday the names of fourteen Negroes appointed to temporary rank of ensign and warrant officers at Great Lakes, following up the recently announced policy of selecting candidates for commissioning as line officers in the U. S. Naval Reserve.

The twelve ensigns, all deck volunteers specialists, U. S. Naval Reserve, include Jesse Walter Arbor, Chicago; Dalton L. Baugh, Little Rock, Ark.; James E. Bare, Jacksonville, Fla.; Samuel E. Barnes, Trenton, N. J.; Frank E. Sublett, Chicago; John Walter Reagan, Chicago; Dennis D. Nelson, Nashville, Tenn.; William S. White, Jr., Chicago; George C. Cooper Richmond, Va.; Phillip G. Barnes, Washington, D. C.; Graham Edward Martin, Indianapolis, and Reginald E. Goodwin, Washington, D. C. Two warrant officers are Boatswain Charles Byrd Lear, U. S. N. R., Canton, Mo., and Acting Pay Clerk Willie Powell, U. S. N., San Diego, Calif. 3-21-44

Moorehouse Grad Ship's Librarian

Daily World-Atlanta, Ga.
3-21-44

ABOARD A U. S. COAST GUARD TROOP TRANSPORT

CATALOGUES BOOKS

(SPECIAL) — When someone asks the timeworn question, "Read any good books lately?," Ernest B. Lewis, seaman, second class, the ship's authority to whom all officers and enlisted men turn when they want the name of "some good reading," as he puts it.

Born in Marion, S. C., but now a resident of Mt. Vernon, N. Y., Lewis started his career in the Coast Guard as a mess hand, but soon after the ship's officers learned of his excellent education, they gave him the library to supervise with additional duties as assistant librarian and chaplain's assistant.

Lewis, who is 30 years old, took his boot training at Manhattan Beach Training Station, N. Y., and also served with the Port Security Detail in New York. He worked at Ellis Island, N. Y., as hospital guard, taking care of neuropsychiatric patients at the Marine Hospital before entering the service.

He was educated at Tuskegee Institute, Ala., and Morehouse College, Atlanta, Ga., majoring in sociology, and he hopes to be able to get into social work after the war. "There's a big field in this," he said, "and the need for trained workers will be great."

Lewis is married to the former Lila Davis of Mt. Vernon, and lives at 350 Union avenue, Mt. Vernon. He enlisted in the Coast Guard Aug. 30, 1943, and has two brothers, George and Clark Lewis, in the Army.

MOREHOUSE ALUMNUS

473-1944

GENERAL

No Segregation At Seattle, Washington Naval Station

World-Memphis, Tenn.

6-23-44

Active Base Called 'The Country Club Of The Navy'

By HERMAN T. SMITH
(Correspondent on Tour of U. S. Naval Bases for NNPA)

U. S. NAVAL AIR STATION, Seattle, Wash.—"The Country Club of the Navy," is the name most often used by naval personnel in this section when referring to this active base. After visiting here I can easily understand why the name is applied.

The base is located in Sands Point, a suburban section of Seattle, and long before Pearl Harbor was a bustling naval outpost from which many of our important aircraft took off for peaceful missions throughout the world.

The atmosphere of the base though cloaked in war-time secrecy, resembles that of a college campus. Being a permanent base, most of the buildings are constructed of brick with a design of attractiveness as well as comfort.

FINE FACILITIES

Recreational facilities here rival that of the most exclusive country clubs in America. There is a lovely swimming pool in which swimming classes are held and water shows put on regularly; a bowling alley for all base personnel, where the pin boys are service men who receive the ten cents a line charge for the alleys. Many a service man in need of funds has replenished his purse in this manner. There is a completely equipped gymnasium where classes in the art of self defense are taught, several baseball diamonds and two soccer fields. For the officers there is even a nine-hole golf course.

A combination canteen, service club and naval post-exchange is complete in every detail and offers for sale almost any article that can be had in civilian life. The only difference being that the cost of most things is at least one third cheaper than on the outside.

6-23-44

In an attractive theatre, free movies are shown twice a week amateur shows are put on. Visiting shows and USO units also appear here frequently.

NO SEGREGATION

There is absolutely no segregation on the base and the approximately four hundred Negroes stationed here enjoy all of the base facilities without discrimination of any kind. The men all eat, sleep, play and work together according to their rank and rating in perfect harmony and seeing this unity makes you feel that if such were the case throughout America, no power on earth could threaten our happiness.

Most of the Negroes stationed here at Sands Point, have been to service school at Great Lakes or the U. S. Aviation Machinist School at Memphis, Tenn. All of the men with whom I talked are working at the trade they learned in service school and according to them, naval law makes it mandatory that a man be given a chance at the thing he has been trained for.

6-23-44

Instead of a series of different kinds of shops, this base being a working air base, is actually one huge aviation repair base. So although there are several separate repair shops here, each shop works on some part of a plane and are all housed in one large building.

SHOP EMPLOYMENT

Negroes are employed in most of the shops and according to the officers are doing very well. The type of work the men are doing is highly skillful and they are optimistic about the usage of their training and experience in civilian life after the war.

In the Assembly Repair Shop where planes are assembled and repaired a youthful Negro, Edmund Dudley, Cox 3c, from Harrisburg, Pa., is a supervisor. In addition to his duties in the repair shop Cox Dudley is in charge of the base Post Office.

While in the Assembly Repair Shop I talked with some of the other Negroes working there. They are Ottis D. Holland, S2c, Detroit; Ezell C. Hairston, S2c, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Hiram Johnson, S1c, Riverton N. J.; George Wilbur, S1c, Detroit; James Johnson, S1c, Phila.; Hugh E Jones, S1c, N. Y. C., Loye R. Waters, S1c, Atlantic City, N. J.; J. A. Scott, S1c Buffalo, N. Y.; Phillip Dennis, S1c, Pennsgrove, N. J.; Albert Thompson, S1c, North Bergen, N. J.; Charles E. Cummings, AM3c, Old Orchad Beach, Me.; Leon Penneck, S1c, Philidelphia; Frederick Brown, S1c, Chicago, Ill., George Crunklaton, S1c, New Castle, Pa.; Eugene Johnson, S2c, Washington, D. C.; Alvin N. Morrison, AMM3c, Martinsburgh W. Va., and James N. Maynard, S1c, Pittsburgh.

6-23-44

Due to the Navy's policy of trying to send boys from the south to northern bases and vice versa, the fellows listed above are typical of the men on the base. One of the most interesting men I met here is Richard Wilbangs, Sp (a) 2c of Chicago. Wilbanks is considered one of the most efficient physical education instructors on the base and is an expert at Judo.

No objection to Publication for Naval Security Reasons. Office of Public Relations, U. S. Navy. Review Section OH S-26 Lt. Cmdr. H. B. Lay, USNR.

Navy Drops Color Bars; To Commission Negroes

Tribune-Washington, D.C.

2-26-44

After long months of planning, the Navy Department announced on Wednesday that steps are under way to select Negro candidates for commissioning as officers in the U.S. Naval Reserve to fill approximately twenty-two available billets, thus breaking its traditional lily-white policy.

Twelve colored men, after a period of training, will receive commissions as line officers, with the rank of ensigns. Ten others, selected from civilian life, will become staff officers, receiving the rank of either ensign or lieutenant, junior grade, depending on their age and qualifications.

Two officers will be selected for each of the following Naval staff duties: Chaplain, Dental, Medical, Civil Engineer, and Supply Corps.

To Man Two Vessels

The Navy also announced plans for the manning of two new anti-submarine vessels "predominantly by Negro crews." One is a destroyer escort, now under construction at the Boston Navy Yard. The other is a patrol boat.

The first vessel, when commissioned, will carry an enlistment of 160 colored and 44 white men, the latter assigned to tasks requiring special training. They will in time be replaced by colored men who have been qualified meanwhile. The ship is to be placed in service within a few weeks.

2-26-44

The second ship, a patrol chaser (PC), building at the Consolidated Shipbuilding Corporation, Morris Heights, N.Y., will have an initial crew of 52 Negroes and nine whites, and be commissioned late in March. If will be manned eventually by an all-Negro crew, says the Navy.

Colored candidates for commissions as officers of the line are now being selected for officer schools, for three to six months' specialized training. After graduation they will be assigned to duty at the naval training school at Hampton Institute, Hampton, Va., and the Great Lakes (Ill.) School.

A Limited Naval Victory

Courier-Pittsburgh, Pa.

3-4-44

We are happy to see that the fight which The Pittsburgh Courier started over five years ago for greater integration of the Negro into the United States Naval establishment has ended in a limited victory.

Twenty-two Negroes are to be commissioned officers and a destroyer escort and a patrol vessel are to be manned by Negro crews.

3-4-44

This is a considerable advance in the direction of democracy when we reflect that less than two years ago Secretary of Navy Frank Knox was telling us that there would be no Negro officers.

That the Navy has yielded this much is due to the tremendous pressure put on it by the Negro press, the NAACP and similar organizations.

The victory is only a limited one, however, because in accordance with what seems to be a set government policy in "democratic" America, the Negro officers and men will be permitted to serve only on separate jim-crow vessels as if they were afflicted with leprosy.

3-4-44

It is the same old story of "The time ain't ripe," with Naval officials placing the blame for the necessity of maintaining jim crow on the white rank-and-file who will "not stand" being mixed with Negroes on board ship and taking orders from colored superiors.

3-4-44

The truth of the matter is that high naval officials are themselves responsible for color discrimination and segregation in their branch of the service which they deliberately made more widespread as late as 1922, when Negroes were restricted to service in mess departments.

With the expansion of the Navy five years ago, they could have easily eliminated all separation and discrimination based on color, and by this time the color question would have been ended in the Navy.

If colored and white Americans served in the U. S. Navy unsegregated for 150 years, there is no reason why they cannot do so today.

We believe the fault lies at the top rather than at the bottom.

Lt. Samuels Head Officer On Caribbean Sub Patrol

Defender — Chicago, Ill.

7-22-44

LT. (j.g.) CLARENCE SAMUELS

Defender - Chicago Ill.

By ALFRED E. SMITH
(Defender Washington Bureau)

WASHINGTON — For the first time in modern Navy history, a Negro officer will shortly take over full command of a Coast Guard patrol craft with an all-white crew of officers and men. 7-22-44

He is Lt. (j-g) Clarence Samuels, first Negro commissioned officer in the Navy in World War I.

His orders call for Lt. Samuels to command a vessel in the Caribbean and his all-white crew will include four officers and 110 men.

The modest quiet-spoken officer who rose from the ranks, and who is the senior and ranking Negro line officer in the Navy, regards his new assignment as "ordinary." He foresees no particular problems or difficulties.

"Democracy of the Coast Guard high command," he says, "makes this possible."

The lieutenant once commanded a cutter in Savannah harbor, and has recently been assigned to the escort vessel "Sea Cloud." Aboard the "Sea Cloud" he was in charge of racially mixed personnel among other duties, but his particular pride was an all-Negro gun crew under his immediate direction.

Also aboard the "Sea Cloud" are the other two Negro Coast Guard officers, Lt. (j-g) Joseph Jenkins, and Ensign Harvey Russell, both war-time graduates of the Coast Guard academy. For them Lt. Samuels has high praise. "They are splendid officers and a credit to service and race." 7-22-44

With characteristic candor, he adds: "Of the three of us colored officers, Ensign Russell is by far the superior, and lacks only time and experience to prove it."

Just returned from dangerous escort sub-chasing work, Lt. Samuels is having his ten-day leave spoiled by the dentist, for whom he admits a healthy fear. He looks forward to proceeding to his new post within a week.

Panama-born, 40 years old, small, wiry and tough, the lieutenant is now greying at the temples. He is known throughout the service for his excellence as a signalman and marksman. His ribbons indicate pre-Pearl Harbor service, Pearl Harbor action, American Theatre of War action, African mid-eastern campaign, expert pistol shot and his good conduct ribbon has four bars.

Ensign Joseph Williams First Negro To Graduate From Merchant Marine Academy

Age - N.Y., N.Y. July 22, 1944

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Ensign Joseph Banks Williams, of Maryland, first Negro to graduate from the U. S. Merchant Marine Cadet Corps, has been assigned to active duty on the ss. Booker T. Washington, first Liberty ship named for an outstanding Negro American, the War Shipping Administration announced this week.

Mr. Williams, who received his diploma at the U. S. Merchant Marine Academy, Kings Point, N. Y., on June 3, 1944, was sworn in as an ensign in the United States Naval Reserve on July 3, 1944, and was assigned to active duty on his own request.

Mr. Williams graduated from Hampton Institute before receiving appointment as Cadet-Midshipman of the U. S. Merchant Marine Cadet Corps. After completing the basic course, he was assigned to the ss. Booker T. Washington for sea training. During the period from December 20, 1943 to March 13, 1944, and while in training as Cadet-Midshipman, he served as Acting Third Officer of the ss. Booker T. Washington, first Liberty ship to be named for an outstanding Negro American, and also the first ship of its kind with a Negro skipper, Capt. Hugh Mulzac, of Brooklyn, N. Y.

First Negro Navy doctor commissioned

Tribune Los Angeles, Calif. 7-31-44

GREAT LAKES, Ill.—Lt. (jg) Arthur Lee Thompson, 28, of Detroit, Mich., the first Negro to be commissioned in the Medical Corps of the U. S. Naval Reserve, has reported to U. S. Naval Training Center here for duty. He was sworn in July 12 in Detroit.

The newly commissioned officer attended Fisk University and received his medical degree from Meharry Medical College in 1942. In graduating from Meharry, Lt. (jg) Thompson received an award as the most outstanding student in surgery and was an honor graduate. He served his internship in the Hubbard Hospital, Nashville, Tenn., and specialized in pediatrics for nine months while a resident physician. 7-31-44

Lt. (jg) Thompson is married, and he is the son of Dr. and Mrs. W. A. Thompson of Detroit. He is a member of the Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity.

Graduate Gets Appointment

Age N.Y., N.Y.

July 22, 1944

Ensign Joseph Banks Williams, of Maryland, first Negro to graduate from the U. S. Merchant Marine Cadet Corps, has been assigned to active duty on the ss. Booker T. Washington, first Liberty ship named for an outstanding Negro American, the War Shipping Administration announced this week.

Official WSA Photo from OWI

New Navy Officer

8-31-44

LIEUTENANT J. G. MARRON

William Fort, 16 Arington street, Newburyport, Massachusetts, was appointed last week as an officer in the Supply Corps of the U. S. Navy. The new appointee is a graduate of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, where he received his B. S., M. S., and PhD. degrees. He has reported to the Navy Supply Corps School Graduate School of Business Administration, Harvard Dunne Taylor of St. James enter- University for indoctrination.

(OFFICIAL U. S. NAVY PHOTO)

No Bias at Oakland Naval Supply Depot, Says Officer

Afro American — Baltimore, Md. 7-29-44

SAN FRANCISCO. — Charges that discrimination is shown in giving work assignments to colored seamen at the Naval Supply Depot at Oakland were denied last week by a Navy public relations officer here.

A seaman at the depot had reported that colored men at the depot worked eight to ten hours a day and then three or four hours at night while white sailors did not have this extra work.

He also said that on night shifts the colored sailors worked from 7 p.m. to 6 a.m. while white men had two shifts, 3:30 to 12 and midnight to 6 a.m.

Explaining the extra work about which the seaman complained, the officer said that all men, regardless of race, are assigned to duty sections and each section has a standby watch every fourth day which usually is over by 10:30 p.m. 7-29-44

Men in the duty section, he said, are available for necessary work at any time that their section has the day's duty. These duties are special tasks in addition to the men's regular work.

Seamen Praised

There are 1,209 colored bluejackets unloading freight cars and storing material at this depot which handles 76 per cent of all the provisions—meat, flour, and vegetables—shipped from the Pacific Coast for use by the Navy.

Lieut. Com. Bassett praised the work of these men and said they are well thought of at Oakland and have earned a respected position for themselves.

"Hours Same for All"

In a letter to the AFRO, Lt. Com. James Bassett, Jr., public relations officer, Twelfth Naval District, said: "The hours are the same for all enlisted men regardless of color, depending upon the shift to which assigned."

He said that the colored men are required to work on the night shift which is ten hours, but only for two weeks at a time.

Extra Duties for All try through experiences that might have caused a less resolute people to waver.

One by one the various branches of armed service are being opened for Negro youth. The Army Air Corps experimented before Pearl Harbor and its Negro pilots have been flying in combat since last June.

The Marine Corps opened its ranks and now there is a contingent of colored Marines somewhere in the Pacific, although as far as the press releases have indicated they have not been used as assault troops against any of the Jap island strongholds. 1-29-44

In 1942 the Navy abandoned its policy of long standing which limited Negro enlistees to service as messmen, and began training them as specialists at Hampton Institute and Great Lakes.

Now comes the prospect of Negro commissioned officers, and colored crews manning warships on combat missions. It is a healthy and an inspiring prospect. It represents for the United States a major victory right here at home. Let Goebbels put that in his microphone and play it.

Negro Commissioned Officers In Navy

Journal & Guide
Norfolk, Va. 1-29-44

THE appointment of Negro officers in the Navy and the assignment of some of the large numbers who have been trained as specialists to a warship for combat duty, possibly with Negro officers in charge, will be one of the most significant and compelling representations this government can make to the minority peoples of the world that its proffers of benevolence to them might conceivably be sincere.

That such appointments are imminent was learned by The Journal and Guide this week from sources it considers highly authoritative. An official announcement by the Navy is expected momentarily. It is awaited nervously and anxiously by millions of Negro Americans who want to believe that fascist practices long adhered to by our Navy are being scuttled as we make other gains on the democratic front.

It is known that Negro physicians in several large cities have been considered for commissioning as Navy officers. Moreover, it is reliably reported that commanding officers throughout the Navy have been asked to recommend promising petty officers for commissions.

It has seemed pretty obvious all along that the tempo of training at Great Lakes and Hampton Institute where hundreds of specialists have been trained was indicative of some well considered plan to use these colored seamen in the jobs they are being fitted for. 1-29-44

Now comes the report that one of Uncle Sam's warships is to get a Negro crew, including, perhaps, Negro officers, and be assigned to some combat task on the high seas. That is heartening news. Far greater than any presumed boost to the morale of other minorities will be its impact on the spirit and ambitions of millions of Negroes here at home.

Sometimes the outlook has been very gloomy, but the colored American has remained loyal to his coun-

No Segregation At Seattle, Washington Naval Station

Daily World - Atlanta, Ga. 6-20-44

Active Base Called 'The Country Club Of The Navy'

By HERMAN T. SMITH
(Correspondent on Tour of U. S. Naval Bases for NNPA)

U. S. NAVAL AIR STATION, Seattle, Wash.—"The Country Club of the Navy," is the name most often used by naval personnel in this section when referring to this active base. After visiting here I can easily understand why the name is applied.

The base is located in Sands Point, a suburban section of Seattle, and long before Pearl Harbor was a bustling naval outpost from which many of our important aircraft took off for peaceful missions throughout the world. 6-20-44

The atmosphere of the base though cloaked in war-time secrecy, resembles that of a college campus. Being a permanent base, most of the buildings are constructed of brick with a design of attractiveness as well as comfort.

FINE FACILITIES

Recreational facilities here rival that of the most exclusive country clubs in America. There is a lovely swimming pool in which swimming classes are held and water shows put on regularly; a bowling alley for all base personnel, where the pin boys are service men who receive the ten cents a line charge for the alleys. Many a service man in need of funds has replenished his purse in this manner. There is a completely equipped gymnasium where classes in the art of self defense are taught, several baseball diamonds and two soccer fields. For the officers there is even a nine-hole golf course.

A combination canteen, service club and naval post-exchange is complete in every detail and offers for sale almost any article that can be had in civilian life. The only difference being that the cost of most things is at least one third cheaper than on the outside.

In an attractive theatre, free movies are shown twice a week amateur shows are put on. Visiting shows and USO units also appear here frequently.

NO SEGREGATION 6-20-44

There is absolutely no segregation on the base and the approximately four hundred Negroes stationed here enjoy all of the base facilities without discrimination of any kind. The men all eat, sleep, play and work together according to their rank and rating in perfect harmony and seeing this unity makes you feel that if such

School a... kinds of... the men... working... in service... them, na... tory that... at the t... for.
Instead of a series of different... ds of shops, this base being... working air base, is actually one... e aviation repair base. So al... ugh there are several separate re... r shops here, each shop works... some part of a plane and... housed in one large building.
SHOP EMPLOYMENT
Negroes are employed in most... the shops and according to the... cers are doing very well. The... e of work the men are doing... highly skilful and they are opti... tic about the usage of their... ning and experience in civilian... after the war.
In the Assembly Repair Shop... re planes are assembled and... aired a youthful Negro, Edmund... dley, Cox 3c, from Harrisburg, ...ing to send boys from the south... E. Jones, S1c, N. Y. C., Loye R. Waters, S1c, Atlantic City, N. J.; J. A. Scott, S1c Buffalo, N. Y.; Phillip Dennis, S1c, Pennsgrove, N. J.; Albert Thompson, S1c, North Bergen, N. J.; Charles E. Cummings, AM3c, Old Orchad Beach, Me.; Leon Penneck, S1c, Philadelphia; Frederick Brown, S1c, Chicago, Ill., George Crunklaton, S1c, New Castle, Pa.; Eugene Johnson, S2c, Washington, D. C.; Alvin N. Morrison, AMM3c, Martinsburgh W. Va., and James N. Maynard, S1c, Pittsburgh.
Due to the Navy's policy of try-

...northern bases and vice versa, the fellows listed above are typical of the men on the base. One of the most interesting men I met here is Richard Wilbanks, Sp (a) 2c of Chicago. Wilbanks is considered one of the most efficient physical education instructors on the base and is an expert at Judo.

No objection to Publication for Naval Security Reasons. Office of Public Relations, U. S. Navy. Review Section OH S-26 Lt. Cmdr. H. B. Lay, USNR .

Men Prefer Full Participation; Working For It

Daily World
Atlanta, Ga.
5-21-44

Look Forward To Becoming Petty Officers

LITTLE CREEK, Va.— India — Colored enlisted personnel stationed here at this section base are enthusiastic about the phase of the naval training program which permits them to perform duties other than those of messmen. Even though segregation and discrimination exists in various forms—the command claimng that it makes for better ship efficiency (which of course is open to question) those who by reason of their educational or service school qualifications are working at their trades in machinery, metalcraft, carpentry, and allied fields feel that the "half a loaf" is better than nothing at all.

They prefer full participation with all of the rights and privileges, but realize that with a trade under their belts they will be better fitted for post-war employment. There are some who are actually saving money with the idea in mind of going into business for themselves.

The men are putting into practice those things learned in the class room. They must master the Diesel engine, know its many intricate parts and how to make and repair it; it is the same for the gasoline engine.

BECOME MASTER MECHANICS 5-21-44

Motor machinists's mates operate, maintain, make adjustments, and overhaul Diesel and gasoline engines and their parts.

Those that I talked with, among them John T. Smith, MoMM 2-c, Philadelphia; Oscar Almond, MoMM 3-c, St. Louis, an ex-drysmith during his civilian days; Herman B. Spriggins, MoM M2-c, Galveston, Texas, and Ishmael Lott, MoMM 3-c, Detroit; and all Hampton Service School graduates expressed high hopes for the future and were eager to try their hands at jobs with fleet.

One of the most important jobs that our boys are trained to do is that of electrician's mates. The EM stands watch on the main switchboard (at sea), main control room of electrically driven ship, the main gyro compass, besides maintaining and repairing electrical circuits and electrical equipment.

PETTY OFFICERS WHITE

It was observed that in general the majority of the ranking petty officers in the shops were white, but Commander R. E. Davenport stated that he believed he would not be long before such ratings would eventually be conferred upon the colored men who warranted it by reason of ability and tenure. It was further observed that the colored and white working side by side in the shops appared to get along well together.

Frank M. Walker, S1-c from Brunswick, Ga., who is striking for advanced rating in the carpenter's shop is preparing to be able to do carpentry and joinery work, replace deck planking and other woodwork, lay and repair, tiling repair and maintain small boars and caulk seems better than any man here. Then he feels that he will be ready to take his place as CM anywhere in the Navy. These men do have amibition.

John H. Steele, yeoman 3-c Chicago, Ill., and a former U. of Illinios and Kent Law School student and Ira E. Sells, yeoman 3-c, Greenport Long Island, N. Y are standouts in the education department here. 5-21-44

It is hoped that as many of the colored sailors as possible receive their advanced ratings when they have qualified for them, as it does more than just bolster morale. It proves that the Navy is sincere in giving them some recognition. Without such recognition for a job well done, it will not be long before much of this newly acquired enthusiasm is replaced by hopelessness, mired in the muck of despair. The Navy is on the right track. It must keep going to the end of the line. It will bring V-day that much closer.

Here's One for You to Play with by Yourself

News Item: Navy Department to man ONE warship with an all-colored crew.

Largest Class Of Bluejackets Graduates At Great Lakes, Ill.

Journal & Guide - Norfolk, Va.
2-26-44

GREAT LAKES, Ill.—Numbering 301 Bluejackets, the largest Negro class ever to complete instruction in the Navy's service schools was graduated at the U. S. Naval Training Station here last week. Last month's class of 263 men was the previous high.

Principal speaker at the exercises was Brig. Gen. Spencer C. Dickerson, U.S.A. (ret.), senior surgeon emeritus at Provident Hospital, Chicago, who was a captain in the Army Medical Corps, 370th Infantry, A. E. F., during the last war.

GEN. DICKERSON

General Dickerson, who became a colonel in the Eighth Illinois National Guard in 1929 and was retired as brigadier general in 1930, told the graduates:

"It should be the duty of all peoples to live harmoniously together, to allow each group to rise to the highest level of its capacity regardless of race, creed or color, that the promise of life, liberty and pursuit of happiness may be fulfilled.

"The eyes of 130,000,000 Americans are on you graduates today. The hopes and aspirations of 15,000,000 persons of your race depend on you.

PRESENTED CERTIFICATES

At the conclusion of his address the members of this fifteenth Negro class were presented certificates. They completed courses in one or another of the schools for machinist's mates, gunner's mates, radiomen, aviation machinist's mates, aviation metalsmiths, quartermasters, signalmen, storekeepers, yeomen, short patrolmen, and cooks and bakers. 2-26-44

Six were singled out for special recognition, having been selected honor men of their respective school groups. They were Carl C. West, 18, of 516 Cleveland, ave., Anderson, S. C.; Otis Hill, 30, 717 Denny street, Richmond, Va.; David E. Bryant, 21, 939 Sutter ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.; Arthur Middlebrooks, 27, of 11405 Mitchell street, Detroit, Mich.; Benjamin King, 19, of 804 Berkley avenue, Norfolk, Va., and Herbert L. Houston, 27, of Route 1, Burlington, N. J. 2-26-44

Principal speaker at the January exercises of a class of 236 men was Brig. Gen. Anton F. Lorenzen, USA (Ret.), president of Lorenzen and Thompson, Inc., publishers' representatives, and a veteran of the Spanish-American War. General Lorenzen, whose home is in Chicago where he is a member of the Chicago Crime Commission and various other civic and social organizations, told the graduates:

"Remember, we are all in this fight together, all as Americans regardless of color or creed and no matter where our ancestors came from or where they worshipped. What we are fighting for is equality for all—large or small, high or low, all Americans. We are fighting for our country, our flag and what it represents, our Bill of Rights and our Constitution—under our commander-in-chief."

Members of this fourteenth Negro Service School class completed 19 Steelton, Pa.; Archie Haynes, Wichita Falls, Texas; James 21, Cleveland, Ohio; Robinson, 22, New York City Negron, 22, Los Angeles, gunner's mates, radiomen, aviation machinist's mates, aviation metal- and Jack McCoy, 36, Los smiths, quartermasters, signalmen, Calif. storekeepers, yeomen, and cooks and bakers. Five were singled out for special recognition, having been selected honor men of their respective school groups.

47.j-1944 General

They'll Be Back, Wanting Jobs and Security

PM—New York, N. Y.
8-15-44

The arrow points to President Roosevelt, having lunch with the personnel of the isolated Naval base at Adak, in the Aleutian Islands, during a brief stop in his recent tour of Pacific bases. The men are soldiers, sailors and Marines along with two commanding officers who share the head table with the Commander-in-Chief.

U. S. Army Photo

Bias Mars Navy School

People's Voice 8-26-44
New York, N. Y.

With the very life of our nation and that of all the democracies engaged in the present sanguinary struggle for survival dependent on the "on time" delivery of men, planes, tanks, and supplies, the New York State Maritime Academydemydemy apparently is practicing a policy of discrimination, which denies our merchant marine the fullest use of available manpower needed to officer our ships.

Our attention has been called to the case of William Greaves, an upstanding youth who is a math major at City College and who posted an average of ninety or better in his regents exams.

Greaves, who lives at 810 Dawson st, the Bronx, has long had a yen to be a marine engineer and when he learned about the officer training at the Maritime Academy immediately made application for admittance. 8-26-44 Graduates from the Maritime Academy have their choice on graduation of accepting either a license as a Third Officer in the Merchant Marine deck or engine department or a commission as Ensign (Naval Reserve) in the U. S. Navy. Greaves' application was accepted and he was then sent the formal application which went to other references.

8-26-44

GREAVES

July 14 he was interviewed for his mental exam at the Naval Officer school and passed. He subsequently went to Fort Schuyler for his final exams. At both places he was the lone Negro candidate and was seemingly the cynosure of all eyes. He was given a written test and went to lunch. On returning his name was read out as among those entitled to go before the examining board having passed the written exam. Here he met his first irregularity. He was told he'd failed the exam when passing was a pre-requisite for appearing before the board. 8-26-44

Feeling that he was victim of a discriminatory policy he appealed to the National Maritime Union and the NAACP to review his case, as well as writing to the Secretary of the Navy Forrestal. Both organizations have been advised that Greaves did pass the entrance exam, but had been turned down because he had passed both the Army Air Corps and Army Student training program and failed to enter either service. Therefore he lacked "fixedness of purpose."

Meanwhile our Merchant Marine has a most urgent need for officers in the wartime emergency.

Great Lakes Graduates Largest Class

Tribune—Philadelphia Pa.
4-15-44

GREAT LAKES, Ill.—For the fourth successive month, the class graduated last week was the largest, 339, ever to complete instruction in the Navy's Service Schools at the U. S. Naval Training Station, the Navy Department has announced.

Principal speaker at the exercises was the Rev. Dr. Joseph M. Evans, pastor of the People's Church of Christ and of the Metropolitan Community Center, Chicago, Illinois who was introduced by Capt. H. R. Harris, Service School Officer, who presided at the commencement.

4-15-44

They were John R. West, Jr., 20, of Amelia, Va.; Edward L. Gibbs, 28, of Aliceville, Ala.; Boston Payne, Jr., 18, of 2653 Hendricks street, Detroit, Michigan; Floyd E. Johnson, 27, of 60 north 20th street, Columbus, Ohio; James W. Proffit, 20, of 1407 south 16th street, East St. Louis, Illinois, and William H. Jordan, 29, of 312 Division avenue, N. E., Washintgon, D. C.

Jim Crow is Not Dead in Navy

Tribune—Washington, D.C.
4-1-44

By WILFRED H. KERR

The old spirit still rules in the Navy as well as in the Army. This is true despite all the propaganda recently emanating from the Public Relations Division of the Navy and certain elements in the Negro Newspapers Publishers' Association. After two days of being wined and dined and flattered at Great Lakes Naval Training Station some of our Negro editors, notably Adam C. Powell, Jr., of the People's Voice, have catapaulated into the camp of the appeasers and apologists for Old Man Jimcrow and have brazenly sought to whitewash the rigid segregation policy of the Navy.

4-1-44

The whole policy of the Navy is to build a black auxiliary Navy which will be the labor force of the regular Navy. These men are to be used in patrol and in shore craft work and shore activities which means building and guarding naval bases, amunition dumps, warehouses, and doing guard patrol work over bases when Negro sailors are taken to witness a basketball or hockey or football game. They are permitted only to see their fellow white sailors on the opposite benches. They never participate in games together.

RACE SEPARATION RIGID

In the Great Lakes Station, rigid separation of Negro and white enlisted men is the policy. No intermingling of the races is permitted either in training or recreation. There are times when Negro sailors are taken from the Pacific. Negroes are discouraged from applying for special service. For whites, special service means a petty officer's rating as machinist, boatswain, coxswain, athletic instructor, or numerous other specialist work; for Negroes it means only messmen and seabees, and there are enough messmen.

OVERSEERS OVER BLACK LABOR NAVY

The once much publicized seabees program is being curtailed, for the black Navy is slated to do this work. The Negro enlisted man is being told on arrival at the station that only one out of ten sailors ride on ships. This is to prepare him for his laboring job. The twenty-two (????? Ed. note) commissioned Negroes which seems to have struck such emotional people as Powell as the "Emancipation" will be nothing more than overseers in the black labor Navy. Jim crow in gold-braid is still Jimcrow.

POLICY DICTATES JIMCROW WAVES

4-1-44

Negro Waves will soon be accepted. This is in line with the basic policy. They will be segregated as the Wacs are. Also the quota for Negro dentists and chaplains and nurses will be increased. The reason Powell gives for this is illuminating because "until the change is made it will mean that white nurses will be forced to work under Negro doctors and dentists."

This cannot be permitted. In a war allegedly fought for democracy, in a camp which Powell tells us represents the "best atmosphere of democracy to be found in any of our service camps," it is unthinkable for a white nurse to serve a Negro doctor.

SWEET TALK AIMED TO DECEIVE

Jimcrow in uniform is the war's greatest scandal. No Army or Navy camp which practices it and glorifies it can approach the spirit of democracy. Men are segregated only because they are thought to be different and inferior. 4-1-44

The sweet talk of the Navy's Public Relations Division is calculated to fool the people. Any Negro given a big job in this division will be just another office-boy paid off to mislead the people. Jimcrow in uniform must be fought! Jimcrow in uniform must go!

Mutiny Trial Prosecutor Charged with Prejudice

Bystander — Des Moines, Iowa

10-26-44

San Francisco, Cal.—The mutiny trial of the 50 Negro seamen, at which Thurgood Marshall, chief counsel of the NAACP has been an observer since last week, developed a charge of prejudice, levelled against Commander James F. Coakley, senior Judge Advocate, in charge of the prosecution by Marshall.

Coakly, who served as an assistant district attorney of Alameda county under Governor Warren, has, throughout the trial, deliberately avoided bringing out information relative to the education, birth place and background of the Southernborn Negroes, concentrating instead on the Northern born defendants.

During the cross examination of seaman Frank L. Henry, Coakly became angered when Henry failed to address him as "Sir." 10-26-44

"Don't you know you are guilty of insubordination for not addressing me as 'Sir?'" he asked.

Henry seemed bewildered by the question, and Navy defense attorneys jumped to their feet offering objections which were sustained without comment by Admiral Hugo Osterhaus, president of the trial board.

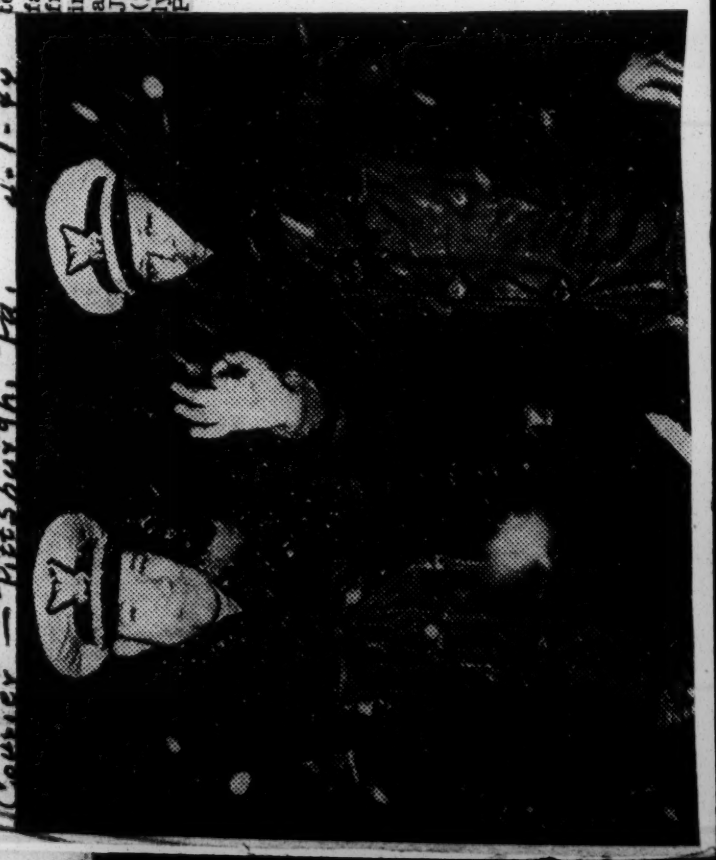
Seaman 2 — C. William E. Banks, testified that he had three reasons for not working. He was a compartment cleaner prior to the explosion, he did not receive an order to load ammunition and he was afraid to load ammunition. Melvin Ellis, seasan 2-C testified that he had also been a compartment cleaner, and although he had done some ammunition loading, he disliked it very much. He said he did not know the gravity of the charges against him until he was told by the Chaplain at Vallejo.

All of the men testified that they did not refuse to obey a specific order to load ammunition, but objected to the job in general because of the danger involved, and because only Negroes were assigned to the task. They said that they signed the statement which is in evidence against them because they thought they had to do so when they were ordered by an ensign.

10-26-44

No Reason for Charge

Marshall who flew to the scene of the trial on a Navy priority, and who will make his report directly to the Navy Department, stated that after investigation and conversations wit hthe 50 men on trial; he was convinced that there is no reason for the men to be tried on mutiny charges, which imply a mass conspiracy; that the charges should be individual insubordination.



BRAVING WINTRY BLA

7j-1944

Great Lakes, Illimois

First Chaplain Is Sworn In By Navy Officials

Daily World
Atlanta, Ga.
7-7-44

Kansas City Pastor Breaks Old Color Bar

GREAT LAKES, Ill.—(SNS)—It was announced at the Headquarters, Ninth Naval District Thursday that James Russell Brown, 34, of 532 Washington Boulevard, Kansas has been sworn into the Naval Reserve as Chaplain with the rank of Lieutenant, junior grade.

Lt (jg) Brown is the first Negro to hold that position. He has been ordered to report to the Chaplain's school at William and Mary College, Williamsburg, Virginia for indoctrination.

The new Chaplain was Dean of Bishop Williams School of Religion at Quindaro, Kansas, and was pastor of St. Luke's African Methodist Episcopal Church in Kansas City, Kansas. He holds an A. B. degree from Friends University; a B. D. degree from Howard University and he has done further graduate study at Chicago Theological Seminary.

7-7-44

Lt. (jg) Brown is married to the former Miss Melba Long of Witchita, Kansas. He has a brother, Edwin C. Brown, practicing law in Alexandria, Virginia, and another brother, Mozel O. Brown who is a 2nd Lieutenant in the Army.

His father Ellis Brown resides at 1351 East 48th Place, Los Angeles, California.

7-7-44

The appointment of a chaplain is part of the plan announced a few months ago by the Navy when the first Negroes were commissioned in that branch of the service during this war. Besides the commissioning of several line officers, the Navy announced that selection would be made from civilian life to fill commissions in technial branches of the service.

Lieutenant Edward Hope was the first such appointment in the Engineer Crops. He was given the highest rank yet conferred on a Negro, Lieutenant Senior grade.

Dean William West of Howard University said, "we were very proud, when we learned of the Brown."

Great Lakes has 1st Negro in Public Relations

Tribune
Los Angeles, Calif.

GREAT LAKES, Ill.—The Public Relations office at the training center here announced this week the assignment of Ensign W. S. White of Chicago to the headquarters staff of the Public Relations office of the 9th Naval District. The first Negro to be assigned to the Public Relations office in this district, Ensign White's job will be to facilitate the dissemination of news of the Negro in the Navy, particularly to the Negro press.

7-10-44

GREAT LAKES TRAINING STATION

It was the writer's privilege to visit the Great Lakes Training Station, which of course, includes Camp Small, Camp Moffett and Camp Lawrence. The three camps mentioned above serve the Negro sailors, both seamen and petty officers.

3-10-44

It was not the fact that the Negro newspaper representatives were guests, for our national broadcast in connection with our National Newspaper Week, nor the entertainment features that impressed us most; but it was the educational and training program that left its lasting impression upon us. The young men of our race who finish their boot-training at Great Lakes Training Station and follow up by taking one or more of the educational courses offered, will in a short time find himself a different man which is reflected in his thinking and conduct.

The Navy, unlike the Army stresses the technical training of the man and it doesn't take long for one to find out what he is capable of doing. While it is true that it was a long time before the doors of the Navy were opened to Negro youth of seamen, petty officers and commissioned officers, it may be stated that the Navy is outdoing the Army in providing services for colored boys.

We were favorably impressed with the sincerity of purpose of Commander Armstrong to help not only the Negro officers and sailors in their effort to make good, but we also believe in his purpose to help the race in civilian life through the boys who are under his command at Great Lakes, Ill.

3-10-44

Commander Daniel W. Armstrong, we are told, is the son of General Armstrong who for many years was president of Hampton Institute, Va. His sympathetic interest in our group will, we believe, go a long way toward helping the morale of the thousands of young men under his care.

Publishers Visit Great Lakes

Call-Kansas City, Mo.

Confer with Navy Officials; Tour Training Camps

3-10-44

By FRANK A. YOUNG

GREAT LAKES NAVAL TRAINING STATION, Ill—Officers and representatives of the Negro Newspaper Publishers association were the three-day guests of Great Lakes Naval Training station and Commander D. W. Armstrong, son of the founder of Hampton institute, here on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, March 2 through March 4.

The trip here was a feature of National Negro Newspaper week. While highly educational and fruitful, the visit here climaxed the week of activity and ended with conference sessions of the publishers.

30-Minute Broadcast

The three-day activities got under "full sail" at 1500 o'clock (3 o'clock to you landlubbers) on Thursday when a round-table discussion between four of the publishers and Commander Armstrong was broadcast for 30 minutes from the Ross auditorium over the Blue Network.

Joining Commander Armstrong in the discussion were Frank L. Stanley, Louisville, Ky., Defender; J. E. Mitchell, St. Louis Argus; Roscoe Dungee, Oklahoma Black Dispatch, and Miss Olive Diggs, Chicago Bee.

3-10-44

Also featured on the broadcast were Rear Admiral Louis E. Denfield, assistant chief of Naval Personnel from Washington, D. C., and Capt. Robert R. M. Emmett, commanding officer. On the program were the Negro regiments' band, Len Bowden, directing, and the octet, under the direction of Musician Wayman Hatchcock of Chicago. Announcer was Charles Anderson, who is now seaman first class.

Friday, the publishers were guests at the regimental review at 1400 o'clock (2 o'clock civilian time) in building 1400 which is the drill hall and recreation building. Friday afternoon, an open discussion took place with Commander Armstrong, Lt. Commander White, public relations officer; Lt. Commander Van Ess, Lt. Commander Allen, Washington, D. C., and several other officers from the Great Lakes station answering questions of the publishers.

3-10-44

On Friday night was "Happy Hour." At no time was there any special effort made to entertain the publishers. While they were guests of the navy, it was specifically understood that what the guests were being given was a "look in" on the regular activities of the camp, its recreation, work, induction, graduation and food. No program, other than the broadcast, had been previously arranged.

The band, chorus, glee club and octet all took part in the "Happy Hour" program. Also entertaining were men with special talents from the various companies.

Musician Smith Honored

Highlight of this program was the presentation to Willie Smith saxophonist, clarinetist and soloist in the band of a trophy and a $100 war bond by Esquire's jazz expert, Paul Miller of New York City, for being one of the outstanding jazz artists in the country. Smith formerly played with several leading orchestras.

Saturday, a tour of the service schools, the induction center, hospital and barracks occupied the morning. In the afternoon, the Great Lakes Negro Varsity basketball team, sparked by the 1943 Toledo university star, Charley Harmon, who made 12 field goals and two free throws, defeated the Chief Petty Officers quintet with Forrest Anderson, former Stanford university of California great in the lineup, 64 to 48. Anderson is coach of the Negro team and is assisted by Ozzie Simmons, former grid stae at the University of Iowa, and "Windy" Wallace, former Michigan State cager. Wallace was one of the officials of the game. The Negro team has a record of 20 victories and three defeats this season.

Eat Regular 'Chow'

3-10-44

The visitors were dined in the chief petty officers' mess hall. The food, well cooked, was the same as served all the sailors. There is a special effort made to see that all meals are well balanced.

The publishers were brought here in a navy bus and returned to Chicago the same way.

Negro training quarters here include Camp Robert Smalls, Camp Moffett and Camp Lawrence. Commander Armstrong is assistant recruit training officer and in charge of Negro recruit training. Comfortable quarters were furnished the men in barracks building 1811. Women officer, guests were taken to homes of friends in Waukegan, Ill. Members of the Publishers' association who made the pilgrimage here were: Thomas and P. B. Young Jr., Norfolk Journal and Guide; Miss Lucile Bluford, Kansas City Call; Eustace Gay, Philadelphia Tribune; Roscoe Dungee, Oklahoma Black Dispatch; J. E. Mitchell, St. Louis Argus; Mr. and Mrs. Sweets, Minneapolis Tri-State Bee; Mr. and Mrs. G. B. Stafford and J. Arthur Turner, St. Paul Recorder; Cecil Newman, Minneapolis People's Voice; Louis Powell, People's American; John H. Sengstacke, Chicago Defender, and William Walker and Frank L. Stanley, Louisville Defender, and William G Parker, Cleveland American newspaper; Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Galloway, Kansas City, Kas.; C. Hamlett, Nunn, Houston Informer; Mr. and Mrs. N. A. Murphy and William Mitchell, J. E. Cook and Bige Wynn, Pittsburgh Courier, Omaha Guide; Mr. and Mrs. N. A.

hey Combat Illiteracy At Great Lakes

Piney Woods Mississippi August 12, 1944

Above is shown the staff of the Great Lakes Naval Training Center's Remedial School where illiteracy is combatted. Officers-in-Charge is Ensign D. D. Nelson, II, graduate of Fisk and Howard Universities, shown in center of front row. Staff members are from principal colleges and universities of the land. (Official U. S. Navy photo)

Makes Petty Officer First Class

Weekly Review — Birmingham, Ala.

7-22-44

ROBERT DURR, Jr., son of Editor and Mrs. Robert Durr who recently finished Boot Training at Great Lakes Naval Training Station visited Piney Woods School, friends in other parts of Mississippi, Illinois and his family in Birmingham las week. Young Durr was made a Petty Officer shortly after his arrival at Great Lakes. This promotion came to him because of his educational record. He returned to Great Lakes early this week for further training and reports he likes the navy.

311 in Largest Great Lakes Class

Afro American
Baltimore, Md.

GREAT LAKES, Ill. —The class of 311 Bluejackets graduated this month from the U.S. Naval Training Station here was the largest by ten to complete instruction in the navy's service schools, the Navy Department announced this week. 8-26-44

Selected honor men of their respective school groups were Paul W. Daniels, Oklahoma City, Okla.; Lucious Littlejohn, Gaffney, S.C.; Harry J. Jackson, of 1924 Druid Hill Avenue, Baltimore; Samuel L. Caesar, Dalton, Miss.; John E. Smith, Memphis, Tenn.; and William Beard, Jr., Springfield, Ohio.

Participating in the exercises were Commander Thomas F. Cullen, Ninth Naval District Intelligence Officer, who addressed the graduates; Capt. Robert R. M. Emmet, commanding officer of the training station, and the regimental band and octette.

47j-1944
Savannah Tribune

Liberty Ship Will Be Named After Negro Savannah Fireman, Ga. 12-28-44

WHO LOST HIS LIFE WHEN HIS SHIP WAS TORPEDOED IN 1942

Mrs. Cox of Savannah Will Act As Sponsor For Vessel

A number of Savannahians will leave here 6 p. m. Saturday for Brunswick, where they will attend the ceremonies planned for the launching of the SS William Cox, first Liberty ship named for a Negro and built at the yards of the J. H. Jones Construction company.

The launching ceremonies are scheduled to be held Saturday night at ten o'clock. The Savannahians who will attend the launching will form a motorcade Saturday at 5:30 at the Monroe Funeral Home where it will leave promptly a half hour later—6 p. m.—for Brunswick. All persons intending to drive down to the ceremony are invited to join this caravan.

The launching of the SS Cox is of particular interest to Savannahians because the ship is being named for the husband of Mrs. Arlee Cox, a Savannahian, invited by the builders of the vessel to christen her. Mrs. Cox left here last week for this epoch-making event in the history of shipbuilding in the deep south and will break the champagne on the bow of the SS Cox as she slides down the ways.

Among the Savannahians who will make the trip in this motorcade will be Dr. Milton S. J. Wright, Ph. D., a former Savannahian, now dean at Wilberforce university, who will be the principal speaker at the launching ceremonies.

William Cox, in whose name the ship will be christened, was a Negro fireman who lost his life when the S. S. David A. Atwater was shelled and sunk on April 2, 1942. Cox, a native of Cairo, Ga., was born March 29, 1898. 12-28-44

So that the ship might be ready for launching on December 30 more than 500 workers at the Jones Construction company volunteered to work without pay Xmas day and hus speed up the means by which munitions might keep flowing to our armed forces and also pay heed to Pres. Roosevelt's plea of Friday, December 22 to war workers:

"We can best help the Christmas season of our fighting men if we carry on our respective tasks, doing those things which will contribute to winning the war at the earliest possible moment.

"Therefore, I urge that each of us resolve to keep on the job and maintain the steady output of supplies needed by our men on the fighting fronts."

Launching of Ships

VD Nurse Presented $1,000 Bond at Ship Christening

CHESTER, Pa.--Mrs. Mary S. Henderson, R. N., of 311 Wharton Street Philadelphia, was presented a thousand dollar war bond last Thursday afternoon after she had christened the S. S. Marine Angel at the Sun Shipbuilding and Drydock Company, No. 4 yard, by John Pew, Jr., vice president.

Mrs. Henderson's husband, Nathaniel E., has been with the company for eight years and is the oldest shipfitter in that yard.

She is a city nurse with the Frederick Douglass Memorial Hospital VD Clinic, at 16th and Lombard streets. Mrs. Henderson also received a bouquet of red roses.

Tribune--Philadelphia, Pa. 11-25-44

Negro Marines Knock Out Japanese Machine Guns In Hot Saipan Battle

Defender — Chicago, Ill. 8-12-44

By SGT. CHAS. R. VANDERGRIFT
(Marine Corps Combat Correspondent)

SAIPAN, Marianas Islands (Delayed)—"Praise the Lord and pass the ammunition" became an actuality here when a Negro Marine unit including two men whose ambition it is to enter the ministry and who conduct religious services for the unit moved in with the assault troops to set a record in unloading artillery shells for the front lines.

The Negro Marines suffered their first battle casualties of the war when one was killed and four were wounded. They were thrown into front line fighting when Japanese threatened American lines and knocked at least one Jap machine gun out of action and killed several of the enemy—the first Japs sent to their ancestors by Negro Marines in this war.

Members of the unit stacked the "big stuff" in neat rows and dived into over-regulation foxholes when the Japs pattern-fired the beach with mortar and artillery shells.

Prays Day And Night

"I haven't got time to think about anything but the Lord," said 19-year-old Private Edward H. Seals, son of Mrs. Emma Calhoun, Dayton, Ohio. He explained that this was prompted by the crash of a Jap plane—bested in a dog-fight with Naval aircraft—150 feet from him the night of D-day.

"I prayed night and day after that," he said.

Here's a sample of the experiences others had.

Private First Class John M. Jenkins, 20, son of Mrs. Berlina Jenkins of Washington, D.C., knocked out a Jap machine gun with a hand grenade.

"They moved us up to the front to help halt a counter-attack," he said. "This gun opened on me from close range. It must have thrown 20 shells as I jumped into a ditch.

"I could see three Japs moving about the gun. After pulling the pin on a grenade, I got to thinking they'd have time to throw it back, so I held it a few seconds and let it go. It landed right on the gun. Guess it got 'em all."

Former Fighter

Back in 1942, at New Orleans, another of the Marines, Leo Mann, knocked out Lew Jenkins, former welterweight champion. Mann, 21, son of Mrs. Daisy Mann of Houston, Texas, is now a sergeant. He directed one of the unloading groups.

"I jumped into my foxhole when the mortar shells began moving in, for about the 10th time," he said. "One thudded down right beside me. I covered my head. When I looked up, I was lying outside the foxhole. Guess I was blown out."

Sergeant Mann, who fought variously as a light, welter, and middleweight, won 24 of his 27 professional bouts.

The Negro Marines set what Second Lieutenant Howard E. Tucker, son of Mrs. J. E. Deardoff, of Salt Lake City, Utah, a platoon leader, believes to be a record of unloading several thousands of tons of ammunition in 38 hours.

Besides the two prospective pastors, Private First Class Fred Washington and Private First Class Augustus Witcher, the unit contained a former professional boxer, a dance band leader, several defense plant workers, a former electric washing machine salesman, and others with a wide variety of pre-Saipan occupations.

Win Praise

"I'm very pleased with the way they worked," said Captain Louis P. Shine of Osage, W. Va., unit commanding officer.

Said the 26-year-old Guadalcanal veteran:

"I was plenty scared myself. We'd dig in our foxholes when the firing got heavy. Sometimes the men were almost completely buried in showers of sand.

"I'd kid them and tell them, 'What are we doing here! Come on, let's get back to work where we belong.' Then I'd sart back to the boats. They came right after me.

"They worked around the clock and did a swell job. Several officers congratulated us on the way we had the ammunition they wanted when they wanted it."

Neither Private First Class Washington nor Private First Class Witcher is actually an ordained pastor, but both hope to be after the war.

Conducts Services

Washington, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Washington, Magnolia, Ark., conducts regular Sunday night services, reporting an average attendance of 60 to 70. Witcher leads the singing for the Sunday service and holds a prayer meeting and song service each Wednesday evening.

"I held first services here on D-plus-10," said Washington, "using the story of Daniel, because I thought it fit in best, both from a morale standpoint and because it showed that protection is simultaneous with danger."

Washington lived in Los Angeles, Calif., and worked as a welder for the California Shipyard before entering the service October 10, 1943. For several months, he was an assistant pastor at the Zion Hill Baptist church, conducting services at least once each month. He was studying prior to entering the Baptist Seminary Theological school at the time of his induction.

"Everybody was happy — it seemed kind of like a big football game," said Witcher of his D-day landing. "When we were near shore a Jap mortar shell landed in a nearby 'alligator.' The singing and joking stopped.

Dig Foxholes

"We dug foxholes and then started unloading ammunition. When the explosions got too close, we'd dive into the holes until it slackened up. My foxhole was only about two feet deep to start with, but it was double that depth before the first night was over."

Witcher, 20, son of Mrs. Olive Witcher of Charlottesville, Va., hopes to enter Virginia Union University, Richmond, after the war to study for the pastorate. For three years before entering the Marine Corps, September 26, 1943, he worked with the Rev. E. Lord Jamerson, pastor of the Mount Zion Baptist church, Ridge and Main streets, Charlottesville, leading the junior choir and heading the Young Peoples' Training Union. During the week he sold electric washing machines.

Not One Officer in Marines

Afro American
Baltimore, Md.
8-12-44

Refused Commissions, Combat Unit Busted

MANY COMPLAINTS

Saipan Battle Proves Training Inadequate

8-19-44

By W. A. BROWER
Editor, Richmond AFRO

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. — Last October when an AFRO representative visited this training center for Marines, he found many colored members of the 18,000 in the corps in an agitated state over the treatment accorded them.

Unfolding a cluster of complaints, they charged:

That the training they were getting was not the same given other men in their branch of service and that the training they had received was inadequate;

That a limited number of men had been assigned to units in training for combat duty and all others had been shunted into the steward's branch or depot and ammunition companies, described as "oversized working parties";

Denied Chance to Qualify

That they were denied opportunity to qualify for commissions or the warrant officer grade and that they are barred from Marine Corps specialist schools;

That a scheme had been devised to have white NCO's assigned to colored units outranking all colored non-coms, and

That colored MP's were given token assignments only outside the camp in the jim-crow sections of Jacksonville, nearest town to Camp Lejeune.

Most Charges Still Stand

Although mitigated somewhat, most of these charges still stick, according to the best sources among the men. 8-19-44

The most illuminating tipoff on the quality of training some of the men received before being shipped overseas is discernible in a recent article in Time Magazine.

Referring to the Battle of Saipan, the article recorded an incident of a colored marine who jumped into a fox hole beside a wounded white comrade.

He Learns in a Foxhole

The white marine handed his buddy a grenade and told him to toss in the direction of a Jap machine gun command post. Sadly, the colored marine, according to the article, told his comrade that he didn't know how to handle a grenade. 8-19-44

The white marine taught him, and he learned the lesson well enough to toss the "pineapple" in a group of the enemy and killed three of them, the article said.

The article went on to say that colored marines acquitted themselves well in the battle. Some came on in the first assault wave and one group accounted for fifteen Japs.

Trained for "Service, Supply"

But, the article pointed out, as well as the colored marines did in liquidating Japs they were even which they were trained—as service and supply troops.

The only bonafide colored combat unit overseas is a defense battalion, which is doing anti-aircraft work.

Part of this particular organization— a seacoast unit, which, using the 155-mm. gun, established several marine corps records for long distance firing while in training here—has been dissolved.

A similar defense battalion is now in training.

Colored marines are still barred from applying for training as commissioned officers. The most reliable signs indicate that this taboo will stick.

One Happy Development

Perhaps the happiest development since last October has been the advancement of four men to the first pay grade and the top rank of non-commissioned officers.

Those who have been rated as sergeant majors are John Hugey of Daytona Beach, Fla.; Andrew Anderson of Birmingham, Ala.; Gilbert H. Johnson, and Theodore W. Gilliam, both of New York.

Several other men have been upped in rank to ratings of platoon and gunnery sergeants. Whether similar advancements have been accorded men overseas is not known here. 8-19-44

Barred from Tech Schools

Colored men are still restricted from specialist and technical schools and in this case, too, there are no signs that this prohibition will be lifted.

There has been a gradual transfer of all white NCO's. Those that remain are assigned mainly to the paymaster's office. They will eventually be replaced.

As for colored military policemen, their assignments remain on token basis and they have no actual authority to handle white marines.

Steward's Branch a Terror

There is still a feeling here that such organizations as the steward's branch and depot and ammunition companies were designed exclusively to absorb colored men.

Especially disturbing is the steward's branch, which many feel is simply a hangover from the Navy's traditional policy of restricting colored men to servile capacities.

Depot and ammunition companies, although engaged in vital service and supply jobs, have been described as "glorified working parties." 8-19-44

Aside from that, they are performing perilous tasks and are exposed to as much or more hazard as are combat troops.

47j-1944

NEGRO MARINES FIGHT IN PACIFIC

Birmingham, Ala., Age-Herald
March 3, 1944

(The following story, distributed by The Associated Press, was written by Sgt. John R. Hurley, formerly of New York City and Hollywood, Calif., a Marine Corps combat correspondent.)

* * *

SOMEWHERE IN THE SOUTHWEST PACIFIC — (Delayed) — Negro Marines are undergoing almost constant air attacks as they help man this island, a key supply base for American forces fighting the Japanese.

The Negroes, trained at Camp Lejeune, New River, N. C., received their baptism of fire at Guadalcanal, where ships they were aboard were raided by Jap planes.

From Guadalcanal, they moved forward into more active combat zones. Japanese bombers made regular nightly runs over the areas but the Marines grew accustomed to the air raids.

Coming from all parts of the Eastern and Southern United States and the first Negroes to be recruited by the Marines, there are two groups. One is commanded by Marine 1st Lt. Cade Strickland, of Kentwood, La., and Marine Capt. Edward C. Apperson, native of Atlanta, Ga., who resides at New Orleans, La. Lt. Strickland recently replaced Marine Capt. Jason M. Austin, Baltimore, as commanding officer of one of the groups.

Trained as infantrymen with some later specializing in anti-aircraft artillery, other special weapons and tanks, they are nearly all volunteers. Retaining marked good humor and spirits under the trying conditions imposed by remoteness and tropics, they work hard at their assigned duties, taking the good with the bad.

The former cooks and clerks, mechanics and drivers, carpenters and farmers are from Alabama, Mississippi, New York, Michigan, Florida, Tennessee, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Georgia, Illinois, Arkansas, Virginia and California. They average about 20 years of age.

Birmingham, Ala., is the best represented with 17 men from that town. From Birmingham are Corp. Jesse L. Craig, Pfc. Jesse Williams, Fairfield; Pvt. Nathaniel Booker, Pvt. Riley Wilkins, Pvt. Clarence J. Collins, Pvt. Walter C. B. Bolden, Jr., Pvt. Milton A. Williams, Corp. Frank W. Ishman, Pvt. Willie Moore, Pvt. Jesse Riddle, Pfc. Simpson Norris, Pvt. Kit Bibbs, Pvt. Elijah Durden, Pvt. Melvin G. Cooper, Pvt. Earl L. Davis and Pvt. George C. Matthews.

Pocket-size grammars help the Marines eliminate the language problem in their trade with natives. They vent their souvenir craze by dickering with the natives, later sending home grass skirts, sea shells, war clubs and canes, and other curios. The natives take money first, then cigarets, tobacco, pipes, soap, junk jewelry, etc. The visionary brought along ample supplies of the latter from dime stores.

At night, when air raid sirens are not blowing, can be heard the moan of spirituals such as "Join the Band," "Bread of Heaven" and "Father Prepare Me," mingled with livelier modern tunes.

Barracudas, Negro Marines, Win Praise Of White Officer

Age-Herald - B'ham, Ala.

BY SGT. ROBERT RYAN
Yank Staff Correspondent
(Condensed From Yank, The Army Weekly)

A PACIFIC PORT — (AP) — The Barracuda Leathernecks are the something new that has been added to the Marine Corps. 3-10-44

The men in this Negro outfit, commanded by white officers and trained by veteran white noncoms, know the traditions of the Marine Corps from Tripoli to Tarawa. They aim to add their own chapter to the annals of the corps.

Lt. James T. Wilson, of Jacksonville, Fla., one of the Barracuda officers, is confident of the results. "They're damned good jungle fighters," he says, "they've shown that they are bushmasters when it comes to camouflage, stealth and patience.

"They can lie in wait for hours without getting restless. That is their outsanding combat efficiency and one that will stand them in good stead."

The average Barracuda Leatherneck is 19 years old, weighs 155 pounds and is five feet 10 inches tall. He is tough, too, usually with a couple of years behind him at some job that has given him broad shoulders and a solid physique.

One Is Champion Boxer

Take Charley Nesbitt for example. He was light heavyweight champion in the Golden Gloves Tournament held at Memphis, Tenn., his home town, in 1941 and 1942. Between bouts, Nesbitt made his living as an electric welder.

"I liked the glory behind the Marine Corps," said Nesbitt. "I thought I'd like to fight the Japs, and this is the best outfit to do it in. This service training is a lot more rugged than my ring experience, but we're certainly in great shape now, and when we go into action, watch some Jap blood flow."

Frederick E. Gartrille was driving a truck around Detroit, when he saw a pal passing on the sidewalk and screeched to a stop. "He told me about some of our boys joining the marines," Gartrille said. "I thought, since it was a new outfit, I'd like to be a part of it, so the next day I quit my job and enlisted." Gartrille is now a platoon sergeant and helped train the boys who joined up later.

But not all the Barracuda Leathernecks were construction crewmen, prize fighters or truck drivers. Pierre A. Clarke, of Chicago, Ill., was an accomplished violinist, majoring in music at the University of Chicago, when he quit last March to join the Marines. Pvt. Clarke has added 10 points to his sound frame since he enlisted.

Before they were sent overseas these men and all the other Barracuda Leathernecks were given boot training at Mountford Point Camp, Camp Lejeune, New River, North Carolina. 3-10-44

Personal Combat Taught

They were taught the basic principles of attack and defense with special emphasis on the bayonet, the knife, street fighting, jiu jitsu and dirty wrestling, so they'll be able to come out on top in the toughest kind of personal combat.

They learned the lowdown on the care and firing of combat weapons, and their work was found "conspicuously outstanding."

As for close order drill, 1st Sgt. Olin V. Carey, of Wilmar, Ark., a white marine with 10 years in the corps, said: "There's only one outfit better, a picked group that was on exhibition at the World's Fair." The Barracuda Leathernecks are particularly hot on fancy drill steps involving timing and rhythm.

They have exhibited the best of conduct. The shore patrol has commended the men on their deportment every place they've been. It's this discipline coupled with the fine physical condition and training that enables the men to do 22 miles in a little better than four hours, said Lt. Wilson.

"If we want to take the governor off and let them go all out, I'm sure they could break any existing records for forced marches. I've seen some of the best outfits and they can stop them cold."

Marines

Young, Tough And Cocky, They've Won Admiration

Daily World - Atlanta, Ga.
3-21-44

By FLETCHER P. MARTIN
(War Correspondent of Atlanta Daily World and NNPA)

ADVANCE BASE, SOUTH PACIFIC — (By Couried) Negro Marines, upholding a tradition which has blased from the Halls of Montezuma to the shores of Tripoli, have the siituation well in hand in the Pacific perimeter.

Young and tough, cocky yet serious, these United States Marines have landed, dug in, and won the admiration from battle-scarred veterans who expressed surprise at seeing Negroes wearing the coveted green of the Corps.

The newest unit shoved into a Pacific post during the rainy season and has shown such boyish enthusiasm in living and working in ankle-deep mud, the commandant found it necessary to warn against over-confidence.

Trained especially for combat, and with the commendations of Navy Secretary Knox and Admiral Halsey behind them, they wait the order to plunge into battle and defend the title of "the finest bunch of fighting men in the world."

The schoolish-looking marines are aware they're the Negro's first to wear the red, white, and blue of the 169 year-old branch of the service. Fully trained in the use of automatic weapons, small arms, invasion tactics and assault, they want to justify of strenuous training and hard living during the "boot" days at Camp Lejeune, N. C. 3-21-44

Jhard s

LITTLE HOMESICKNESS

Led by the highest ranking Negro marine in the South Pacific, First Sergeant Nolan A. Marshall, of New Orleans, over half of the unit volunteered for the service and expect thirty months overseas duty. Homesickness has not filtered through the ranks and the novelty of battle looms for the youngsters they are, the average age being 19.

Somewhere along the jungle fested shore of an isle of mud and coconuts, where the sun neglects to penetrate the soil, where frogs and lizards play, hundreds of Negro marines are stationed. It is the largest and most important marine supply depot in the upper perimeter. Landing on January 31, of this year, they work side by side with white marines in the initial mission of extending supply lines.

Negro Marines In Thick Of South Pacific Fighting; Bravery Lauded

Chicago, Ill.
Bee
1-2-44

By FLETCHER MARTIN
Representing Combined Negro Press

HEADQUARTERS, SOUTH PACIFIC COMMAND— (Via Airmail)—Negro Marines are here, and after watching them underfire it is the spoken opinion of commanding officers that they have "proven an important addition to the finest body of fighting men in the world."

Side by side with other American units in the South Pacific, the first contingents of Negro marines to reach this advance base in the combat zone are to join the corps, and the first helping build it into a key sup- to see services overseas.

There are two groups, sections of a base depot unit, commanded by Captain Edward C. Apperson, of Monroe, La., and Lieutenant Cade Strickland, of Kentwood, La. The latter recently replaced Captain Jason M. Austin, of Baltimore, Md., as commanding officer of one of the units. These two officers are "good marines" who have proved themselves regardless of hazard or fatigue while subject to almost unrelenting enemy bombing attacks.

Trained as Infantrymen. 1-2-44

Former clerks and cooks, teachers and mechanics, carpenters and farmers, and the "kid" who used to play around

Trained as infantrymen, specializing in sea coast and anti-aircraft artillery, automatic weapons and tanks, they are "good marines" who have proved themselves nearly all volunteers. The majority, including one whole unit, of one of the two officers are "good marines" who have proved themselves regardless of hazard or fatigue while subject to almost unrelenting enemy bombing attacks. These two officers

Negro Marines Want To Reach Tokyo First; Set A Dizzy Pace

The Informer - Houston, Texas
1-1-44

By FLETCHER P. MARTIN
Representing Combined Negro Press

Headquarters, South Pacific Command — (Via Airmail) —Negro Marines are here, and after watching them under fire it is the spoken opinion of commanding officers that they have "proven an important addition to the finest body of fighting men in the world."

Side by side with other American units in the South Pacific, the first contingents of Negro Marines to reach this advance base in the combat zone are helping build it into a key supply and defense front from which the push can continue Northward. Stationed at Russell Islands, in the Solomons Group, they represent the first Negroes to join the Corps, and the first to see services overseas.

Two Groups

There are two groups, sections of a base depot unit, commanded by Captain Edward C. Apperson, of Monroe, Louisiana; and Lieutenant Cade Strickland, of Kentwood, Louisiana. The latter recently replaced Captain Jason M. Austin, of Baltimore, Maryland, as commanding office of one of the units. These two officers agree that their men are "good Marines" who have proven themselves regardless of hazard or fatigue while subject to almost unrelenting enemy bombing attacks. 1-1-44

Trained as infantrymen. specializing in sea coast and antiaircraft artillery, automatic weapons and tanks, they are nearly all volunteers. The majority, including one whole unit, volunteered for their present assignments. Former clerks and cooks, teachers and mechanics, carpenters and farmers, and the 'kid' who used to play around the corner in Michigan and Mississippi, New York and Alabama, Ohio and Pennsylvania, Illinois and Arkansas, Virginia and California, they now opera as a potent unit and are unanimous in wanting to get to Tokyo first, and fast. Then home and back to civilian pursuits.

Retaining marked good humor and spirit under trying conditions imposed by remoteness and tropics, they soldier har, taking the good with the bad—like Marines. Humorously, they refer to themselves a. "material maneuvers."

The baptism of fire came early. Following "boot camp" training at Montford Point, Camp Lejeune, New River, North Carolina, they headed West across the vast Pacific. The ship docked at Guadal Canal enroute to where Admiral William Halsey, United States Navy, rules and reigns. On arrival at "the canal" they witnessed and felt the first thrill of raiding enemy planes while stil aboard ship. It was a new experience, deadly and exciting.

Once ashore they became accustomed to the regular nightly rounds of Japanese bombardments. Finding the need of fox holes urgent, each man dug his own or participated in digging a group haven from aerial attacks. They found that this was an essential MUST on the 'We hope to stay alive' list. 1-1-44

Learned French

Enroute to this outer defense post, the new Marines first stopped at New Caledonia, a quaint little French island in the South Pacific. Picturesque with its French-flavored buildings, missions, beautiful dull blue-topped mountains, winding streets, and hospitable people who knew how to speak very little English. The men felt the acute need of learning French. Pocket-size grammars helped eliminate the language problem. It was interesting to watch facial expressions as the French poured forth from these towering husky Marines.

Trade started immediately, once the international language of commerce was used as a basis, the relations between the French and these Americans became more heated at each transaction. Sent home were grass skirts, sea shells, war clubs and canes, and other indiginous curious which fetch for the natives, money (first), cigarettes, tobacco, pipes, soap, jewelry, etc. The visionary brought along ample supplies of the latter from dime stores at home. 1-1-44

Once settled on the Russell Islands, promotions came fast and furious as the men kept the standards of the Marine Corps flying high. Fully realizing that they were the first in the service, and would have to set the pace for others who would follow, and the men set out to do the job the hard way. Several rose quickly to the coveted rank of sergeant in very short time. The sergeants and corporals, in the words of commanding officers "have demonstrated themselves to be competent men."

Plain but nourishingly wholesome food keeps them fit. Everyone does his own laundry, cleans his own living quarters and area. Four men usually live in a tent. There is a barbed, cobler and tailor available, themselves Marines too. 1-1-44

The only general complaint is the torrid sun, but once in a while there are kegs of cold beers and soft drinks.

'That's more than can be said for many outfits this correspondent has visited in the Southwest Pacific. Life here is "rugged but righteous" as one New Orleans man expressed it.

One of the strangest, and yet not so strange, contributions of Negroes in this war is music. No matter where the camp, the music closest to our hearts can be heard coming from the strangest places, and at the oddest times.

One unit, the Rhythm Kings, who double on spiritual and swing, is composed of Sergeant James Harper, Philadelphia; Corporal Earnest H. Lyons, Atlanta, Georgia, former photographer for the Atlanta Daily World; and Corporal Ira L. Blackwell, Vaux Hall, New Jersey.

Birmingham Leads

Birmingham, Alabama is represented by 17 men, the largest number from any one city. Detroit, Michigan, and Atlanta, Georgia, rank next in number, but hardly a corner of the country is absent. Little towns in Texas and California send representatives to rank alongside the "big city" men from Boston, Chicago, Pittsburg, and New Orleans. 1-1-44

From Birmingham are: Corporal Jesse L. Craig, Private First Class Jesse Williams, Private Nathaniel Booker, Private Riley Wilkins, Private Clarence J. Collins, Private Walter C. B. Bolden, Jr., Private Milton A. Williams, Private Frank Ishm[illegible], Private Willie Moore, Private Jesse Riddle, Private Robert Ward, Private First Class Simpson Norris, Private Kit Bibbs, Private Elijah Durden, Private Melvin G. Cooper, Private Earl L. Davis, Private George C. Matthews.

Other men making up the outfit are: Private Thomas Roy, New Orleans; Sergeant Ulysses J. Lucas, Lockland, Ohio, a former hotel cook in Cincinnati; and Private Willie King, Detroit, Michigan, who remains one of the few undefeated boxers overseas.

New York contributed Corporal Nathaniel C. Lewis, who was working as a linotyper on the New York Age when he enlisted. Private Roderick J. Bernard, also of New York, was employed in the Navy Yard. From Brooklyn came Private Thomas Fulcher, who was employed by the Winchester Arms Company prior to his enlistment.

Two Louisianians

Former mail clerk Corporal William E. Blakely, of Richmond, Virginia; Private First Clas Cosmos D. Eaglin, who formerly taught school at New Iberia, Louisiana; Private First Class Robert C. Claverie, of New Orleans, Louisiana, who clerked at the Dryades Street Branch, YMCA. 1-1-44

These are but a small portion of the men. New to the Marine Corps, but excellently carrying out their duties with the Seabees, on the docks with soldiers and other Marines, doing guard duties and making regular watches, again in the words of a commanding officer they have proved "an important addition to the finest body of fighting men in the world."

---

the corner in Michigan and Mississippi, New York and Alabama, Ohio and Pennsylvania, Illinois and Arkansas, Virginia and California, they now operate as a potent unit and are unanimous in wanting to get to Tokyo first, and fast. Then home and back to civilian pursuits.

Retaining marked good humor and spirit under trying conditions imposed by remoteness and tropics, they soldier hard, taking the good with the bad—like marines. Humorously, they refer to themselves as "material maneuvers." 1-2-44

The baptism of fire came early. Following "boot camp" training at Montford Point, Camp Lejeune, New River, N. C., they headed West across the vast Pacific. The ship docked at Guadalcanal enroute to where Admiral William Halsey, United States navy, rules and reigns. On arrival at "the 'canal'" they witnessed and felt the first thrill of raiding enemy planes while still aboard ship.

It was a new experience, deadly and exciting.

Dig Own Foxholes.

Once ashore they became accustomed to the regular nightly rounds of Japanese bombardments. Finding the need of foxholes urgent, each man dug his own or participated in digging a group haven from aerial attacks. They found that this was an essential MUST on the 'We hope to stay alive' list.

Enroute to this outer defense post, the new marines first stopped at New Caledonia, a quaint little French island in the South Pacific. Picturesque with its French-flavored buildings, missions, beautiful dull blue-topped mountains, winding streets, and hospitable people who knew how to speak very little English. The men felt the acute need of learning French. Pocket-size grammars helped eliminate the language problem. It was interesting to watch facial expressions as the French poured forth from these towering husky marines.

Trade started immediately, once the international language of commerce was used as a basis, the relations between the French and these Americans became more heated at each transaction. Sent home were grass skirts, sea shells, war clubs and canes, and other indiginous curious which fetch for the natives, money (first), cigarettes, tobacco, pipes, soap, jewelry, etc. The visionary brought along apple supplies of the latter from dime stores at home. 1-2-44

Keep Up Standards.

Once settled on the Russell Islands, promotions came fast and furious as the men kept the standards of the Marine corps flying high. Fully realizing that they were the first in the service, and would have to set the pace for others who would follow, and the men set out to do the job the hard way. Several rose quickly to the coveted rank of sergeant in very short time. The sergeants and corporals, in the words of commanding officers "have demonstrated themselves to be competent men."

The camp sight is impressive. Clean and well-hidden in the bowels of jungular terrain, concealed by towering palms, the tents are expertly put up, having palm plank flooring, built-up sides, etc., have been completed by the extra-ambitious.

Plain but nourishingly wholesome food keeps them fit. Everyone does his own laundry, cleans his own living quarters and area. Four men usually live in a tent. There is a barber, cobbler and tailor available, themselves marines too.

47j-1944 Marines

Marines In Pacific Bravely Perform Vital Tasks

First members of Negro Marine units to reach the front lines, sturdy recruits from all over the U. S., brave Jap fire to perform vital tasks at advanced bases in the Pacific. But it's not all work, and the duties to which they are assigned, though arduous and dangerous, are routine. 3-4-44

Waiting to follow Pvt. Roosevelt Murphy, USMC, of Augusta, Ga., to the barber chair are Marines Pfc. Collis C. Kennedy, Bessemer, Ala., Pvt. David Walker, Huntington, Tenn.; Corp. Lafayette Anderson, Cincinnati, Ohio; Sergt. Donald L. Ambeau, New Orleans, La., (left to right, top); Sergt. Norman L. Sneed, New York, N. Y., and Sergt. Charles Mosley, Detroit, Mich., left to right, bottom.

Marines Under Attack From Air Constantly

Journal & Guide Norfolk, Va. 3-4-44

EDITOR'S NOTE: (The following story was written by Sergeant John R. Hurley, formerly of 136 West 109th street, New York City, and 1708 North Vine street, Hollywood, Calif., a Marine Corps Combat correspondent.) 3-4-44

SOMEWHERE IN THE SOUTHWEST PACIFIC—(Delayed)—Negro Marines are undergoing almost constant air attacks as they help man this island, a key supply base for American forces fighting the Japanese.

The Negroes, trained at Camp Lejeune, New River, N. C., received their baptism of fire at Guadalcanal, where ships they were aboard were raided by Jap planes. From Guadalcanal, they moved forward into more active combat zones. Japanese bombers made regular nightly runs over the areas but the Negro Marines grew accustomed to the air raids.

Coming from all parts of eastern and southern United States and the first Negroes to be recruited by the Marines, they are a part of America's fighting forces in the Southwest Pacific area.

There are two groups, one commanded by Marine First Lieutenant Cade Strickland, of Kentwood, La., and Marine Captain Edward C. Apperson of Atlanta, Ga.

INFANTRY TRAINED

Trained as infantrymen with some later specializing in anti-aircraft artillery, other special weapons and tanks, they are nearly all volunteers. Retaining marked good humor and spirits under the trying conditions imposed by remoteness and tropics, they continue to work hard at their assigned duties, taking the good with the bad.

The former cooks and clerks, mechanics and drivers, carpenters and farmers are from Alabama, Mississippi, New York, Michigan, Florida, Tennessee, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Georgia, Illinois, Arkansas, Virginia and California. They average about 20 years of age.

One singing group, the Rhythm Kings, who double on spirituals and popular songs, is composed of Sgt. James P. Harper, of Philadelphia, Pa.; Cpl. James E. Master, Crockett, Texas; Pfc. William F. Brazziel, Munford, Tenn.; Cpl. Ernest H. Lyons, Atlanta, Ga.; former newspaper photographer, and Cpl. Ira L. Blackwell, of Vaux Hall, N. J.

Pfc. Nathan Alexander, Barracksville, W. Va., heads another group, comprising Pfc. James W. Todd, Lawrenceburg, Ind.; Pvt. Arthur Lee Moss, Cleveland, Ohio; and Cpl. Lafayette Anderson, Cincinnati, Ohio. They also sing both types of music.

Birmingham, Ala., is the best represented with 17 men. Detroit, Mich. and Atlanta, Ga., rank next. From Birmingham are, Cpl. Jesse L. Craig, Pfc. Jesse Williams, Pvt. Nathaniel Booker, Pvt. Riley Wilkins, Pvt. Clarence J. Collins, Pvt. Walter C. B. Bolden Jr., Pvt. Milton A. Williams, Cpl. Frank W. Ishfan, Pvt. Jesse Ridlle, Pvt. Robert Ward, Pfc. Simpson Norris, Pvt. Kit Bibbs, Pvt. Elijah Durden, Pvt. Melvin G. Cooper, Pvt. Earl L. Davis, and Pvt. George C. Matthews. 3-4-44

Pocket-size grammars help the Negro Marines eliminate the language problem in their trade with natives. They vent their souvenir craze by dickering with the natives, later sending home grass skirts, sea shells, war clubs and canes, and other curios. The natives take money first, then cigarettes, tobacco, pipes, soap, junk jewelry, etc.

Some others of the two groups are: Pvt. Thomas Roy, New Orleans, La., Sgt. Ulysses J. Lucas, Lockland, Ohio, former cook at the Sherry-Netherlands Hotel, in Cincinnati, and now a field cook, and Pvt. Willie King, Detroit, Mich., a former fighter, who puts on boxing exhibitions and, so far, remains undefeated here.

New York City contributed Cpl. Nathaniel C. Lewis, formerly of Rocky Mount, N. C., Pvt. Roderick J. Bernard another New Yorker, was employed at the Navy Yard in Brooklyn when he joined the Marines. From Brooklyn came Pvt. Thomas Fulcher Jr.

Others are: Cpl. William E. Blakely Richmond, Va.; Pfc. Comos D. Baglin of Opelousas and New Iberia, La.; Pfc. Robert C. Claverie, New Orleans, La. From Pass Christian, Miss., came Cpl. Elisha Lewis Jr., formerly of New Orleans, La., Pfc. William Matlock of Nashville, Tenn., was a stock clerk for the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis Railroad, Pvt. James D. McFadden, of N. J., was a truck driver.

Negro Marines Pacific Heroes

People's Voice New York, N. Y.

Somewhere in the Southwest Pacific—(Delayed)--Negro Marines are undergoing almost constant air attacks as they help man this island, a key supply base for American forces fighting the Japanese. 3-11-44

The men, trained at Camp Lejeune, New River, N. C., received their baptism of fire at Guadalcanal, where ships they were aboard were raided by Jap planes.

From Guadalcanal, they moved forward into active combat zones. Japanese bombers made regular nightly runs over the areas.

Coming from all parts of the eastern and southern United States, they were the first Negroes to be recruited by the Marines.

Trained as infantrymen with some later specializing in anti-aircraft artillery, other special weapons and tanks, they are nearly all volunteers. Retaining marked good humor and spirits under the trying conditions imposed by remoteness and tropics, they continue to work hard at their assigned duties, taking the good with the bad.

Photos Reveal Negro Marines Out On Saipan

Daily World Atlanta, Ga.

Security Unit May Be Actually In Real Combat

7-13-44

WASHINGTON, D. C.— (NNPA) —Pictures taken by the United States Coast Guard have revealed that Negro marines are participating in the battle of Saipan America's bloodest struggle in the South Paific so far in this war.

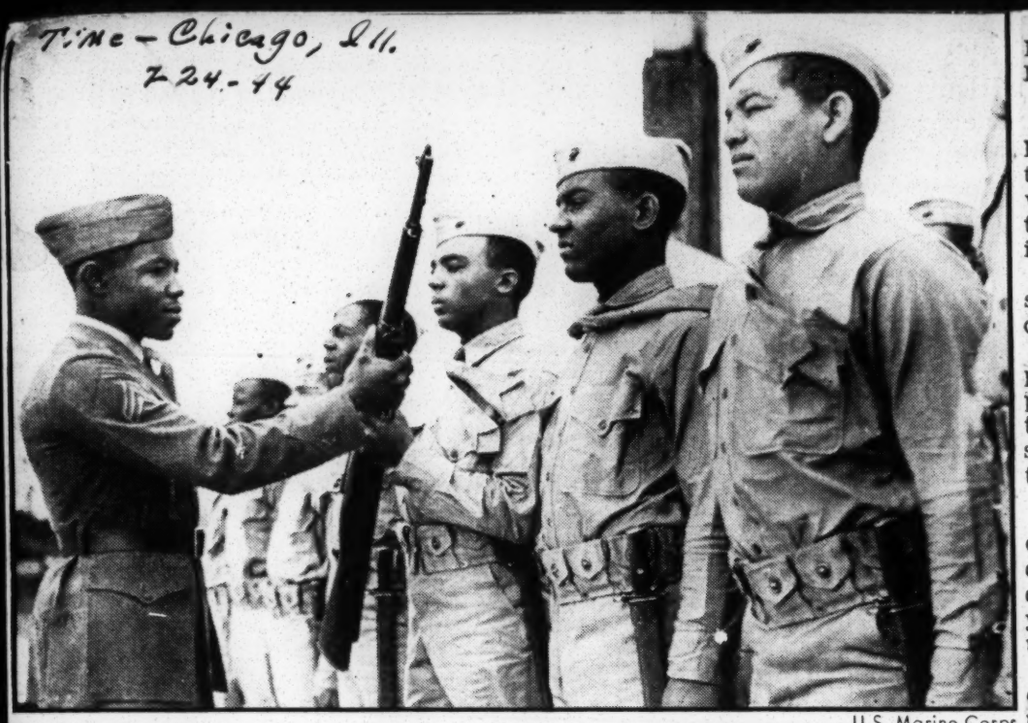
The fact that fighting is still going on at Saipan leads to the belief that these marines are not a "security' group, but real combat fighters. According to a Marine Public Relations officer, "anybody out there now is fighting."

The Japs are now massing for a last ditch stand on the island. The airfields here will place the American forces on a land base just 800 miles south east of the Phillippines.

Another revelation that Negro marines were on the island came from Capt. John N. Popham, Marine Corps public relations officer, in an article appearing in the Sunday Times of New York. He described a detachment of Negro marines digging in near by where American forces were hammering out a beachhead, and setting up a security area in the event of night attack. 7-13-44

According to Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, the Saipan engagement has cost the greatest sacrifice in human blood of any Pacific thrust against the Japanese thus far. Last reports show the American casualties totalled 1474 killed, 278 missing, and 7400 wounded.

Time – Chicago, Ill.
7-24-44



U.S. Marine Corps

NEGRO LEATHERNECKS
On Saipan, they rated 4.0.

MARINES

Combat Report

Time – Chicago, Ill.

Since June 1942, when the Marine Corps broke with 167-year tradition, and began recruiting Negroes, the marines, white and black, have carried on with none of the public race troubles that beset the vastly larger U.S. Army (TIME, July 10). Said one white Marine officer of this phenomenon: "We take only the cream of the crop, and they are all so damn proud to be marines." 7-24-44

The Corps still has no Negro officers. But it has 16,000 strapping Negro enlisted men. Some of them have become hard-boiled drill instructors in the classic mold and some have reached the top enlisted grade—sergeant major.

Most Negro marines are in service companies, but all marines are combat-minded. Last week, as a footnote to the invasion of Saipan, TIME Correspondent Robert Sherrod wrote about the first to see action:

"Negro marines, under fire for the first time, have rated a universal 4.0* on Saipan. Some landed with the assault waves. All in the four service companies have been under fire at one time or another during the battle. Some have been wounded, several of them have been killed in action.

Cool in Combat. "Primarily they were used as ammunition carriers and beachhead unloading parties, but on Saipan some were used for combat. When Japs counterattacked the 4th Marine Division near Charan Kanoa, twelve Negroes were thrown into the defense line. Their white officers said they accounted for about 15 Japs. 7-24-44

"One Negro jumped into a foxhole already occupied by a wounded white marine, who handed him a grenade. 'I don't know how to use this thing,' said the Negro. The wounded man showed him how. The Negro—named Jankins—threw the grenade, knocked out three Japs manning a machine gun.

"Said Lieut. Joe Grimes, a white Texan: 'I watched those Negro boys carefully. They were under intense mortar and artillery fire as well as rifle and machine-gun fire. They all kept on advancing until the counterattack was stopped.'

Normal Duties. "But Negro marines were at their best while performing their normal duties. Credited with being the workingest men on Saipan, they performed prodigious feats of labor both while under fire and after beachheads were well secured. Some unloaded boats for three days, with little or no sleep, working in water up to waist deep. Some in floating dump details were the first men to pile off their ship toward the beach. 7-24-44

"On an open transport, where a detachment of Negroes was left to load small boats, they volunteered to unload and tend the wounded who were brought back to the transport. They handled stretchers, washed the wounded and even wrote letters for them."

* Annapolis mark of perfection.

BY SERGEANT GILBERT R.

By Sergeant Gilbert R. Bailey, of Delphi, Ind., a Marine Corps Combat Correspondent.

SAIPAN, Marianas Islands—(Delayed)—The Corps' proudest tradition and a Negro Marine Corporal who believed in it stood the acid test together eight days after this island was officially secured.

The Corporal was Joseph Gogins, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Gogins, of 4519 Evans Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

A cave full of Japs staged a surprise attack on an Army working party north of Garapan. A volunteer group of Marines and sailors, some armed only with rocks, went to their rescue.

The unarmed members of the conglomerate group decided to withdraw after a Marine was wounded on the arm by rigle fire. Nineteen-year-old Corporal Gogins, himself unarmed, rose to the occasion.

"You come back here," he shouted. "Don't you know the Marines never retreat?" 8-25-44

Soldiers, sailors and Marines stood their ground together killing 18 Japs and capturing two before they ran out of ammunition.

Stands Acid Test Of Corps In Encounter

Daily Worker – Atlanta, Ga.
8-25-44

Armed Only With Rocks, Group Kills 18 Japs

OUR BLACK MARINES

Defender – Chicago, Ill.

The Annapolis mark of perfection, 4.0, is the term used to describe the Negro marines on Saipan. Although trained primarily to perform service duties, these marines were thrown into combat when the Jap counter-attack was gaining headway. Their white officers, according to Time Magazine, reported that, "They were under intense mortar and artillery fire as well as machinegun fire. They all kept on advancing until the counterattack was stopped." 8-12-44

The report further stated, "One Negro jumped into a foxhole already occupied by a wounded white marine, who handed him a grenade. "I don't know how to use this thing," said the Negro. The wounded man showed him how. The Negro marine threw the grenade, and knocked out three Japs manning a machine gun." The rest of the Negro marines on Saipan were also strictly a service unit, but under the crucial test they conducted themselves like veterans in repelling the attack of the enemy.

Why must Negroes, no matter what branch of the service they are assigned to, be almost uniformly relegated to service groups? The erroneous statement that "they cannot master the intricacies of modern warfare," has been disproved by the heroic deeds of untrained Negro messmen in the navy, shattered by the unparalleled success of the Negro flyers in Europe and buried by the fighting quality of the Negro marines on Saipan. If service-trained Negroes equal their white combat-trained comrades under fire, is there a fear that if equally trained the Negro would far surpass the white soldier?

8-12-44

The duty of a good soldier is to perform the particular task assigned to him, to the best of his ability. Being assigned to work units, the Negro marines on Saipan performed a herculean feat in keeping the supplies moving to their comrades. Some unloaded boats in water waist deep for three days with little or no sleep. When the battle of Saipan is recorded for history it will not be complete unless these Negro marines are given full credit for their contribution to the victory. 8-12-44

After the battle subsided, these same Negro marines, despite their own fatigue, "volunteered to load and tend the wounded that were brought back to the transport." They carried stretchers, lit cigarettes for those unable to do so and wrote letters to loved ones for wounded white marines.

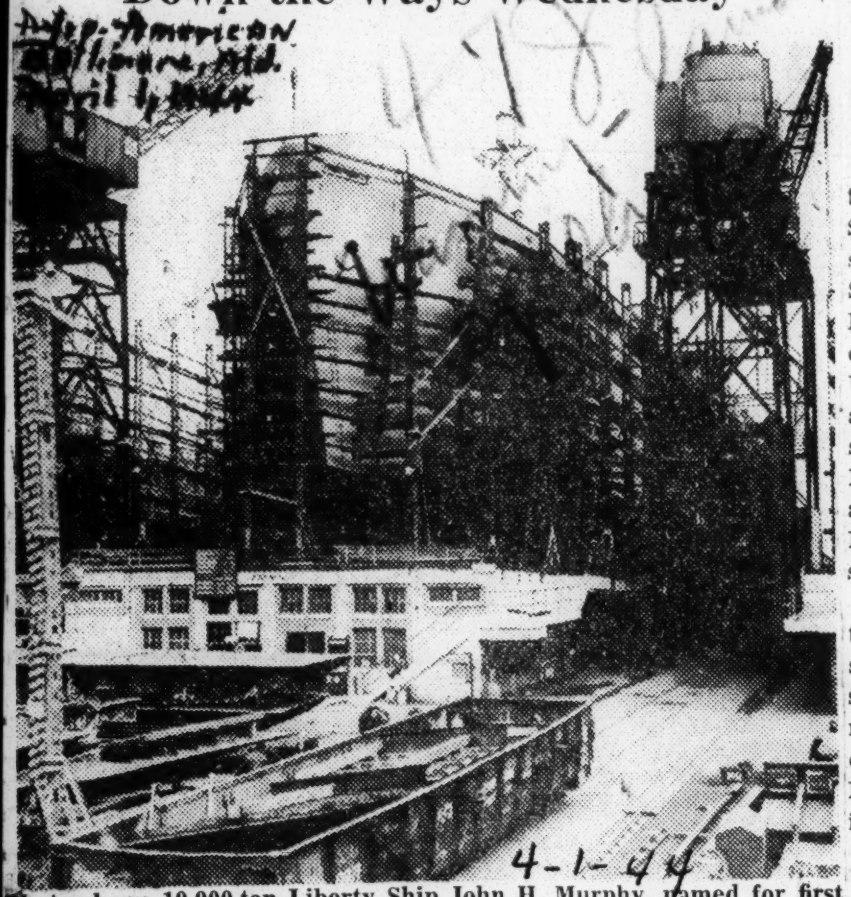
The Negro marines on Saipan rated a 4.0 as fighters, as workers and as humanitarians.

47j-1944

Naming and Launching of Ships

Here's the S.S. Murphy Before Sliding Down the Ways Wednesday

Afro-American Baltimore, Md. April 1, 1944



4-1-44

Photo shows 10,000-ton Liberty Ship John H. Murphy, named for first president of the AFRO-AMERICAN Newspapers, launched at 4 p.m., Wednesday at the Bethlehem-Fairfield Shipyards in Baltimore.

To Launch S.S. Murphy Wed.

Afro American Baltimore, Md.

BALTIMORE—The S.S. John H. Murphy, named in honor of the late founder of the AFRO-AMERICAN Newspapers, was launched at the Bethlehem-Fairfield Shipyards here Wednesday at 4 p.m. 4-1-44

Miss Frances Murphy, sole surviving daughter of the founder, sponsored the vessel which is to be commanded by Capt. John Godfrey.

170 Guests Attend

This was the largest launching party at the Bethlehem Shipyard for some time and there were some 170 guests attending.

Recalling that no ships had been named for colored people before the Roosevelt administration, Carl Murphy, president of the AFRO-AMERICAN Company, said in a launching address that a reasonable explanation lies in the statement of Edmund Burke, "to make us love our country, our country ought to be lovely."

"In having this twelfth liberty ship named for a colored person," Mr. Murphy said, "The government is saying, the circle of citizenship is big enough to include you." 4-1-44

Merchant Marines Praised

Capt. Hugh Mulzac of the USS Booker T. Washington and Capt. Godfrey were pointed out as members of a merchant marine which does not merely talk about democracy but practices it.

"With racial separation in the army, navy and in many war plants," Mr. Murphy said, "only the merchant marine promotes colored men to captains and commanders and mixes the crews."

Dinner Follows Launching

A representative of the shipyard also spoke during the launching ceremony, and Father Cedric E. Mills, rector of St. James P.E. Church, said a launching prayer.

Following the ceremony, guests were taken to the Morgan State College Christian Center, where the company and shipyard were hosts at dinner.

Captain Heard

Speakers at the dinner included Captain Godfrey, Captain Mulzac, Lt. J. H. Peck, chief steward for the Murphy; H. D. Mercer, of the War Shipping Administration, and a representative of the State Marine Corporation, which charters the ship. Music will be furnished by Rivers Chambers's orchestra.

First Liberty Ship Named For a Negro Woman

Bystander—Des Moines, Iowa

Washington—The first Liberty ship to be named for a Negro woman, the SS Harriet Tubman, is tentatively scheduled to be launched at the South Portland (Maine) yards of the New England Shipbuilding Company, on Memorial Day, May 30, the United States Maritime Commission announced this week. The name was suggested by the National Council of Negro Women, Inc., and the president and founder of the organiaztion, Dr. Mary McLeod Bethune, will be the sponsor. 5-18-44

Negro women throughout the country are planning to make the occasion an historic one, Dr. Bethune said, and arrangemets are being made to have representatives present from all the affiliated clubs of the National Council. Dr. Bethune, who is internationaly known for her work as an educator, recalled in an interview that Harriet Tubman pioneered in many fields for Negro women.

Best Work

"She did her most effective work in wartime," Dr. Bethune said, "serving as a spy and leader of guerrilla organizations during the Civil War, and was also a scout and guide for Col. James Montomery and his men in their memorable expedition into South Carolina. She also did yeoman work as a nurse and matron for the wounded. 5-18-44

"At the close of the war, through the help of Secretary of State William H. Seward, she was able to found a home for Indigent Aged Negroes in Auburn, N. Y., to which she gave personal attention until 1908.

SS ABBOTT LAUNCHED APRIL 13

Bulletin—Tampa, Fla. 4-22-44

WASHINGTON.—Amid the shrill blasts of horns and the cheers of hundreds of shipyard workers and visiting dignitaries, the SS Robert S. Abbott, third Liberty Ship named for an outstanding Negro publisher, was launched at the Permanente Metals Corporation Shipyard No. 2 at Richomnd, Calif., Thursday afternoon, April 13.

Sliding down the way into San Francisco Bay just nine days after another Liberty Ship was launched in the same yard in honor of another outstanding Negro of the Western Hemisphere, the SS ROBERT S. ABBOTT marked the fourth such vessel built in that shipyard. The SS TOUSSAINT L'OUVERTURE, honoring the great Haitian liberator, was launched there on April 4.

Thursday's brief launching ceremony was attended by a large delegation of friends of the founder of The Chicago Defender. Mrs. John H. Sengstacke, wife of the president and general manager of The Defender, was sponsor of the vessel, and Rebecca Segstacke, sister of the late Mr. Abbott, served as maid of honor. Flower presentations were made by Lula Hammel, a shipyard worker, who sold $80,000 in war bonds in a recent drive.

James Baines, coordinator at Permanente Metals Corporation Yard 2, served as master of ceremonies for the program which preceded the launching. Marcus Hall, protege of Roland Hayes, sang "This is Worth Fighting For." The invocation was offered by the Rev. Roy Nichols, associate pastor of the South Berkley Community church, San Francisco. Greetings were brought by Col. Clifton F. Jones, commander of the 8th Infantry Regiment, Illinois Militia, in behalf of Gov. Dwight H. Green; while James B. Cashin of the Illinois Civil Service Commission represented Mayor Edward J. Kelly of Chicago. Dr. Mertz P. Lochard, editor-in-chief of The Chicago Defender, read messages from promient leaders throughout the nation. 4-22-44 Dr. J. C. Geiger, director of Public Health, spoke for Mayor Roger D. Lapham of San Francisco. Governor Earl Warren of California sent John S. Hassler as his representative, while Judge Matthew Brady spoke for Attorney General Robert W. Kenny of California. The Mayor of Oakland was represented by Henry A. Frazier and Robert S. Murray brought greetings from the U. S. Maritime Commission.

John S. Sengstacke, president and general manager of The Chicago Defender, accepted the presentations and paid a glowing tribute to the memory of Mr. Abbott, his uncle. Mr. Sengstacke characterized the occasion as historical in that it marked the first time that a ship named to commemorate the memory of a distinguished Negro is being financed completely by Negro citizens through the purchase of war bonds and stamps. The citizens of Illinois in a special war bond campaign have set $2,000,000 as their goal to pay for the SS ROBERT S. ABBOTT. 4-22-44

Other Liberty Ships built by the Permanente Metals Corporation and named for Negroes have been the SS George Washington, the John Hope, and Toussaint L'Ouverture.

Thirteen Liberty Ships have been named for Negroes by the Maritime Commission. A destroyer escort was named by the Navy for Leonard Roy Harmon, who was awarded the Navy Cross posthumously, for heroic conduct at Guadalcanal.

NOTABLES CHEER AS BIG VESSEL IS CHRISTENED

Defender—Chicago, Ill. 4-15-44

Mrs. John H. Sengstacke Sends Liberty Craft Down The Ways

By DAVID W. KELLUM
(Defender Staff Correspondent)

RICHMOND, Calif.—(Special)—While a silvery moon heightened the beauty of San Francisco Bay, Wednesday night, the two million dollar Liberty Ship, "U. S. S. Robert S. Abbott" was launched at Permanete Metals Corporation, Shipyard No. 2.

This marked the fourth such vessel to be launched in honor of distinguished Negroes from the Permanete Yard, the others being the "George Washington Carver," sponsored by the famous movie actress, Lena Horne; "The John Hope," sponsored by Mrs. Walter Gordon, and "The Toussaint L'Ouverture," sponsored by Mrs. W. A. Cannon.

Dignitaries of both races cheered wildly as Mrs. John H. Sengstacke, wife of the nephew of the late Robert S. Abbott, founder and publisher of the Chicago Defender crashed a bottle of champagn across the bow of the big vessel, thus dedicating it to the service of the U. S. Maritime Commission. 4-15-44

Mrs. Sengstacke was sponsor of the ship and Miss Rebecca Sengstacke, sister of Mr. Abbott, served as maid of honor. At conclusion of the ceremony, both Mrs. Sengstacke and Miss Sengstacke were presented huge bouquets of the Flower Girl, Miss Lula Mae Hamel of Oakland, Calif. Miss Hamel, a popular employe at the Permanete Yard, has the distinction of leading the shipyard in War Bond sales, having sold more than $80,000 worth.

John H. Sengstacke, president and general manager of the Chicago Defender, declared: "We are grateful Marcus Hall, celebrated singer and protege of Roland Hayes, sang two numbers. First speaker on the program was General Manager Bedyard No. 2. Another disspeaker was Spencer W. n, secretary-treasurer of od of Boilermakers, A-26. honor of Robert S. Abbott, distin-

Ceremony Is Historic

The launching ceremony was historic as it marked the first time a Liberty Ship, named in honor of a distinguished Negro, is being financed completely by colored citizens, through sale of War Bonds and Stamps. An elaborate, patriotic program proceeded launching of the 10,500 ton ship, with the Rev. Roy Nichols representing the Pacific Coast Council of Religion, Berkeley, Calif., offering the invocation. Jim Bains Jourdain, secretary of the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks, acted as master of ceremonies.

guished pioneer in the field of Negro journalism. 4-18-44

"The citizens of Illinois are so proud of the distinction that they have instituted a drive to raise $2,000,000, to finance construction of the ship being launched here tonight. In paying for the USS Robert S. Abbott, citizens of Illinois will accomplish a feat never before attempted."

Col. Clifton E. Jones of Chicago's 8th Illinois Reserve Militia, brought greetings from Gov. Dwight H. Green. Greetings also came from Governor Earl Warren, and Major John Slavich of Oakland, Calif.

Robert W. Kenny, Atty. General, of California, was another distinguished guest to witness the launching.

Dr. Metz T. P. Lochard, editor-in-chief of the Chicago Defender, read greetings from distinguished men of all walks of life, and from all sections of the country.

Major Roger W. Lathon of San Francisco was represented by Dr. J. C. Geiger, Director of Public Health of the city and county of San Francisco. 4-15-44

Cashin Pays Tribute

Commissioner James B. Cashin, chairman of the board of directors, Robert S. Abbott Publishing Co., in paying his tribute to Mr. Abbott said: "It is symbolic that this ship, which stands as a living memorial to a man who contributed so much towards the extension of democracy in time of peace, should now steam through perilous waters with her hold laden with supplies for our fighting men and our allies in a war for the preservation of that same democracy. With this mighty ship go our wishes for safe voyages and a speedy victory. Carry on—S. S. Robert S. Abbott!"

Rev. Arthur Johnson, pastor of the Ninth and Chester AME church, served as chairman of the interracial citizens committee composed of men and women from Oakland, Berkeley and the Brotherhood of Boilermakers from the Shipbuilders and Helpers Union, headed the labor group. Seventy-five persons attended the elaborate banquet in the shipyard dining room at the conclusion of the launching.

Noted California stars of radio and stage entertained the gathering.

Other Chicagoans at the ceremony included: Captain Euclid Louis Taylor, Major and Mrs. Ruppert Simmons, Dr. Charles Thompson, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Cole and Mrs. Metz T. P. Lochard.

Ship Honors a Great Man

Launching of the ship honors a man whose career in the field of journalism is without parallel in U. S. history. For Mr. Abbott, starting from scratch and with an idea his sole capital, piloted the Chicago Defender from its first office in the kitchen of a two story frame house at 3159 State street, to its present eminent position with building, equipment and offices valued at more than $1,000,000.

Mr. Abbott, shortly after his graduation from Hampton Institute, came to Chicago in 1896 and worked at his trade at the old Hall Printing Company. He took a night course in the study of law, at Kent college, and in 1900 received the degree LLB.

In 1905, with borrowed capital, confident in his inherent ability and fortified by the encouragement of friends, he published the first issue of the Chicago Defender. Specializing in the names of people, Mr. Abbott in the course of years, adhered strictly to the practice of printing the name of as many of his subscribers and readers as possible. Through his agents, scattered throughout the South and Atlantic states, Mr. Abbott assembled and printed "state news" concerning the activities of the rural inhabitants as well as news of those in Metropolitan centers. Today thousands of persons including agents, representatives, correspondents, and executive staff find employment with the Robert S. Abbott Publishing company. The Chicago Defender editors are nationally known, and the paper has accredited correspondents in all important foreign theatres of war.

Highlights of Mr. Abbott's civic and public career include the following: appointment to the Illinois Race Relations Commission, life member of the Field Museum and of the Art Institute in Chicago, member of the Chicago Historical Society, national exeeutive president of the Hampton Alumni Association, member of the board of directors, Chicago Urban League, trustee of the YMCA, and member of the Kappa Alpha Psi fraternity, from which he received the Laurel Wreath for noteworthy and outstanding services.

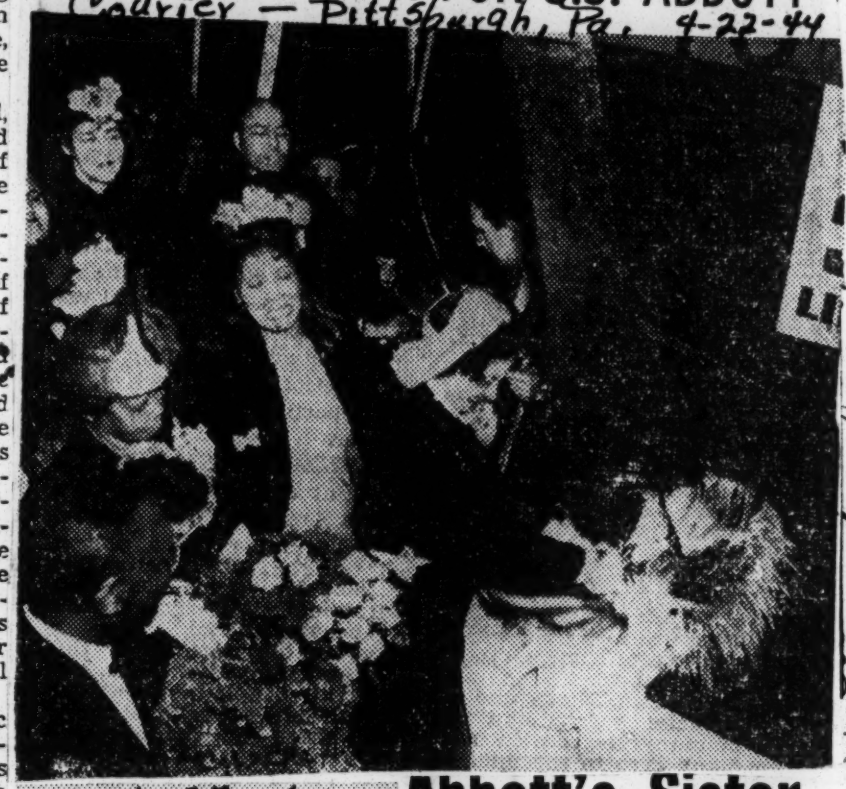
Mr. Abbott was also a member of the Ancient Order of Forrester, the Appomattox club, and Lincoln Memorial Association.

Morris Brown and Wilberforce universities, and Georgia State college conferred honorary degrees on Mr. Abbott.

Robert S. Abbott died February 29, 1940, but the institution he founded and built into a thriving business lives on. The Chicago Defender continues the fight he started for the freedom of all Americans, regardless of color, creed or national origin.

CHAMPAGNE BATH FOR S.S. ABBOTT

Courier — Pittsburgh, Pa. 4-22-44



4-22-44

Mrs. John H. Sengstacke, sponsor (shown in top photo), cracks the bottle against the bow of the S.S. Robert S. Abbott, christening the Liberty ship named for the late founder and publisher of the Chicago Defender. Under construction just 18 days, the ship was launched last Thursday at Richmond, Calif. 4-22-44

Bottom scene gives a view of the vessel, built in the Permanente Metals Corporation Shipyards, Richmond. It is the fourth ship bearing the name of an outstanding Negro built in the Richmond yards.—Joseph Photos.

Abbott's Sister Sees Launching

Courier — Pittsburgh, Pa. 4-22-44

RICHMOND, Calif.—The S.S. Robert S. Abbott, fourth Liberty ship bearing the name of a Negro leader, launched in the Richmond yards, slid down the ways last Thursday, christened by Mrs. John H. Sengstacke, wife of the nephew of the late Chicago publisher for whom the ship is named.

Other members of the late publisher's family participating in the ceremony were Miss Rebecca Sengstacke, sister of Mr. Abbott and maid of honor for the occasion, and John H. Sengstacke, Mr. Abbott's nephew and trigger man at the launching.

Miss Lula Mae Hamel, a worker in the Richmond yard, who sold $80,000 worth of War Bonds in the Fourth War Bond drive, was the flower girl for the ceremony, and James Bains, Negro co-ordinator of Yard No. 2, was master of ceremonies.

Governor Dwight H. Green, of Illinois, and Mayor Edward J. Kelly, of Chicago, sent greetings, as did also the mayors of San Francisco and Oakland and Governor Earl Warren, of California.

SOUTH PORTLAND, Maine. — The late Bert Williams, one of the greatest comedians of the American stage, was honored here Saturday when a Liberty ship named in his honor was christened at launching ceremonies. 5-2-44.

The third cargo vessel named for an outstanding Negro to be built at Todd's New England Shipbuilding corporation here was sponsored by Mrs. Maxine R. David, wife of Richard David, Negro leadman welder at the yards whose work during the past three years was termed "excellent" by the yard's Labor-Management committee. 4-23-44

Representatives of the Negro actor's Guild of New York, of which Bert Williams was a member, attended the ceremonies. The humorist was a native of New Providence, Nassau, British Bahamas, who came to the states with his parents when four years old.

After working in a traveling minstrel company for several years with Zieafeld and appeared in "The Follies" for 10 years becoming one of the best loved humorists of the era. Williams died in 1922 at the age of 47.

SS Bert Williams Launched Nov. 18 In New England

13th Liberty Ship Named For Woman

Tribune — Philadelphia, Pa. 4-8-44

The selection of a name for the thirteenth Liberty Ship to honor an outstanding colored personage of the western hemisphere was announced this week by the Martime Commission.

The SS HARRIET TUBMAN will be the first ship to be named in honor of a Negro woman. It has not yet been officially assigned to a shipyard, but efforts are being made to have it built at the Bethlehem-Fairfield shipyard in Baltimore, since she was a native of Maryland.

Harriet Tubman was born in slavery about 1815 and when she was 25 escaped from her master's plantation in Maryland to New England, where she joined with Garrison Brown and other abolitionists to become an active promoter of the "underground railway." She first rescued her parents and during two decades before the Civil War made repeated journeys into the South, taking 400 or more of her race to the North and into Canada.

During the war she served as a scout and guided Col. James Montgomery and his men in their memorable expedition into South Carolina. At the close of the war, through the help of Secretary of State William H. Seward, she was able to make her home in Auburn, N. Y., where she became engaged in public service in behalf of the poor and aged of her people. Her efforts led to the Founding of the Harriet Tubman Home for Indigent Aged Negroes which she gave personally until 1908. She died in Auburn in 1913.

SS Bert Williams Is Name Chosen For 14th Liberty Ship

Tribune — Philadelphia, Pa.
7-1-44

Coincident with announcement by the United States Maritime Commission that the name of Bert Williams, pioneer comedian and song writer, has been selected for the fourteenth Liberty ship to be named in honor of a Negro, the New York City War Finance Committee this week announced plans for a War Bond rally to cover the cost of construction of the SS BERT WILLIAMS.

The outdoor War Bond show will be held at Lewisohn Stadium, New York City, on the evening of July 4, the Treasury Department said. It is being sponsored by the Harlem-Riverside War Finance Committee, which has set as its goal $2,000,000 in War Bond sales.

7-1-44

The New York City War Finance Division has restricted admission to bond buyers only, seats being available upon purchase of a Fifth Loan Bond in denomination from $25 to $1,000.

7-1-44

Bert Williams was born in the Bahama Islands in 1876, but his parents moved to the United States while he was a child and he spent his youth in California. He was christened Egbert Austin Williams. After attending the Riverside, Calif. High School for a time, he ran away and joined a minstrel show that was touring the mining and lumber camps. In 1895 he met George Walker and they formed a vaudeville team, touring the country and arriving in New York the next year.

In New York they presented the first all-Negro musical comedy with words and music by Negroes. It was called "In Dahomey," and was successfully presented at the Casino Theatre on Broadway. It was later taken to London and presented at the Shaftsbury Theatre, where it ran for eight months.

Returning to this country, Williams and Walker produced and starred in a series of Negro musical comedies Walker died in 1900 and Williams abandoned all-Negro productions and became the leading comedian of Ziegfeld Follies, where his salary was in four figures and his skits and songs were the hit of the show. He left the Follies in 1919 and was starred in Broadway Brevities and "Underneath the Bamboo Tree," in which he was touring when stricken with pneumonia. He died in 1922, and at the time of his death was the outstanding Negro theatrical star.

7-1-44

Harry W. Brown, chairman of the Community Sales Division of the New York War Finance Committee, and Dr. Channing H. Tobias, chairman of Inter-racial Activities, report in a joint announcement that a galaxy of headliners have volunteered their services for the mammoth War Bond Rally.

Stars Raise $2,000,000 to Build S.S. Bert Williams

Afro American — Baltimore, Md.
7-15-44

NEW YORK—(ANP)—Lushest take of the gate ever seen in Harlem was Fourth of July evening at Lewisohn Stadium, when a half-filled house paid the startling sum of $2,000,000 to see a four-hour long entertainment-studded bond rally program.

Admission was by purchase of a war bond, as part of the current Fifth War Loan Drive. Earlier rains and a threatening evening cut down production by half, but the house had already been sold out. With the $2,000,000, the Liberty ship "Bert Williams" will be constructed.

Only speaker on program was Adam Clayton Powell, candidate for congress, who made a record two-minute talk and later introduced two army captains, one white, the other Charles Hall of the 99th Pursuit Squadron, who has three Nazi planes to his record.

Others on program included Ralph Cooper and Bert Lytell as masters of ceremonies; Hazel Scott, Jimmy Savo, Mills Brothers, Muriel Rahn, Lucy Monroe, Helen Mencken, Ilene Farrell, Kaye Penton, Tab Smith and band, Charlie Spivack's band, Vincent Lopez and band;

7-15-44

Canada Lee, Cootie Williams, Gene Tennyson, Imogene Carpenter, Phil Regan, Coastguard quartet, Mildred Bailey, Aubrey Pankey, Josh White, Bill Bailey, a camp entertainment outfit from WJZ Victory Group, Ida James and Bob Hawks.

S. S. Harriet Tubman

Star Of Zion — Charlotte, N.C
7-13-44

The good ship, S. S. Harriet Tubman, first Liberty Ship named for a Negro woman, launched at South Portland, Me. June 3rd, memoralizes one of the noblest women in American history. Abolitionist, under-ground railroad conductor, Federal spy, woman suffragist, filled with undaunted courage and great wisdom, Harriet Tubman embodied the zeal and love for her people of a Joan of Arc.

Immortalizing herself by utter disregard for her own safety in the effort to lead thousands of her fellow slaves to freedom, Harriet Tubman exhibited the rare qualities of bravey, intelligence and persistence that are needed in the race and nation today.

7-13-44

Harriet Tubman was a member of the African M. E. Zion Church, as was Frederick Douglass, and her home on the outskirts of Auburn, N. Y., was given to the Connection as a home for superannuated ministers. On the Court House at Auburn may be found a tablet, inscribed to the memory of this great woman.

While visiting at Auburn some years ago with Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Freeman we read Mr. Freeman's copy of "The Underground Railroad," and heard from his own lips the familiar story of the life and times of Harriet Tubman as told to him by Mrs. Tubman herself. It was an experience one can never forget.

If Liberty Ships symbolize the war for freedom, and they do, then no Liberty Ship has ever been more fittingly named than this one, dedicated to a brave and honored American woman, whose life was an example of heroic self-abnegation, exceedingly hazardous sacrifice and sustained devotion to a task, voluntarily assumed, but faithfully performed.

The christening was performed by Mrs. E. S. Northup, of Philadelphia, "grandniece of the famed Negro woman abolitionist." Other grandnieces present included: Miss Hilda Proctor, Yonkers, N. Y.; Mrs. Carroll Johnson, of Auburn, N. Y., and Mrs. Thelma Frazier.

7-13-44

At the call of Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune, founder and president of the National Council of Negro Women, who requested the naming of the ship, members of the organization are seeking to sell $2,000,000 worth of War Bonds to "purchase" the now famous ship.

Launch Liberty Ship Named For John H. Murphy

Chicago Defender
7-8-44

BALTIMORE, Md.—The S. S. John H. Murphy, named in honor of the late founder of the Afro-American Newspapers, was launched at the Bethlehem-Fairfield Shipyards here last week. Miss Frances Murphy, sole surviving daughter of the founder, sponsored the vessel which is to be commanded by Capt. John Godfrey.

After she crashed the champagne bottle across the bow of the ship a gold watch was presented to Miss Murphy by W. C. Reynolds, manager of the shipyard. Father Cedric E. Mills, rector of St. James P. E. church, said a launching prayer.

Some 170 persons from nine states, who traveled in thirty cars with police escort, witnessed the ceremony. This group included ex-Mayor Howard W. Jackson. They were later entertained at dinner at the Morgan State College Christian Center by the company and shipyard.

Carl Murphy, president of the Afro-American Newspapers, served as toastmaster and the keynote of the address was sounded by Dr. O. W. Holmes, president of Morgan State College, who knew Mr. Murphy personally.

Other speakers included:

Ward B. Freeman, of the U. S. Maritime Commission; Leonard Mason, assistant to the general manager of the shipyard; John Morgan, representative of the States Marine Corporation; Congressman Daniel Ellison, William Briscoe, public relations director of the shipyard.

Alfred McPherson, TUMSWA; James Drury, NMU representatives; H. C. (Curly) Byrd, president, University of Maryland; Judge James A. Cobb of Washington; Harry O. Levin, local attorney; State Senator E. Milton Altfeld;

Bishop H. Z. Plummer of Portsmouth, Va.; Ralph Mathews, editor, Washington Afro; Bishop A. P. Shaw of the Methodist church; and the Rev. James Wright of Hartford, Conn.

Days afterward, when the storm had abated, 13 members of the merchant crew returned to live aboard the vessel in shoal water for a month, keeping machinery working to enable the army to salvage most of the vital cargo.

The ship was the SS Robert Erskino. The Erskino was anchored in the Mediterranean sea, preparing to unload when a storm blew up that yanked the anchor chain from its windlass, forcing the mas-

The incident was contained in reports of the War Shipping administration made public Thurs-day.

S.S. Carver Renamed as Hospital Ship

Afro American — Baltimore, Md.
6-18-44

WASHINGTON—(ANP)—Two ships named for scientists, the U.S.S. George W. Carver and the U.S.S. William Osler, have been converted into hospital ships and renamed, according to an announcement made last week.

The U.S.S. Carver was renamed the USA hospital ship Dogwood on February 23, while the U.S.S. Osler, named in honor of a white scientist, was renamed the USA hospital ship Wisteria.

Mulzac's Ship Rescues Crew Of Freighter

World — Memphis, Tenn.
6-20-44

Merchant Vessel Had Broken Into Half; Save Cargo

WASHINGTON — (ANP) — A night of terror aboard a storm-wrecked American war freighter, whose broken halves ground to-er to order cruising about to avoid ollision. In the darkness the eighter ran aground on a sandbar nd all efforts to free her failed.

Then the strain broke the ship in two and the forward part, swung abeam by the high seas, ground against the stern section, while the crew awaited a rescue tug from shore. Later, U. S. Army engineers attempted to shoot a line from the beach to enable those still stranded to rig a breeches buoy. This rescue effort failed as the ship parts continued to pound together until in the morning when the storm subsided.

Survivors were then taken ashore by an army boat, given dry clothes, and fed aboard the SS Booker T. Washington.

Liberty Ships Named Robert S. Abbott And Edward A. Savoy

Journal & Guide — Norfolk, Va.

3-18-44

WASHINGTON, D. C. — The naming of the tenth and eleventh Liberty Ships in honor of outstanding Negro Americans was announced this week by the U. S. Maritime Commission. The S. S. Robert S. Abbott has been assigned to the Permanente Metals Corporation's Richmond, Calif., Yard No. 2. The S. S. Edward A. Savoy has not yet been assigned to a shipyard.

The Abbott will pay tribute to the founder of the Chicago Defender, who died February 29, 1940. Mr. Abbott founded the Defender in 1905 and built it into one of the outstanding weekly publications in America.

Born at St. Simon's Island, Ga., on November 24, 1870, Mr. Abbott was educated at Claflin College, Orangeburg, S. C., Hampton Institute, Va., and the Kent College of Law in Chicago. 3-18-44

During his lifetime, Mr. Abbott was a member of the Illinois Race Relations Commission, president of the Hampton Alumni Association, a life member of the Art Institute of Chicago, life member of the Field Museum of Chicago, a trustee of the YMCA, and donor to the Chicago Civic Opera.

He traveled extensively through Europe, Hawaii and South America, and authored two books, "My Trip Abroad" and "Travels Thru South America."

EDWARD A. SAVOY

Edward Augustine Savoy, whose name will be memorialized on another Liberty Ship, was a well known resident of the Nation's Capital, where he was born May 2, 1855. For 64 years he served as confidential messenger to 22 Secretaries of State. As a reward for meritorious service, President Woodrow Wilson, on the recommendation of William Jennings Bryan, elevated Savoy by executive order to the rank and salary of a clerk. 3-18-44

He reached the zenith of his career in September, 1898, when he went to Paris to serve the United States Peace Commission at the close of the Spanish-American War. His duty was to place the seals upon the Treaty of Peace signed there.

S.S. Tubman Is Launched

Afro American — Baltimore, Md.

Ship Christened by Abolitionist's Relative

LEADERS ATTEND $2,000,000 Tubman Bond Drive Opened

By CLAY CLAIBORNE

6-10-44

PORTLAND, Me. — In an impressive ceremony last Saturday, the 10,500-ton S.S. Harriet Tubman, first Liberty ship to be named for a colored woman, was launched at the shipyard of the New England Shipbuilding Corporation.

Sponsor of the ship, the 178th to be launched from this yard and the second to be named in honor of a colored person, was Mrs. E. S. Northrup of Philadelphia, grandniece of the great abolitionist whose name the ship bears. The S. S. Robert L. Vann was also built there.

22 Relatives Present

Twenty-two other relatives of Mrs. Tubman, including grandnieces, great-grandnieces and a great-great-great-grandnephew, all of whom were located by the AFRO-AMERICAN Newspapers, witnessed the launching which was supervised by the National Council of Negro Women.

Council officers present included Mrs. Vivian Carter Mason, first vice-president of New York and Norfolk, Va., who presided in the absence of Dr. Mary M. Bethune, president, who was ill; Mrs. Mary C. Terrell of Washington, historian; Mrs. Jeanetta W. Brown, executive secretary, and Dr. Dorothy B. Ferebee, of D.C., trustee of the organization. 6-10-44

The Greek ambassador to the United States, Cimon P. Diamantopoudos, and his wife also attended.

Company Head Speaks

Andrew B. Sides, president of the Shipbuilding Corporation, extended the management's greetings and Andrew A. Pettis, president of the Local 50, CIO, extended welcome on behalf of labor.

Greetings from the city of Portland were extended by George A. Harrison, chairman of the city council, and prayer was offered by the Rev. Gilbert H. Coffey, minister of the only colored church in the State of Maine, the AME Zion Church, Portland.

Buys $10,000 Bond

At ceremonies in the administration building following the launching, Mrs. Sara S. Washington, Atlantic City business woman, purchased a $10,000 war bond in connection with the launching of the nation-wide $2,000,000 bond campaign sponsored by the Council of Negro Women in memory of Mrs. Tubman.

A $1000 bond was purchased by the shipyard's local of the CIO and additional pledges carried the total to $17,400.

Others on Program

The council is conducting the bond drive in connection with the Fifth War Loan under the slogan, "Buy a Harriet Tubman War Bond for Freedom." 6-10-44

Others participating on this program were: Mrs. Mason, the Rev. Mr. Coffey, Mr. Sides, Mrs. Terrell, Dr. Ferebee, Mrs. Brown, who launched the bond drive; the sponsor and matrons of honor, Mrs. Carroll Johnson and Mrs. Thelma Thompson Frazer.

Active in Underground R.R.

Born about 1821 in Dorchester County, Md., of slave parents, Mrs. Tubman escaped from a Maryland plantation when she was about 25 years of age. Active in the Underground Railway, she first rescued her parents and in the twenty years to follow was responsible for the escape of some 400 slaves from the Southland.

Relatives Present

The ship's sponsor was assisted by her daughter, Miss Hilda Proctor. Other Tubman relatives at the launching were:

Mesdames Carroll H. Johnson, Dela Richardson and Alice J. Brukler, all of Auburn, N.Y.; Mary B. Cornish, Chester, Pa., and Mary K. Stewart, Baltimore, grandnieces; Charles E. and Clarence Stewart, Auburn, N.Y., and Dr. Guy Bowley, Baltimore, grandnephews;

Mrs. Gladys S. Bryant, Skaneateles, N.Y.; Mrs. Marilyn S. Winston, Philadelphia; Mrs. Thelma Frazer, South Bend, Ind.; Miss Dorothy Keene, Baltimore; Mrs. Viola S. Mitchell, Boston; and Miss Bessie Diet, West Palm Beach, Fla., great-grandnieces;

Howard, Robert I., Alfred, William and Reginald Stewart, all of Boston, great-grandnephews; Miss Hilda Bloudina, Yonkers, great-great-grandniece; and Bertram Keene, Baltimore, great-great-great-grandnephew.

Others present were: 6-10-44

Mrs. Charles F. Dixon, Mrs. John B. Hall, Miss Wilhelmina Crosson, Mrs. M. L. Bell, Nellie B. Robinson, Mrs. Edward O. Gourdin, Mrs. Romeyn V. Lippman, all of Boston;

Miss Katya Alpert, Bangor, Me.; Mrs. Leon M. Leavitt, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur W. Roberts, Mrs. David A. Dickson, Mrs. Sallie D. Maston, Louis M. Maston, David A. Dickson, Mrs. Edward Richardson, Mr. and Mrs. Euthere Teixeira, and Walter Garnett, all of Portland, Me.: 6-10-44

Toki Schalk, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Mr. and Mrs. George J. Crump, Chicago; Mrs. Sankie Everette Floyd, Goldsboro, N.C.; Earl Conrad, NYC; Mrs. Lenore Scott Morgan and the Rev. Clarice Walker, Atlantic City; Mrs. Carroll H. Johnson, Auburn, N.Y.; William T. Mason, Norfolk, Va.; Charles E. Cornish, Cambridge, Md.; Mrs. Marie Keene, Baltimore; Lee Cochran, Gary, Ind.; Bertie L. Derrick and Venice T. Spraggs, D.C.

Harriet Tubman, no information on its crew was available.

Andrew B. Sides, president of the New England Shipbuilding Corporation, told the AFRO that the ship built by both colored and white labor in 51 days, will be delivered to the War Shipping Administration, through which agency the crew will be designated. 6-10-44

S.S. Tubman's Crew Not Yet Selected

PORTLAND, Me. — At the time of the christening of the 10,500-ton Liberty ship, the S.S.

District Matron Sponsors Liberty Ship at Fairfield

Afro American — Baltimore, Md.

7-29-44

By LOUISE KERR

BALTIMORE

Serving as the seventh colored sponsor for a launching from the Bethlehem Fairfield Shipyards, Mrs. Edith S. Morgan on Wednesday christened the Liberty Ship S.S. Edward A. Savoy, named in honor of her deceased father, a veteran State Department messenger, of Washington.

The massive craft, with prow still wet with the christening champagne, slid down the ways into the Patapsco River at 4 p.m., just thirty-four days after her keel was laid.

The Savoy is the third Liberty Ship named after a colored citizen to be launched from this shipyard. Others were the S.S. Frederick Douglass and the S.S. John H. Murphy, named in honor of the founder of the AFRO-AMERICAN.

50 Washingtonians Present

Surrounded by approximately fifty Washingtonians, many of whom were relatives of the late government employee, Mrs. Morgan smiled as she performed the christening honors, but wept silently as the ship moved out into the water.

Her gift from the shipyard company was a diamond and ruby studded wrist watch.

Born in 1855 in Washington, Mr. Savoy attended Howard University and began his career of public service under Secretary of son, John Hope, John H. Murphy, Robert S. Abbott, Edward Savoy, Toussaint L'Ouverture, and Harriet Tubman. 7-29-44

The Navy Department named a naval vessel, the Destroyer Escort Leonard Roy Harmon, in honor of a colored messman. Posthumously, he was awarded the Navy Cross for heroic conduct at Guadalcanal.

awrence Savoy; Miss Gail Edna R. Rogers, Mrs. Nettie D. Wave, Miss Boyden, Mr. and Mrs. James es, Sr., Mr. and Mrs. Isaac s, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Jack- Marie Perara, Mrs. Ida S. K. Savoy; Mrs. Carrie and Mrs. Helen Gordon.

r Washingtonians present ceremonies included: Charles H. Fearington and G. Williams, both members District of Columbia School Garnett C. Wilkinson, first assuperintendent in charge of schools; ugene A. Clark, president of eachers' College; and Dr. H. Long, assistant superinin charge of educational re-

13 Tan Americans Honored

To date, thirteen Liberty Ships launched have been named for the following colored Americans:

Booker T. Washington, George W. Carver, Paul L. Dunbar, Frederick Douglass, John Merrick, Robert L. Vann, James W. John-

In charge of the launching party for the company was D. B. Purnell, yard supervisor. Guests already named for the pre-launching luncheon held at the York Hotel were:

In Launching Party

The sponsor, Mrs. Edith S. Morgan; Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Morgan, Dr. and Mrs. Sevelon D. Savoy, Miss Ruth E. Savoy, Mrs. Rachel Wines.

47j-1944

Many New Ships Named For Negroes

Greenville, S. C. Observer

Latest One Is Named For Negro Woman Who Served With Massachusetts Troops in South Carolina in Civil War.

April 7, 1944

The following interesting news item has been received from Washington and was issued through the Office of War Information.

"The selection of a name for the thirteenth Liberty ship to honor an outstanding Negro of the western hemisphere was announced this week by the Maritime Commission. The SS HARRIETT TUBMAN will e the first ship to be named in honor of a Negro woman. It has not yet been officially assigned to a shipyard, but efforts are being made to have it built at the Bethlehem-Fairfield shipyard in Baltimore, since she was a native of Maryland.

Harriet Tubman was born in slavery about 1815 and when she was 25 escaped from her master's plantation in Maryland to New England, where she joined with Garrison Brown and other abolitionists to become an active promoter of the "underground railway.' She first rescued her parents and during two decades before the Civil War made repeated journeys into the South, taking 400 or more of her race to the North and into Canada.

During the war she served with Massachusetts troops as a scout and guided Col. James Montgomery and his men in their memorable expedition into South Carolina. At the close of the war, through the help of Secretary of State William H. Seward, she was able to make her home in Auburn, N. Y., where she soon became engaged in philanthropic service in behalf of the poor and aged of her people. Her efforts led to the foundation of the Harriet Tubman Home for Indigent Aged Negroes, to which she gave personal attention until 1908. She died in Auburn in 1913.

Other Liberty Ships named for Negroes include the SS BOOKER T. WASHINGTON, GEORGE WASHINGTON CARVER, PAUL LAURENCE DUNBAR, FREDERICK DOUGLASS, JOHN MERRICK, ROBERT L. VANN, JAMES WELDON JOHNSON, JOHN HOPE, JOHN H. MURPHY, ROBERT S. ABBOTT, EDWARD SAVOY, and TOUSSAINT L'OUVERTURE.

Naming of Ships

SHIP NAMED AFTER HER HUSBAND

Tribune - Savannah, Ga.

Word has been received that the J. A. Jones Construction Company, Inc., of the Brunswick Shipyard will launch on January 5, 1945, the S. S. William Cox, named after the husband of Mrs. Arlee Cox, 559 Indian street, this city.

Mr. Cox lost his life as a result of his shipped being shelled and sunk. 12-21-44

Mrs. Cox has accepted the company's invitation to sponsor and christen this ship on the above date.

A Timely And Deserving Tribute

Daily World - Atlanta, Ga. 1-12-44

Announcement of the selection of the name of the late Dr. John Hope, former President of Atlanta University, for the Eighth Liberty ship to be launched late this month in California by the Maritime Commission, comes as a most deserving and timely tribute to the memory of the man who spent a lifetime in educational and social uplift among his people.

Elected to the Presidency of Morehouse College, where he made his most conspicuous contribution, Dr. Hope had few peers as a college President. The greatness of his soul and the beauty of his character left their imprints upon the lives of his students, which gives to that institution, to this day, a standing and prestige matched by few other Race colleges in preparing and turning out leaders of responsibility and trust.

47j Ships

His influence was felt in a like manner in matters of social and civic life among our people. He served his country overseas as YMCA Secretary in 1918 and 1919. He was past president of the Atlanta Interracial Commission; president of the Association for the Study of Negro Life and History; a member of the distinguished Spingarn Medal Committee, and was honored on numerous occasions for his contributions to education and social life among our people. 1-12-44

In thus honoring Dr. Hope's memory, the Commission has chosen to honor itself and to instill a deeper appreciation of Negro Americans for its appreciation and recognition of truly representative Negro leaders.

12th Liberty Ship Honors Toussaint L' Ouverture

Daily World - Atlanta, Ga.

WASHINGTON. — (SNS)—The twelfth Liberty Ship to honor an outstanding Negro of the Western Hemisphere will be the SS TOUSSAINT L'OUVERTURE, the U. S. Maritime Commission announced this week. The ship has been assigned to the Peramente Metals Company's Richmond, Calif., shipyard and is scheduled for launching about March 31. 3-21-44

The SS TOUSSAINT L'OUVERTURE is one of a group of similar ships honoring heroes of Latin and South America. The name was submitted by the Haitian Consultan in Washington, D. C., which termed L'Ouverture that country's most notable soldier and statesman.

This remarkable man, born, in 1743, was a slave until he was 40 years of age. Then he entered the French colonial army and rose rapidly to a position of leadership. About this time the English Spanish and French were wrangling over that part of the Island of Haiti which is now the Domincan Republic. L'Ouverture sided with the French and helped Haiti defeat the Spaniards and the English. The French government rewarded him by appointing him a major-general and Governor of the Island. Later, Napoleon I, who thought that L'Ouverture was too powerful, removed him from the Governorship, appointing General Leclerc in his stead. General Leclerc sent a formidable army to reduce the authority of L'Ouverture. After several skirmishes, L'Ouverture was 'tricked" into surrendering and retired to one of his properties. He was arrested and deported to France in June, 1802. 3-21-44

But resentment against the treatment accorded LOuverture resulted in the Negroes of Haiti revolting against French domination and in September, 1802, under the leadership of General Dessalines, General Leclerc's forces were overpowered and Haiti's independence proclaimed. Toussaint L'Ouverture died in a French prison in 1803.

Liberty Ships, named for Negro Americans have been the SS BOOKER T. WASHINGTON GEORGE WASHINGTON CARVER, PAUL LAURENCE DUNBAR, FREDERICK DOUGLAS, JOHN MERRICK, ROBERT L. VANN, JAMES WELDON JOHNSON, JOHN HOPE, JOHN N. MURPHY, ROBERT S. ABBOTT, AND EDWARD A. SAVOY.

Harriet Tubman' New Liberty Ship

Worker - New York, N.Y. 4-16-44

The S.S. Harriet Tubman will be the 13th Liberty ship named in honor of a Negro citizen of the United States, according to an announcement by the U. S. Maritime Commission Harriet Tubman was the famous "underground railroad" conductor during slavery days. This will be the first Liberty ship named for a woman.

The S.S. Harriet Tubman has not yet been assigned to a shipyard, though the Negro people of Maryland are said to be seeking it for the Bethlehem-Fairfield Shipyard in Baltimore. Harriet Tubman was born in Maryland about 119 years ago. She escaped to New England where she joined abolitionists in the "underground."

Sponsors of SS Tubman

PM - New York, N.Y.

Mary Church Terrell, 80, of Washington, historian of the National Council of Negro Women, will lead the launching ceremonies of the Liberty ship, SS Harriet Tubman, on June 3, at Portland, Me. Mrs. Terrell has been active in Negro affairs for two generations, and is the author of A Colored in a White World.

The naming of the boat after Mrs. Tubman, famous in the Civil War period, was promoted by Mary McLeod Bethune, president of the Council. Mrs. Bethune's illness prevents her from attending the ceremony. 5-28-44

Others who will take part are Mrs. D. S. Northrup of Philadelphia, a grandniece of Harriet Tubman, who will christen the boat; Jeanetta Welch Brown, executive secretary of the Council; Dr. Dorothy Boulding Ferebee, writer; Mrs. Tubman's biographer, Earl Conrad of PM's staff, and these relatives of Mrs. Tubman: Mrs. Carroll Johnson, Auburn, N. Y., Mrs. Thelma Frazier and Hilda Proctor, Yonkers.

The Council will campaign to sell

Harriet Tubman

$2,000,000 worth of War Bonds to pay for the ship. 5-28-44

Mrs. Tubman is the first Negro woman for whom a ship will be named in this war. She was active in the last century as a leader of the Underground Railroad; as a soldier, nurse and spy during the Civil War, and later as a suffragist.

Liberty Ship Is Named for Daughter of Slaves

Defender - Chicago, Ill. 5-20-44

South Portland, Me., May 29 (AP).—Mrs. Roosevelt

Daily World - Atlanta, Ga.

WASHINGTON—Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt said:

Commends Naming

Thursay expressed to In her letter, Mrs. Roosevelt said: I am happy to learn that the Concil of Negro Women Maritime Comission has named a ng the the Maritime Liberty ship in honor of a distinhas named a Liberty guished woman. This Liberty ship

e of America's most v'll carry war materials to our Tubman, daughter of slaves and women. Mrs. Harriet fighting men in all parts of the friend of Negroes who founded the the first ship to be used in

Harriet Tubman Home for Indigent Of Ship 'Tubman'

Negroes, will be launched here Sat- 5-11-44

urday from the ways of the New England Shipbuilding corporation.

(Washington Bureau of the Atlanta defense of thos e principles that Mrs. Tubman sought to establish and which American women now, regardless of race, color or creed are determined to see through to victoy. I wish for the National Concil of Negro Women and the members of Mrs. Tubman's family success in this important undertaking." 5-19-44

The naming of the ship was initiated by the NCNW, which organization will sponsor the launching.

Launching of SS Harriet Tubman Held Honor to Negro Women

Daily Worker - New York, N.Y.
6-2-44

The naming of a Liberty Ship after the famed abolitionist Harriet Tubman is a demonstration of "the progressive character of the war and a blow against the white supremacists," Audley Moore, national committee member of the Communist Political Association, said yesterday.

The Liberty Ship, SS Harriet Tubman, which will be launched this Saturday at Portland, Me., was promoted by Mary McLeod Bethune, president of the National Council of Negro Women. Miss Moore is a member of the Council's executive board.

"This is indeed a signal honor for the Negro women of America and marks a milestone on the uphill road to victory," Miss Moore emphasized. "Harriet Tubman was known as the Moses of her people. She was also a great organizer of the underground railroad for escaped slaves."

Mrs. Tubman is the first Negro woman for whom a ship is named in this war.

led by Mary Church Terrell, historian of the Council. Miss Bethune's illness prevents her from attending the ceremony. Others who will take part are Jeanetta Welch Brown, executive secretary of the Council; Mrs. Dorothy Boulding Ferebee, writer; Earl Conrad, biographer of the Civil War leader; and Mrs. Carroll Johnson, Mrs. Thelma Frazier and Hilda Proctor, relatives of Mrs. Tubman. 6-2-44

The Council will campaign to sell $2,000,000 of war bonds to pay for the ship.

HARRIET TUBMAN

Mrs. D. S. Northup, a grandniece of Mrs. Tubman, will christen the boat. The launching will be

Publisher, State Dept. Aide Honored By Gou

Tribune - Phila., Pa. 3-18-44

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The naming of the tenth and eleventh Liberty Ships in honor of outstanding colored Americans was announced this week by the U. S. Maritime Commission.

The S. S. Robert S. Abbott has been assigned to the Permanent Metals corporation's Richmond, Calif., Yard No. 2.

The S. S. Edward A. Savoy has not yet been assigned to a shipyard. 3-18-44

The Robert S. Abbott will pay tribute to the founder of the Chicago Defender, died February 29, 1940. He was born at St. Simon's Island, Ga., in 1870 and educated at Claflin College, Orangeburg, S. C., Hampton Institute, Va., and the Kent College of Law in Chicago. His paper is circulated to thousands at home and abroad.

Savoy was a resident of the nation's capital, where he was born in 1855. Savoy served sixty-four years with the State Department and was with the United Peace Commission in Paris at the close of the Spanish-American War.

14th liberty ship named for a Negro

Tribune - Chicago, Ill.

BALTIMORE—The S.S. Edward A. Savoy, the 361st Liberty ship to be launched at the Bethlehem Fairfield Shipyard here, was named for a Negro who spent 64 years in government service, and was chief messenger to 22 Secretaries of State. 7-31-44

Mrs. Edward Savoy Morgan, of Washington, D. C., Savoy's daughter, was the sponsor.

Savoy was born in Washington and attended Howard university. In 1869 he became page boy to Secretary of State Hamilton Fish, starting a career of service which extended over a period of 64 years. President Woodrow Wilson, on recommendation of William Jennings Bryan, elevated Savoy to the rank and salary of clerk. His work was largely confidential and he numbered among his contacts many distinguished and famous personages. When he retired in 1933, he was called to the White House by President Roosevelt and thanked for "faithful and unique service to the government and the people of the United States."

Following the launching, Mrs. Morgan was presented with a diamond and ruby-studded wrist watch on behalf of the shipyard as a memento of the occasion.

Washington Des Moines
March 6, 1944

NAME LIBERTY SHIP FOR FOUNDER OF CHICAGO DEFENDER

Washington—The naming of the tenth and eleventh Liberty Ships in honor of outstanding Negro Americans was announced this week by the U. S. Maritime Commission. The S.S. Robert S. Abbott has been assigned to the Permanente Metals Corporation's Richmond, Calif., yard No. 2. The S. S. Edward A. Savoy has not yet been assigned to a shipyard.

The Robert S. Abbott will pay tribute to the Founder of The Chicago Defender, who died February 29, 1940. Mr. Abbott founded the Defender in 1905 and built it into one of the outstanding weekly publications in America. Born at St. Simon's Island, Ga., on November 24, 1870, Mr. Abbott was educated at Claflin Collefie, Orangeburg, S. C., Hampton Institute, Va., and the Kent College of Law in Chicago. At Hampton he learned the printer's trade and although he was a practicing attorney, he remained loyal to his trade, seeing a greater need for serving his race through public print. With borrowed capital, he founded the institution which he directed as the active head for 35 years.

Today the Chicago Defender is housed in its own plant and employs more than 100 persons. It is circulated to thousands of persons thruout America and abroad.

Ex-Welder Christens S.S. Bert Williams in Maine

Afro American — Baltimore, Md.
11-25-44

(Photos on Page 3)

PORTLAND, Me. — Honoring the name of one of the great humorists of the American stage, the SS Bert Williams, built at Todd's New England Shipbuilding Corporation, slid down the ways Saturday into the waters of Casco Bay.

Mrs. Maxine R. David, wife of a leadman welder at the yard and a former welder herself, christened the Liberty Ship in the presence of a delegation from the Negro Actors' Guild of New York. Shipyard officials and a crowd of fellow workers were present.

Mrs. David was selected for the honor by her husband, who was chosen to pick a sponsor because of his perfect work and attendance record over a period of three years.

Following the launching, the sponsor, her husband and a dozen fellow workers, all with excellent attendance records, were given a luncheon by the company at a local hotel.

Elmer Carter Speaks

Andrew B. Sides, president of the NESC, presided and presented an engraved silver plate to Mrs. David.

Elmer Carter, executive chairman of the Negro Actors' Guild of America presented a framed painting of Bert Williams to the ship as a token from his organization.

Leigh Whipper, outstanding character actor, told a number of anecdotes about Bert Williams, with whom he was closely associated.

The SS Bert Williams was the 225th cargo vessel built by NESC and the third named for a colored person, the other two being the SS Robert L. Vann and the SS Harriet Tubman.

'JOHN HOPE' LAUNCHED

Courier — Pittsburgh, Pa.
2-12-44

RICHMOND, Calif.—Under construction only 16 days, the 10,500-ton Liberty ship, "John Hope," the ninth named in honor of a famous Negro, was christened here with Mrs. Walter A. Gordon, prominent California society matron and civic leader, as sponsor.

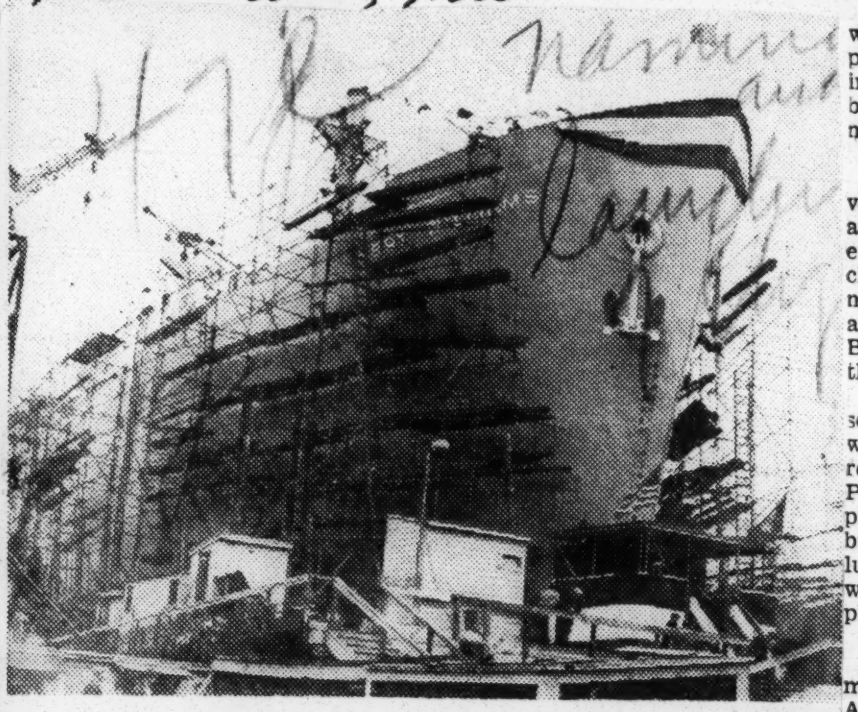
The "John Hope" was the 272nd built by men and the local shipyard, bearing the late Dr. John for 25 years the president of Morehouse college and of Atlanta, Ga., as national figure in YMCA and in

Naming and Launching of Ships

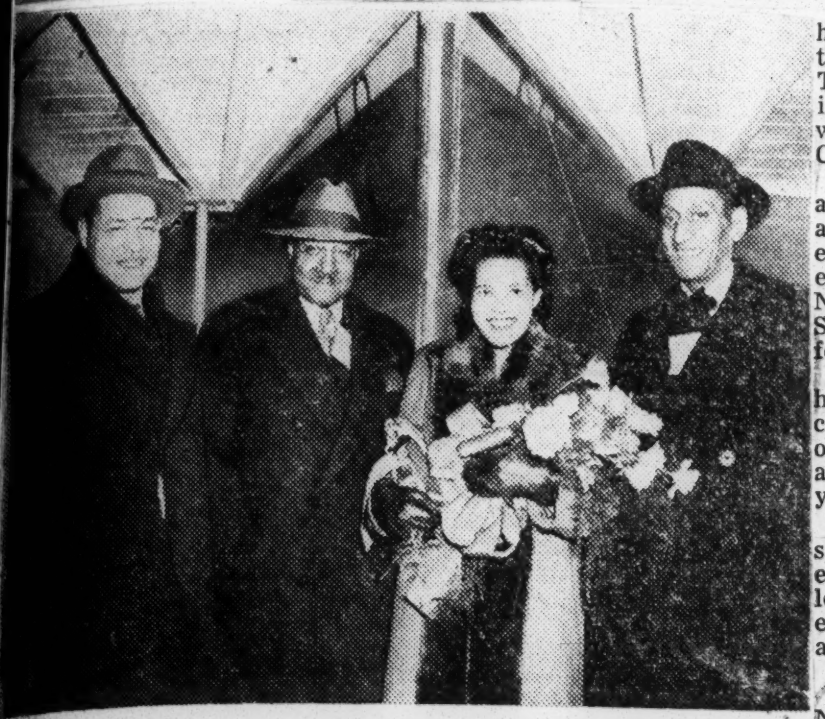
Serve at Christening of S.S. Bert Williams at Portland, Maine

Afro American Baltimore, Md.

Mrs. Maxine R. David, Portland, Me., wife of Leadman Welder Richard David, who was given the privilege of choosing his wife to sponsor the S.S. Bert Williams because of his outstanding work and attendance record.



The S.S. Bert Williams, 225th Liberty Ship built at New England Shipbuilding Corporation, a Todd affiliate at South Portland, Me., shown prior to its launching, November 18, which was attended by Negro Actors' Guild officers.



Sponsors group at the launching. Left to right, Richard David, husband of the sponsor; Elmer Carter, who presented a portrait of Bert Williams to the ship; Mrs. David, and Leigh Whipper, guild vice president.

Ex-Welder Christens S.S. Bert Williams in Maine

Afro American Baltimore Md. 11-25-44

(Photos on Page 3).

PORTLAND, Me. — Honoring the name of one of the great humorists of the American stage, the SS Bert Williams, built at Todd's New England Shipbuilding Corporation, slid down the ways Saturday into the waters of Casco Bay.

Mrs. Maxine R. David, wife of a leadman welder at the yard and a former welder herself, christened the Liberty Ship in the presence of a delegation from the Negro Actors' Guild of New York. Shipyard officials and a crowd of fellow workers were present.

Mrs. David was selected for the honor by her husband, who was chosen to pick a sponsor because of his perfect work and attendance record over a period of three years.

Following the launching, the sponsor, her husband and a dozen fellow workers, all with excellent attendance records, were given a luncheon by the company at a local hotel.

Elmer Carter Speaks

Andrew B. Sides, president of NESC, presided and presented an engraved silver plate to Mrs. David.

Elmer Carter, executive chairman of the Negro Actors' Guild of America, presented a framed painting of Bert Williams to the ship as a token from his organization.

Leigh Whipper, outstanding character actor, told a number of anecdotes about Bert Williams, with whom he was closely associated.

The SS Bert Williams was the 225th cargo vessel built by NESC and the third named for a colored person, the other two being the SS Robert L. Vann and the SS Harriet Tubman.

Liberty Ship Bert Williams Is Launched

N.Y. Amsterdam News

Portrait of Comedian Gift of Actors' Guild At Maine Ceremonies

12-2-44

Honoring the name of one of the great Negro humorists of the American stage, the Liberty Ship, SS Bert Williams, 225th cargo vessel to be built at Todd's New England Shipbuilding Corporation at South Portland, Maine, slid down the ways on November 18 into the waters of Casco Bay, the United States Maritime Commission announced this week.

Mrs. Maxine R. David, wife of a leadman welder on the third shift and a former welder herself, sponsored the ship in the presence of a delegation from the Negro Actors Guild of New York, a group of officials of the shipyard, and before a crowd of fellow workers. Mrs. David was selected for the honor by her husband, who was chosen to pick a sponsor due to his perfect work and attendance record in the yard over a period of three years working on the graveyard shift. This privilege is accorded various workers in the yard at New England Shipbuilding Corporation by the labor-management committee.

Launched Well

With a well-timed blow, Mrs. David smashed the beribboned bottle against the prow of the ship, showering bystanders with foaming champagne. The huge ship gained momentum and slid down the ways as the strains of the "Star-Spangled Banner" mingled with the cheers of the workers.

Following the launching the sponsor, her husband and a dozen fellow workers with excellent attendance records were given a luncheon at a Portland hotel. Andrew B. Sides, president of the New England Shipbuilding Corporation, presided at the luncheon and presented Mrs. David with the traditional engraved silver plate, as a memento of the occasion.

Painting Given

Elmer A. Carter, executive chairman of the Negro Actors Guild of America, presented a framed painting of Bert Williams to the ship as a token from his organization. Leigh Whipper, outstanding Negro character actor, told a number of amusing anecdotes about Williams, and praised the New England Shipbuilding Corporation for its selection of a Negro workman, who had helped build the ship, to choose a sponsor. He pointed out that it was evidence of true Americanism. Mr. Sides replied that the shipyard was proud of the excellent working record of its employees, white and Negro men and women, and pointed to evidence of it in the group seated at the luncheon table.

The launching of the SS Bert Williams brings to a total of three the number of Liberty Ships launched at the New England Shipbuilding Corporation in memory of outstanding members of the Negro race. Previously the SS Robert L. Vann and the SS Harriet Tubman were launched at this yard.

Fourteen Ships

The SS Bert Williams makes a total of 14 such ships named in honor of uotstanding Negro Americans by the United States Maritime Commission. Others have been the SS Booker T. Washington, George Washington Carver, Frederick Douglass, John Merrick, James Weldon Johnson, John H. Murphy, Robert S. Abbott, Paul Laurence Dunbar, John Hope, Toussaint L'Overture and Edward A. Savoy.

The Navy Department has named a naval vessel, the destroyer escort Leonard Roy Harmon, in honor of a Negro mess attendant who received the Navy Cross posthumously for heroic conduct at Guadalcanal.

UN-COVERING WASHINGTON

Chicago, Ill. Defender

By HARRY S. McALPIN
White House Correspondent
(Copyrighted Thru Atlanta Daily World by NNPA)

WASHINGTON—There is a story been told. It came out during preparations for the launching of the S.S. Harriet Tubman.

Though Harriet Tubman left, squabbling as though a million dollar a Liberty Ship, was schedme and a repu- Mrs. Bethune as president of the e "fightingest" National Council of Negro Women, s produced, her which organization suggested Harhave been riet Tubman's name to grace the s in coin of the realm were at the life and works of Harriet Tub-stake. man.

It all came about as result of the unfortunate and near-fatal illness of an equally illustrious character, Mary McLeod Bethune—who says much of her inspiration came from in the launching of Liberty ships women humanity has produced, named for Negroes which hasn't surviving relatives uled to christen the floating queen among carriers of arms, men and supplies to the battlefronts. Her illness led the NCNW to seek a substitute—preferably the nearest of kin to the engineer of the Underground Railroad. A niece located in Baltimore felt she was too feeble and too old to make the trip to Portland, Maine. 6-3-44

Then came the deluge....

Claims of being the only living relative—charges of imposters—feuds as to whether one grandniece raised as a daughter by Mrs. Tubman was any nearer-kin or had any more right to christen the ship than a grandniece in whose home that illustrious woman died—all this and more descended upon the NCNW.

And Jeanetta Welch Brown, the efficient executive secretary of the NCNW, who handled the arrangements, shook her head and reluctantly agreed with John Carmody, member of the National Maritime Commission, who told her a few days before the launching ceremonies:

"We're trying to win a war and don't have time for all the fuss and fanfare which has arisen in every one of such cases."

There's a lot of eyebrow raising over in the Department of Agriculture, and among race relations advisers generally in Washington.

Sam Greer, special assistant to the administrator of Farm Security Administration, has gone into the armed forces. He was the unpopular, race relations officer of that agency.

A few days ago, all of Greer's office furniture was moved out of his late office and placed in storage.

Speculation is sweeping the clouds with rumors that the job will not be filled because Hennigan, the logical man for it is not a Barnett-Patterson protege and not inclined to follow in Greer's "uncle-like" strides. Hennigan is now attached to the information division of FSA.

And now, the two chief advisory spots in the department exclusive of the "free" advice from the special consultants to the secretary are rusting from non-use. Roberts' illness may force him to remain away for six months to a year more, and Greer is gone at least for the duration.

One reformed race-relations adviser has raised the question, along with her eyebrows, whether the Department of Agriculture has declared a moratorium on racial problems of the Negro farmers and the colored employees of the department. "If so they should share the secret of how to do it with us all," she said.

Close-up of Thompkinsville Base Where Democracy Works

Amsterdam News—New York, N.Y.
6-3-44

By HERMAN T. SMITH
(NNPA Pool Correspondent)

Democracy is really at work in Thompkinsville, Staten Island, where hundreds of Negro men are busily engaged in keeping Uncle Sam's big naval base tuned up for the job of winning a war.

This big base, located under the shadow of the Statue of Liberty, is symbolic of the real freedom that a democracy is supposed to be. Only a nickel is required for the ferry ride from the Battery to Thompkinsville and the trip can be made in 20 minutes.

Thompkinsville is a working and not a training base, which means that the men stationed here are trained elsewhere. Of the 12,000 men working 24 hrs. a day, 4,000 are Negroes, Capt. John M. Gill, the commanding officer said.

Capt. Gill, 58, is medium in height and impressive. He seems quite concerned about the Navy's new polcy on Negroes. His principal concern along this line is that the zeal of the Negro in the fight for equal rights might blind him to the responsibility those rights include.

The Main Handicap

Thompkinsville's commanding officer compared this danger to that of a swinging pendulum that was permitted to sway too far in one direction, thereby upsetting the power which keeps the pendulum in motion.

6-3-44

"This zeal, though justified," Capt. Gill said, "might upset the progress that has been made in the past two years, if not controlled."

The main handicap of the Negro in the Navy as seen by Capt. Gill is "that the Negro has not been a going race," and further stated ptain Gill, "to be around boats is know them, and time training d experience plus hard work are only factors on which a man advance in the Navy.

Captain Gill showed an intimate owledge of his men when he called name several outstanding colormen on the post. He was ematic that there shall be no segreion or discrimination on his base er than the men themselves work t Thompkinsville colored and ite live in the same quarters, eat ether in the same mess hall, use same recreational facilities and k together in all capacities acding to their rating and skill.

6-3-44

Integration

found Negroes operating high vered cranes, tugs and other high vered machines. There are colld yeomen such a Y|3c Benjamin , from Cleveland, Ohio, and four er men that were not on duty accounts. On this same boat are Lester Earl Hone, S1c, from Camden, N. J., Robert Gadson, S1c from New York City, and Ferrol Gibbs, F1c, from Washington, D. C.

6-3-44

Most Highly Trained

The most highly trained man I met on the base is Henry A. Martin, SpO2|c, of Chicago, Ill. In speaking of Mr. Martin, Captain Gill classed him in his work, as one of the most important men on the post. As at the time of my visit.

There are storekeepers such as Sk3c, Eddie Bernard from Indianapolis, Ind., and Warren W. Mariner Sk3c, from Brooklyn, N. Y.

In the machine shop colored number about 9% of the total personnel. Men like Theodore Pack MM2c, from East Liverpool, O., and Ellis W. McCauley MM2c, from Port Arthur, Tex., both men high school graduates and no machine shop training before joining the Navy.

In the machine shop also was Wilbur Tucker, MM2c from Enterprise, Alabama with two years high school training. In the ship fitting and metalsmith shop, I met such men as Louis Durald, M2c, a former carpenter from New Orleans, La., three years high school training, and Stanley McMullin, M2c, from Trenton, N. J., a high school graduate and former metalsmith student in a NYA project.

6-3-44

There are eight other colored working in this shop but were off duty at the time of my call.

In the electric shop there are twelve colored out of a total of 75 workers. I talked with Ashton J. Bird, EM2c from Baton Rouge, La., who works on batteries and the wiring of motors. He is a high school graduate and was a carpenter before entering the Navy.

On board a net tender I talked with Willard Bland, MMic, a young man from Chicago, Ill., was a syrup mixer before entering the Navy, and five other men. On a navy tug boat I found colored performing almost every task, such as Frederick Douglas Dennis, QM2c, from Brinkley, Ark. Before entering the Navy, Mr. Dennis was teaching school in Arkansas. His duties on his boat are to keep the shop's log, keep ship's charts corrected, file crews, weekly muster and keep crew pay oil specialist second class, Martin's duties are to test all oil used in the motors of ships and all other machines operating in our out of the base. He has a degree in chemical engineering from the University of Michigan. He was a classmate and is a personal friend of Louis Martin, publisher of the Michigan Chronicle. Until coming to Thompkinsville, Martin had received all his naval training in the handling of fire arms, but as soon as his chemical background was discovered at this base he was changed to his present position with an up in rating. Before entering the Navy he was a trouble shooter for the Commonwealth Edison Company of Chicago.

Recently a colored man was recommended for a commission from this base, and is now an Ensign serving temporarily at Great Lakes. He is youthful J. E. Hare, Ensign D|V (s) U.S.N.R., whose home is Fort Pierce, Florida. Ensign Hare, 25, attended Bethune Cookman College, Daytona Beach, Fla., and holds a Ph.D. degree from Xavier University, New Orleans, La. Captain Gill says that he is hoping that Mr. Hare will be sent back to serve at Thompkinsville.

6-3-44

50 Negro Sailors Draw Sentences

8 To 15 Years Meted Out On Charges Of Mutiny

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 18—(AP)—Prison sentences ranging from 8 to 15 years were meted out today, to 50 U. S. Navy negro enlisted men who refused to load ammunition at Mare Island Navy Yard a few weeks after the nearby Port Chicago disaster, in which 322 men were killed.

The Twelfth Naval district announced that the entire 50, convicted of mutiny by court martial last month, drew "initial sentence's" of 15 years, but that Rear Admiral Carleton H. Wright, commandant of the district, already has ordered mitigation of the sentences of 40 of the men, because of their youth, previous clear records, or short period of service to prepare them for navy discipline at dangerous tasks.

Sentences began to run Nov. 15 and they are subject to further review by the Judge Advocate General of the Navy, the Bureau of Personnel and the Secretary of the Navy. They may be further mitigated upon review, but not increased.

MERCHANT SEAMEN AHOY

The Southern squawk that whites are dying for colored people does not apply in the Merchant Marine.

The National Maritime Union has 85,000 members. Nearly one-tenth (8,000) are colored. They include three colored ship captains (Godfrey, Mulzac, and Richardson) and a large number of colored ship officers.

Afro American
Baltimore, Md.
3rd

Captain Mulzac has completed seven Atlantic crossings with supplies, munitions and explosives. Harold Harper, a messman, has survived the sinking of six ships.

The secretary of the Maritime Union is Ferdinand Smith. He's colored. Colored and white are hired from the same halls, sleep and eat together on the same ships.

Everybody shares the same risks; everybody has the same chance of promotion.

9-2-44

That is the way it ought to be in the Army and Navy. Is the Laurinburg, N.C., Exchange willing to work for that? If it can be put over, white boys will not have to die for anybody but themselves.

afford to overlook the basic fact that the Army and Navy are instruments belonging to the American people. When there is no war, we keep (or should keep) the Army and Navy in good condition, ready to be called upon when we

The People Must Be Careful
To See That Army and Navy Do
Source of Authority

THE HORIZON

By P. L. PRATTIS

Courier, Pittsburgh, Pa.
11-4-44

WE want to support our Army and Navy in every way possible. We must do that. We must work harder, give more and complain less about our petty, personal privations. The biggest job before us is the job the Army and Navy are undertaking to perform. But this does not mean that we can

Navy Jim Crow

Dear Editor: PM 11-26-44

Thank you very much for the sympathetic account of my discharge from the Navy. I am sure it will do much, not only to aid us in obtaining an honorable discharge, but will also hasten the breakdown of Jim-crow in the armed forces.

In pointing out to the reporter who interviewed me the help which I have obtained in my case, I tried to emphasize the help which I have obtained from the Lynn Committee to Abolish Segregation in the Armed Forces. This is an organization devoted exclusively to the problem of segregation in the Army and Navy and has been of the greatest help and encouragement to me in my fight for an honorable discharge. It has obtained counsel to represent, not only me, but four other Seabees before the Naval Board of Review—Harvey Steele, Robert L. Mims, J. L. Donaldson, and Clarence O. Clarke. It has retained as counsel Mr. Gerald Weatherly, who is associated with Mr. Arthur Garfield Hays. The NAACP, the CIO War Relief Committee, and the American Civil Liberties Union are also co-operating in the case.

New York

ISAAC G. McNATT

are confronted by the task for which we create and maintain them. But, in time of peace, when there is no great use for the Army and Navy, we carry on as a Nation. In time of peace, other instruments (such as the Department of Agriculture, the Department of the Interior, the Department of Commerce, or the Postoffice or Labor departments) may be more important. Each of these instruments, these departments, is designed to serve the Nation. It is but a part of a system of Government created by the people to serve them in case of need. Each is, or should be, subservient to the Chief Executive, the Congress and the courts. Each is supposed to take its orders from popularly elected representatives of the people. These departments, or their agents, are not expected to tell the people what to do. The people tell them.

Mr. Pratt's

BOSS CREATOR

IT is important that we should remember this. The chances are that no one person, or set of persons, in the Department of the Interior or the Department of Commerce, would take their jobs so seriously that they would think they should be running the Nation. Usually, the leadership in these agencies fit easily into the positions designed for it and stays put. But that is not so true of the Army and Navy, particularly when they have been called into action. Theirs is a tremendous job involving, at times, the life or death of the Nation. It is perhaps understandable that sometimes they should come to feel that their creator belongs to them just because their creator has to use them. The bureaucracy in civilian departments doesn't begin to possess the potential dangers of bureaucratic Army and Navy leadership. This bureaucracy, conscious of its importance because of the job it has to do and favored by the dramatic qualities of its work, is all too often prone to regard with obvious disdain the people for whom it works.

Armies and navies make or break nations. The laboratory test before our eyes is in South America where, from time to time, the armies effect changes in government and seize control. Batista, army sergeant, led the uprising in Cuba. Ramirez, army general, seized control in Argentina. Bolivia was recently upset by an army coup.

IN OUR WORLD

THE chances are that our Army and Navy leadership does not think in the above terms, not too seriously. But one cannot be too sure that our Army and Navy are amenable to the direction of the people whom they serve. It is easy to gain the impression that the Army and Navy bureaucracy believes its business to be its business—not the people's. These departments operate within a world of their own and under a government of their own. Practically their only gesture to the people is made when they ask the Congress to turn over to them the money of the taxpayers. Every other contact the people seek is barred on grounds of military security.

Thus when the Army and Navy make a mistake, it is not considered the people's business. The people are not told unless special pressures are exerted. The people of the Nation have been told that the conquest of Sicily was a glorious adventure. That was not true. There are fundamental blunders in the Sicilian campaign which should have been marked by the removal from service of those responsible for them. If anybody has been punished, the people have not been informed. The people have not even been told what happened.

DON'T FIRE GENERALS

THE danger from this disposition of the Army and the Navy (as in the Coral sea engagement) to withhold knowledge from the people resides in the fact that the Army and Navy might be losing the war for us and we would know nothing about it until the conqueror was on our shores. When an aide to Secretary of the Interior Ickes was caught in a little alleged forgery, he quickly lost his job. But what has happened to the high officers responsible for the shooting of American paratroops at the beginning of the invasion of Sicily? Why did the Army have to be forced to release the Patton story? Why was Kwajalein taken so easily and Tarawa at such heavy cost? How are we to know when the high command does wrong? The Russians have, figuratively, chopped off the heads of generals who failed in campaigns. So have the Germans. So have the Japanese. So have the British. Are we to presume that all our generals have been so successful that no axe has been merited?

That may be true. God knows we all hope it is true. But the Nation cannot survive on hope alone. The Army and Navy must not be allowed to drift away from their proper controls which are civilian in nature. The citizen is still the component part of this democracy and such authority as the Army and Navy enjoy are limited by the will of the people.

There doubtless is no such thing as a military democracy. But we must be careful in such times as these that no such tendency gains headway. The Army and Navy must be given as much freedom as possible to do their jobs, but it must never be forgotten that this freedom is a grant, rooted in the people. The disposition of Army and Navy men to grow big in their own sights is one reason we should curb our enthusiasm to make an admiral or a general President.

Capt. Mulzac Visits Naples

Vessel Completes 7th Atlantic Crossing

S.S. Booker T. Carries Load of Ammunition

SKIPPER TIRED

By ART CARTER
AFRO War Correspondent with U.S. Troops in Italy

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

NAPLES (By Cable) — Capt. Hugh Mulzac, veteran merchant skipper, was a visitor here this week, marking the secoid time in five months that he has brought his liberty ship, the Booker T. Washington, to this wartime seaport loaded with supplies and ammunition.

The trip also was Captain Mulzac's seventh crossing of the sub-infested Atlantic in two years. As in previous crossings, he employed a mixed crew headed by Clifton Lastic, chief mate; Cecil Blackman, chief radio operator; John Garrett, chief engineer, all of New York City; and Antonio Perry, steward, of Boston.

Trip Not So Bad

"All voyages are tough as we have a big job to do, but this last one was not as bad as some of the others," the captain told a group of newspapermen.

The bespectacled captain, who has had thirty-eight years at sea, hinted that he was tired and might seek a long rest whenever he gets back to States.

He has been guiding military supplies to important ports for two consecutive years with only brief rest periods between trips.

Too Few Trained Seamen

He also lamented the lack of more properly trained men to enter the maritime service, emphasizing that they are missing a golden opportunity as it is essential to take advantage of expert training now offered before it is too late.

The 10,000-ton Liberty ship, rated by port experts as one of the best to dock at its present port, made the trip without untoward incident.

Charles E. Simmons, former Morehouse students of Atlanta, made his first trip serving as the Booker T.'s third radio operator.

Among other members of the crew were: Milton Carter, Leo Gordon, Charles Mapp, all of New York City; and William Jones of Philadelphia.

They Help to Raise IQ of Navy Recruits

Afro American — Baltimore, Md.
8-5-44

8-5-44

Staff of the Remedial School at Great Lakes Naval Training Station, front row: Donald Seymour, S1c, Indianapolis; David Steele, Sp(T)3c, High Point, N.C.; James S. Peters, Sp(T)2c, Monroe, La.; Ensign Nelson, James A. Boyer. Sp(T)2c, Raleigh; Wilbur A. Millard, Sp(T)3c Washington; Lawrence E. Woodson, Sp(T)3c, St. Louis; standing, Bladen O. Robinson, S1c, Manassas, Va.; Joseph E. Brinson, S2c, Thomasville, Ga; Lyman T. Johnson, S2c, Louisville, Ky.; Joseph L. Langhorne, S1c, Washington; Robert L. Edwards, S1c, Calhoun, Ala.; George P. Fennell, S1c, Goldsboro; Russell R. Lawson, S2c, Louisville; Alfonso E. Steward, Y3c, Peoria, Ill.; Leon W. Taylor, S1c, Centerville, Md.; Floyd M. Campbell, S2c, Memphis; Walter A. Browne, S1c, Philadelphia; Bruce H. Evans, Sp(T)3c, Chicago; Romeo C. Henderson, S1c, Salisbury; and C. B. Cook, Jr., Sp(T)3c, Cleveland, Ohio (Official U.S. Navy Photo)

graduate from Naval training

GREAT LAKES, Illinois--Seven Pennsylvania men were among those graduating from intensive courses of specialized training at recent service school ceremonies here at the U. S. Naval training center.

The recent graduates will take their rates on the school ship Wolverine. William [illegible], 17, 22 Broadway, Upper Darby, Pa., and Herman Asher, 22, 1511 Irvine avenue, Clairton, Pa., seaman's training; Charles L. Corbett, 25, 1941 South 15th street, Norton, Pa., training; Albert [illegible], 20, 613-6th St., aviation metalsmith training; Ernest L. Rope, [illegible] Glenwood avenue, Shore Patrol School; Ernest A. Bowyer, 18, [illegible] 15th street, Monongahela, Pa., training; Robert L. Johnson, [illegible] 151 West Diamond, Uniontown, Pa., with.

No Discrimination Aboard Navy Ship in South Pacific

AFRO-American Balt., Md.
12-23-44

By PAUL MACON, BM1/C, USNR

SOMEWHERE IN THE SOUTH PACIFIC—Here today, over 14,000 miles from America, men of diversified ratings, of various races from all parts of America and every walk of life have the very same routine, share and share alike and there is no friction.

Yes, serving here in foreign waters of vital importance are cooks, bakers, but there are also firemen, yeomen, motor machinists, electricians, carpenters, storekeepers, coxswains and boatswain's mates.

They're Not All Laborers

The popular belief that colored sailors serve in ammunition depots and shipyards only is erroneous. Overseas they are serving in the most vital areas, in enemy waters doing a job that is as important as your eating to keep alive.

Relations between crewmen and officers of the ship remind one of the vessel under Capt. Hugh Mulzac. The men are not a lot of messmen and many have served aboard the finest seagoing vessels in the navy.

With my fellow seamen, all survivors of great naval battles who have been through hell and high water together, a company of several hundred men, this thing called "segregation" is a myth. We work in perfect harmony and co-ordination.

Among these men are:

Charles E. Dimmitt, cox., Indianapolis, Ind.; Frank J. Moore, slc., Baltimore; Vernon J. Martinez, BM2c, Baltimore;

Addis M. Davis, Y3c, Chicago; Rufus Williams, EM3c, Tampa, Fla.; Granville White, GM2c, Shores, Va.; Theodore R. Richardson, GM1c, Pittsburgh, Pa.;

James E. Purnell, slc., Wilmington, Del.; James W. Little, cox., Baltimore; Edward A. Carter, slc., Philadelphia; Stanton B. Shaw, PHM3c, Washington, D.C.; William T. Johnson, SK3c, Chicago; Julius McKinley, CM3c, Indiana Harbor, Ind.; Eugene P. Thomas, slc, Chicago.

Graduates of Radioman School at Great Lakes

Afro American — Baltimore, Md. 12-2-44

12-2-44

No. 1—Left to right are Walter Lott, Chicago; Eddie James, Bronx, N.Y., and Roosevelt Smith, Edwards, Miss., three of the eleven graduated from the Radioman School at Great Lakes, Ill., and advanced from seaman second class to seaman first class during special exercises recently. No. 2—Alwan Griffith, New Bedford, Mass., who was presented a special certificate as honor man of his class with an average of 87.70 during the special exercises at Camp Robert Smalls. No. 3—Ralph Sears, Los Angeles. No. 4—Daniel Morgan, Youngstown, Ohio. No. 5—Ulysses Rodney, New Orelans. No. 6—Donald Johnson, Corapolis, Pa. Other graduates were Oliver Brown, New York City; Horace Walker, Brooklyn, N.Y.; Frank Armstrong, also of Brooklyn.

11-18-44

PETER M. DANIELS, (left) South African merchant seaman, relates his narrow escapes from a watery grave to his friend, Tom East, well known local athlete, whom he met years ago in South Africa, where East was born.

Merchant Seaman Survives Dunkirk, Torpedoing To Meet Local Family

Tribune — Philadelphia, Pa.

11-18-44

If you think that you have heard some pretty far fetched war stories, hold your hats 'cause here comes an actual one that proves—Truth is stranger than fiction.

Peter M. Daniels, 37-year old merchant seaman, was at Cherburg when the war broke out, participated in the evacuation of Dunkirk, was in the first blitz over London, and also at the fiasco of Crete.

Wait—it's not over yet, he was torpedoed in the Red Sea and adrift in a lifeboat for two weeks before landing at Port Sedan, and finaily was again torpedoed off Cape Hatteras, and adrift in the open sea for twenty-four hours.

That should be about enough, but I forgot to mention that he spent three weeks in a Turkish hospital after being wounded at Crete.

11-18-44

The world-travelled seaman is a friend of the late Rev. J. E. East, whom he had met while in South Africa, where Rev Mr. East was serving as a missionary, Daniels was plying the seven seas.

The story-book hero contacted the East family after 22 years of silence through the Foreign Mission Board in Capetown, Africa when he got here last week, he paid the Easts a visit at their West Philadelphia home.

Navy School Doing A Magnificent Job

Journal + Guide Norfolk, Va!

By FRANK E. BOLDEN
NNPA Correspondent

5-20-44

HAMPTON, Va.—We have long sought the "cup of the Holy Grail" in the Navy. A reasonable facsimile exists here at the United States Naval Training School on the campus of Hampton Institute, where democracy gives a command performance.

The training school is one of the two class "A" service schools—the other being at Great Lakes—where colored candidates with special aptitudes and skills along mechanical and technical lines are able to receive advance training in electricity, forging and welding, diesel engineering, carpentry, shipfitting, coxswain's duties, and as cooks and bakers.

Nowhere else in the Navy can colored coxswains be trained.

COMMANDER'S ATTITUDE

Under Commander E. H. Downes, USNR, from Dover, Del., who bears a striking resemblance to Thomas Mitchell and Pat O'Brien of cinematic fame, this unit of the training program of the Navy bids fair to answer many questions regarding the integration of the Negro into this branch of the service.

Here, the trainees are not considered as colored sailors, but as sailors of the United States Navy.

Said Commander Downes: "I want my men to be part of the team and not apart from it."

The motto of this naval base is: "Competency gains respect" and by this means the men in training hope to prove that they do belong.

ELIGIBLE FOR RATINGS

Graduates of the school are strikers (working towards) for ratings as petty officers, but some of them like Berkley D. Williams, MoMM 1/c (motor machinist's mate, first class) from Washington, D. C., who is skilled in both the diesel and electrical fields, and 28-year-old Joseph Gilliard, M 1/c (metalsmith) from Greenville, S. C., who started the first ceramic class at his alma mater, Hampton, and is now in charge of the model shop—where visual aid models are made for use in the courses of instruction, are rated as petty officers when they leave the school.

His products are now being used by many other naval training schools and large industrial concerns throughout the country.

5-20-44

Others, like James S. Barham, Cps (T) from Graham, N. C., and a Hampton graduate now instructing in shipfitting, received their petty officer's ratings when they volunteered for military service.

HAS TRAINED 2,500

The school was officially opened Sept. 12, 1942, with a beginning class of 128. Since that time some 2,500 have graduated and are now giving their services in our great two-ocean Navy. Attending the school at the present time are 800 trainees. As each class graduates a new one enters.

Numerous letters and verbal expressions of satisfaction by officers have been forwarded to the command here attesting to the competence of the men trained at this base. Five of the recently commissioned colored ensigns, first in the Navy, are Hampton NTS products.

When the training has been completed the men are either sent to base installations or to serve with the fleet. All, with the exception of the coxswains, will work below deck (assigned stations). The coxswains, of course, will work atop deck.

PREVIOUS PREPARATION

5-20-44

Those assigned here either possess high educational qualifications or practical experience gained in civilian life. In general they hail from sections where educational standards are relatively high. The percentage of failures averages only about four per cent out of each class.

It requires 16 weeks to complete the course. In practical work it is equivalent to that of two years in the average college.

More emphasis is placed upon practical work than upon theory. The curriculum has been boiled down to the barest essentials. Mathematics including calculus and trigonometry, has been simplified. If a trainee makes the honor roll eight out of the first 12 weeks he is granted 71 hours of liberty.

PURPOSE OF SCHOOL

The purpose of the training school is to "Teach trainees to do better those things they are likely to be required to do afterwards."

These men are fine examples of military discipline and courtesy. Cases involving rule infractions appearing before the captain's mast (court martial) are relatively few.

Civilians, white and colored, admit that the conduct of the men is exemplary. Older trainees take recruits in tow and put them "on the ball" as regards conduct.

On inspection and parade they appear sharp, smart, and excellent. They are an asset to the country and to the service to which they are attached.

5-20-44

LIKE THEIR CAPTAIN

The trainees like the "Captain," as they affectionately call their commander. Many are desirous of serving with him wherever he goes. No Navy man, as a rule, can stay on duty ashore longer than two years without putting out to sea.

Every few weeks white officers who will soon have the opportunity of commanding Negro personnel arrive at Hampton for the purpose of indoctrination so that they can learn "the proper way" and acquaint themselves with the way Negroes respond to democratic treatment—asking no more and no less than any other trainee of similar status.

The command does not tolerate those who exercise opposite ideas on the subject. Those who do not measure up to this requirement usually find assignments elsewhere.

Yes, here is one spot in the Navy where democracy is not a rumor. It is working fine . . . and below the Mason-Dixon line.

Hampton men are proud of their training and are looking forward to doing their share for victory.

Reporter Describes Exploits Of 1st Negro-Manned Warship

Amsterdam News — New York N.Y.

Tan Yanks in Navy Get Baptism of Fire In First Engagement as a Combat Unit

9-2-44

By THOMAS W. YOUNG
U. S. War Correspondent

(Published by special arrangement with the Journal and Guide. Copyright. Reproduction Forbidden.)

ABOARD THE USS MASON AT SEA—(Delayed)—Tan Yanks in Navy blue have taken their place beside Uncle Sam's fighting men of the Army Air Forces who are now battling Nazi pilots in the skies over Europe and of infantry and armored regiments of the 93rd Division, fighting Japs through the jungles of Pacific islands.

Now it can be said accurately that Negroes are fighting "on land, on sea, and in the air," in combat units of United States forces engaged in the world-wide struggle for democratic principles.

Negro bluejackets of the Navy are the latest to receive their baptism as a combat unit. The destroyer escort USS Mason, manned by a predominantly colored crew of specialists and technicians is nearing an East Coast port after successful completion of its first combat assignment.

9-2-44

With Destroyer-Escort Task Force

The Mason was part of a task force of destroyer - escorts which shepherded a convoy of merchant ships from an East Coast port last June across the German submarine hunting grounds of the Atlantic Ocean to Allied ports in Europe. Not a ship was lost. Nor did either the merchant vessels or escorting warships sustain even the slighest damage as a result of enemy action.

This odyssey was both the fulfillment of a promise and the answer to a question. Several months ago the Navy Department announced that one of its new destroyer-escorts and a patrol craft would be manned by Negro crews. In March of this year the USS Mason was commissioned at Boston, Mass., and complemented with a predominantly Negro crew. Since then practically nothing has been heard of this destroy-escort.

Goes To War—History Is Made

During the weeks and months intervening, however, its crew was being trained and conditioned, and the vessel itself subjected to a routine "shakedown" to test her fitness for combat duty.

One June 14 she left an Atlantic Coast port and took her station in a formation with other similar destroyer-escorts to guard a convoy of merchantmen loaded with vital war materials across the Atlantic. That was the fulfillment of the Navy's promise to send colored bluejackets to sea as fighting men on a fighting ship.

9-2-44

An Answer To Some Questions

And for the Negro public it helped to answer the oft-asked question, "what is becoming of all the highly trained specialists and other rated men turned out at Great Lakes and the Hampton Naval Training School?" Some of them are now on the Mason helping to rid the oceans of enemy submarines.

As these Negro bluejackets went to sea to set a new precedent and to break down an age-old policy which had restricted their service on U. S. warships to the steward's (formerly messmen's) branch, still another precedent was established when this reporter put to sea aboard the USS Mason on its maiden combat voyage as the first Negro fully accredited as a Navy war correspondent aboard a warship.

9-2-44

The full story of this historic voyage — its dangers, its exciting moments, its humor and pathos, its realism flowing from the sincere and unselfish devotion to duty by the crew and from their unrealized or frustrated ambitions — will be told in the columns of this paper during the next several weeks.

Highlights of First Voyage

With the war against the deadly submarine menace in the Atlantic swiftly coming to a close, it becomes increasingly difficult for the hunters of these underseas raiders to locate and destroy their prey. On the trip across no U-boat attacked our convoy or challenged the might of the escort warships bristling with anti-submarine weapons and armament.

After the relatively slow and sometimes tedious trip eastward, at the end of which we delivered our cargo ships without loss, most of the men were genuinely disappointed because they had not had a chance to strike a real blow at the enemy or to match their courage and skill against that of the Nazi raiders.

9-2-44

Comes A Thrilling Break

Then came one of the greatest thrills of the entire trip when we learned that our task force, consisting entirely of destroyer escorts, was to return to the United States, without a convoy, as a "killer group." This time we were to go off the defensive and take the offensive.

Dailies Omit News of Negro Gunners' Heroism as Destroyer Lansdale Sinks

The Call — Kansas City Kans.

NEW YORK. 2-19-44 Most daily newspapers and the big press associations failed to identify a Negro gun crew on the destroyer Lansdale whose sinking on April 20, was announced by the Navy Department May 10.

Among New York papers, the Daily News was the only one to mention the Negro gun crew. It used the following language: "Although the ship was torn almost in half, her gunners fought on and shot down at least two of the attackers (German planes). One gun, manned by Negro mess attendants, kept firing after the deck was awash and brought down one plane."

The United Press account, carried by the World Telegram, used the following language: "Althe ship had been torn almost in half, the Lansdale gunners fought on, downing at least two of the attacking planes. One of the planes was shot down even while the deck was awash."

The New York Times, in a special story from its Washington Bureau, used the following language: "Some of her heroic gunners, 'deaf' to the captain's orders to 'abandon ship' kept on shooting even after the deck was awash....."

The Associated Press account mentioned far down in the story the fact that colored mess attendants manned one of the guns.

Democracy in Command Performance at Hampton

Afro American — Baltimore, Md.

Commander Says "I Want My Men to Be Part of the Team (U.S. Navy) Not Apart from It"

By FRANK E. BOLDEN
NNPA Correspondent

HAMPTON, Va. —We have long sought the "cup of the Holy Grail" in the navy. A reasonable facsimile exists here at the United States Naval Training School on the campus of Hampton Institute. I saw democracy give a command performance. 5-13-44

The school is one of the two Class A service schools — the other being at Great Lakes — where colored candidates with special aptitudes and skill along mechanical and technical lines receive advanced training in electricity, forging and welding, Diesel engineering, carpentry, shipfitting, coxwain's duties and as cooks and bakers.

Nowhere else in the navy can colored coxwains be trained.

Under the command of Capt. E. H. Downes, USNR, of Dover, Del., who bears a striking resemblance to Thomas Mitchell and Pat O'Brien of cinematic fame, this unit of the training program of the navy bids fair to answer many questions regarding the integration of colored men into this branch of the service.

Not Considered "Colored"

Here, the trainees are not considered as colored sailors, but as sailors of the United States Navy. Said Commander Downes: "I want my men to be part of the team and not apart from it." The motto of this naval base is "Competency gains respect" and by this means the men in training hope to prove that they do belong.

Graduates of the school are strikers (working towards) for ratings as petty officers, but some of them hold this rating on leaving the school. 5-13-44

In this category are: Berkley D. Williams, MoMM 1/c (motor machinist's mate-first class) of Washington, D.C., who is skilled in both the Diesel and electrical fields, and 28-year-old Joseph W. Gilliard, M 1/c (metalsmith) of Greenville, S.C.

Gilliard started the first ceramic class at his alma mater, Hampton, and is now in charge of the model shop — his products now being used by many other naval training schools and large industrial concerns throughout the country — where visual aid models are made for use in the courses of instruction.

Others, like James S. Barham, Csp (T) of Graham, N.C., and a Hampton grad, now instructing in shipfitting, received their petty officer's ratings when they volunteered for military service.

School Opened in 1942

The school was officially opened September 12, 1942, with a beginning class of 128. Since that time some 2,500 have graduated and are now giving their services in our great two-ocean navy. Attending the school at the present time are 800 trainees. As each class graduates a new one enters.

Numerous letters from officers have been forwarded to the command here attesting to the competence of the men who were trained at this base. Five of the recently commissioned colored ensigns are Hampton N.T.S. products. 5-13-44

Those assigned here either possess high educational qualifications or practical experience gained in civilian life. In general, they hail from sections of the country where educational standards are relatively high. The percentage of failures averages about 4 per cent out of each class.

Sixteen weeks are required to complete the course. In practical work it is equivalent to that of two years in the average college, more emphasis being placed upon practical work than upon theory. The curricula has been boiled down to the barest essentials.

Americanizes White Men

Every few weeks, white officers soon to command colored personnel, arrive here for indoctrination, to learn "the proper way," and to acquaint themselves with the way colored men respond to democratic treatment.

The command does not tolerate those who exercise opposite ideas on the subject. Those who do not measure up to this requirement usually find assignments elsewhere. 5-13-44

Yes, here is one spot in the navy where democracy is not a rumor. It is working fine — and below the Mason-Dixon Line.

Hampton men are proud of their training and are looking forward to doing their share for victory.

Shun WAVES, Says Sailor; "We Catch Hell in Navy"

Afro American — Baltimore, Md.

9-2-44 WASHINGTON

"The Navy has been 'open' to colored men for about 2 years and 4 months, many have gone to service schools, those who did not were assigned to 'general detail' (labor) at naval stations and bases, while white men went to sea," a sailor who urged colored women to keep out of the WAVES, declared last week.

Continuing, he added:

"The attitude of Navy officials seems to be that, since the colored American beefed so much about joining the Navy, we'll let them in on our own terms and dispose of them in any way we like, treatment accorded our men in the Navy as a result causing many to become draft dodgers.

"Many men, feeling that they could be something else besides messmen," he declared, "come in with the desire to progress but found, too late, when they requested duty that seamen aboard aircraft carriers, PT boats and the like are all white."

Forced to Serve as Messmen

"The Navy needed messmen (now called steward's mates), so many men taken in the draft were sent directly into the fleet and shore stations as messmen without boot training and told they had to serve as messmen.

"I know of ten men who went to the brig because of protests against this. 9-2-44

"Others who resented such treatment were sent to boot camps earmarked for labor stations such as ammunition depots. Colored men man entirely every ammunition depot in America. Port Chicago is an example.

Men Beaten in Brig

"For laborers such as stevedores advancement is slow, discipilne strict, minor offenses being paramount to capital crimes, and Gobs have been known to suffer beatings in the brig at the hands of Marine guards in defiance of Navy Article 49, which bans fighting of men held in punishment.

"I know of a recent case of this sort and a number of my shipmates know of many others as well. Yes, the colored Navy officer is a big advancement, but still a symbol. We are proud of our officers although we are not permitted to serve under them.

"God only knows it, but we're catching hell. The public has no idea of the abuse and maltreatment we undergo, but where there's life, there's hope and with the help of our people, we'll survive because we know that our race is behind us."

Navy Swears In First Negro Lieutenant

5-17-44

Lt. Edward Swain Hope, of the Civil Engineer Corps, USNR, first Negro to hold the rank of Naval Lieutenant, is shown after he was sworn with his wife, Mrs. Marion C. Hope, and two sons, J. Linn Hope, 5, and Edward Swain Hope, Jr., 9. Formerly Superintendent of Building and Grounds at Howard University, Hope has been assigned to the U. S. Naval Construction Training Center at Davisville, R. I. Official U. S. Navy Photograph

PM-New York, N.Y.

Lieutenant Sworn Into Navy

Daily Worker- Atlanta, Ga. 5-18-44

5-18-44

Edwin Swain Hope, of Washington, D. C., son of the late President John Hope of Atlanta University, is shown being sworn in as a Navy lieutenant May 15 by Lieutenant Commander H. B. Atkinson, USNR, Executive Officer of the Office of Naval Officer Procurement of Washington. Lt. Hope is the first Negro to hold the rank of lieutenant in the Navy. (Official U. S. Navy Photo from OWI) (See story below.)

Atlantan First Negro Navy Engineer Officer

Daily World- Atlanta, Ga.

5-18-44

WASHINGTON, D. C.— (SNS) — Lieut. Edward Swain Hope, Civil Engineer Corps, USNR, was sworn into the Navy Monday, May 15, as the first Negro to hold the rank of Lieutenant in that branch of the armed forces the Navy Department announcd this week.

Lt. Comdr. H. B. Atkinson, USNR, Executive Officer, Office of Naval Officer Procurement, Washington, D. C., administerd the oath in the presence of Lieut. Hope's family, Mrs. Marion C. Hope, his wife, and his two sons, Edward Swain, Jr., 9, and J. Linn, 5. It was revealed at the time that Lieutenant Hope is under orders to Davisville, R. I., for indoctrination and assignment to duty on the state force in conection with Seabee training.

Lieut. Hope, who holds a degree of education in personnel administration from Columbia University, was the first of ten professionally qualified Negroes which the Navy Department announced recently would be commissioned as staff officers. Twelve qualified enlisted men were recently selected as line officers and elevated to the rank of Ensign at the U. S. Naval Training Station, Great Lakes, Ill. Two additional enlisted men were promoted to warrant officers at that time.

5-18-44

Negro staff officers, according to the Navy Department announcement, will include two officers each for the following Naval staff duties; Chaplain Corps, Dental Corps, Medical Corps, Civil Egineer Corps and Supply Corps.

Lieut. Hope who was serving as Superintendent of Buildings and Grounds at Howard University at the time of his enrollment, was born in Atlanta, Ga., on August 28, 1901, son of the late Dr. John Hope, president of Atlanta University. He holds degrees of A. B. in Science; B. S. and M. S. in Civil Engineering, water power; and Ed. D. in personnel administration.

5-18-44

Before coming to Howard, Lieut. Hope spent three years in Brazil as an engineer for the Brazilian Subsidiary of the Electric Bond and Share Company of New York as an engineer in a hydo-electric. And from 1927 through 1928 he was a junior engineer with the Highways Division of the New York State Department of Public Works, Albany, N. Y.

He is a member of the National Technical Association, the Ameri- Association of Engineers and the Kappa Delta Pi Fraternity of Columbia University.

Navy Physician

Daily world- Atlanta, Ga.

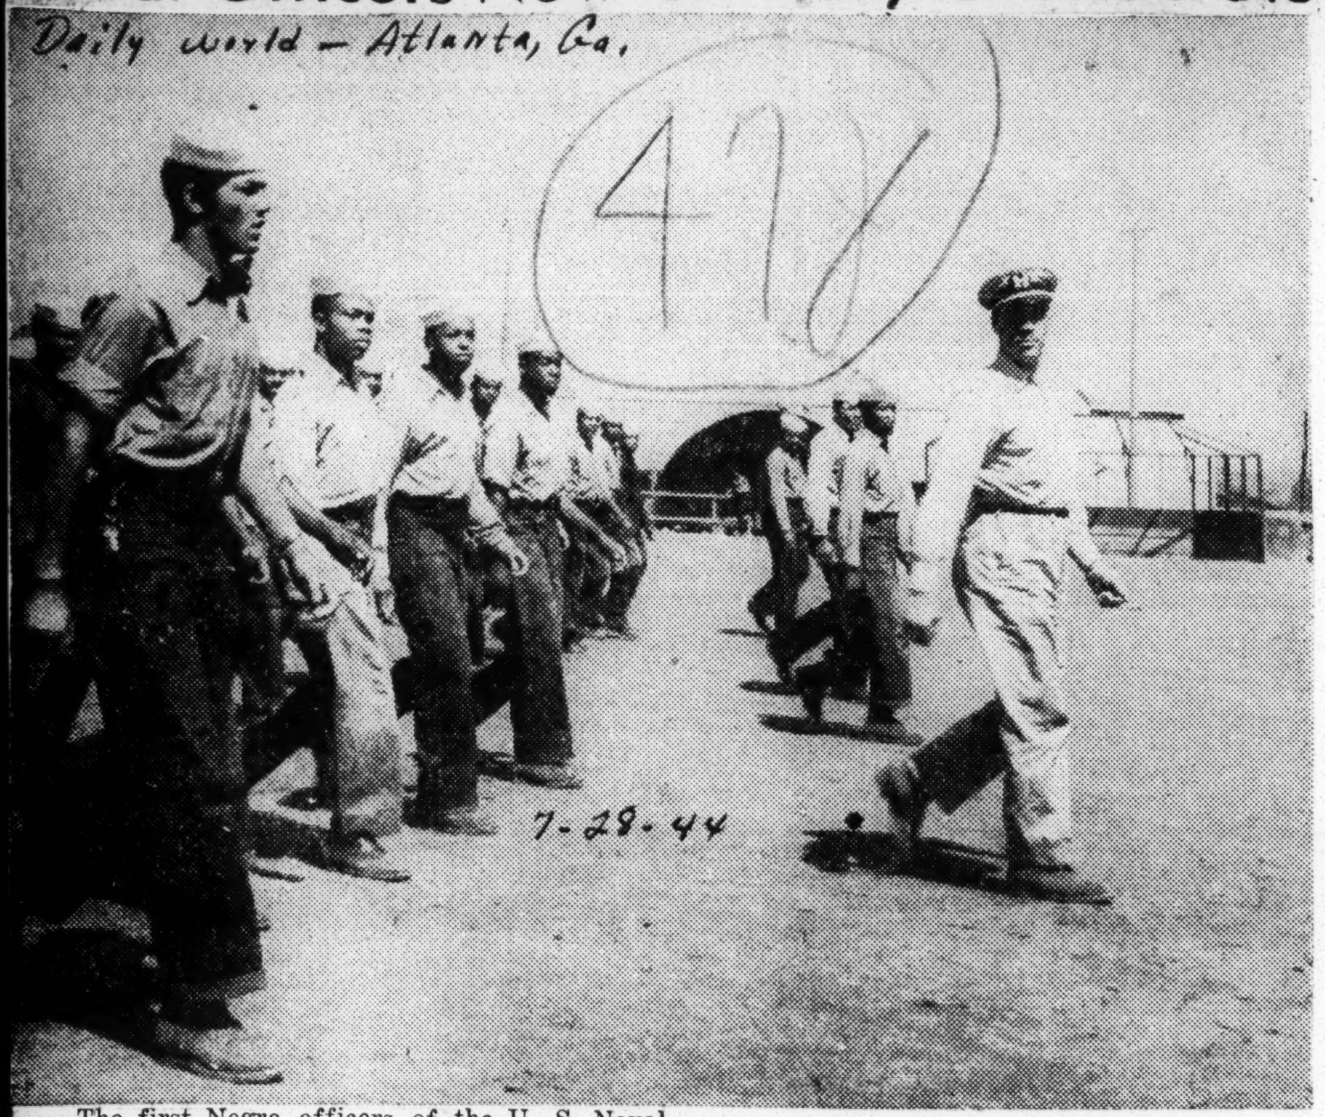
7-28-44

GREAT LAKES, Ill. — Lt. (jg) Arthur Lee Thompson, 28, of 1873 We . Grand Boulevard, Detroit, sworn in July 12, 1944 is the first Negro physician to be commssioned to tht United States Naval Reserve. He attended Fisk University and was graduated from Meharry Medical College in 1942. He served his internship at Hubbard Hospital, Nashville, Tennessee. The new officer is a member of the Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity. (OFFICIAL U. S. NAVY PHOTO).

Naval Officers Now On Duty Outside U.S

Daily World – Atlanta, Ga.

47



The first Negro officers of the U. S. Naval Reserve to serve outside continental United States have reported for duty at the Fourteenth Naval District at Pearl Harbor. Warrant Officer Charles B. Lear drills a company of sailors at Pearl Harbor. (Official U. S. Navy Photograph).

Negro Seamen Rush War Supplies

9-18-44

There are now more than 8,000 Negro merchant marine seamen serving on American ships that supply the fighting fronts, according to figures released by the War Shipping Administration, 37 Broadway, Manhattan. Included in the number of qualified seamen are three ship captains and several mates, purers and others with officers' ratings.

According to Craig S. Vincent, WSA, many ships would have had to postpone their sailings "but for the availability of competent Negroes to complete the officer roster during curcial shipping periods."

9-18-44

The ships captained by Negroes are named after famous men of their race. Capt. Hugh Mulzac of Brooklyn is master of the Booker T. Washington, a libetry ship which has made sereval Atlantic crossings.

47j-1944

Naval Dental Officer

Tribune — Philadelphia, Pa.
12-9-44

GREAT LAKES, Ill. — Lt. (Junior grade) Ivan George Hunton Fraser, of 174 Alden street, Springfield, Mass., who was sworn into the Dental Corps of the U. S. Naval Reserve, November 21, reported to Great Lakes last week for duty at the U. S. Naval Training Center.

Dr. Fraser is a graduate of Virginia Union University and Howard University Dental School. He served an internship at the Harlem Hospital, New York City. He is the son of Dr. and Mrs. O. L. K. Fraser of Springfield, Mass., and is married to the former Miss Evelyn Swann, 1001 north Fourth street, Richmond, Va.

He is shown receiving instructions from Capt. Robert R. Irons, Senior Dental Officer. —(Official U. S. Navy Photo.)

Navy Chaplain At Great Lakes

Journal + Guide
Norfolk, Va. 10-14-44

GREAT LAKES, Ill. — Headquarters of the Ninth Naval District announced this week that Lt. (jg) James Russell Brown, the Navy's first Negro chaplain had reported for duty at the U. S. Naval Training Center, Great Lakes, Ill.

Shortly after his appointment in June, Chaplain Brown was sent to the chaplain's school at William and Mary College, Williamsburg, Va., for an indoctrination course. After completing the eight-week course at William and Mary, he was sent to the Bureau of Personnel in Washington, D. C., for a short while and was subsequently attached to Naval Procurement Offices in Philadelphia, Pa., Pittsburgh, and Detroit, Mich., before reporting to Great Lakes.

Lt. Brown, one-time pastor of St. Luke's AME Church, Kansas City, Kan., and former dean of Bishop Williams School of Religion at Quindaro, Kan., has been assigned for duty as the protestant chaplain at Camp Robert Smalls, one of the two camps where Negroes are trained at this center.

Lt. Hope with Navy in Hawaii

Balt. Afro-American Md.
11-18-44

PEARL HARBOR, T.H.—Lieut. Edward S. Hope, USNR, civil engineer and former superintendent of grounds and buildings at Howard University and first colored naval lieutenant, is now on duty overseas in the Fourteenth Naval District as an engineering officer. Lieutenant Hope left Howard in May to be commissioned in the U.S. Navy. His wife and two children, Edward, Jr., 9, and James Lynn, 6, remain in Washington.

Officers

Assisted at School

After completing indoctrination school at Davisville, R.I., Lieutenant Hope was retained there to assist in the Allied Military Government training course. He reported for overseas duty in the Central Pacific area on October 20.

He is a graduate of Morehouse College, and received master's degrees in engineering and education from Massachusetts Institute of Technology and Columbia University Teachers' College, respectively.

Following this, he spent three years in Brazil as an engineer and a year he worked as an engineer for the New York State Highway Department. He is the son of the late John Hope, former Atlanta University president.

Hope Made First Naval Lieutenant

Afro American
Baltimore, Md.
8-20-44

WASHINGTON

Edward S. Hope, civil engineer and superintendent of buildings and grounds at Howard University, became the Navy's first colored lieutenant following his swearing in at the Navy Department and assignment to the Civil Engineer Corps on Monday.

Lieut. Hope was sworn in by Lieut. Com. H. B. Atkinson, USNR, executive officer of the Office of Naval Officer Procurement, at exercises attended by his wife, Mrs. Norma C. Hope, and his two sons, Edward, Jr., 9, and J. Lynn, 5.

Lieut. Hope, who holds a degree of doctor of education in personnel administration, is the first of the ten staff officers whose pending appointment was annuonced several weeks ago by the Navy Department.

Three Years in Brazil

He served for three years in Brazil as hydro-electric engineer for the Brazilian subsidiary of the Electric Bond and Share Co. of N.Y. and as junior engineer with the highways division of the New York State Department of Public Works.

He also holds degrees of A.B. from Morehouse College and B.S. and M.S. in civil engineering from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

He is a member of the American Association of Engineers, the National Technical Association, and Kappa Delta Pi of Columbia University.

To Report to R.I.

After he was sworn in, Lieut. Hope was ordered to report to Davisville, R.I., for indoctrination and assignment to duty in connection with Seabee training.

His appointment follows the commissioning at Great Lakes, Ill., of eleven ensigns from enlisted personnel. The other nine staff officers will include two each in the chaplain, dental, medical and supply corps and one more in the civil engineer corps.

Navy Commission As Lieutenant In Supply Corps To Negro Ph.D.

Age — New York
9-2-44 N.Y.

GREAT LAKES, Ill. — The Navy Department this week announced that Marron William Fort, 16 Arlington street, Newburyport, Mass., has been commissioned Lieutenant (junior grade) in the Supply Corps. He has been assigned to the Navy Supply Corps School, Graduate School of Business of Administration, Harvard University, Cambridge, Mass., for indoctrination. Before receiving his commission, the new officer was a Seaman Second Class, assigned as an instructor to the School of Military Proficiency in Camp Moffet at the Naval Training Center here.

New Lieutenant In Navy

9-2-44

Lieut (j. g.) MARRON FORT

Lt. (jg) Fort is a graduate of Massachusetts Institute of Technology where he received his B.S. and M.S. degrees in Electro-Chemical Engineering and his Doctor's degree in Physical Chemistry. Prior to his induction into the Navy, he was general manager of the A. & G. J. Caldwell Company, Inc. of Newburyport, Mass.

7-2-44

Lt. (jg) Fort is married and has one child; his wife is Alice Curtis Fort of Newburyport, Mass. He has one brother, who is in the Navy, stationed at the U. S. Naval Training Center, Great Lakes, Illinois.

First Negro Commissioned In USNR

Journal + Guide — Norfolk Va
8-5-44

GREAT LAKES, Ill. — Lt. (jg) Arthur Lee Thompson, 28, 1873 West Grand boulevard, Detroit, Mich., the first Negro to be commissioned in the Medical Corps of the United States Naval Reserve, reported to U. S. Naval Training Center here for duty July 20. He was sworn in July 12 in Detroit.

The newly commissioned officer attended Fisk University and received his medical degree from Meharry Medical College in 1942. On graduating from Meharry, Lt. (jg) Thompson received an award for the most outstanding student in surgery and was an honor graduate. He served his internship in the Hubbard Hospital, Nashville, Tenn., and specialized in pediatrics for nine months while a resident physician. 8-5-44

Lt. (jg) Thompson is married to the former Lucille Greenlea, of Rochester, N. Y. He is the son of Dr. and Mrs. W. A. Thompson of the above address in Detroit. He is a member of the Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity.

First Negro naval officer now on overseas duty

Los Angeles Sabre
12-20-44

PEARL HARBOR, T. H. — Lt. Edward S. Hope, USNR, former member of the staff of Howard University for 15 years, is now on duty overseas in the 14th Naval District as an engineering officer.

Lt. Hope left Howard University last May to become the first Negro commissioned a lieutenant in the U. S. Navy. After completing indoctrination school at Davisville, R. I., he was retained there to assist in the Allied Military Government training course. He reported for overseas duty in the central Pacific area on Oct. 20.

He graduated with an A.B. degree from Morehouse College, B.S. and M.S. in engineering degrees from Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and an D.D. from Columbia University Teachers Col-

Lieutenant In U.S. Navy

8-22-44

this week Lt. Comdr. H. B. Atkinson, USNR, Executive Officer, Office of Naval Officer Procurement, Washington, D. C., administered the oath in the ...Hope, Civil Engi... presence of Lieutenant Hope's family, was sworn into ...ily. Mrs. Marion C. Hope, his wife, ...day, May 15, as the ... and his two sons, Edward Swain, Jr., ...hold the rank of ... 9, and J. Linn, 5. It was revealed ... that branch of the ... at the time that Lieutenant Hope ... the Navy announced ... armed forces, the Na...

WASHINGTON, ... the Navy Monday, ... first Negro to hold ... Lieutenant in ...

Negro Engineer Sworn In

Age — New York

under orders to Davisville, R. I., for indoctrination and assignment to duty on the station force in connection with Seabee training.

Another First

4 1 5

Engineer Receives Naval Commission

Courier — Pittsburgh, Pa.

5-20-44

WASHINGTON—Lieut. Edward Swain Hope, civil engineer corps, USNR, was sworn into the Navy Monday morning as the first Negro to hold the rank of lieutenant in that branch of the armed forces. The oath was administered by Lieut. Commander H. B. Atkinson, executive officer, Office of Naval Procurement.

Observers at the ceremony were Lieutenant Hope's wife, Mrs. Marian C. Hope, and his two boys, Edward S., Jr., 9, and J. Linn, 5.

GETS ASSIGNMENT

Lieutenant Hope was ordered to Davisville, Rhode Island, for indoctrination and assignment to duty in connection with the Seabee training program.

5-20-44

Son of the late president of Atlanta university, Lieutenant Hope is 43 years old. He spent three years in Brazil as an engineer and was serving as superintendent of buildings and grounds, Howard university, when he received his commission in the Navy.

Naval Ensign

Journal & Guide

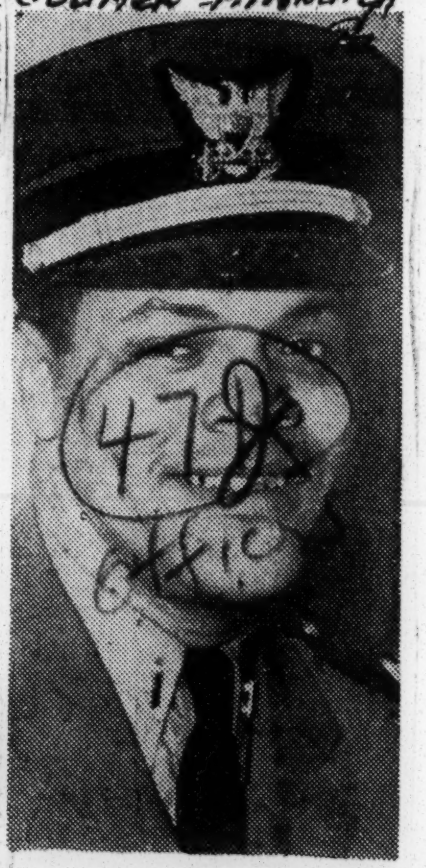
11-25-44

NAVAL ENSIGN—The assistant commissary officer in Camp Robert Smalls at the U. S. Naval Training Center, Great Lakes, Ill., is Ensign Giles Douglass Smith of 530 Hancock street, Gainesville, Texas. The new ensign, a former member of the 22nd Special Construction Battalion, was commissioned in the Supply Corps of the Naval Reserve and assigned to this Center on Nov. 3. 11-25-44

Ensign Smith wears the Asiatic-Pacific Theatre and American Theatre campaign bars for having served overseas with the Seabee Unit. He is a graduate of Prairie View State College and is married to the former Miss Rozelle Jackson. His parents are Mr. and Mrs. Rufus Smith of Gainesville, Texas. (Official U. S. Navy Photo)

HITS THE TOP

Courier Pittsburgh



Ensign Harvey C. Russell, Jr., is the first Negro of Kentucky and the third Negro in the United States to attain the rank of commissioned officer in the U.S. Coast Guard. He was the only Negro graduated from the Coast Guard academy, New London, Conn., February 23.

The son of Prof. and Mrs. H. C. Russell, Sr., Louisville, Ky., the Coast Guard ensign is a graduate of Kentucky State college. He has done graduate work at the University of Michigan.—Spain and Sydnor Photo.

47j-1944

Twelve Negro Sailors Promoted Temporary Ensigns By The Navy

Age — New York, N.Y.
3-25-44

GREAT LAKES, Ill.—A veteran mess attendant who was commended for heroic action during landing operations on the West Coast of Africa in November, 1942, was included among the 12 Negroes elevated to the temporary rank of Ensign and Warrant Officer at the U. S. Naval Training Station, Great Lakes, Ill., on March 9, 1944, the Navy Department announced this week.

The twelve Ensigns were the first Negro officers commissioned by the U.S. Navy. The heroic former mess attendant, authorized for the rank of Warrant Officer, is Willie Powell, Acting Pay Clerk, U. S. Navy.

The new Ensigns are:

Jesse Walter Arbor, 5163 South Prairie avenue, Chicago, Ill.; Phillip G. Barnes, 1244 Girard street, N.W., Washington, D. C.; Dalton L. Baugh, 458 4th street, Crossett, Ark.; Samuel E. Barnes, 636 West 9th street, Cincinnati, Ohio; George C. Cooper, 802 Vance street, Wilson, Va.; Reginald E. Goodwin, 829 Beecher street, Cincinnati, Ohio; James E. Hare, 400 North 8th street, Fort Pierce, Fla.; Graham Edward Martin, 1713 Belfontaine street, Indianapolis, Ind.; Dennis D. Nelson, 1606 Meharry boulevard, Nashville, Tenn.; John Walter Reagan, 2232 West 28th street, Los Angeles, Calif.; Frank E. Sublett, 1936 Grey avenue, Evanston, Ill.; William S. White, jr., 6342 Eberhart avenue, Chicago, Ill.

3-25-44

The new Warrant Officers are:

Willie Powell, Acting Pay Clerk, 3051 Clay avenue, San Diego, Calif., and Boatswain Charles Byrd Lear, 1010 White street, Canton, Mo.

Upon completion of their training, the officers will be assigned to duty initially either at the U.S. Naval Training School, Hampton, Va., or at the U. S. Naval Training Station, Great Lakes, Ill.

As announced on February 23, it is anticipated that staff officers for duty with the chaplain Corps, Dental, Medical, Civil Engineer Corps and Supply Corps will be commissioned from civilian life.

Two More Navy Ensigns, Warrant Officer Named

Officers

Peoples Voice - N.Y., N.Y. April 1, 1944

GREAT LAKES, Ill.—The appointment of two additional Negro line officers and a warrant officer was announced last Monday by the Navy Department.

The two men who were appointed to the temporary rank of ensign, D-V-(S) U.S. Naval reserve, to rank from Feb. 23, are Frank Ellis Sublett, 1938 Grey av, Evanston, Ill., and James Edward Hare, 13 st, Fort Pierce, Fla.

Those appointments are in addition to the nine announced March 17, and makes a total of 11 Negro line officers in the naval reserve. All have reported to the commanding officer, U. S. Naval Training station, Great Lakes, for temporary duty under instruction.

Charles Byrd Lear, 1010 White st, Canton, Mo., received a warrant officer rating with a temporary appointment as boatswain, D-V-(S). He will report for temporary duty at Great Lakes.

Gets Commission In U. S. Naval Reserve

Age — New York, N. Y.
7-29-44

GREAT LAKES, Ill.—Lt. (jg) Arthur Lee Thompson, 28, of 1873 West Grand boulevard, Detroit, Michigan, the first Negro to be commissioned in the Medical Corps of the United States Naval Reserve, reported to U. S. Naval Training Center at Great Lakes, Illinois for duty, July 20. He was sworn in July 12, in Detroit, Michigan.

The newly commissioned officer attended Fisk University and received his medical degree from Meharry Medical College in 1942. On graduating from Meharry, Lt. (jg) Thompson received an award for the most outstanding student in surgery and was an honor graduate. He served his internship in the Hubbard Hospital, Nashville, Tenn., and specialized in pediatrics for nine months while a resident physician.

7-29-44

Lt. (jg) Thompson is married to the former Loucille Greenlea, of Rochester, New York. He is the son of Dr. and Mrs. W. A. Thompson of the above address in Detroit. He is a member of the Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity.

NAVAL MEDICS COMMISSIONED

Courier — Pittsburgh, Pa.
9-30-44

CAMBRIDGE, Mass.—Two Negroes, the first medical students to receive commissions in the Navy, received their degrees and commissions Monday in graduation ceremonies at the Harvard Medical school. The two men are Cyril J. Jones, New York City, a graduate of Tufts college, and Bernard W. Robinson, Boston, Mass., a graduate of Boston college.

Capt. C. H. J. Keppler, commander of the naval training schools at Harvard, administered the oath to the Navy candidates and their commissions were presented by Rear Admiral R. H. Laning, district medical officer. Governor Saltonstall of Massachusetts and Vice Admiral Ross T. McIntire, chief of the bureau of medicine and surgery of the Navy, were the chief speakers.

Negro Ensign Now Skipper Of U.S. Navy Combat Ship

Courier — Pittsburgh, Pa.
9-16-44

By JAMES E. SMITH

NEW YORK—Breaking down the jim-crow policy which has prevailed throughout the Navy's history, two Negro lads—Ensigns James Edward Hare and John L. Reagan—two of the 13 colored men graduated as Ensigns from the Great Lakes Naval Training Station, Illinois, gained the distinction of being the first Naval officers of their race assigned to sea duty, with one—Capt. John M. Gill, USNR.

Hare—detailed as skipper of a $500,000 craft, (The Pittsburgh Courier follows the story which it initiated last spring when it revealed to its nation of readers the [illegible] of these 13 men as officers in the United States Navy, was instrumental in locating these two officers and learning their present tours of duty.)

9-16-44

Now stationed at the [illegible] States Navy Section Base at Tompkinsville, Staten Island, New York, Hare and Reagan are praised highly by the base commander, white lieutenant named Denton) tive officer aboard a patrol craft men, is quite at home, being an expert on their mode of operation, repair and maintenance. He was promoted on the spot.

Captain Gill maintains his only interest in a man is the manner in which he performs his duties and not in the texture of his skin.

"You can take Mr. Hare's case," he said. "There're damned few men, especially an Ensign, to whom I'd entrust the command of a half million dollar vessel. But if they produce, there's no telling how high they might advance regardless of their color or religion."

CAPTAIN PLAYS FAIR

The Tompkinsville base, commanded by the gruff but democratic Captain Gill, a former newspaper owner and publisher from Oswego, N. Y., is irrefutably the most efficiently and democratically administered Navy Station on the Eastern Seaboard.

9-16-44

Captain Gill, who does not want to create the impression that he is championing any man's cause, was instrumental in the appointment of one of three Negro warrant officers in the U. S. Navy, namely, Sidney M. Smith, Smith, who comes from Washington, D. C., via Richmond, Va., holds the distinction of rising to his present rank after skipping the grade of chief motor machinist, which in itself is an outstanding accomplishment and has been seldom equalled by Negroes.

With the majority of the vessels stationed at the base powered with Fairbanks-Morse engines, "Smithy," as he is called by both officers and men, is quite at home, being an

REAGAN FROM TEXAS

Ensign Reagan, a native of Texas, lived with his mother, Mrs [illegible] Willis, in Chicago, prior to his induction into the Navy early in 1942. He is a graduate of the City's Lindbloom high school, where he was a star football for three years.

Reagan was awarded an athletic scholarship to the University of Montana and was attending the school when called to the Navy.

Aside from his duties as executive officer aboard a patrol craft

47j-1944

Officers

Twelve Negro Sailors Promoted Temporary Ensigns By The Navy

Age — New York, N.Y.
3-25-44

GREAT LAKES, Ill.—A veteran mess attendant who was commended for heroic action during landing operations on the West Coast of Africa in November, 1942, was included among the 12 Negroes elevated to the temporary rank of Ensign and Warrant Officer at the U. S. Naval Training Station, Great Lakes, Ill., on March 9, 1944, the Navy Department announced this week.

The twelve Ensigns were the first Negro officers commissioned by the U.S. Navy. The heroic former mess attendant, authorized for the rank of Warrant Officer, is Willie Powell, Acting Pay Clerk, U. S. Navy.

The new Ensigns are:

Jesse Walter Arbor, 5163 South Prairie avenue, Chicago, Ill.; Phillip G. Barnes, 1244 Girard street, N.W., Washington, D. C.; Dalton L. Baugh, 438 4th street, Crossett, Ark.; Samuel E. Barnes, 636 West 9th street, Cincinnati, Ohio; George C. Cooper, 802 Vance street, Wilson, Va.; Reginald E. Goodwin, 829 Beecher street, Cincinnati, Ohio; James E. Hare, 400 North 6th street, Fort Pierce, Fla.; Graham Edward Martin, 1713 Belfontaine street, Indianapolis, Ind.; Dennis D. Nelson, 1606 Meharry boulevard, Nashville, Tenn.; John Walter Reagan, 2232 West 28th street, Los Angeles, Calif.; Frank E. Sublett, 1936 Grey avenue, Evanston, Ill.; William S. White, jr., 6342 Eberhart avenue, Chicago, Ill.
3-25-44

The new Warrant Officers are:

Willie Powell, Acting Pay Clerk, 3051 Clay avenue, San Diego, Calif., and Boatswain Charles Byrd Lear, 1010 White street, Canton, Mo.

Upon completion of their training, the officers will be assigned to duty initially either at the U.S. Naval Training School, Hampton, Va., or at the U. S. Naval Training Station, Great Lakes, Ill.

As announced on February 23, it is anticipated that staff officers for duty with the chaplain Corps, Dental, Medical, Civil Engineer Corps and Supply Corps will be commissioned from civilian life.

Two More Navy Ensigns, Warrant Officer Named

People's Voice - N.Y., N.Y. April 1, 1944

GREAT LAKES, Ill.—The appointment of two additional Negro line officers and a warrant officer was announced last Monday by the Navy Department.

The two men who were appointed to the temporary rank of ensign, D-V-(S) U.S. Naval reserve, to rank from Feb. 23, are Frank Ellis Sublett, 1938 Grey av, Evanston, Ill., and James Edward Hare, 13 st, Fort Pierce, Fla.

Those appointments are in addition to the nine announced March 17, and makes a total of 11 Negro line officers in the naval reserve. All have reported to the commanding officer, U. S. Naval Training station, Great Lakes, for temporary duty under instruction.

Charles Byrd Lear, 1010 White st, Canton, Mo., received a warrant officer rating with a temporary appointment as boatswain, D-V-(S). He will report for temporary duty at Great Lakes.

Gets Commission In U. S. Naval Reserve

Age — New York, N. Y.
7-29-44

GREAT LAKES, Ill.—Lt. (jg) Arthur Lee Thompson, 28, of 1873 West Grand boulevard, Detroit, Michigan, the first Negro to be commissioned in the Medical Corps of the United States Naval Reserve, reported to U. S. Naval Training Center at Great Lakes, Illinois for duty, July 20. He was sworn in July 12, in Detroit, Michigan.

The newly commissioned officer attended Fisk University and received his medical degree from Meharry Medical College in 1942. On graduating from Meharry, Lt. (jg) Thompson received an award for the most outstanding student in surgery and was an honor graduate He served his internship in the Hubbard Hospital, Nashville, Tenn., and specialized in pediatrics for nine months while a resident physician.
7-29-44

Lt. (jg) Thompson is married to the former Loucille Greenlea, of Rochester, New York. He is the son of Dr. and Mrs. W. A. Thompson of the above address in Detroit. He is a member of the Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity.

NAVAL MEDICS COMMISSIONED

Courier — Pittsburgh, Pa.
9-30-44

CAMBRIDGE, Mass.—Two Negroes, the first medical students to receive commissions in the Navy, received their degrees and commissions Monday in graduation ceremonies at the Harvard Medical school. The two men are Cyril J. Jones, New York City, a graduate of Tufts college, and Bernard W. Robinson, Boston, Mass., a graduate of Boston college.

Capt. C. H. J. Keppler, commander of the naval training schools at Harvard, administered the oath to the Navy candidates and their commissions were presented by Rear Admiral R. H. Laning, district medical officer. Governor Saltonstall of Massachusetts and Vice Admiral Ross T. McIntire, chief of the bureau of medicine and surgery of the Navy, were the chief speakers.

Negro Ensign Now Skipper Of U.S. Navy Combat Ship

Courier — Pittsburgh, Pa.
9-16-44

By JAMES E. SMITH

NEW YORK—Breaking down the jim-crow policy which has prevailed throughout the Navy's history, two Negro lads—Ensigns James Edward Hare and John L. Reagan—two of the 13 colored men graduated as Ensigns from the Great Lakes Naval Training Station, Illinois, gained the distinction of being the first Naval officers of their race assigned to sea duty, with one— Capt. John M. Gill, USNR. going over navigation charts.

Hare—detailed as skipper of a Ensign Hare, a graduate of Xa- REAGAN FROM TEXAS
$500,000 craft. vier University's school of sociolo- Ensign Reagan, a native of Tex-

(The Pittsburgh Courier, following the story which it initiated last spring when it revealed to its nation of readers the [illegible] of these 13 men as officers in the United States Navy, was instrumental in locating these two officers and learning their present tours of duty.)
9-16-44

Said Captain Gill of Hare: as, lived with his mother, Mrs
"He is the type of man who Bernice Willis, in Chicago, prior to would succeed whether he was his induction into the Navy early black and white. He seems to have in 1942. He is a graduate of the that little extra something that school, where he was a star full-makes him click in whatever he back in football for three years.
does." 9-16-44

When contacted at the Base, Ensign Reagan was awarded an athletic signs Hare and Reagan, although scholarship to the University of the United States Navy Section Base at Montana and was attending the on leave, were taking a bus-man's holiday. They were found on the School when called to the Navy.
Tompkinsville, Staten Island, New York, Hare and Reagan are praising bridge of a fellow officer's ship (a Aside from his duties as executive officer aboard a patrol craft named Denton) which is quite at home, being an ed highly by the base commander, white lieutenant named

PRAISES OIL EXPERT

He made mention of an enlisted man, Henry A. Martin, Jr., specialist oil, second class. 9-16-44

"There's a man considered the foremost oil expert in the Third Naval District and there are few men who surpass him in his field," the captain declared.

Martin, 36 years old, is a native of Dubuque, Iowa, and a graduate of the School of Engineering at the University of Michigan. Before entering the Navy he had his own refrigeration company and worked for the Commonwealth Edison company in Chicago. He is momentarily awaiting a commission as Ensign.

The commander of the section base explained the slowness of promotions among the colored personnel in the Navy. It is due, he said, to the lack of basic fundamental training in particular fields and the fact that they have neglected or have not had the opportunity to acquire as much education as they need.

In a blunt and frank manner, Captain Gill explained that a colored man, to attract the attention of his superior officers, must be more than good. "He must excel his white counterpart in every way. Just doing enough will get him nowhere fast," he said.

Ensign Reagan is almost assured of a position of command of his own. 9-16-44

AWAITS APPOINTMENT

At the termination of the interview, we boarded a patrol craft. In a previously unplanned interview with a white lieutenant assigned aboard this vessel as the engineer officer, he pointed out Charles S. Harvey, Motor Machinist Mate 1/c, who is now awaiting appointment as chief petty officer, which will become effective, as the lieutenant explained, as soon as the white CPO, now aboard in the capacity of chief motor machinist mate, is transferred to another ship.

Harvey, a native of Trenton, N. J., is a graduate of the Motor Machinist school operated by the Navy at Hampton institute.

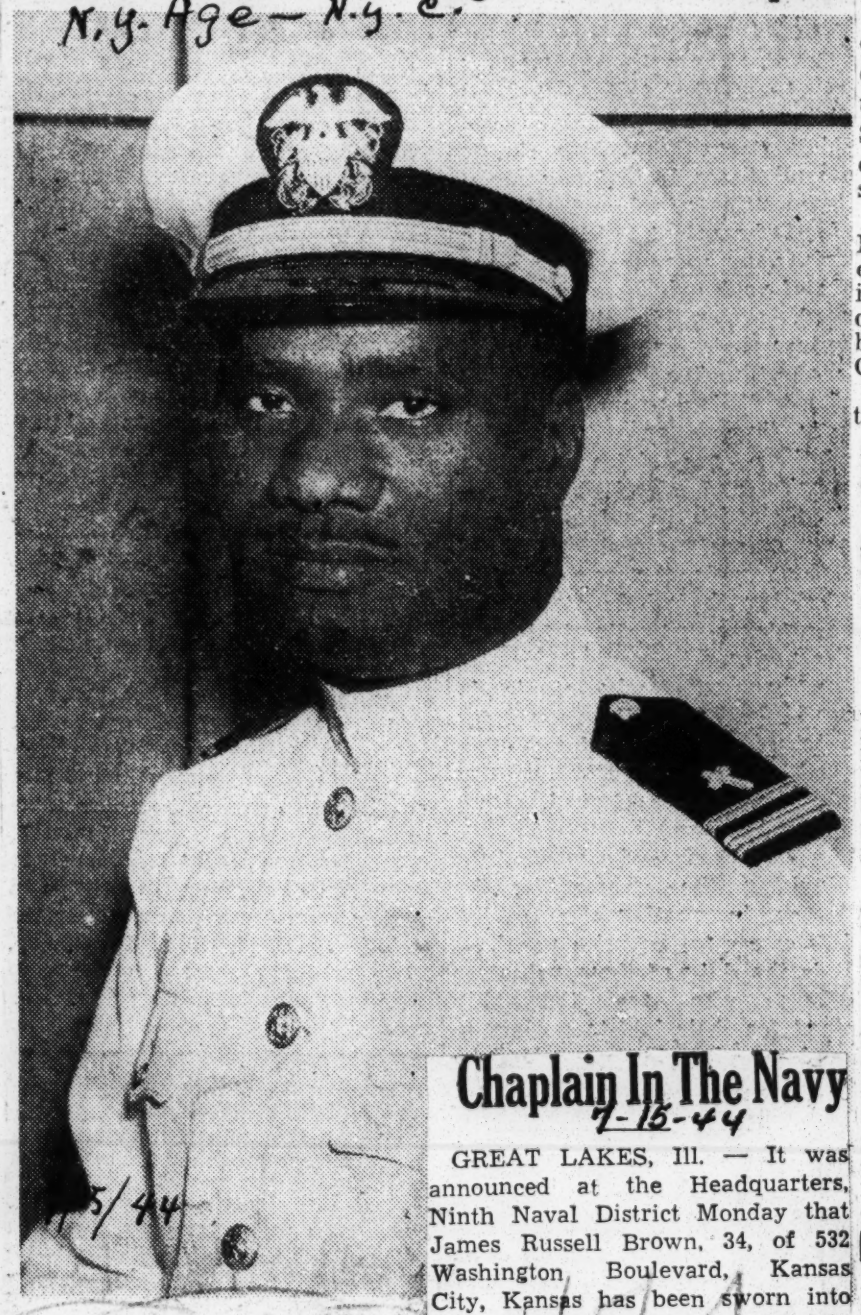
First Navy Chaplain

Afro American 9-16-44

LT. (j.g.) JAMES R. BROWN, AME pastor of Kansas City, Kans., who recently was sworn into the Naval Reserve as chaplain. He is the Navy's first colored chaplain, and has been ordered to report to the chaplain's school at William and Mary College, Williamsburg, Va., for indoctrination.

Commissioned First Negro Naval Chaplain

N.Y. Age — N.Y.C. 9-16-44



Lt. (jg) James Russell Brown, ChC, USNR, of 532 Washington Boulevard, Kansas City, Kansas recently was sworn into the Naval Reserve as Chaplain. He is the first Negro to hold that position. He formerly was Dean of Bishop Williams School of Religion at Quindaro, Kansas, and pastor at St. Luke's African Methodist Episcopal Church, Kansas City, Kansas.

:o:

Lt. James R. Brown Becomes First Negro

Age — New York, N.Y.

Chaplain In The Navy

7-15-44

GREAT LAKES, Ill. — It was announced at the Headquarters, Ninth Naval District Monday that James Russell Brown, 34, of 532 Washington Boulevard, Kansas City, Kansas has been sworn into the Naval Reserve as Chaplain with the rank of Lieutenant, junior grade. Lt. (jg) Brown is the first Negro to hold that position. He has been ordered to report to the Chaplain's school at William and Mary College, Williamsburg, Virginia for indoctrination.

The new Chapain was Dean of Bishop Williams School of Religion at Quindaro, Kansas, and was pastor of St. Luke's African Methodist Episcopal Church in Kansas City, Kansas. He holds an A.B. degree from Friends University; a B.D. degree from Howard University, and he has done further graduate study at Chicago Theological Seminary.

2 Harvard Graduates Made Medical Officers in Navy

Afro American — Baltimore, Md. 9-30-44

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. — Two colored men were among the thirty-eight Navy medical students graduating from Harvard Medical School who were awarded Navy commissions in ceremonies in the school quadrangle, September 25.

They were Cyril J. Jones of New York, who received his bachelor of science degree from Tufts in 1941 and Bernard W. Robinson of Boston, who was awarded the bachelor of arts degree by Boston College in 1941.

Commissions were presented to the Navy graduates and to eighty-seven Army medical students by Rear Admiral R. H. Laning, district medical officer. The main address was given by Vice-Admiral Ross T. McIntire, chief of the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery of the Navy. 9-30-44

Jones Marries After Exercises

Immediately after the exercises, Lieutenant (j.g.) Jones was married to Miss Rose V. Randolph of Dorchester, Mass., who has received both the bachelor of science and master of arts degrees from Simmons College.

Both of the officers, like 96 per cent of the graduating class, were placed on inactive duty so that they can complete nine-month interneships in civilian hospitals.

Jones will report to Goldwater Memorial Hospital in New York City, while Robinson will go to Freedmen's Hospital in Washington. On July 1, 1945, they will be called back to active duty and assigned probably to duty at sea.

A PARTIAL VICTORY

Age — New York, N.Y.

COMMISSIONING of 12 Negroes as Ensigns and 2 as Warrant Officers in the United States Naval Reserve last week, with announcement that Negro dentists, doctors and other technicians will be commissioned in the future, represent a partial victory and one that comes to hearten those who have been fighting for lo these many years to break down the barriers that have been erected against Negroes in the Navy rising beyond the status of mess attendants. 4-1-44

For any Negro, leader or otherwise, to say at this point that the victory is won is to admit that we are easily satisfied, because 14 Negro officers are but a drop in the bucket when compared to the total number of Negroes serving today in the U. S. Navy.

The very fact that 14 Negro officers have been commissioned, however, does represent the first step in the realization of the Negro's dream of being utilized by his country, according to his talent and ability.

There are some who are so naive as to suggest that the commissioning comes only because this year an important Presidential election is to be held, and they point to the fact that four years ago Negroes were given a sop with elevation of the then Colonel Benjamin O. Davis to the rank of Brigadier-General.

Whether political considerations entered

Navy is important. If it ry fact that 14 Negroes are re, let Negroes make the not a political gesture, then ake the most of it. The that the barriers are being tent. Let's continue the riers are let down all the hearties congratulations . We are proud of them, they will carry high the

4-1-44

Edward S. Hope Assigned To Overseas Duty At Pearl Harbor

New York Age 11-25-44

PEARL HARBOR, T. H. — Lt. Edward S. Hope, USNR, former member of the staff of Howard University, Washington, D. C., for fifteen years, is now on duty overseas in the Fourteenth Naval District as an engineering officer.

Lieutenant Hope left Howard University in May, 1944, to become the first Negro commissioned lieutenant in the U. S. Navy.

After completing indoctrination school at Dartsville, R. I., Lieutenant Hope was retained there to assist in the Allied Military Government training course. He reported for overseas duty in the central Pacific area on October 20, 1944.

In Hawaii, Lieutenant Hope is serving with two of the first thirteen Negroes commissioned by the U. S. Navy, Boatswain Charles B. Anderson, USNR, and Ensign Jesse W. Arbor, USNR.

47j-1944

Garrett Hill Sailor Describes Horrors Of Landing Operations

Tribune—Philadelphia, Pa.
11-18-44

Have you ever wondered about the thoughts that run through a man's mind as he faces the bullets of the enemy? What sensations he experiences and his reactions to seeing his buddies dropping all around him, wondering every moment if he is going to be next?

C. B. Twisdale, a coxswain in the Seabees attached to the 17th Spec. NCB Co., D-5, whose home is in Garrett Hill, wrote the following letter describing his baptism of fire on Peleliu, an island in the Palau group.

I received my baptism of fire here on the Island of Peleliu, I have heard and read a lot about hell on earth, but this was it personified. We landed on the beach about 10:30 a. m. and the Japs really gave us a warm reception, with snipers, machine gun and mortar fire. Our boys were dropping all around me. We were told to dig in and would call us when we needed. You should have seen me dig. I made a foxhole in record time, with my bare hands too. I made the sand fairly fly and after I had finished we were told to move farther inland as the Jap mortar shells were bursting too close for comfort. So we got up and ran in a low crouch for about fifty yards and jumped into any fox hole we found. I happened to jump in with a marine from Ohio, but not for long because we were called to carry ammunition to the front, which at that time was about seventy-five yards inland, so we jumped out of the fox holes again and ran to the beach to get the ammunition, as it was unloaded from our tanks, and carried it to the front. This was no picnic as we had to put our rifles down to carry it, and the Nips kept bullets singing around us like a swarm of bees. We did a good job of it though, and only a few of our boys were hit.

11-18-44

I wondered at the time how the Nips managed to live through the pounding the Navy gave them from the Sea and Air. We stood aboard ship and watched from the crack of dawn. It looked as though it would be easy to take, as the whole Island was full of flame and black smoke. But, we found out later why they were able to take it. They had a regular fort here, pill boxes of coral rock re-enforced with concrete and steel from two and a half to three feet thick and their caves were the same, and I believe the whole Island is tunneled, because the Japs would run in one hole and come out another. That is why we lost so many men, as the boys had to go in after them. Our flame throwers did a wonderful job of bringing them out and there were quite a few of them roasted in the caves and the pill boxes. We lost quite a few of the boys trying to land. Some of them never reached the beach, and others just did get there, only to die or get wounded.

11-18-44

After we had rested a few minutes from carrying the ammunition, there was a call put in for voluntary stretcher bearers, so I took the job and once again, we had to leave our rifles behind, and go up to the front lines and carry the wounded back to the beach were they could be treated before being sent back to the ship. It was a tough assignment and the Nips made it even tougher, because they kept firing at us. But if you could have seen the way our boys were taking it, you wouldn't blame me for taking the job. I helped carry guys with their legs, arms, feet and part of their faces blown or shot away and others with their guts blown or shot out. And with all of that, they would lay on the stretchers and kid with their buddies and us. Several times they told me to leave them and try to save the boys and myself. But I told them like hell I would, I told them when I left, I was taking them with me.

11-18-44

That was when the Japs would turn their machine guns on us, and we would have to put the stretcher down and hit the deck, until it cooled off a bit. Then I would give a signal and we would jump to our feet, crouch low and run like hell until another one made it too hot to go on, and we would keep this up until we reached the beach. Some of our boys got wounded and a few corpsmen were killed. I stayed at the front for the first three days and three nights, and how I managed to keep going without sleep is beyond me. I didn't even eat the first day, but I thank God we had water which we brought in from the ships.

Seabees

I expected to feel the burn of hot steel going through my body at any minute, and prayed that if it did come, I would be able to take it without a whimper, but I guess Jesus had His arms around me, and I came out of it with only a few scratches and a few minor burns from their mortar fire. The only thing I didn't like was, I couldn't leave and go after some of the Japs who were doing all the shooting at us. Anyway I thank God I was spared.

So, on the morning of the fourth day, a messenger came to the front and told me to get the boys and join my company which I did. They told me they thought I was missing an started to call me charmed life Twisdale. Maybe my luck is good, but I'm not taking any chances on that charmed life part of it.

11-18-44

Later we were assigned to various dumps, to put them in order, and even then the Japs kept dropping their mortar shells in our midst. The boys killed four Japs in one pill box right in our camp soon after I got back from the front and a little later, a mortar shell bursted and killed five and wounded about forty. But, we have them well back in the hills in their cave now and I hope they get them all before long. We were sent out to locate dead Japs one day and we found plenty of them. We could smell them long before we got to them, and even now I imagine I smell them. I'm glad I only had that detail one day. I'll be a happy boy when this war is over and I believe everyone over here wille be. Do you realize I have been away from civilization almost a year, in fact it will be a year the sixteenth of December.

Were On Heels Of Leathernecks On Peleliu Isle

Daily World—Atlanta, Ga.

Commendation Is Given Heroic Navy Builders

12-7-44

WASHINGTON— (ANP)— Revealing that Negro Seabees went in two hours after H-hour in the landing and occupation of Peleliu island in the Palaus, accompanying the first marine division, the navy department last week announced that the outfit had received a "Well Done" and a letter of commendation from Maj. Gen. William H. Rupertus, U. S. M. C. commanding officer of the division during the assault.

They were the members of the 17 special U. S. naval construction battalion who helped relieve a shortage of ammunition on the first lines during the night of D-day, and actually participated in the fighting when the marines ran shorthanded in one sector.

12-7-44

The letter, addressed to Lt. Comdr. Moses E. Berry, U. S. N. R., of Gulfport, Miss. Officer in charge o. the battalion, follows:

"On the even of departure from this area ,I wish to inform you of the excellent manner in which every member of your command performed the various duties during the landing and occupation of Peleliu. The unloading was accomplished by the untiring efforts of the shore party in which members of your command played a vital part. The cooperation and complete understanding exhibited throughout the assault phase by your command was no small factor in the success of this operation You deserve a well done in every respect."

12-7-44

Maj. Don. Rupertus at present a commandant, Marine Corps school, Quantico Va.

Our Seabees Hit Peleliu Beach Hour After Marines

BY SMITH H. McCLAINE, JR.

PELELIU--Palau Islands--The Seabees played an important part in the invasion of this island September 15, moving in behind the Marines only an hour after they had hit the beach.

This was the first time for our unit to and so close behind assault troops or to face enemy fire which was very heavy. The outfit is 80 per cent colored and 20 per cent white.

Our duties were to unload supplies and ammunition, and many of us were up at the front lines carrying ammunition to the first line of defense and returning with stretcher cases.

This kept up all the first day and night until we were ordered to secure about 2 p.m. for our own safety.

The men worked hard and willingly forgetting their own personal safety and received praise from the highest ranking officers down to the buck privates for their untiring efforts to help keep what gainsaid another had been made.

Many individuals and encounters with the Japs, and our boys from the Quaker City played no little part. Things are fairly quiet on Peleliu now and many improvements have been made. Our unit, first known for its ste skill and speed, now has ther laurel, that of fide- 11-4-44

Many individuals and hair-raising afro-American--Baltimore, Md.

47j-1944

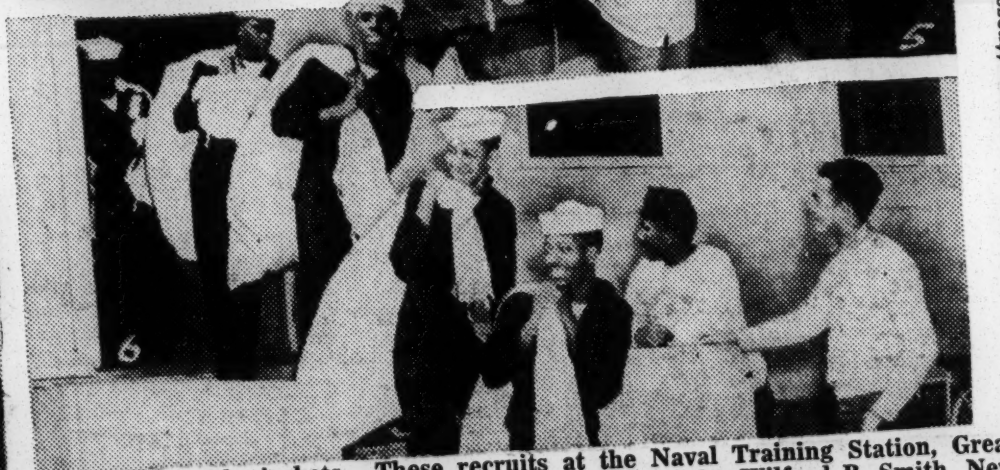
Seabees

Route by Which Civilian Becomes a Bluejacket

Afro American
Baltimore, Md.

Afro American

12-9-44



No. 1—These pictures show the procedures which convert civilians to Bluejackets. These recruits at the Naval Training Station, Great Lakes, Ill., fill out original data sheets, which will follow them through their Navy careers. They are, left to right, Wilfred B. Smith, New York City; Clifford C. Conklin, West Milford, N.J.; Tamins A. Henderson, Los Angeles; and John E. Gibson, 1501 Presstman Street, Baltimore, Maryland.

12-9-44

No. 2—Lined up for their physical examinations are, left to right, Kenneth Woody, 928 Forty-eighth Street, Northeast, Washington; Rufus Collins, Chicago; James Kennedy, Buffalo, N.Y.; and Norman Burns, Chicago.

No. 3—The recruits are being issued gear in the receiving unit, which last year gave out $40,000,000 worth of clothing.

No. 4—There are one hundred odd different sizes of shoes available, and trained chiropodists see that each recruit's shoes fit. Roy King, AS, Berre, Ky., and Calvin James, A.S., Jersey City, N.J., are trying on their first pair of Navy shoes.

No. 5—For size and fit, the recruits try on one of each of the various pieces of clothing issued. After getting their clothes, they are given a lecture on how the uniform should be worn and on the laws and regulations affecting the uniform.

No. 6—Outfitted in their first Navy clothing, with mattress covers full of other clothing over their shoulders, are seen, emerging from the receiving unit, left to right, Ernest Bassette, Chicago; Mark H. Goodwin, Akron, Ohio; and James R. Washington, New York City. The two "old salts" looking on are Willie Seward, S1/c, Norfolk, Va., and Olaf Spence, S1/c, Dayton, Ohio. Shown at morning quarters where they will be inspected for cleanliness and military bearing are, left to right, Edward Walker, AS, Boston; Clarence Neely, AS, Long Branch, N.J.; and Curtis Sullivan, AS, Chicago.

No. 7—Having passed the doctors and received their clothing, these apprentice seamen enter training.

Atlanta Daily World

Atlanta Seabees Cited For Roles In Major Amphibious Operations

Give Conviction To Motto 'Can Do' And High Valor

12-31-44

WASHINGTON-(SNS)- More than 12,300 Negroes joined with the Navy Seabees in celebration of the first battalion of Negro Seabees to go overseas ,the 34th Construction Battalion, returned home after 20 months of jungle fighting. They brought with them a unit commendation from Captain Mark L. Halsey, Jr., commander of the Naval Base at Guadalcanal, for the splendid record they made.

There have been several other citations for Negro Seabee units, the most recent came from Major Gen. William H. Rupertus, former commanding general of the 1st Marine Division, who commended the 17th Special U. S. Naval Construction Battalion with a "well done" letter for their working during the landing and occupation of Peleliu Island, and for helping relieve a shortage of ammunition in the first lines during the night of D-Day.

23, '44. The Seabees have participated in every major amphibious invasion launched by our forces in both hemispheres, and have grown from an original force of 3,300 men to one of more than 234,000 ,the Navy Department announced this week.

The Seabees have a record of having licked the toughest military construction job in history— Only recently the first battalion of Negro Seabees to go overseas ,the 34th Construction Battalion, returned home after 20 months of jungle fighting. They brought with them a unit commendation from Captain Mark L. Halsey, Jr., commander of the Naval Base at Guadalcanal, for the splendid record they made.

12-31-44

RNTT RETURNS HOME

There have been several other citations for Negro Seabee units, the most recent came from Major Gen. William H. Rupertus, former commanding general of the 1st Marine Division, who commended the 17th Special U. S. Naval Construction Battalion with a "well done" letter for their working during the landing and occupation of Peleliu Island, and for helping relieve a shortage of ammunition in the first lines during the night of D-Day.

ATLANTANS CITED

In a detailed description of this action, Sgt. Harold E. Foreman, a Marine Corps combat correspondent, told of the part played by two members of the Seventeenth Special Naval Construction Battalion in keeping the famed 1st Marine Division supplied with ammunition, food, water and other supplies. The two men cited in his story were Coxswain Walter Jones and Fireman 1st Class Andrew G. Toles, both of Atlanta, Georgia. Supplies were taken from transports, transferred to LCT's and then to amtracks that brought the supplies across the coral reefs to the beaches. Coxswain Jones was in charge of 15 men, and Fireman Toles led a similar squad in the face of the enemy fire. Casualties among Seabees during the first 3 days of fighting on Peleliu were estimated at approximately 20 killed and 20 wounded. 12-31-44

Under the direction of the Bureau of Yards and Docks, more than three-fourths (75.2%) of the Seabees are now overseas demonstrating that American workingmen, drawn from sixty different trades, are able to substitute guns for tools and put up a first class fight.

It was from bases they the Seabees and their Civil Engineer Corps officers helped to build that much of the strength was concentrated for the blow at the Philippines. Combat supplies were issued from Seabee-build warehouse; naval craft were fueled from Seabee-contsructed fuel dumps, and aircraft flew from Seabee-built airfields to guard the preparations. From these forward bases, the invasion machine was sent into action in the peak of fighting trim. Most of the Seabees had to stay behind, but they made good use of their time-as witnessed by the fact that the airfields in the Marianas are now adequate to send giant B-29's and their deadly loads winging over the Japanese homeland.

HELP BUILD ROADS 12-31-44

Earlier in the year, the Seabees helped build the road to the islands that launched the Philippine attack. They had come "up the slot" from Guadalcanal building as fast as the combat forces could fight a space clear for them to start construction. In March, they rebuilt the Jap airfield at Los Negroes, which walled up the Japs in the Solomons. At the same time, the Japs made their last desperate effort to drive our forces off Bougainville. Whether they could succeed depended largely on whether they could knock out the airfields the Seabees had built. Mortar shells and bombs poured down on the fields for nearly two weeks, but as fast as they fell the Seabees repaired the damage. At no time were the fields out of operation for more than 30 minutes, and not once were flights interrupted.

Meanwhile, far to the north, other Seabee battalions were building another invasion road through the Marshalls. 12-31-44 They brought ammunition to the marines, brought in supplies over the beaches, and restored the Japs' wrecked airfields in time for land-based air cover to protect the new advances. Warehouses, docks, fuel storage facilities and all other requisites of a naval base were erected by the American workmen in Navy blue. While supplies continued to flow in over the beaches of Normandy, other Seabees helped to bring the ports of Cherbourg and LeHavre back into operation. They were among the men whom General Eisenhower praised as the unsung heroes of the supply battle of Europe. 12-31-44

OTHER UNSUNG HEROES

The Seabees boast other unsung supply heroes in the approximately 35,5000 men assigned to Naval Construction Battalions (Special), who have been trained in the loading and unloading of ships. Organized to meet a critical needs for stevedore at ports in the combat zones, the "Specials" with primitive docking facilities have set records for cargo handling under fire that compare favorably with the best performances at major ports in the U. S.

In addition, Seabees have been given special training and organized into detachments, devoted to automotive repair, the handling of spare parts, fog generation, pontoon assembly and the building of petroleum facilities.

With these units supplementing the work of the regular battalions, the Seabees of the Navy have given conviction to their motto of "Can Do." As they commence their 4th year, they have the invaluable advantages accruing from hard experience and from their new but proud tradition for getting things done.

Salute to the 34th Construction Battalion

N.Y. Amsterdam News

We salute the 34th Construction Battalion (Seabees) veterans of 20 months of jungle warfare in the South Pacific, the first battalion of Negro Seabees to go overseas, and which has now returned to this country. These boys have a unit citation for many superb feats of construction carried out against great odds, and its casualties of five men killed in action, and 35 wounded, adds to the roll of Negro heroes in the war. 12-2-44 N.Y., N.Y.

Indoctrinated at Camp Allen in Virginia, the 34th Seabees left the United States, Jan. 7, 1943, and arrived at Noumea, New Calodonia, 19 days later from where they launched their spectacular campaign record that includes the Halavo Seaplane Base at Halavo, in the Florida Islands; the construction of fuel and gas storage facilities on Guadalcanal; the fighter strip north of Renard Sound on Banika Island; and the building of the 6,000 foot bomber strip and a 4,500 foot fighter strip on the Russel Islands in time for the New Georgia campaign of our fighting forces in the South Pacific.

These Seabees finished their assigned tasks on time and at Russels, the detachment was subjected to constant enemy bombing by the Japanese until the completion of the New Georgia campaign in July. It was here that the five casualties of three killed and two injured with minor burns in the operation of the fighter strip, were caused during crash of a Navy plane. 12-2-44

Little has been said about the enlisted Negro personnel of the Seabees and we think it high time that they be given just consideration. The Navy Department recently announced that, as of Oct. 1, 1944, there were 12,337 Negro enlisted men in the Seabees, of whom 10,351 were assigned to special battalions. These men put in an 8 to 10 hour day for seven days a week for the first year and for the last five months, the hours were reduced to eight per day and a six and a half day week. Capt. Mark L. Halsay, Jr., USN., Commander of the great U. S. Naval Base at Guadalcanal, we think, summed up very well the important role these men played in the South Pacific, when he sent them the following unit commendation:

"On the occasion of the completion of your work in this area, covering a perlod of 20 months, I wish to take this opportunity to congratulate you and the officers and enlisted men of your command for the splendid record which you have made and the outstanding reputation which your Battalion enjoys. During this period your battalion has accomplished many outstanding feats of construction, too many to mention in detail, which will stand as a monument to your ability and efficiency for many years after the U. S. forces leave this area. Many of these construction jobs were completed under great difficulties, including bombing attacks by the enemy, in which five of your men were killed, and about 35 wounded. In spite of these difficulties and dangers, and the impracticability of giving your men rehabilitation leave, your Battalion continued to work at top efficiency until the day it was ordered to clear. The best wishes of this command for future success and continued usefulness to the Naval Service go with you and the personnel of your Battalion. 12-2-44

The 34th Seabees are on a 30 day furlough before reassignment to duty. And it is significant to remember that the Negro is daily proving his right to full citizenship in this nation of his birth for which he fights and works so hard. In every phase of our war effort the Negro can be found doing his part and more. The reward in the postwar period must be made as real and concrete as the record of the 34th Construction Battalion, and of our boys on land, on the water and in the air.

Seabees Commended For Peleliu Service

Atlanta (3) Ga

Daily World

WASHINGTON — (SNS) — The Seventeenth Special U. S. Naval Construction Battalion, a Negro unit of Seabees, has received a "Well Done!" and a Letter of Commendation from Major General William H. Rupertus, U. S. Marine Corps, commanding Officer of the First Marine Division during the landing on the occupation of Peleliu Island in the Palaus, for helping relieve a shortage of ammunition on the first lines during the night of D-

Officer in Charge of the Battalion, follows:

"On the eve of departure from this area, I wish to inform you of the excellent manner in which every member of your command performed the various duties during the landing and occupation of Peleliu. The unloading was accomplished by the untiring efforts of the shore party in which members of your command played a vital part. The cooperation and understanding throughout the assault phase by your command was no small factor in the success of this operation. You deserve a 'Well Done' in every respect."

Miss.,

Battalion, follows:

"On the eve of departure from this area, I wish to inform you of the excellent manner in which every member of your command performed the various duties during the landing and occupation of Peleliu. The unloading was accomplished by the untiring efforts of the shore party in which members of your command played a vital part. The cooperation and understanding throughout the assault phase by your command was no small factor in the success of this operation. You deserve a 'Well Done' in every respect."

Major General Rupertus at present is Commandant, Marine Corps School, Quantice, Va.

The activity report of the battalion showed that the first section of the 17th Special Battalion landed with the First Marine Division on Peleliu at H-hours plus 2 on D-Day. They were part of the shore party, but while engaged primarily in that duty, on the first night responded to a call for volunteers when a shortage of ammunition was reported in the forward lines.

Practically the entire 17th carried ammunition to the front and brought wounded back. The Seabee report said, took part in the fighting on one of the fronts where Marines became shorthanded in that sector. Part of the 37mm. guns and did what ever else was needed.

47j-1944

Naval Board Hears 19 Dismissed Seabees Defend Their Records

Journal & Guide — Norfolk, Va
12-30-44

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Dismissed from the Navy for reasons that are still beclouded and handed "undesirable" discharges, which are but slightly less odious than dishonorable discharges, 19 Seabees have defended their records before a five-man Navy Board of Dismissals and Discharges at hearings held in Temporary Navy Building No. 2.

Appearing before the board for the seamen, who are petitioning for honorable discharges, was Arthur Garfield Hayes, counsel for the Civil Liberties Union. They were dismissed for alleged "unfitness" and "ineptitude" after eleven of them had been summoned to an "off the record" meeting in their commanding officer's quarters in Trinidad.

12-30-44

"YELLOW" DISCHARGES

The "yellow" discharges they hold may seriously handicap them in civil life. With these they are barred from civil service employment and many other jobs.

One of the men, Issac G. McNatt, 27, fears that his discharge might interfere with his acceptance by the New York Bar Association, and another petitioner is concerned about his medical degree.

STATE GRIEVANCES

In the office of Commander James Cantey Jr., where they had been requested to meet, the Seabees, it is charged, were told to state their grievances. They, without rancor, referred to the general delay in the promotion of Negroes and the fact that leaves were few and spaced between long intervals.

They made no complaint about the Jim crow practices at their base, and declined to attempt to make use of the facilities which it was quite well understood Negro seamen were not expected to use. They were questioned about their troubles in the camp, where there are 800 colored and 200 whites.

Testifying before the Navy Board, McNatt said that none of the men spoke up until questioned, yet this meeting is described in the bill of particulars of the Navy as "a seditious meeting."

ON THE STAND

12-30-44

After the Navy had outlined its case, four men went on the stand and reiterated the facts that they had been invited to the commander's office. Evidence as adduced, it is claimed, fails in every respect to come within the broad scope of the clause in the Naval Manual under which they were dismissed.

The "Bill of Particulars" charges the men:

"Participated in seditious meetings. Refused to obey orders. Gave vent to outspoken radical ideas. Used inciting tactics in handling groups of men. Attempted sitdown strikes. Threatened sabotage."

The men flatly deny all the charges.

A day following the meeting held in the office of Commander Cantley, on Oct. 26, the same men, in his presence, were told by an unnamed regimental commander that he wouldn't have any of "these petty gripes" under his command. Commander Cantley did not take the opportunity to explain that the men had come to his office to air their grievances at his own invitation.

"BAWLED OUT"

At the first meeting the chaplain of the camp in Trinidad, where the Seabees were building an air strip, was empowered to form an interracial committee to iron out differences. The unnamed regimental commander objected to this. He "bawled them out" for "forming committees and attending conferences," McNatt told the board.

Everyone of the men who attended the meeting in Commander Cantley's office was dismissed with either "ineptitude" or "unfitness" discharges. In addition, they were confined in the "brig" in New York before getting their papers.

TELL SAME STORY

Harvey Steele, Clarence O. Clarke and Robert Louis Mills told the same story as McNatt. All explained that they were invited to the meeting, and that they were innocent of all the other charges of disobedience, "inciting tactics, sabotage attempts or sit-down strikes."

Mills didn't even know there was any trouble until he was told to pack, he said. He had not even attended the "seditious" meeting in the commanding officer's quarters. He said he did not fail to "adapt himself to the military way of life"—a blanket charge against the dismissed Seabees.

Capt. Anton B. Anderson, chairman of the board, has indicated that it would require several weeks before a decision can be reached.

Heroic Seabees Turn Stretcher Men At Palau

Atlanta Daily World
Atlanta Ga. 11-18-44

Land Behind First Assault Waves Of Marines

BY TECH. SGT. DONALD A. HALLMAN, SR.

PELELIU, PALAU ISLANDS (Delayed) — Two hundred Negro Seabees, grimy and weary from two days of unloading ships under enemy fire, were lined up on the beach here.

"I want volunteers for stretcher bearing on the ridge tonight," an officer was telling them.

And 200 Negro Seabees stepped out as one.

INCIDENT TYPICAL

The incident is typical of the record chalked up by the Seabee battalion, that landed immediately behind assault waves of Marines here and has been working night and day since. They unload ships, wrestle ammunition and heavy supplies to the beach dumps, carry ammunition to the front lines, and bring back wounded. On occasion they have filled in as frontline troops, and for more than a week they have been going forward to drag in wounded marines.

These Seabees had seen no action until Peleliu. Then they joined the assault. They had more than 100 casualties in the first week, many received during the landing when Japanese artillery and mortar fire was ripping the coral reef, others from mortar fire on the beaches and among the supply dumps and still more from enemy fire at the front.

11-18-44

From the first they worked up to 16 hours a day, unloading supplies on the floating docks out at the edge of the 600-yard wide coral reef. They were under constant mortar and artillery fire.

HANDLE AMMUNITION

On the beach they had to handle the heavy ammunition and vast stores of other supplies to the various dumps. Here they were also endangered by mortars, by snipers, and, on occasion, by Jap machine gunners who came to life behind the front lines. Once, they were even charged by three enemy tanks.

When a shell burst on the beach injuring 15 men, the Negro Seabees reached the scene first. They pulled out the wounded.

When a mortar shell set fire to a large ammunition dump, 50 Seabees started moving the shells. They had to be called off when the exploding ammunition pinned down every one on the entire beach.

When ordered to carry ammunition up to the front lines, volunteers took so many cases forward that a Marine infantry officer told them, "Knock it off. We just want enough ammunition for the night. We don't need the entire dump."

SEABEES VOLUNTEER

When a stretcher detail was needed to go down into a draw in front of a heavy fortified ridge to bring out wounded at midnight, 16 Seabees volunteered.

11-18-44

The Negroes are enormously proud of the record their unit has made. Individual feats are generously recounted by others. The battalion is high in morale and excellent in achievement.

Seaman, First Class, Edward Scott, 20, of 313 Dickerson Street, Freemont, Ohio, was on the lines four times as a stretcher bearer. The second night he was in a foxhole with a Marine officer when four Japanese started moving in. When the Marine fired, one Jap fell and played dead for a time. Then he attempted to flank the position while the other three came on. Seaman Scott got two of them, the Marine officer accounted for the others.

Seaman 1/C Lemon Jackson, 26, of 712 East Alabama Street, Florence, Alabama, was pinned down in his foxhole near the front lines. He had ammunition to get forward and he was irked. He deliberately showed himself to draw Jap fire (this is the story of others — not Jackson).

Then "I just shot up in a tree and there he was," said the Seabee.

MARINE SAVED LIFE

Seaman, First Class, Henry Hall, of 2215-A Cass Avenue, St. Louis, Mo., thanks an unidentified Marine for saving his life. A Jap was moving in on Hall, and the Seabee's rifle jammed. A passing Marine knocked off the Jap, but shrugged away the Negro's thanks with "That's okay, you guys have been saving us with the ammo you're carrying.

"Me, I just went on about my business of looking for a deeper foxhole," grinned Hall, who made nine trips to the lines in eight days.

11-18-44

Seaman, First Class, James Key Nichols, 20, of 5047 South Parkway, Chicago, has a souvenir of one trip across the exposed airport. He was carrying one end of a stretcher when a Japanese machine gun killed the Seabee on the front end. Nichols' canteen was pierced by two bullets.

"Left me without water," he mourned at the dressing station where he delivered the wounded Marine by himself two hours later.

BRAVES JAP FIRE

Machinist Mate, Third Class, Emory L. Jennings, of 586 Post Office Street, Altus, Oklahoma, heard there was a wounded man on the edge of the airport. Despite continuous sniper fire, he went and got him.

Seaman, Second Class, Leroy Moses heard a Jap in a foxhole yelling for help. Moses and two Navy corpsmen went out. One pharmacist's mate was shot by the screaming Jap who was in turn killed by Moses who then went down and helped in a wounded man.

Seaman, First Class, Jimmy Shearard of 200 Ray Street, Anderson, S. C., also heard Japs yelling.

11-18-44

"Sounded as if they were calling muster," he said. "Then one Jap called down: 'We see you throwing flares — we're coming.' But they didn't."

"I guess the boys have a right to be proud," said Lieutenant Commander Berry. "They got into the habit of volunteering so much that when we had to bury some long-dead Japs, two dozen Seabees stepped out before I had time to tell them what they were volunteering for."

He 'Tricked' Seabees Then 'Loses' Post

Amsterdam News
New York, N. Y.
12-23-44

Commander of Discharged Men Moved To Another Position; Verdict Expected In 3 Weeks

By HARRY McALPIN

WASHINGTON (NNPA) — Lieu-

Reason Not Known

The circumstances under which changed to "honorable" —seeking to have their discharges tenant Commander Harry Cantey, Jr., the commanding officer of the Seabees unit stationed in Trinidad, Lt. Commdr. Cantey was transferred from which 19 Negro Seabees were discharged in October, 1943, for "unfitness" or "ineptitude" could not be learned. Whether it was unrefuted to the effect that commanding officer had called the Navy Department.

A week later, the eleven men and eight others were discharged for "unfitness" or "ineptitude." The general charges against them were: (1) participation in seditious meetings, (2) refusal to obey orders of their superior officers, (3) attempts to start trouble, (4) threatened sabotage, (5) use of inciting tactics in handling groups of men, and (6) participation in attempted sit-down strikes.

12-23-44

Deny Charges

The Navy charge also stated: "It is further disclosed that they were unwilling to adapt themselves to a military way of life; that they possessed ability to influence less intelligent and poorly educated personnel; that they worked tirelessly to tear down and disrupt the organization to the detriment of the Naval service, and in general to make their ineptitude and unfitness stand out."

All these charges were denied by the petitioners. four of whom appeared at the meeting and testified in person. With but one exception, none of the men had ever been reprimanded for any disciplinary offense during his service in the Navy. The only meeting they had ever attended was the one called by their commanding officer. 12-23-44

Counsel for the men argued that "other than honorable" discharges were a blot on the men for the rest of their lives. One of them is studying law and will likely be unable to get past the character committee of the bar association. Another is studying pre-medic courses. He will have the same difficulty with the medical board. Others are having the same difficulty trying to get civil service jobs or even jobs in private employment because of the nature of their discharges.

Await Decision

"If the Navy thought it undesirable to have a man in the service, we do not feel the Navy should have to keep the man in the service," declared Arthur Garfield Hayes, representing a number of the men on behalf of the American Civil Liberties Union and the National Lynn Committee Against Discrimination in the Armed Forces. "But he should be honorably discharged," he said. 12-23-44

Thurgood Marshall, special counsel for the NAACP, also appeared in behalf of that organization, as representative for some of the Seabees.

A decision is not expected from the Board of Review for about three weeks.

Seabees Of 34th Construction Battalion Cites Mistreatment

Age - New York N. Y.

12-30-44

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Stories of "gross mistreatment and discrimination" told by Negro members of the 34th Construction Battalion (Seabees) upon their return from 21 months overseas have caused the Washington Bureau of the NAACP to demand of Secretary of the Navy, Forrestal a complete investigation of the charges.

Leslie S. Perry, administrative assistant of the NAACP bureau here, wrote: "We [illegible] receipt of complaints from various men attached to the 34th Construction Battalion who are now stationed in Port Hueneme, California. Uniformly, these men complain of gross mistreatment and discrimination on account of their race. First, they charge that even while serving abroad they were subjected to the most brazen and humiliating forms of segregation. Not only were they required to wait until white enlisted men had completed mess before they were given food, but even the drinking water tanks were set up on the basis of color It is reported that one Negro seabee was kicked by Lieutenant R. G. Aaron for drinking from a tank set aside for white personnel. 12-30-44

"Second, it is alleged that Negro enlisted men were confined to the brig on the least pretext, especially when they protested the discriminatory conditions under which they were required to serve their country.

"Third, that although many of them are ill, the naval physicians, because of indifference or racial prejudice, refuse to furnish them with proper medical care. On occasion, it is reported, these men have been turned away by doctors with harsh and profane language. On other occasions, we understand, naval physicians have accosted men in the hospital with "what's wrong with you, eight ball?" 12-30-44

"Fourth, these men are unanimous in their complaint that Negroes in the battalion are systematically denied promotion.

"Most of the discrimination practiced against these men appears to reflect the wishes of Battalion Commander, J. P. McBean. We are informed that MeBean has stated openly that 'as long as I am Commander of this Battalion, there will be segregation' rective action."

"In the light of these complaints, your office has a solemn obligation to American people to investigate conditions in the 34th Battalion with a view to drastic corrective action"

47j-1944

Seabees

NORTHWEST HERALD

Heroic Seabee Unit Back From Overrseas

Seattle, Wash.

4-21-44

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Veterans of 20 months of jungle warfare in the South Pacific, and bearing a unit citation for many outstanding feats of contruction completed under great difficulties, the first battalion of Negro Seabees to go overseas has returned to this country, the Navy Department announced this week.

The unit, the 34th Construction Battalion, indoctrinated at Camp Allen in Virginia, sailed outside the continental limits of the United States on January 1 1943, and arrived in Noumea, New Caledonia, 19 days later. Since that date, the unit has suffered casualties of five men killed in action and 35 wounded.

Two Killed in Raids

The first big job tackled by the [illegible] was the construction of the Halavo Seaplane base at Halavo in the Florida Islands. Brigaded there with the Acron (Red) Four, an air unit, the 34th Battalion helped carve its camp out of a deep jungle. During February and March, 1943, the two outfits experienced two direct enemy bombings and were under almost nightly enemy air raids in the area for a period of five months. Casualties from these raids resulted in two killed and 28 wounded.

A detachment of approximately 350 men were transferred on March 19, 1943, to Guadalcanal to assist other battalions in constructing fuel and gas storage facilities. This detachment remained on Guadalcanal until November, 1943, constructing al ltypes of airfield facilities and housing. They were under frequent enemy air raids for the first six months of their duty there and then less frequent raids, the last of which occurred in October, 1943. No casualties resulted.

To Russell's Island

On April 20, 1943, another detachment of approximately 200 men, with 75 per cent of the battalion's heavy equipment, was transported by LCTs to Russell Island, where they laid out and constructed, together with the 35th Construction Battalion, the second fighter strip north of Renard Sound on Banika Island. This detachment was a part of what was essentially a regimental command consisting of the entire 47th Battalion and one-half of the 20th Battalion. It was assigned to the task of constructing a 6,000-foot fighter strip on the Russells in time for the New Georgia campaign. These Seabee units completed their assigned tasks on time and the first three units later enlarged the bomber facilities south of Renard, completing this assignment by August, 1943.

At Russells the detachment was subjected to constant enemy bombing until the completion of the New Georgia campaign in July. The Negro detachment experienced five casualties, consisting of three killed and two injured with minor burns in the operation of the fighter strip, caused during the crash of a Navy plane on the field.

The entire battalion was reunited in November, 1943, in the Tulagi area, with approximately one-half of the battalion quartered at Halavo, and the other half scattered over the adjacent Islands of Tulagi, Savo and Phillips Peninsula on Purvis Bay.

Just before the men embarked for home, Capt. Mark L. Halsay, Jr., USN, commander of the Naval Base, sent them the following unit commendation:

"On the occasion of the completion of your work in this area, covering a period of 20 months, I congratulate you and the officers and enlisted men of your command for the splendid record which you have made."

Navy Says He Was Moved To Camp In Calif.

Daily World — Atlanta, Ga

12-23-44

Called Meeting Then Ordered Men

Put On Trial

BY HARRY McALPIN

WASHINGTON, D. C. — (NNPA) Lieutenant Commander Harry Cantey, Jr., the commanding officer of the Seabees unit stationed in Trinidad, from which 19 Negro Seabees were discharged in October, 1943, for 'unfitness" or 'ineptitude," is no longer commanding that unit. He has been transferred to Camp Parks, Shoemaker, California, according to the Navy Department.

The circumstances under which Lt. Comdr. Cantey was transferred could not be learned. Whether it had anything to do with his handling of racial problems with the Negro Seabee unit in Trinidad is a matter of conjecture still.

12-23-44

WERE DOUBLE-CROSSED

Testimony at the hearing on the petitions of the discharged Seabees — seeking to have their discharges changed to "honorable" — taken before the Board of Review Discharges and Dismissals last week were unrefuted to the effect that Lt. Comdr. Cantey had called the meeting in which eleven of the Seabees voiced their opinions at his request, on discriminations and racial conditions at the camp.

The next day, the regimental commander in the area called the same men in to a meeting, reprimanded them for holding a "seditious" meeting. Cantey was present and did not raise his voice to state that the meeting had been held at his request, and the opinions asked for by him.

A week later, the eleven men and eight others were discharged for 'unfitness" or 'ineptitude." The general charges against them were: (1) participation in seditious meetings, (2) refusal to obey orders of their superior officers, (3 attempts to start trouble, (4 threatened sabotage, (5) use of inciting tactics in handling groups of men, and (6) participation in attempted sit-down strikes.

12-23-44

CHARGES DENIED

All these charges were denied by the petitioners, four of whom appeared at the meeting and testified in person. With but one exception, none of the men had ever been reprimanded for any disciplinary offense during his service in the Navy. The only meeting they had ever attended was the one called by their commanding officer.

"If the Navy thought it undesirable to have a man in the service, we do not feel the Navy should have to keep the man in the service," declared Arthur Garfield Hayes, representing a number of men on behalf of the American Civil Liberties Union and the National Lynn Committee Against Discrimination in the Armed Forces. "But he should be honorably discharged," he said.

12-23-44

Thurgood Marshall, special counsel for the NAACP, also appeared in behalf of that organization, as representative for some of the Seabees.

A decision is not expected from the Board of Review for about three weeks.

200 N EGRO SEABEES

New York Age

11-25-44

PELELIU, PALAU ISLANDS (Delayed)—Two hundred Negro Seabees, grimy and weary from two days of unloading ships under enemy fire, were lined up on the beach here.

"I want volunteers for stretcher bearing on the ridge tonight," an officer was telling them.

And 200 Negro Seabees stepped out as one.

The incident is typical of the record chalked up by the Seabee battalion, that landed immediately behind assault waves of Marines here and has been working night and day since. They unload ships, wrestle ammunition and heavy supplies to the beach dumps, carry ammunition to the front lines, and bring back wounded. On occasion they have filled in as frontline troops, and for more than a week they have been going forward to drag in wounded marines.

11-25-44

These Seabees had seen no action until Peleliu. Then they joined the assault. They had more than 100 casualties in the first week, many received during the landing when Japanese artillery and mortar fire was ripping the coral reef, others from mortar fire on the beaches and among the supply dumps, and still more from enemy fire at the front.

From the first they worked up to 16 hours a day, unloading supplies on the floating docks out at the edge of the 600-yard wide coral reef. They were under constant mortar and artillery fire.

On the beach they had to handle the heavy ammunition and vast stores of other supplies to the various dumps. Here they were also endangered by mortars, by snipers, and, on occasion, by Jap machine gunners who came to life behind the front lines. Once, they were even charged by three enemy tanks.

When a shell burst on the beach, injuring 15 men, the Negro Seabees reached the scene first. They pulled out the wounded

When a mortar shell set fire to a large ammunition dump, 50 Seabees started moving the shells. They had to be called off when the exploding ammunition pinned down eveyone on the entire beach.

When ordered to carry ammunition up to the front lines, volunteers took so many cases forward that a Marine infantry officer told them, "Knock it off. We just want enough ammunition for the night. We don't want the entire dump."

When a stretcher detail was needed to go down into a draw in front of a heavily fortified ridge to bring out wounded at midnight, 16 Seabees volunteered.

Navy Defends Dismissal of Negro Seabees

Washington Post, D. C.

12-12-44

By the Associated Press

A naval officer testified here yesterday that 15 Negro Seabees were discharged for "unfitness" after racial issues arose in their battalion while they were in Trinidad.

Yesterday testimony was given by Lieut. Comdr. Norman F. Godbe at a hearing granted by the Navy's judge advocate general.

Godbe said that while the men were not charged with specific offenses and were not given dishonorable discharges they had ating an off-the-record gard to rank because of their race ed informally Septem- He said he mentioned no griev-

, by the commanding ances.
e training post. The remaining 14 Seabees still he other Negroes, he are to be heard. Capt. Anton B. nvited to discuss any ing, said a decision probably would and some of the men not be reached for three or four hat they felt they were weeks.
minated against in re-

tended "seditious meetings," attempted "sitdown strikes," refused to obey orders" "threatened sabotage." counts applied to all 15, said.

other than "honorable dis- after attending a "re-charge," they are deprived of cer- meeting called in and tain benefits under the "GI Bill of ber 26, 1943, by Rights" and that their discharges officer of the train- He and the ot- Isaac Glenn McNatt, 27, of New York City, who edited the battal- grievances, and s ion's newspaper, testified that he complained that th Godbe carry a stigma." noted that because the men have and the others had been discharged being discrimina

NEGRO SEABEES PROVE METTLE IN BATTLE

PELELU, PALAU ISLANDS (Delayed)—Two hundred Negro Seabees, grimy and weary from two days of unloading ships under enemy fire, were lined up on the beach here.

"I want volunteers for stretcher bearing on the ridge tonght," an officer was telling them.

And 200 Negro Seabees stepped out as one.

The incident is typical of the record chalked up by the Seabee battalion, that landed immediately behind assault waves of Marines here and has been working night and day since. They unload ships, wrestle ammunition and heavy supplies to the beach dumps, carry ammunition to the front lines, and bring back wounded. On occasion they have filled in as front-line troops, and for more than a week they have been going forward to drag in wounded marines.

These Seabees had seen no action until Peleliu. Then they joined the assault. They had more than 100 casualties in the first week, many received during the landing when Japanese artillery and Mortar fire was ripping the coral reef, others from mortar fire on the beaches and among the supply dumps, and still more from enemy fire at the front.

From the first they worked up to 16 hours a day, unloading supplies on the floating docks out at the edge of the 600-yard wide coral reef. They were under constant mortar and artillery fire.

On the beach they had to handle the heavy ammunition and vast stores of other supplies to the various dumps. Here they were also endangered by mortars, by snipers, and, on occasion, by Jap machine gunners who came to life behind th efront lines. Once, they were even charged by three enemy tanks.

When a shell burst on the beach, injuring 15 men, the Negro Seabees reached the scene first. They pulled out the wounded.

When a mortar shell set fire to a large ammunition dump, 50 Seabees started moving the shells. They had to be called off when the exploding ammunition pinned down everyone on the entire beach.

When ordered to carry ammunition up to the front lines, volunteers took so many cases forward that a Marine infantry officer told them, "Knock it off. We just want enough ammunition for the night. We don't need the entire dump."

When a stretcher detail was needed to go down into a draw in front of a heavily fortified ridge to bring out wounded at midnight, 16 Seabees volunteered.

The Negroes are enormously proud of the record their unit has made. Individual feats are genbattalion is high in morale and erously recounted by others. The excellent in achievement.

Seaman, First Class, Edward Scott, 20, of 313 Dickenson Street, Freemont, Ohio, was on the lines four times as a stretcher bearer. The second night he was in a foxhole with a Marine officer when four Japanese started moving in. When the Marine fired, one Jap fell and played dead for a time. Then he attempted to flank the position while the other three came on. Seaman Scott got two of them, the Marine officer accounted for the others.

Seaman, First Class, Lemon Jackson, 26, of 712 East Alabama Street, Florence, Ala., was pinned down in his foxhole near the front lines. He had ammunition to get forward and he was irked. He deliberately showed himself to draw Jap fire (this is story of others not Jackson.)

Seabees Back From Pacific Hit Treatment

NAACP Demands Navy Probe Of Men's Charges

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Stories of "gross mistreatment and discrimination" told by Negro members of the 34th Construction Battalion (Seabees) upon their return from 21 months overseas have caused the Secretary of the Washington Bureau of the NAAACP to demand of the Secretary of the Navy, Forrestal, a complete investigation of the charges.

Leslie S. Perry, administrative assistant of the NAACP bureau here, wrote: "We are in receipt of complaints from various men attached to the 34th Construction Battalion who are now stationed in Port Hueneme, California. Uniformly, these men complain of gross mistreatment and discrimination on account of their race. First, they charge that even while serving abroad they were subjected to the most brazen and humiliating forms of segregation.

"Not only were they required to wait until white enlisted men had completed mess before they were given food, but even the drinking water tanks were set up on the basis of color. It is reported that one Negro seabee was kicked by Lieutenant R. G. Aaron for drinking from a tank set aside for white personnel.

PUT IN BRIG

"Second, it is alleged that Negro enlisted men were confined to the brig on the least pretext, especially when they protested the discriminatory conditions under which they were required to serve their country

"Third, that although many of them are ill, the naval physicians, because of indifference or racial prejudice, refuse to furnish them with proper medical care. On occasion, it is reported these men have been turned away by doctors with harsh and profane language. On other occasions, we understand, naval physicians have assocted men in the hospital with 'what's wrong with you, eight ball?"

'Fourth, these men are unanimous in their complaint that Negroes in the battalion are systematically denied promotion.

CITE McBEAN

"Most of the discrimination practiced against these men appears to reflect the wishes of Battalion Commander, J. P. McBean. We are informed that McBean has stated openly that 'as long as I am Commander of this Battalion, there will be segregation.'

"In the light of these complaints, your office has a solemn obligation to American people to investigate conditions in the 34th Battalion with a view to drastic corrective action."

Ousted Seabees To Get Navy Hearing Dec. 11

(Defender New York Bureau)

NEW YORK. — The cases of the 19 Negro Seabees discharged from the Navy in October 1943 will be heard before the Naval Board of Review in Washington Monday, Dec. 11.

The men who had volunteered for service were given yellow discharge slips without any explanation or trial. The CIO War Council, the NAACP and the Lynn Committee to Abolish Segregation in the Armed Forces immediately came to their assistance and have furnished them counsel.

Isaac McNatt, one of the discharged men who was a law student before he enlisted and who has returned to law school said the yellow slips have kept the boys from getting any of the benefits provided in the GI Bill of Rights and have barred many from their former jobs or jobs in keeping with their training.

Can't Get Hospital Aid

"We did not receive any mustering out pay, educational benefits or loans," McNatt said, "and civil service jobs were closed to us." Harvey Steele, who was a shipfitter in the Seabees, was refused in the U. S. Department of Engineers where he had formerly worked. He tried to get a job in the city subway, but they wouldn't take him. He applied for admission to Columbia University but they told him if he were undesirable in the Navy he would be undesirable there.

"A metalsmith named Logan who was a graduate of Tennessee State broke his leg and was shipped out on crutches. When he was discharged his leg had still not completely healed, but he was given no pension nor further hospitalization.

"A radio electrician specialist who had been a motion picture projectionist, an electrician for the Ford Motor Company and who had taught electricity and radio at Virginia State was called upon to teach a class, yet he was never promoted above the rank of Second Class Petty Officer.

"It seems that almost all the boys they picked to discharge were college graduates," McNatt commented.

The boys belonged to a battalion that had a force of 800 Negroes and 200 whites. They were transported to Trinidad to build a base. On shipboard they were fed after the white boys and at Trinidad they had separate chow lines and everything was done to see that there was as little mingling as possible.

The unrest among the Negro Seabees apparently was noted because an informal conference was called with some of the men present and a few officers. The men were asked how they felt about the racial situation and one of the officers was quoted as saying, "I'm from Texas and wouldn't care to sleep with them (Negroes), eat with them, have any recreation with them, or anything other than getting our job done."

A few days later the boys who had honestly given their opinions about the segregation received their yellow discharge slips which read "undesirable by reason of unfitness" and "ordinary by reason of inaptitude."

Grant Request For Review In Case of 12 Seabees

Tribune — Savannah, Ga. 11-2-44

DISHONORABLY DISCHARGED FROM NAVY

Because They Objected To Discrimination

NEW YORK—The NAACP'- request to the United States navy's Board of Review to review the "unfitness discharge" of 12 Negro Seabees dismissed from the U. S. Naval Reserve on October 23, 1943, has been granted, and hearing set for Dec. 11, 1944. Attorney Gerald K. Weatherley who is representing Isaac McNatt, joined with NAACP Special Counsel Thurgood Marshall, in requesting that all cases be consolidated and a single hearing date set.

The twelve seabees were among the original fifteen who were given "undesirable" discharges for discussing racial grievances at a supposedly "off the record" meeting called by the commanding officer while they were on duty at a base in the Pacific.

On September 13 the NAACP appealed for review of dismissals for two of the men, under G. I. Bill of rights which empowers the secretary of the navy to estabblish 5 man boards to review such cases. However all cases will now be consolidated and heard December 4.

11-2-44

11-2-44

Seabees Skilled Mechanics

Daily World — Atlanta, Ga. 11-12-44

The 34th USN Construction Battalion, first group of Negro Seabees to go to the Pacific war theatre, are back home after 20 months overseas. They participated in a wide variety of construction projects. Photo shows a group engaged in work on a Seaplane Base in the South Pacific. The improvised pile driver was built by the 34th to drive coconut log foundations for stran steel huts. Ieft to right—C. E. Justice, CM2c, of Vinita, Okla.; W. C. Donovan, CCM, of Hattiesburg, Miss.; Boyd Greer, MM2c, of Little Rock, Ark.; and Eugene Butler, S1/c, Indianapolis, Ind. (Official U. S. Navy Photo from OWI).

11-12-44

The case of the discharged Seabee

PM Magazine Section New York, N. Y. 10-8-44

ISAAC MCNATT, A SEABEE, was discharged from the Navy last October—along with 17 other Negroes—as undesirable. Since then he has been trying to find some way to fight the dismissal, and now he has found it.

He told us about it a few days ago in his furnished room on West 152d Street, but first he wanted us to know how he felt.

He said he felt a little like a veteran who comes back seriously incapacitated. "He's a casualty and so am I," McNatt said. "But I don't get any honor or benefits. What I get is disgrace. I'm an unfit and undesirable person, my country tells me. It says so on my discharge papers. I'm to take my bar examination in 18 months.

...is against my character, I probably ... be admitted. From then on I'll be ...issing in action in civilian life."

An all-night drill

McNatt's story of his year in the Seabees is sort of long and not very exciting, unless you are the kind of person that gets excited about a man's efforts to be treated as a man. 10-8-44

It begins at Camp Allen, Va., where his battalion got its boot training. There the Negroes were put into two companies by themselves and the whites into another. They met at just two places, the service store and the movies.

"We had been in camp only a few days," McNatt said, "when a sign was put up in the store directing whites to one window, colored to another. At the movies we got to mixing around, with everyone taking a seat wherever he found it. Some white men didn't like this and demanded to be allowed to march into the movie first. This was permitted and at the first show it was tried there was almost a riot.

"After the show, we all went to bed. In the middle of the night all the colored men were ordered out of their ... whether they had been to the movie or not. We had to drill most of the night. They kept us at it until we nearly dropped."

When the battalion went to Camp Bradford in Virginia for advanced training, the companies were reorganized, with white men assigned to each one. "Whenever we marched any place, to a show or work or on parade, the white men were always at the head," Isaac said. 10-8-44

"We asked about this and were told that the men with the highest ratings were first. We learned then that the white men all had higher ratings than we had. No Negro was allowed to go higher than a second-class petty officer."

The battalion was shipped to the Caribbean area and began building roads through the jungle. The men ate at a nearby Naval air station. Soon there were two lines, one for the Negroes, one for the others. But the white men attached to the Naval air station refused to get in line with the white Seabees. "They didn't like the way these men and officers were treating us," McNatt said. "Three chow lines had to be formed. 10-8-44

"When our living quarters were completed," Isaac went on, "we found that there was to be complete segregation again. Nobody complained about this, but here once more there was one place where we had to mix. This was at the Ship's Store. They were a little more subtle this time about the signs they put up. The one for us read This line for enlisted men.

"No white men, whether enlisted or not, ever got on this line," Isaac said. "But we fooled them; neither did we. We went to an adjoining air base where they had no such sign. A week later, when some officer discovered that our store was overstocked with beer and that nothing was moving, the sign disappeared."

Skipper calls 'em in

McNatt was serving as a pay-roll clerk and bookkeeper for the battalion. He ited the battalion newspaper in his spare time and thought he was getting along fine.

Then something happened. He thinks the boycotting of the ship's store may have galled some of the Southern officers.

Anyway, the day after the sign was removed, 12 of the Negroes were invited to drop in and have an informal chat with the Skipper, Comdr. Harry Cantey. Nine other white officers were there, too.

"We talked a while about such things as getting more liberty for the men," McNatt said. "Then one officer spoke up and said: 'That isn't really what's on your minds. What we want to hear is what you think about the racial situation here.'

"Tell me where you fellows would be willing to draw the line between races," the officer said.

McNatt spoke up then and said that he couldn't see that a line could be drawn any place. "So long as we get along with the policy white fellows on the job," he said, "why couldn't we get along with them in the mess or in our living quarters?"

Isaac said that before the meeting broke up, Cmdr. Cantey said he would ask the Negro chaplain to form a committee on interracial affairs, and that further meetings would be held soon. 10-8-44

McNatt said that he was promoted to first-class petty officer and moved out of the colored men said that he would be drawn any ... "So long as we get along with the ... said, "why ... along with them in the ... quarters?" ... meeting broke ... said he would ask the ... committee on interracial ... further meetings would be ... soon. 10-8-44 ... Cantey's superior officer ... out for griping, and said ... men if their answer was "yes," there would be no more such conferences.

A week later, the 12 men who had attended the conference, together with six more, were discharged as undesirable and unfit. They received no mustering out pay, and they are not entitled to health and educational benefits. 10-8-44

Back in civilian life, McNatt re-entered law school and began a campaign to get his case reviewed. His schedule for the last 10 months has been to get up at 6, study law until 9, attend classes until noon, write letters and visit officials about his case until 4 p.m., and then sell stockings from door to door.

The Mayor comes through

Among the scores of persons to whom Isaac has written seeking help in getting a fair hearing is Mrs. Roosevelt, who got for him the first full statement Isaac had seen of the Navy's position. The Navy said "that since the subject man has been discharged with men equally remiss in their obligations to the service, reports indicate that the performance of the battalion has increased . . ."

We asked McNatt what he thought about that statement.

"That's bunk," he said, "because Lt. Alexander, my superior officer, came up to me when we were being herded off the base and said he was sorry and that he had had nothing to do with my discharge.

"Alexander was a Yank. He was transferred out of the battalion right after that."

Eventually, McNatt wrote also to Mayor La Guardia. The Mayor replied that he could obtain a review under the terms of Public Law 347, 78th Congress, approved on June 22, 1944, which provides that the Secretary of War and Navy must establish boards for the purpose of reviewing the type and nature of contested military discharges. No one, it seemed, had thought of that before. 10-8-44

So McNatt has put his case before this board of review, and the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People has taken steps to submit the cases of the other 17 men to the same body.

Well, that was the story, McNatt said, and he began packing rayon stockings and cotton socks into a black satchel stamped Real Silk Hosiery Co.

We asked him what he planned to do if he won an honorable discharge and passed the bar examination.

He straightened up. "The reason I want to be a lawyer," he said, "is so I can go back down home to Fayetteville, N. C., and represent my own people there. There isn't a colored attorney in town. My father was a minister there before he died. He used to urge me to do this."

NAACP Told Stories of Discrimination Against Men Serving Overseas

Bystander — Des Moines, Iowa

12-21-44

Washington, D. C.—Stories of "gross mistreatment and discrimination" told by Negro members of the 34th Construction Battalion (Seabees) upon their return from 21 months overseas have caused the Washington Bureau of the NAACP to demand of Secretary of the Navy, Forrestal a complete investigation of the charges. Leslie S. Perry, administrative assistant of the NAACP bureau here, wrote: "We are in receipt of complaints from various men attached to the 34th Construction Battalion who are now stationed in Port Hueneme, California. Uniformly, these men complain of gross mistreatment and discrimination on account of their race. First, they charge that even while serving abroad they were subjected to the most brazen and humiliating forms of segregation. Not only were they required to wait until white enlisted men had completed mess before they were given food, but even the drinking water tanks were set on the basis of color. It is reported that one Negro seabee was kicked by Lieutenant R. G. Aaron for drinking from a tank set aside for white personnel.

12-21-44

"Second, it is alleged that Negro enlisted men were confined to the brig on the least pretext, especially when they protested the discriminatory conditions under which they were required to serve their country.

"Third, that although many of them are ill, the naval physicians, because of indifference or racial prejudice, refuse to furnish them with proper medical care. On occasion, it is reported, these men have been turned away by doctors with harsh and profane language. On other occasions, we understand, naval physicians have accosted men in the hospital with 'what's wrong with you, eight ball?'

"Fourth, these men are unanimous in their complaint that Negroes in the battalion are systematically denied promotion. 12-21-44

"Most of the discrimination practiced against these men appears to reflect the wishes of Battalion Commander, J. P. McBean. We are informed that McBean has stated only that 'as long as I am Commander of this Battalion, there will be segregation.'

"In the light of these complaints, your office has a solemn obligation to American people to investigate conditions in the 34th Battalion with a view to drastic corrective action."

Seabees Volunteer For Dirty Job Fighting Japs On Palau

Journal & Guide
Norfolk, Va.

11-18-44

By T/SGT. W. A. HALLMAN SR.
Marine Corps Combat Correspondent

PELELIU, PALAU ISLANDS—(Delayed)—Two hundred Negro Seabees, grimy and weary from two days of unloading ships under enemy fire, were lined up on the beach here.

"I want volunteers for stretcher bearing on the ridge tonight," an officer was telling them.

11-18-44

And 200 Negro Seabees stepped out as one.

TYPICAL INCIDENT

The incident is typical of the record chalked up by the Seabee battalion, that landed immediately behind assault waves of Marines here and has been working night and day since. They unload ships, wrestle ammunition and heavy supplies to the beach dumps, carry ammunition to the front lines, and bring back wounded. On occasion they have filled in as frontline troops, and for more than a week they have been going forward to drag in wounded marines.

These Seabees had seen no action until Peleliu. Then they joined the assault. They had more than 100 casualties in the first week, many received during the landing when Japanese artillery and mortar fire was ripping the coral reef, others from mortar fire on the beaches and among the supply dumps, and still more from enemy fire at the front.

From the first they worked up to 16 hours a day, unloading supplies on the floating docks out at the edge of the 600-yard wide coral reef. They were under constant mortar and artillery fire. 11-18-44

CHARGED BY TANKS

On the beach they had to handle the heavy ammunition and vast stores of other supplies to the various dumps. Here they were also endangered by mortars, by snipers, and, on occasion, by Jap machine gunners who came to life behind the front lines. Once, they were even charged by three enemy tanks.

When a shell burst on the beach, injuring 15 men, the Negro Seabees reached the scene first. They pulled out the wounded.

When a mortar shall set fire to a large ammunition dump, 50 Seabees started moving the shells. They had to be called off when the exploding ammunition pinned down everyone on the entire beach.

When ordered to carry ammunition up to the front lines, volunteers took so many cases forward that a Marine infantry officer told them, "Knock it off. We just want enough ammunition for the night. We don't need the entire dump."

When a stretcher detail was needed to go down into a draw in front of a heavily fortified ridge to bring out wounded at midnight, 16 Seabees volunteered.

PROUD OF RECORD

The Negroes are enormously proud of the record their unit has made. Individual feats are generously recounted by others. The battalion is high in morale and excellent in achievement.

Seaman, first class, Edward Jackson, 26, of 712 East Alabama street, Florence, Ala., was carrying ammunition across the airport when he was hit by a Marine fall, hit by a Japanese machine gun killed the Seabee on the front end. Nichols' canteen was pierced by two bullets.

"Left me without water," he where he delivered the wounded Marine by himself two hours later.

Seaman, first class, George E. Jenkins, of 350 East 53rd street, Chicago, was carrying ammunition across the airport when he saw a Marine fall, hit by a Japanese machine gun. Seaman Jenkins brought the Seabee's rifle jammed an inert victim several hundred yards, but shrugged away the task.

"That's Seaman, first class, Leo McDowell, of 588 East 53rd street, Chicago, (a neighbor of Jenkins), was another Seabee who had his companion shot while carrying a stretcher. McDowell simply placed his buddy on the

Seaman, first class, James Key Nichols, 20, of 5047 South Parkway, Chicago, has a souvenir of one trip across the exposed airport. He was carrying a stretcher when a one end of a

Seaman, first class, Henry Mo., thanks an unidentified Marine for saving his life sniper. Seaman Jenkins brought was moving in on Hall, an inert victim the Seabee's rifle jammed several hundred sing Marine knocked offyards by yourself is a difficult p, but shrugged away the task. s thanks with "That's you guys have been sav with the ammo you're ng."

WANTS DEEP FOXHOLE

"Me, I just went on about business of looking for Dickenson, of 313 Scott, 20, of Fremont, Ohio, was on a stretch Jackson). Then "I just shot up in a foxhole with a Marine and there he was," said the Seabee. 11-18-44 Seaman, first class, Lemon Louis, Mo., was carrying Negro's okay, you (this is the Jap, but the Marine officer ac counted for the others.

11-18-44

Seaman, first class, Leroy

JAPS TREACHEROUS

seaman, second class, Leroy

11-18-44

Machinist mate, third class, Emory L. Jennings, of 586 Post Office street, Altus, Okla., heard there was a wounded man on the edge of the airport. Despite continuous sniper fire, he went and got him.

Seaman, first class, Jimmy Sheavard, of 200 Ray street, Anderson, S. C., also heard Japs yelling.

Seaman, first class, James Key Nichols, 20, of 5047 South Parkway, Chicago, has a souvenir of one trip across the exposed airport. He was carrying a stretcher when a one end of a stretcher when a Japanese machine gun killed the Seabee on the front end. Nichols' canteen was pierced by two bullets.

"Left me without water," he where he delivered the wounded Marine by himself two hours later.

Seaman, first class, George E. Jenkins, of 350 East 53rd street, Chicago, was carrying ammunition across the airport when he saw a Marine fall, hit by a Japanese machine gun killed the Seabee on the front end. Nichols' canteen was pierced by two bullets.

"Left me without water," he where he delivered the wounded Marine by himself two hours later.

Seaman, first class, George E. Jenkins, of 350 East 53rd street, Chicago, was carrying ammunition across the airport when he saw a Marine fall, hit by a Japanese machine gun. Seaman Jenkins brought the Seabee's rifle jammed an inert victim several hundred yards by yourself is a difficult task.

"That's Seaman, first class, Leo McDowell, of 588 East 53rd street, Chicago, (a neighbor of Jenkins), was another Seabee who had his companion shot while carrying a stretcher. McDowell simply placed his buddy on the Seaman, first class, James Key Nichols, 20, of 5047 South Parkway, Chicago, has a souvenir of one trip across the exposed airport. He was carrying a stretcher when a one end of a stretcher when a Japanese machine gun killed the Seabee on the front end. Nichols' canteen was pierced by two bullets.

"Left me without water," he where he delivered the wounded Marine by himself two hours later.

Seaman, first class, George E. Jenkins, of 350 East 53rd street, Chicago, was carrying ammunition across the airport when he saw a Marine fall, hit by a Japanese machine gun killed the Seabee on the front end. Nichols' canteen was pierced by two bullets.

"Left me without water," he where he delivered the wounded Marine by himself two hours later.

Seaman, first class, George E. Jenkins, of 350 East 53rd street, Chicago, was carrying ammunition across the airport when he saw a Marine fall, hit by a Japanese machine gun. Seaman Jenkins brought the Seabee's rifle jammed an inert victim several hundred yards by yourself is a difficult task.

"That's Seaman, first class, Leo McDowell, of 588 East 53rd street, Chicago, (a neighbor of Jenkins), was another Seabee who had his companion shot while carrying a stretcher. McDowell simply placed his buddy on the Machinist mate, third class, Emory L. Jennings, of 586 Post Office street, Altus, Okla., heard there was a wounded man on the edge of the airport. Despite continuous sniper fire, he went and got him.

Seaman, first class, Jimmy Sheavard, of 200 Ray street, Anderson, S. C., also heard Japs yelling.

Seaman, first class, James Key Nichols, 20, of 5047 South Parkway, Chicago, has a souvenir of one trip across the exposed airport. He was carrying a stretcher when a one end of a stretcher when a Japanese machine gun killed the Seabee on the front end. Nichols' canteen was pierced by two bullets.

"Left me without water," he where he delivered the wounded Marine by himself two hours later.

Seaman, first class, George E. Jenkins, of 350 East 53rd street, Chicago, was carrying ammunition across the airport when he saw a Marine fall, hit by a Japanese machine gun. Seaman Jenkins brought the Seabee's rifle jammed an inert victim several hundred yards by yourself is a difficult task.

"That's Seaman, first class, Leo McDowell, of 588 East 53rd street, Chicago, (a neighbor of Jenkins), was another Seabee who had his companion shot while carrying a stretcher. McDowell simply placed his buddy on the Machinist mate, third class, Emory L. Jennings, of 586 Post Office street, Altus, Okla., heard there was a wounded man on the edge of the airport. Despite continuous sniper fire, he went and got him.

Seaman, first class, Jimmy Sheavard, of 200 Ray street, Anderson, S. C., also heard Japs yelling.

JAPS TREACHEROUS

Seaman, second class, Leroy

A week later, the 12 men who had attended the conference, together with six more, were discharged as undesirable and unfit. They received no mustering out pay, and they are not entitled to health and educational benefits. 10-8-44

Back in civilian life, McNatt re-entered law school and began a campaign to get his case reviewed. His schedule for the last 10 months has been to get up at 6, study law until 9, attend classes until noon, write letters and visit officials about his case until 4 p.m., and then sell stockings from door to door.

The Mayor comes through

Among the scores of persons to whom Isaac has written seeking help in getting a fair hearing is Mrs. Roosevelt, who got for him the first full statement Isaac had seen of the Navy's position. The Navy said "that since the subject man has been discharged with men equally remiss in their obligations to the service, reports indicate that the performance of the battalion has increased . . ."

We asked McNatt what he thought about that statement.

"That's bunk," he said, "because Lt. Alexander, my superior officer, came up to me when we were being herded off the base and said he was sorry and that he had had nothing to do with my discharge.

"Alexander was a Yank. He was transferred out of the battalion right after that."

Eventually, McNatt wrote also to Mayor La Guardia. The Mayor replied that he could obtain a review under the terms of Public Law 347, 78th Congress, approved on June 22, 1944, which provides that the Secretary of War and Navy must establish boards for the purpose of reviewing the type and nature of contested military discharges. No one, it seemed, had thought of that before. 10-8-44

So McNatt has put his case before this board of review, and the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People has taken steps to submit the cases of the other 17 men to the same body.

Well, that was the story, McNatt said, and he began packing rayon stockings and cotton socks into a black satchel stamped Real Silk Hosiery Co.

We asked him what he planned to do if he won an honorable discharge and passed the bar examination.

He straightened up. "The reason I want to be a lawyer," he said, "is so I can go back down home to Fayetteville, N. C., and represent my own people there. There isn't a colored attorney in town. My father was a minister there before he died. He used to urge me to do this."

NAACP Told Stories of Discrimination Against Men Serving Overseas

Bystander — Des Moines, Iowa
12-21-44

Washington, D. C.—Stories of "gross mistreatment and discrimination" told by Negro members of the 34th Construction Battalion (Seabees) upon their return from 21 months overseas have caused the Washington Bureau of the NAACP to demand of Secretary of the Navy, Forrestal a complete investigation of the charges. Leslie S. Perry, administrative assistant of the NAACP bureau here, wrote: "We are in receipt of complaints from various men attached to the 34th Construction Battalion who are now stationed in Port Hueneme, California. Uniformly, these men complain of gross mistreatment and discrimination on account of their race. First, they charge that even while serving abroad they were subjected to the most brazen and humiliating forms of segregation. Not only were they required to wait until white enlisted men had completed mess before they were given food, but even the drinking water tanks were set on the basis of color. It is reported that one Negro seabee was kicked by Lieutenant R. G. Aaron for drinking from a tank set aside for white personnel.

12-21-44

"Second, it is alleged that Negro enlisted men were confined to the brig on the least pretext, especially when they protested the discriminatory conditions under which they were required to serve their country.

"Third, that although many of them are ill, the naval physicians, because of indifference or racial prejudice, refuse to furnish them with proper medical care. On occasion, it is reported, these men have been turned away by doctors with harsh and profane language. On other occasions, we understand, naval physicians have accosted men in the hospital with 'what's wrong with you, eight ball?'

"Fourth, these men are unanimous in their complaint that Negroes in the battalion are systematically denied promotion. 12-21-44

"Most of the discrimination practiced against these men appears to reflect the wishes of Battalion Commander, J. P. McBean. We are informed that McBean has stated only that 'as long as I am Commander of this Battalion, there will be segregation.'

"In the light of these complaints, your office has a solemn obligation to American people to investigate conditions in the 34th Battalion with a view to drastic corrective action."

Seabees Volunteer For Dirty Job Fighting Japs On Palau

Journal & Guide
Norfolk, Va.
11-18-44

By T/SGT. E. A. HALLMAN SR.
Marine Corps Combat Correspondent

PELELIU, PALAU ISLANDS—(Delayed)—Two hundred Negro Seabees, grimy and weary from two days of unloading ships under enemy fire, were lined up on the beach here.

"I want volunteers for stretcher bearing on the ridge tonight," an officer was telling them. 11-18-44

And 200 Negro Seabees stepped out as one.

TYPICAL INCIDENT

The incident is typical of the record chalked up by the Seabee battalion, that landed immediately behind assault waves of Marines here and has been working night and day since. They unload ships, wrestle ammunition and heavy supplies to the beach dumps, carry ammunition to the front lines, and bring back wounded. On occasion they have filled in as frontline troops, and for more than a week they have been going forward to drag in wounded marines.

These Seabees had seen no action until Peleliu. Then they joined the assault. They had more than 100 casualties in the first week, many received during the landing when Japanese artillery and mortar fire was ripping the coral reef, others from mortar fire on the beaches and among the supply dumps, and still more from enemy fire at the front.

From the first they worked up to 16 hours a day, unloading supplies on the floating docks out at the edge of the 600-yard wide coral reef. They were under constant mortar and artillery fire. 11-18-44

CHARGED BY TANKS

On the beach they had to handle the heavy ammunition and vast stores of other supplies to the various dumps. Here they were also endangered by mortars, by snipers, and, on occasion, by Jap machine gunners who came to life behind the front lines. Once, they were even charged by three enemy tanks.

When a shell burst on the beach, injuring 15 men, the Negro Seabees reached the scene first. They pulled out the wounded.

When a mortar shall set fire to a large ammunition dump, 50 Seabees started moving the shells. They had to be called off when the exploding ammunition pinned down everyone on the entire beach.

When ordered to carry ammunition up to the front lines, volunteers took so many cases at a time that they had to draw lots to see who would carry. Then "I just shot up in the air" Scott, 20, of 313 Dickenson street, Fremont, Ohio, was on hand when the story of others—no mourned at the dressing station (this is the story of others—no mourned at the dressing station, where he delivered the wounded Marine by himself two hours later.

Seaman, first class, George E. Lemon, okay, you guys have been saving us with the ammo you're carrying." Jackson, 26, of 712 East Alabama street, Florence, Ala., was counted for the others.

PROUD OF RECORD

The Negroes are enormously proud of the record their unit has made. Individual feats are generously recounted by others. The battalion is high in morale and excellent in achievement.

Seaman, first class, Edward Jenkins, of 350 East 53rd street, Chicago, was carrying ammunition across the airport when he was hit by a Japanese machine gun fired by a Marine sniper. Seaman Jenkins brought the Seabee's rifle jammed, an inert victim several hundred yards by yourself is a difficult two bullets.

"Left me without water," he said, "I just shot up in a tree where he was," said the Seaman, first class, George E. Lemon, okay, you guys have been saving us with the ammo you're carrying."

Seaman, first class, James Dowell, of 588 East 53rd street, Chicago, (a neighbor of Jenkins), was another Seabee who had his companion shot while carrying a stretcher. McDowell simply placed his buddy on the Seaman, first class, Leroy Key Nichols, 20, of 5047 South Parkway, Chicago, has a souvenir of one trip across the exposed airport. He was carrying a stretcher when a Japanese machine gun killed the Seabee on the front end. Nichols' canteen was pierced by two bullets.

"Left me without water," he said, "I just shot up in a tree where he was," said the Seaman later.

Seaman, first class, James Moses heard a Jap in a foxhole yelling for help. Moses and two Navy corpsmen went out. One pharmacist's mate was shot by the screaming Jap who was in turn killed by Moses who then went down and helped in a wounded man.

Seaman, first class, Jimmy Shearard, of 200 Ray street, Anderson, S. C., also heard Japs yelling. 11-18-44

JAPS TREACHEROUS

Seaman, second class, Leroy Machinist mate, third class, Emory L. Jennings, of 586 Post Office street, Altus, Okla., heard there was a wounded man on the edge of the airport. Despite continuous sniper fire, he went and got him.

a deeper foxhole," grinned Hall, who made nine trips to the lines in eight days.

"ME, I JUST WENT ON ABOUT MY BUSINESS"

DEEP FOXHOLE

Me, I just went on about business of looking for

SPARS Accept Negro Women

Daily World

WASHINGTON (N N P A)—Coast Guard Headquarters Friday announced it would follow the policy of the Navy Department, announced Thursday, of admitting Negro women to its Women's Reserve, called Spars. The Coast Guard, since the war, has been part of the Navy, though in peace time it is subject to the supervision of the treasury Department.

This move on the part of the Coast Guard was expected, since it has proved to be the most liberal of the armed services, with less discrimination because of race than any of the other branches. 10-21-44

The Navy announced Thursday that the President had approved its plan for acceptance of Negro women in the Waves. This leaves only the women Marines from which Negro women are still banned.

Negro Waves, Spars

Citizen-Review Atlanta, Ga. 11-4-44 Just a loose

We were glad to learn that the Navy has at last opened its tightly locked doors to admit Negro women. While we welcome this opportunity for our women who have loyally supported the efforts of their country in every way we somehow cannot enjoy this victory as we would have in '41 or '42 when women became a part of the Navy. We classify this move as we do other recent moves on the part of the administration—not as a sincere effort to give the Negro what he so richly deserves but as an attempt to appease powerful Negro voters in the North and East. We are thankful that the pleas of the Negro press and other organizations have been heard and that soon Negro women can take their places by the sides of the men in blue whose contribution to the war grows larger each day. We do feel proud when we consider the four Negro Commanders of our merchant fleet who are delivering much needed cargoes to our fighting fronts, the Dorie Millers and Charlie Frenches and other naval heroes, the newly commissioned Negro naval officers, our fighting Black Marines and many other men of color who constitute the personnel of the largest and strongest Navy in our history. Our only regret is that we have been forced to fight, fight, fight for the privilege of giving our lives for our country.

NEGRO "SPARS"

Age - New York, N. Y. 10-28-44

WE had just finished writing the editorial about the "WAVES" when a dispatch from Washington brought some more welcome news that the United States Coast Guard headquarters "will follow the general policy of the Navy in accepting Negro women in the Women's Reserve. It will accept Negro women for service in the SPARS in quotas acording to the needs of the service."

What we have said about the Navy's policy of admitting Negro women in the WAVES we re-iterate about the Coast Guard's policy of admitting Negro women in the SPARS.

It all goes to show that once a clear-cut policy is enunciated and approved by the Commander-In-Chief, it doesn't take long for even die-hards, steeped in generations of tradition, to wake up to the fact that democracy is on trial before the world and no longer can it be made a mockery of without serious repercussions.

47j-1944

Waves

Swelling the Ranks of the WAVES

There's sea-going tradition in the family of Jane Ann Freeman, 22, shown here being sworn in by Capt. L. D. Causey, USN (Ret.) as a WAVE at the First Naval (New England) District headquarters in Boston. Big brother Pat has been in the Merchant Marine for seven years and Jane's maternal grandfather entered the U. S. Navy during the Civil War. Now that the bars have been dropped against Negroes in the WAVES, letting Jane in as the first in New England, Jane's sister June, 19, is waiting to be old enough to join up. Jane has been an inspector at the Dewey and Almy Chemical Co., in Cambridge.

They Are in the Navy Now

Miss Katherine Horton of Brooklyn, left, and Miss Ada Frierson of New York are congratulated on their enlistment in the Navy's Waves by Chief Recruiter Forrest Walker after they had been sworn in at the Office of Naval Officer Procurement in New York City.

2 Wilmington Girls, First Cousins, Sworn into WAVES

PHILADELPHIA

Two first cousins, Misses Alice A. Chapman and Thelma Y. Wingfield, of 204 E. Eighth Street, Wilmington, Del., were sworn into the WAVES as enlisted personnel last week.

The girls, both natives of Atlanta, Ga., are the third and fourth respectively, to be sworn into the WAVES since this branch of service was opened to colored women more than two months ago.

Both of the young women are employed by the Delaware Rayon Company.

No Officer Candidates

A spokesman of the Navy Public Relations office has admitted that previous reports on the acceptance of two colored women in this area as officer candidates were erroneous. "We thought the girls were qualified, but found later that they were mistaken," he said.

All of the women who have been accepted will begin training the latter part of this month at Hunter College in New York City.

A number of girls have passed their physical and mental aptitude tests, but have not been sworn in. It was stated that as soon as vacancies occur, they will be notified by mail.

NAVY SWEARS IN THREE WOMEN AS FIRST WAVES

Two New York Girls, One New Englander Taken Into Naval Reserve

(Defender Washington Bureau)

WASHINGTON — Naval history was made Monday, when three Negro women, including two officers and one enlisted recruit, were sworn into the Women's Reserves in Boston and in New York City.

The enlistments were under the Navy Department plan approved by the President for the acceptance of colored women into the WAVES. The first Negro woman in the 1st Naval District to complete her application and be sworn into the Women's Reserves was Jane A. Freeman, 22, of 164 Walnut street, Roxbury, Mass. She was sworn in Monday, 8 a.m., by Capt. L. D. Clausey, USN, retired director of the office of naval officer procurement at Boston.

Manhattan Gets Two

Two hours later in New York City, two other Negro women were sworn into the service as apprentice seamen and officer candidates by Lt. Rosamond D. Selle, at 33 Pine street. They were Harriet Ida Pickens, 35, of 260 W. 139th street, and Frances Eliza Wills, 28, of 315 W. 113th street, both of Manhattan.

Miss Pickens and Miss Wills were scheduled to report to Smith college for training on Nov. 15. Upon successful completion of their training, Miss Pickens will be commissioned lieutenant junior grade and Miss Wills an ensign.

Miss Freeman, the first Negro enlisted WAVE in the New England area, will be one of the first group of Negro recruits to enter boot training at Hunter college Manhattan, about January 1, 1945.

Miss Pickens, a native of Talladega, Ala., graduated from Smith college in 1930, with an A.B. degree cum laude and did graduate work at Columbia university from 1930 to 1933. From Sept. 1931 to June 1932, she was an instructor at Bennett college, N. C. From 1934 to 1939, she was a project supervisor under the recreational program for WPA, New York City, and from June, 1939 to present, she has been executive secretary, Harlem Tuberculosis and Health committee, Manhattan.

Hunter College Grad

Miss Wills graduated from Hunter college in 1930, with B.A. degree. She received her M.S. degree from the University of Pittsburgh, in 1943, in biology, social administration, speech and dramatics. From 1936-1940, she worked in the employment department of the YWCA on West 137th street, New York City, and from Feb. 1940 to Sept. 1941, she was a secretary in the New York Protestant Episcopal Mission Society.

Since Nov. 15, last year, Miss Wills has been a case-worker for the State Charities Aid Association Manhattan, this work being devoted mainly to investigation of families in connection with child adoption. She was born in Philadelphia.

Miss Freeman is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas T. Freeman, Roxbury, Mass., and attended Roxbury Memorial high school, graduating in 1940. While in school she was drill leader, leader on the ring committee and the senior council.

Miss Freeman has been employed as an inspector by the Dewey and Almy company. Her grandfather, Abraham Fenno, was a member of the U. S. navy in the Civil War.

Waves Promised 'Equal' Treatment

WASHINGTON

Lt. Commander W. Marvin McCarthy, Navy public relations officer, said last week that admission, training and utilization of colored women by the WAVES would be handled in the same manner as for women of other races.

There were indications, however, that the Navy's conception of equality included no ban on racial segregation.

Capt. Mildred McAfee, commander of the WAVES, during a news conference on November 10, declared that colored women in the Naval unit will enjoy whatever degree of integration that local conditions dictate.

Declaring on one hand that colored and white personnel will be trained in the same classes, she admitted on the other that the Navy would make no definite comment on the segregation in sleeping quarters.

In answer to a series of questions asked by the AFRO-AMERICAN, Lieutenant Commander McCarthy said:

1. Examination of colored applicants will be conducted along with that of other applicants.
2. The same standards of admission will apply.
3. It is the purpose of the Navy to bring colored women into the training and in the same manner as other schools will be accorded.
4. Specific procedures in connection with the housing and organization of colored women in training will depend upon the number of recruits to be trained.
5. Colored women will be assigned to the same type of duties, based upon individual training, ability and the needs of the service.

Number to Determine Procedure

4. Specific plants for administration and as rapidly as possible.

Capt. McAfee Of The WAVES Gives Interview Concerning Our Girls

Pittsburgh Courier Penn. 11-18-44

WASHINGTON—(ANP)—Negro women will be taken into the WAVEs at a time when the Navy has ordered sharp cutbacks in its recruitment program, it was disclosed during a news conference which Capt. Mildred McAfee held Friday morning. She said too, they will enjoy whatever degree of integration that local conditions dictate. As of December 1 not more than 500 recruits a month will be accepted. The present rate has been closer to 4,000 a month, a press officer explained. The announcement of the acceptance of Negro women said that they would be enlisted in accordance with the needs of the service.

Questioned regarding the purpose for accepting Negro women, Capt. McAfee explained that it was done because there is actually work for them to do.

The women will be trained in the same school although it is not clear at the moment whether or not it will be Hunter college in New York. Plans in general for WAVE training are in the midst of being changed, it was pointed out. 11-18-44

QUESTIONS SEGREGATION

Asked about segregation in sleeping quarters, Captain McAfee said "The Navy is making no statement about how it is going to administer its own internal program. It is definitely assumed the people are coming in without discrimination but whether or not the particular procedure happens to put Negroes together in one place is something else. The Navy is not going to make any definite comment on its actions.

"They will, however, be trained in the same classes," she added.

At the moment applications for commissions are being received from Negro women and other enlistments will begin about January 1. These are being processed in the "usual way," it was said. Miss McAfee was evasive in some of her answers to questions regarding segregation, but it was made apparent that local conditions, ratings and job qualifications were to determine assignment upon completion of training.

York City, Monday morning, November 13, under a Navy Department plan, approved by the President, for the acceptance, of Negro women into the WAVES.

The first Negro woman in the First Naval District to complete her application and be sworn into the Women's Reserves was Miss Jane A. Freeman, 23, of 164 Walnut avenue, Roxbury, Mass. She was sworn into the service as an Enlisted WAVE at 8 a. m. Monday by Chaplain L. D. Causey, USN Retired, Director of the Office of Naval Officers Procurement at Boston.

Two hours later in New York City two other Negro women were sworn into the service as Apprentice Seamen and Officer Candidates by Lt. Rosamond D. Selle at 3 Pine street. Tthey were Miss Hariett Ida Pickens 35, of 260 West 139th Street and Miss Frances Eliza Wills 28, of 315 West 113th Street, both of New York City. 11-14-44

Miss Pickens and Miss Wills were scheduled to report to Smith College for training on November 15. Upon successful completion of training, Miss Pickens will be commissioned Lieutenant (jg) and Miss Wills will be commissioned an Ensign. Miss Freeman, the first Negro enlisted WAVE in the New England area, will be one of the first group of Negro recruits to enter "boot" training at Hunter College, New York City, about January 1, 1945.

11-14-44

Capt. McAfee's first reply to Mrs. Norton cited the fact that women are used to replace males for sea duty, to which the congresswoman replied that she failed to see how "the question of men for sea duty would affect the matter of recruitment of WAVES, since there are many jobs being done by white men eligible for sea duty which could easily be handled by colored WAVES."

While the department is prepared to undertake such an experiment when it has been established that the services of colored women are needed, Capt. McAfee answered, "there does not exist at this time a clear necessity for their enlistment."

6-3-44

Mrs. Thomasina W. Johnson, representative for the AKA Non-Partisan Council on Public Affairs, was expecting to discuss the problem with Navy Secretary James E. Forrestal sometime this week.

Philadelphia Tribune 12-16-44

Miss ALICE JONES was sworn in as a candidate for officer's training in the Women's Reserve of the United States Naval Reserve by Lt. (junior grade) Miriam Waltmeyer at the Office of Naval Officer Procurement, Widener Building, Philadelphia, on December 5. 12-16-44

Miss Jones, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Jones, of 705 north Michigan avenue, Atlantic City, N. J., received a bachelor of science degree from Virginia State College, Petersburg, Va., majoring in home economics. Before joining the Navy, she was employed as a clerk with the Department of Commerce in Washington, D. C. She will attend the next class for prospective WAVE officers at Smith College, Northampton, Mass. 12-16-44

First WAVES Sworn In Monday In Boston, N. Y.

Daily World—Atlanta Ga.

Roxbury, Mass. Young Woman Is First Of Race

11-14-44

WASHINGTON — (CWI) — Three Negro women, including two officer candidates and one enlisted recruit, were sworn into the Women's Reserve in Boston and New

WAVE Head Finds New Bar Alibi

Afro American Baltimore, Md. 6-3-44

WASHINGTON—(ANP)— The reluctance of the navy department to accept colored women into the WAVES is based upon an unwillingness to undertake an experiment within an experiment, according to Capt. Mildred H. McAfee, commanding officer of the Women's Reserve.

The establishment of the women's reserve, entailing the use of women in large numbers in

We're in the WAVES

Call—Kansas City Mo. 11-24-44

Negro women have been sworn into the WAVES and they will be trained at Hunter and Smith colleges along with other members of the Navy Women's Reserve.

This is another step forward which Negroes gained through their own persistence. The Alpha Kappa Alpha sorority's Non-Partisan council led the fight ably backed by other women's organizations, the N.A.A.C.P. and other groups.

It remains to be seen whether Negroes will be integrated into WAVE units or whether separate outfits will be established. The Navy has an opportunity to put real democracy into practice by letting the policy of non-discrimination begun in the training of WAVES carry through as the women are assigned to duty.

The long delay that Negroes experienced in getting admitted to the WAVES will be well paid for if the Navy tosses jim-crowism out into the sea. 11-24-44

It has been demonstrated time and time again in this war that Negro and white Americans do not have to be separated in order to get along together. Just last week, "Killer Moe," a Negro truck driver in the Philippines was invited by a white infantry unit from Texas to help them man a machine gun during an attack. He accepted the invitation and took over a gun after three gunners had fallen and stuck by it through three enemy attacks. 11-24-44

Negro soldiers who have returned from overseas have recounted many instances where the color line was forgotten in foxholes and in mess tents. Even the blood of Negroes which the Red Cross so carefully separates before it leaves this country is injected into the veins of whoever needs it, once it reaches the battlefield.

America has got to start sometime forgetting about color and the WAVES is a good place to start.

47j-1944

Asks Probe of WAVE Negro Ban

Daily Worker-New York, N.Y.

HOUSE BILL SHUNTED TO RULES COMMITTEE

Daily Worker Washington Bureau 5-11-44

WASHINGTON, May 10.—Rep. William A. Rowan, Illinois Democrat, has introduced a resolution to investigate the refusal of the Navy Department to permit the enlistment of Negro WAVEs.

Rowan's resolution, which would direct the House Naval Affairs Committee to make the investigation, has been referred to the House Rules Committee, which is dominated by polltaxers such as Rep. E. E. Cox of Georgia, Martin Dies of Texas and Howard Smith of Virginia. 5-11-44

In response to pressure, the Navy Department has offered to set up segregated WAVE units, but two Negro colleges have denied the use of their facilities for training purposes if segregation is to be the official policy.

AKA's Move To Have Bill Up On House Floor

Daily World
Atlanta, Ga.
5-12-44

Urge Waves, Spars And Marines For All U. S. Women

WASHINGTON, D. C. (SNS)—The Alpha Kappa Alpha Non-Partisan Council on Public Affairs announced this week that Congressman William A. Rowan of Illinois introduced April 28 a House Resolution 522 which proposes full investigation of the Navy's policy on accepting or training Negro women as WAVES, SPARS, and WOMEN MARINES.

Issuing an urgent call to every TRUE AMERICAN in the country to mobilize in support of the Resolution, the Alpha Kappa Alpha Council called upon its 152 chapters to act as spearheads in organizing local pressure to be applied to members of the Rules Committee.

Letters, telegrams, postcards, delegations and individual visits should be made to each, urging them to report HR-522 to the floor of the House immediately and favorably, the Alpha Kappa Alpha spokesman said. Community mass meetings should be held for the same purpose. The Rules Committee members to whom the demands should be addressed are Adolph J Sabath, Illinois, Chairman; John J. Delaney, New York; Joe B Bates, Kentucky; Hamilton Fish New York; Leo E. Allen, Illinois; Earl C. Michener, Michigan; Chas. A. Halleck, Indiana, and Clarence J. Brown, Ohio. 5-12-44

HR-522 would authorize the Committee on Naval Affairs, acting as a whole or by subcommtitee, to make a full and complete investigation of all matters relating to the status of Negro women with respect to the women's uniformed services of the Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard, concentrating on the Navy's policy with respect to discrimination on account of race or color in accepting Negro women for service, excluding Negro women from a specific type of duty, if they were accepted for service, selection of Negro women for officers' training and promotion to advanced ranks if they were accepted.

The investigation committee would have the power to require the appearance of any witnesses it deemed necessary to establish its case, production of any books, correspondence, records, and to subpeona any person it would want to appear.

The Alpha Kappa Alpha Council poined out that the full weight of the Negro population must be thrown behind HR-522. Powerful and articulate forces will be aligned against it, and unless Negroes and any white groups they can enlist are willing to put forth every effort to get the bill first reported, then passed, it is sure to be killed.

Navy Unwilling To 'Experiment' With Race Waves

Daily World
Atlanta, Ga.

Commander Says No Present Need For Their Service

5-28-44

WASHINGTON,—(ANP)—The reluctance of the Navy Department to accept Negro women into the Waves is based upon an unwillingness to undertake an experiment with an experiment, according to Captain Mildred H. McAfee, commanding officer of the Women's Reserve.

WAVES

The establishment of the women's reserve, entailing the use of women in large numbers in the Navy, she wrote Rep. Mary T. Norton (D) of New Jersey, "was in the nature of an experiment. In its study of the problems involved in enlisting Negro women in the reserve ,the department has considered the fact that such a departure would introduce into the Waves program a further element of experimentation."

DISCLOSES CORRESPONDENCE

Rep. Norton had called the matter to the attention of Captain McAfee in April when she had received so many inquiries from Negro women in her own district and from other parts of the country, she said. She disclosed her correspondence with the Waves director on Thursday.

Captain McAfee's first reply to Mrs. Norton cited the fact that women are urged to replace males for sea duty, to which the congresswoman replied that she failed to see how "the question of men for sea duty would effect the matter of recruitment of Waves since there are many jobs being done by white men eligible for sea duty which could easily be handled by colored Waves." 5-28-44

While the department is prepared to undertake such an expreiment when it has been established that the services of Negro women are needed, Captain McAfee answered, "there does not exist at this time a clear necessity for their enlistment.

QUOTAS MET

"This is demonstrated by the fact that the Navy has met all of its quotas for the enlistment and procurement of Waves which quotas have been based on periodic surveys of the needs of the service for the number and type of replacement that can be made among male personnel." 5-28-44

Mrs. Thomasina Walker Johnson, representative for the AKA Non Partisian Council on Public Affairs, was expecting to discuss the problem with Navy Secretary James E. Forrestal sometime this week.

Attack Navy Ban On Race Women

Journal + Guide — Norfolk, Va.
6-3-44

WASHINGTON, D. C.—In a four-point program to crack the Navy's policy of barring the enlistment of Negro women in the WAVES, SPARS and MARINES, 20 national organizations, cooperating with the Alpha Kappa Alpha Non-Partisan Council on Public Affairs, will begin applying local and national pressure this week to get H. R. 522 passed.

This resolution, introduced in the House by Congressman William A. Rowan (Ill.) proposes an investigation of Navy discrimination.

The Navy's latest word on its policy regarding enlistment of Negro women came last week in reply to a letter from the AKA Council addressed to the late Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox. The reply, signed by Commander R. W. Wood, USNR, special assistant to the assistant chief of Navy personnel, stated: "The enlistment of Negroes in the Women's Reserve of the United States Naval Reserve is under consideration, you may be advised that no plan has been approved for this purpose." 6-3-44

The enlistment of Negro women has been under consideration since last July when a plan to train a jim crow unit was unearthed and publicized by the Council which resulted in its being cancelled.

FOUR-POINT PROGRAM

This week 20 national organizations announced the following four-point program:

1. A recruiting drive to find qualified women and girls who want to join one of the Navy's uniformed women's services. 6-3-44
2. Letters from Washington and from the states to President Roosevelt, Commander-in-Chief of the Navy, and to Secretary of the Navy Forrestal to come out publicly in favor of integrated admission of Negro women to these services.
3. Request that Secretary Forrestal handle this matter himself.
4. Communications to northern members of the rules committee from Washington and the states to report out of committee H. R. No. 522.

CAPT. McAFEE'S STATEMENT

The reluctance of the Navy Department to accept Negro women into the Waves is based upon an unwillingness to undertake an experiment within an experiment, according to Capt. Mildred H. McAfee, commanding officer of the Women's Reserve.

The establishment of the women's reserve, entailing the use of women in large numbers in the Navy, she wrote Rep. Mary T. Norton (D) of New Jersey, "was in the nature of an experiment. In its study of the problems involved in enlisting Negro women in the reserve, the department has considered the fact that such a departure would introduce into the Waves program a further element of experimentation."

Rep. Norton had called the matter to the attention of Capt. McAfee in April when she had received so many inquiries from Negro women in her own district and from other parts of the country, she said. 6-3-44

While the department is prepared to undertake such an experiment when it has been established that the services of Negro women are needed, Capt. McAfee answered, "there does not exist at this time a clear necessity for their enlistment."

Women's Fight Led To WAVE Entree

Daily World — Atlanta, Ga.
10-28-44

By HARRY McALPIN

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(NNPA)—The recently announced plan of the Navy to accept Negro women in the WAVES is the culmination of a long struggle conducted by women all over the country and headed by a small group of progressive women in Washington.

Spearheading the group through the dean of the Howard University the Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority's School of Theology; Dr. Dorothy Non-Partisan Council was Mrs. Boulding Ferebee, prominent phy- Thomasina Johnson, the council's sician and civic worker; Miss Doro- legislative director. Associated with thy Height, former executive sec- her in the fight were Miss Elsie retary of the Phyllis Wheatley Austin, former national president YWCA here; and Mrs. Pauline of the Delta Sigma Theta Sorority; Redmond Coggs, executive secretary Mrs. Jeanetta Welch Brown, on of the Washington Urban League leave as executive secretary of the National Council of Negro Women; Mrs. W. Stuart Nelson, wife of concentration on the fight about a year ago, though efforts had been exerted by them and their organi- zations since the inception of the WAVES.

The meeting was postponed, however, because several of the group were planning to discuss in- formation given members of their committee that the Navy would entertain some plans and announcement was coming. This was announcement with the National Democratic Committee by the Navy Department, as is Miss Brown. Miss Height is now stationed in New York with the National YWCA.

Most of these women have known day the announcement was made by son, is working out of New York ught out in a statement by Mrs. Nelson, who when informed of the Navy Department's release said "I have known that Capt. McAfee (head of the Waves) was working on such a plan for someime. I did not feel free at the time to discuss it, but I have known it since the first part of August. The Navy had agreed to that type of plans."

She went on to say she was very pleased on the matter of the Navy seeing it fit to take such an advanced position in integrating Negro women into its service. She paid tribute to Capt. McAfee and the "forward-looking group of women" under her leadership. She said she felt the women in the Navy Department were prepared to take a stand "slightly in advance of the stand the men have traditionally taken."

10-28-44

Miss Austin, when informed of the announcement said; "I am certainly very glad it has happened. I trust that the announcement carries with it a policy of full and complete integration of Negro women withoout the establishment of separate Negro units. I am confident that the women who are given this opportunity will more than make it worthwhile."

F.D.R. Still Puts Politics Above All

Call—Kansas City, Mo.

It took two years of fighting to open the ranks of the WAVES and the SPARS to Negro women and the battle might not have been won in that length of time had not a momentous election been just ahead. 11-3-44

While we welcome the acceptance of Negroes into the Naval Women's Reserve at whatever time it came, it does seem a pity that a great nation like ours would withhold needed manpower from military units until such time as it would be politically advantageous to the administration to supply the need.

Obviously, the Roosevelt administration held up the enlistment of Negroes into the WAVES and SPARS until a time when the lowering of the bar would be advantageous to it. The desire of Negroes to join the WAVES, SPARS and Marines has been known to the government ever since the women's reserves were organized. That there was a need for more women to replace Navy men long before now was common knowledge as radio and newspaper appeals often have been made urging women (white) to join the WAVES and release a Navy man for active duty.

The first excuse offered for the exclusion of Negro women from the Navy was that Negro men were not accepted in this branch of the service except as messmen. That condition was changed over a year ago when the first Negro apprentice seamen were enlisted. 11-3-44

Later, the Navy department and other high officials, when questioned about the exclusion of women from the Navy, stalled for time, saying that a plan was being worked out and that it would be announced soon.

President Roosevelt once more has demonstrated that he is the master politician, more interested in staying in office than in serving the American people. In 1940, at the strategic time, he appointed a Negro general to gain the few extra Negro votes that he needed to stay in the White House for 12 years. This year, knowing that the vote of women is more important than ever with so many men voting age overseas, F. D. R. kept Negro women out of the Navy reserve until he needed their vote. 11-3-44

But Negro women are not foolish enough to cast their vote for a party which gives them consideration only at election time. Negroes should have been admitted to the WAVES and SPARS long ago. It is no credit to President Roosevelt that he let his political ambitions come before the rights of American citizens.

We hope that the announcement that Negroes will be integrated into the WAVES and SPARS and that there will be no segregated set-up such as exists in the WAC is not mere "election talk" which will be disregarded after the votes are cast. But when we gain a right as a political gesture, it is difficult to put faith into promises made by those who put politics above all.

AKA Urges Women to be Ready

Tribune—Washington, D. C.

To Join Waves by January

11-11-44

Women interested in joining the WAVES or SPARS should apply now at their nearest recruiting station in order to have a backlog of applicants ready for induction day, January 1, was urged last week by Miss Norma E. Boyd, national chairman, National Non-Partisan Council on Public Affairs of the Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority.

"It is a misconception to think that the war is nearly over and there is, therefore, no need for the service Negro women can render at this stage of the game," she warned, pointing out that the need for the services of the women's corps will extend beyond the end of hostilities.

"Benefits which accrue to women veterans when they are discharged are the same as those which men receive," Miss Boyd said. "These include the provisions of the popularly known "G. I. Bill of Rights."

11-11-44

Postwar Provisions

Free education up to four years for those under twenty-five at the time of induction is provided for those whose education was interrupted.

There is also a base unemployment compensation of $20 a week for a maximum period of fifty-two weeks during the first two years after discharge; Government guarantee of 50 percent on loans up to $2,000 to establish homes or businesses.

placement services to assist in obtaining civilian jobs; and a five-man army-navy board to hear complaints and rule on appeal of discharged veterans seeking additional compensation on numerous grounds.

11-11-44

Must Be Citizens

All applicants for the WAVES and SPARS, whether for officers training or enlisted personnel must be citizens of the United States, in sound physical condition, not less than 5 feet in height; if married, must not have children under 18 years of age, and must be able to furnish reference of character and ability. In addition, specific requirements are as follows:

Officers' training—Age 20-49 years inclusive; must have a college degree or two years of college plus two years of business or professional experience; must weigh not less than 100 pounds.

Enlisted personnel—Age 20-36 years inclusive; must have two years of high school or business training; weight must be porportionate to height.

11-11-44

Rates of Pay

Rates of pay in the corps are in accordance with rank. For officers, the salary range is from $150-$250 per month, plus allowance. Allowances range from $66-$96 per month in accordance with rank. The highest rank in the corps is that of Captain.

For Enlisted Personnel, the rate of pay ranges from $50-$138 per month, and in addition, maintenance. An allowance of $250 is made at the time of induction to supply the original

Notify AKA

The National Non-Partisan Council on Public Affairs of Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority, with headquarters at 961 Florida Avenue, N.W., Washington 1, D.C., is axious that recruits as they apply also send in a note to the AKA Council Headquarters stating when and where they have applied and furnishing the Council a statement of qualification. This procedure, the Council believes, will assist it greatly in facilitating an even more effectve job for Negro women in this and in other situations.

11-11-44

NAACP Takes Stand Against Segregated WAVE Training

Tribune—Washington, D.C.

10-28-44

In a statement regarding the Navy's plan for immediate commissioning of qualified Negro women in the Women's Naval Reserve, the NAACP said this week:

"The NAACP is pleased to learn that the ban against colored American women in the WAVES at long last has been abolished, a policy the Association has urged upon the Navy Department since the establishment of the WAVES in 1942. We trust that the announced plan of training Negro women in existing schools means no segregation and we hope that this policy will be extended to establish a new and more democratic principle in the American armed services by integration of colored WAVES into regular units instead of being assigned to jim crow ones. We further hope and urge that the United States Coast Guard and the Marine Corps will also open their doors on an unsegregated basis to qualified Negro women."

Our Women In The WAVES

Courier—Pittsburgh, Pa.

10-28-44

As the time for important elections approaches, we can always look for concessions to Negroes in an effort to attract a few more votes.

Just before the 1940 Presidential election, Colonel Benjamin O. Davis was promoted to Brigadier General, and then retired the following spring.

Now on the eve of the 1944 Presidential election the Navy Department has suddenly announced that Negro women will be accepted in the Women's Naval Reserve.

Nothing is said about the colored Waves being organized into jim-crow units, but since this has been the Roosevelt policy since the expansion of the armed forces began in 1940, there is no reason to suppose that there will be any change.

According to the Navy's order, the colored WAVES' officers will be trained in existing WAVES' schools, but nothing is said about whether they will be "honored" with separate barracks as at Fort Des Moines, the WAC officer training station.

The Navy Department is equally silent about the Coast Guard and Marine Corps opportunities for colored women.

Will the old jim-crow Navy situation obtain in these branches of that service?

However, whatever may be the reason for the admission of our women into the WAVES, we welcome the change in the Navy policy.

Our women will make good in the WAVES as they have in the WAC.

47-1944

FIRST NEGRO OFFICERS OF THE UNITED STATES NAVAL RESERVES (W)—WAVES to you. Lt. (jg) Harriet Pickens and Ensign Frances Wills, honor graduates from US Naval Reserve Midshipmen's School (WR) Northampton, Mass. last week. Home for the holidays, they will report for duty December 30 on the staff of Naval Training School at Hunter College in New York City—(Stovall foto).

No Jimcro In WAVES

12-30-44

Latest word this week from the WAVES boot training center at Hunter College in New York City, relative to housing and general treatment of Negro trainees expected to arrive December 28, is that there will be no discrimination. PV was informed that the story carried in last week's edition, denying the rumor of expected jimcro, still stands.

PV asked for a complete clarification inasmuch as its inquiry last week and the answer received related specifically to the new officers arriving from Smith College Officers' Training School, Lt. (jg) Harriet Pickens and Ensign Frances Wells. Lt. Helen Jacobs, former tennis champion, now in Hunter's publicity department, said the officers would arrive as members of the staff and would be treated as such. She, at that time, had no knowledge of Negro trainees arriving.

This week PV was informed that no word has come from Washington that would cause the United States Training School in the Bronx to change its position relative to the treatment of officer personnel or enlisted personnel. The Officer of the Day said Washington had informed the training center only that 1,600 trainees were to arrive on Dec. 28. No distinction was made as to who or how many were Negro.

Thursday, December 20, Lt. Pickens and Ensign Wells arrived in New York from Northampton, Mass. They will report for duty on the 29th. On a visit to PV, Lt. Pickens said her five weeks training at the US Naval Reserve Midshipmen's School was an entirely satisfactory experience. She was one of the three honor students of the graduating class. She said she enjoyed every advantage as an integrated part of the Navy. This was true she said from the moment she applied for admission until she left. Her living and recreational facilities were the same as any other student and she shared them equally.

Plan for Separate Train Ride Scored

12-30-44

Group from Chicago to Be Victims

NO REFUTATION

AFRO-American

Separation of People for Convenience Cited

By RICHARD R. DIER

NEW YORK — Neither the Navy Public Relations Office here nor Hunter College was able to verify or refute reports that fifty colored Waves, part of a contingent of one hundred from Chicago, were being discriminated against while traveling here.

Their lack of knowledge was revealed following the AFRO's investigation of a story printed by PM on December 21 that the women who are to arrive here on December 28 to begin training at the college would probably be separated from the white recruits.

"Our office here in New York has no knowledge of this segregation," Lieutenant Lockridge of the Public Relations Office, told the AFRO this week.

Chi's Stand Not Clear

"Certainly colored Waves are not going to be segregated at Hunter College, but we don't know just what Chicago at the other end is doing about it.

"However, sometimes when large groups of people are traveling it may be necessary to set colored and whites apart for convenience's sake only, but you can be sure that exactly the same accommodations are given to everyone, regardless of race."

Following his statement of the Navy stand, he communicated with Hunter College official, reporting later that "Hunter denies any knowledge of this segregation."

No ias at Hunter

"All they can say is that their orders are to treat all Waves alike when they arrive there for training and not to separate whites from colored," he added.

Sets Precedent

Lieutenant Lockridge's statement that segregation is necessary sometimes when large groups are traveling leaves the issue wide open. If it's necessary once it may be found so time and time again.

Despite the excuse that it is done for convenience, colored people know better. It's just another way to feed jim crow.

However, it is highly probable that WAVE recruitng headquarters in Chicago did not notify the Public Relations Office here of their intended actions. Perhaps they deem it too insignificant a matter.

12-30-44

Whites "Might Object"

At any rate, PM's story, the Chicago recruiting officer conceded that Naval officials were "discussing a policy on how to transport the colored girls" and they would probably be segregated because some white Waves "might object to mixed transportation."

If the Navy Department sticks to its policy of maintainng no jim-crow units at training centers but insists on segregation in traveling, there will be much trouble ahead.

No discrimination means exactly that in a respects. Can't afford to give an inch of ground, convenience notwithstanding.

WAVE Policies Of Bias Begin To Take Shape

N.Y. Amsterdam News

Jim Crow Train Ride For Negro Women Of Chicago Indication

12-30-44

Last week, it is reported that approximately fifty young women left Chicago under rather strange circumstances. As newly enlisted members of the WAVEs, they were to make the trip to New York to receive their basic training at Hunter College. According to WAVE recruiting headquarters in Chicago, they "will probably be segregated from the white recruits while on their way to New York".

The first Negro women to be enlisted in the corps from the 9th Naval district since the lifting of the ban which completely excluded them from this branch of the service, they are, it seems getting their first taste of Navy prejudice.

Trend Coming.

Although at the time the ban was lifted the Navy announced that there would be no jim crow units established in the training centers, officials are now hesitant to state whether or not Negro women will be placed in separate training units.

At the time the Negro women were to make the trip here, Naval officials were at a loss how they should be brought, and stated that they would no doubt be placed in a different car from that occupied by their white corps members, since "some of the white WAVES might object to mixed transportation."

When they arrive in the city, which will no doubt be shortly after this paper goes to press, they will be housed in the apartment houses adjoining Hunter College. However, no specific arrangement have been made, so it is impossible to determine whether they will be given separate quarters—so that whitee girls will not object.

Trains for WAVES

Baltimore, Md.

MISS CLEMENTINE FORSYTHE, daughter of Mrs. Mary Forsythe, 27 Waumbeck Street, Roxbury, Mass., reported on December 28 at Hunter College, New York City, for training as an apprentice seaman in the WAVES. She is a graduate of Roxbury Memorial High School and was employed, until recently, in the Navy Department, Washington, D. C. There are three boys and four girls in her family and two of her brothers are in the armed services. Miss Forsythe's hobbies are horseback riding and reading.

Three Negro Women Sworn Into WAVES

Reformer—Houston Post

1-18-44

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Three Negro women, including two officer candidates and one enlisted recruit, were sworn into the women's reserve in Boston and New York City, Monday Morning, Nov. 13, under a Navy department plan, approved by the President for the acceptance of Negro women into the WAVES.

The first Negro woman in the first naval district to complete her application and be sworn into the women's reserves was Miss Jane A. Freeman, 22, of 164 Walnut ave., Rexbury, Mass. She was sworn into the service as an enlisted WAVE at 8 a. m. Monday by Captain L. D. Causey, USN retired director of the office of Naval Offider Procurement at Boston.

Two hours later in New York City, two other Negro women were sworn into the service as Apprentice Seaman and Officer Candidates by the first Negro enlisted WAVE in Lt. Rosamond D. Selle at 33 Pine street. They were Miss Harriet Ida Pickens 35, of 260 West 139 street, and Miss Frances Eliza Wills, 28, of 315 west 118th street, both of New York City.

Miss Pickens and Miss Wills were scheduled to report to Smith college for training. Miss Pickens will be commissioned Lieutenant Junior Grade; and Miss Wills will be commissioned an Ensign. Miss Freeman, missing two officer candidates and one enlisted WAVE in Reserve in Boston and New York City, Monday, under a War plan approved by the President for the acceptance of

One of 3 New WAVES Had Civil War Kin

Tribune Washington, D.C.

Seaman Is Great-Niece of Negro Hero

Three Negro women, including two officer candidates and one enlisted recruit, were sworn into the Women's Reserve in Boston and New York City, Monday, under a War plan approved by the President for the acceptance of colored women into the WAVES

First Naval District to complete her application and be sworn into the Women's Reserve was Miss Jane A. Freeman, 22, of Roxbury, Mass., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas T. Freeman. Miss Freeman states that in the Civil War her grandfather, Abraham Fennon, was in the Navy.

Two Have Degrees

11-25-44

A few hours after she was sworn in, two others took the oath as apprentice seamen and officer candidates. They are: Miss Harriet I. Pickens, 35, and Miss Frances E. Willis, 28, both of New York. They were expected to report at Smith College on Wednesday for training. Miss Freeman will be one of the first group of Negro recruits to enter "boot" training at Hunter College, about January 1.

Miss Pickens has an A.B. cum laude from Smith and did graduate work at Columbia, 1930-35, no degree. She was born in Talladega, Ala. Miss Willis has an A.B. from Hunter and a M.S. from the University of Pittsburgh.

First Negro WAVE Sworn In

Amsterdam News — New York, N.Y.

11-25-44

THE FIRST WOMAN to be sworn into the Women's Reserve, under the Navy Department plan approved by the President, for the acceptance of Negro women into the WAVES, was Miss Jean A. Freeman, 22, of 164 Walnut Avenue, Roxbury, Mass. She was sworn into the service as an enlisted WAVE on Monday, November 13th, by Captain L. D. Causey, USN retired, Director of the Office of Naval Officer Procurement at Boston, Mass.—Official U. S. Navy photo from OWI.

First Waves Sworn In

Tribune — Philadelphia, Pa. 11-25-44

Left: The first woman to be sworn into the Women's Reserve, under the Navy Department plan approved by the President, for the acceptance of colored women into the WAVES, was Miss JEAN A. FREEMAN, 22, of 164 Walnut avenue, Roxbury, Mass. She was sworn into the service as an enlisted WAVE at 8 a. m. on November 13 by Captain L. D. Causey, USN retired, Director of the Office of Naval Officer Procurement at Boston, Mass. —(Official U. S. Navy Photo from OWI.) 11-25-44

Right: MISS FRANCES WILLS, 26, of 315 west 113th street (left), and MISS HARRIET IDA PICKENS, 35, of 260 west 139th street, both of New York City, being sworn into the Waves as apprentice seamen by Lt. Rosamond D. Selle, USNR, Officer-in-Charge of the Women's Reserve Department of the office of Naval Procurement at 33 Pine Street, New York City. They are the first colored women to be sworn into the WAVES. Both reported to the U. S. Naval Reserve Midshipman's School at Northampton, Mass., for training. Upon successful completion of the training courses, they will be commissioned as officers in the Women's Reserve. —(Official U. S. Naval Photo from OWI.)

No WAVE Jim Crow in Plans at Hunter College

Afro American — Baltimore, Md.

12-16-44

By RICHARD DIER

NEW YORK—The Navy Department has no present plans of segregating colored enlisted Waves and will allow them the same privileges and freedom accorded white members of this service.

This information was given to the AFRO this week by the Navy Public Relations Office at 90 Church Street.

The naval officer, who preferred to remain unidentified, stated that there were few enlistments so far and that Captain Ansden, commanding officer of Waves enlistment, had no plans to discriminate because of color.

"As far as I know," he said, "colored enlisted Waves will be treated the same as colored officers in Northampton, where there is absolutely no segregation."

Confirmed by Lt. Jacobs

Asked whether such practices had already been put into effect at the Hunter College Naval Training School, he referred the AFRO to Lt. Helen Jacobs who is in charge there. 12-16-44

Lieutenant Jacobs, better known as the many-times, women's national tennis champion, confirmed the statements by saying that she is in receipt of no orders to segregate or discriminate.

"Right now, we have no colored Waves here yet, but understand one or two are on the way down here. I shall treat them the same way I do anybody else when they arrive. Captain Ansden has not told me to do any differently."

"Secret Plans" Scouted

Whether the Navy Department is now laying plans, not as yet revealed, to segregate colored enlisted Waves is a matter of conjecture. It is hoped that such erstwhile planning will not be forthcoming.

If it does, there will be a heap of trouble since it is contrary to New York State laws. This will be a time when the colored people have the law on their side.

No 'Waves' Will Be Sent To Posts Housing Negroes

9-9-44

Defender — Chicago, Ill.

NEW YORK—No WAVES will be assigned to Naval Stations housing large numbers of Negro sailors, according to a directive just uncovered by the national office NAACP.

The directive in the form of a memorandum under date of March 6, 1944, and signed by Lt. W. M. Wilson, U. S. Naval Air Station, Whidbey Island, Washington reads as follows:

"SUBJ.: Correspondence involving WAVES—official paragraph to be used.

"1. Following is a sample paragraph to be used in official station correspondence whenever it is necessary to discuss the possibility of bringing WAVE personnel aboard.

"However, it is not now considered practicable to assign WAVES to this isolated station, for the following reasons: (1) There are approximately four hundred (400) general service and rated Negro personnel aboard the station, and the nearest Negro community is ninety (90) miles distant; (2) There are no living quarters available for WAVES; (3) There are no recreational facilities suitable for WAVES." 9-9-44

"2. This memorandum is to be kept in your files. It is not to be bulletined or even left lying around.

In a letter to James V. Forrestall, Secretary of the Navy, Walter White, NAACP secretary said, "This Association wishes to inquire whether the above memorandum was based upon the individual judgment of Lt. Wilson or whether it represents the policy of the Navy."

47j-1944

Waves

Navy to Admit Negro Women Into WAVES

Pm — New York, N.Y.

Plan OKd by FDR

Leaves Some Questions Unanswered

10-20-44

The Navy Dept. last night announced that President Roosevelt had approved a plan for acceptance of Negro women in the Women's Naval Reserve.

On the surface, the announcement appeared to be another victory in the fight to end discrimination against Negroes in the Navy but the brief statement left several important questions unanswered.

Among them were:

¶ Will the Coast Guard and the Marine Corps, both branches of the Navy, continue their practice of banning Negro women?

¶ Will the Negro women in the WAVES be trained and used as separate Jim Crow units or will they be integrated into regular units?

The Navy statement, which consisted of 12 typewritten lines, said that the plan, prepared by the Navy, calls for the immediate commissioning of a limited number of specially qualified Negro women to serve as administrative officers and to assist in further planning and supervision of the program for Negro women which will be administered as an integral part of the WAVES.

10-20-44

The Navy said that present indications are that the first recruits will enter training shortly after Jan. 1, that the number of enlisted personnel will be determined by the needs of the service, and that existing WAVE schools will be utilized for training officer candidates and enlisted women.

Negro Sailors

Two years ago, the Navy shelved its policy of barring Negroes from the service except as mess attendants and began accepting Negro men for general service. A Selective Service processing system was set up at that time under which the Navy was assigned one white man for every 4.4 sent to the Army and one Negro for every 10.5 who enter the Army, but on a Jim-Crow basis.

10-20-44

Immediately after that victory, various organizations started a campaign to open the doors of Naval service to women regardless of race. Navy spokesmen admitted there was no regulation banning Negro women, arguing (as late as May, 1943) that inasmuch as the Navy had not sent any large body of Negro men to sea, it did not need Negro WAVES or SPARS to replace them.

Hail Negro Women In WAVES as FDR Blow at Jimcrow

Daily Worker — New York, N.Y.

10-21-44

Welcoming the admission of Negro women into the WAVES as "another major achievement under the Roosevelt administration," Mrs. Ada B. Jackson, candidate for director for the Negro Labor Victory Committee, said Moran Weston, field

10-21-44

State Assembly in Brooklyn's 17th A. D., joined with other Negro leaders yesterday in praising this latest blow against Jimcrow in the armed services.

Mrs. Jackson's statement followed the Navy's announcement that President Roosevelt had approved a plan calling for the acceptance of Negro women into the Women's Naval Reserve and for the commissioning of qualified Negro women to serve as administrative officers. These women will in turn plan for the full integration of other Negro girls into the WAVES.

According to the Navy, the first group of women will begin training soon after Jan. 1, and other recruits —not officers but enlisted personnel —will be admitted as the service requires. Existing WAVE schools will be used for training officer candidates and enlisted women.

President Roosevelt's approval, as part of his systematic policy to eliminate Jimcrow, is another guarantee that the kind of progress made toward freedom and equality during the past 12 years will continue only with the reelection of FDR and his ticket.

JIMCROW SHELL CRACKED

Weston added:

"The breaking down of this barrier is further proof that the shell of Jimcrow in America has cracked for good and that all the 'white supremacist' horses and all the 'white supremacist' men cannot put it together again. It shows that we can make a 'new world a'coming' come faster with President Roosevelt in the White House."

Mrs. Mabel Staupers, executive secretary of the National Association for Colored Graduate Nurses and a leader in the fight which finally broke the Jimcrow barrier against Negro Army nurses, said:

"This is a signal victory for those organizations and individuals who have continued their fight for full participation of Negroes in the war effort. However, these groups need to be alert in order that these women, when trained, become fully integrated into the service and not assigned to segregated units."

MRS. MABEL STAUPERS

10-21-44

Tells Why No Negro 'WAVES'

Courier — Pittsburgh Pa.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(ANP)—The reluctance o the Navy Department to ac cept Negro women into th WAVES is based upon an unwill ingness to undertake an experi ment within an experiment, ac cording to Capt. Mildred H. Mc Afee, commanding officer of th Women's Reserve.

6-3-44

The establishment of the Wom en's Reserve, entailing the use o women in large numbers in th Navy, she wrote Rep. Mary T Norton (Dem., New Jersey), "wa in the nature of an experiment In its study of the problems in volved in enlisting Negro wome in the Reserve, the department ha considered the fact that such a de parture would introduce into th WAVES' program a further ele ment of experimentation."

MANY NEGRO INQUIRIES

Representative Norton had called the matter to the attention of Captain McAfee in April, when she had received so many inquiries from Negro women in her own district and from other parts of the country, she said. She disclosed her correspondence with the WAVES director, Thursday.

Captain McAfee's first reply to Mrs. Norton cited the fact that women are used to replace males for sea duty, to which the Congresswoman replied that she failed to see how "the question of men for sea duty would effect the matter of recruitment of Waves since there ar__any jobs being done by white men eligible for sea duty which could easily be handled b colored Waves."

6-8-44

AWAITING NECESSITY

While the department is prepared to undertake such an experiment when it has been established that the services of Negro women are needed, Captain McAfee answered, "There does not exist at this time a clear necessity for their enlistment.

"This is demonstrated by the fact that the Navy has met all of its quotas for the enlistment and procurement of Waves, which quotas have been based on periodic surveys of the needs of the service for the number and type of replacement that can be made among male personnel."

6-3-44

Mrs. Thomasina Walker Johnson, representative for the AKA Non-Partisan Council on Public Affairs, was expecting to discuss the problem with Navy Secretary James E. Forrestal this week.

WAVE Jim Crow Given "Attention"

Afro-American Baltimore, Md.

WASHINGTON

Secretary of the Navy James Forrestall is giving his "serious attention" to the admission of colored women into the Waves, Spars, and Marines, according to a letter written last week by Lieut. Com. Mildred MacAfee of the Waves to Mrs. Thomasina W. Johnson of the AKA Non-Partisan Council.

8-12-44

The letter was in response to a five-page memorandum sent by the AKA Council to the Secretary of the Navy suggesting specific procedure by which colored women can be integrated into the navy's auxiliary services.

In addition to Miss MacAfee's letter, the AKA received a reply from Rear Admiral L. E. Denfield, assistant chief of the Bureau of Navy Personnel, which stated:

"Your comments and recommendations on these subjects (admission of colored women) are appreciated. The navy personnel which has been studying the matter is thinking along the same lines and is interested to have this succinct and practical formulation of your point of view."

A. K. A. COUNCIL'S ACTIVITY BRINGS COMMENDABLE ---RESULTS---

The Union — Cincinnati, Ohio

8-10-44

Washington — Secretary of the Navy James Forrestall is giving his "serious attention" to the admission of Negro women into the Waves, Spars and Marines according to a letter written by Lieut. Commander

Mildred MacAfee of the Waves to Mrs. Thomasina W. Johnson of the AKA Non-Partisan Council.

The letter was in response to a five page memorandum sent by the AKA Council to the Secretary of the Navy suggesting specific procedure by addition to Miss MacAfee's letter, the AKA Council received a reply the same lines and is interested to have this succinct and practical formulation of your point of view."

ed into the Navy's auxiliary services. "Your comments and recommendations on these subjects (admission of Council dispatched a telegram to Waves, celebrated recently, the AKA Secretary Forrestall stating: "There Navy personnel which has been could be no finer celebration than studying the matter is thinking along to start the third year of the Waves than be removing the "For White Only' sgn and making it a truly democratic organization."

Coast Guard Accepts Negro WAVES Program

But Marines Lag Behind New Navy Policy

PM—New York, N.Y. 10-22-44

By ELIZABETH DONAHUE
PM's Bureau

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—The Coast Guard—but not the Marines—has already agreed to follow the Navy's new policy of accepting Negro women in its reserve units.

Within 24 hours after the Navy announced that Negro women will be accepted in the WAVES, the Coast Guard (which like the Marines is an official branch of the Navy) consented to adopt the Navy's policy as approved by the President.

Although Congress established the WAVES and the Women's Reserve of the Marine Corps in the same legislative act, the Marines refused to disclose whether they will broaden their program to include Negro reservists.

Meanwhile Navy officials assert that there will be no Jim Crow units established in the training centers for the newly recruited WAVES personnel. 10-22-44

Reluctant

But these same officials were reluctant to disclose whether Negro women will be separated from other WAVES and placed in separate outfits after their training is completed.

Other details of the plan are also being withheld pending recruitment of Negro women officers to help complete the program which will not go into operation until after Jan. 1.

The Navy's brief announcement disclosing that the racial barriers in the WAVES have at last been abolished, came two years after the Department shelved its policy of excluding Negro men from all but a few service jobs. 10-22-44

The Department offered no explanation for shifting its policy in regard to the WAVES except to say that the matter "has been under consideration for a long time." Previously officials have insisted that there was no room for Negro women replacements as to substantial number of Negro men had been sent overseas.

Navy Lets Down Color Bars; WAVES, SPARS Now Open to Negro Recruits

Tribune—Washington, D.C.
10-28-44

The 19th of October will be a memorable day in the annals of Negro womanhood's fight for justice and democracy, and a day to which the Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority can point with pride for it was this day that they were rewarded for their untiring efforts to break down the color bars in the United States Navy Auxiliary, the WAVES and the Coast Guard Auxiliary, the SPARS.

This is the day that President Roosevelt approved a plan submitted by the Navy Department providing for the acceptance of Negro women in the Women's Reserve of the Navy.

The plan calls for the immediate commissioning of a limited number of especially qualified Negro women to serve as administrative officers. They will assist in the subsequent planning and supervision of the program for Negro women which will be administered as an integral part of the Women's Reserve.

Enlistment of Negro women will be undertaken as soon as these plans have been completed and it is presently indicated that the first recruits will enter training shortly after January 1.

Officer candidates and enlisted women will be trained at existing schools for the training of WAVES. The number to be enlisted will be determined by the needs of the service, the announcement states.

Leaders Rejoice

The smashing of the color bar in the WAVES and the SPARS by President Roosevelt was enthustiatically acclaimed by Negro leaders from all over America. 10-28-44

The fact that "officer candidates and enlisted women will be trained at existing schools for the training of WAVES" represents a double victory in that segregated training will not be permitted.

Typical of the sentiment of the Negro people over the shattering of the color bar in the Navy's auxiliary services are the following statements from national Negro men and women leaders:

Beachhead

Mrs. Beulah Whitby, president of the Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority, declared: "This order from the Commander-in-Chief that opens the auxiliary services of the Navy to Negro women is a beachhead in the battle for democracy.

"This move is especially gratifying to the Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority. Franklin Delano Roosevelt is to be commended for the strength and courage to issue this order." 10-28-44

Mrs. Bethune Speaks

Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune, president of the National Council of Negro Women, stated: "It is the thing we have been working for."

"Special commendation is due the Non-Partisan Council of the AKA for their untiring efforts in bringing this about."

Dawson

Cong. William L. Dawson declared: "Once more the President proves to all America that he is a true champion of the democratic principle of equality of opportunity. Step by step he is cutting through the prejudice and discrimination which has barred the way for Negro advancement." 10-28-44

Triumph

Mrs. Thomasina Johnson, former executive secretary of the AKA Non-Partisan Council, stated: "The decision of the President to admit Negro women to the WAVES and SPARS is a triumph for democracy. President Roosevelt has gallanty prepared the way for the further advancement of Negro women."

Shepard

Dr. Marshall Shepard, recently appointed Recorder of Deeds and nationally known Philadelphia minister, declared: "This order by President Roosevelt marks another forward step in the President's program toward the full integration of the Negro into the armed forces."

Powell Hails It

Congressman-elect Adam Powell of New York stated: "This order opening the WAVES and SPARS, represents democracy in action." 10-28-44

Mrs. Marjorie Joyner, vice president of the Madame C. J. Walker Manufacturing Company, declared: "All over America Negro women are applauding the forward step taken by President Roosevelt in lowering the color barriers in the WAVES and SPARS."

Club Women

Mrs. Rosa Gragg, nationally known club women, and president of the Detroit Association of Women's Clubs, stated: "President Roosevelt has struck another blow at discrimination. It is a natural consequence of his long-held policy of non-discrimination." 10-28-44

Judge Joseph Rainey of Philadelphia's Magistrate Court, declared: "The opening of the WAVES and SPARS to Negro women is consistent with the precedent-shattering record of President Roosevelt."

WOMEN

Negro WAVES

Time—Chicago, Ill.

The bar that was first lowered two years ago to allow Negroes into general service in the Navy was finally dropped altogether. Last week the Navy announced that it would accept Negro women in the WAVES. 10-30-44

Notable feature of the new program is that the Negroes will be trained and may even be billeted with whites, will probably be mixed in for assignment.

Recruiting will begin with the immediate commissioning of a small number (probably five to ten) of administrative officers. They will be trained at the WAVES officer-candidate school at Smith College, Northampton, Mass., will then be assigned to assist in general enlistment and training, beginning soon after January 1. The total number of Negro WAVES will depend on the "needs of the service" will probably not be large.

After hearing the Navy's announcement, the Coast Guard, usually the most liberal branch of service with regard to Negroes, promptly followed suit with a similar plan for the SPARs. The Marine Corps said it had all the women marines it needed, except for replacements. 10-30-44

TIME, OCTOBER 30, 1944

JOINS THE WAVES

Tribune—Philadelphia, Pa. 12-23-44

Miss KATHERINE DUFF, 25, of 727 north Union street, who was recently sworn into the WAVES as an officers candidate. She is scheduled to report to Smith College for training with the next group leaving here and will be commissioned an ensign upon the successful completion of that course.

Miss Duff, who is the daughter of the Rev. Garner V. Duff of Lewistown, Pa., is a former employee of the quartermaster Depot and attended California and Cheyney State Teachers' Colleges.

47j-1944

Waves

Segregation In WAVES?

Negroes 'Will Probably' Be Separated From Whites on Trip

PM

About 50 Negro WAVES, part of a contingent of 100 young women coming here from Chicago on Dec. 28 for training at Hunter College, "will probably be segregated from the white recruits while on their way to New York," according to WAVE recruiting headquarters in Chicago.

The Negro recruits are the first to be taken into the service in the 9th Naval District since the Navy Dept. lifted its ban on Negroes in the Women's Naval Reserve in October.

When the Navy lifted its ban on Negro WAVES it announced that there would be no Jim Crow units established in the training centers for the newly recruited personnel.

But the same officials were hesitant to disclose whether Negro women would be separated from other WAVES and placed in separate outfits after completing training.

The recruiting officer conceded that naval officials were "discussing a policy on how to transport the Negro girls," and said they would probably be segregated "for the reason that some of the white WAVES might object to mixed transportation."

"They will come on the same train, but probably in their own coach," the officer said, adding that the Negro reservists were very happy about being in the service and "wouldn't know how they were to be shipped here."

Comdr. Edison Dick of the Navy Dept. in Chicago would say only: "Military troop movements aren't announced."

The Negro reservists will be quartered in the apartment houses adjoining Hunter College, where WAVES are now housed, but no specific arrangements have been made yet.

Three Join Waves' Boston Girl First

The Guardian Boston Mass

MISS JANE FREEMAN OF ROXBURY
First recruit to be enrolled in the WAVES

11-18-44

The first colored woman in the First Naval District to complete her application and be sworn into the Women's Reserve was Miss Jane A. Freeman, 164 Walnut ave, Roxbury, Mass. She was sworn into the service as an enlisted WAVE at 8 A. M., Monday, Nov. 13 by Capt. L. D. Causey, USN retired, Director of the Office of Naval Officer Procurement at Boston.

Miss Freeman is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas T. Freemanof Roxbury, Mass. She attended Roxbury Memorial High School, graduating in 1940. While in school, she was drill leader, on the ring committee, and on the senior council. She has been employed as an inspector by the Dewey and Almy Chemical Company. Navy life will not be entirely new to Miss Freeman. She states that in the Civil War her grandfather, Abaham Fenno, was in the Navy. She will be one of the first group of colored recruits to enter "boot" training at Hunter College, Ne wYork City, about Jan. 1, 1945.

Miss Freemon was born in Boston, and both of her parents are natives of Massachusetts. She is a member of St. Joseph's Church, Roxbury, an avid reader and bowling is her favorite sport In the family are three other daughters and one brother who has been in the Merchant Marine several years. The first New England WAVE is exceedingly charming, soft-voiced and possesses remarkable poise for one so young.

Two hours after Miss Freeman was swon in, two other colored women were sworn into the service in New York City as apprentice seaman and officer candidates by Lt. R. D. Selle at [illegible] Pine st. They were Miss [illegible]rriet I. Pickens, 260 West 139th st, and Miss Frances Wills, 515 West 779th st, both of New York City.

Miss Pickens and Miss Wills were scheduled report to Smith College for training on Nov. 15. Upon successful completion of training, Miss Pickens will be commissioned Lieut. (j.g.) and Miss Wills will be commissioned an ensign.

Miss Pickens, born in Talladega, Ala., graduated from Smith College in 1930 with an A.B. degree cum laude and did graduate work at Columbia University from 1930 to 1933. From Sept. 1931 to June 1932, she was an instructor at Bennett Colleg efor Women in Greensboro. From 1934 to 1939, she was a project supervisor under the recreational program for WPA in New York City. From June 1939 to the present, she was executive secretary of the Harlem Tuberculosis and Health Committee in New York City.

Miss Wills graduated from Hunter College in 1938 with a B.A. degree. In 1943 she received a M.S. from the University of Pittsburgh, in biology, social administration, speech and dramatics. From 1936 to 1940, she worked in the employment department of the Y.W.C.A., New York City. From February 1940 to September 1941, she was a secretary in the New York Protestant Episcopal Mission Society. Since November 15 last year, she has been a case worker for the State Charities Aid Association in New York City. This work is primarily devoted to investigation of families in connection with child adoption. Miss Wills was born in Philadelphia, Pa.

First WAVES Sworn In Monday In Boston, N. Y.

11-17-44

Roxbury, Mass. Young Woman Is First Of Race

WASHINGTON — (OWI) — Three Negro women, including two officer candidates and one enlisted recruit, were sworn into the Women's Reserve in Boston and New York City, Monday morning, November 13, under a Navy Department plan, approved by the President, for the acceptance of Negro women into the WAVES.

The first Negro woman in the First Naval District to complete her application and be sworn into the Women's Reserves was Miss Jane A. Freeman, 22, of 164 Walnut avenue, Roxbury, Mass. She was sworn into the service as an Enlisted WAVE at 8 a. m. Monday by Chaplain L. D. Causey, USN Retired. Director of the Office of Naval Officers Procurement at Boston.

Two hours later in New York City two other Negro women were sworn into the service as Apprentice Seamen and Officer Candidates by Lt. Rosamond D. Selle at 3 Pine street. Tthey were Miss Hariett Ida Pickens 35, of 260 West 139th Street and Miss Frances Eliza Wills 28, of 315 West 113th Street, both of New York City.

Miss Pickens and Miss Wills were scheduled to report to Smith College for training on November 15. Upon successful completion of training, Miss Pickens will be commissioned Lieutenant (jg) and Miss Wills will be commissioned an Ensign. Miss Freeman, the first Negro enlisted WAVE in the New England area, will be one of the first group of Negro recruits to enter "boot" training at Hunter College, New York City, about January 1, 1945.

To Train At Hunter

Call [illegible] And Smith

Two Officer Candidates,

One Recruit

11-17-44

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Three Negro women, including two officer candidates and one enlisted recruit, were sworn into the Women's Reserve of the Navy in Boston and New York City, Monday morning, Nov. 13, under a Navy department plan approved by the President for the acceptance of Negro women into the WAVES.

The first Negro woman in the First Naval district to complete her application and be shown Women's Reserve was Miss Freeman, 22, of 164 Walnut ave., Roxbury, Mass. She was sworn into the service as an enlisted WAVE at 8 a. m. Monday by Capt. L. D. Causey, USN retired, director of the office of Procurement at Boston. Two hours later in New York city, two other Negro women were sworn into the service as apprentice seamen and officer candidates by Lt. Rosamond D. Selle at 33 Pine St. They were Miss Harriet Ida Pickens, 35, of 260 West 139th St., and Miss Frances Eliza Wills, 28, of 315 West 113th St., both of New York city.

Miss Pickens and Miss Wills were scheduled to report to Smith college for training on November 15. Upon successful completion of training, Miss Pickens will be commissioned Lieutenant (JG); and Miss Wills will be commissioned an Ensign.

Miss Freeman, the first Negro enlisted WAVE in the New England area, will be one of the first group of Negro recruits to enter "boot" training at Hunter college, New York City, about January 1, 1945.

Afro American — Baltimore, Md.

NA58/A2-5(4)
11/GL

U. S. NAVAL AIR STATION
WHIDBEY ISLAND, WASHINGTON

6 MARCH 1944

MEMORANDUM TO ALL DEPARTMENT HEADS

SUBJ: CORRESPONDENCE INVOLVING WAVES-OFFICIAL PARAGRAPH TO BE USED.

8-19-44

1. FOLLOWING IS A SAMPLE PARAGRAPH TO BE USED IN OFFICIAL STATION CORRESPONDENCE WHENEVER IT IS NECESSARY TO DISCUSS THE POSSIBILITY OF BRINGING WAVE PERSONNEL ABOARD.

"HOWEVER, IT IS NOT NOW CONSIDERED PRATICABLE TO ASSIGN WAVES TO THIS ISOLATED STATION, FOR THE FOLLOWING REASONS: (1) THERE ARE APPROXIMATELY FOUR HUNDRED (400) GENERAL SERVICE AND RATED NEGRO PERSONNEL ABOARD THE STATION, AND THE NEAREST NEGRO COMMUNITY IS NINETY (90) MILES DISTANT; (2) THERE ARE NO LIVING QUARTERS AVAILABLE FOR WAVES; (3) THERE ARE NO RECREATIONAL FACILITIES SUITABLE FOR WAVES."

2. THIS MEMORANDUM IS TO BE KEPT IN YOUR FILES. IT IS NOT TO BE BULLETINED OR EVEN LEFT LYING AROUND.

W. M. WILSON
LIEUTENANT, USNR,
ACTING EXECUTIVE OFFICER.

DISTRIBUTION:
LIST 1.

No White WAVES with Colored Seamen Present

Afro American — Baltimore, Md.

8-19-44

WHIDBEY ISLAND, Wash. — No WAVES will be assigned to this station because of the presence of 400 colored men, according to Lt. W. N. Wilson, acting executive officer.

According to Wilson, the nearest colored community is ninety miles distant.

The inference is that white women wouldn't be safe on this station with colored troops; or it might express Wilson's fear that some of the white WAVES would be dated by colored seamen.

Secrecy Precaution

Here is a copy of his order which Wilson said was not to be "posted or even left lying around":

NA58/A2-5 (4)
11/GL

U.S. Naval Air Station
Whidbey Island, Wash.
March 6, 1944

Memorandum to All Department Heads

Subj: Correspondence involving WAVES-official paragraph to be used.

8-19-44

1. Following is a sample paragraph to be used in official station correspondence whenever it is necessary to discuss the possibility of bringing WAVE personnel aboard.

"However, it is not now considered practicable to assign WAVES to this isolated station for the following reasons: (1) There are approximately four hundred (400) general service and rated colored personnel aboard the station, and the nearest colored community is ninety (90) miles distant; (2) there are no living quarters available for WAVES; (3) there are no recreational facilities suitable for WAVES."

2. This memorandum is to be kept in your files. It is not to be bulletined or even left lying around.

S/ W. M. WILSON
Lieutenant, USNR
Acting Executive Officer.

Distribution:
List 1.

"Act of Treachery"

Asked how he felt after having this order read to him, one of the seamen told the AFRO: "I don't feel conservative in the least. I would like to cool off a little. This is the kind of thing that is being done to us every day. It is an act of treachery.

8-19-44

"Just now we are American seamen in name only. There are many of us who feel as I do."

47k-1944

St. Louis Pilot Greeted By Mayor On Return Home

Defender — Chicago, Ill.
12-9-44

ST. LOUIS—(ANP) — With a flight record of 70 missions to his credit, Capt. Wendell O. Pruitt, 24 years old and the first Negro fighter pilot from St. Louis to return home on leave after combat duty, can boast a visit to the mayor's office last week when he was congratulated for his outstanding achievements.

Sharing honors with a co-pilot for sinking an enemy desfroyer, Capt. Pruitt quietly told Mayor Aloys D. Kauffman how their bullets struck and exploded a powder magazine. Added to his record also was the shooting down of three enemy planes and destruction of eight ground planes.

Modestly describing his successes as "just a lucky hit," when the mayor called the sinking of the destroyer a fine piece of work, Capt. Pruitt was advised that a special day would be proclaimed in his honor on December 12.

"The going got pretty rough at times," Pruitt stated, 'but I'm fortunate in not having been sick or injured during my nine and one-half months overseas."

The young pilot's flights took him to the Italian area where several bullet holes were shot in his ship, a P-51 Mustang, but he was uninjured. Before returning to the United States he had flown 70 missions.

12-9-44

His plane was named the "Alice Jo," after the girl friend of his squadron leader and his own girl friend, Miss Alice Charlston of Detroit, whom he plans to marry when the war has ended. Miss Charlston is likewise a pilot.

Capt. Pruitt, son of Mrs. Melanie C. Pruitt of St. Louis attended Lincoln university at the time of his enlistment. He is the possessor of the Distinguished Flying Cross and the Air Medal with four oak leaf clusters.

12-9-44

When the mayor asked if there was anything the city could do for him durin his furlough, Capt. Pruitt answered "No," and added that he just wanted plenty of rest.

Officer Suicide

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

BY STAFF CORRESPONDENT

CAMP LEE, Va.—First Lieut. Tyler E. Hill, Jr., of Lynchburg, Va., said to be over-wrought because of recent difficulties encountered in the service, committed suicide early Sunday morning, according to Army authorities at this post.

The limp body of the 29-year-old lieutenant, who was recently transferred from Fort Benning, Ga., was found dangling in a latrine of an officers' barracks, where he allegedly hanged himself with a Sam Browne belt.

Except to say that the officer met his death by suicide, military authorities at this post refused to reveal any details of the tragedy.

6-3-44

Relatives Doubt Report

However, relatives of Lieut. Hill, reached in Lynchburg, said they were not satisfied with the report as given out by Army spokesmen and added that they would issue a statement later.

They would not amplify this to the extent as to state whether they suspected foul play or whether they would demand an investigation.

It was rumored that Hill had been under observation as a mental patient and had encountered trouble at Fort Benning, where he accumulated heavy debts. Whether this was to be linked as a cause for his death remains a matter of speculation.

The officer entered the service in 1941, and two years ago at Camp Lee he was commissioned second lieutenant after graduating from the officer candidate school. He was assigned to a quartermaster unit.

6-3-44

He attended West Virginia State and N.C. State Colleges and the Robert E. Terrell Law School in Washington.

Was Married

He married Miss Bernice Lomax, teacher at Dunbar High School of Lynchburg, who lives at 1307 Floyd Street, in the same city.

The mother of the soldier, Mrs. J. A. Armstrong, is living in Charleston, W.Va.

Funeral services were scheduled to be held Wednesday at the Wilson funeral chapel in Lynchburg.

2 Promoted to Major In 93rd Infantry

Courier — Kansas City, Mo.
11-24-44

WITH THE 93rd INFANTRY DIVISION IN THE SOUTHWEST PACIFIC AREA. — Captain Richard E. Evers, of Itasca, Texas, and Captain Harry C. Fields, Jr., of Springfale, Arkansas, have been promoted to major, it was announced in the 93rd Infantry Division.

The announcement said that Major Evers promotion was the result of meritorious service in operations against the enemy. Major Fields is plane and training officer of his unit.

Second Lieutenant LeRoy A. Brown, of 1556 Mill street, Augusta, Georgia, was promoted to first lieutenant, while Winifred A. Hembry, of Lewisville, Texas, was appointed warrant officer (junior grade) in the field of ordnance supply.

Ex-Teacher Elevated in N. Guinea Port Unit

Afro-American
Balt., Md.
5-27-44

SOMEWHERE IN NEW GUINEA—Lt. Fred P. Freeman, 39, former Philadelphia school teacher, is now executive officer of a port battalion at one of General MacArthur's largest forward bases.

In addition, the lieutenant is summary court officer for his battalion. Lt. Freeman, although in the army only eighteen months, earned a commission at OCS in Australia. Later he was sent to New Guinea for his present assignment.

A graduate of the University of Pennsylvania, Lt. Freeman received an AB degree in chemistry, and his master's degree in education. His parents live at 2109 Master Street, Philadelphia.

Cadet Graduates From West Point

Defender — Chicago, Ill.
6-17-44

WEST POINT, N. Y.—Cadet Henry M. Francis of Washington was graduated from West Point with the rank of second lieutenant in a class of 478 three hours after hearing the D-Day news flash. Lt. Francis is in the Field Artillery and after three months furlough, will report to Fort Sill, Okla.

The newly commissioned officer was greeted by his parents, Dr. and Mrs John R. Francis; his sweetheart, Miss Doris Hall, and his sister, Mrs. Betty West, all of Washington.

The three colored cadets left at West Point are Ernie J. Davis, first class, of Washington, now at Tuskegee in the air corps; Mark E. Rivers, of New York, first class, and Andrew A. McCoy of Pittsubrgh, third class.

Archie Williams with Army weather wing

Tribune-Times Angeles Calif.
11-13-44

ASHEVILLE, N. C.—Lt. Archie Williams, who set the present world's record for the 440 meter run as an undergraduate at the University of California, is now serving with the AAF Weather Service at Asheville, N. C., of which Tuskegee AAF is a unit. Prior to entering the Army in November, 1942, Lt. Williams was a flying instructor at the Oakland Flying Service and later worked in the division of aeronautics at Tuskegee Institute.

FULL COLONEL

Informer — Houston, Texas 7-8-44

The article in the papers a little while ago which told of the promotion of former Lt. Col. B. O. Davis, Jr. to the rank of full colonel made us all glad. We know that he deserves the rank and we are naturally happy to see him accorded his due. We also know with regret that, were he a white man or a man of any other race than the Negro race, he would doubtless now have a much higher rank than colonel. The same is true of his father, who is the only Negro to occupy a rank higher than colonel, namely, brigadier general. It is to America's shame that Negro officers are all held down to the lower ranks, while so many officers of other races, but who have no greater merit, are constantly appointed to the higher ranks

First Bombardiers Class

Tribune — Philadelphia, Pa.

11-18-44

Shown are four Philadelphia men who were members of the first colored class to be graduated from the Midland Army Air Field last week as bombardiers. Left to right they are: Flight Officer Eugene L. Woodson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Waverly B. Woodson, of 1235 north 58th street; Flight Officer Walter H. Lively, son of Mrs. Mary Louise D. Lively, of 439 north 53rd street; Donald S. Harris, son of Mr. and Mrs. George K. Harris, Jr., of 437 north 53rd street, and Flight Officer Wesley C. Walker, son of Mrs. Mary A. Walker, of 42 north 57th street.

4 Philadelphians Commissioned AAF Bombardiers

Tribune — Philadelphia, Pa.
11-18-44

Midland Army Air Field, Tex. —The first class of colored Air Crew members to be graduated from this key bombardier school last week finished the toughest eighteen weeks prescribed by the Army Air Forces training program and received their commissions as second lieutenants and flight officers from Col. Charles H. Dowman, commanding officer.

Philadelphians in the class are Donald S. Harris, son of Mr. and Mrs. George K. Harris, of 437 north 53rd street, who attended Pennsylvania State College at State College, Pa., and was on the Varsity Track team; Eugene L. Woodson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Waverly B. Woodson, of 1235 north 58th street; Walter H. Lively, son of Mrs. Mayr Louise D. Lively, of 439 north 53rd street, and Wesley C. Walker, son of Mrs. Mary A. Walker, of 42 north 57th street, who graduated from Temple University and is a member of Omega Psi Phi fraternity.

11-18-44

Six other Pennsylvania men were graduated with the class. They are Calvin Smith, of Aliquippa; James A. Evans, of Blythedale; Lewis E. Martin, of Grindstone; George C. Bolden, of Pittsburgh; David A. Showell, of Prospect Park, and Oscar T. Miller, of Unionville.

12-30-44

Washington Tribune

COMMISSIONED—Shown above are Fort Huachuca, Ariz., recently commissioned officers in physical therapy. Included in the group are three former civilians—2nd Lt. Muriel J. Davis, Evanston, Ill.; Lilyanne Plummer, daughter of Mrs. Rosa G. Plummer, 310 I Street, N.W., Washington, and Valjeanne Taylor, Atlanta. The other six are former WACs, including—2nd Lts. Anna L. Rogers, Memphis; Edythe Bingham, Talladega, Ala.; Ruth R. Jones, Cofield, N.C.; Bernice Lockhart, Hot Springs, Ark.; Mary L. Shannon, Madison, Ark., and Mildred Robinson, daughter of Mrs. Ida G. Robinson, 1819 N. Central Avenue, Baltimore. The physical therapy school at Fort Huachuca was under the direction of Lt. Col. D. Hinkson, Philadelphia, with Col. M. O. Bousfield, Chicago, as commandant.

LT. CARL E. JOHNSON, veteran pilot of the 332nd Fighter Group, who has spoken to students at Fisk University and Meharry Medical College during his stay at the Army Air Forces rehabilitation center in Nashville. A native of Passaic, N.J., Lieutenant Johnson flew for two years as a commercial pilot. He expects to return overseas in March.

4 Commissioned Lts. in Engineers

Afro American
Baltimore, Md

FORT BELVOIR, Va.—Four men were commissioned second lieutenants in the Corps of Engineers upon completing the sixtieth Officers' Candidate course here recently.

9-2-44

They were:

Reginald E. Crocker of Schenectady, who was inducted November 17, 1942, and stationed at Camp McCain, Miss.; Ernest A. Hood of NYC, inducted July 22, 1942, who served with a calvary unit at Fort Huachuca, Ariz.

Washington Man

George A. Patterson, 309 P Street, Northwest, Washington, who entered the army May 14, 1941, and served with the Engineers at Fort Myer, and William J. Roger of Macon, Ga., who received his B.S. degree from Johnson C. Smith University, who was inducted November 19, 1942, and served with the combat engineers at Fort Huachuca.

Wins Lt's Bar In Invasion Of Southern France

Tribune
Philadelphia, Pa.

CLEVELAND, (ANP)—Lt. James O'Neal has successfully transferred a civilian reputation as a "natural leader" to his GI life.

11-18-44

The 20-year-old officer was commissioned on the field of battle during the invasion of Southern France, it was learned here last week.

He is believed to be the first colored soldier so honored in that theatre of war.

The officer volunteered before Pearl Harbor, trained at Camp Butner, N. C., and in a year was a staff sergeant. He served in North Africa, landed at Salerno and fought through the Italian campaign until the invasion force left for France.

In 1941, before entering the army, Lt. O'Neal was a part-time worker at Friendly Inn., and boy's club leader for a settlement.

11-18-44

Two Officers of AA Unit Promoted

Afro American 9-2-44
Baltimore, Md

AN ADVANCED BASE, NEW GUINEA—Two officers of an anti-aircraft artillery battalion here, received promotions recently. They were:

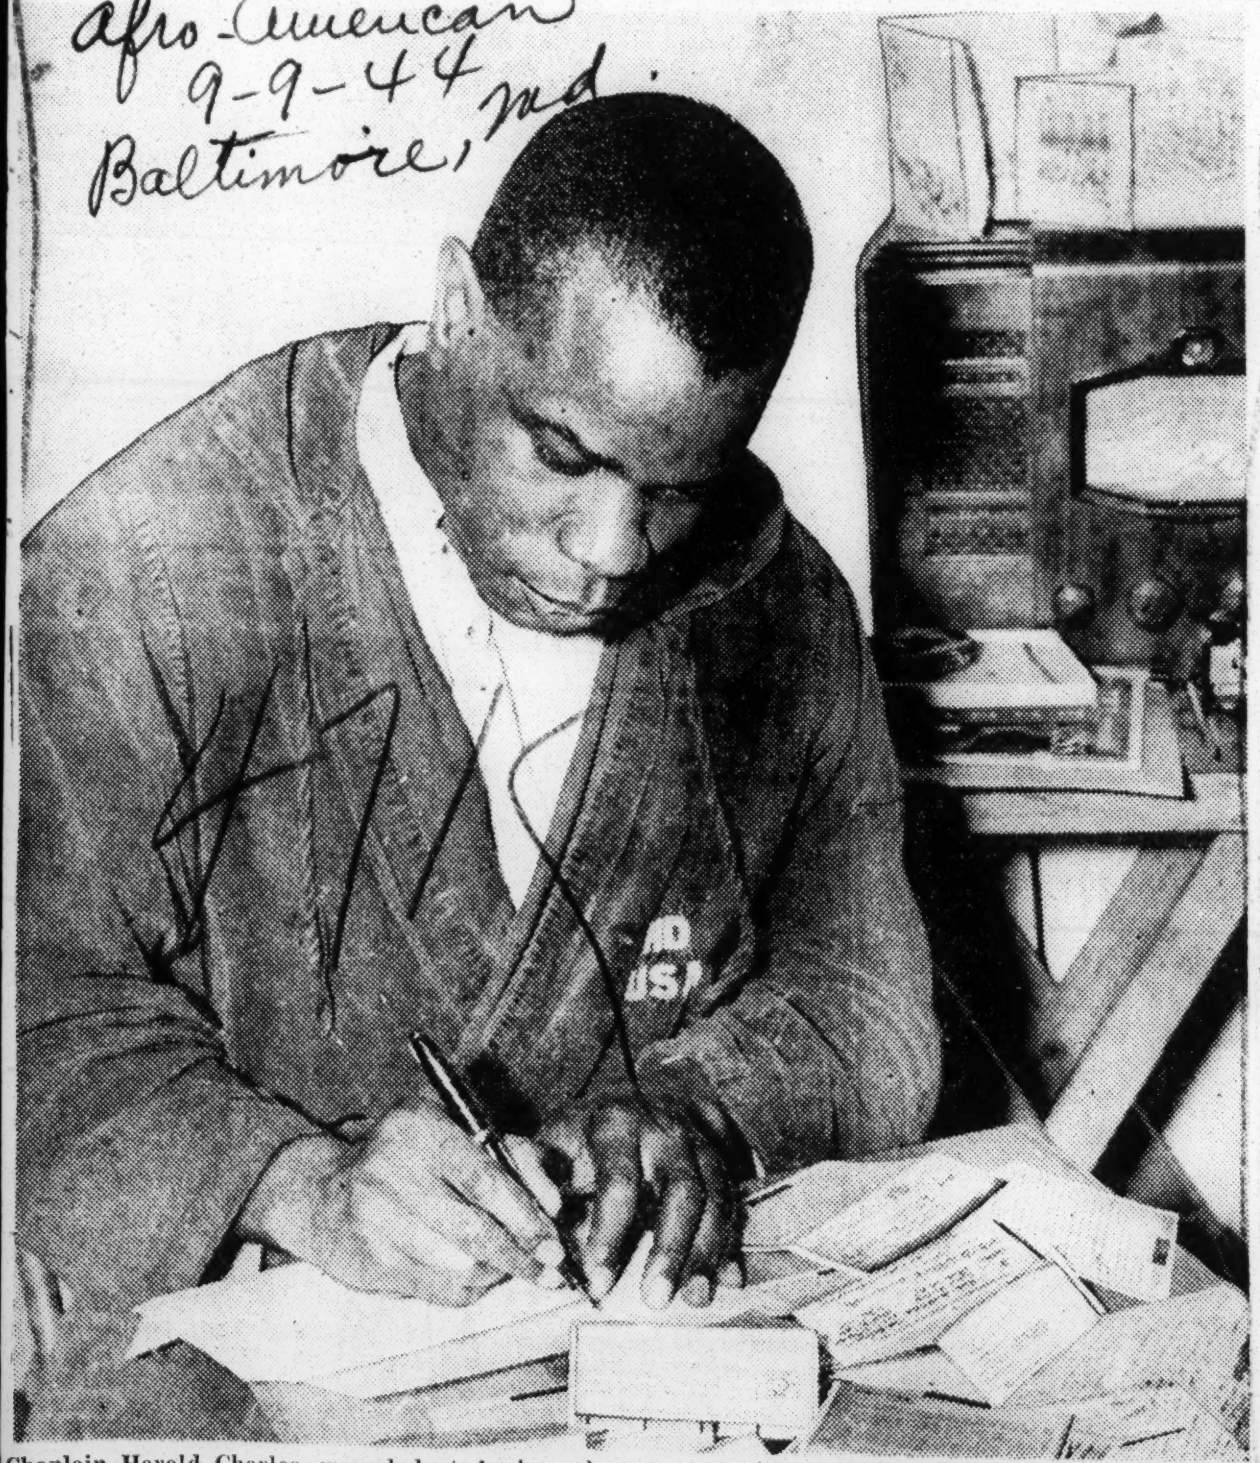
First Lt. William H. Culley, New Haven, Conn., to captain; Second Lt. Lovell B. Tipton, Columbus, Ohio, to first lieutenant.

47k-1944

Preaching No Good to Yanks on Sinking Ship, Chaplain Says

Parson Charles Describes War's Finest Lesson: Men of All Races Fighting to Make Place for Each Other; He Baptized 18 in Mediterranean

afro-American
9-9-44
Baltimore, Md.



Chaplain Harold Charles, wounded at Anzio and now recovering at Engalnd General Hospital, Atlantic City, N.J., still keeps in touch by V-mail with the men who used to come to him with their daily problems. Picture on top of radio is that of his wife, Mrs. Orithea Charles of 15 Tews Court, Newport, R.I. Chaplain Charles, formerly pastor of Mt. Zion AME Church in Newport, has two brothers serving as officers in the Pacific area, and a sister in the Army Nurse Corps in New Guinea.

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J.—Chaplain Harold Charles, dressed in a fatigue suit and helmet, stood up to his waist in the blue waters of the Mediterranean outside of Bizerte.

On his black skin he felt the warm sun as he waited for the slow file of 18 men and the deacon walking through the surf. They were both colored and white American soldiers, coming to be baptized.

This was how the chaplain, now a patient at the Army's England General Hospital, described his finest lesson of the war: that colored and white men could not only fight together, but could make a place for each other in the world—could give and take.

The 35-year-old chaplain is an Oxford graduate who came to Cornell and studied medicine, taught school for a while and then joined the ministry. His voice is low and kindly. Because of a heart condition caused by a serious battle injury, he is not permitted to walk many feet from his bed.

When he looks out of his window at the Boardwalk crowds, he is not resentful of their better fortune. He says simply and sincerely: "There aren't many of them down there who aren't trying to forget."

Chappie—as he is affectionately called by his men—stayed with the Second Corps Combat Engineers from the time they landed at Oran until he was wounded at Anzio. He landed with them on the beachheads, walked with them while they cleared mine fields, tended them at the aid stations, went out with them on the night patrols.

Although he never carried a weapon, he sometimes served as a line officer, ordering his men into position like any other officer.

Chaplain Doesn't Preach

A chaplain in the army doesn't preach, he says. He lives. It would not do any good to preach to those boys on the ship sinking near Oran. They had to be saved. Chappie jumped in, helped to lift some of the boys, dragged others, at times holding them by their field packs, until they reached the shore safely.

But a chaplain, he explained, never stops talking. Officers and enlisted men came to him constantly, puzzled by the frightfulness of battle.

Surgeons called him to stay with the men during operations. The injured asked him how badly they were hurt. Men going out on night patrol asked "Chappie, are you with us?" And the boys never stopped asking these questions because their anxieties never stopped.

At times he acted as a medic—giving first aid to the men in the field. Or he carried supplies like any other G.I. At Hill 606 near Mature, he did little else except dig graves day and night.

The American, he said, is a splendid soldier when he's fighting, but he's a problem when he has to hang around idle.

Once, between Tunis and Ferryville, three men in his outfit took off on one of their unofficial sightseeing trips. A few miles from camp they ran into a nest of Germans. One Yank was killed, the second wounded and the third escaped. He reported to his C.O., who sent out a patrol. The Germans were located and wiped out.

The next day, Chappie explained, the C.O. was forced to reprimand the man for being absent without leave and commend him right afterwards for helping to destroy the Nazis.

Page to Forget

The beach at Salerno he described as "a page that you want to tear up and forget." Nevertheless, he stood with his men through all the German fire. Whether a man was a Protestant, a Catholic or a Jew made no difference. He was the chaplain for 1500 men of all creeds.

He described how, under the terrible machine gun fire, a man would "freeze." He might have his finger on his gun trigger and not be able to fire it.

When a chaplain recognizes this form of fear, he doesn't preach. He just yanks the boy bodily and drags him to safety.

At Anzio he said the most lively thing—outside of the German fire—was the way the Texas boys landed on the beach shouting, "Texas! Texas is here! Where are the Heinies?"

Slaughter Terrible

The wild and woolly Texans were wonderful fighters, Chappie said, and nothing happened until the third wave reached the shore and then the Germans opened up and the slaughter was terrible.

For days at Anzio, Chappie lay in the foxholes with his men. He soon joined the "moles club" of men who had remained in foxholes for five to seven days. When the men moved forward, Chappie scaled the cliffs with them.

He was standing alongside a jeep, he said, the day he heard the German artillery shell. He hit the dirt and rolled over. He remembered nothing else. Chappie stopped talking.

At the aid station, they found he had suffered severe internal injuries. He was taken to a hospital in Africa and then shipped back to the States.

Leaving Chappie, one is impressed with his dignity—his strong feeling that, in spite of his injuries, he is grateful for what the war taught him about his fellowmen.

Skilled Negro Bomber Pilots Establish No-Accident Record At Ky. Air Base

Defender — Chicago, Ill.
8-12-44

CAMP BRECKENRIDGE, Ky. — (ANP) — Lightning had disrupted compass and electrical communications system, St. Elmo's fire trickled along the wing tips and hailstones drummed the windows as the air crew bring his twin-engine bomber and its crew down to safety. The violent summer storm. The lieutenant was flying "blind" trying to find an opening first above the First Lt. Daniel officer tried to home field, then to the north over James, instructor, attached to the 616th Bombardment squadron at Sturgis (Ky.) Air base. The 616th is part of the 477th Bombardment group, first Negro bombardment organization formed.

Returning from a routine night flight, the B-25 Mitchell medium bomber had been caught in a sud-airports at Evansville, Ind.

The crewmen joked but they knew this might be the pay-off.

Perfect Landing

Lt. James was depending entirely on a radio beam his operator had picked up above continual static. Twice the pilot brought the plane close to earth, getting bearings on ground lights. Finally he sent the 11-ton bomber splashing to an almost perfect landing on a storm-swept runway. 8-12-44

The Negro pilot's skill had saved lives and a quarter-million dollar piece of Uncle Sam's fighting equipment. Moreover, Lt. James had maintained the 616th Bomb squad's superior record in safe flying. The unit — commanded by Capt. Raymond E. Gandy, Norman, Okla., one of two white officers in the 616th — has gone more than six months without an accident during its heavy schedule of morning, afternoon and night flights.

Capt. Gandy has high praise for the 616th's earnest young Negro officers and enlisted men. He sees them accepting the challenge which falls to all airmen, that of proving their adaptability and right to combat flying.

Win Commendation

Members of the first Negro class trained by the army air forces in twin-engine aircraft are among the officers at Sturgis. Their record from the time they began basic air corps training at Tuskegee has been superior. Here in western Kentucky, a few miles from Camp Breckenridge, they are adding to their prestige as army airmen. 8-12-44

Twice the squadron has been commended for its achievements, by the commanding general of the first air force and by the commanding officer of the 477th group's four squadrons.

Although none can be called a veteran flier — most having graduated since last October — these pioneer Negro bomber pilots have demonstrated they are equal to emergencies. Recently one landed a plane with broken front landing wheel, calmly herding his crew into the rear of the airship to prevent the bomber from nosing over.

Constant Ground Work

Thanks to the devoted work of skilled ground crewmen, graduates of technical schools, aviators of the 616th have small worry about mechanical failings. 8-12-44

In tribute to the ground crews, Capt. Charles R. Stanton, Portland, Ore., assistant operations officers, declared, "Our pilots are still learning but the maintenance men know all about their jobs. Some would rather repair their planes than eat. I don't know when some of them sleep!"

A good example of what the captain meant is T-Sgt. Charles Crenshaw, Little Rock. He often sleeps on parachute racks alongside the field. Staff Sgt. William Watson, Carlisle, W. Va., is another who can't stay away from the big planes.

First Negro officers assigned to the squadron were First Lt. Henry D. Moore, Chicago, and Capt. Peter Verwayne, New York City, ordnance and transportation officer and flight commander, respectively.

NEGRO OFFICERS IN COAST GUARD

Defender — Chicago, Ill. 8-12-44

8-12-44

Veterans of the U. S. Coast Guard Academy aboard the Coast Guard vessel Sea Cloud are (l. to r.) Lt. (jg) Clarence Samuels, who recently was given command of the all-white crew on a Coast guard cutter in the Caribbean; Ensign Harvey Russell; and Lt. (jg) Joseph Jenkins. The officers are breaking precedents in the Coast Guard which is perhaps the most democratic of the armed services.

Chicago Executive Officer

After initial assignments, officer strength increased rapidly. Now heading sections of the 616th are Capt. James Pughley, Chicago, executive officer; Capt. C. Stanton, assistant operations officer; Capt. George L. Knox, Indianapolis, the squad's most experienced Negro flier; Lt. Walter Nicholson, Long Island, N. Y., supply officer; Lt. David Williams, Detroit, technical supply officer; Lt. Clarence Lewis, Dayton, Ohio, engineering officer; Lt. Whittie English, Englewood, N.J., communications officer; Lt. William H. Lewis, Buchanon, W. Va., adjutant. 8-12-44

Flight leaders in addition to Capt. Verwayne are Lts. Elmore M. Kennedy, Detroit; Leslie A. Williams, San Mateo, Calif., and William D. Tompkins, Fall River, Mass.

In Capt. Pughsley, the squadron has an executive officer with a long and varied military career. He enlisted in the army in 1917 and served in France. He was given a reserve commission in the infantry in 1928, and has served as an adjutant, post exchange officer and finally as executive officer in a fighter squadron.

Lt. Gene C. Browne

11-25-44

Reporter Prisoner In A German Camp

N.Y., N.Y.

New York age

Recently the War Department notified Mrs. Browne, of 418 West 150th street, that her son Lt. Gene C. Browne, who was a member of the 15th Army Air Force, stationed somewhere in Italy, has been a prisoner in Germany since September 20th. During an air raid on July 18th over Munich, 2nd Lt. Browne was reported missing in action. 11-25-44

The prisoner who is a graduate of the Tuskegee Flying School, received his commission at the age of nineteen, and was commended by the post commander, Col. Noel F. Parrish, as being the youngst Negro fighter pilot.

A native of New York City, he attended P. S. 139 and graduated from DeWitt Clinton High School. Immediately following his graduation he volunteered for the Army Air Corps. He was admitted to Tuskegee Army Flying School, January, 1943 at the age of eighteen. At the time of graduation, 2nd Lt. Browne was the third highest in a class of twenty-three. The young pilot was sent to Selfridge Field where he joined the 332nd Fighter Group.

Mrs. Browne has been informed by the Red Cross that her son is being given the best treatment, and is doing a real morale building job for the prisoners. At the time of his capture, he was to have received his second oak leaf cluster. He is also the recipient of an air medal.

47k-1944

SOLDIER - SURGEON

Chicago Defender
Chicago, Illinois

COL. JULIAN DAWSON

5-13-44

Dawson Won Acclaim As Both Doctor And Soldier

By DETON J. BROOKS, JR.

A front-line French station hospital buried on the reverse side of a mountain on the St. Die sector, shook and shivered as German shells fell on its well-protected shell-proof roof, during a bitter battle of the last World War..

Inside, stocky-built Capt. Julian Dawson, brilliant chief medical officer of the 365th Infantry, braced himself as his dug-out trembled; and calmly—though rapidly—continued surgery on the worst cases which were brought in from the firing line.

Capt. Dawson didn't have to accept his dangerous assignment. As regimental surgeon, he could have stayed back at headquarters. But the surgeon of the second battalion, which was bearing the brunt of the attack, had been wounded. And up there fighting was the captain's own brother, Lieut. William Dawson, now congressman of the first Illinois district.

Goes To Front

So when they called for a volunteer, it was Dawson who responded. In fact he slipped away. It wasn't until a week later that his commanding officer knew where he was. And when he ordered Dawson back, it was three weeks before the fighting slacked enough for him to make his way to regimental headquarters.

That was the last World War, but Dawson fought just as hard to get into this one. He was the commanding officer of the 184th Field Artillery during the hectic days of its reorganization from infantry in December 1940. If he has one regret, it's because he wasn't permitted to lead this outfit into active duty when it was inducted early in 1941. For some minor reason he was disqualified physically.

The long intervening years between World War I and II saw quite a change take place in Dawson. When the first World War broke out he was a young doctor only having finished Northwestern University Medical school two years before, in 1915. He was a member of the United States Army Medical Reserve, and when the colored officers' training school opened at Des Moines, Iowa, he was one of the first selected for the medical indoctrination course.

Graduating at the top of his class in November 1917, he was commissioned a captain and appointed as regiment.. surgeon of the 365th Infantry. He was the only Negro doctor to be placed completely in charge of a regimental medical unit in the entire 92nd Division. He stayed with the 365th until just before the armistice when he was transferred to the 317th Ammunition Train. He was with this unit when the armistice was signed and the division came home from France.

Goes Abroad

Then for the next few years he plunged into study and practice of surgery. Coming to Chicago he affiliated with Provident hospital and was appointed a junior surgeon on the staff. In 1923, not satisfied with being just a run-of-the mill surgeon, he took his wife and two small children and traveled to Vienna, Austria, for further study.

This was before the time that Negro doctors were receiving Rosenwald grants for study abroad, so Dawson had to foot the bill himself. And as he says, his wife played a big part in making this possible. "I had gotten married just before going to France. I sent my base pay home regularly and when I returned I found that my wife who had worked, had saved every penny I sent her. This is what gave me my nest egg and enabled me to arrange my finances so that I could go abroad in 1923."

Wife Shows Courage

As a matter of fact, Mrs. Dawson even showed more courage in order to be with him in Europe. Their third child was born three weeks after they arrived in Vienna.

Dawson received a break in Vienna very few foreigners get. Through the influence of Dr. George Lotheissen, Hofrat professor (one of the seven who decided the fate of every surgeon in Austria) he was appointed to the staff of the Kaiser Franz Josepl. hospital and allowed to operate. This was very rarely ever done. Most visiting surgeons were permitted to attend lectures, view operations, but never work on a patient.

It was while in Vienna that Dawson had an amusing encounter with prejudice. Two Americans, one Australian and one Alaskan, on seeing a Negro clothed in white assisting in operations protested to the hospital officials. When the matter was brought to the attention of Dr. Lothiessen, he ordered that they be refunded their money for the course (which incidentally was $10.00 per hour) and then he asked his assistant to escort them to the gate of the hospital and kick them out.

After a year in Vienna, Dawson moved to Budapest, Hungary, where he became a member of the St. John hospital staff. From there he went to Pech, a little town on the Hungarian border, where for five months he had every fourth operation in the obstetrical and gynecological clinics.

In 1926, after two years abroad, he came back to Provident where he was promoted to senior surgeon and director of clinics. He held both of these posts until the reorganization in 1933 when he relinquished the clinical job.

Interest Shifts

As far back as 1922 he had been a member of the old 8th Infantry as captain in the medical detachment. Gradually his interest shifted from army medicine to military startegy. Then in 1935 he was commissioned as a major of infantry and became plans and training officer on the regimental staff. When the regiment became field artillery in November, 1940, he was elevated to Lt. Colonel and when Col. William Warfield resigned was selected to lead the outfit into combat as colonel. The hurt cut deep when he was physically disqualified —so deep in fact that he has had no taste for surgery for the past two years.

Born in Albany, Ga., as one of seven children, he always wanted to be a doctor as far back as he can remember. This idea stayed with him during college at Fisk from where he graduated with honors in three years. And even though he loved sports, playing varsity football, baseball and engaging in team gymnastics, he never lost sight of his goal. He studied hard, never deviating from his objective until he had accomplished it, and then as he was being hailed as a brilliant surgeon, military life caught his fancy and began to absorb him.

Rarely a man learns to do one thing well. Dawson has proven that he can do two. But surgery is a great humane profession, more noble shall we say, than the life of a soldier. Mankind will be the gainer whenever DOCTOR Dawson feels that he can again pick up the scalpel and with his skilful fingers cut away the dead stuff in us that would destroy us.

To Take Unknown Assignment

Call Kansas City, Mo.
11-17-44

Prentice A. Townsend Promoted to Rank Of Captain in Italy

By ART CARTER

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS (Somewhere in Italy)—Hampered by inclement weather the fighter groups' activity was reduced to two escort assignments over the past weekend.

On these two missions protection was provided for strong forces of bombers attacking targets in Southern Germany and Austria.

11-17-44

Heavy flak was encountered but no opposition from enemy fighters appeared on the scene.

The latest missions were flown under the leadership of Major George Roberts, now acting commander of the group since Lt. Col. B. O. Davis Jr., has returned to the United States for an unannounced assignment.

Capt. Wendell Pruitt, St. Louis; Lt. Herbert Houston, Detroit; Lt. William W. Greene, Stanton, Va.; have also returned to the United States.

Captain Pruitt, 24, is the first of the fighter group pilots to complete his tour duty. He has 70 missions and 350 combat hours against enemy planes.

He says his biggest thrill was "My first victory when I shot down a ME 109 over the Udine area when interceptors attacked bombers in our group from the rear. We turned in behind them and I picked one off with one long burst of ammunition."

Before taking army flight training Pruitt had 80 hours of civilian flying while studying at Lincoln University, Mo. He has high praise for the P-51 Mustang, declaring "It's the best we have in the sky."

Pruitt stated that he liked combat flying and that it made no difference to him what theater he is sent. if he has to return.

Lt. Houston, a member of the oldest fighter squadron group left this theater of action with 111 missions. over half of which were compiled during the pioneer squadrons dive bombings days with the 12th Air Force.

Greene with over 50 missions is one of the pilots recently returned from a liberated country.

Kansas Citian Promoted

Six pilots and three ground officers were recently promoted captains while Alphonso Simmons, 25, Jacksonville, Fla., was elevated from second to first lietenant.

Among the ground officers promoted to captain was Prentice Aaron Townsend, of Kansas City, Mo., and Lawrence, Kas., who serves in the capacity of group ordnance officer and trial judge advocate.

Others promoted were Court investigation officer, Dudly M. Stevenson, 26, Washington, D. C.; Leonard M. Jackson, 24, Ft. Worth, Texas; Albert H. Manning, Spartanburg, S. C.; John Daniels, 29, Harvey, Ill.; Harold E. Sawyer, Columbus, Ohio; Arnold W. Cisco, Alton, Ill.; and Lawrence E. Dickson, 24, New York.

Pilot lives after 132 shells puncture P-40

Los Angeles Times
1-20-44

ATLANTIC CITY — "Tweak through the flak on a target you wonder if you will ever get back mission" is 1st Lt. John A. Gib- —and you tweak," the 25-year- son's pet name for a dive bomb- old Chicago pilot said. ing sortie.

"Brother, when you dive down has blazed a trail of devastation from North Africa dive bombing, the Chicagoan from Germany. "You pull out doing about Truman K. Gibson, 500 miles an hour after you have Cousin of Tru- side to the Secretary lieutenant is now at let your bombs go and you seem Jr., civilian aide t distribution station in to be going faster than the trac- of War, the lieute ers that fill the sky all around the AAF redistrib With 80 missions you Atlantic City. will receive a new you. behind him, he wh

Gibson flew in Italy with the all-Negro fighter squadron which

"We always hit our targets regardless of the intensity of the assignment, placing him in one of commands of the Air U. S. comma anti-aircraft fire," he added. "I've made as many as five passes at a gun installation or supply dump, just to be sure I had a dead bead on the objective."

Lieutenant Gibson has come away from a dive bombing run with as many as 132 holes in his P-40 Warhawk fighter.

"Nearly all of my first 70 missions were in the Warhawks, flying close support for ground troops," he declared. "On the last ten I switched to P-51 Mustangs and flew escort for heavy bombers.

"We went as far as Poland and the Rumanian oil fields at Ploesti on escort. And we were in on the invasion of southern France.

"The Germans never came down for a fight the times I went along with the bombers. When I first went overseas Jerry seemed to have superiority in the air, but by the time I left, it appeared as though we had him outnumbered 100 to 1."

47k-1944

First Photo of Lt. Col. Davis at His Field Desk in Italy

Lt. Col. Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., commanding officer of fighter group at his field desk in Italy where group's pilots maintain ceaseless vigil over Allied convoys along western coast of peninsula.

5 Brothers Become Officers In The Same Army Regiment

Journal & Guide — Norfolk, Va.
6-24-44

CAMP BRECKINRIDGE, Ky. —(ANP)—In a military feat probably unparalled anywhere else in the United States, five brothers from a Negro family have risen through the same regiment—the 372nd Infantry to gain four commissions and one sergeantcy in the Army.

Three of the five brothers, all of whom enlisted when the 372nd was a National Guard regiment in Massachusetts, remain with the unit at its new location here. Another is an instructor at Camp Butner, N. C. The fifth brother is overseas. They are the Phillips brothers of Medford, Mass.

ALL IN SAME COMPANY

At one time all five brothers were not only serving with the 372 Infantry Regiment, but all five were in Company K. The 372nd served at Fort Devens, Mass., Fort Dix, N. J., New York City, and engaged in New England maneuvers before arriving at Camp Breckinridge several weeks ago. 6-24-44

The three "fighting Phillipses" at Camp Breckinridge are 1st Lt. William H. Phillips, 33; 2nd Lt. Richard K. Phillips, 28, and Sgt. Raymond L. Phillips, 31.

Lt. William Phillips is a graduate of infantry school at Fort Benning, Ga., and also completed courses in communications and heavy weapons. He was with the 372nd as a National Guardsman from 1929 until commissioned and called to active duty with the regiment in March, 1941. The lieutenant is an expert rifleman and serves as section leader in a weapons company. 6-24-44

Lt. Richard Phillips, the only unmarried brother, entered the National Guard in 1935. He was graduated from Fort Benning's infantry school Jan. 12, 1943, and also completed a cannon course. He is a crack rifleman, commands a rifle platoon.

Sgt. Raymond Phillips, a National Guardsman from 1934 until the 372nd became part of the Army in 1941, has turned down opportunities to become a commissioned officer. Also an expert rifleman, he prefers to remain a platoon sergeant with Company K. 6-24-44

The other brothers, late of the 372nd Infantry Regiment, are 1st Lt. Ernest Phillips, 38, and 2nd Lt. Cecil F. Phillips is with the engineer corps at Camp Butner.

The Phillips brothers come by their military qualities naturally. Their father, Raymond L. Phillips, who died 21 years ago, was a Spanish-American War veteran. Grandfather William H. Phillips fought in the Civil War. Mrs. Hannah J. Phillips, the mother, resides at 45 Bower Street, West Medford, Middlesex, Mass.

Chaplain Keeps His Men Out of Trouble

Afro American — Baltimore, Md.
4-15-44

Court Martials Decreased as Parson Gross Joins Engineers in Italy

By ART CARTER

AFRO War Correspondent with U.S. Troops in Italy

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

4-15-44

SOMEWHERE IN ITALY. — (By Air Mail, Censored) — It is amazing how the presence of Chaplain Robert H. Gross has lifted the morale of an engineering battalion, which recently celebrated its first anniversary overseas, by moving into Italy after helping to renovate Bizerte, one of the heavily bombed spots in North Africa.

Fifty, gray-haired and worldly-wise, Chaplain Gross is in Italy for the third time, having visited the peninsula twice previously while working on a commercial steamer. He formerly pastored at Greenwich, Conn., and his wife, Mrs. Viola Gross and two children live at 308 E. Pennsylvania Avenue, Towson, Md.

Court Martials Numerous

Prior to his assignment here, many men were burdened by court-martials—which were the direct or indirect result of their relations with natives.

These are being eliminated through lectures to the men, conferences with the commanding officers, and recreation programs that are appealing.

Chaplain Gross's vast knowledge of the country, its people and its historic spots has been utilized in arranging tours for the men during their leisure hours, and giving them a background for a working knowledge of the language.

4-15-44

Build Field Hospitals

In North Africa, the battalion constructed two field hospitals, renovated many bomb-battered buildings in Bizerte, and its Company C erected a portable hangar, 130 by 160 feet, in five days—a job which received commendation from higher headquarters.

In Italy less than two months, the battalion already has constructed a massive refugee camp and is helping with the reconstruction of Naples' docks and bomb-torn buildings.

Its men recently completed a renovation job on two old warehouses, relaying floors, constructing glassless window (there is practically no glass available in Italy), and strengthening its walls. The place is now ready for occupation and in civilian terms has cost an estimated $25,000.

Far from the scene of their labors is the battalion's camp. Running straight as die through an old olive grove are the company streets, with pyramidal tents lining both sides. Each tent has its homemade bunks, and usually there is a stove made out of an old oil or paint drum.

2 Have Purple Hearts

"It was chilly when we first came here," said T/4 Clarence E. Edmondson, 540 Manhattan Avenue, NYC, who has the Purple Heart for wounds received in a bombing raid in North Africa. Pvt. Luther Roberts also has a Purple Heart, having been injured in the same raid.

4-15-44

This battalion has a crack basketball team which went to the finals in a recent section tournament. The team was established at the unit's point of activation, Camp Edwards, Mass., and has many former athletes among its members.

A broad field near the bivouac area has been leveled off, and almost any pleasant evening will find some of the battalion's soldiers limbering up for a game of baseball. A basketball court also has been erected on the camp site.

Have Chorus, Orchestra

Aside from its abundance of athletic activities, the battalion is rich in musical talent, with a glee club, choral group and orchestra among its recreation groups.

4-15-44

The battalion is particularly proud of its "Swinging Johnnies," directed by Sgt. Jimmie Bailey, Chicago. Pfc. Osborne Williams, Philadelphia, Pa., who played with the Musical Dots, takes care of the bass in the band.

Other members include Pfc. James Richardson, Marion, Va.; Pfc. Arthur Bell, New Haven, Conn.; Cpl. Jimmie Hicks, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Cpl. William Anderson, St. Louis, Mo.; Pfcs. Joe Barnes and Ray Mitchell, Milwaukee, Wis.; T/5 Chuck Gray, Chicago, and Pvt. Bob Allen, St. Paul, Minn., arranger.

Another popular musical group is the glee club, directed by Sgt. Joseph Bray, Philadelphia, and organized and led by Cpl. Cleon E. Peterson, Pittsburgh, Pa., a graduate of Duquesne University and former concert pianist.

Corporal Peterson is assistant to the chaplain and his knowledge of Italian and French makes him one of the most popular men in the outfit. In North Africa, he gave many concerts for the natives as well as the soldiers.

11-18-44

GENERAL DAVIS IN FRANCE

Defender — Chicago, Ill.
8-19-44

Somewhere in France Brig. General Benjamin O. Davis, highest ranking Negro officer in the U.S. Army, watches a Signal Corps crew erecting poles for communications to the front.

23 Race Officers With Mobile Unit In France

~~Chicago~~ Pittsburgh Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.
11-18-44

By RUDOLPH DUNBAR

WITH THE UNITED STATES ARMY IN FRANCE—(ANP)—I was amazed when I visited a mobile aviation QM battalion somewhere in France and discovered that there were 23 Negro officers, including six captains in the company. It is the largest compliment of Negro officers I have seen on the Western front.

11-18-44

Col. Ellis Anderson, Houlton, Me., is the commanding officer. He started with the company when it was activated in March of 1940 at Fort Bragg. Possessed of a knowledge of human nature, Colonel Anderson boasts about the good conduct of his men even from the days of Fort Bragg.

EXECUTIVE OFFICER

Capt. B. Taylor of Hartford, Conn., is the executive officer and second in command. A colored officer, Captain Taylor deals with matters of the highest importance and his administration involves every exercise of authority that affects the whole battalion. Other high ranking colored officers are Capt. Robert E. Randolph from Albany, N. Y., battalion adjutant; Capt. Randolph S. Wright, battalion staff officer, and Capt. Kenneth E. Small, Boston, battalion motor officer.

As a part of the Ninth Air Force Service command, the battalion has traveled two and a half million miles on the Red Ball highway. Their convoy is a matter of great consequence and air force chiefs plan their operations according to what the trucks are handling. The importance of their tasks may be summed up in the words of the commander of a medium bomber group. "We might as well have no planes if the trucks do not operate."

11-18-44

MEMPHIAN IS OFFICER

The first company in the battalion is commanded by Capt. George Evans from Middlesburg, Va. Other officers include Edwin Jones, New York City, executive officer, and Lt. Freeman W. Martin, Memphis, motor officer.

Capt. Charles E. Jones, Los Angeles, commands the second company. Officers serving under him are Lt. James A. Wright, St. Louis, executive officer; Lt. Pierce M. Thompson, Atlanta, intelligence officer; 2nd Lt. James R. Skaggs, St. Louis, supply officer, and Lt. Booker T. Young, also of St. Louis, motor officer.

The third company is under the command of Capt. Mathew Slamen of New Orleans. Lt. Darwin E. Smith, a Virginian, is executive officer; Willie B. Macon of Arkansas, motor officer, and Lt. Lilburn B. Pappy, a Floridian, supply officer.

Lt. Fred McLaurin of South Carolina, commands the fourth company. His assistants are Lt. Robert Davis, Washington, D. C., executive officer; Lt. William Fitzgerald, Washington, motor officer; 2nd Lt. Robert M. Ateman, Chicago, supply officer, and 2nd Lt. Leslie C. Mayo, St. Antonio, Tex., intelligence officer.

12-9-44

Courier — Pittsburgh, Pa.

ITCHING FOR ACTION—Second Lt. Henry B. Scott of Jersey City, N.J., convalescing at the AAF's Convalescent center, Pawling, N.Y., anxiously awaits the day when he can return to the air and get another crack at the enemy. Lieutenant Scott is one of the six fliers credited with sinking a Nazi destroyer with machine-guns—a heretofore unheard of feat.—Solomon Photo.

12-9-44

47k-1944

HIGH RANKING ARMY OFFICERS EXCHANGE GREETINGS

Released by U. S. War Department Bureau of Public Relations

TWENTY-ONE HIGH RANKING NEGRO OFFICERS exchanged greetings at Fort Huachuca, Arizona, recently, when Colonel Edwin N. Hardy, Post Commander, served as host at a reception held in the residence of Colonel Midian O. Bousfield, commanding officer of Station Hospital, No. 1. The event was in honor of Brigadier General Benjamin O. Davis and Mr. Truman K. Gibson, Jr., Civilian Aide to the Secretary of War, who were at Fort Huachuca on an inspection tour. It is to be noted that there are 16 more Negro officers of field grade present here than participated in the 1918 World War, and that all field grade officers (rank of major and above) stationed at this post were not present when this picture was taken. Left to right, seated on floor: Majors Orion N. Page, Phillip Johnson, Wilbur Strickland, McKinley Thomas, Lieutenant Colonel Harold W. Thatcher, Major Percy L. Turnley. Center row: Leutenant Colonel Wendell T. Derricks, Mr. Truman K. Gibson, Jr., Colonel Edwin N. Hardy, Brigadier General Benjamin O. Davis, Colonel Midian O. Bousfield, Lieutenant Colonel Dehaven Hinkson. Standing: Majors Kenneth E. Campbell, Edward D. Wimp, Raymond Watkins, Rafael Hernandez, Benjamin Gray, Henry R. Butler, John A. Holland, William E. Allen, Lieutenant Colonel Roscoe C. Giles, Majors Ralph Teabeau, and Earl Renfroe. (U. S. Army Signal Corps photo.)

Lieutenant Is Dismissed at Selfridge Field

Bystander—Des Moines, Iowa. 5-4-44

Selfridge Field, Mich. — Second Lt. Milton Robinson Henry, a pilot in the Army Air Corps, was found guilty by a court martial on charges of insubordination and neglect of duty and ordered dismissed from the service following a two-day trial here this week.

The verdict was virtually assured when the defense in the second day of the trial failed to establish that Lt. Henry's alleged hostile attitude towards the service was attributable to a disease of the lungs known as saco dosis. That the defendant was suffering from the malady was established through testimony of army medical x-ray physicians and psychiatrists, but the court held that although a physical ailment might deserve leniency in considering Henry's negligence, it positively bore no weight against his arrogant attitude towards superior officers.

5-4-44

The Findings

The findings of the court martial will be reviewed by higher authorities and Lt. Henry will have every opportunity to appeal the decision if he wishes. Prior to the trial it was alleged that Judge William Hastie, NAACP counsel, would enter an appeal if the verdict was unsatisfactory to the defendant.

At the close of the day the defense moved that the charges be changed to read, "failed to repair to his place of duty," rather than "absent without leave." This was denied by the court. A motion to declare the defendant not guilty was also denied by the court. 5-4-44

Testifies

Lt. Col. Sam B. Triffy, present commanding officer of the 553rd Fighter squadron, testified for the prosecution that Lt. Henry had explained his repeated absences from duty on the grounds that he found it impossible to get up in the mornings. "He invited me to come over each morning and awaken him," the colonel said. "When I refused, he suggested that I have Lt. Byrnes do it since it would take less time than making out certificates of absence for him." Upon further questioning the colonel said that Lt. Henry had said that he had been an officer at the time that he finished OCS but now he was not doing the duties of an officer and had no desire to be a good soldier.

Army Chaplain Resigns, Ducks Bigamy Charges

Defender—Chicago 5/11/44

WASHINGTON—Captain James R. L. Pinn, chaplain in the United States Army, has been permitted to resign "for the good of the service" from his post at Fort Benning, Ga., by the commanding officer, Gen. Wm. H. Hobson, rather than prefer charges against him for violation of the Mann Act. War Department officials report that Capt. Pinn took a young woman from South Carolina across the border of Georgia, where he lived with her on the post and introduced her as his wife. Meanwhile, his wife No. 1, Mrs. Pauline S. Pinn, lives with his father in Washington where she is employed as a file clerk by the President's Fair Employment Practices Committee.

The chaplain's role as bigamist came to light when the Office of Dependency Benefits notified the commanding officer that two women each claiming to be the wife of the chaplain were making claims for a wife's monthly allotment. Investigation proceedings were instituted and information substantiated which would have made the captain liable for court-martial. The commanding officer chose to permit him to resign rather than prefer charges, due to the good record he had established.

7-15-44

General Hobson said that he was shocked over the matter, and attested to the excellent job which Capt. Pinn had done in the camp. He was well liked and respected and had done some special work for the chief of chaplains.

Wide Experience

The 44-year-old chaplain was born in Washington, D. C., and received his early training at Syracuse, N. Y., where his father, the Reverend James L. Pinn, was pastor of Bethany Baptist Church. He attended Howard University from which he earned his A.B. and B.D. degrees. He was also graduated from the Western Theological Seminary at Pittsburgh, Pa. He served as pastor of the First Baptist church, Warrentown, Va., the Shiloh Baptist church, Newport News, Va., and the Clarke Baptist church, Pittsburgh, Pa. 7-15-44

He was commissioned in the Chaplain's Corps in 1931, and was called to active duty in 1936 with the Civilian Conservation Corp where he served with Negro enrollees in Virginia.

In 1940, Captain Pinn was assigned to the 41st Engineers Regiment at Fort Bragg, North Carolina. In May, 1942, he gained attention for the excellent job he performed when he accompanied a regiment of engineers to Liberia. These were the first American troops to go to Africa.

Upon his return to the United States, he was assigned to Fort Benning, Ga.

Mrs. Pinn, wife No. 1, it is reported, says she doesn't believe a word of the report concerning her husband.

Pope Welcomes Negro Chaplain Into Vatican

Defender—Chicago, Ill.
7-15-44

ROME.—(ANP)—Chaplain L. M. Durden, accompanied by 12 other officers of quartermasters units, was received Sunday in special audience by his holiness, Pope Pius XII.

Shortly after his entrance the Pope walked to where the chaplain was standing at the head of the line. He shook hands with him, gave him a rosary, and autographed picture of himself, blessed religious articles that belonged to soldiers and entered into a brief personal conversation with the chaplain.

The audience ended after the holy father had given the pastoral benediction and made the following statement in English: "I am happy to have you present. I wish for you and your families health, happiness and a quick return of peace. May God, in His power, bless all of you." 7-15-44

Chaplain Durden is a graduate of Clark university, Gammon Theological seminary and the Howard University Graduate school.

Weekly—New Orleans, La.

6-24-44

Tuskegee Army Air Field, Ala., June 21.—Second Lieutenant Claude M. Dixon, who was commissioned from the Army Air Forces Administration Officers' Candidate School, Miami Beach, Fla., on May 27, 1944, was recently assigned to the Tuskegee Army Air Field. The newly assigned officer graduated from Southern University in 1941 with a Bachelor of Arts degree, and is a member of the Kappa Alpha Psi fraternity. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew D. Dixon of Flood St., New Orleans, La., and is married to the former Miss Ruby Mauney of Winston-Salem, North Carolina. (Official U. S. AAF Photo by AAF Training Command.)

10 Officers Promoted To Captain

Tribune—Philadelphia, Pa.
4-9-44

FORT HUACHUCA, Ariz.—The promotion of ten officers of the Medical Corps, assigned to duty at Station Hospital No. 1, to the rank of captain has been announced by the War Department.

Representing seven states and the District of Columbia, the officers, with their home addresses, are as follows:

Richard H. Irving, 810 Jersey avenue, Washington, D. C.; Edward V. Williams, 211 Washington street, Ellsworth, Kansas; Wayne C. Howard, 5415 Montclair avenue, and Ronald N. Jefferson, 5339 Calumet avenue, Chicago, Ill.; James L. Kingsland, 468 west 148th street, New York City, N. Y.; August T. Perkins, 907 north Leonard avenue, St. Louis, Mich.; Clay M. Wilson, 1198 Forest avenue, aPsadena, Cal..; Theodore L. Hughes, 841 Boston Boulevard, Detroit, and George E. Weick, 1535 Palmer avenue, Muskegon, Michigan.

Made Full Colonel

Amsterdam News—New York, N. Y.

6-17-44

LT. COL. BENJAMIN O. DAVIS, Jr., son of the only Negro general officer in the United States Army, has been promoted to full colonel, it was announced by the War Department. Col. Davis, now in command of a fighter group in the Mediterranean theatre, was formerly commander of the famed 99th Fighter Squadron, also overseas. He is a graduate of West Point Military Academy, and received his pilot and fighter training at Tuskegee Air Field in Alabama.

FIRST NEGRO LIAISON CHAPLAIN APPOINTED

Christian Recorder
Philadelphia, Pa.

Chaplain Captain David J. More, formerly of the old 25th Infantry and lately Regimental Chaplain of the 369th Infantry of the 93rd Division has become the first Negro Chaplain in the American armed forces to hold the position of Liaison or Circuit Chaplain. He is assigned to duty with Headquarters, Army Air Forces Western Flying Training Command, Santa Ana California.

A native of Cincinnati, Ohio and a graduate of Wilberforce University Chaplain School. Tuskegee Army Air Base Orientation and training school. 9-16-44

Chaplain Moore has pastored the following points in New England: Waterbury, Conn., Hartford, Conn.. Pittsfield, Mass., Narragansette, R. I., and a few years in the East Florida Conference, also pastored several in the Ohio Conference. Served four years president of the College Hill Recreation club prior to entry into the Service.

He is a member of the Ohio Annual Conference of the African Methodist Episcopal Church.

Florida Camp Gets First Negro Commander

Age—New York, N. Y.
7-1-44

CAMP GORDON JOHNSTON, Fla. — The distinction of being the first Negro officer to command a Station Complement Unit in the history of the Army Service Forces Training Center at Camp Gordon Johnston goes to Captain James B. Gibbs, 22 Greenwich Park, Boston, Mass., the War Department reported Monday.

Captain Gibbs, a graduate of Northeastern University, Boston, in civil engineering, has been named commanding officer of Headquarters Detachment, Headquarters Section No. 2. He received his commission as second lieutenant upon the completion of the senior Reserve Officers Training Corps course at Northeastern. Appointed a reserve officer in November, 1938, he was called to active duty in February, 1942, at Camp Lee, Virginia.

A native of Boston, Captain Gibbs received his early education at a private academy in Panama City, Panama. In addition to his work at Northeastern University, he also is a graduate in naval architecture of the Massachusetts Geodetic Survey before his call to active duty. He also was assistant ordnance inspector, Boston Ordnance District and performed duties as junior naval architect at the Boston Navy Yard.

Gen. Davis Visits Troops in France

Afro American
Baltimore, Md. 8-12-44

By OLLIE STEWART

AFRO War Correspondent with Invasion Forces in France

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

WITH AMERICAN FORCES IN FRANCE.—(By Cable, Censored)—Brig. Gen. Benjamin O. Davis arrived in France recently for general observations and to spend part of his time with the special pictorial unit making movies of colored troops.

Maj. Home Roberts of the War Department Bureau of Public Relations, and Carlton Moss, special consultant, are accompanying the general. 8-12-44

Expressing a desire to remain in France until the war ends, General Davis said: "I am interested in seeing what colored troops are doing, how they are living and taking care of themselves; also what recommendations I may make to cause them to feel better." 8-12-44

Exchange Autographs

The general signed my short-snorter dollar bill and I signed his. Then both of us made Edward Toles, Chicago Defender correspondent, pay for not having his.

General Davis was immaculate in his new battle dress, but Major Roberts was having difficulty with new field boots. Moss was looking most uncomfortable in GI clothes.

Saw 4 Nazi Robots

While in England, General Davis said, he saw four pilotless planes, but regards them like lightning. Either they strike or they don't. 8-12-44

At a press conference the general said he could not answer questions as to whether colored combat units, WAC's or nurses are coming here, because they are not his department.

Florida Camp Gets First Negro Commander

Age—New York, N. Y.
7-1-44

CAMP GORDON JOHNSTON, Fla. — The distinction of being the first Negro officer to command a Station Complement Unit in the history of the Army Service Forces Training Center at Camp Gordon Johnston goes to Captain James B. Gibbs, 22 Greenwich Park, Boston, Mass., the War Department reported Monday.

Captain Gibbs, a graduate of Northeastern University, Boston, in civil engineering, has been named commanding officer of Headquarters Detachment, Headquarters Section No. 2. He received his commission as second lieutenant upon the completion of the senior Reserve Officers Training Corps course at Northeastern. Appointed a reserve officer in November, 1938, he was called to active duty in February, 1942, at Camp Lee, Virginia.

A native of Boston, Captain Gibbs received his early education at a private academy in Panama City, Panama. In addition to his work at Northeastern University, he also is a graduate in naval architecture of the Massachusetts Geodetic Survey before his call to active duty. He also was assistant ordnance inspector, Boston Ordnance District and performed duties as junior naval architect at the Boston Navy Yard.

Gen. Davis Visits Troops in France

Afro American
Baltimore, Md. 8-12-44

By OLLIE STEWART

AFRO War Correspondent with Invasion Forces in France

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

WITH AMERICAN FORCES IN FRANCE.—(By Cable, Censored)—Brig. Gen. Benjamin O. Davis arrived in France recently for general observations and to spend part of his time with the special pictorial unit making movies of colored troops.

Maj. Home Roberts of the War Department Bureau of Public Relations, and Carlton Moss, special consultant, are accompanying the general. 8-12-44

Expressing a desire to remain in France until the war ends, General Davis said: "I am interested in seeing what colored troops are doing, how they are living and taking care of themselves; also what recommendations I may make to cause them to feel better." 8-12-44

Exchange Autographs

The general signed my short-snorter dollar bill and I signed his. Then both of us made Edward Toles, Chicago Defender correspondent, pay for not having his.

General Davis was immaculate in his new battle dress, but Major Roberts was having difficulty with new field boots. Moss was looking most uncomfortable in GI clothes.

Saw 4 Nazi Robots

While in England, General Davis said, he saw four pilotless planes, but regards them like lightning. Either they strike or they don't. 8-12-44

At a press conference the general said he could not answer questions as to whether colored combat units, WAC's or nurses are coming here, because they are not his department.

Great Lakes Center

10-28-44

GREAT LAKES, Ill.—Headquarters of the Ninth Naval District and Great Lakes, announced this week that Lt. (jg) James Russell Brown, the Navy's first Negro Chaplain, had reported for duty at the U. S. Naval Training Center, Great Lakes, Illinois.

Shortly after his appointment in June, Chaplain Brown was sent to the Chaplain's School at William and Mary College, Williamsburg, Va., for an indoctrination course. After completing the eight-week course at William and Mary, he was sent to the Bureau of Personnel in Washington, D. C., for a short while and was subsequently attached to Naval Procurement Offices in Philadelphia, Pa., Pittsburgh, Pa., and Detroit, Michigan before reporting to Great Lakes. 10-28-44

Lt. (jg) Brown, one-time pastor of St. Luke's A.M.E. Church, Kansas City, Kansas and former dean of Bishop Williams School of Religion at Quindaro, Kansas, has been assigned for duty as the Protestant Chaplain at Camp Robert Smalls, one of the two camps where Negroes are trained at this Center.

1st Negro Chaplain In Navy On Duty At

Age—New York, N. Y.
10-28-44

47k-1944

Third Ranking Army Air Forces Officer

Daily World — Atlanta, Ga.
3-8-44

3-8-44

Captain George L. Knox, pictured at the controls of a B-25 medium bomber, is the third ranking Negro officer in the Army Air Forces now in the United States. Captain Knox, formerly operations officer under Lieutenant Colonel Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., Commanding Officer of the 332nd Fighter Group now overseas, recently completed training at the Central Flying Command's B25 Transition School at Mather Field, Calif. Captain Knox is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Elwood C. Knox, of Indianapolis, Indiana, and a graduate of Fisk University, Nashville, Tennessee. He entered the Army in October, 1941, as an aviation cadet, and trained fighter planes at Tuskegee Army Air Field, Alabama, before coming to his permanent station at Selfridge Field, Michigan. (Photo by U. S. Army Air Forces.) 1 March 44.

Ralph Metcalfe Is Commissioned

Defender — Chicago, Ill.

Officer In Transportation Corps

7-22-44

NEW ORLEANS, La.—(Special)—Ralph H. Metcalfe, 6159 South Michigan boulevard, Chicago, has been graduated from the Transportation Corps Officer Candidate school at the New Orleans Army Air Base, and has been commissioned a second lieutenant in the Army of the United States.

Lt. Metcalfe graduated from Tilden Technical high school, Chicago, and Marquette university, Milwaukee, Wis., and received his doctor's degree at the University of Southern California in Los Angeles. Prior to induction he was director of Negro activities for the Catholic service men's organization and was on leave of absence as track coach and a member of the faculty of Xavier university, New Orleans, La.

Lt. Metcalfe was one of the outstanding sprinters of his time. While in high school he held the national interscholastic record for the 100-yard dash. At Marquette he was the greatest sprinter ever to represent that institution and was a member of the United States Olympic team in 1932 at Los Angeles and in 1936 in Berlin. 7-22-44

Did Century in 9.4

He ran a 9.5 seconds hundred in the Drake relays in 1932 to tie the record set by Locke of Nebraska in 1926 and again equaled by Jesse Owens in 1935. While Owens ran once at Drake, Metcalfe came with the Marquette track team for three years straight. He won the century at Drake again in 1933 and in 1934. His time for those years was 9.4 seconds. He was anchor man on the winning quarter-mile Marquette team at Drake in 1934 when the Milwaukee quartet did a 41.8 seconds for the event. 7-22-44

He was anchor man on the winning half-mile relay, each man running 220 yards, at Drake in 1932 and 1933. The time in 1932 was 1:27.3 and in 1934 was 1:28.4.

Lt. Metcalfe has a 9.4 seconds record for the National Collegiate 100-yard dash made in 1933. This meet record is jointly held by George Simpson (Ohio State), Frank Wykoff, Southern California, and Jesse Owens (Ohio State). He also holds the Marquette university stadium record of 9.5 seconds for the "hundred" made in 1932 and 1933.

7-22-44

LT. RALPH METCALFE

Lt. Metcalfe's 20.4 seconds National Collegiate 220-yard dash record still stands. His 21.2 seconds (run on curve) is still the Marquette stadium record.

He was born in Atlanta, Ga., and came to Chicago at an early age with his parents. 7-22-44

At the time of his induction into the army he was national director of activities for the Catholic Negro service men. He had resigned as track coach and professor at Xavier university in New Orleans.

In and out of the army he is a gentleman of the highest type.

Moving Upward

Officers In New Fighter Group Upped

Journal & Guide
Norfolk, Va.

By JOHN "ROVER" JORDAN

Guide War Correspondent
(Copyright. Reproduction Prohibited.)

7-22-44

ADVANCED AIR BASE, Italy—Headquarters of a Fighter Group under command of Col. B. O. Davis Jr., recently announced the following promotions:

Captain Thomas J. Money, 27, adjutant of the Group, from rank of first lieutenant.

First Lt. William C. Wyatt, 29, special services officer of the Group, from second lieutenant.

First Lt. Paulus C. Taylor, 24, adjutant of a fighter squadron connected with the Group, from second lieutenant.

MOREHOUSE GRADUATE

Captain Money resides with his wife, Mrs. Leontine Money, at 6612 Eberhart avenue, Chicago. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Money, Vicksburg, Miss. He was graduated from Morehouse College in 1939 with the B. S. degree. 7-22-44

Before enlisting in the Army, Captain Money was employed as senior file clerk by the Chicago Welfare Association. He was a sergeant major at Tuskegee Army Flying School before entering officers candidate school. He was assigned to this fighter group last November.

EX-SCHOOL TEACHER

Lt. Wyatt is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Litt Carter, 2510 Whittier street, St. Louis, Mo. He has an eight-year-old daughter. He was graduated from Bishop College, Texas, in 1937 with the A. B. degree. He taught school in Missouri before the war.

TAYLOR A VIRGINIAN

7-22-44

Lt. Taylor is the son of Mrs. Estelle M. Taylor, Burkeville, Va. He was graduated from Hampton Institute in 1940 and holds the B. S. and M. S. degrees.

draftsman. 7-22-44

At the ... graduate ... the Infantry School, world's ... infantry units, in combat. At the ... largest institution of its kind, the ... same time he is taught such di... local officer took a four months ... course, yet necessary, subjects as ... to fit him for his new re... military law, mess management, ... responsibilities. The course ... covers and administration, and is con... technique of handling all the ... stantly impressed with the enor... modern infantry weapons ... mous responsibility of an officer ... and the tactics of leading small ...

BOOKER CONLEY PROMOTED AT FORT BENNING

Weekly Review
Birmingham, Ala.

FORT BENNING, Ga— (Special) —Booker Conley of Birmingham, Alabama, was commissioned a second lieutenant in the Army of the United States today upon successful completion of the Officer Candidate Course at the Infantry School at Fort Benning. Lieut. Conley is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Glenn of 28 Fourth Avenue, North, Birmingham, Ala.

The new officer is a graduate of Parker High School at Birmingham, Ala.

The new lieutenant enlisted in the Army on June 25, 1942 and served with the Infantry before going to Officer Candidate School four months ago. He held the rank of corporal before being commissioned.

in time of war. 7-22-44

The men who attended Officer Candidate School are recent Infantry ROTC graduates of colleges all over the country. Others include the best privates, corporals and sergeants from regular army outfits, selected by their superiors for outstanding intelligence and qualities of leadership. During the course even the mildly incapable are weeded out so that the man who graduate with commissions are America's finest soldiers, fully qualified to be the leaders in our rapidly growing Army.

Davis Finds "All Well" In Britain

Daily World – Atlanta, Ga.
8-1-44

VICE COMMAND, U. S. STRATEGIC AIR FORCES IN EUROPE—Negro and white troops are living and working together in the best traditions of the U. S. Army in the all-out effort to defeat the Nazi regime, reported Brigadier General Benjamin O. Davis, of the Inspector General's Department, following a recent tour through a Quartermaster trucking station in the European Theater of Operations.

This station, commanded for the past year by Lieutenant Colonel Ellington D. Golden, of Paris, Illinois, has been outstanding, not only for its efficient and democratic administration, but also for its amazing record in the hauling of tons, of bombs ear-marked for enemy territory.

Colonel Golden believes that every man is a soldier regardless of race. and he has endeavored to instill that ideal into his junior officers and enlisted men. No officer can remain on his station without striving to carry out the principles of this ideal. As a result, his troops are helping not a little in making the Allied Air Force the master of European skies. 8-1-44

Harmonious relationships are reported in all departments. Master Sergeant William P. Tompkins, of 145-13 109th Avenue, Jamaica, Long Island, New York, is the station sergeant-major. He supervises an office of personnel clerks for the various units living on the post.

General Davis was accompanied on his tour by Captain William Toumey, of 3252 Decatur Street, New York City, Acting Aide and Mr. Carlton Moss, also of New York City, member of the Special Coverage Section, Army Pictorial Service.

Dr. M. O. Bousfield Is Army Colonel

Chief & Independent
Nashville, Tenn. 3-24-44

FORT HUACHUCA, Ariz. (Special)—More recognition has come to an officer here in this, the largest post in the race for military operation. It fell upon Dr. M. O. Bousfield, who was promoted from Lieutenant Colonel to that of Colonel, Medical Corps commanding.

It seems that Dr. Bousfield was not aware of this new honor conferred upon him until he returned from a recent trip to the middle west where he went to spend a part of his vacation and to transact some business in connection with his interests in Chicago and the east.

3-24-44

BOULWARE'S YES... WE ALL TALK

Courier – Pittsburgh, Pa.

By Marcus H. Boulware

7-22-44

Last month General Benjamin O. Davis coined a new word. It was "hyphenated-Americanism." Of the hundreds of new words entering our language and speech annually, I have often wondered how many were created by Negroes. I have often wondered who these colored authors were. It is therefore interesting to note and discuss "hyphenated-Americanism.'

"Hyphenated-Americanism" was invented on Wednesday, June 21, 1944. General Davis used it when speaking for racial unity at a civic luncheon in Buffalo, N. Y., marking the beginning of the Fifth War Loan drive.

At this gathering, he called for the end of "hyphenated-Americanism." Says he, "I am hoping to live to see the time when we will have no hyphenated-Americans, no Italian-Americans, no French-Americans, no Afro-Americans, no Negro-Americans. I hope the time is coming when we will recognize men and momen for their work, their contributions to the uplift of this country."

General Davis didn't define his new lingual creation. But those who heard his speech recognized its meaning. I believe that Webster's dictionary will record some such definition as this: 7-22-44

"Hyphenated-Americanism" is an American practice of designating citizens, who have a mixture of American and foreign blood, by giving them a name based on the racial identity of their parents, rather than their contributions to American society; for example, Negro-Americans, Irish-American, etc.

Three Benning Officers Promoted

World – Memphis, Tenn.
8-22-44

FORT BENNING, Ga.—(ANP) — Recent promotion of one first and three second lieutenants within the Truck Regiment, with headquarters in the Harmony Church area of Fort Benning, was recently announced by Colonel Hans C. Jesperson, regimental commander.

First Lieutenant Harold E. Kans, Headquarters and Headquarters Detacment, has been promoted to Captain while Second Lieutenants James H. Chiles, 3500th QM Truck Co., Henry E. Cobb, 3518th QM Truck Company, and Theophilus Cottrell, 3519th QM Truck Company, have changed to the insignia of First Lieutentants.

Captain Kane, native of Southington, Conn., is regimental adjutant and has also served with the Third Student Training Regiment as adjutant of the Third Battalion of the Truck Regiment, and as commanding officer of the 3519th QM Truck Company. Married, he lives with his wife in Columbus.

Lt. Cottrell, of Orlando, Fla., is a graduate of Tuskegee Institute where he was a member of the ROTC during his college days. Entering the service in August, 1943, he was soon accepted for Infantry OCS and upon graduating was assigned to the Truck Regiment.

8-22-44

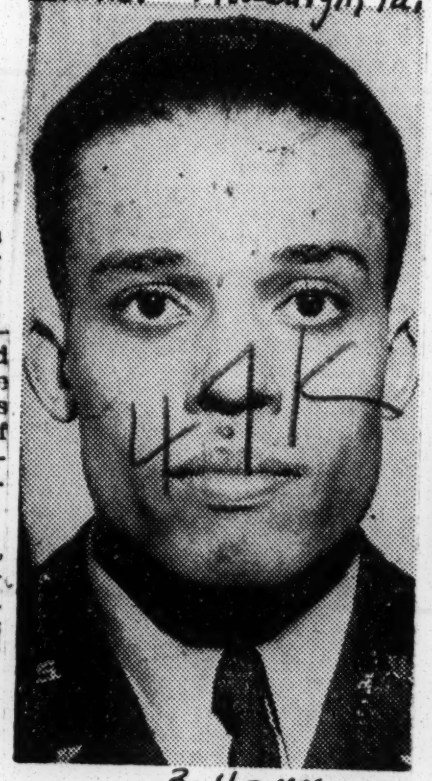
Lieutenant Cobb is a veteran who saw action in the South Pacific with an Anti-Aircraft unit. A graduate of Benedict College, Lt. Cobb is a native of South Carolina. He received his basic military training in his neighboring state, North Carolina, at Camp Davis. Later, following his return from overseas as an enlistd man, Lt. Cobb entered the Officers Candidate School at Camp Davis, N. C where he was commissioned.

Lt. Chiles is a native of Augusta, Ga., graduate of Paine College, and a former student at Temple University, Philadelphia. A musican of note, Lt. Chiles has traveled with and directed many vocal groups and is now helping to form an Officer's quarter in the Truck Regiment. He is also a graduate of the Officer's Motor Class, The Infantry School, and served as Motor Officer in the 3500th Quartermaster Truck Company.

7-22-44

FIGHTER PILOT

Courier – Pittsburgh, Pa.



3-4-44

Alfred M. Gorman, of Moline, Ill., has received the wings of a fighter and been commissioned a second lieutenant in the air corps at the Tuskegee Army Air Field. He will be given additional training in an aerial gunner school at Eglin Field, Florida.

9 Graduated at Chaplains' School

Afro-American – Baltimore, Md. 8-19-44

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. — Nine chaplains finished the Army Chaplain School at Harvard University last week, bringing the total number of colored chaplains who have finished the school to over 250.

Following the graduation exercises the chaplains left for assignments that will carry them to all parts of the world.

The names, denominations, last civilian pastorate city, and home State of the graduates are as follows:

Three Baptists

Mitchell C. Ateca, Baptist, Buffalo, N.Y. (North Carolina); Charles A. Cherry, Baptist, Springfield, S.C. (South Carolina); Theodore R. Daniels, Baptist, Paristow, Okla, (Oklahoma); Samuel D. Greer, Church of Christ, Washington (Washington);

Samuel A. Lewis, Lutheran, Baltimore (N.Y.); Frank A. Smith, Methodist, Pittsburgh (Pennsylvania); Carey D. Stemley, Methodist, Columbus, Ohio (Illinois); Clifford B. Spears, Disciple of Christ, Chicago (Illinois), and Phylemon Titus, Methodist, Leona, Texas (Texas).

GETS GOLD BARS

Courier – Pittsburgh, Pa.

3-18-44

2nd Lt. Orrington C. Hall, St. Paul, Minn., received his commission recently as a signal corps officer from Fort Monmouth, N. J. He was stationed in Alaska one year before earning his gold bars.

Officer Ousted from Mess Table

MAXWELL FIELD, Ala.—Colored troops here are up in arms over what they call a "slap in the face" two days after the invasion of Europe when a colored second lieutenant was forced to move from a table reserved for officers in the mess hall to one used by enlisted men.

The incident, which has affected men here and at Tuskegee Army Air Field, occurred while the men were at mess. The colored officer came in from Tuskegee, seated himself at the officers' table and was ordered immediately to move.

A chorus of "What in the name of the Lord are we fighting for?" was audible throughout the hall. "Are we fighting for something like this?" one soldier asked. Why don't Washington officials and pay these Southern camps a visit?" queried another.

Colonel Davis Visits Tuskegee

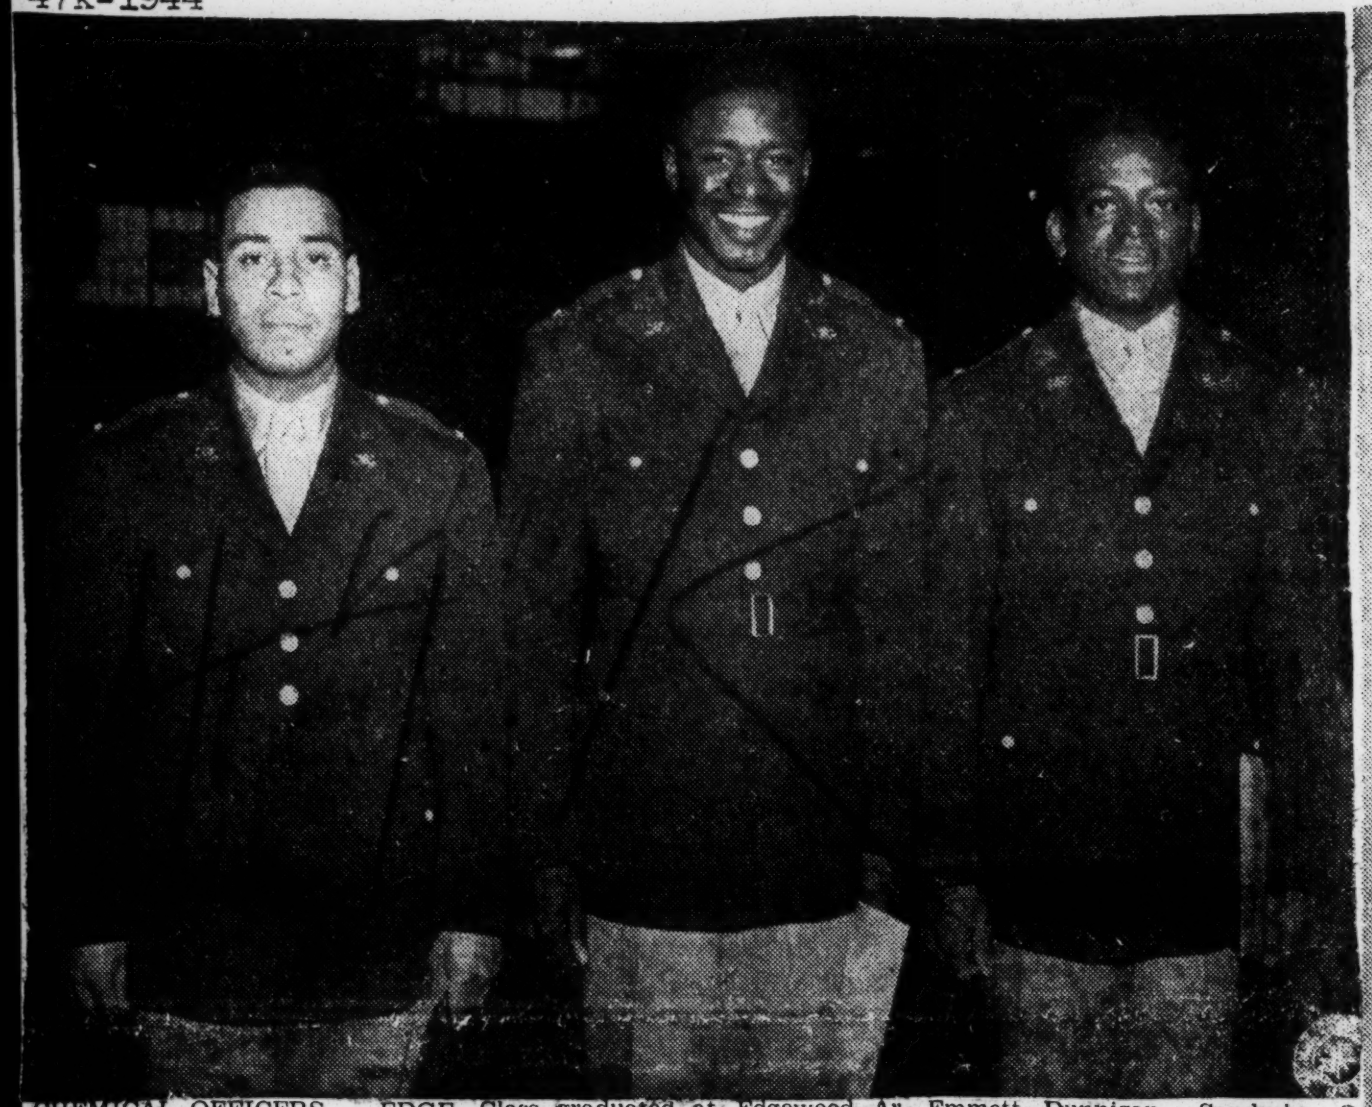
Daily World – Atlanta, Ga.
8-1-44

TUSKEGEE, Ala.—(SNS)—Dr. F. D. Patterson, President of TUSKEGEE INSTITUTE, greeted Brig. Gen. Benjamin O. Davis, Jr. here recently. Captain William Campbell of the 332nd Fighter Group composed of the 99th, 100th, 301st and 302nd Squadrons. The Colonel spoke in highest praise of the brilliant work being done by the Negro fighters. He brought greetings from Colonel Cumming is a graduate of Johns Hopkins Medical School and is a former physician of Ocala, Fla. Major Robinson, formerly pastored at the Stewartdent of Tuskegee Institute, and Ga. Chaplain Douglas T. T. Robinson were recently promoted to colonel at the Tuskegee Army Air Field. Col. Davis on furlough from his station in Italy spent a week at Tuskegee Institute just before returning to his post, commanding Chapel AME Church of Macon. Col. B. O. Davis Jr. is a native

2 Officers Receive Promotions at TAAF

TUSKEGEE, Ala.—Dr. Richard

47k-1944



CHEMICAL OFFICERS — EDGEWOOD ARSENAL, Md., Dec. 23 — Three members of the 31st Chemical Warfare Officer Candidate Class graduated at Edgewood Arsenal today are, left to right, Lucas C. Leos, Phoenix, Arizona Franklin Britton, Atlanta, and Emmett Dunnigan, Sandusky, O. Lt. Dunigan was selected as one of the 10 outstanding members of the class.

HERO AND MOTHER—Lt. Robert Hobson Smith of Baltimore, Md., and his mother, Mrs. Angeline D. Smith, in a photographic pose made before he went overseas. Lt. Smith was one of the pilots of the Fighter Group operating in and from Italy who have shot down 25 planes since July 12, and a total of 30 since going into combat with P-47s and P-51s. Counting the 17 credited to the 99th Fighter Squadron, the Negro fliers overseas now have a total of 47 confirmed aerial victories plus one Nazi destroyer sunk.

General Eboue Dead

People's Voice—New York, N.Y.

CAIRO, Egypt—Gen. Felix Eboue, one of the earliest adherents of the Fighting French cause and France's first Negro colonial governor, died last week in an Algiers hospital, according to an announcement coming from the French Committee for National Liberation. Eboue, a highly skilled organizer and administrator, was responsible for supplying the United Nations' armies with tons of food, crates of medicine, thousands of small repair parts from his Territory in Free French Equatorial Africa. Native troops, under his leadership, supported the military movements in Africa which led to the routing of German and Italian troops there.

Eboue was born in French Guiana in 1884 and was educated in the schools of that colony, later taking a degree in law from the university at Bordeaux, France. He started his career as a colonial administrator in Cubangui-Chari, rising to the position of governor-general over the Chad territory in 1939. He is credited with the initiation of many progressive measures in colonial government which affected the entire French policy.

The passing of Eboue is considered a loss to the Free French movement and to the colonial peoples of the world as well. It is believed that had he lived his counsel might have much weight in securing more liberal colonial policies at the peace table.

GENERAL EBOUE

Troops Bare Plot to Keep Colored Officers in U.S.

CAMP HOOD, Tex.—Complaints that the 659th Tank Destroyer Battalion, most highly rated such unit on the post, is being "raided" to build up another outfit, lacking in efficiency, for overseas duty were registered by soldiers here last week.

Comparing the two units, one soldier declared that the 659th has excelled the other battalion on all occasions and its fitness for overseas duty exceeds by far and beyond the shadow of a doubt that of the unit that has been selected for that honor.

The only other difference between the two outfits, he declared, "is the fact that the officers of the 659th are colored and those of the other unit are white, which carries no weight because all are officers in the United States Army."

Unit Holds Post Record

The unit headed by colored officers (battalion), 78.0.

"Why are attempts being made to take key personnel from this unit with a score of 82 per cent; Fourth Army ord-peatedly on the field and in classes to bolster a unit far from our nance inspection test, 3.4 out of possible 5; Army Ground Forces test (gun companies), 81.3 (rec-ord); Army Ground Forces

"Could our colored officers be the basis for this action and the Destroyer Group test with a superior outfit? Why are these things being done? Why sefer of lesser ability to represent the colored race on the field of combat?"

A Giant Passes

5-27-44

Felix Eboue, distinguished Governor-General of strategic Chad Province, died mysteriously in the French hospital in Cairo last week.

A native of Gaudeloupe and the first Negro to ever be governor of that island, he had spent his lifetime in the service of France, filling one important post after another. Pittsburgh Courier

In the darkest days of France, when the German armies had occupied the whole country and were exercising control over North Africa, Felix Eboue stood firm against the traitors and collaborationists.

He refused to bow to Vichy and was the first of the colonial governors to offer his services and territories to General DeGaulle. Pittsburgh, Pa.

He was the torch of freedom in the midst of the gloom that descended upon the French Empire with the capitulation to Hitler.

He was hailed far and wide for his loyalty to Republican France, and even American newspapers paid homage to him.

This was proper, too, because he was the only French leader who had the will and the means of defying Hitlerism.

By the terms of the armistice, the French politicians in France and North Africa were impotent, and General DeGaulle was merely a refugee in a London which was being shaken to its foundations by savage air raids by Goering's Luftwaffe.

Only Felix Eboue had troops and territory to provide a rallying point for Free Frenchmen.

Unfortunately Eboue's prestige declined, due to a calculated playing down in the "free" Allied press.

One heard everything about DeGaulle, but nothing about Eboue, a far more experienced diplomat.

The reason was that Eboue was black and in the Anglo-American world no black man must become too powerful.

Even worse, Eboue had ideas about Africa for the Africans, which is a treasonable thought in the minds of the Wall Street and Bank of England crowd that owns Africa and controls the administrators who run the continent.

Eboue would have proved increasingly annoying to the financial tycoons as peace came nearer for the Allied Powers.

He wanted the colonies to be self-governing with black men in full authority in their homeland.

Few French politicians agreed with him, and practically no British and Americans.

It is very convenient for them that Felix Eboue, the brilliant and courageous black West Indian, died at the early age of 56 years.

Eighteen More Graduate From Army Medic School

Afro American — Baltimore, Md.

5-27-44

CARLISLE BARRACKS, Pa.—Eighteen Negro officers, one of the largest groups in the history of the school, graduated from the Medical Field Service School here May 18, increasing the number of Negro Medical, Dental and Veterinary officers to receive diplomas from this National Training Center which is the Army's only military school for training Medical Department officers for field duty.

Other Negroes have been commissioned as Second Lieutenants following their graduation from the Medical Administratve Corps Officer Candidate School which operated here until a year ago. Negro enlisted men also have completed a Sanitary Technicians course at this service school.

The eighteen officers, all lieutenants, were part of the 52nd Officers Class graduated at exercises in Tugo Hall after completing six weeks training for duty as Medical Officers with troops in combat. Negro officers in that class were:

First Lieutenant William H. Bruce, M. C., 919 E. 12½ St., Winston-Salem, N. C. Graduate of Meharry Medical College.

5-27-44

First Lt. Arthur E. Calloway, M. C. of 663 E. Livingston Ave, Columbus, O Received his M D. degree from Howard Medical College.

First Lt. Vernon F. Goldson, M. C., of 171-24 103rd Road, Jamaica, Long Island, graduate of Howard Medical College.

First Lt. William P. Goodwin, M. C., of 133 Adams St., Steelton. Graduate of Howard Medical College.

First Lt. Charles E. Greenlee, M. C., of 16 N. W., Washington, D. C. Received his M. D. degree from Meharry Medical College.

First Lt. Clarence W. Greer, M. C., of 5941 Hazlett Ave., Detroit, Mich. Graduate of Meharry Medical College.

First Lt. James W. Hubert, M. C., of 104-63 165th St., Jamaica, N. Y. Graduate of Meharry Medical College.

First Lt. Charles C. Hunt, M. C., of 1187 E. 222nd St., Bronx, N. Y. Received his M. D. degree from Howard Medical College.

First Lt. Marion S. Johnson, of 1432 Twiggs St, Augusta, Ga., Graduate from Meharry Medical College with an M. D. degree.

First Lt. Lawson I. Miller, 2nd Lt., Sn. C., of 3842 Prairie Ave., Chicago, Ill. Received his B. S. degree from the University of Illinois.

First Lt. Milton F. Quanders, M. C., of 413 W. 14th St., New York City. Graduate of Howard Medical College.

First Lt. James H. Robinson, Jr., M. C., of Box 264, Milberdoire, Ohio Graduated from Meharry College with an M. D. degree.

5-27-44

First Lt. William C. Shanks, Jr., M. C., of Burlington, N. C., received his M D. degree from Meharry Medical College.

First Lt. Curtis B. Sprott, M. C., of 23980 Roberts Ave., Beaumont, Tex. Graduated from Meharry Medical College.

First Lt. Ellis E. Toney, Jr., M. C., of 109 Sycamore St., Oxford, N. C. Received his M. D. degree from Howard Medical College.

First Lt. Howard W. Williams, M. C., of 3900 Bain St., Philadelphi, Pa. Graduate of Meharry Medical College.

First Lt. Lee L. Williams, M. C., of 1204 E. Vine Ave., Knoxville, Tenn. Graduated from Meharry Medical College with an M. D degree.—R.

Looks Like A "Mother's Boy"

Pgh. Courier — Pa.

Youngest Medical Major Pride Of 'Ninety-Third'

5-27-44

By BILLY ROWE

WITH ELEMENTS OF THE 93rd AT BOUGAINVILLE—He looks like a "mother's boy," but today Lincoln W. Shumate is very much a man and the youngest colored medical major in the United States Army. Born 28 years ago in Washington, D. C., he completed a full school career in the same city. He came out of Howard university's medical school with an M.D. degree in 1940. From that time until 1941 he was an interne at Freemen's hospital. Leaving, he was appointed acting public health surgeon and served in Memphis, Tenn., until 1942.

A member of the Officers' Reserve corps since 1937, he was called to active duty in March of 42 and became a first lieutenant in the Medical corps, assigned to the 93rd Infantry division. Though young and fresh out of school, his down-to-business tactics paid early dividends and in June of the same year he became the commanding officer of Company A of the 318th Medical battalion. In October he shifted to Company D and in November promoted to a captain. A year later he became the youngest colored major in the Medical corps.

CITED BY GENERAL

Serving in that position during the last stages of training in the States, Major Shumate lived up to expectations and has many times been verbally cited by Commanding General Raymond G. Lehman, of the 93rd. However it is over here where, for the fist time colored Infantry doctors have been given a chance to prove that they are more than good pill rollers, that the youthful C. O. has received a chance to shine. Doing that with all the lustre of a diamond in the rough, he is performing a great and important task.

EAGER TO SEE WIFE

Under his supervision the first all-colored staffed clearing station in a combat zone is taking definite shape. A field hospital with nine medical, two dental and one medical administrative officer, such hospitals are the lifesavers of countless men in this war. Every route between them and the battle line is made shorter in various ways which allows more casualties to fight again than not. Shumate is a successful slap in the eye to the adage, "Wisdom Comes With Maturity."

Married to the beautiful Hazel Richardson of Washington, he expects to greet her first when he steps off the boat on the American side of the Golden Gate.

NEA—(ANP—Among Negro offi
NEA—ANP—Among egro
cers being hospitalized at a gen eral hospital here are Major
Leslie N. Wainwright of New York city and Capt Walton C.
Johnson, former manager of Howard university's track team.
The plans and training officers in all Negro ack ack bat alion, Major Wainwright is suf fering from a mild stomach rouble, while Capt. Johnson as a slight wrist injury.
The commanding officer of an air corps truck company, overseas for the past 23 months.
QMC, Capt. Jackson has been

No Negro Commanders

Courier — Pittsburgh, Pa.

9-9-44

General Eisenhower, Supreme Allied Commander, has spoken in no uncertain terms about Negro units in the European theatre of war.

When replacements are necessary in these black American combat units they are always to be white men, if the positions open are above the rank of first lieutenant.

Companies, battalions, regiments and brigades, according to Eisenhower must always be commanded by white men.

This is a kick in the face to all Negro officers who have won promotion by exemplary service.

Such a ruling in the middle of a war supposedly for democracy shows that our white people have learned nothing and intend to continue in the same path they have followed in dealing with Negroes in the armed service since the Revolutionary war.

Nothing can more quickly kill the interest and enthusiasm of an officer than to tell him that no matter how well he does his job he cannot hope to rise to the command of a company, battalion or regiment simply because he happens to be colored.

We believe that President Roosevelt should rescind General Eisenhower, must always be commanded by white men.

The President can do so because he is General Eisenhower's superior as Commander-in-Chief of all the armed forces of the United States.

NEGRO OFFICERS IN NEW GUINEA HOSPITAL

Savannah, Ga. Tribune

47k-1944

Kansas Flyer Returns Home

Lieut. Weldon Groves Was Member of 332nd

Back home from the wars this week came 27-year-old 1st Lt. Weldon Kenneth Groves of Edwardsville, Kas., wearing five air medal clusters decorations from three major campaigns and with 94 missions and one enemy plane to his credit.

Lieut. Groves walked into his home in Edwardsville Tuesday afternoon and surprised his mother, Mrs. Walter P. Groves, who was not expecting him until several days later.

Lieut. Groves arrived in New York from Italy on Dec. 15. He came direct from the war front where Col. B. O. Davis' 332nd fighter group is engaged in fighting the Germans. He won his leave to return home by completing 94 missions in rocord time. He downed an enemy plane last July in a mission over Hungary. Flying his P-51 Mustang, he made a direct hit, saw the Nazi pilot bail out and the Nazi plane burn and crash.

Lt. Groves, while not a Kansas City boy, is claimed by Greater Kansas City because the Groves family of Edwardsville is so widely known throughout this section. The flying lieutenant is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter P. Groves who still live on the estate of the late "potato king," by which name the elder Groves was affectionately known all over the country.

Born in Edwardsville, Lt. Groves went to grade and high school there, then attended the University of Kansas. In 1941 he volunteered for service in the air force. While waiting to be called, he worked at the Sunflower Ordnance Works at Desoto, Kas. In August, 1942, he was sent to the Tuskegee Army Air school, graduating in June, 1943. From there he went to Selfridge Field, Mich., from where he went overseas as a member of the 332nd fighter group, commanded by Col. B. O. Davis Jr.

Groves said that it felt "fine" to be back at home. The thing that he missed most while overseas, he said, was the people, his friends. The flyers received plenty to eat, he said, and were permitted because of their type of work to get plenty of rest, so he does not feel the need to sleep extra long hours since arriving home.

The first thing he wanted when he reached home was some of his mother's fried chicken.

Lt. Weldon Groves

Most excited members of the household when the flyer returned home were his two younger brothers, Edward Groves, in high school, and Wesley Groves Jr., Sumner Junior college student. Another brother, Pfc. Harold J. Groves, is in the South Pacific.

Lt. Groves has one sister, Mrs. George, Hoard, 917 Oakland, Kansas City, Kas. He is being kept busy visiting all his relatives and friends in the two Kansas Cities.

Lt. Groves brought with him the good news that Captain Richard Pullam, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Pullum, 2427 the Paseo, also is on his way home. Captain Pullam is Kansas City's own representative in the 332nd fighter group.

2 Promoted to Major in 93rd Inf. Division

SOUTHWEST PACIFIC— Captains Richard E. Evans of Itasca, Texas, and Harry C. Fields, Jr., unit's plans and training officer of Springdale, Ark., have been promoted to major in the 93rd Infantry Division.

Second Lt. LeRoy A. Brown of Augusta, Ga., was promoted to first lieutenant, while Winifred A. Hembry of Lewisville, Texas, was appointed warrant officer (junior grade) in the field of ordnance supply.

CAPT. WILLIAM FAULKNER KILLED IN AIR ACTION

Captain William J. Faulkner, Jr. 26, pilot in the famouns 332nd Fighter Group in Italy, son of Rev. W. J. Faulkner, Dean of the Chapel of Fisk and Mrs. Faulkner of Nashville, Tennessee, who was reported missing in action over in Austria a few weeks ago, has been reported finally as having been killed in action near Riechenfels, Austria, November 7. The German Government notified the U. S. War Department through the International Red Cross, a few days ago.

Major General N. F. Twining, commanding officer of the 15th Air Force wrote Rev. and Mrs. Faulkner that their son had participated in action throughout a vital period of operations in the Mediterranean theater. He stated, "You may be sure that his record of service compares favorably with those of our finest airmen. In recognition of meritorious achievement on operational flights he has been awarded the Air Medal and three Oak Leaf Clusters." He was a veteran pilot with 56 combat missions to his credit.

Captain Faulkner was commissioned 2nd Lt. at Tuskegee Air Field, April 29, 1943; 1st Lt. December 29, 1943 at Selfridge Field, Michigan and Captain at the front a few days before his death. Capt. Faulkner married Miss Martha Owens of Atlanta and Cleveland, May 29, 1943. He is a graduate of Morehouse College, Atlanta, and was the first colored Nashvillian to become commissioned a pilot. Prior to his enlistment, he worked for the Lockhead-Vega Aircraft Corp., Los Angeles, California as a builder of bombers. The day he decided to enlist he wrote his father, "Dad, I'm tired of building them. From now on I want to fly them." The Faulkners formerly resided in Atlanta, where Rev. Faulkner pastored First Congregational Church.

Serving In France

A special service officer of the 614th Tank Destroyer Battalion, 1st Lt. Leonard Ineal Burch is serving with the 1st Army somewhere in France. Burch, a native of Columbus, Georgia, student of University of Illinois and Chicago's Embalming College, is the husband of the former Rachelle Atkinson King, native of Anniston, Ala., who is now residing at 5810 South Parkway, Chicago, Illinois and teaching under the Chicago Public School System.

Burch, a civilian pilot, also studied in Chestertown, Md., and Cleveland, Ohio

Medical Officer of Oklahoma Wins Silver Award

By ART CARTER
(War Correspondent for NNPA)

WITH 92ND DIVISION. — A medical officer and a former all-CIAA football star were among 14 92nd soldiers of the 92nd division honored Friday for a gallantry in action as the division commander awarded four silver stars and 10 bronze stars in a ceremony punctuated by the echo of artillery shells.

1st Lt. Lawrence Lackey, 928 6th Ave., Ardmore, Okla., of the medical detachment was the first officer to receive the award. He received the silver star along with Pvt. Jake McInnis of Prentiss, Miss., 2nd Lt. Albert Seay of Brooklyn, N.Y., and 1st Lt. Walter Vaughann of Roanoke, Va., the latter white.

Lackey lived through three days and nights of hell evacuating 17 wounded soldiers between October 7-10. He led a litter squad over a narrow mountain passage, open to hostile fire to an improvised hospital in an old bomb-battered building with borrowed blankets. Leaving the wounded in care of technicians, Lackey returned to the rear, picked up supplies and made a return trip with the ration train.

Two men were wounded on the return trip, but Lackey continued the hazardous journey to deliver food and medicine. He later reconnoitered for a safer route and evacuated the wounded by a new path to waitnig ambulances, thereby saving many lives.

Kill 38 Nazis

A Langston university graduate, Lackey said, "I appreciate this award but there a dozens of medical men out there doing better jobs. "Every night some of my men would brave enemy fire to evacuate the wounded."

McInnis displayed iron fortitude on October 12, when he singlehandedly inflicted 13 German casualties, while repulsing six vigorous enemy attacks from his mountain positions. Given a machine gun position on a mountain top, McInnis was a target for everything in the German books, machine gun fire, machine pistol, rifle and artillery fire, but he stayed shot for seven hours killing 38 Nazis in one counter-attack.

He inflicted casualties with his M-1 rifle, after discovering that traverse afforded by his tripod machine gun failed to cover all approaches of the enemy.

Lt. Seay led the patrol which wiped out an enemy machine gun-nest November 7. He was slightly wounded on this mission and the patrol was forced to withdraw without him, but he rolled and crawled back to his own line two days later.

T-4 Clarence M. Palmer, formerly of Baltimore, but now of Durham, N. C., all-CIAA tackle of North Carolina State college, 1932-33, was one of 10 receiving bronze stars.

Others Receive Medals

Disregard Wounds

Others are: T-Sgt. Leon Miller, S-Sgt. Johnson of Baltimore, led Palmer, the division comman-burst dangerously close Amherst, Va., to halt an ene- Louis Hamders clerk, went four miles on Patrice, who saved a Dayton, Ohio; Cpl. Floyd Jones, foot through shell fire to deliver decorated for action. monds, Memphis; Pvt. Elmore Pat- a message when a reconnaisance S-Sgt. Johnson of Ar New York City; Pvt. Sylvester Badgett, Sumner, Miss.; hours by enemy artillery. His de- my counterattack on a Nathaniel Johnson, Baltimore; livery of the message enabled the tober 12, that he didn Robert Johnson, Amherst, Va.; party to get protection and reach order to withdraw. He and two white officers, 2nd Lt. its objective. one wounded soldier a Ralph Rhodes of McCloud, Okla., Cpl. Jones, who returned to the ers through the spot and Major Wallace Hanes of Dal- rear echelon for spare tires and ble and so deployed continued under fire, located his unit then successfully led his men back to their own company before going to an aid station for treatment.

T-B Miller, communications wire chief waded across the river to another point with a jeep completely laying a line.

T-5 Hammonds was cited for evacuating a wounded comrade under fire, November 7, and Sgt. Badgett for destroying an enemy machine gun nest September 17.

While making the decorations the divisional commander pointed out that the numerous awards given the 92nd men reflected the intensity in battle and the determination that the men are showing in their quest for victory.

Five New Yorkers In 2nd Group At Hondo To Get Silver Wings

HONDO ARMY AIRFIELD, Hondo, Tex. — Thirty Negro students, comprising the largest class in the history of this huge airbase of the AAF Training Command, received silver navigator's wings Monday, during graduation exercises at the post theatre. Five of the graduates are from New York.

It was the second Negro group to complete the strenuous 18-week AAF training program for combat navigators. The first unit, numbering 24 Negro students ,won wings and commissions at Hondo Field on February 26, 1944.

The members of the latest class began their training at Hondo Field April 10 of this year. The graduates numbered 27 cadets, one warrant officer (junior grade) and two 2nd lieutenants. Upon completion of the course 11 of the cadets were commissioned flight officers; the remaining 16 cadets and the warrant officer were commissioned second lieutenants.

The New Yorkers among the graduates are: Second Lieutenants Ellie J. Bagley, 21, 1061 Boston rd., New York City, and Albert L. Gaines, 20, 430 Clinton street, Buffalo; and Flight Officers Marcel Clyne, 21, 814 East 163rd street; Edward R. Tabbanor, 22, 566 West 159th street, and Sheldon R. Weaver, 19, 520 West 158th street, all of New York City.

Ex-Tuskegee Instructor Now Air Major

WITH THE TWELFTH AIR FORCE, Italy—Nelson S. Brooks, son of Mrs. Edna S. Brooks of Chicago and former Tuskegee instructor, has been promoted to the rank of major in a 12th Air Force fighter group under command of Lt. Col. Benjamin O. Davis, Jr.

'Work, Train, Live Together'

General Eisenhower Issues Equal Opportunity Order

By TREZZVANT W. ANDERSON

WITH THE INVASION FORCES IN ENGLAND—(ANP)—The cardinal point upon which the struggle of the American Negro in the USA is based has received strict recognition from none other than the commanding general of the European Theatre of Operations, Gen. Dwight Eisenhower, himself a native of Kansas, and is contained in an order sent out by him recently. The edict contains all of the personality of "Ike" himself, and is couched in unmistakable language.

The point stressed as number one which reads:

"Equal opportunities for service and recreation are the right of every American soldier regardless of branch, race, color or creed."

It is the first point covered in the directive which draws attention to the fact that soldiers "must train together, work together, and live together in order to attain successful teamwork in campaign," and points out that the sharing of work opportunities and recreational facilities must be willingly accepted and utilized to unite more closely the troops of the several commands.

Lieut. Henry Assigned To Kegee Field

TUSKEGEE ARMY AIR FIELD, Ala.—Second Lt. Milton P. Henry, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter L. Henry, of 2119 Reed street, Philadelphia, was recently assigned to this station for duty.

Lt. Henry, a graduate of the Tuskegee Army Air Field's Corps of Aviation Cadets, was commissioned from the Signal Corps Officers' Candidate School, Fort Monmouth, N. J. in September, 1942 and was later assigned to the Tuskegee Field where he won his wings.

The pilot attended Lincoln university and Temple university. He is a member of Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity and was employed by the Bell Telephone Company of Philadelphia before induction. His brother, Capt. Walter L Henry, Jr., is a member of the Medical Corps.

332nd Vet in Nashville

LT. CARL E. JOHNSON, veteran pilot of the 332nd Fighter Group, who has spoken to students at Fisk University and Meharry Medical College during his stay at the Army Air Forces rehabilitation center in Nashville. A native of Passaic, N.J., Lieutenant Johnson flew for two years as a commercial pilot. He expects to return overseas in March.

Gen. Davis Given "Permanent Beat" In European Area

WASHINGTON, (ANP) — Brig-Gen. Benjamin O. Davis has been permanently assigned to the staff of the inspector-general in the European Theatre of Operations, it is learned here. Gen. Davis has been in the theatre since July. At that time he accompanied Carlton Moss, playwright, and Maj. Homer Roberts of the press branch, during the shooting of films for a follow-up to "The Negro Soldier."

The assignment of Gen. Davis to this theatre gives rise to the belief that conditions overseas are not as happy as might be desirable. A War Department source here pointed out last week that there are now more Negro soldiers overseas than are in the continental United States.

Assigned to TAAF

Capt. ALLISON R. HENDERSON, a veteran of combat activity in the North African war theatre, who has been assigned to the station hospital at the Tuskegee Army Air Field. Formerly a practicing physician in Detroit, Captain Henderson served with the medical group in Liberia, where the 41st Engineers were building air bases, before going to North Africa. He is a graduate of Morehouse College and Meharry Medical College

Negro Officer Attends AMG

Lt. Monroe L. Dowling of the Adjutant General's department began study at the University of Chicago's School on Public Affairs (AMG) last week.

He is the first Negro officer to take up the Allied Military government study here. Upon the completion of his work at Chicago university on September 18, Dowling, who was born in Atlantic City, and resides in New York City, will report to Harvard university, Cambridge, Mass., for further study.

Dowling was the first Negro to obtain the Master's degree in Business administration at Harvard university. Before entering the army, he headed the New York City section on United States Employment service being the foremost authority on the labor market in New York state. He helped the government organize its Dependency and Benefits office in Newark, N. J. In the army he has finished the Adjutant General's School at Fort Washington, Md., and also the advanced Quartermaster's school at Camp Lee, Va.

Missing In Action

CAPT. CHARLES F. GANDY

Daring commander of a company of the 92nd Division now fighting with the Fifth Army in Italy who was reported missing in action by the War Department last week. Captain Gandy, the first officer to be promoted on the field by Lt. Gen. Mark W. Clark, won the admiration of his soldiers because he "wouldn't ask a soldier to do anything that he wouldn't do." His home was in Washington, D. C.

Military School

Col. Noel F. Parrish, commandant of this base.

TAAF Inspectors

TUSKEGEE, Ala.—The appointment of Capt. Clarence C. Jamison and First Lieut. Milton B. Hall, former pilots with the 99th Fighter Squadron, as supervising assistants to Major Clay Albright (white), director of advanced training and P-40 fighter transition training here at Tuskegee was promoted from Major last week and assigned by the army to head up a health project in Liberia which may last for five years, the NNPA has learned.

Before entering the army, Col. West was superintendent of Provident Hospital in Chciago. He was superintendent of the station hospital at Fort Huachuca before going to Liberia.

Prior to that, and before the year, he was in Ethiopia for over a year assisting that country with its health program. He is an expert in tropical diseases.

Major John West Now Lt. Colonel To Head Liberia Health Project

WASHINGTON, D. C. — (NNPA) — Lieut. Colonel John West

47k-1944

Former Baltimore Teacher Heads 92nd Postal Section

6-3-44

By ART CARTER

AFRO War Correspondent with U.S. Troops in Italy

[Copyright, Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

WITH THE 92ND DIVISION IN ITALY—(By Courier)—The weather here fails to deter Capt. Charles E. Brown, former Baltimore teacher, and his 14-man staff at the divisional APO as they laboriously sort mail, write money orders and keep the mail moving to and from the men who do the fighting.

Working in a shell-scarred building vacated by the harassed natives when the Allies routed the Jerries from this seashore, the divisional postal section men are operating the only APO staffed by colored in Italy.

Through their hands pass upwards of 100,000 letters per day on peak days, with additional postal duties embracing every service rendered by the main post offices back home.

Activated at Fort Huachuca in 1942, the unit has moved intact to Italy, and is ready to handle speedily the expected flow of Christmas mail for the division's fighting men.

Capt. Brown, who just received his promotion from first lieutenant two days ago is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Claude H. Brown, 506 Laurens Street, Baltimore, and a Morgan State College graduate. He has been in charge of the unit since its organization.

Members of the unit are:

T/4 Joseph H. Reid, 1219 Franklin Street, Northeast, Washington, D.C.; T/4's Jay Parham, Trenton, N.J.; Joseph Cook, Newark, N.J.; Harry E. Turner, also Trenton; T/5 Walter L. Proctor, Newark, N.J.; S/Sgt. Henry Payne, Detroit, chief clerk; Sgt. Frederick U. Redding, Atlanta, Ga.; T/5 Maynard L. Jackson, Los Angeles, Calif.; Sgt. Alvin B. Royal, New Orleans, La.; Pfc. Philip J. Smithey, Norfolk, Va.; T/3 Jerome T. Powell, Shreveport, La.; T/4 Arnold U. Barranco, Oakland, Calif.; T/5 Hampton S. Lewis, Detroit, Mich., and Pfc. James V. Duncombe, also of Detroit.

Capt. Hall Gets High Air Honor

Afro American
Baltimore, Md.

Distinguished Flying Cross Awarded

DOWNED 3 PLANES

Earns Trip Home but Wants to Go Back

6-3-44

BULLETIN

TERRE HAUTE, Ind.—First word that her husband, Capt. Charles B. Hall, had received the Distinguished Flying Cross reached Mrs. Maxine Hall here Saturday by phone from the Baltimore AFRO-AMERICAN. She said her husband had not reached the States, but she is expecting him daily.

By ART CARTER

AFRO War Correspondent with U.S. Troops in Italy

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

ADVANCED AIRBASE IN ITALY. — (By Cable) — Capt. Charles B. Hall, 23, of Brazil, Ind., has been awarded the distinguished flying cross in recognition of his extraordinary achievement over the Anzio beachhead on January 28 when he shot down two enemy planes.

Hall, the first colored pilot to receive the outstanding aerial honor, is now in the States on a rest assignment. He is senior flight commander of the pioneer fighter squadron and has three German planes to his credit, having shot down his first FW-190 last July 2 —one month after the unit went into combat.

6-3-44

Flew 87 Sorties

At Anzio, where he completed his tour duty with eighty-seven sorties, Hall destroyed an FW-190 and an ME-109, getting his twin triumph on the same mission. The DFC citation, announced by the 12th Air Force, declared:

"While leading an eight-plane patrol over Anzio, Italy, Captain Hall sighted six FW-190's and ME-109's preparing to strafe Allied ground troops. Attacking so aggressively that he completely disorganized the enemy formation, Captain Hall shot down two enemy aircraft as his comrades destroyed two FW-190's and dispersed the remainder without loss or damage to the P-40's."

6-3-44

The citation added, "on many missions through the Sicilian and Italian campaigns, his steadfast devotion to duty and outstanding proficiency as a combat pilot have reflected great credit upon him and to the armed service."

16 Planes in 10 Days

First Lts. Robert W. Deiz of Portland, Ore., and Lewis C. Smith, Los Angeles, were the other pilots who shot down FW-190's during the same mission. During the entire beachhead drive, the squadron destroyed sixteen enemy planes in ten days.

Hall, always eager and determined, once told me: "Anything Nazi that flies in the air is in for a belly of hot lead if it gets in my sight."

When he left for a rest period, he declared: "Home is no place for a man in this war and I will be back."

6-3-44

Kept Same Plane

He handled the same plane all the way from Casablanca through North Africa and Sicily into Italy. It had seven flak holes and a new tail, to replace one that was shot up, besides three swastikas on the left fuselage.

A former Eastern Illinois Teachers' College athlete and Sunday school teacher, Hall is married to Mrs. Maxine Hall, 80 S. Eighteenth Street, Terre Haute, Ind. His mother is Mrs. Anna Hall, 1826 John Street, Fort Wayne, Ind.

Lt. Stanley Davis Killed in Italy

AFRO-AMERICAN
Balt. Md.
12-30-44

ELIZABETH, N.J.—Lt. Stanley B. Davis, former Thomas Jefferson High School athlete, was killed in action on the Italian front November 27, the War Department has informed his wife, Mrs. Jean Davis.

LT. STANLEY B. DAVIS

Lt. Davis was inducted into the Army in March, 1941, and was trained for one year at Fort Devens, Mass. before going to officer candidate school at Fort Benning, Ga.

Later he was stationed at Fort Huachuca, Ariz., where he remained until shipped overseas last September with an infantry unit.

Lieutenant Davis, the son of Robert E. Davis of 1072 Magnolia Avenue of Elizabeth, was particularly active in high jumping and tennis at the Jefferson School and was a member of the Union Baptist Church.

In addition to his wife and father, he is survived by his eleven-month-old daughter, Mildred Ruth; a brother, Cpl. Robert E. Davis, Jr., now in France; two sisters, Mrs. Mildred Thompson, Elizabeth, and Miss Gladys Davis of Newark.

5-27-44

Capt. John D. Manly and Lieut. Louise M. Jacobs who were married at Camp Livingston, Louisiana, recently. Both the bride and bridegroom are attached to the Medical Corps and served in the army at Fort Bragg, N.C., and were later assigned to Liberia, where they remained for eleven months.

AFRO-American Balt. Md.

Pilot Says First 3 Battles Are Worst

Afro American
Baltimore, Md.

By CLARENCE M. LONG, Jr.

OBERLIN, Ohio.—"If you can survive your first two or three air battles, you can usually count on a fairly safe return home," First Lieutenant J. Bernard Knighten, member of the original 99th Fighter Squadron, said here this week. The pilot, who arrived from Italy on May 16, was here visiting his mother, Mrs. Julia A. Knighten.

6-3-44

Lt. Knighten

His return reduces to six the number of original 99th squadron members now on duty overseas.

Lieutenant Knighten who has flown eighty-one sorties during his fourteen months abroad wears service ribbons for North Africa, Sicily and Italy. He was the first of eight to reach the States.

Admits One Close Call

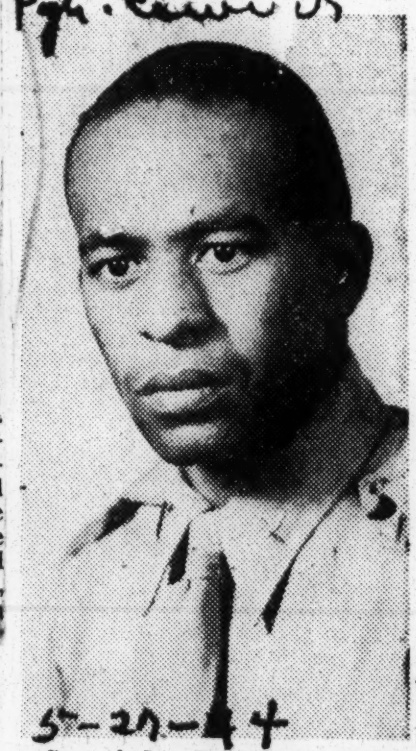
6-3-44

Reluctant to discuss his activities, he admits that one close call came to him one day when he and his companion, Lieutenant Dryden, were attacked by four enemy planes on their return home from a bomber escort mission.

They bluffed the enemy by flying straight into them and then hightailing for home as the bullets whizzed past them. He said also that there was no discrimination in the area which the group occupied.

UP A NOTCH

Pgh. Courier 5



Second Lt. Robert M. Preer, weather officer at the Tuskegee Army Air Field, was recently promoted to the rank of first lieutenant by an order from the War Department. The officer was commissioned from the Meteorolgy Aviation Cadet Corps of Yale university on September 6, 1943. He attended Morehouse college from 1937 to 1941.

Lieutenant Preer is the son of Mrs. Rose Brown, Atlanta, Ga., and is married to the former Miss Bette V. Banner, of Boston, Mass. He was secretary to the registrar at Atlanta university prior to entering the armed forces.—Offiical U.S. AAF Photo by AAF Training Command.

332nd Ends Year In Combat

Pittsburgh Courier

Colonel Davis Recalls Mission Over Budapest

Pittsburgh, Pa.

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J.—In less than one year the all-Negro 332nd Fighter Group, stationed with the 15th Air Force in Italy, has flown more than 100 missions and has firmly established itself as an efficient, hard-hitting outfit, Col. Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., the group's commanding officer, declared last week.

DOWN 9 PLANES IN 30 DAYS

"Flying P-51s on bomber escort and strafing missions, we destroyed 75 ships in the air and easily twice that number on the ground," the colonel recapitulated at AAF Redistribution Station No. 1.

He pointed out that flying fighter escort on long-range bombing missions was a job well suited to his group. "All the men enjoy it," he related, a because it gives them the opportunity for aerial combat."

As an example of the lengths to which his men will go to get into the thick of things, the 32-year-old West Pointer told of a mission to Budapest last October when the four squadrons comprising the 332nd were ordered to strafe river and rail traffic along the Danube. West of Budapest, he related, a low-flying plane and pilot spotted a pilot shot the plane down, then called for the rest of his squadron.

"They were over an airfield where fliers were practicing landings and take-offs," said the colonel. "They joined the traffic pattern and shot down four more ME-109s. On their way up to rejoin the group they picked up four Heinkel 111s and after a series of passes got them all."

12-30-44

The squadron headed by the colonel then proceeded up the Danube and strafed oil barges and railway trains. A third squadron located another airfield and destroyed 18 ships on the ground, while the fourth came across a motor park and destroyed or damaged a fleet of trucks.

"Not bad for one five-hour mission," added the colonel.

Broadcasting General

BRIGADIER GENERAL BENJAMIN O. DAVIS, who is at present in the European Theater of War, broadcasts on the Army hour describing his recent inspection of Negro troops on the continent. He is to head the making of the picture on the Negro soldier in the war. —Signal Corps.

Amsterdam News
No 4 p 1 c 1

9-2-44

Captain Edward L. Toppins of 99th Squadron Returns After 137 Missions

Call—Kansas City, Mo.
11-24-44

By E. F. JOSEPH

LOS ANGELES. — (AN)—Capt. Edward L. Toppins, flight commander of the famed 99th squadron, returned home from the war last week, credited with 137 combat missions and four non-combat missions, during 15 months in the Italian campaign.

Sporting the air medal with five oak leaf clusters and the European theater ribbon with three campaign stars, Capt. Toppins is officially credited with one Nazi kill, downed over the Anzio beachhead in Italy.

He does not consider his experience as a flight commander as an adventure, he said, but just a job that had to be done, a job that was the immediate and only concern of every American flier who could bring his machine guns to bear on any enemy plane or position.

Born in Mississippi, Capt. Toppins came to California 17 years ago. He attended the University of San Francisco and took a total of five courses in civilian pilot training, securing his commercial license and instructor's rating. The training was tremendously useful to him after he entered the army, he admitted, although it was hard for a Negro to get the courses. "Once in," he remarked, "there was no trouble at all."

11-24-44

Much at Stake

His cadet training started six weeks after Pearl Harbor, he said, with primary, basic and advanced courses at Tuskegee, where he won his wings and a commission as a second lieutenant on Sept. 6, 1942. He recalled that he was one of four replacements for the 99th Fighter squadron, an independent all-Negro unit, whose personnel felt that their reputation both as Americans and as Negroes depended on their performance under fire.

He joined the squadron in Sicily after leaving North Africa and took part in the sicilian and the Salerno campaign. At little later the 99th moved to the Italian mainland where it worked in close support of the British 8th army, diving and strafing just in advance of Gen. Montgomery's push up the Adriatic coastline to Termoli, Sangro river, Ortena and Pescars.

His combat experience over Europe came with a shift across Italy to the west coast where he flew in support of the American 5th army as it drove ahead across the Volturne river . After that they gave concentrated attention to the support of American troops in the Anzio beachhead operation. They expect to be kept in the Anzio beachhead operations, he said.

Praising the P-40s as "Wonderful ships," Capt. Toppins said that his first dogfight occurred over Anzio beachhead when a group of 20 nazis planes attacked the infantry.

11-24-44

Shot Down Eight

"We shot down at least eight the first day," he remarked, "and when they returned for more trouble the next day, we accounted for an additional seven."

He considers that first dogfight as "probably the greatest excitement during all the months that I was overseas." Above the Anzio beachhead, Capt. Toppins made his first Nazi kill and probably helped to send others to the ground.

After the capture of Florence the outfit was re-organized and Capt. Toppins joined the 332nd Fighter group and shifted from P-40's to P-51's. This group took up a new assignment of escort flying. They were traveling much greater distances in support of heavy bombers. This assignment took him over Germany, France, Yugoslavia, Austria and Bulgaria. Their job was to give the bombers the greatest possible measure of protection.

11-24-44

Long overdue for leave, Capt. Toppins is here with his mother, Mrs. Martha E. Davis and his sister, Mrs. Henriette Whitby, both prominent figures in civic, church an social life.

"I'm going to try mighty hard to stay in aviation and to continue flying," he said in regard to his post-war plans, "though that may be pretty difficult as there are many wartime aviators who feel just as I do about that."

While in the 99th, Capt. Toppins flew 121 sorties and 12 patrols before shifting to escort duty. He made nine flights.

Pilot Killed in Take-off

AFRO-American Balt. Md

Crash in Italy; 2 Missing

6-27-44

ADVANCED AIR BASE IN ITALY—(By Air Mail, Delayed)—Recent casualties among Tuskegee-trained fighter pilots on duty here have included 2nd Lt. Edgar L. Jones, 21, of NYC, killed in a take-off mishap on April 24, and two flyers reported missing after straffing and dive-bombing missions.

Lieutenant Jones, one of the five recent replacements for the fighter group doing coastal patrol work along the Western Italian coastline, was killed almost instantly when his plane collided with several others in a group of twelve leaving on an early morning strafing mission.

It was to have been his first combat mission, although he had made other flights on patrol duty. Blinding dust and a severe cross wind were blamed for the crash.

2 Fail to Return

The missing pilots are 1st Lt. James R. Polkinghorne, 22, a member of the P-39 squadron commanded by Capt. Lee Rayford, and 2nd Lt. Neal V. Wilson, 27, a recent replacement in the pioneer 99th Fighter Squadron.

Lieutenant Polkinghorne, from Pensacola, Fla., failed to return after a strafing mission on May 4. Deputy flight leader in his unit, he was last seen leaving the target area and apparently was shot down by enemy flak, though no definite indication of what happened to his plane has been established.

Polkinghorne, who lived with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. James R. and Maggie R. Polkinghorne, of Pensacola, was a former Florida A. and M. student, and was graduated from aviation school at Tuskegee April 21, 1943. He came overseas in February and had been one of the most active patrol pilots in his unit.

LT. JAMES R. POLKINGHORNE

Nelson Lost in Clouds

Lieutenant Nelson, a native of Amarillo, Tex., but more recently of Chicago, was flying his fifth mission on May 12 when he was last seen pulling into formation after making his bomb run.

Lt. Jones Lt. Nelson

Visibility was poor, however, and pilots had to pick their way through clouds to reach the target area. This fact, coupled with heavy enemy flak, is reported to have created difficulty for the missing pilot, though when last seen he did not appear to be in trouble.

Missed Seeing Dad

Nelson completed aviation training at Tuskegee October 1, 1943, and later trained at Selfridge Field before joining the 99th here on April 10.

Ironically, he missed seeing his father, Capt. Lorenzo Nelson, of Chicago, a medical officer attached to an all-colored infantry unit which recently reached this theatre.

The two were within forty miles of each other, but had not met when the pilot was reported missing.

Col. West To Head Project In Liberia

Daily World—Atlanta, Ga.
10-13-44

WASHINGTON, D.C. — (CNPA) — Lieut. Colonel John [illegible] promoted from Major [illegible] assigned by the Army to head up [illegible] a health project in Liberia which [illegible] may last for five years, the CNPA has learned.

[illegible] trip to Africa. He previously was superintendent of Provi[illegible] in Liberia with the first [illegible] dent Hospital in Chicago. He was [illegible] third trip [illegible] d in command to Col. M. O. [illegible] served in [illegible] gent of American troops to [illegible] second in [illegible] contingent [illegible] on the Dark Continent, as [illegible] Bousfield at the station hospital [illegible] land on [illegible] of the medical detachment at Fort Huachuca before going [illegible] head of [illegible] to that, and before the war, [illegible] overseas to Liberia. [illegible] Prior to [illegible] s in Ethiopia for over a year [illegible] he was in [illegible] he assisted that country [illegible] where he [illegible] health program. He is an [illegible] authority on tropical diseases.

10-13-44

Before entering the Army, Col. West will be making his [illegible]

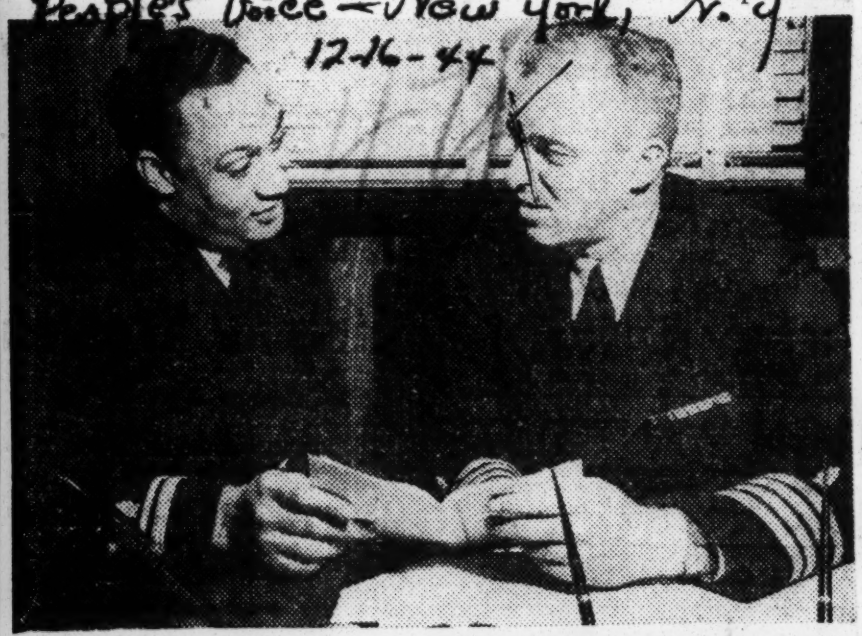
47k-1944

HI-YA Soldier!

12-16-44

PVT. EVERN EDWARDS writes to the column from Hamilton Field in California that one of the features in the post paper is a column written by a Negro—Pvt. Warrington Hudlin. He feels that this sort of thing shouldn't go unnoticed and we agree with him. So here's a pat on the back to the management of the Takeoff for its democratic attitude! . . . Pvt. Albert J. Jones and Cpl. Alfred Franklin, a couple of intrepid New Yorkers, who entered the service 22 months ago are still serving together although they're way down in the Southwest Pacific. . . . Capt. Wendell O. Pruitt, veteran of 70 missions with a terrific record of accomplishment

People's Voice—New York, N. Y.
12-16-44



ONE OF THE FIRST of the new Naval officers is Lieutenant (jg) Ivan George Hunton Fraser of Springfield, Mass. He was sworn into the Dental Corps November 21st and has recently reported to Great Lakes Training Station for duty as Dental Officer. In the foto above he receives instructions from Capt. Robert R. Irons, senior dental officer.

12-16-44

in the European theatre was personally welcomed home by the mayor of St. Louis on his return. Not only did he and his co-pilot sink an enemy destroyer but also shot down three planes and destroyed eight of them on the ground.

Speaking of guys sticking together what about four Chicagoans George Maxey, William Beckman, Robert F. White and John E. Bryant? They were inducted together; went to Ft. Sheridan; trained at Camp Plauche and Norfolk before going overseas and are now serving together somewhere in England. And now another achievement comes to them jointly: they have been made corporals . . . 1st Lieut. Edward McKinley Thomas of Chicago has been assigned to the position of flight leader in the all-Negro fighter group—the 15th AAF in Italy.

Three men with the Air Service Command in Italy have been recent recipients of the good conduct medal. They are Cpl. Thomas Spencer, State College, Miss.; Pfc. Garner P. Martin, Jackson, Ala., and Cpl. Robert G. Harris, Shreveport, La. . . . Nice goin' gents. . . . 2nd Lieut. Wendel W. Hockaday of Norfolk has been assigned to the P-51 Mustang fighter group in Italy. . . . Pvt. Manean Jordan of here is now a member of the combat support wing at an Air Force Service Command somewhere in England. . . . Leonidas F. Livisay who used to live on 138 st has won a promotion in Italy and it's now Captain Livisay, if you please! . . . A pair of New Yorkers, Pvt. Clifden O. Bunyan and Cpl. Curtis S. Banks helped honor Queen Mary of England recently during a musical program at an American Red Cross club. Bunyan played the violin and Banks served on Her Majesty's Guard of Honor.

See ya, soldier—Joe Bostic.

TWO NEW YORKERS serving with the 14th Service Command in the Southwest Pacific are shown above. On the left is Sgt. Willie Golfe of Harlem. Shown with him is Pfc Leonard B. Williams of New Rochelle.

12-16-44

Five 92nd Div. Sergeants Commissioned in Field

Afro-American-Baltimore Md.
11-25-44

By ART CARTER
AFRO War Correspondent with U.S. Troops in Italy
[Copyright, Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

WITH THE 92nd DIVISION IN ITALY (By Cable)—Recognition of their outstanding leadership during the fighting that spearheaded the unit's advance to its present position along the coastal sector of the Fifth Army front was given five sergeants of the infantry division November 16 as they received battlefield promotions to second lieutenants.

Lt. Gen. Mark W. Clark, commanding general of the Fifth Army, pinned the gold bars on the collars of the combat doughfeet in a colorful ceremony beneath the noonday sun in the picturesque city of Montecattine, nestled below the Apennine Mountains, where the rugged soldiers are battling the Germans.

Recipients of the promotions were First Sgts. Gilbert Boothe, Forsythe, Ga.; Joseph E. Bray, Boston; T/Sgts. Frank Whisonant, 1418 W Street, Northwest, Washington; Joseph W. Fry, Homestead, Pa.; William F. Hicks, Cleveland.

Must Continue Tradition

General Clark extolled the men for their demonstration of natural ability as leaders on the battlefield, adding that from now on they would be marked men and expected to continue the high tradition that they have established.

The general also pointed out that the job of routing the enemy from the mountains was an unglamorous but important phase of the global war.

Likening their role to that of the football guard who goes unnoticed in press reports as running backs grab the glory, Clark said the Fifth Army was engaging over a score of the best enemy divisions in Italy—a fact that plays a big part in the over-all war picture.

He expressed complete satisfaction, emphasizing that the plan involves keeping the enemy here and destroying him.

All Groups Represented

All categories of the Fifth Army were represented in the mixed formation as three Brazilians and scores of American white soldiers and Wacs were also honored with decorations and promotions.

Pfc John S. Downer of Pittsburgh and 2nd Lt. Cunningham L. Bryant of Clifton, Va., the latter a members of an engineering unit supporting the 92nd, received bronze stars during the same ceremony.

Lieutenant Bryant was decorated for courageous leadership while completing the repair of a road near two blown bridges on the night of October 22, when his platoon was working in support of a white tank outfit.

Worked Through Heavy Fire

The first bridge by-pass was made without incident, but during the work on the second, the platoon was subjected to heavy enemy artillery fire.

Lieutenant Bryant refused to withdraw the platoon despite continual shelling and completed the task before dawn, enabling the tanks to proceed.

Downer, a member of a company commanded by Capt. Augustus Hamilton, evacuated a comrade wounded by enemy machine gun fire on September 12, braving German machine gun fire which pinned entire platoon down as it attempted to attack a hill crest.

Prayed and Cursed

Downer said, "When I first crossed the road to pull him back a small shell fragment hit me and I prayed. Then a potato masher tore my shirt off and I cussed, but somehow I got him to the ditch where the medics took over."

Whisonant, a former Dunbar High student and brother of S/Sgt. Lawrence Whisonant, a popular singer, received the Bronze Star last week for his heroic achievement September 4, when he assisted Lt. Mark Sullivan of Cleveland in the direction of artillery fire from an exposed position.

He has been an outstanding squad leader in the company commanded by Lt. Vernon Mitchell of Tuskegee. Whisonant's mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Whisonant, resides in East Spencer, Pa.

Hicks and Bray, both members of a company led by Capt. Clarence Brown, 1722 Columbia Avenue, Philadelphia, were conspicuously outstanding throughout the terrific fighting by their regiment in early October.

Highway Under Constant Fire

The fighting took place on mountain ranges overlooking the highway of a one-way supply route along the coastal sector which Germans kept continuously under fire.

Twenty-one men were lost during one battle, but the two remained calm and cool and the promotions were a fitting tribute to their leadership.

Boothe, the youngest of the quintet promoted, is a member of the company commanded by Capt. Jesse Jarman, Indianapolis, whose unit distinguished itself during heavy fighting near Werravezza.

Fry, formerly a worker, says simply, "Things have been pretty rough."

Hampton Graduate

Captain Watson has flown 46 missions against the enemy and has accumulated over 100 combat flying hours to his credit.

Mrs. Mary B. Watson of 357 W. 121st Street, NYC.

Then someone tells to him about his accomplishments. All are typical of the men carrying the 92nd banner as they trudge through mud and mountains against the Germans on the Fifth Army front.

15th AAF IN ITALY — Capt. Dudley M. Watson, 25, of New York City, pilot of a bomber squadron mission decision and leadership which enabled his formation of a recent active in civilian aeronautics. The pilot is a graduate of Southern Hampton Institute, and received his master of arts degree from Columbia University. His wife is

Col. B. O. Davis, Jr., was recently awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross.

The Flier was honored for has accumulated over 100 combat flying hours to his credit, having exhibited "extraordinary

New York Pilot Awarded DFC

11-25-44

Returns For Brief Rest

Daily World Atlanta, Ga. 11-25-44

Colonel Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., commanding officer of the 332nd Fighter Group, which has written its name in glorious history in Italian skies, has returned to the United States for brief leave. Colonel Davis holds the Distinguished Flying Cross and the Silver Star for gallantry in action. His outfit uses the deadly P-47 Thunderbolts.—(Photo by Army Air Forces)

Flyers Sore When Jerries Refuse to Fight—Davis

afro American

Colonel Says Pilots Are Spoiling for a Battle; Lauds Art Carter; Visits Fliers' Kin

Baltimore Md.

WASHINGTON

Describing the lack of enemy fighter opposition and inactivity due to bad weather as serious threats to the morale of his men, Col. B. O. Davis, Jr., told AFRO reporters Thursday that members of the 332nd Fighter Group are literally spoiling for a fight. The colonel, who is the commanding officer of the 332nd now in Italy and who holds the Legion of Merit and the Distinguished Flying Cross, said that the colored flyers are turning in a record which will compare favorably with that of any other group of flyers.

Col. Davis

Air Force recognition of the calibre of their performance, he said, has been expressed concretely in the type of mission to which they have been assigned and in the type of planes with which they have been furnished.

Little Opposition

For the past several months the colored flyers have been using P-51 Mustangs to provide fighter cover for 15th Army Air Force bombers over their target areas.

"The Mustang," said Colonel Davis, "is the best military fighter plane in the world."

Commenting on the scarcity of enemy fighter opposition in the group's zone of operations, he said that there had been no encounters with enemy planes during September and only one in October, when one squadron downed nine planes.

During the month of July and August, he pointed out, the pilots, in many instances, flew daily missions. While this was tough on the men, he said, it was far better than the enforced idleness which has resulted from the bad weather of the past few months.

Visits Pilots' Families

Colonel Davis spent the better part of his brief stay in Washington visiting the parents and families of the men in his command.

"It's a funny thing," he added, "while the families might have received letters dated more than a week after I left, they still want to talk to someone who has actually seen their boys."

Praises Carter

In conclusion, the colonel paid a high tribute to Art Carter, AFROA-MERICAN war correspondent.

"He is a swell newsman, conscientious and not the least bit lazy, It is quite possible for a correspondent to hang around Rome and meet fellows who are returning from all over—but Carter goes right up to where things are happening, and the men appreciate it.

"A few more Carters and we'd have much better coverage."

Nashville Man Makes Good As Army Chaplain

Tenn.

12-1-44

Globe & Independent

Gil B. Lloyd Credited with Building Battle Morale of Men of 24th Infantry

Nashville, Tenn.

A well known young Nashville man, now a chaplain in the U. S. Army, played an important role in establishing the high morale of the members of the 24th Infantry Regiment which made history by their gallantry at Bougainville. This is disclosed in an interesting article which appeared in the November 10 issue of the "Fort Wood News," published at Fort Leonard Wood in Missouri. The article deals with the services of Chaplain Gil B. Lloyd, a graduate of Fisk University and of Pearl High school, who volunteered and went into the Army as a chaplain back in 1941.

The young Nashvillian, a former superintendent of the Sunday school of First Baptist church, East Nashville, tells of the 24th Infantry, after long service in a quartermaster unit, being later put in a combat unit and having as their only fear, that of being unprepared spiritually and because of a lack of combat training to meet the enemy. But in a month the 1,900 men were steeled for their ordeal by the inspiring talks of Chaplain Lloyd.

12-1-44

After a month's training these men made history in establishing the Moravia beachhead. They made the Japanese death afraid of two things: the flame-thrower and American automatic weapons. The unit spent 40 days in the front line on Bougainville, absorbing everything the enemy could throw at them. Fourteen of the men were killed, Chaplain Lloyd revealed but the troops accounts for some 800 Japanese soldiers killed within a very small area, as a result of the Americans using automatic weapons.

Chaplain Lloyd is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Grant Lloyd Sr., of 712 Howerston St., and a brother of Mrs. Christine Lloyd Westbrook, the director of Christian Education in Middle Tennessee for Baptists. Misses Willie Pearl Lloyd of Fisk and Lillie Bell Lloyd of Pearl High school are also sisters of the Chaplain, who has other sisters and brothers. A victim of recurring malaria from his services overseas, Chaplain Lloyd was brought home last August, and after confinement in a hospital he was assigned to Fort Leonard Wood to help train troops for the war fronts.

Baltimore Medic on Job Near Front

afro-american

11-25-44

Capt. George Phillips Heads Unit in France ON 24-HOUR SCHEDULE

Baltimore Md.

Half of Patients Are White; Some Civilians

By OLLIE STEWART

AFRO War Correspondent with Invasion Forces in France

[Copyright, Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

WITH THE THIRD ARMY IN FRANCE (By Cable) — Capt. George E. Phillips, of 1902 McCulloh Street, Baltimore, Md., is a battalion surgeon up near the front and is one of the busiest men in this Third Army Sector.

A Howard University graduate, former resident surgeon at Provident Hospital and practicing physician in Baltimore, Dr. Phillips and his staff furnish medical aid to seven units. At one time twenty-three outfits sent their sick to his dispensary.

I met him while he was inspecting burns on the arm of Pvt. George Wright, truck driver from St. Louis, Mo.

Half of Patients White

After turning the patient over to two of his staff who immediately began peeling burned flesh from his arm as though it were an onion, Phillips sat down near where I was endeavoring to scrape mud from my shoes and leggings.

"We take care of twice as many companies as we are supposed to," he said wearily. "We operate twenty-four hours a day treating road accidents, the sick, and even French civilians.

"Half of our patients are white and they never object to my staff treating them. We use lots of penicillin for various ailments and my battalion has the lowest venereal disease rate in the area."

N.Y., Jersey Warrant Officers

While we talked, the burned man was bandaged efficiently and left. A white soldier with a cut over his eyes took his place and Phillips went over to examine the newcomer.

While he gave instructions for treatment, two battalion warrant officers, Robert E. Moore, NYC, and William H. Watkins, Orange, N.J. came over to talk with me.

Said Moore: "All men in the battalion swear by Doc Phillips. He has no relief and never complains about long hours, bad weather, or anything."

Staff from N.C., Va., N.Y.

The staff aiding Phillips includes S-Sgt. Melvin George, Sebring, Fla.; Sgt. Paul Carter, Alexandria, Va.; Sgt. Benjamin Royal, Clinton, N.C.; Cpl. Douglas Shepard, NYC; Cpl. Cecil Austin, East Beckeley, W.Va.; Pfc. Samuel Hairston, North Tazewells, Va., and Pvt. Frank Hinton, Brooklyn.

Most of the nine months Phillips has been overseas he has operated in a tent but when I saw him he had set up in a barn by the roadside. In the rear of the building are the remains of a brick wall where a soldier exploded a mine recently, but fortunately nobody was killed in the dispensary.

Phillips, who is a member of Phi Beta Sigma Fraternity, is as important to the war effort as any man who faces the enemy in hand-to-hand combat.

47k-1944

LAUDS GUERILLA'S EXPLOITS

American Negro With Filipino Band Is Extraordinary Leader

Amsterdam News
New York, N.Y.

By FLETCHER P. MARTIN
(NNPA U. S. War Correspondent)
(Copyright—Reproduction prohibited)

LEYTE BEACH, PHILIPPINES.—By Courier—On Samar Island, northeast of Leyte, fighting with the fierceness of an enraged animal is Capt. Frank Merith, American Negro and leader of a Filipino guerrilla band . Capt. Merith is one of the big stories of the war. His deeds and those of his ragged men have spread among American troops like wild fire.

7-1-44

Exact whereabouts of the giant Negro is still secret military information, but this correspondent is pushing off in search of him. It is a search well worthwhile, because what Livingston meant to the natives of Africa, surely Merith means the same to the people of the Southern Philippines. And as the news of Livingston spread around the world, so should the deeds of this Negro be made known.

The guerrillas on Samar continue to fight the enemy. Armed with bolos, knives, even sticks—these natives, many clad in rags, ferociously defend the homeland. Tales of superhuman courage and endurance have reached us here.

For instance, the total population of the important town of Basey and surrounding villages numbered 30,000 before enemy occupation. When the enemy arrived most of these people fled to the hills. There they fought the enemy for over a year.

While women and children foraged for food—fruits, coconuts, and edible pith which grows in the heart of coconut trees—all able-bodied men fought. It has been a hard fight, and continues to be. The guerrillas are lacking in modern equipment.

Maximum Ruthlessness

Few rifles were taken from the Japs. And American planes dropped some ammunition. American submarines smuggled equipment in. However, because of the intenseness of the operations, all has been too little.

The enemy reached a maximum of ruthlessness on Samar. The town was stripped bare of its meager resources.

Perhaps the heaviest penalty of all was that the Japs took away the food. The population suffered miserably from malnutrition. Only since American troops entered have food and medical supplies begun to pour in. Five doctors and one dentist are presently at work patching up the ills of the populace. Sores, blisters, malarial cases, pneumonia—these are only a few of the items which harass the population.

Chosen Leader

Captain Merith, it was told the writer, was chosen as one of the leaders. Under the Negro and others, their valor reaches daily new heights.

7-1-44

The story goes that Capt. Merith has been in the Philippines for many years, making his home on Samar. He married a native woman and owned property. The enemy caught him as well as the others. The Negro was attached to General MacArthur's command.

"He's A Good Man"

Every three out of five Filipinos questioned on Leyte knows or knows of Captain Merith. And many have said, "Ah, he is good man—our friend. And he is very good fighter too."

Capt. Merith is the story. He is worth walking a continent to find. Every attempt will be made to find him.

LOST ALL HUMAN FLAVOR; MEN FIGHT LIKE SAVAGES

ORMOC SECTOR, Philippines (By Courier)--The first trip to the front revealed many things. First, and most important, fighting is so intense that the struggle has lost all human flavor, men fight like savages. Perhaps never in the history of war have men fought such personal battles—for self preservation.

7-1-44

Leaving the 24th Division headquarters, Boyd Strutler, American Legion magazine correspondent, and this writer started walking to the battle area. Strutler was looking for men whose fathers had fought in the last war. Your correspondent was in search of the lone Negro member of the all-white division.

The Rain Threatened

It was a dull, grayish morning. Super clouds hung low. Rain threatened. The otherwise quietness was punctured by continuous artillery fire. Natives worked the rice fields. Children scampered along the road. As American vehicles rumbled by, little Filipinos held up two fingers—the V for victory sign.

Strutler and I thumbed a ration truck loaded down with fresh bread. The long convoy of vehicles moved at snail's pace. Two bridges had been washed out by swollen streams following a typhoon which swept down the previous day. All traffic was halted temporarily.

Semi-Naked Women

In the streams semi-naked women washed clothes while naked women bathed. Two water buffaloes wallowed near.

We waded across hoping to catch a ride on the other side. Troops, many troops pushed forward. Grim, wet, nasty. On the other side we hopped an ammunition truck. We were told it would take us within 500 yards of the first line.

Sitting on crates of ammunition, we were advised to don helmets as the road was infested with snipers. Strutler, one of the oldest correspondents overseas, crouched low and pulled his helmet down over a dilapidated baseball cap. Having a high priority, the truck sped along the trail.

7-1-44

Jungle Foliage

About two miles down the road we stopped seeing troops. Ahead the crooked trail hooked and turned like an oversize constrictor. Each side was flanked by jungle foliage. To the west we could see the bay. There were no ships, only small native skiffs. Several burned trucks were overturned beside the road. All was quiet save the artillery.

Before we reached the ammo dump we stopped alongside two stalled amphtracks.

"How is it up there?" Strutler yelled out.

"It ain't no picnic, bud," a greasy driver answered.

7-1-44

An Enhanced Odor

Leaving the truck we started walking, missing some puddles, feet sinking in others. After leaving the amphtracks we walked about 200 yards. Started seeing Jap decayed bodies scattered in the bushes. The smell was worse than any garbage dump I know. The sun coming out enhanced the odor.

Several light calibre rifle shots were fired. We started running. Whether they were meant for us we did not remain to find out.

Further up the road a piece we ran into three soldiers leaning against a huge rock.

"Where you guys going?" said a guy with an M-1 carelessly flung over his shoulder.

We told him we had been told that the command post of an infantry unit was in the vicinity.

"Off the Beam"

"Hell, you're way off the beam," he said. "You are almost up to the far observation post."

Butterflies started playing soccer in my stomach. I don't know how Strutler felt but I favored an immediate withdrawal.

"See those two guys up there on the road?" he continued, pointing to a couple of dead fellers. "Well, walk up there and you can get your head blown off."

7-1-44

We were in the middle of sniper ground without knowing it. Machine guns were periodically reporting, and rifle fire quite discernable.

Scared Stiff

I don't mind admitting that I was scared stiff. We too leaned up against the rock and fired up a cigarette. A closer look revealed death, dead Japs all around. All kinds of Jap equipment were near the two bodies "up the road apiece."

Stutler was in favor of getting out as soon as we recaptured our breath. We started back down the road. After leaving the soldiers, the two-hundred-yard trip back seemed like a mile. Neither of us said anything, but trotted along in silence—studying the hills as we trotted.

When we did reach "civilization" they were putting a soldier atop the motor of a jeep. Half of his head had been carried away by a shell burst.

"Hell of a Fight"

Near the command post we met Maj. Gen. F. A. Irving, division commander. The general without hesitation admitted it was going to be "one hell of a long, hard fight."

It is tough because further up there are no trails. Men have to carry their own supplies, foodstuffs, ammunition, and whatever else is needed. And another thing, jungles are so thick one can walk within two hundred yards of an enemy installation without seeing it. Several litters have been fired on. The Japs wait until we go for the wounded, then attempt to pick off the litter bearers.

We didn't find the parties we were seeking.

2 Missing Pilots Get Back Safely

Afro American
Baltimore, Md.

By ART CARTER
AERO War Correspondent with U.S. Troops in Italy

12-16-44

[Copyright, Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

ALLIED HQ. IN ITALY.—Lts. Robert C. Chandler, Allegan, Mich., and Shelby F. Westbrook, Toledo, Ohio, 99th Fighter Squadron pilots who were shot down during a mission to Yugoslavia in October, have returned to their base, safe and sound.

They had spent thirty days in Yugoslavia, where they made forced landings following flak hits on their P-51 Mustangs.

Both were replacement pilots with the 332nd Fighter Group's pioneer squadron and had received the Air Medal and promotion from second lieutenant a few days before the ill-fated mis-

Harlem Flyer Distinguishes Himself; Cited

Amsterdam News
New York, N.Y.

11-25-44

15th AAF IN ITALY — Captain Dudley M. Watson, 25, husband of Mrs. Mary B. Watson of 357 W. 121st St., New York City, New York, has been awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross for "Extraordinary achievement in aerial flight."

Members of the All-Negro Fighter Group commanded by Col. B. O. Davis, Jr., Captain Watson is pilot and Squadron Assistant Operations Officer. The Group, with which Capt. Watson is flying, is actively engaged in long range escort for 15th Air Force heavy bombers and also participates in strafing attacks against enemy installations. It was while on a strafing mission against a vital enemy position in Southern France that Capt. Watson exhibited extraordinary decision and leadership in the performance of his assigned task, enabling his formation to successfully strafe and severely damage their targets, in spite of intense enemy fire. For this particular achievement, Capt. Watson was awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross.

11-25-44

Capt. Watson has flown 46 missions against the enemy and has accumulated over 100 combat flying hours to his credit. Prior to his entry into the Armed Forces, Capt. Watson taught school and was active in Civilian Aeronautics. He holds the Bachelor of Science Degree from Hampton Institute, Virginia, and the Master of Arts Degree from Columbia University, New York.

Officer of the 93d a hero in skirmish with Japanese

Tribune—Los Angeles, Calif.

11-13-44

SOUTHWEST PACIFIC — Elements of the 93rd Division were engaged in surrounding and destroying an enemy force which had pinned down friendly troops of another unit on an undisclosed island in the South Pacific. The Japanese were dug in on and the forward slope of a hill, around the base of which ran a stream.

The CO ordered 1st Lt. Harry C. Robinson of Harrisburg, Pa., to organize a patrol consisting of one other officer, five enlisted men, and three news photographers, and assigned him the mission of securing information. It was a particularly dangerous mission, for in crossing the stream the patrol was vulnerable to enemy fire.

Robinson's patrol, crouching low, zig-zagged its way across the stream. Reaching the bank, it deployed and "went to work" on the remaining pillboxes which now were beginning to come to life. Just as Robinson and his assistant patrol leader were infiltrating into the position, a Japanese officer rose from his pillbox and took careful aim at the latter.

On the alert, Robinson grasped the situation, yelled to his assistant to take cover, while he opened fire with his carbine. The Japanese officer was killed.

11-13-44

Having killed about 21 enemy without losing a man, the patrol completed its mission and returned to headquarters.

Lt. Robinson is a former student of Lincoln University of Pa. and South Carolina State, where he was an outstanding athlete.

America's Contribution

12-16-44

Birmingham — Weekly Review Ala.

TUSKEGEE INSTITUTE, Ala. —(PPNS) — A firm hand clasp and broad friendly smiles of understanding mark the meeting of Col. B. O. Davis, Jr., and Dr. F. D. Patterson, President of Tuskegee Institute. The two noted figures represents the strength of America that has put the evil forces of aggression on the run; the man on the fighting front who holds the enemy at bay, and the man on the home front fighting to preserve the principles of democracy that is the birthright of man, regardless of race, creed or color. Col. Daivs on furlough from his station in Italy spent a week at Tuskegee Institute just before returning to his post, commanding the 332 Fighter Group composed of the 99th, 100th, 301st and the 302 Squadrons.

PILOTS EARN PROMOTIONS

Courier — Pittsburgh, 12-9-44 Pa.

AT AN ADVANCED FIGHTER BASE, Italy—The announcement of several promotions in rank made to members of Col. B. O. Davis' all-Negro fighter group was made recently. Among those listed were:

To Captain—Arnold W. Cisco, Alton, Ill.; Ulysses S. Taylor, Kaufman, Texas (squadron engineering officer); Albert H. Manning, Jr., Spartanburg, N. C.; Harold E. "Buzz" Sawyer, Columbus, Ohio; Lawrence E. Dickson, New York City; Leonard M. Jackson, Fort Worth, Texas; Dudley W. Stevenson, Washington, D. C. (group communications officer).

To First Lieutenant—Alphonso Simmons, Jacksonville, Fla.; Emile G. Clifton, San Francisco, Calif.

Norfolk Journal

Gen. Davis Assigned To European Area

12-9-44 Va.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(ANP)—Brig. Gen. Benjamin O. Davis has been permanently assigned to the staff of the inspector-general in the European Theatre of Operations. Gen. Davis has been in the theatre since July. At that time he accompanied Carlton Moss, playwright, and Maj. Homer Roberts of the press branch, during the shooting of films for a follow-up to "The Negro Soldier."

A War Department source here pointed out last week that there are now more Negro soldiers overseas than are in the continental United States.

Chicago Daily Tribune

ST. LOUIS PAYS HONOR TO NEGRO FIGHTER PILOT

St. Louis, Mo., Dec. 12 (AP).—This was Capt. Wendell O. Pruitt day in St. Louis. 12-13-44

Special ceremonies were held at the city hall, where the young Negro fighter pilot received a watch.

Capt. Pruitt, 24, was sent to Italy with an all-Negro fighter squadron nine and one-half months ago. He flew 70 missions in his P-51 Mustang without injury, shot down three enemy planes, accounted for eight more on the ground, helped sink a German destroyer, and won the distinguished service cross and the air medal with four oak leaf clusters. He returned home last month on 21 day leave.

The son of Mrs. Melaie C. Pruitt of St. Louis, the flyer attended Lincoln university at Jefferson City, Mo. After the war he plans to marry Miss Alice Charleton of Detroit.

St. Louis Honors Negro Air Hero

Times-Picayune New Orleans — La.

(The Associated Press)

St. Louis, Dec. 12.—This was Captain Wendell O. Pruitt Day in St. Louis. 12-13-44

Special ceremonies were held at the city hall, at which the young Negro fighter pilot was presented a watch. A scheduled military parade in his honor was called off at the last moment because of cold weather.

The 24-year-old aviator was sent to Italy with an all-Negro fighter squadron 9½ months ago. He flew 70 missions in his P-51 Mustang without injury, shot down three enemy planes, accounted for eight more on the ground, helped sink a German destroyer, and won the Distinguished Service Cross and the Air Medal with four oak leaf clusters. He returned home last month on 21-day leave.

In setting aside this day for Pruitt, Mayor A. P. Kaufman said, "You have done your best. You are typical of the fine young Negro men from St. Louis and all parts of the country who have gone to war."

Col. Ben Davis, Jr. In States, But Not On Army Business

Illinois Chicago Defender,

(Defender New York Bureau)

NEW YORK.—Col. Benjamin O. Davis Jr., commander of the 332d Fighter Group based in Italy, is in the states for 30 days, but not on official business, he emphasized this week. 11-25-44

The young leader of the four-squadron 332d Group, who wears the Distinguished Flying Cross and the Legion of Merit, will spend most of his 30-day leave at his wife's home here. Col. Davis will probably stop over in Washington on his way to Tuskegee, no doubt reporting to War Department officials and holding press conferences there.

relax for 10 days, returning to New York around Dec. 7 when he will await transportation back to his base in Italy. Temporarily commanding the 332d is Major George Spencer Roberts, who will relinquish his post upon Davis' return.

EISENHOWER PRAISED BY SERGEANT FOR IS FAIRNESS AND DEMOCRATIC SPIRIT

Savannah Tribune

by Harry McAlpin

WASHINGTON, D. C. (NNPA)—A (personal letter from Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, supreme commander of the Allied Expeditionary Force, to a lowly staff sergeant of a Negro engineer general service regiment, in which the general acknowledged and agreed with the sergt's protest of derogatory remarks about Negroes in an article appearing in an edition of Stars and Stripes, servicemen's paper, has come to the attention of the NNPA. 11-30-44

The article appeared in the column called "The B Bag" of the Stars and Stripes. In this column, GI's are given an opportunity to express their opinions on any subject. One sign-Inf." wrote the following:

"Our outfit is composed of boys from North and South. We have often fought the Civil War over and over again in friendly arguments, but on one point we are agreed. The Negro soldier in this war is getting more credit than he deserves.

"He is, in the majority of cases, a rear-eschelon cowboy who never saw the front lines. We have been on the front line since shortly after D-day. Never have we seen a colored soldier on the front lines. 11-30-44

"We the fighting doughboys, Even the medics get their share Evn the medics gt their share of credit. It makes us mad to see a bunch of rear-eschelon cowboys grabbing credit where they have done nothing to deserve it."

Staff Sgt. George Woods, Jr. attached to an Engineer Regiment, took exception to the piece and wrote a letter to Gen. Eisenhower. After commending the general on his success in coordinating the allied force into one gigantic fighting machine to crush the Nazi military forces he cited the last two sentences of an official letter on the "Treatment of Negro Troops," which read: "The spreading of derogatory statements concerning the character of any group of United States troops, either white or colored, must be considered as conduct prejudicial to good order and militarydiscipline and offenders must be promptly punished. In the interest of military efficiency, if for no other reason, isolated incidents of friction must be eliminated." 11-30-44

Sgt. Woods then told the General that the article referred to was detrimental to the morale of a group of fighters "who are putting forth every effort in their power to play their part as good soldiers where they are assigned to perform their duty, regardless of whether it be on the front lines or in the "rear-eschelons." 11-30-44

Woods said such statements as those of the sergeant who wrote to Stars and Stripes have been the prime motives of recent race riots in America. "It is my sincere hope that our full military strength may be continued directed against the German forces, rather than stop at this point of success and debate on the issue "which race is playing the more important part in this war." he told the General.

Concluding his letter, he told the General "you have my sincere prayers and best wishes that God will enable you to successfully accomplish the task that has been entrusted to you by the people of the United States and the other allied nations. Remember that we are behind you 100 per cent."

In reply, nine days later, the General wrote the sergeant, saying, "Thank you very much for your letter of the 14th. I agree with you that the publication of statements that are derogatory to the accomplishments in this war of any American group or race is harmful to the war effort. I also agree that it isently was written in disregard the duty of the good soldier toof these principles." perform well whatever task may Commenting on the General's be given him, in the front lineletter, Sgt. Woods declared that or in the rear area. much attention to a noncom- the people of America should missioned officer of a Negro Enmissioned of gineer General Service Regi- Theatre of Operation, ment as he does to the members General Dwight D. Eisenhower, of his staff in certain respects." military officer who pays as

47k-1944

Says Negro Officers 'Glorified Corporals'

Daily World - Atlanta, Ga. 1-6-44

FT. BENNING, Ga. — (ANP) — The evident intention of the army to hold Negro promotions down to the minimum has rarely been shown in clearer perspective than one sees it here at Fort Benning. This is not the only post where the commander has called his Negro officers in and told them that if they were to stay on that post, they would have to be content with first lieutenancies. Here is the story which ANP has been hearing about for a long time but the details of which have just come to light. It is about a group which calls itself, "The Legion of Glorified Corporals."

A year ago Dec. 10 there was started a regiment at Fort Benning which was ironically called the proving ground for Negro officers. It is time now that the nation should know what has been proven.

ALL WHITE NAMED 1-6-44

"In December, 1942, an enthusiastic group of young Negro quartermaster officers met at the temporary headquarters of the provisional truck regiment. Their conversation consisted mostly of speculating, speculating whether they would be commanding car companies, truck companies or van companies. As they waited to be regimental commander, a group of white second lieutenants fresh out of officer candidate school (we had been out of school for three to six months) entered and the rumor was started that these were the company commanders. But how could that be? After all this was the proving ground for Negro officers. Well, the meeting was called to order. The company commanders were appointed—all white except one. This fortunate one was called a company coordinator, not commander. All the adjutants (3) were white, all supply officers were colored (5).

"Well, needles to say, the colored officers began to wonder just what this regiment was supposed to prove.

"In January of 1943 the table of distribution came out labeling the range each position would carry. Company commanders, captains; all other company officers (who happened to be colored) lieutenants: Regt. supply officers, major, battalion supply officers, captains. Now we knew at least there would be a few Negro captains so once again our hopes ascended. Then started the period of surprises. First, all white officers from the rank of second lieutenant to lieutenant colonel were promoted. Colored officers were told they didn't have enough BACKGROUND yet they had all had experience as enlisted men and officers in truck regiments, whereas none of the whites had, and mind you they were fresh out of CCS. 1-6-44

ASK TRANSFERS

"After this the guinea pigs of the proving ground practically all applied for transfers. No transfers were allowed but a limited few were promoted to first lieutenants. Then in March came the blow that left all concerned groggy. The commanding officer called all colored officers to a meeting and politely informed them that no Negroes on this post would be tolerated above the rank of lieutenant. Shortly afterwards the ranking Negro officer of the post, a Major Cooper, was transferred out. Major Cooper went to A. and T. college at Greensboro, N. C., where the government maintains an all-Negro army specialized training program. There his time did not irk. Two months later all battalion supply officers and adjutants were changed. We now had white supply officers and colored adjutants. 1-6-44

"Of course the fact that the job of supply officer called for a captain had nothing to do with the change.

"Now in this regiment which was to give Negroes a chance to prove they were of officer caliber, only three out of 38 remained in positions requiring a promotion of those, two were first lieutenants when some of the present white captains were still in OCS.

COLOR DETERMINANT

"So that the reader will understand exactly what the proving ground has proven I enumerate as follows:

"1. To the regret of all whites concerned that Negro soldiers prefer Negro officers.

"2. That white officers do not regard Negroes as their equal.

"3. That as long as a Negro is black his color, not his ability, will determine his status as an officer in this regiment and this post.

"4. That colored officers are and will continue to be only glorified corporals.

"Fortunately not everything at Ft. Benning is bad. A new post commander has recently come upon the scene. He has shown himself to be a soldier, fair and as square as an officer can be in these environs. He has challenged the police force and officials of the town of Columbus, Ga., nearby, where Negro officers have been arrested on slight pretext and where federal and army laws were disdained by local justices of peace and sundry police officials, by threatening to declare the city off bounds for all soldiers in Ft. Benning unless all soldiers were treated decently. 1-6-44

"That threat bore immediate fruit. Columbus, like the leech which thrives on the blood of its victim, would shrivel and die if the hundreds of thousands of dollars which soldiers spend monthly were diverted from its tills. The result is that police are more civil and soldiers find life tolerable within the borders of Columbus for the moment."

Becomes Major

Daily World - Atlanta, Ga.

9-11-44

The promotion to major of Captain Roy F. Morse, commanding officer of Squadron C at McChord Field, Washington, has been announced by the War Department. Field, Major Morse was director of the ground school and secretary of the Tuskegee Army Air Field Advanced Flying School. He is a former deputy collector for the U. S. Treasury Department and makes his home at 2293 7th Avenue, New York City. (Photo by Army Air Forces.)

READY TO PREACH GOSPEL TO SOLDIERS

27 Race Chaplains Graduate From Harvard

Courier - Pittsburgh, Pa. 1-8-44

By PAUL DANIEL DAVIS

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. — (ANP)

Twenty-seven of the 260 men of the 19th class of the U.S. Army Chaplains school, Harvard university, to graduate on last Tuesday were Negroes. The formal graduation ceremony was held in Sanders theatre with Chaplain Max A.

the director will be their first taste of real army life for most of them were civilian clergymen just six weeks ago.

Since the chaplain school was moved to Harvard in August, 1942, approximately 265 colored Among the 27 graduates were 12 Baptists, two Presbyterians, and one of the Church of God. Their names, place of training, offering the invocation and denominations are as follows:

NEW CHAPLAINS 1-8-44

Rock Hill, S.C., Methodist; William Peak, Kimball, W. Va., (West Virginia), Colvin, Gadsdon, Ala., CME; Rufus A. Cooper, Oakland, Calif., AME Zion; Leo R. C. Pinn, Pittsburgh, Pa., (Washington, D.C.), Baptist; James Pogue, Anderson, S.C. (Pennsylvania) AME Zion; Robert Crawford, Jr., Nashville (South Carolina), Presbyterian; William A. Scott, Kansas City, Mo. (Missouri), Baptist; Albert L. Dunston, Jr., Smith, Louisville, (New York) Presbyterian; James F. W. Stewart, Amherst, Mass., (Virginia) AME Zion; Melvin C. Swann, Coffeyville, Kas., (Maryland), Methodist; Marion P. Swisher, Flagstaff, Ariz., Los Angeles AME; Rufus L. Hill, (Arizona), Baptist; William T. Watts, (New York) Baptist; Palestine, Tex. (Texas), Baptist; Arthur (Massachusetts), Williams, Columbus, Ohio (Virginia) Jones, Still- Methodist. These ministers, members of Baptist; Wil- (Georgia) the 19th class of the Chaplains' Tampa school at Harvard university, Sanford, N. Cambridge, Mass., were gradu-ased recently.

First row, left to right, William Jones, Clifton Morgan, Robert Crawford, E. W. Gantt, William Penn, King D. S. Pogue, Robert L. Scott and William J. Colvin.

Second row, left to right, J. W. E. Stewart, Charles W. Blalock, A. D. Williams, Melvin C. Swann, C. C. Blake, R. L. Hill, L. A. Cousins, W. T. Watts and J. J. Jenkins.

Third row, left to right, William Conyers, L. Z. Eichelberger, M. P. Swisher, R. A. Cooper, C. G. Gaithers, R. S. Jones, A. G. Dunston and S. N. Peak.

Chaplain L. D. Bennett was absent at the ttime picture was

Two Promoted To Major In 93rd Infantry

Tribune—Philadelphia Pa.

11-11-44

WITH THE 93rd INFANTRY DIVISION In The Southwest Pacific Area—Captain Richard E. Evers, of Itasca, Texas, and Captain Harry C. Fields, Jr., of Springfale, Ark. ansas, have been promoted to major, it was announced in the 93rd Infantry Division.

The announcement said that Major Ever's promotion was the result of meritorious service in operations against the enemy. Major Fields is plans training officer of his unit.

Second Lieutenant LeRoy A. Brown, of 1556 Mill street, Augusta, Georgia, was promoted to first lieutenant, while Fir-fred A. Hembry, of Lewisville, Texas, was appointed warrant ofiicer (junior grade) in the field of ordnance supply scienee and commanding officer, signal school, ASTP-STAR A and r. College, Greensboro, N. C.

A native of Boston, he attended school at a private academy, Panama City, Republic of Panama, and is also a graduate in naval architecture at Massachussetts Institute of Technology.

Before his call to active duty, Capt. Gibbs was employed for three years as senior engineer computer for the Massechusetts Goodetic survey. He also was assistant ordnance inspector, Boston Ordnance district and preformed duties as junior naval architect, Boston Navy yard, and was a private (land) surveyor.

He was promoted to first lieutenant May 19, 1942, and received his present rank in October, 1943.

assigned to the 276th Quartermaster Battalion at Camp John T. Knight, Oakland, Calif.

Metcalfe Now Army Lieutentant

Daily World—Atlanta, Ga.

7-29-44

NEW ORLEANS, — (ANP) — Ralph Metcalfe famous sprinter who ran for Uncle Sam in both the 1932 and 1936 Olympics, is is now a lieutenant. He has just been commissioned after graduation from the army officers transportation base here.

After starring in Tilden Tech high school in Chicago and at Marquette university, Milwaukee, in addition to his Olympic running. Metcalf coached five years at Xavier university here before obtaining a leave of absence to serve with the Catholic Servicemen's organization prior to his induction into the army in Los Angeles.

Bousefield Now Full Colonel

Courier—Pittsburgh, Pa.

3-11-44

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The promotion of four Negro officers in the Medical corps at Fort Huachuca, Ariz., was announced by the War Department. All four are assigned to Station Hospital No. 1.

Lt. Col. Midian O. Bousfield, commanding officer of Station Hospital No. 1, was promoted to the rank of colonel.

The other three officers who were promoted to lieutenant colonels are: Majors DeHaven Hinkson of Philadelphia, Pa., executive officer of the hospital; Roscoe C. Giles of Chicago, Ill., chief surgical service, and Harold W. Thatcher of Kansas City, chief of medical service. 3-11-44

Two other promotions announced by the War Department are those of First Lieutenants George Harvey Wright of Seattle, Wash., and Nathaniel Courtenay Harden of Prairie View, Texas. Both officers were elevated to captains, and are

Camp Lee Chaplain Promoted To Captain

6-20-44

CAMP LEE, Va.—Chaplain David L. Brewer of the Eleventh ASF Training Regiment here was recently promoted to the rank of captain.

The promotion came while he was on leave in West Palm Beach, Fla., visiting his wife, Mrs. Anne H. Brewer, a school teacher, who will spend the rest of the summer here.

Colonel Commands Mixed Officer & Unit

Daily World—Atlanta, Ga.

SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND—(ANP) — Following are random notes about the doings and thinking of a colored lieutenant colonel now serving in England. 7-20-44

The facts and quotes are accurate but his name must be deleted.

He commanded a combat outfit trained to the minute. Two years ago that outfit was broken up. Then he was put in charge of training a new mechanical combat unit. This year those men were detached in cadres and sent with raw troops in engineering and service groups. The colonel more or less marked time.

SENT ABROAD

Suddenly however he was sent abroad. He ended up in command of a quartermaster outfit. His experiences were numerous and varied. He got in not long before invasion and the outfit worked very head off handling supplies. The soldiers in the unit and the non-commissioned officers were colored but the commissioned officers were white principally white. All of the officers are junior to him. Nevertheless he got along fine and ports that some of the best loyal workers he has ters and most had have been junior officers from the deep south.

There are several matters I have given a lot of thought to, he says that some of the races may run to the ludicrous unless the brakes are put on time.

"Many of our problems must be solved by us. We may find others

"The Red Cross generally is doing an enormous job. However the idea of the necessity for the separation of the races must be given a lot of thought to, he says when things begin to go haywire.

First Colored Station Complement Commanding Officer At Fla. ASFTC

Daily World—Atlanta, Ga.

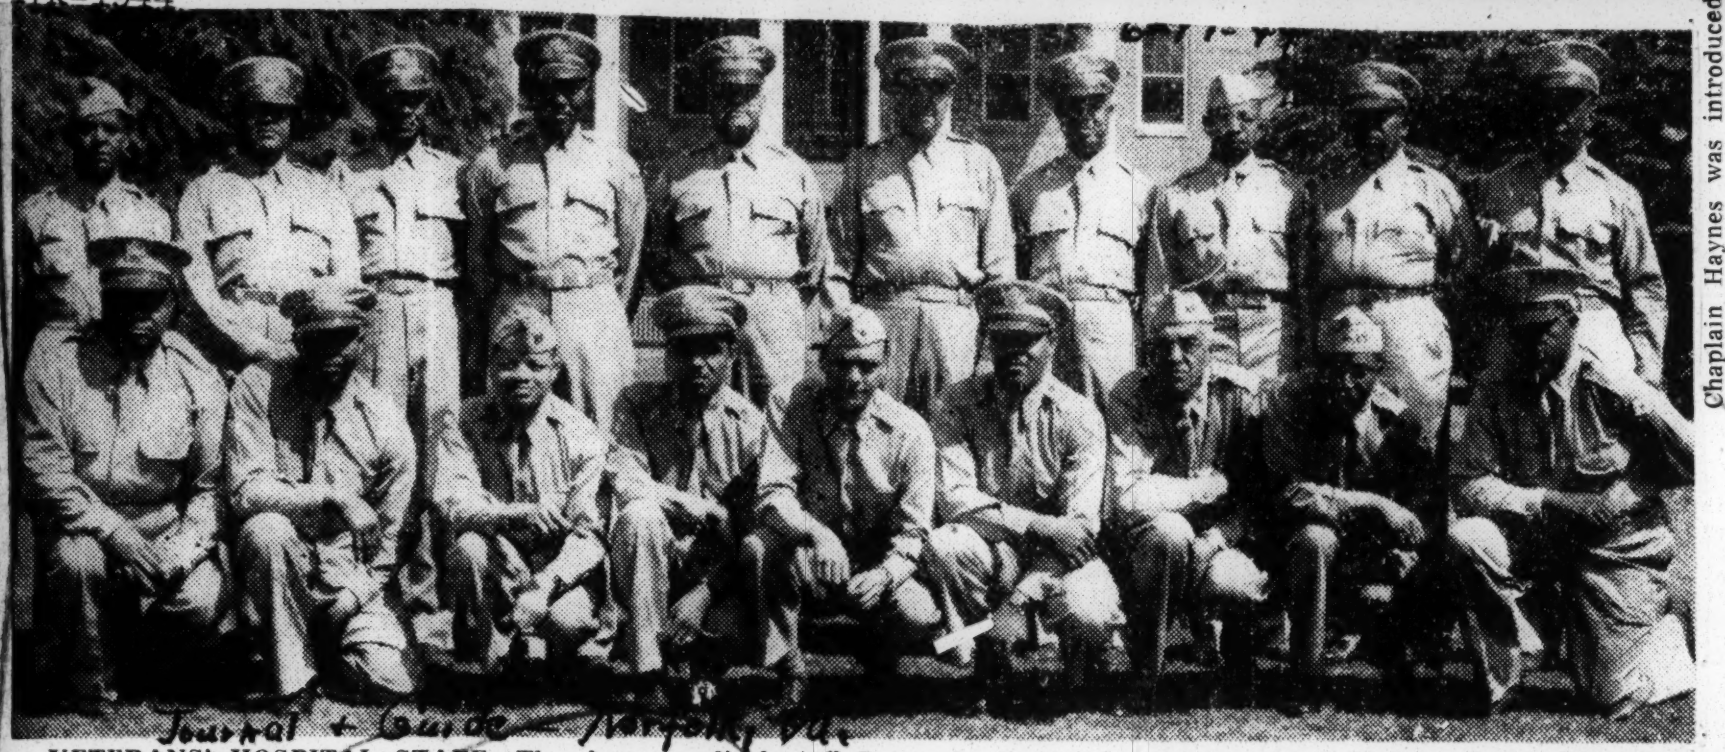
By S-Sgt. Clark R. Coleman

CAMP GORDON JOHNSON, Fla.—(ANP)—Capt. James B. Gibbs, appointed commanding officer of headquarters detachment, headquarters section No. Two is the first colored officer to head a station complement unit in the history of the army service forces training center

A graduate of Northeastern university in civil engeering, he received his commission as second lieutenant upon completion of ROTC there. He was appointed a reserve officer in November, 1938, and called to active duty in February, 1942, at Camp Lee, Va. 6-20-44

Assignments befre his transfer here included, supervisor of motor training at Hampton institute, Va., officers course in morter maintenance, (holabird) Baltimore; motor transportation officer, Ft. McClellan, Ala, assistant professor in military

47k-1944



VETERANS' HOSPITAL STAFF—The Army medical staff at the Veterans' Hospital, Tuskegee, Ala., who was recently commissioned by the War Department for duty with the Medical Corps of the Army of the United States posed for this group picture with Brig. Gen. B. O. Davis Sr., of the Inspector General's Department, Washington, D. C. Shown from left to right: (kneeling) Captains Robert L. Allen, Danville, Va.; J. W. Williams, Lightfoot, Va.; Gordon C. Looney, Springfield, Mo.; Leon A. Dickson, Portland, Ore.; 1st Lt. Junius L. Taylor, Detroit, Mich.; Major Horace G. Dwiggins, Kansas City, Kans.; Captain Peter J. Carter, Franktown, Va.; Captain Peter Richardson, Charleston, S. C.; and Captain W. E. Lewis, Charleston, West Va.

Left to right: (standing) Major Harvey F. Davis, Chase City, Va.; Major Alan P. Smith, Kansas City Mo.; Major S. O. Johnson, McIntosh, Ga.; Lt. Col. George C. Branch, Oxford, N. C.; Gen. Davis, Col. Eugene Dimble Jr., commanding officer of the hospital; Lt. Col. T. T. Tilden, Tuskegee, Ala.; Major Charles N. Pitts, Macon, Ga.; Major J. J. Peters, Ft. Wayne, Ind.; and Major Prince B. Barker of New York City. (Official U. S. AAF Photo by AAF Training Command)

Journal & Guide — Norfolk, Va.

6-17-44

General Davis on European Tour

Afro American — Baltimore, Md.

8-19-44

Brig. Gen. Benjamin O. Davis of the War Department Inspector General's office, chats with S/Sgt. Joe Louis, world heavyweight boxing champion, somewhere in the European Theatre of Operations, where Louis has been putting on exhibitions for GI's during the past several weeks.

Pausing for a chat and photo before they leave for a conference at a U.S. Army Headquarters, somewhere in England, are (left to right): Lt. Gen. John C. H. Lee, Brig. Gen. Benjamin O. Davis and Brig. Gen. W. G. Weaver.

Facts Behind the Suicide of Lieutenant Tyler Hill

Afro American — Baltimore, Md.

RICHMOND—What impelled Lt. Tyler E. Hill, Jr., 29, of Lynchburg, Va., to take his life last week at this post?

6-10-44

Perhaps the exact answer to this question could be provided only by the officer himself.

Perhaps it may be contained in the suicide note which military authorities have refused to release.

Despondency and Frustration

But friends of the lieutenant have woven a set of circumstances which make the most plausible motive seem a product of despondency and frustration.

It is reported that only a few days before his death, Lt. Hill was AWOL and faced court-martial proceedings. Also, it was said, his conduct was of uncertain character; he appeared morose and

But, according to his friends, behind all of this was the background of a man determined to go as far as his ability would carry him.

They point out that he rose through the ranks from a private to first sergeant, then qualified for officer candidate school and became a second lieutenant. Later, he became a first lieutenant.

Hard Worker

All the time, he was an intense worker, at times working all night to do a good job. But, his friends say, when he found that he faced limitations because of his color it began to tell.

After being commissioned, he was sent to Fort Benning, to return to Lee a few weeks ago hoping to become a company commander in his outfit. But that ambition ran up a blind alley, this butting his head up against a wall may have led Lt. Hill to the act of suicide. So say his friends.

92nd Colored Division Given White Chaplain

Afro American — Baltimore, Md.

6-24-44

FORT HUACHUCA, Ariz. — Chaplain Andrew H. Martin, who is stationed at present, as assistant chaplain, in charge of the colored officers' club "on the new white chaplain who is a set the white officers' here several weeks ago by captain; that he had withdrawn his request for transfer.

fare" here several Upon the arrival of Chaplain gating there, has been Aubrey C. Haynes, white, handhis duties as post c bills were passed around to all a white chaplain assig white persons on the post inviting The AFRO was u them to the white services which official confirmation o were to be held at Whiteside but facts pieced toge School.

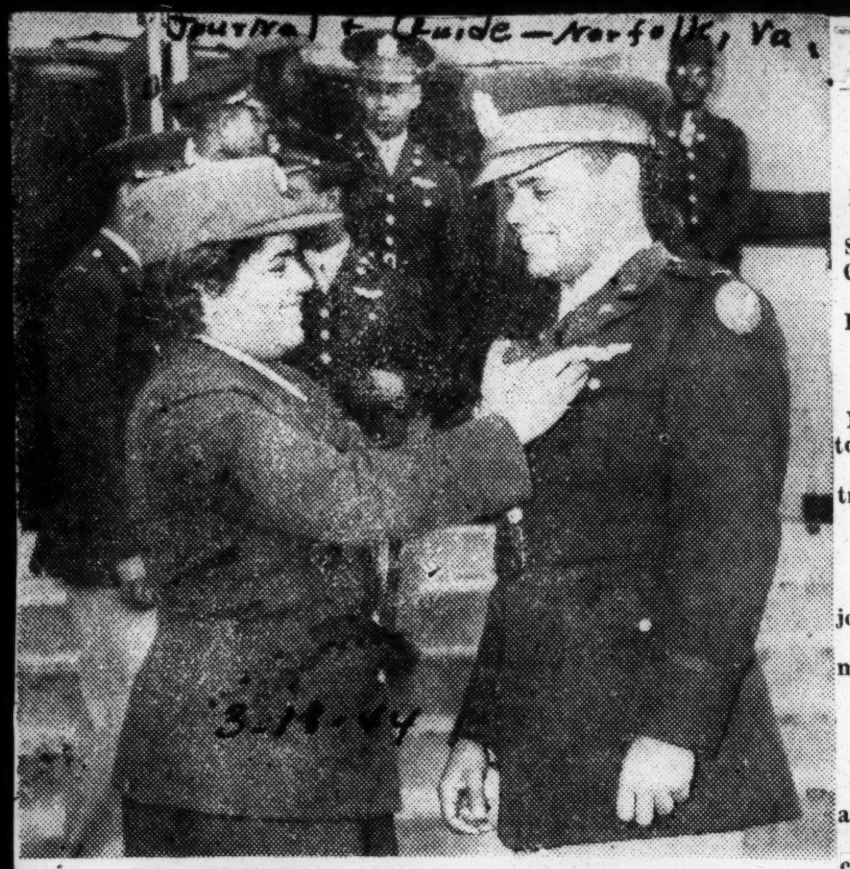
to this:

Martin to Be A Assistant

Chaplain Martin wi in will remain on the post where the 9 the 92nd Division services at Post Theater No. 1.

The colored soldiers hold their

Chaplain Haynes was introduced at the initial services as the "new post chaplain."

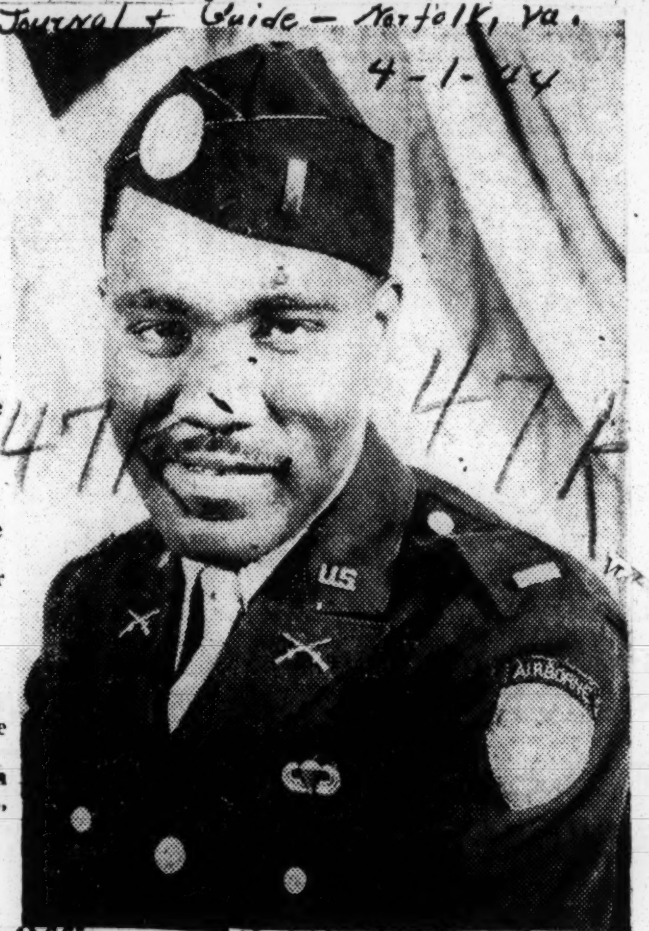


LT. CELESTINO S. MONCLOVA and His Sister

Lt. Walter A. Arrington (left) and Major Galen B. Price

AT NAVIGATORS' GRADUATION— Wac Private Anita Monclova (top picture) pins the wings of an aviation navigator on her brother, 2nd Lt. Celestino S. Monclova of Brooklyn, N. Y., while in the other photo, 2nd Lt. Walter A. Arrington, of 2408 Shannon Place, S.E., Washington, D. C., receives his navigator's wings from Major Galen B. Price (right), commanding officer of the 88th Navigation Training Group at Hondo Field, Texas. Twenty-four Negroes, comprising the first class of navigators to be commissioned in the Air Forces, graduated at the field on February 26. Three of them became flight officers and 21 were commissioned second lieutenants. (AAF Photos).

Paratroop Officer



PARATROOP OFFICER— Second Lieut. Clifford Allen, of 3841 Federal street, Chicago, Ill., is one of the first six Negro officers to complete the parachute training course at Fort Benning, Ga. The officers have joined the cadre of enlisted men for further training of volunteer infantry Parachutists. Lieut. Allen accompanied the original cadremen from Fort Huachuca, Ariz., last January. (U. S. Army photo)

968 Negro Officers Now Serving In U. S. Coast Guard Forces

WASHINGTON, D. C. — The first branch of the Naval Service to commission Negroes, the U. S. Coast Guard now has the highest percentage of commissioned and non-commissioned Negro officers in the Armed Forces, U. S. Coast Guard Headquarters reported this week.

With approximately 4,000 Negroes serving in the Coast Guard on March 31, 1944, a total of 968 colored men were officers. Two of these officers had been commissioned as lieutenants and another as ensign The others included warrant officers, chief petty officers, and first second and third class petty officers.

The high percentage of Negro officers was revealed by Coast Guard Headquarters in connection with the current drive for the volunteer enlistment of 1,700 Negro wouths, 17 years of age, in the Steward's Mates branch of the service.

Pointing out that promotions will be rapid in this branch, and that Negroes work and fight side by side with other Coast Guardsmen, the Coast Guard stressed the fact that steward's mates may work themselves up through the ranks as well as all other Coast Guard recruits.

Proof of such advancement was cited in the case of Lt. Clarence Samuels, the first Negro commissioned officer in the Naval Service. Lieutenant Samuels entered the Coast Guard Service originally as a steward's mate. In the years which followed, he advanced steadily through the ranks until he became warrant officer and boatswain at the Manhattan Beach training station. Appointed to the board of education there, he served as instructor in practical seamanship and regulations. Following a recent tour of duty in the active war zones, Lieutenant Samuels is now studying for further advancement at Fort McHenry, Md.

The other two commissioned Negro officers in the Coast Guard, Lt. Joseph J. Jenkins of Detroit, Mich., and Ensign Harvey C. Russel, jr., of Louisville, Ky., are bother graduates of the United States Coast Guard Academy at New London, Conn., where both entered through competitive examinations. Both are now on active duty.

92nd Promoted

By ART CARTER

AFRO War Correspondent with U.S. Troops in Italy

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

WITH THE 5TH ARMY IN ITALY—(By Cable)—Among the twenty-three officers of the 92nd Division combat team promoted here October 1 were four first lieutenants who were made captains.

They are Hurlon Dunlan, Oklahoma City; Jesse E. Jarmon, Indianapolis, company commanders who received battlefield promotions; Capt. Allan L. Johnson, Jackson, Tenn., and Alonzo W. Farr, of New Jersey, munitions officer.

Nineteen others were elevated from second to first lieutenants. They are:

Alonzo M. Frazier Charlie M. Hanson, Jr., Edmund H. Oxley, Jr., Claude Paige, William H. Pener, George W. Alfred, John H. Armwood, John W. Bailey, Benjamin J. Benton, Arthur A. Brown, Edward F. Cothren;

Benjamin L. Davis, Julius J. Dickerson, Lyman V. Jeffries, Lionel Ladmirault, Aurelius B Myles, Marion E. Thatcher, Robert G. Van Meter, Joseph V. Vego Lawrence S. Lacey;

Lieutenant Oxley, of Cincinnati, Ohio, is the brother of Lawrence Oxley of Washington, and Lieutenant Bailey is a native of eastern Maryland.

Gen. Davis Visits Troops in France

By OLLIE STEWART

AFRO War Correspondent with Invasion Forces in France

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

WITH AMERICAN FORCES IN FRANCE.—(By Cable, Censored) —Brig. Gen. Benjamin O. Davis arrived in France recently for general observations and to spend part of his time with the special pictorial unit making movies of colored troops.

Maj. Home Roberts of the War Department Bureau of Public Relations, and Carlton Moss, special consultant, are accompanying the general.

Expressing a desire to remain in France until the war ends, General Davis said: "I am interested in seeing what colored troops are doing, how they are living and taking care of themselves; also what recommendations I may make to cause them to feel better."

Exchange Autographs

The general signed my short-snorter dollar bill and I signed his. Then both of us made Edward Toles, Chicago Defender correspondent, pay for not having his.

General Davis was immaculate in his new battle dress, but Major Roberts was having difficulty with his new field boots. Moss was looking most uncomfortable in GI clothes.

At a press conference the general said he could not answer questions as to whether colored units, WAC's or nurses are coming here, because they are not his department.

However, he expressed hope that all soldiers would respect the friendly French people, particularly women.

Saw 4 Nazi Robots While in England, General

47k-1944

Tribune – Washington, D.C.
10-14-44

10-14-44

TAAF MEDICAL OFFICERS PROMOTED—Capts. Halley B. Taylor and Elliotte J. Williams, Officers at the Station Hospital of the Tuskegee Army Air Field, Ala., were recently promoted to their present rank. Both Captain Taylor, a medical officer, and Captain Williams, an administrative officer, have performed their duties skillfully and efficiently, winning the admiration of the cadets, officers and enlisted men. They are shown being congratulated on their success by Col. Richard C. Cumming, post surgeon. Captain Taylor, left, of Washington, was commissioned from the Medical Reserve Corps on June 10, 1943. He received his B.S. degree from Howard in 1938, his M.D., from the same institution, in 1942. He was a member of the Howard ROTC for four years and was commissioned a second lieutenant from that source in 1938. His father, the Rev. Halley B. Taylor, resides at 1715 First Street, N.W. Captain Williams was commissioned a second lieutenant from the Medical Administration Officers' Candidate School, Carlisle Barracks, Pa., May 29, 1942. His mother, Mrs. Georgia L. Williams, lives at 507 W. 159th Street, New York City. Official AAF Photo.

NOW 1st LIEUTENANT
Tribune – Savannah, Ga
HUBERT
9-14-44

GODMAN FIELD, KY. Willi[illegible] Lt. Hubert is the son of John J. Hubert of Savannah, Ga., ha[illegible]W. Hubert, 2201 Ogeechee avebeen recently promoted in the[illegible]nue, Savannah, Ga.
army air forces. He was promoted from second lieutenant to first lieutenant.

1st. Lt. Hubert is group statistical control officer and special staff adjutant to the commanding officer of the 477th Bombardment Group.

1st. Lt. Hubert is a graduate of Hampton institute, was awarded a fellowship for study of rural economics and sociology under sponsorship of Fisk university, Tuskegee institute and the Farm Security Administration. He was an instructor at Trinity junior college, Athens, Alabama. 9-14-44

1ST LT. DAVENPORT KILLED IN ACTION

Argus – St. Louis, Mo.
5-5-44

Former Newspaper Photographer Was In South Pacific

Two days after he wrote a letter to his mother, telling her of hard fighting with the enemy and asking her to pray as she never had before, First Lieutenant Oscar Paul Davenport was killed in action in Bougainville, April 6. His mother, and stepfather, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Brown, 4156 Enright avenue, received a telegram from the War Department last Friday notifying them of his death.

Davenport, was a popular newspaper photographer for the former St. Louis Call for some years and was known by many persons who had seen him taking pictures at football games and various events. 5-5-44

Was Highest Ranking

Davenport was for a time the highest ranking young army officer from St. Louis. Due to the fact that he had attended the old CMTC camp at Fort Riley, Kansas, and finished with a fine record, he had received a reserve officer's commission in 1936, the year he graduated from Sumner High School.

He was inducted in 1942 and was sent to Fort Benning, Ga., thence to Fort Huachuca, where he spent six weeks in maneuvers and finally to the Los Angeles Barracks from where he was sent overseas last January 1. His entire time here he was training officers

For six weeks after sailing he was reported missing, believed to have been on a ship that went down.

Won Praise 5-5-44

After arriving in the South Pacific, Solomons, he was assigned to combat troops. His military ability won him compliments from his superior officers and the respect of his men in the stiff jungle fighting.

The news of his death was a great shock to his mother to whom he had been an unusually close and obedient child, as well as his wife, Mrs. Olive Smith Davenport, who was at the University of Arizona. Mrs. Brown stated that in his last letter he told her and his stepfather to keep their chins up and pray harder than ever for he was in actual duty and must look after his men as best he could to protect them.

Lt. Davenport, Jr., was 31 years old and a loyal member of St. Elizabeth Catholic Church. Others of his survivors are a daughter, Patricia Ann, 5 years old; father, Rev. Oscar Davenport, Sr., of Webster Groves; two brothers, Eugene and Marion of Chicago; uncles, a grandmother, aunts and nephews.

FINDS MORE HARMONY, LACK OF RACIAL FRICTION ON WAR FRONT THAN ON HOME FRONT

Weekly New Orleans La.
8-19-44

Headquarters, European Theater of Operations.—Brig. Gen. O. Davis of the Inspector General's Department reported that "There appears to be more harmony and lack of racial friction in the combat zone than is found behind the lines."

The general, on temporary duty in the European theater of operations, has just completed a brief tour of American Negro units in France that covered an area of more than three hundred miles of liberated territory. This visit to Normandy was the ninth time that General Davis had been to France and the second time he had inspected installations at the front lines. 8-19-44

"I am thoroughly pleased with the performance and the conditions under which Negro troops are operating here, especially their performance under fire," the general declared. "Nobody knows except the men in the front lines how important it is for them to keep up their excellent records," he added.

He also revealed that commanding officers had related several instances of heroism which indicated unusual valor among Negro troops.

During his trip the general moved rapidly past the wreckage of German equipment and through countrysides punctuated with ruins of villages, exhibiting a physical stamina that drew praise from younger officers. 8-19-44

The highest ranking Negro officer visited soldiers repairing small arms and motorized equipment damaged by mines and enemy

These films depict Negro troops in action. 8-19-44

A number of film shorts of Negro troops in combat are being produced under the direction of appeared unusually high Major H. A. T. Freeland, who is eral Davis. He renewed acquaintance with Corporal Maurice C. Jennings of One Bainbridge Street, Brooklyn, N. Y., a company clerk in an amphibious truck company, Army Service Forces; Captain J. W. Coppersmith and Private Walter C. Fullford of 801 Cherokee Street, Pittsburgh, Pa., Officer C. M. Bennett of the Army tation Corps truck company.

On the last day of his tour, the general visited men of a barrage balloon battalion which previously had been commended by General Dwight D. Eisenhower. He also viewed the first moving pictures taken of a Signal Construction battalion by the Special Coverage Section, Army Pictorial Service.

Paratroop Unit Gets 6 Looies

Afro American — Baltimore, Md.

Athletes, Students in Newly Commissioned Unit

FORT BENNING, Ga. — The first officers for the all-colored 555th Parachute Infantry, six lieutenants recently received their coveted "wings" and joined their cadre of enlisted men for further training of the volunteer chutists.

Sixteen enlisted men, the first colored paratroopers, qualified a few weeks ago and now are engaged in processing more volunteers.

3-18-44

Officers, Background Listed

The new paratroop officers are:

First Lieut. Jasper E. Ross, Chicago, a 1940 graduate of Howard University, commissioned through the ROTC there, who was formerly attached to the 795th Tank Destroyer Battalion; Second Lieut. Bradley Biggs, Newark, N.J., one time professional football player, who was attached to the 758th Light Tank Battalion;

Second Lieut. Clifford Allen, Chicago, Northwestern University graduate, formerly attached to the Air Security Base Battalion at Camp Butner, N.C.; Second Lieut. Edward D. Baker, Chicago, formerly professional basketball player and postal clerk, who served with the 92nd Infantry Division;

3-18-44

Second Lieut. Warren C. Cornelius, Atlantic City, Temple University graduate and professional boxer; and Second Lieut. Edwin H. Wills, a pre-medical student at Fisk University, who served with the 370th Infantry.

Army appoints Negro adjunct

Tribune — Los Angeles, Calif.

10-16-44

WASHINGTON — The assignment of 1st Lt. W. Robert Ming, Jr., to the Labor Branch of the Industrial Personnel Division of the War Department was announced this week by Col. William J. Brennan, Jr., Chief of the Labor Branch. Lt. Ming's assignment to this division was made as a result of conferences several weeks ago with Under Secretary of War Patterson in which officials of the Urban League pointed out that Negro officers should be utilized in dealing with inter-racial labor problems in the various Army Service Commands.

10-16-44

Lt. Ming at present is assigned to the general staff of the Industrial Personnel Division in Washington. He is a graduate of the University of Chicago Law School. Prior to entering the armed forces, he was assistant professor of Law at Howard University Law School and a member of the Washington OPA legal staff.

News — Birmingham, Ala.

DIES OVERSEAS—Lt. James W. Holloway (above), of Birmingham, died Sept. 10 in France as a result of injuries received in a vehicle accident while on duty with the Army Signal Corps, according to a telegram received from the War Department by his widow, who resides at 32 Eighth Avenue, North. Memorial services will be held at 1:30 p.m. Sunday at the Sixth Avenue, South, Baptist Church.

10-20-44

English Queen Cheers Wounded Officer Abroad

Daily World — Atlanta, Ga.

Fisk Graduate Says He Was 'Very Surprised'

8-9-44

HEADQUARTERS, AIR SERVICE COMMAND, UNITED STATES STRATEGIC AIR FORCES IN EROPE—"All of you so very brave and we are so proud that you are fighting for us." These are the inspiring words by Her Majesty, Queen Elizabeth of England, that cheered Second Lieutenant James A. Bowman, of 6520 Evans Avenue, Chicago, Illinois, a patient in a U. S. Army General Hospital located somewhere in the British Isles..

Queen Elizabeth was escorted through the hospital by Lieutenant General John C. H. Lee, Deputy Theatre Commander; Major General Paul R. Hawley, Chief Surgeon, European Theater of Operations; Colonel Lester M. Dyke, Commanding Officer of the hospital: Captain Frances F. Kasmark, Chief Nurse, and the Queen's Lady in Waiting, the Honorable Mrs. Geoffrey Bowlby. Her Majesty stopped to talk with several wounded soldiers and visited many other wards of the hospital.

8-9-44

Lieutenant Bowman, 25--year-old officer of a combat engineer regiment, landed in France 14 days after D-Day. He said, following the Q[illegible] to his bed[illegible] was never so surpris[illegible] I won a $57 wrist watch on a Chicago amateur program." Quite elated, Bowman could hardly wait to tell his fellow patients how the Queen questioned him about his health and honed that he would be up and about soon.

8-9-44

A graduate of Fisk University, Nashville, Tennessee, where he captained the 1941 football team, Bowman is the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Bowman of the Evans Avenue address. He has a brother, Henry, 16, and a sister, Hannah, 17, both residents of Chicago. His achievements included his nomination on the All-Southern Eleven in 1941 as fullback and his election to "Who's Who" in the college world from Fisk in 1942. He is a member of Kappa Alpha Phi Fraternity.

Two things worry Lieutenant Bowman: How soon he can rejoin his fighting Engineers and what affect will the slight stiffness in his left arm have one his playing of the piano.

13 Lts. Promoted in Fighter Group

Afro American — Baltimore, Md.

By MAX JOHNSON

AFRO War Correspondent with U.S. Troops in Italy

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

ADVANCED ALLIED AIR BASE, Italy. — First Lt. Everett W. Johnson, Jr., 22, of 2901 Pierce Drive, Philadelphia, is among the thirteen officers here of Col. Benjamin O. Davis's fighter pilot group who won promotions this week from the rank of second lieutenant.

7-15-44

Lieutenant Johnson, group armament officer and former Xavier University student, is married and his wife, Mrs. Alberta S. Johnson, lives at his Philadelphia address. The coupe have a 3-year-old child.

Seven Pilots Elevated

Other officers winning promotions, seven of whom are pilots are:

Lts. Surgeon N. Ellington, 24 of Winston-Salem, N.C., pilot Vernon B. Lincoln, 29, of Cleveland, Ohio, supply officer; Freddie E. Hutchins, 23, Donalsonville Ga., pilot; Dean B. Mohr, 25, Detroit, squadron communications officer; Henry P. Bowman, 23, of St. Paul, Minn., armament officer;

7-15-44

John F. Briggs, Jr., 23, Anderson, Ind., pilot; Jack D. Holsclaw 24, of Portland, Ore., pilot; Langdon E. Johnson, 26, Rand, W.Va., armament officer; Walter L. McCreary, 26, New Orleans, pilot; James F. Reynolds, St. Louis, squadron communications officer; Lowell C. Stewart, 25, Los Angeles, pilot; James M. Conley, 28, Livingston, Ala., pilot.

Medical School Graduates 15 Men

People's Voice — New York

6-17-44

CARLISLE BARRACKS, Pa.—Fifteen Negro Officers were graduated from the Medical Field Service School, Carlisle Barracks, Pa. last week. This increased the number of Negro Medical, Dental, and Veterinary officers to receive diplomas from this National Training Center which is the Army's only military school for training Medical Department Officers for field duty.

The fifteen officers, all lieutenants, were members of the 53rd Officers Class graduated at exercises in Tugo Hall after completing six weeks training for duty as Medical Officers with troops in combat.

The officers in that class graduating were:

6-17-44

Robert H. Bailey, San Antonio, Tex.; Thomas J. Carter, jr, Elmira, N. Y.; Wendell F. Cox, Nashville, Tenn.; Perry J. Flowers, Dallas, Tex.; Richard A. Granger, Glen Cove, N. Y.; Lucien H. Holman, Alton, Ill.; George W. G. Lopez, Washington, D. C.; Edward R. McDaniels, jr, Baltimore, Md.; Harry M. McLinn, Washington, Pa.; James D. Mitchell, Columbus, Ohio; Allenby Pearman, Montclair, N. J.; Henry W. Robinson, jr, Washington, D. C.; Robert J. Swain, St. Petersburg, Fla.; Lawrence W. Thomas, Springfield, Ohio, and Frederick S. Perry Washington, D. C.

Gen. Davis In France Talks To Our Steward

Informer — Houston, Texas

8-12-44

By OLLIE STEWART

Afro-Informer War Correspondent With Invasion Forces in France

(opyright, Reproduction Prohibited)

WITH AMERICAN FORCES IN FRANCE—Brig. Gen. Benjamin O. Davis arrived in France Monday for general observations of colored troops in this theatre. Part of his stay will be spent with a special pictorial unit that is making a movie of colored troops operating here.

Gen. Davis was accompanied by Major Homer Roberts of the War Department's public relations office in Washington, and Carlton Moss, special consultant.

A desire to remain in France until the war ends was expressed by the veteran general.

8-12-44

"I am interested in seeing what colored troops are doing, how they are taking care of themselves, and also what recommendations I can make to cause them to feel better,"

BRIG. GEN. BENJAMIN O. DAVIS

8-12-44

he assuringly said.

Upon meeting the general I signed his "short snorter" bill and he signed mine. Then both of us made Edward Toles, Chicago Defender reporter assigned here, pay for being.

General Davis looked immaculate in his new battle dress, but Major Roberts encountered difficulty with his new field boots and Moss looked anything but comfortable in "GI"

Mrs. E. D. Howe of Suffolk, was ment, however, he expressed hope that all-soldiers would respect the rights of friendly French people during his re-especially women.

Sees Robots

General Davis says our pilotless lines over England during reaction: "They don't like lightning; either they strike or they don't."

At his first press conference the general said he could not answer questions regarding colored combat units, Wacs or nurses coming here, because they are not in his departcommissioned second lieutenant Army on Oct. 27 at the Officers Training School, Camp Lee, Va.

Before his induction, Lt. Howe was a coach and instructor of physical education at Huntington High School for six years. He received the B. S. degree from Virginia State College and

Commissioned As Second Lieutenant

Newport News, Va. Steven

Edward Howe, son of Prof. and

47k-1944

Labor Leaders Meet Brig. Gen. B. O. Davis In France

The Whip – Miami, Fla. 9-16-44

9-16-44

During his tour of Army installations on the continent, Brigadier General Benjamin O. Davis posed with labor leaders touring the European fronts. They are, left to right: David J. McDonald, Secretary-Treasurer of the United Steel Workers; Sherman H. Dalrymple, President United Rubber Workers; R. J. Thomas, President United Auto Workers, CIO; General Davis, Frank P. Finton, Director AFL; Eric Peterson, Executive Vice President of the International Association of Machinist (AFL) and Albert L. Wegener, Inter-National Brotherhood Electrical workers.

A Historic Picture

Afro American – Baltimore, Md.

For those who missed this picture of General B. O. Davis riding a tank in France, we reproduce it from last week's paper. Here is a historic photograph. It's the first appearance of a U.S. colored general on a battlefield in any war. It is true that he is past the retirement age and that he is in France to supervise the making of combat movies of colored troops as well as to make inspection; but the fact remains, he is there. He's wearing the new bucket helmet that gives him the appearance of having his head inside a waste basket; but his eyes are bright and smiling. Regulation O.D. uniform has been replaced by a battle jacket and, although you can't see it, he wears high shoes into which the bottoms of his trousers have been stuffed.

8-26-44

Brig. Gen. B. O. Davis

In his nostrils is the smell of battle, not much different from what he went through in the Spanish-American War or the Mexican expeditions.

8-26-44

Yes, you are seeing a picture of our first general on his first battlefield, and if we can persuade the President to promote qualified colored Army officers on the same basis as others, we should have a colored general in combat before the war is over.

Who's Who Of Negro Fliers Among Those Granted Leaves

Journal & Guide – Norfolk, Va.

6-10-44

ADVANCED ALLIED Air Base in Italy—(Via Air Mail)—Mr. and Mrs. America, prepare to welcome your favorite heroes of World War No. 2. You might well kill the fatted calf and prepare the feast for many of the key men of America's most famous Negro air squadrons are on their way to the good old United States of America.

The list of the seven passengers who left sunny Italy recently enroute home reads like the Who's Who of Negro Aviation. You probably already know who they are but, just for the record, let's put down the names of these pioneers who set out to prove that the airmen of the race were the equal of any other airmen on earth and who did prove it conclusively in the famous first fighter squadron. They are:

SECOND C. O. LEAVES

Major George S. "Spanky" Roberts, scrappy commanding officer, whose principal objective is to see his young son for the first time. "Spanky" hated to leave the squadron he had commanded since the command was relinquished last September by Lt. Col. B. O. Davis Jr., and when the time came to say goodbye he was obviously emotionally affected although in all of his cocky, callous manner as a squadron commander no one would have thought that he had any soft emotions.

Major Roberts will hie himself first to his home in Fairmont, W. Va., where he will get a much deserved rest. And then, who knows what will be given this popular fighter pilot to do. Perhaps then he will belong to the people and to the Army. Many of you may get a chance to meet the man who led this famous squadron.

6-10-44

MOST POPULAR

Captain Charlie "Buster" Hall, No. 1 air hero of this war, who has three German victories to his credit and who has long been the most popular name connected with the squadron. It was Charlie Hall who got the first "Jerry" attributed to this flying group and who, as its senior flight leader and first flyer promoted overseas, has been the big name of the unit. Charlie plans to head for Terre Haute, Ind., to see his wife and to enjoy the life of a "Hoosier" for a short time.

Then he will try to do his best at whatever job the Army puts him to and he will probably make the regular hero's circuit of town halls, auditoriums, and parades.

He is hoping for a quick return to combat and told us that he'd rather come back with some fighter group, preferably one which would give him further association, in the job of fighting, with the men he has grown to know in his old squadron. "Funnyman" Charlie Hall is a fighting man and he won't want to stay in the home front lines too long.

ABOUT WILEY

6-10-44

Captain James T. Wiley of Pittsburgh, Pa., just wants to see his family for a while and get a little rest from the ardous task of flying missions in combat so steadily. Captain Wiley, one of the oldest as well as one of the best flyers in Negro aviation, stayed in front of the squadron's parade from the very start until he quit active flying a few weeks ago. He was the first pilot in the squadron to get fifty missions and was the first to get eighty.

He was taken off flying status after reaching the 88 mark. Said Jimmie Wiley: "After a brief rest I'd rather get back over here. I'll be more good over here than back in the states." The quiet, unassuming flight leader who has been the inspiration of much of the success the squadron has gained because he was able to get close to the new men and inspire them, looks and acts quite unlike a fire-eating fighter pilot but he knows his job and does it well. You'll enjoy meeting him.

CAPT. CUSTIS

6-10-44

Captain Lemuel Rodney Custis, of Hartford, Conn., was the squadron's capable operations officer until he departed. Just how the men felt when the time came to leave was best expressed by Captain Custis who told us: "It is difficult to express oneself at a time like this.

Sure, I am glad to be going back to the folks at home for a time and have frankly looked forward to this with great anticipation. But when the time comes to go

This parody on the language of the draft board became a by-word in the squadron and when he said "Greetings" the pilots on that little list he carried with him knew that this was IT for them. I'm sure that if he makes any speech-es in America, he will begin them

6-10-44

Custis would be missed here, and leave the men with whom he said "great show" whether it's over you've fought this battle as pioneers, the feeling is quite different from what you thought it would be. However, we'll be back and will give them a great show." That phrase, "great show," is a favorite with Captain Custis and it will be greatly missed here, he's always known to want a ion will be serious tone:

WILL BE MISSED

6-10-44

by saying "Greetings."

CAPT. CARTER

Captain Herbert Eugene Carter, the diminutive "dapper dan" of the squadron, hails from Tuskegee Institute and will be heading back there to his young wife as soon as he sets foot in the USA. "Gene" Carter while a flyer had always been interested in the engineering aspects of the planes he flew and consequently had done the engineering job — normally the function of a ground officer— in addition to his other duties as a flyer.

6-10-44

His leaving creates two holes in the organization but the little fellow who did two men's work deserves a rest and I'm sure that the Army can find some valuable spot for a chap with so much energy and enthusiasm for this business of flying. It's hard to say who will succeed him as the neatest dresser in the squadron.

OTHERS GOING HOME

So far, that's a sizeable hunk of rank to be coming back in one lump. But there are two first lieutenants also in the lineup. They are: Lt. Willie H. Fuller, of Tarboro, N. C., a huge man who towers over everybody else in the organization and just about the biggest comic in the whole air forces, Lt. Willie Ashley, the "joker" from Sumter, S. C.

There you have a lineup of first class fighting men. They have done a great job over here. They deserve a "great show" from the folks back home because they carried a heavy load and discharged their responsibilities to the credit of themselves and the folks they represented. Adding their combat missions together, I find these men have, collectively, faced death over enemy lines a total of nearly 500 times. They dread their roles as heroes back home more than combat. But bear with them and they'll give you a "great show."

Negro Officers Gain High Rank At Ft. Huachuca

People's Voice
New York N.Y.
3-25-44

FT. HUACHUCA — Announcement has just been made through the office of Colonel Edwin N. Hardy, Ft. Huachuca's commanding officer, that four ranking medical officers have been recently promoted. The officers receiving promotions are: Lt. Col. Median O. Bousfield to grade of full Colonel, Major Dehaven Hinkson, Major Roscoe C. Giles and Major Harold Thatcher, to the rank of Lieutenant-Colonels.

All four of these officers are on duty at the Fort's Station Hospital No. 1. Col. Bousfield is the commanding officer; Lt. Col. Giles, Chief of Surgical services, and Lt. Col. Thatcher, Chief of Medical services, and head of the Department of Venereal Disease.

Col Bousfield is from Chicago, where he formerly held the position of director of Negro health for the Julius Rosenwald Fund. He entered military service June, 1942, to serve as commanding officer of Station Hospital No. 1, Ft. Huachuca.

3-25-44

Lt. Col. Hinkson is from Philadelphia, Pa. He has the distinction of having organized and operated the first U. S. Army Hospital headed by a Negro Medical Officer, at the Tuskegee Army Flying School. He had previously served with the Army during the 1st World War, having seen overseas combat service with the 92nd Division as a Medical Corps Officer. He retained a commission in the Medical Reserve Corps, and was promoted to grade of Major in 1925.

"Caterpiller Club" Pilot At Tuskegee

Tribune - Philadelphia, Pa.
10-14-44

TUSKEGEE ARMY AIR FIELD, Ala.—First Lieutenant George R. Bolling of Phoebus, Va., the first pilot of the 99th Fighter Squadron to be shot down in combat and parachute to safety, was recently assigned to the Tuskegee Army Air Field.

The former Hamptonian was flying patrol duty on July 11, 1942, the day after the initial landing in Sicily by Allied troops. His plane, "Jinkey," was hit by flak and began to burn. He bailed out and floated into the Mediterranean, 4,000 feet below.

The late Sam Bruce circled the helpless pilot to ward off enemy planes. Spending 24 hours adrift in a dinghy, he was finally picked up by a U. S. destroyer and set ashore in Sicily. Bolling spent the next four days on a small coastal boat resting and was finally delivered to his unit in Africa.

10-14-44

Bolling was most impressed "over there" by the performances of enemy aircraft and the youth- ... prisoners.

Wife Knew of Col. Davis's Promotion Before He Did

Afro American — Baltimore, Md.
6-10-44

By MAX JOHNSON

AFRO War Correspondent with U.S. Troops in Italy

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

ADVANCED AIR BASE IN ITALY—(By Cable, Censored)—Colonel Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., received official notification of his promotion from the rank of lieutenant colonel on Monday, shortly after returning from a flight with the group of fighter pilots he now commands.

Accompanying the notification, dated June 1, was a congratulatory telegram from his wife, Mrs. Agatha Davis, 527 W. 157th Street, New York. "Damn," said the colonel, "my wife knew about this before I did."

(EDITOR'S NOTE—News of Lt. Col. Benjamin O. Davis's promotion to the rank of full colonel first reached his father, Brigadier Gen. B. O. Davis, last week through the AFRO.)

Asked how he planned to celebrate the promotion, he said by going on another important flight with his group.

6-10-44

Headed Pioneer Squadron

Colonel Davis, just 31, formerly commanded the 99th Fighter Squadron, which was activated in October, 1942, at Tuskegee as the first all-colored fighter squadron in aviation and participated in the North African and Sicilian campaigns.

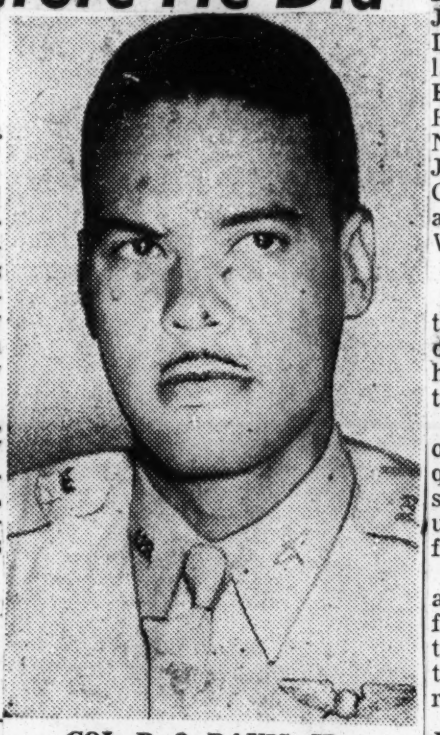
Following temporary assignment to Selfridge Field, Mich., he brought the group he now commands to the Mediterranean theatre in February.

A 1936 West Point graduate, the colonel formerly attended Western Reserve University in Cleveland, Ohio, and the University of Chicago. He was graduated in 1938 from the infantry school at Fort Benning, Ga., and won his wings at Tuskegee in 1942. Prior to assignment to Tuskegee, he was stationed at Fort Riley, Kan. Colonel Davis is the son of Brigadier Gen. Benjamin O. Davis of the Inspector General's Department in Washington.

6-10-44

Philadelphian Promoted

Another promotion in this fighter group is that of Capt. Louis R. Purnell, 24, of 101 Weaver Street, Philadelphia, who was raised from the rank of first lieutenant on Sunday.



COL. B. O. DAVIS, JR.

Captain Purnell celebrated his promotion with an extra piece of friend chicken at dinner, then returned to his work as assistant group operations officer.

A pioneer graduate of the Tuskegee flying school, he was formerly overseas with the 99th Fighter Squadron, returned to the States in October, 1943, and requested assignment to the present new fighter group. He is unmarried and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis J. Purnell of Cape May, N.J.

8 Get Air Medals

Eight air medals have been awarded to pilots of the pioneer 99th Fighter Squadron for meritorious achievements while participating in Anzio Beachhead flights last winter. P-40 Warhawk pilots receiving these honors include:

First Lts. Robert W. Diez, Portland, Ore.; Elwood T. Driver, Trenton, N.J.; Clinton B. Mills, Durham, N.C.; Clarence W. Allen, Mobile, Ala.; Lewis C. Smith, Los Angeles; 2nd Lts. Leonard W. Jackson, Fort Worth, Texas; Wilson V. Eagleson, Bloomington, Ind., and Charles B. Bailey, Puntagorda, Fla.

6-10-44

All are credited with destroying Focke-Wulf 190's. Lieutenants Jackson and Mills shot theirs down on February 7, and Driver on February 5, while the other victories were registered January 27.

Blood Donated

Ten enlisted men of the P-39 Fighter Squadron commanded by Capt. Robert Tresville this week donated one pint of blood each to the Allied blood bank following a call for O type blood to be used for men wounded in the present Italian campaign.

They are 1st Sgt. Arthur Mabry, Los Angeles; S/Sgts. James E. Johnson, Philadelphia, and Sidney L. Evans, Anquila, Miss.; Sgts. William Shuford, Detroit; Broadus Butler, Mobile, Ala.; Ambrose Hughes, Dallas, Texas; Clarence Nowell, Spartanburg, S.C., and James C. Atchinson, Sacramento, Calif.; Cpls. Willie L. Allen, Philadelphia, and William F. Keene, Washington.

6-10-44

No Segregation

The blood is handled by a military medical laboratory where five officers and twenty-eight men have been working night and day to meet the current demand.

Officials at the center pointed out that, although there is an adequate supply of plasma sent overseas by the Red Cross, many casualties require whole blood transfusions to pull them through.

Donors have been soldiers from all ranks and all races, and as far as could be learned, no attempt is made to follow the pattern set by the Red Cross in segregating its blood plasma.

HAS 2 SONS OVERSEAS

BALTIMORE — Henry J. and James B. Hannell, sons of Mrs. Emily J. Hannell of 1220 McCulloh Street, are both serving abroad.

Lt. Edward S. Hope Engineering Officer

Journal & Guide
Norfolk, Va.

PEARL HARBOR, T. H.—Lt. Edward S. Hope, USNR, former member of the staff of Howard University, Washington, D. C., for fifteen years, is now on duty overseas in the Fourteenth Naval District as an engineering officer.

11-18-44

Lieut. Hope left Howard in May, 1944, to become the first Negro commissioned a lieutenant in the U. S. Navy. His wife and two children, Edward Jr., 9, and James Lynn, 6, remain in Washington.

After completing indoctrination school at Davisville, R. I., Lieutenant Hope was retained there to assist in the Allied Military Government training course. He reported for overseas duty in the central Pacific area on October 20, 1944.

He graduated with an A. B. degree from Morehouse College in 1936 and M. S. in engineering from Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and Ed. D. from Columbia University in 1944. His father, for whom the Liberty ship, JOHN HOPE, was named, was president emeritus of Atlanta University and Morehouse College, and was reputedly the first Negro to become a full professor in the United States.

Following college graduation he worked as an engineer for a year in Hawaii. Lieutenant Hope is married to the former Miss Jesse W. Lear, USNR, and has two children, Edward Jr., and James Lynn, USNR. Mrs. Hope is a graduate of Wellesley College and Columbia University and was formerly a member of the faculty of Howard University. Before entering the Navy, Lieutenant Hope was employed by the U. S. Navy, Bos'n Charles ... Ensign ... Arbor, ... and ... USNR.

47k-1944

General B. O. Davis in England

Afro American — Baltimore, Md.
8-5-44

Attending the Sunday morning open air services at a U.S. Army headquarters somewhere in England are (left to right, in front row) Lt. Gen. John C. H. Lee, commanding general of the Services of Supply in European Theater of Operations; Brig.-Gen. Benjamin O. Davis of the Inspector General's Department; Carlton Moss, technical adviser to the Special Coverage Unit, Army Pictorial Service; and other officers and enlisted men of the headquarters. (U.S. Army Signal Corps Photo.)

1-6-44

TWO TUSKEGEE OFFICERS BOOSTED IN RANK—Col. Richard C. Cumming, post surgeon, recently promoted to his present rank, and Chaplain Douglas L. T. Robinson, recipient of a major's leaf, are shown congratulating each other at the Tuskegee Army Air Field. Both are specialists in their fields, the former administering to the physical well-being, and the latteer to the spiritual well-being of the personnal at TAAF.

Argus — St. Louis, Mo.
9-15-44

9-15-44

BOMBER OFFICER—GODMAN FIELD, Ky.—Junius R. Savage, 24, Squadron Adjutant of the 616th Bombardment Squadron (Medium) 477th Bombardment Group has recently been promoted from 2nd Lt. to 1st Lt. He was promoted for efficient performance of his duties. 1st Lt. Savage, of St. Louis, Mo., was formerly a professional baseball player and has played in Mexico. He is a graduate of the Adjutant General's School, Ft. Washington, Md.

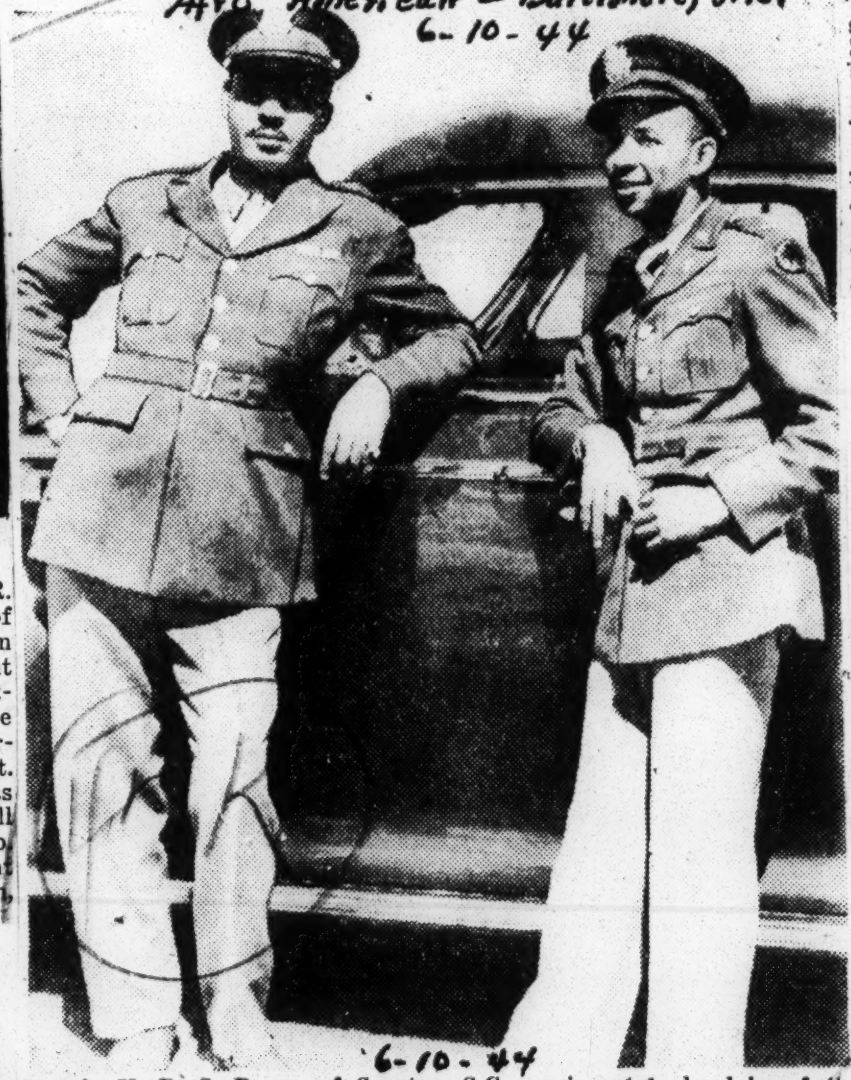
Courier — Pittsburgh, Pa.

AIR INTELLIGENCE—Lt. John D. Silvera of New York City, one of a group of 20 Negro officers studying at the School of Applied Tactics for Air Intelligence at Orlando, Fla. The officers will complete the course June 14.

6-10-44

92nd Chaplain and Aide

Afro American — Baltimore, Md.
6-10-44



6-10-44

Captain K. D. S. Pogue of Sumter, S.C., regimental chaplain of the 92nd Division, shown with his assistant, First Lt. Douglass Hall, at Fort Huachuca. Captain Pogue spent eighteen months overesas.

Courier — Pittsburgh, Pa.
8-19-44

National Guard General Nominated For Promotion By The President

Tribune — Brooklyn, N.Y.
10-2-44

The White House announced that the Senate had received from the President the recommendation for the temporary promotion of Brigadier General Raymond S. McLain to the grade of major general.

General McLain, a 54-year-old veteran of the Champagne and Meuse-Argonne offensives of the last war and of the Sicilian, Italian and Normandy campaigns of this war, entered the military service as a private of the Oklahoma National Guard in 1912. At the end of the World War he was a captain commanding a machine gun company of the 36th Division. After serving as Chief of Staff of the 45th Division, National Guard, for several years, Colonel McLain was promoted in 1937 to the grade of brigadier general and assigned to command the 70th Field Artillery Brigade of that division. He served with conspicuous participated in the Normandy invasion as artillery commander of the 45th Division in the Sicilian and Italian campaigns and was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross for extraordinary heroism in action.

10-2-44

Because of his outstanding combat record and battle experience, General McLain was transferred to England, and he was advanced to the grade of major general.

10-2-44

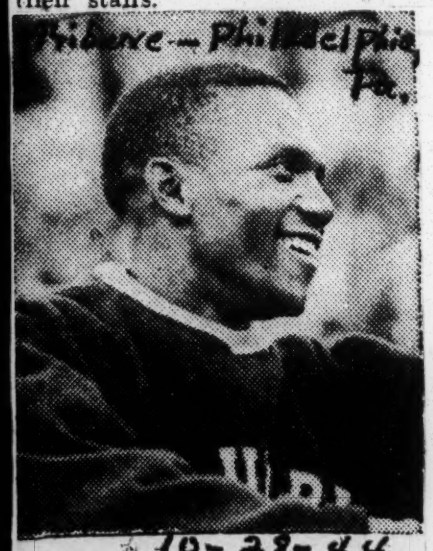
General McLain was born on April 4, 1890, in Washington County, Kentucky, and was Presi-

Army Names First Industrial Personnel Commissioned Officer

Atlanta, Ga. Daily World
10-7-44

The assignment of First Lieutenant W. Robert Ming, Jr., to the Labor Branch of the Industrial Personnel Division of the War Department was announced this week by Colonel William J. Brennan, Jr., Chief of the Labor Branch, according to a communication addressed to Julius A. Thomas, Director of the Department of Industrial Relations of the National Urban League. Lieutenant Ming's assignment to this important division was made as a result of conferences several week ago with Under Secretary of War Patterson in which officials of the Urban League pointed out that Negro officers should be utilized in dealing with inter-racial labor problems in the various Army Service Commands. 10-7-44

Lieutenant Ming at present is assigned to the general staff of the the Industrial Personnel Division in Washington. He is a graduate of the University of Chicago Law School and has distinguished himself in the practice of law. Prior to entering the armed forces, he was Assistant Professor of Law at Howard University Law School and a member of the Washington OPA legal staff. He brings to the new assignment a wide experience in the law and training in the work of the War Department's Industrial Personnel Division Urban League officials said that the Commanding Officers of the various Service Commands have been requested to add Negro officers to their staffs.



Tribune — Philadelphia, Pa.
10-28-44

With U. S. Forces In France —Second Lieut. Ben Johnson, the former track sensation from Columbia University, who went to Berlin in 1937 as a member of the U. S. Olympic team, is headed again for the Rhineland, this time in a different role.

Johnson is serving with one of four all-Negro officered Quartermaster truck companies operating on the famous "Red Ball Express Highway," over which vital supplies for the far-flung front lines of the U. S. Armies in France and Belgium are sped.

To the disgust of Hitler's vaunted "Supermen," Johnson's teammates captured 13 first places out of the Olympic 21 events, with Johnson taking the lead in his event. Jesse Owens, the Cleveland track ace, also now serving in the Army, took first honors in three contests.

10-28-44

The officers and enlisted personnel of these trucking units were formerly members of an antiaircraft artillery (automatic weapons) battalion which underwent its "ack - ack" training at Camp Davis, North Carolina, but was converted into trucking units when the need for transportation became acute. They were rushed to France in August to assist the lightning drives of the First and Third Armies.

A native of Hamilton, Va., Lieut. Johnson is married and resides at 500 Yark street, Burlington, N. J.

93rd Division Sergeant Wins Bar On Field

Tribune — Philadelphia, Pa.
10-28-44

WITH THE 93rd INFANTRY DIVISION In The Southwest Pacific Area—The first enlisted man of the 93rd Infantry Division to be commissioned on the field was First Sergeant Ewel Polk, of 315 South Medio Drive, Los Angeles, California, who received the honor as the result of meritorious service against the enemy.

A veteran of 14 years of soldiering, Second Lieutenant Polk received his commission on September 10. In his role of first sergeant, Lieutenant Polk ably

Commissioned In Field

Tribune — Philadelphia, Pa.

10-28-44

First Sgt. EWEL POLK

assisted his commander, Captain Frederick W. Hawksworth, in bringing his company through a Jap ambush without serious casualties.

Lieutenant Polk attended school in Waco, Texas, and has a brother, Albert who resides in Oakland, California.

Capt. Roberts Sets Record; Wilson Escapes

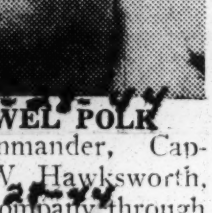
Journal + Guide
Norfolk, Va.

By LEM GRAVES, Jr.
Guide War Correspondent
(Copyright. Reproduction Forbidden)

ADVANCED ALLIED AIRBASE IN ITALY, May 4. (By Cable, censored)—Capt. Leon C. Roberts, Prichard, Ala., became the first Negro in history to complete 100 aerial combat missions, and 2nd Lt. Theodore Allen Wilson, Roanoke, Va., made his initial parachute jump, thus gaining membership in the mythical Caterpillar Club, all in one exciting operation over the Anzio beachhead today (Thursday).

10-28-44

5-13-44



CAPT. ROBERTS

Wilson, is the son of Mrs. Julia B. Wilson, 47 Patton avenue, N.E., Roanoke. His wife is the former Miss Doris Scott, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alonzo Scott, 851 Washington avenue, Norfolk Mrs. Scott is a Journal and Guide employee.

Mrs. Wilson, a graduate of Virginia Union University, is residing at 213 W. 123rd street, New York City. Lt. Wilson is a former Union student.

(Captain Roberts was the youngest of the original 99th Fighter Squadron who went overseas last April. He will be 23 on June 29. He is one of the only three of that original group still in combat, most of the others having been returned to the United States on furlough or reassignment.—Ed.)

5-13-44

Lt. Wilson was flying on Capt. Roberts' wing when flak hits disabled his P-40 Warhawk. It was his third combat mission since joining the squadron overseas a few weeks ago. (He was a visitor in Norfolk just last February, before his overseas assignment).

The flight went out to divebomb enemy gun positions north of Anzio. Lt. Wilson tried to nurse the ailing ship back to the Anzio landing strip, but the engine failed. He stepped out, "hit the silk" at 2,500 feet, and tumbled over as he reached the earth.

ROBERTS STOOD BY

Capt. Roberts circled overhead and followed Lt. Wilson down to make sure of his safe landing.

Operations officer of the squadron, Capt. Roberts has never been seriously hit, never had to parachute to safety, and never had to crash-land his plane, although he has picked up about eight flak hits on his 100 missions. 5-13-44

(Capt. Roberts will be remembered as the youthful pilot who shortly after the 99th reached Africa struck a high tension electric wire and ripped two-thirds off the tail of his aircraft. It was a training flight over French Morocco but Roberts maneuvered the plane to a safe landing without getting a scratch.—Ed.).

LT. WILSON FLIES AGAIN

Wilson came down to safety in the middle of a hospital area, and a few hours later flew another repaired P-40 back to his base. He admits that he felt more nervous flying the repaired plane back over enemy territory than he did when his original ship began acting up. 5-13-44

He explained that the repaired Warhawk had no ammunition and, having lost his headset for the radio-telephone system, during his parachute jump, he was unable to communicate with ground stations or other Allied craft in the area.

Lt. Wilson said: "I feel lucky I was not attacked on that flight alone back to base."

But he was apparently unruffled by his first jump and next day took his regular turn on the line. He had not a scratch on him and appeared perfectly calm.

Lt. Ralph Metcalfe Selected to Attend Special Service Sch.

Weekly — New Orleans, La.
10-14-44

Lt. Ralph Metcalfe, Olympic track star stationed at the Army Service Forces Training Center, Camp Plauche, New Orleans, has been selected to attend the special services school at Washington and Lee University, Va., camp officials have announced.

Lt. Metcalfe, who prior to entering service was a faculty member and coach at Xavier University, New Orleans, is assistant athletic and recreation officer for the Third Regiment of the ASFTC, Camp Plauche. 10-14-44

He was commissioned recently after attending the Transportation Corps officers candidate school at the New Orleans Army Air Base.

West Point Graduate

Age — New York, N.Y.
5-27-44

WEST POINT, N. Y.—Cadet Henry Minton Francis, son of Dr. and Mrs. John Francis, of Washington, D. C., was among the graduates at the U. S. Military Academy last Tuesday. He was immediately commissioned a 2nd Lieutenant in the U. S. Army.

Boags Commissioned In Negro Class at Hondo

News Courier — Charleston, S. C.
5-27-44

Walter N. Boags, 27, of 248 Ashley avenue, recently was presented silver navigator's wings and commissioner a second lieutenant in a class of negroes at the Hondo army air field, Hondo, Tex. Lieutenant Boags completed 18 weeks of intensive training involving 15,000 miles of practice combat flight in twin-engine training craft.

Legion Of Merit For Army Chaplain

Daily World — Atlanta, Ga.
10-19-44

SOMEWHERE IN NEW GUINEA—(A N P)—Last week I met the officer who recommended the Legion of Merit award for Chaplain Herbert C. Dubra of Gulfport, Miss., the first American chaplain to set foot on New Guinea soil. During the course of an interview with Col. Ivan L. Bennett, chief of Chaplains on Gen. MacArthur's staff, here in the SWPA, I learned that he was the one that had made the recommendation to GHQ. The award was given for out-of the second chaplain to be honored. The only other chaplain thus honored is with a unit.

The chaplain of a Negro engineers battalion, also the first here, from April, 1942, to March, 1944.

47k-1944

Tuskegee Pilots Hear Navy Officer At Graduation

Defender—Chicago, Ill.
9-16-44

TUSKEGEE, Ala.—The navy took over at the Army Air Forces graduation exercises of class 44-H at the Tuskegee Army Air Field on September 8, when Commander Daniel W. Armstrong, USNR director of recruit training for Negroes, U. S. Naval Training Center, Great Lakes, Ill., delivered the main address to the assembled throng gathered in the post chapel.

Commander Armstrong, an eloquent and provocative speaker, stressed the importance of team-work in modern warfare without which there would be no final victory. The youthful commander pointed out we must not overlook the splendid record already established by the many thousands of Negro sailors who have been assigned to the Pacific area and who for many many months have been paving the road to Tokyo. Many of these men, unheralded and unsung, have been doing a job that is nevertheless being written into the pages of our past, present and the future victories in the Pacific. 9-16-44

Nearing the conclusion of the speech, he stated, "From what I know and have learned about your proficiency in the performance of your duties, may I convey to you a message from the Navy, a message which makes every navyman thrill with pride when he sees the flags go up on the signal hoist of the flagship, Job Well Done."

Cadet honors to the first three ranking cadets in order of their standings went to 2d Lt. John Lyman, Whitehead, Jr., St. Paul Polytechnic Institute, Lawrenceville, Va.; James Coleman, 1421 Sloman street, Detroit, Mich., and Emmett Rodney Anders of 420 E. Willow street, Carbondale, Ill.

Col. Noel F. Parrish, Commanding Officer, presented the letters of appointment to the new officers, while Lt. Col. Donald G. McPherson, deputy for training and operations, issued silver wings to the single and twin engine pliots.

Tribune—Pittsburgh, Pa.
July 1, 1944

HEROIC CHAPLAIN—Capt. James L. Jones, U.S. Army chaplain, of Dallas, Tex., has been awarded the Silver Star for gallantry under fire at Anzio Beach. He also wears the Purple Heart. Attached to a combat Quartermaster unit of the Fifth Army, Captain Jones has returned to the United States for a rest.—U. S. Army Signal Corps Photo.

34 Pilots End TAAF Training

Afro American
Baltimore, Md.

Graduates Hear Great Lakes Commander

VIRGINIAN LEADS

Some to Fly Bombers, Some Fighter Planes

9-16-44

TUSKEGEE, Ala. — Commander Daniel W. Armstrong, director of colored recruit training for the Great Lakes Naval Training Station, delivered the main address to the thirty-four pilots finishing their training at the Tuskegee Army Air Field on Friday.

Commander Armstrong stressed the importance of teamwork in modern warfare, without which there would be no final victory, and expressed pride in the record already established by the many thousands of colored sailors who have been assigned to the Pacific area.

He also praised the graduates' reputation for proficiency in the performance of their duties.

The first three ranking cadets in order of standings were: Second Lts. John L. Whitehead, Jr., Lawrenceville, Va.; James Coleman, Detroit, and Emmett R. Anders, Carbondale, Ill.

Col. Noel F. Parrish, commanding officer, presented the letters of appointment to the new officers, while Lt. Col. Donald G. McPherson, deputy for training and operations, issued silver wings to the single and twin-engine pilots. 9-16-44

Twin-engine pilots in the class included:

Lt. Warren E. Henry, Plainsfield, N.J.; F/O Russell C. Nalle, Detroit; F/O Elijah J. Oliver, Birmingham; Lt. Paul J. Bonseigneur, Chicago, and F/O Frederick H. Samuels, Philadelphia;

Also the following student officers: First Lt. Luther Goodwin, Bakersfield, Calif.; First Lt. John A. Rector, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Second Lt. Robert S. Brown, Minneapolis, Minn.; Second Lt. Augustus G. Brown, New Orleans, and First Lt. James A. Hurd, Leavenworth, Kans.

The single engine pilots were:

Lt. George E. Hardy, Philadelphia; Lt. Edward S. Bishop, Brooklyn, N.Y.; Second Lt. William M. Cousins, Philadelphia; Second Lt. Lawrence I. Miller, Los Angeles; F/O Milton S. Washington, Willow Grove, Pa.; Second Lt. Emmett R. Anders, Carbondale, Ill.; Second Lt. John L. Whitehead, Lawrenceville, Va.; F/O William P. Armstrong, Providence, R.I.; F/O Edward E. Manley, Los Angeles; Second Lt. Carl E. Carey, St. Louis; Second Lt. James Coleman, Detroit; F/O Morris E. Grant, Chicago; Second Lt. Samuel G. Leftenant, Amityville, N.Y.; F/O Samuel Mathieu, Birmingham; Second Lt. William H. Holloman, St. Louis; Second Lt. Steven Jenins, Columbus, Ohio; 9-16-44

F/O Robert Johnson, Pittsburgh, Pa.; F/O Charles Cooper, Washington; Second Lt. Felix M. McCrory, Yuma, Ariz.; F/O John W. Squires, St. Louis; Second Lt. George E. Franklin, Joliet, Ill.; F/O Charles A. Lane, St. Louis; and the following student officers; First Lt. Albert Lieuteau, New Orleans, and Second Lt. Herbert C. Barland, Chicago.

Promoted To Captain

Tribune—Philadelphia, Pa.

4-16-44

1st Lt. CHARLES G. CAMPFIELD, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles G. Campfield, Sr., of Tuskegee Institute, Ala., who was promoted to the rank of Captain on March 15. His wife is a resident of Philadelphia. Captain Campfield has been assigned to duty with the Anti-Aircraft Replacement Training Center at Ft. Eustis, Va., where he began his basic training in February, 1942. He was graduated from OCS at Camp Davis, N. C., in November, 1942 and was promoted to 1st Lieut. a year later.

Squadron Commander

Tribune—Philadelphia, Pa.

4-15-44

First Lieut. EDWARD C. GLEED, of Lawrence, Kans., a graduate of the University of Kansas, is a squadron commander in a fighter group operating in Italy under the command of Lieut. Colonel Benjamin O. Davis, Jr. The son of Mr. Herbert T. Gleed, of 618 Vermont Street, Lawrence, Kansas, he was a press photographer in civilian life. He received his commission at the Tuskegee Army Flying School. (U. S. Army Air Corps photo.)

Over 200 Negro Chaplains Go Through Harvard 'U'

Courier—Pittsburgh, Pa.
4-8-44

CAMBRIDGE, Mass.—(ANP)—Nine colored chaplains were among the group of 189 to graduate from the Army chaplain school located at Harvard university, Col. John K. Howard, commanding officer of the Army training schools at Harvard, was the commencement speaker.

OVER 200 NEGRO GRADUATES

These nine graduates brings the number of colored chaplains to over 200, since the school was moved from Fort Benjamin Harrison. All of the chaplains left for their stations immediately after the ceremonies. The officers underwent training in grave registration, gas detection, first aid, Army administration and routine. Ranging in rank from first lieutenant to lieutenant colonel, the chaplains occupied Perkins and Conant halls, once used by graduate students at Harvard.

HOMETOWNERS LISTED

Baugh, Crossett, Ark.; Dennis D. Nelson, 2nd, Nashville; Jesse W. Arbor, Chicago; George C. Cooper, Wilson, N.C.; James E. Hare, Fort Pierce, Fla.; Frank H. Sublett, Evanston, Ill., and William S. White, Jr., Chicago.

3-25-44

Upon completion of this course of training, the officers will be assigned to duty initially either at the U.S. Naval Training School, Hampton, or at the U. S. Naval Training Station, Great Lakes.

2 Made Warrant Officers

Also announced was the elevation to the grade of warrant officer of Boatswain Charles B. Lear of Canton, Mo., and Acting Pay Clerk Willie Powell of San Diego, Cal.

3-25-44

[EDITOR'S NOTE: Powell is at sea and will report to Great Lakes upon his return.]

TRADITION BROKEN

Two Others Get Rank of Warrant Officer

GREAT LAKES, Ill.—As a result of the Navy's recently announced policy of selecting colored candidates for commissioning officers in the U. S. Naval Reserve, twelve men were appointed to temporary rank of ensign (deck) (V(S)) (specialists) to rank from February 23.

3-25-44

The men appointees, who were directed to report to the commanding officer at Great Lakes for temporary duty under instruction are:

Two from D. C.

Philip G. Barnes and Graham E. Martin, Washington, D.C.; Reginald E. Goodwin and Samuel E. Barnes, Cincinnati, Ohio; John W. Reagan, Los Angeles; Dalton L. dental, medical, civil engineer corps and supply corps will be commissioned from civilian life.

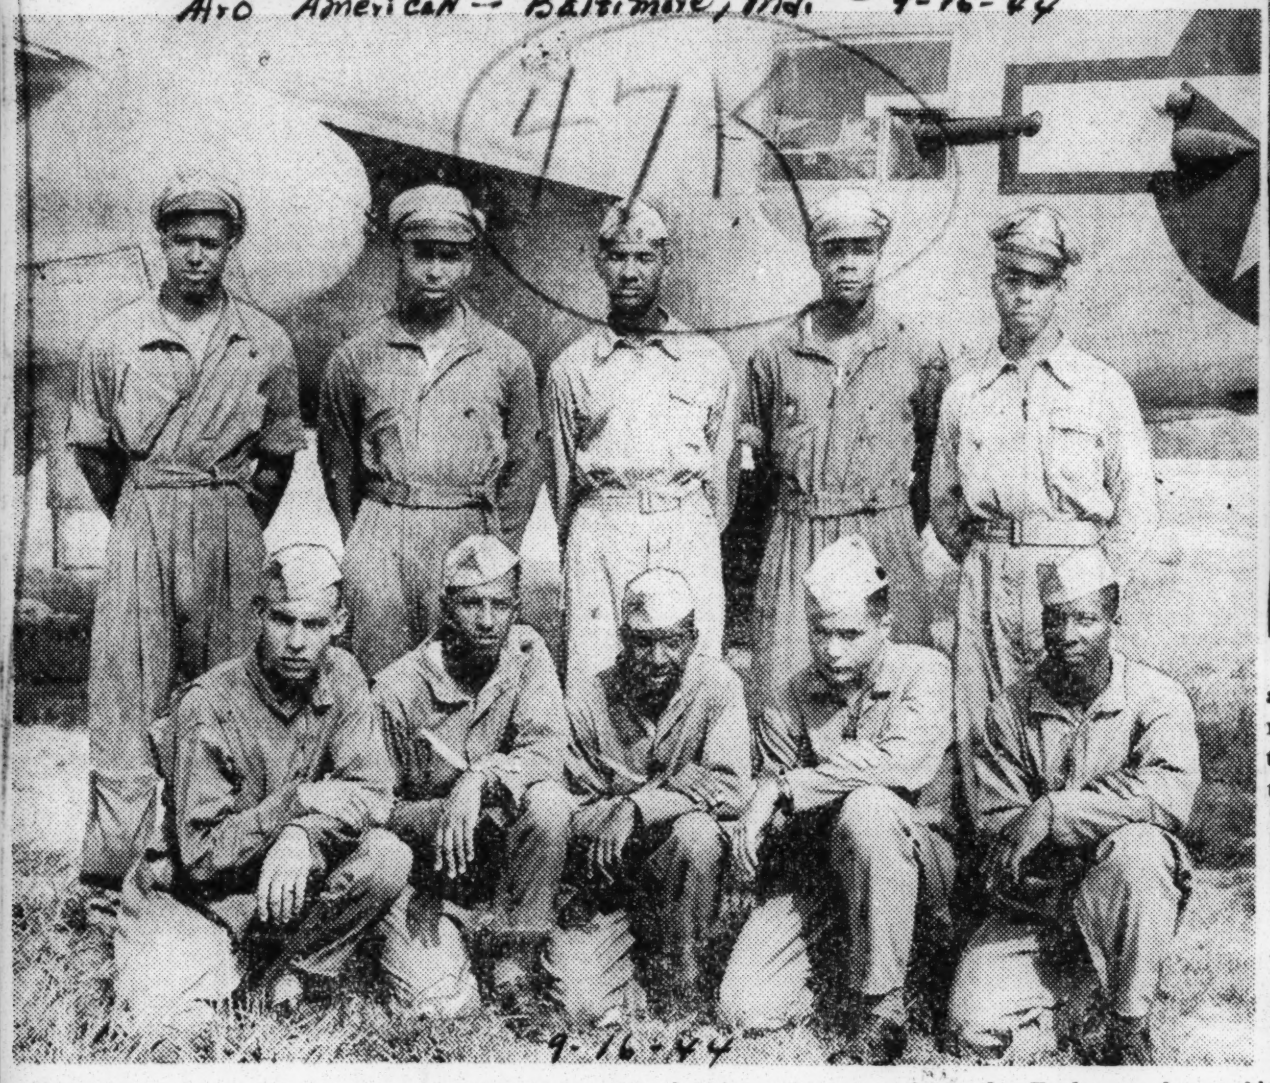
Twelve Made Navy Ensigns

Afro American
Baltimore, Md.

First Commissions

Bomber Pilots Complete Training at TAAF

Afro American -- Baltimore, Md. 9-16-44



9-16-44

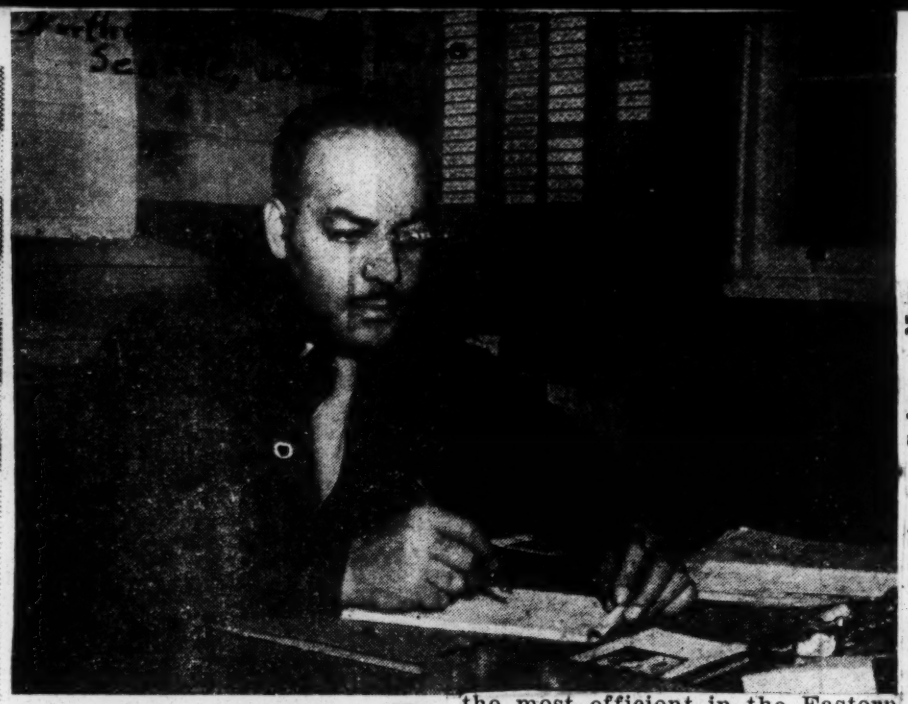
Bomber pilots who received their ratings as operators of twin-engine aircraft at the Tuskegee Army Air Field September 8. Shown, left to right are, kneeling: Lt. Warren E. Henry, Plainfield, N.J.; F/O Russell C. Nalle, Detroit; F/O Elijah J. Oliver, Birmingham; Lt. Paul J. Bonseigneur, Chicago; and F/O Frederick H. Samuels. Philadelphia; standing (student officers) 1st Lt. Luther Goodwin, Bakersfield, Calif.; 1st Lt. John A. Rector, Pittsburgh, Pa.; 2nd Lt. Robert S. Brown, Minneapolis, Minn.; 2nd Lt. Augustus G. Brown, New Orleans, and 1st. Lt. James A. Hurd, Leavenworth, Kans.

Fort Huachuca's Quartet of Colonels

471C

Afro-American— Baltimore, Md.

Members of the staff at Fort Huachuca's Station Hospital No. 1 who were recently elevated in rank. They are, left to right: Col. Midian O. Bousfield of Chicago, commanding officer; Lt. Cols. DeHaven Hinkson, Philadelphia; Roscoe C. Giles, Chicago, and Harold W. Thatcher, Kansas City.



Lt. Theodore A. Haith, of Seattle, Wash., was recently promoted to the rank of First Lieutenant in the Medical Administration Corps at the Tuskegee Army Air Field, where he serves as medical supply officer, according to an announcement by the Tuskegee Army Air Field office of Public Relations.

Seattle Pharmacist Advances in Grade

Northwest Enterprise Seattle, Wash. 5-17-44

Lt. Theodore A. Haith, of Seattle, Wash., was recently promoted to the rank of first lieutenant in the Medical Administration Corps at the Tuskegee Army Air Field where he serves as medical supply officer, according to an announcement by the Tuskegee Army Air Field office of Public Relations. 5-17-44

Lt. Haith, who in addition to his duties as chief of medical supply, serves as post pharmacy officer, holds a pharmaceutical degree (Ph. C.) from the State College of Oregon. During his college days the newly-promoted officer was elected to membership in Rho Chi National Honorary Pharmacy Society in recognition of his extensive research in the field of alcoloidal chemistry. The results of his research in the field were widely published in various professional pharmaceutical journals. 5-17-44

As medical supply officer at the air field, Lt. Haith ras supervised the medical supply until it is now recognized as one of the most efficient in the Eastern Flying Training Command.

Lieut. Haith is a Seattle boy, graduate of Broadway High, one year. University of California, 4 years North Pacific College, School of Pharmacy, Portland, Ore., and he spent several years in Columbus, Ohio. 5-17-44

He received his first commission at Carlysle, Pa., transferring to Tuskegee, Ala.

FLIGHT OFFICER

Tribune — Philadelphia, Pa.

9-6-44

Flight Officer CARL J. WOODS, son of Mrs. Jess Woods of Mars, Pa., was recently commissioned from the Aviation Cadet Corps at the Tuskegee Army Air Field. The twenty-two year old pilot attended Pennsylvania State College from 1941 to 1943. He is now undergoing transitional flight training at this station. (Official USAAF Photo by AAF Training Command.)

First Looeys At Ft. Benning

Ga. 9-14-44

FORT BENNING, Ga.—(ANP)— Five reception center officers have been promoted from second to first lieutenants, Col. John P. Burkholder announced. Promoted were 2d Lts. Delwin A. Mills, of Paris, Tex., Roland E. Bing Jr., Oakwood, Tex.; Leroy William H. Hobson, post commander. In connection with their promotion, they received letters of commendation from Brig. Gen. Wilgerly, commanding officer of the reception center, has announced. Hampshire and Ronald T. Nelmes of Long Beach, Calif.

Five Are Made

Daily World—Atlanta

From Quaker State To Fort

4-3-44

2nd Lt. Rose L. Elliott is one of the senior members of the Army Nurses Corps stationed at Fort Huachuca, Arizona. Lt Elliott entered the Army Nurses Corps in 1941, and was assigned to the Fort in November, 1942. She was formerly Chief Surgical Nurse at Sea View Hospital at Staten Island, N. Y. She finished her nursing course at Mercy Hospital, and the University of Pennsylvania and the Henry Phipps institute. She is registered with the Pennsylvania and New York state boards of nursing. Lt. Elliott's interesting hobbies are out-door sports, music and dramatics. (Apache Sentinel Photo).

47k-1944

Chaplains

Chaplains Carry On With Poised Invasion Forces

Daily World-Atlanta, Ga. 5-27-44

BY TREZZVANT W. ANDERSON
WITH THE INVASION FORCES IN ENGLAND—(ANP)—Poised here in Great Britain, with the entire world waiting breathlessly for "D-Day", Negro soldiers doing their jobs in the supply lines, the construction zones, signals sections, anti-aircraft artillery and other allied arms are not forgetting their "men of God," their chaplains who are busy doing their part preparing for the job which lies ahead.

There are four chaplains in my engineer aviation unit. Each takes a special interest in the affairs of the personnel of his unit. Three are captains and the other is a first lieutenant.

Captain James E. Mayo hails from Cleveland and is an Episcopalian. He is the debonair lad of the group, and the first to have made the rank of captain.

Capt. Robert A. Bryant, is a native of Philly and has a brother living in New York City. He is the athlete type, and was at one time an All-American athlete at Lincoln university in Pennsylvania, where he graduated from both college and theology. He is a Baptist. 5-27-44

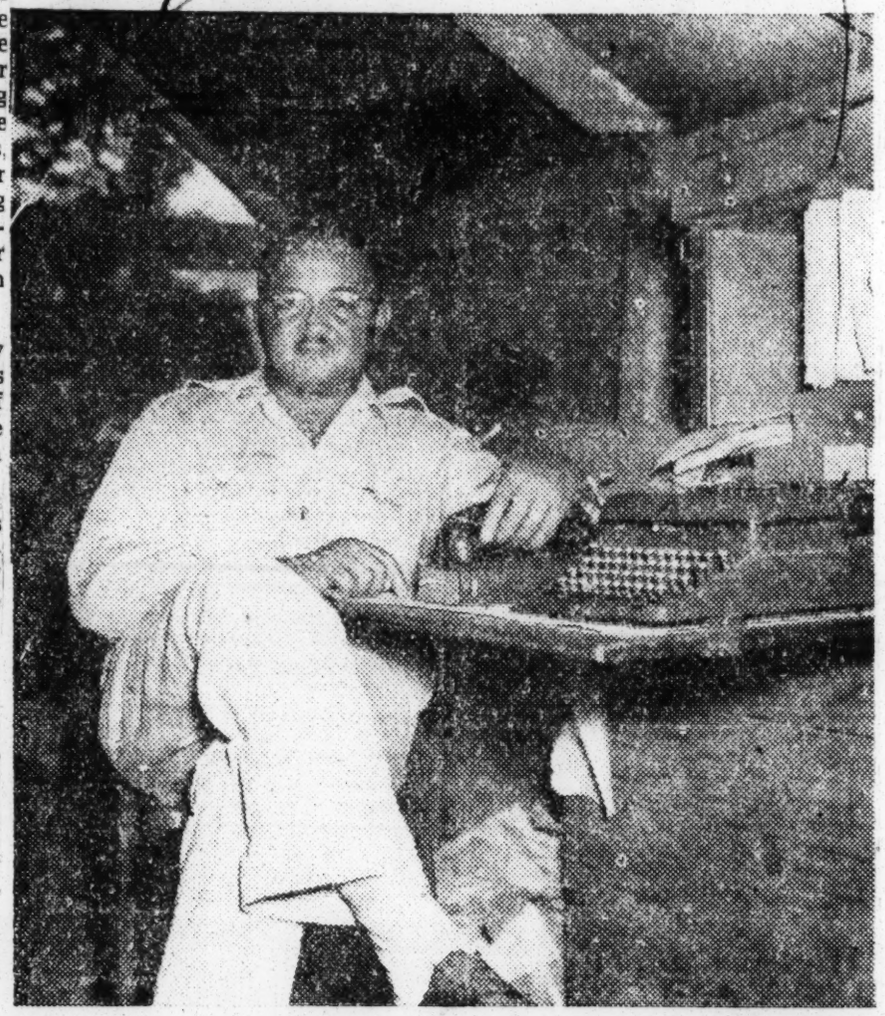
Captain William M. Perkins comes from the mountains of Hinton, W. Va., and was in college at Virginia Theological seminary and college, Lynchburg, back in the days when I was a college boy, and "Bumble" Brown and "Mel" Whedbee were the great All-American footballers of Seminary. Captain Perkins holds an extra distinction; he was the father of the famous "Army Negro Chorus," the noted musical aggregation from our unit which made history on September 28 and 29 at London's Royal Albert Hall.

First Lieutenant Henry Cary Booze, our other chaplain, comes from Port Arthur, Texas and pastored at the Lee Tabernacle M. E. Church, Navasota, not too far from Houston. He is the youngest of the group. 5-27-44

During April, these four teamed up to rack up a total of 1,189 separate ministeral missions, in which 24,643 individuals took part actively.

Chaplain In Jungle Home

Daily World-Atlanta, Ga. 6-11-44



Chaplain (Captain) Robert H. Alexander is shown comfortably seated in his new home and office somewhere in New Guinea. Chaplain Alexander has been overseas nine months. Prior to his going overseas, he was stationed at Camp Stewart, Georgia. He is a graduate of Morris Brown College and Turner Theologica Seminary, and also a member of the Phi Beta Sigma Fraternity

6-11-44

7k-1944

Officers

C. O. Says Biased Setup Maintains Social Customs

Courier — Pittsburgh, Pa.
8-5-44

By ERNEST E. JOHNSON

WALTERBORO AIR BASE, Walterboro, S. C.—(ANP) Negro officers of the former 553rd Pursuit squadron and accompanying ground crew walked out of the base here last May because the commanding officer of had, on the day of their from Selfridge Field, estab- a segregation policy that is in effect.

William M. Prince, the commanding officer of the when I talked with him on it is not an attempt to estab- race segregation or discrimi- It is merely an effort to with the State and social cus- which have existed in this countries."

is on the post also a serv- store for enlisted men. There may obtain sodas and odd which may or may not be at the post exchange. personnel is barred em-regulations do not allow had one officers' club a post. To get around that Prince authorized two "offi- mess halls," one for Negroes one for whites. The method operation is the same as that a club, the purposes are iden- but they are two in number. was like that the day the men arrived, and has remained that

OFFICERS' MESS

8-5-44

Col. Prince is from Laurinburg, C. but that doesn't influence decisions, he says. Both he Mrs. Prince are affable peo- He's been in the Army 16 Among the three objec- he saw as his job was this "to acclimate" the colored of- and enlisted men to a "hos- area."

Before our conversation had end- he was constrained to admit he would "make no distinction whatsoever, except where it comes social intermingling." A the- and a soda fountain, not to the "mess halls," then, facilities which afford social mingling.

"ACCIDENT"

On the base are two post ex- ranges without designation and being all men stationed there. Most of them happens to be in the Negro area for convenience. There is a library open to all, and a gym- nasium which is utilized by all. It is not infrequent that both Negroes and whites find recreation here either in some form of game. A bowling alley has recently been added, however, and the "RTU" (replacement training unit—mean- ing Negroes) was offered two nights a week. Lt. William Bailous delivered the message to the commanding officer that his group preferred not to use the alley at all on such terms.

8-5-44

Capt. Jack Albert Walton, the Protestant chaplain, early invited the RTU to worship at the base chapel, and some of the men have accepted. The Catholic priest from outside has been just as cordial.

No one could recall any "incident" occurring between the men of the two races. None felt that any would occur.

While the theatre matter is the main sore spot of the men, there are others that make for their unhappiness and low morale. Taking the flying trainees first, they point out:

8-5-44

The supervisory personnel is almost exclusively white, there being but three Negro officers out of the 21 holding positions from flight leader up to flight commander. Five of the group are either first lieutenants or captains. The three Negroes are First Lts. Graham Smith of Ahoskie, N. C.; Walter Lawson, Newton, Va., and Spann Watson, Hackensack, N. J., all flight leaders, all experienced in overseas combat. Until he was dismissed from the service a few weeks ago by a court-martial, 1st Lt. Charles W. Drydon was another. The men are aware that in all, some 13 men have returned from the 99th with ratings as high as major, the experience of some of whom might well have been utilized in fitting the new organization for their tasks.

FEEL THEY DESERVE PROMOTIONS

8-5-44

While many of the men have only recently received their wings, there are others who feel that deserved promotions have been purposely withheld from them. While at Selfridge Feld the "ratings" of "senior" and "junior" second lieutenants were established among themselves as satiation. Jesse Williams, II, second lieutenant, got his rating in August, 1942, is a skilled engineering officer, but cannot fully understand why he has been held back.

A white second lieutenant is in command of combat intelligence although his assistant is a second lieutenant 17 months his senior in point of rating. The opinion is generally held that promotions or assignments are not made on the basis of merit. While there is not complete agreement on this point, the belief is held by some that white supervisors (instructors) are satisfied to see the trainees get in their flying hours regardless of the quality of the training.

8-5-44

LACK LIVING QUARTERS

Gunnery practice is given at Myrtle Beach, 110 miles northwest from Walterboro. The RTU trainees are taken there under the supervision of a white flight leader generally. The first time they went they were fed at the officers' mess. The next time, however, it was the enlisted men's mess hall. Most of them refused to eat. Nor are they welcomed at other fields when forced landings happen because eating facilities are denied at the officers' hall or club. Unless there is a colored group there with whom they might eat, they go to town or go hungry.

In the town of Walterboro there are but nine colored homes which have indoor toilet facilities. Living space of any kind is scarce. Some of the men have their wives with them and so live off the base. But the Army makes no provision for such arrangements. Whites endure the same drawback.

Ground personnel have things to kick about also.

8-5-44

Forty men in communications asked Colonel Prince to transfer them to other assignments or to other outfits because, among other things, they felt they were being used below their top skills; because in spite of the presence of a Negro commanding officer, 1st Lt. Hayward J. Burns, orders were still coming from white supervisory personnel; because it seemed their unit was actually being depleted and abolished, particularly their homing section.

The medical detachment expressed unhappiness because they had not been permitted to function out of the base hospital, but rather had to utilize an ill-fitted shack with sadly inadequate facilities. Lt. Col. Norbert Sullivan, base surgeon, explained that he had on two occasions requested the Negro commanding officer for the detachment, Lt. Frank H. Jordan, to transfer his men and supplies to the hospital, but that he had failed to do so.

8-5-44

47k-1944

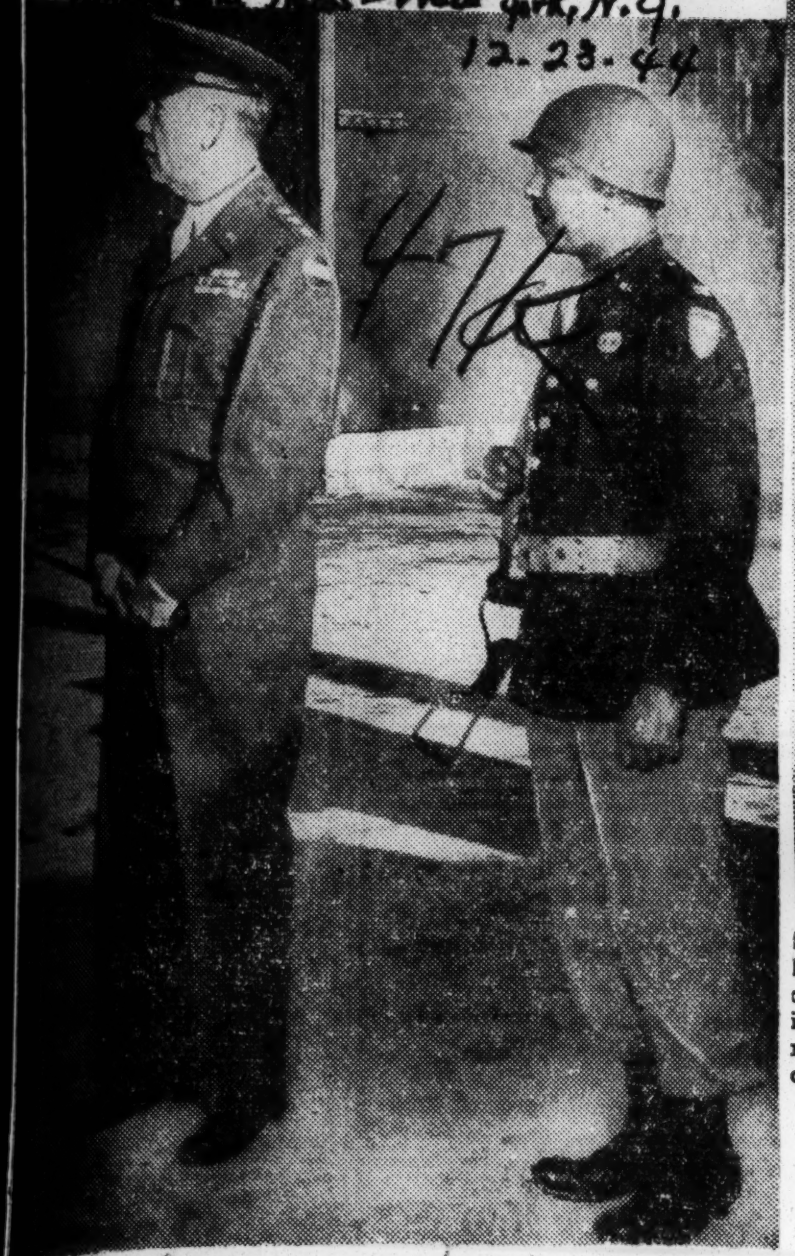
Officers

Harlemite Commands the 555th

Associated Negro Press — New York, N.Y.

12.23.44

47



HERE DURING a recent inspection at Camp Mackall, North Carolina, is Lt. Gen. Ben Lear, Commanding General of the Army Ground Forces, and Capt. James H. Porter, commanding officer of the 555th Parachute Infantry Battalion, the only Negro parachute unit in the world. Capt. Porter's home is in New York City.—(U. S. Army Signal Corps Photo.)

JOSEPHINE BAKER

Internationally famous singer and dancer who was a resident of Paris, France at time of the German invasion, has been given a commission as a second lieutenant in the French Women's Auxiliary Service of the DeGaulle air force. Miss Baker was one of the repatriots released from Vichy, France by the Germans in an exchange of prisoners last year.

Defender — Chicago, Ill.

47k-1944

Officers- Army

Officers of the 332nd Fighter Group relax at the bar of a rest camp in Southern Italy. They are, left to right, Capt. William K. Allen, Medical Corps, of Columbus, Ohio; Capt. Elwood T. Driver, Trenton N.J.; Lt. Henry B. Scott, Jersey City, N.J., and Lt. John B. Quick, Brooklyn, N.Y.

Army Won't Press Charge of Bigamy

Afro American—Baltimore, Md.

7-8-44

Says Chaplain Has One Wife in Washington, Another in Georgia

FT. BENNING, Ga.—Captain James R. L. Pinn, chaplain in the U.S. Army, is still here. His resignation of April 22 has not been accepted.

The War Department, rather than place possible military charges of bigamy, told the AFRO that Chaplain Pinn had been given permission to resign.

Still on Active Duty

His papers are now awaiting action at the War Department, and until such action goes through, Chaplain Pinn is on active duty.

AFRO reporters discovered a Mrs. Pinn No. 1 living with the chaplain's father in Washington. She gave her name as Mrs. Pauline Pinn.

7-8-44

The alleged Mrs. Pinn No. 2 is known to enlisted personnel as Mrs. Barbara Pinn. No maiden name was used.

Employees said the Pinns occupied quarters here and that Mrs. Pinn is a civilian employee.

which is under the command of Lt. Col. Demaurice Moses of New York City.

Black Dispatch--Oklahoma City, Okla. 12-16-44

Chaplain in 92nd Promoted; Nazis Drop Leaflets Urging Desertion

The Call Kansas City, Mo. 12-29-44

By MAX JOHNSON

(War Correspondent Who Has Replaced Art Carter in the Italian Area)

WITH THE 92ND DIVISION IN ITALY.—Chaplain Douglass F. Hall, serving with the 92nd division on this Fifth Army front, was promoted from first lieutenant to captain, according to an announcement made here last week.

Chaplain Hall entered the service last December, was assigned to a regiment in the 92nd in February and came overseas last August. He has since been serving with his regiment in the combat area.

Was Newspaper Columnist

Prior to joining the army, he conducted an editorial column, "Seen From My Window" for the Baltimore Afro-American and did other staff work. He married just before his overseas shipment.

Among the first to greet me as I joined this outfit was Captain Leroy Clay who holds the job of assistant executive officer of the division. He is the only officer of his race working as an attache to the staff of Major Gen. Edward M. Almond, the 92nd commander. Another ranking chaplain is Lt. Col. Louis J. Beasley.

Subsequent introductions to the personnel in some of the divisional units, including recently attached replacements, made joining the 92nd seem like "old home week," since I found here many officers and men whom I accompanied overseas.

Major James D. Fowler, West Point graduate, Major George P. Lawrence and Captain Frederick Davison, all of Washington, are among the old friends I met.

Nazis Drop Propaganda

Activated at Fort Devens, Mass., February, 1941, and serving as guard for vital installations throughout the New England States, the 92nd was the first of its kind to reach the European theater intact with an all-colored officer personnel. The unit is still intact under these officers.

The Nazis on this front are repeating their former procedure of dropping propaganda leaflets on the 92nd front line troops. The latest leaflet this week asks the men what they are fighting for and "why risk death when loved ones are at home waiting for them." Picturing two colored babies, one leaflet states "These children want daddy home safe" and adds that comfortable camps with full facilities for communicating with their families in America awaits colored soldiers who desert. 12-29-44

I have heard no reports of desertion. Activity is otherwise quiet on the front and limited to patrols.

Two Chicagoans Get Captain Promotions; Stationed In D. C.

Age - New York, 8-12-44 N.Y.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The promotion of two Chicagoans, First Lieutenant James A. McLendon, 409 Oakwood Boulevard, and First Lieutenant Lycurgus J. Conner, 4805 Champlain avenue, to the rank of captain in the Judge Advocate General's Department, was announced last week by the War Department.

Captains McLendon and Connor are assigned to the Office of the Judge Advocate General here, McLendon being detailed to the Claims Division and Conner to the Military Justice Division.

A graduate of Fisk University, Nashville, Tennessee, and the Northwestern University School of Law, Evanston, Illinois, Captain McLendon received his commission from the Adujant General's Officer Candidate School at Fort Washington, Maryland, on Februry 3, 1943. He was first assigned to the Office of the Judge Advocate General on September 9, 1943. 8-12-44

Captain Conner, a graduate of the University of Chicago Law School at Chicago, was commissioned a first lieutenant in the Judge Advocate General's Department on March 17, 1943. He was inducted into the Army in September, 1942, and was assigned in turn to the Reception Center at Fort Custer, Michigan, and the Basic Training Center at Camp Lee, Virginia.

Recall Eboue's Help To Allies

Pgh. Courier, Pa 5-27-44

WASHINGTON, D. C. — With confirmation of his unexpected death Wednesday evening, May 17, in the French hospital in Cairo, Egypt, the family of Governor General Felix Eboue of French Equatorial Africa and his capital seat in Brazzaville have been showered with official condolences from all parts of the world.

Immediately after the famous leader's death, Frederick J. Mann, U. S. consul general in Brazzaville, made an informal expression to his family on behalf of the United States, while, Friday morning, through Secretary of State Cordell Hull, a message was forwarded from the State Department.

RALLIED FORCES TO ALLIES

M. Henri Hoppenot, minister plenipotentiary and delegate of the French Committee of National Liberation in the U. S., lauded Eboue as a leader of the resistance who

FELIX EBOUE

"succeeded in rallying colonies to General DeGaulle and the Free French." He said France had lost one of her best citizens and patriots.

As soon as it learned of his death, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, through its executive secretary, Walter White, cabled a message of condolence from national headquarters which asserted that "the world owes him a debt of gratitude for his decisive role in turning the tide of war."

WAS SYMBOL OF AFRICAN SELF-RULE

Paul Robeson, the internationally famous actor and singer, who is chairman of the Council on African Affairs, Inc., New York City, said, "Not only Africa, but the whole world has lost a great man" . . . and Dr. Max Yergan, executive director of the same organization, commented, "Governor Eboue was one of the foremost figures in the present-day progressive development within Africa, a man who symbolized the ability of Africans to govern themselves."

HEADED AFRICA'S THIRD LARGEST POLITICAL DIVISION

Fifty-six years old at his death and a man who exercised authority over more than three and a half million people in an area of almost a million square miles, Eboue was the first and only Negro to hold the uppermost French colonial rank of governor general. He was born in Cayenne in French Guinea and, after his education in the Ecole Colonial in Paris, entered the colonial service as a student administrator in Equatorial Africa. For 24 years, he remained in the province, holding various governmental posts until 1931, when he was named secretary-general of Martinique. Four years later, he was appointed governor of the French Sudan and, in 1936, he was transferred to Guadaloupe as governor, a post he held until his return to Equatorial Africa in 1939.

STAUNCH DeGAULLE SUPPORTER

Eboue was an early supporter of Allied General deGaulle. In 1940, he was accused by the Vichy regime of collaborating with de-

Courier Went Behind Scenes With Eboue'

Two Courier foreign correspondents—R. Walter Merguson and Edgar T. Rouzeau—had the distinction of meeting, interviewing and winning the friendship of General Eboue', Merguson in 1940, 30 years after he had first seen him as a military student, and Rouzeau last spring, when Eboue', who became a world figure in 1939, had also become a key man in Allied strategy for winning the war. Both Merguson and Rouzeau were the general's guests in the royal palace in Brazzaville.

Gaulle and Colonel deLarinat, former chief of staff for the French Army in the Near East, to revolt against the armistice in the Lake Chad region. He was dismissed from his post of governor general and the rank as an officer of the Legion of Honor, but General deGaulle quickly restored him to civil control of Equatorial Africa less than two months later.

In the Brazzaville conference earlier this year, where new French colonial policies were formulated, Governor Eboue was the outstanding figure. His proposals for raising the social, political and economic conditions of the African masses while preserving the best of their own culture formed the principal basis of the conference's decisions.

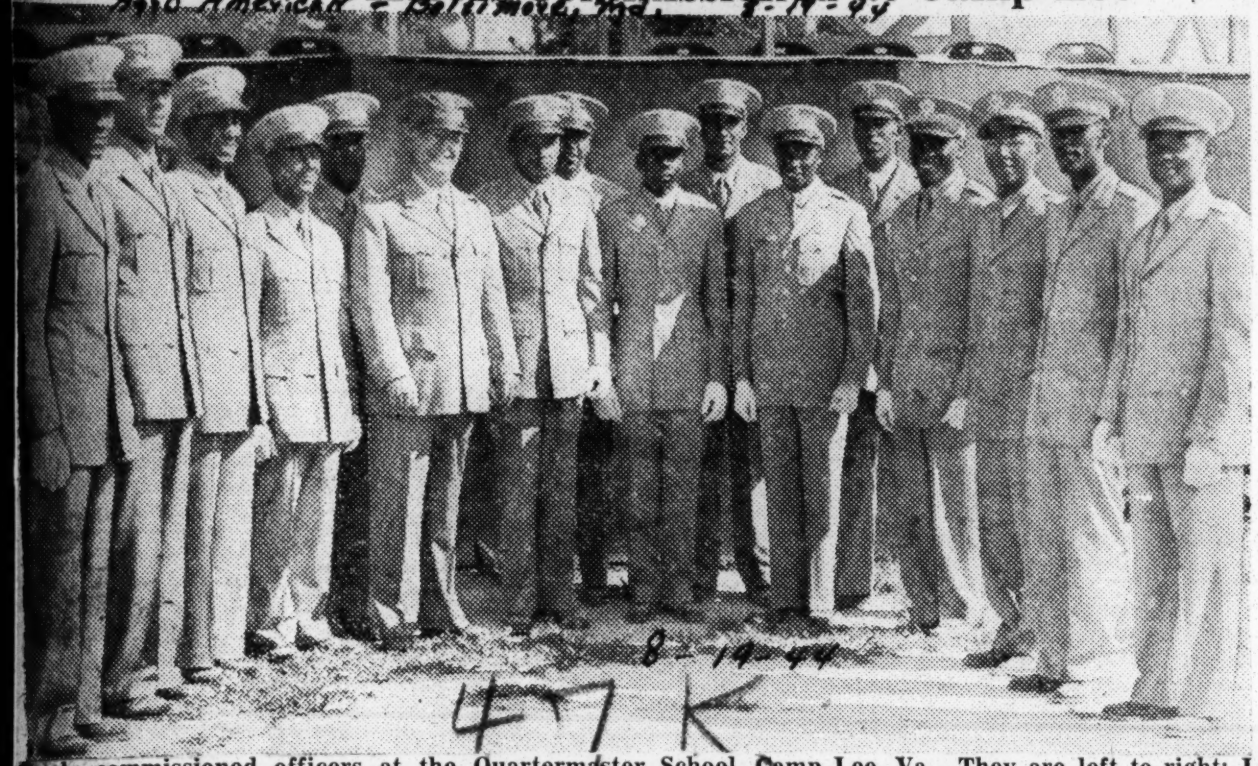
Governor Eboue is survived by a widow and three children.

47k-1944

Officers Army

15 New QM Officers Commissioned at Camp Lee

Afro American — Baltimore, Md. 8-19-44



8-19-44

47K

Newly commissioned officers at the Quartermaster School, Camp Lee, Va. They are left to right; Lts. Wendell P. Holmes, Jr., Brunswick, Ga.; John E. Mason, Portsmouth, Va.; Robert G. Gerrard, Chicago; William H. Walcott, Jr., 4047 Aspen Street; Philadelphia; Arthur G. Scott, St. Louis, Mo.; Authur H Quallo, NYC; Samcul T. Daniels, 1424 Druid Hill Avenue, Baltimore; Husie S. Cross, 1708 Swann Street Northwest, Washington; Henry T. Hawkins, Jr., Los Angeles; Leonard L. Veal, Cleveland; William P Waters, 1602 Thirteenth Street, Northwest, Washington; Earl W. Rowe, Arkon, Ohio; Albert N. Whiting, 2419 Shannon Place, Southeast, Washington, D.C.; Virgil D. Perryman, New Orleans, La., and Everett L. Jones, 509 S. Broad Street Philadelphia, Pa. Also in photo is Brig. Gen. Don B. Scott, who addressed the graduates.

A Historic Picture

Afro American — Baltimore, Md. 8-26-44

For those who missed this picture of General B. O. Davis riding a tank in France, we reproduce it from last week's paper. Here is a historic photograph. It's the first appearance of a U.S. colored general on a battlefield in any war. It is true that he is past the retirement age and that he is in France to supervise the making of combat movies of colored troops as well as to make inspection; but the fact remains, he is there. He's wearing the new bucket helmet that gives him the appearance of having his head inside a waste basket; but his eyes are bright and smiling. Regulation O.D. uniform has been replaced by a battle jacket and, although you can't see it, he wears high shoes into which the bottoms of his trousers have been stuffed.

8-26-44

Brig. Gen. B. O. Davis

In his nostrils is the smell of battle, not much different from what he went through in the Spanish-American War or the Mexican expeditions.

8-26-44

Yes, you are seeing a picture of our first general on his first battlefield, and if we can persuade the President to promote qualified colored Army officers on the same basis as others, we should have a colored general in combat before the war is over.

General Davis Still on Tour

Afro American Baltimore, Md.

Says Combat Zones Show Better Harmony

INSPECTS UNITS

Views First Movies of Signal Corps Battalion

8-19-44

HEADQUARTERS, EUROPEAN THEATER OF OPERATIONS — Brig.-Gen. Benjamin O. Davis of the Inspector General's Department, reported recently that "there appears to be more harmony and lack of racial friction in the combat zone than is found behind the lines."

The general, on temporary duty in the European Theater of Operations, has just completed a brief tour of colored American units in France that covered an area of more than three hundred miles of liberated territory.

This visit to Normandy was the ninth time that General Davis had been in France, and the second tiem he had inspected installations at the front lines.

Praises Men Under Fire

"I am thoroughly pleased with the performance and the conditions under which colored troops are operating here, especially their performance under fire," the general declared.

8-19-44

"Nobody knows except the men in the front lines how important it is for them to keep up their excellent records," he added.

He also revealed that commanding officers had related several instances of heroism which indicated unusual valor among colored troops.

During his trip, the general moved rapidly past the wreckage of German equipment and through countrysides punctuated with ruins of villages, exhibiting a physical stamina that drew praise from younger officers.

Inspects Various Outfits

He visited soldiers repairing small arms and motorized equipment damaged by mines and enemy strafing.

He observed signal linemen stringing wire right up to the front, inspected the work of quartermaster baking companies, and talked with truck drivers of the Transportation Corps who had participated in the St. Lo offensive.

Pvt. Robert E. Griffin of Durham, N.C., was personaly commended by General Davis for the excellent condition of his 2½-ton amphibious "Duck" which carried the general and his party out to a cargo vessel.

The party also watched men of a port battalion start supplies rolling toward the front lines.

Renews Acquaintances

The soldiers' morale, he said further, appeared unusually high. He renewed acquaintance with Cpl. Maurice C. Jennings of Brooklyn, N.Y., an amphibious truck company clerk, and Pvt. Walter C. Fullford of Pittsburgh, a member of a Transportation Corps truck company.

8-19-44

On the last day, the general visited the barrage balloon battalion, previously commended by Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, and viewed the first moving pictures taken of a signal construction battalion by the Special Coverage Section, Army Pictorial Service.

Series of Pictures Made

A number of film shorts depicting colored soldiers in combat are being produced under the direction of Major H. A. T. Freeland, assisted by Carlton Moss, speical adviser.

Others working with them are Major Charles Dollard of the Morale Service Division, Capt. J. W. Coppersmith and Flight Officer C. M. Bennett, of the Army Pictorial Service.

4 Commissioned Lts. in Engineers

Afro American Baltimore, Md.

FORT BELVOIR, Va.—Four men were commissioned second lieutenants in the Corps of Engineers upon completing the sixtieth Officers' Candidate course here recently.

They were:

Reginald E. Crocker of Schenectady, who was inducted November 17, 1942, and stationed at Camp McCain, Miss.; Ernest A. Hood of NYC, inducted July 22, 1942, who served with a calvary unit at Fort Huachuca, Ariz.;

9-2-44

Washington Man

George A. Patterson, 309 F Street, Northwest, Washington who entered the army May 14 1941, and served with the Engineers at Fort Myer, and William J. Roger of Macon, Ga., who received his B.S. degree from Johnson C. Smith University, who was inducted November 19, 1942, and served with the combat engineers at Fort Huachuca.

4 New Officers Arrive in Italy

Afro American Baltimore, Md.

2nd Largest Infantry Group Also Lands

BRAZIL UNIT MIXED

Joe Louis to Begin Tour of Italy

7-29-44

By ART CARTER

AFRO War Correspondent with U.S. Troops in Italy

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

ADVANCED AIR BASE IN ITALY (By Cable, Censored) — Four new ground officers joined the fighter pilot group this week. They are:

First Lieuts. Bayard K. Colon, public relations officer, 400 Convent Avenue, New York City; Granville Warner, 155 Lefferts Place, Brooklyn; Second Lieuts. Richard Allen, St. Paul, Minn.; and Orville Akers, Los Angeles.

First Lieut. John Gibson of Chicago also returned after a rest in the States.

Joe to Begin Tour

Sgt. Joe Louis, after a tour of England, has reached the Mediterranean theatre and will appear in exhibitions in Italy beginning late this week.

A colored infantry unit, elements of which were trained at Ft. McClellan also arrived in Italy peditionary force arrived.

Brazil Unit Mixed

The latter includes many brown-skinned soldiers and the mixed army makes America's separate forces conspicuous by comparison.

7-29-44

The arrival of the Brazilian army was hailed everywhere as the soldiers declared, "We are here to fight."

Awaiting Orders

The disposition of the colored fineries were blasted.

infantry group, the second largest Another group soared into Nor-foot unit to reach Italy within the them Italy, giving protective cov-past six months, is undetermined er for bombers hitting the impor-

at this time. The division is now tant seaport of Genoa.

awaiting orders.

Since last week's brilliant victories, the Mustang pilots have not encountered enemy opposition, though missions have carried due at Hampton, Va., where he was promoment as a track man, boxer and captain of track and boxing.

Commissioned At Ft. Benning

11-18-44

FT. BENNING, Ga.—William James Furcron of Phila., Pa., was commissioned a second lieutenant in the Army of the United States. November 8 upon completion of the Officer Candidate Course at the Infantry

School at Fort Benning, Georgia. Lieut. Furcron is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Abraham and Victoria Furcron of 2528 W. Gordon street, Philadelphia, Penn.

The new lieutenant was inducted into the Army on July 4, 1942 and served with the 350th F.A. Bn. Fort Sill, Oklahoma before going to Officer Candidate school four months ago. He held the rank of S.Sgt. before being commissioned.

He is a graduate of Hampton Insti-

Local Soldier

Philadelphia, Pa.

47 k

Promoted On Field

Tribune—Philadelphia

11-18-44

The daring commander of a company of the 92nd Infantry Division now fighting with the Fifth Army in Italy, who was reported missing in action by the War Department on November 3. Captain CHARLES F. GANDY, the first officer of the Negro division to be promoted in the field by Lt. Gen. Mark W. Clark, won the admiration of his men because he "wouldn't ask a soldier to do anything that he wouldn't do." He made his home in Washington, D. C.—U. S. Signal Corps Photo from BPR.)

Executive Officer at Tuskegee Promoted

Afro-American Baltimore, Md.

TUSKEGEE, Ala. — First Lt. James A. Tibbs of Montclair, N.J., who was commissioned from the Army Air Forces Administration Officers' Candidate School: Miami, Fla., on April 16, 1943, was recently promoted to his present rank at the Army Air Field here.

4-9-44

Lt. Tibbs

A graduate of Ohio State University in 1936 and a member of the Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity, Lt. Tibbs, the son of Richard Tibbs of Montclair, is married to the former Miss Mary S. Gardner of Nashville.

Lt. N. E. Haines Killed in Action

Balt. Sun
12-9-44 Md.
Afro-American

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J.—Mrs. Emma Carter of 1111 Archie Avenue has been notified by the War Department that her son, Lt. Norris E. Haines, recently was killed in action in Italy.

Lieutenant Haines was commissioned at Fort Benning, Ga., and was attached to an infantry unit. He spent a furlough with his family prior to going overseas.

Has Brother in India

He was a graduate of the Atlantic City High School and received advanced military training at Fort Huachuca, Ariz.

Among the survivors are a brother, Sgt. Victory E. Haines, who is in the AAF in India; a sister, Mrs. Jean Garrett, and an aunt, Mrs. Rosita R. Monk, all three of Atlantic City.

TANK DESTROYER OFFICER

Tribune—Savannah, Ga.
12-21-44

12-21-44

1ST. LT. LEONARD NEAL BURCH, of Georgia, a special service officer of the 614 Tank Destroyer battalion, is now serving somewhere in France.

Burch, a native of Columbus, Ga., student of the University of Illinois and Chicago's Embalming college, is the husband of the former Rachelle Atkinson King, native of Anniston, Ala., who is now residing in Chicago and teaching in the public school system there. Burch, a civilian pilot, also studied in Chestertown, Md., and Cleveland, Ohio—(Atlas News Photo Service)

Chaplain's School

CAMBRIDGE, Mass.—Nine colored chaplains were among 142 graduated from the Army Chaplains' School at Harvard, bringing the total of colored chaplains to the house to over 100.

Col. John [illegible] Sherrard, commanding officer of the training schools at Harvard, delivered the commencement address. The chaplains, ranging in rank from first lieutenant to lieutenant colonel, left for their stations following the ceremonies.

The chaplains, denominations, [illegible] served as civilian clergymen, and home states are as follows:

[illegible] Morris, Baptist, Chicago, Ill.; Luther W. Oldfield, Episcopal, [illegible], Wis., [illegible], D.C.); [illegible], Presbyterian, Cincinnati, Ohio; James C. Grady [illegible], Oregon, [illegible], N.C. (North Carolina); Earl W. Jones, Sr., Baptist, Louisville, Ky. (Kentucky); Lonnie F. [illegible], Baptist, [illegible], Okla. (Oklahoma); Andrew [illegible], Baptist, Houston, Tex. (Texas); Willard [illegible], Episcopal, [illegible], [illegible], Ga. (Georgia); Alphonso [illegible] Wilson, Methodist, [illegible], [illegible].

Afro-American Baltimore, Md.
-44

47k-1944

Officers- Army

Call— Kansas City, Mo.
12-8-44

COL. DAVIS, BACK FROM WARS, GREETED BY TUSKEGEE HEAD.—Col. B. O. Davis Jr., (right), who recently returned to this country from the European theater of war, is being greeted by Dr. F. D. Patterson, president of Tuskegee institute, where Col. Davis was stationed before going abroad. Col. Davis, on furlough from his station in Italy, spent a week at Tuskegee. He spoke in highest praise of the brilliant work being done by Negro fighters in the war zones. He brought greetings from Captain William Campbell of the 99th squadron. Campbell is a native of Tuskegee institute.

First Photo of Lt. Col. Davis at His Field Desk in Italy

Afro American — Baltimore, Md.
5-13-44

5-13-44

Lt. Col. Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., commanding officer of fighter group at his field desk in Italy where group's pilots maintain ceaseless vigil over Allied convoys along western coast of peninsula.

Gen. Davis Placed on European Staff

Afro American
Baltimore, Md.
12-7-44

WASHINGTON, (ANP) — Brig. Gen. Benjamin O. Davis has been permanently assigned to the staff of the inspector-general in the European Theatre of Operations, it is learned here.

Gen. Davis has been in the theatre since July. At that time he accompanied Carlton Moss, playwright, and Maj. Homer Roberts of the press branch, during the shooting of films for a follow-up to "The Negro Soldiers."

The assignment of Gen. Davis to the European theatre gives rise to the belief that conditions overseas are not as desirable as they should be.

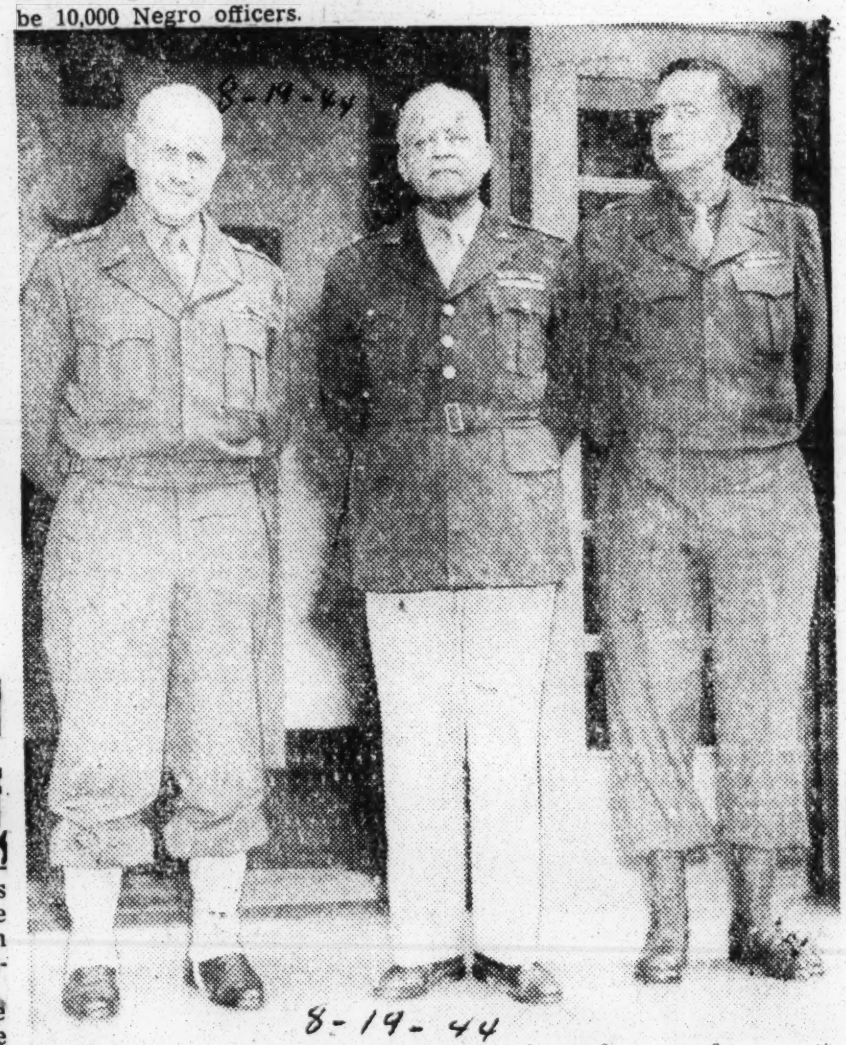
A War Department source here pointed out last week that there are now more colored soldiers overseas than there are in the continental United States.

Gen. Davis Anxious To See 10,000 Officers

Age — New York N.Y.
9-12-44

SOMEWHERE IN FRANCE. — Gen. Benjamin O. Davis, commenting upon racial differences to war correspondents Monday night, said: "When I was in London two years ago our own soldiers didn't get along so well with one another, but now on this side I have been told there is no racial unpleasantness. The morale of the Negro troops in Normandy is very high;

The Negro general also said that there are 700,000 colored troops in the Armed Forces along with 5,000 commissioned officers. He said he is awaiting the time when there will be 10,000 Negro officers.



8-19-44

8-19-44

Pausing for a chat and photo before they leave for a conference at a U.S. Army Headquarters, somewhere in England, are (left to right): Lt. Gen. John C. H. Lee, Brig. Gen. Benjamin O. Davis and Brig. Gen. W. G. Weaver.

Captain Pruitt Paid Tribute At Lincoln U.

Argus — St. Louis, Mo.
12-29-44

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Dec. 14—Following a glorious tribute to an American Citizen by the City of St. Louis recently in which President Sherman D. Scruggs and six male students participated, Captain Wendell O. Pruitt was honored here at Lincoln University in a fitting manner. On the program, a part of Wendell Pruitt Day, so designated by the Mayor, President Scruggs spoke while the six young men served as Guard of Honor for the occasion.

Captain Pruitt accompanied by his sister, Mrs. Paige, to the campus in response to a joint invitation extended by the Committee on War Information, The Women's League and the Men's University Club. Gov. Forrest C. Donnell and Mayor Jesse Owens were in attendance.

St. Louis Mayor Welcomes Flyer Back From Overseas

Call—Kansas City, Mo.
12-8-44

St. Louis Proud of 332nd Pilot

Afro-American Balt., Md. 12-23-44

Capt. Wendell O. Pruitt (center) 332nd Fighter Group pilot, receives official welcome in his city as St. Louis observes "Capt. Wendell O. Priutt Day" in his honor. At left is Mayor Aloys P. Kaufmann, who led the celebration, and at right, N. A. Sweets, publisher of the St. Louis American, weekly newspaper Captain Pruitt's record includes the destruction of three German planes in combat and eight on the ground. and assistance in the sinking of an enemy destroyer.

ST. LOUIS. — (ANP) — With a flight record of 70 missions to his credit, Capt. Wendell O. Pruitt, 24 years old and the first Negro fighter pilot from St. Louis to return home on leave after combat duty, visited the mayor's office last week and was congratulated for his outstanding achievements

Sharing honors with a co-pilot for sinking an enemy destroyer by machine gun fire, Capt. Pruitt quietly told the mayor how their bullets struck and exploded a powder magazine. Added to his record also was the shooting down of three enemy planes and destruction of eight ground planes.

Modestly describing his successes as "just a lucky hit," when the mayor called the sinking of the destroyer a fine piece of work, Capt. Pruitt was advised that a special day would be proclaimed in his honor.

"The going got pretty rough at times," Pruitt stated, "but I'm fortunate in not having been sick or injured during my nine and one-half months overseas."

The young pilot's flights took him to the Italian area where several bullet holes were shot in his ship, a P-51 Mustang, but he was uninjured. Before returning to the United States he had flown 70 missions.

His plane was named the "Alice Jo," after the girl friend of his squadron leader and his own girl friend, Miss Alice Charlston of Detroit, whom he plans to marry when the war is ended. Miss Charlston is likewise a pilot.

12-8-44

Capt. Pruitt, son of Mrs. Melanie C. Pruitt of St. Louis, was attending Lincoln university at the time of his enlistment. He is the possessor of the distinguished flying cross and the air medal with four oak leaf clusters.

When the mayor asked if there were anything the city could do for him during his furlough, Capt. Pruitt answered "No," and added that he just wanted plenty of rest.

Kansas Pilot Dies in Italy

Call—Kansas City, Mo.

Lieutenant Beryl Wyatt a Former K.S.T.C. Student

5-12-44

INDEPENDENCE, Kas. — Word of the death of Second Lieut. Beryl Wyatt in Italy was received Friday by his wife, and parents, Mr. and Mrs. Sumner R. Wyatt, 405 S. 14th St. Previously they had been notified that Lieutenant Wyatt, a pilot had suffered injuries, a brain concussion and a fractured leg, in an accident. According to a message dated April 27 from a chaplain, the pilot's death occurred in a hospital in Italy.

5-12-44

The chaplain's letter stated that the lieutenant was "both an officer and a gentleman," and that he had been given a Christian burial. Further information would come from other sources, the chaplain said.

5-12-44

Lieut. Wyatt left for overseas duty in January, after receiving advanced training at Selfridge field, Mich., for several months.

A graduate of the Independence high school in 1939, Wyatt attended the local junior college where he played an active part in the Y.M.C.A. and took a CAA

LT. BERYL WYATT

Rep. Dies' Special Committee to course. He enrolled in Kansas

General Davis on European Tour

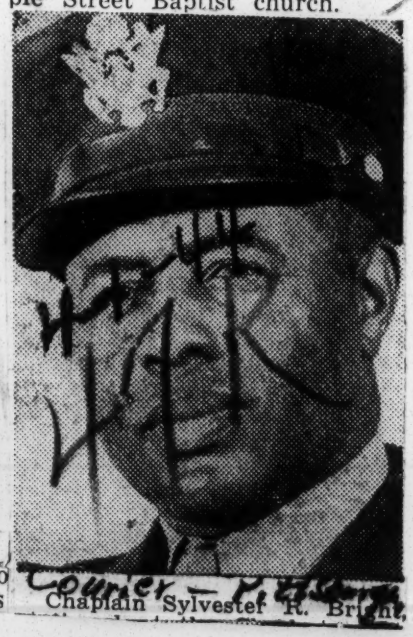
Afro American 8-11-44
Baltimore, Md.

Brig. Gen. Benjamin O. Davis of the War Department Inspector General's office, chats with S/Sgt. Joe Louis, world heavyweight boxing champion, somewhere in the European Theatre of Operations, where Louis has been putting on exhibitions for GI's during the past several weeks.

State Teachers college at Pittsburg where he enlisted in the air corps. He was called into service in November, 1942, and received his wings and commission at the Tuskegee, Ala., army air field on August 17, 1943. From there he went to Selfridge field.

The pilot's wife, the former Lula Mae Henderson of Alton, Ill., and 18-month-old daughter, Elizabeth Ann, have made their home with his parents.

Other survivors are a sister, Mrs. Jeanette Kenoly; a brother, Pvt. Charles Wyatt of Indiantown Gap, Pa., and his grandfather, Rev. Charles Teal, pastor of Maple Street Baptist church.



Courier—Pittsburgh

Chaplain Sylvester R. Bright, stationed at the Charleston, S. C.) Port of Embarkation, who has been promoted to the rank of captain.—Photo by U.S. Army Signal Corps

471-1944

YOUNGEST MEMBER IN RED CROSS UNIT

Fay Sandifer, daughter of Mrs. Nettie Sandifer, and youngest member of the overseas Red Cross units, has just arrived in Calcutta, India. Prior to her Red Cross appointment she was employed at the Bureau of Internal Revenue in New York City.

Miss Sandifer who is a graduate of Shaw University, was listed in "Who's Who" among college and university students in America. She served as president of the YWCA, and was a member of the Shaw University Choral Society. She is a graduate of Dudley High School in Greensboro, N. C. Since her arrival in New York she studied at Washington Business Institute.

She is the sister of Elfreda Sandifer, program director of the Harlem Defense Recreation Center. Another sister, Ocey Smith, has been stationed in Australia for the past nine months with the American Red Cross. Two brothers and two nephews are serving in the Armed Forces.

Plight Of Woman Red Cross Worker Overseas Revealed

By FLETCHER P. MARTIN

(U. S. War Correspondent for NNPA)
(Copyright, Reproduction Prohibited)

DUTCH NEW GUINEA—(By Courier)—Perhaps the second side of a woman Red Cross overseas worker is her temperament after being caught in a deluge. She then sees that the job calls for something far beyond a patriotic-stricken personality who feels that a woman's hand on the brow of a tired soldier is the medicine he needs.

She's drenched and her hair hangs in strings—without grace. Her shoes and legs are caked with mud. And the more feminine she steps the deeper sinks her boot. She's not so attractive because the rain has drained off her 'ammunition.' You laugh, and she tells you point-blank to "go to hell," and that she's "as good a soldier as you any day." Then she braces her shoulders and matches you stride for stride.

'Funny-Looking Face'

One peek under the wet brim of her G-I hat shows a dripping, funny - looking, determined face. This time she laughs. You can't help admiring the spirit in the slim, wet human being pulling alongside.

During a stopover in the Markham Valley, this correspondent saw two of our workers, Clare Wells, of Detroit; and Naomi Holland, daughter of a retired army officer of Virginia. Recent arrivals in these parts, both were trying to makeup dainty sleeping quarters out of a tin hut. Excluding the girls, the only ladylike element in the shack was the bottles and jars of cosmetics. Powder had sprinkled over the floor. There was some pink things on the line stretched across the bare room they called kitchen.

Bed rooms were hard, with hard army cots. Folded blankets served as pillows. Tables and cloth cabinets were provided. That was all save pictures, books, and accumulated thumb-worn letters. On the front steps sat a susan-eyed black hound dog who peeked through the screen. In the rear, the river flowed gently.

Face Rugged Life

As these women workers move northward they will face this rugged life, more and more. They must face on equal terms with the men the worst enemy of all — New Guinea with its bad lands and climate. And New Guinea gives no quarters.

It is a job far from easy. Setting up clubs and being social workers for men who are sometimes hostile toward women whom they feel have taken part of their freedom away. Last year when they wanted a bath, they simply pulled off and jumped into the river. They talked a strong language, didn't shave, often went shirtless. At the first, men resented this interference with a rugged jungle existence. War was a man's business.

When the first arrivals reached Port Moresby little problems jumped up. For instance, where they bivouacked there was but one officer's latrine. This one had to be shared until additional facilities were provided. Regular hours established. Then elements of the unit moved forward and all latrines were filled in—as is military procedure.

They're There To Stay

Another time, during the early stages, the command issued an order that two armed guards were to accompany the girls wherever they went. Reminded one of the occasion when Mrs. Roosevelt on an inspection tour of hospitals in Australia, ducked into a rest room. The press was at her heels. They respectfully waited near the door—slightly impatient.

Now these unimportant items are water under the bridge. The women look like they are here to stay. They are hardened and tough and take their job rather serious. They are soldiering gamely under the most unfavorable conditions, in the world's worst terrain. They're just a bunch of "reg'lar guys."

One mess sergeant remarked after his chow was refused by a sweating Red Crosser. "You know she had the nerve to kick about the food. She's getting to be just like the other guys."

15 Red Cross Aides Arrive In Australia

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Arrival of fifteen more colored Red Cross workers in Australia was announced this week by American Red Cross National Headquarters.

They are:

Beatrice A. Bianchi, assistant club director, 1745 T St., N. W., Washington, D. C.; Ollie Lou Booker, staff assistant, 367 Pine wood street, Toledo, Ohio; Robert A. Brooks, assistant field director, 933 Fairfield street, Aiken, S. C.; Willie Beatrix Calhoun, staff assistant, Orangeburg, S. C.; Marie B. Clark, staff assistant, 1420 Duncan street, N. E., Washington, D. C.; Priscilla M. Collins, staff assistant, 419 U. street, N. W., Washington, D. C.; Robert H. Donahue, assistant field director, 514 Townsend street, Wilmington, Del.; Elabeth C. Gilliam, staff assistant, 189 Stevens avenue, Columbus, Ohio; Myrtle Gross, staff assistant, 717 Maywood street Toledo, Ohio; Mary Dade Howard, staff assistant, 814 Rhode Island avenue, N. W., Washington, D. C; Adolphus D. Hughes, assistant field director, 155 V street, N. W., Washington, D. C.; Amanda Elizabeth McKee, staff assistant, 474 W 141st street, New York City; Irmah LaHevinne Moore, recreation worker, 555 Edgecombe avenue, New York City; Hermoine P. Sutler, staff assistant, 614 N. First street, Richmond, Va.; Mary Alice Warren, staff assistant, 2911 Washington avenue, New Orleans, La.

Miss Moore was a traveling evangelist for the African Methodist Episcopal Church in Philadelphia before her Red Cross appointment. She is a graduate of Sumner High school, St. Louis; National University, Chicago; Wilberforce University; Butler University Indianapolis, and Payne University.

SIX WOMEN ARRIVE IN ENGLAND FOR CLUB POSTS

Mrs. Minnie M. Street, Louisville, Ky. — Miss Grace Smith, Dayton, Ohio — Miss Ida Billee Wood, Somerset, Ky. — Miss Margaret C. Lamb, Hampton, Va.

Miss Alice Rae Meacham, Washington, D.C. — Miss Marie C. Wilburn, St. Louis, Mo.

12 Women Are Among 15 Who Arrive in Australia for Red Cross Work; Many States Are Represented in the Group

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Arrival of 15 more Red Cross workers in Australia was announced this week by American Red Cross national headquarters. They are:

Beatrice A. Bianchi, assistant club director, 1745 T St., N. W., Washington, D. C.

Ollie Lou Booker, staff assistant, 367 Pinewood St., Toledo, Ohio.

Robert A. Brooks, assistant feild director, 933 Fairfield St., Aiken, S. C.

Willie Beatrix Calhoun, staff assistant, Orangeburg, S. C.

Marie B. Clark, staff assistant, 1420 Duncan St., N. E., Washington, D. C.

Priscilla M. Collins, staff assistant, 419 U St., N. W., Washington, D. C.

Robert H. Donahue, assistant field director, 514 Townsend St., Wilmington, Del.

Elizabeth C. Gilliam, staff assistant, 189 Stevens Ave., Columbus, Ohio.

Myrtle Gross, staff assistant, 717 Maywood St., Toledo, Ohio.

Mary Dade Howard, staff assistant, 814 Rhode Island Ave., N. W., Washington, D. C.

Adolphus D. Hughes, assistant field director, 155 V St., N. W., Washington, D. C.

Amanda Elizabeth McKee, staff assistant, 474 W. 141st St., New York City.

Irmah LaHevinne Moore, recreation worker, 555 Edgecombe Ave., New York City.

Hermoine P. Sutler, staff assistant, 614 N. First St., Richmond, Va.

Mary Alice Warren, staff assistant, 2911 Washington Ave., New Orleans, La.

Former Editor In Group

Miss Bianchi was an instructor at West Virginia State college, Institute, W. Va., before her Red Cross appointment. She is a graduate of Howard University, B. S. 1931, and M.A. 1936. Mrs. Brooks will remain in Aiken during his service overseas.

Miss Calhoun, daughter of Mrs. Elizabeth Calhoun, State college, Orangeburg, S. C., taught at Riverside Grammar school in that city before joining the Red Cross

Miss Booker, daughter of Newitt R. Booker, of Toledo, Ohio, was employed by the Indiana Avenue Branch of the Y.M.C.A. in that city before joining the Red Cross staff. She is a graduate of Libbey high school and attended the University of Toledo.

Before his Red Cross appointment, Mr. Brooks was associate editor of the Lighthouse and Informer, Columbia, S. C. Previously, he was manager and partner in the Jackson Funeral Home, Aiken, S. C. He is a graduate of Washington high school, Massillon, Ohio; Adelbert college, Western Reserve university, A. B. 1929 and M.A. 1936. Mrs. Brooks will remain in Aiken during his service overseas.

staff. She is a graduate of Claflin College high school and South Carolina State college.

Until her Red Cross appointment, Miss Clark was employed by the Washington, D. C., Board of Education. She is a graduate of Dunbar high school, Howard university, B.S. 1933 and M.S. 1935 and Fordham university. She is the daughter of William S. Clark, of Washington.

Recreation Workers Represented

Miss Collins was employed by the War Production board, Washington, D. C., before her Red Cross appointment. She is a graduate of Food Trades Vocational high school, New York city.

Mr. Donahue was employed by the Walnut Street Branch of the Y.M.C.A., Wilmington, Del., before joining the Red Cross staff. Previously, he was director of recreation for the USO, New York city. He is a graduate of Newport, Ky., high school, and attended the University of Cincinnati and Knoxville college. Mrs. Donahue will remain in Wilmington during his serivce overseas.

Miss Gilliam, granddaughter of Stephen Cromwell, of Columbus, Ohio, was employed by the Office of Chief Engineers, Washington, D. C., before her Red Cross appointment. She is a graduate of Central high school, Columbus, and attended Central Business Training school.

Evangelist Among Workers

Mr. Hughes was employed by the War Department, Washington, D. C., before his Red Cross appointment. He is a graduate of Central high school, Galveston, Texas, and Paul Quinn college, Waco, Texas, and attended Howard university. Mrs. Hughes will remain in Washington during his service overseas. 11-17-44

Before joining the Red Cross staff, Miss McKee was employed by the Picatinny Arsenal, Dover, N. J. She is a graduate of Kentucky State college, Frankfort, Ky., and Cornell university.

Miss Moore was a traveling evangelist for the African Methodist Episcopal church in Philadelphia before her Red Cross appointment. She is a graduate of Sumner high school, St. Louis; National university, Chicago; Wilberforce, Ohio, university; Butler university, Indianapolis and Payne university.

Mrs. Sutler is the daughter of Walter S. Peyton, of Richmond, Va. Before her Red Cross appointment she attended Virginia State college, Petersburg, Va.

Miss Warren, daughter of Mrs. Lena Warren, of New Orleans, La., was employed by the Navy Department, Washington, D. C., before joining the Red Cross staff. She served as a volunteer with the Hearthstone War Workers club in that city. She is a graduate of McDonogh No. 35 high school and the Y.M.C.A. school of Commerce, both in New Orleans.

Serving Overseas

Afro American - Baltimore, Md.

8-26-44

MISS NAOMI M. HOLLAND, graduate of the Atlanta University School of Social Work, has recently arrived in Australia to serve as a personnel service director with the American Red Cross. Miss Holland is also a graduate of West Virginia State College, and was employed as a child welfare worker for the Virginia State Department of Public Welfare, Richmond, prior to her appointment with the Red Cross.

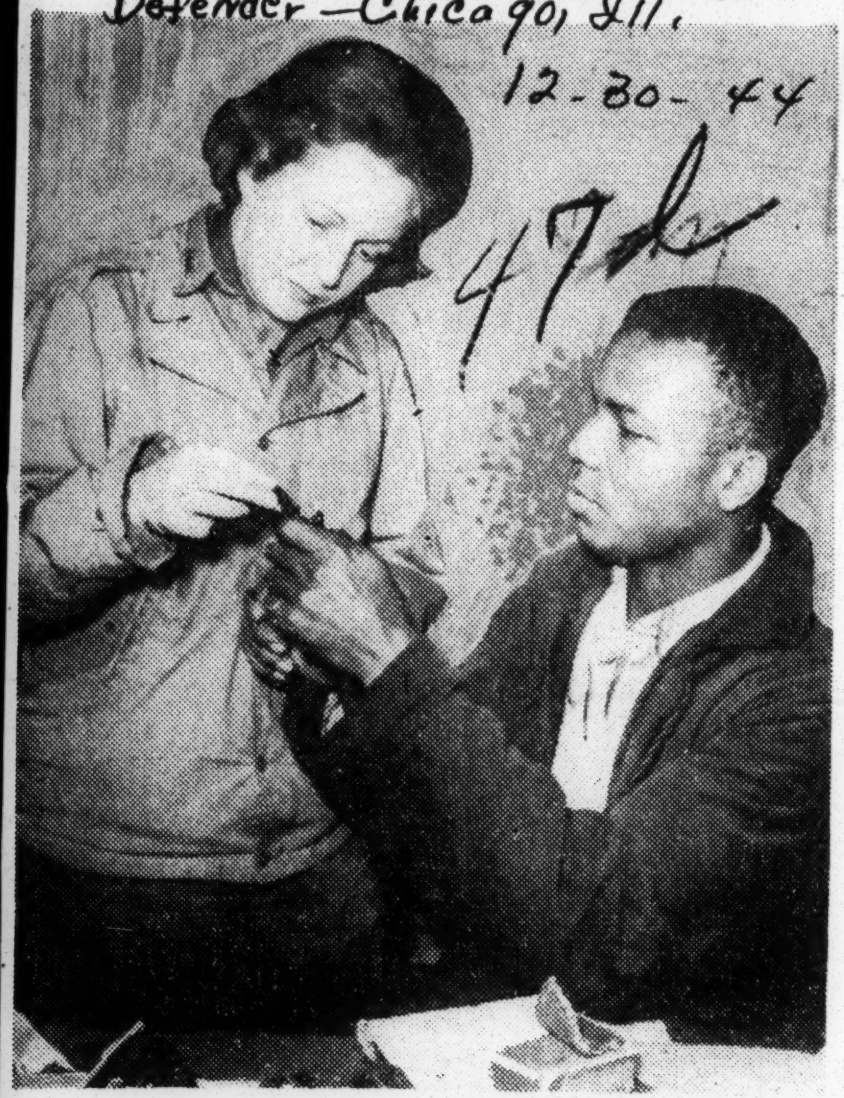
471-1944

KEEPING WOUNDED BUSY

Defender—Chicago, Ill.

12-30-44

47b



Busy hands keep the mind off troubles, according to Miss Edith Blake of Detroit, Mich., American Red Cross Social worker at an evacuation hospital in France. Though supplies near the front are kept to essentials, Miss Blake carries with her materials to establish an arts and crafts corner for ambulatory patients wherever this emergency hospital happens to tent up. Here she is helping Pvt. Joseph Ellis of Durham, N. C., punch holes in a watch strap. He has just put the finishing touches on the elaborately laced leather cigarette case in the foreground.

471-1944

B. T. Washington Center
Amsterdam News — New York, N.Y.
'One Of Best In Country'
8-12-44

STATEN ISLAND, N. Y.—The Booker T. Washington Recreation Center, Stapleton, Staten Island, attracts upwards of 800 GIs daily from Staten Island Terminal and the Fox Hills Cantonment. Since it opened in April of this year, it has had over 60,000 servicemen and women as guests.

Over 60,000 servicemen and women have referred to it as the "USO." Actually, it is operated under the auspices of the New York City Defense Recreation Committee which sets up, equips and operates similar centers in and around New York. The director of the Center, Clarence DeHart, and his assistants let it go at that since both organizations operate toward the same end; providing recreation and entertainment for troops.

'Best Equipped' 8-12-44

The Center, one of the best equipped in the country, has chalked up an enviable record in its four months of operation. This can be attested to in part by the number of enlisted men and women who have visited it. It has developed a variety of activities designed especially to divert and entertain the soldiers after a hard day at the various installations of the Terminal. Many top flight entertainers, including Una Mae Carlisle, have participated in its program.

'Most Popular'

Thursday nights have proved to be the most popular at the Center, for then there are hostesses from Brooklyn, Staten Island, and Manhattan. "Eyes" Carter and his band, a great favorite with the GIs, and dancing. Attendance on Thursday usually ranges from 800 to 1,200, the peak having been reached on Thursday, June 27, when 1866 servicemen and women visited the Center. These figures, of course, represent the total overall attendance for the day, including the lounge, snack bar, billiard tables, reading room, etc., as well as the dance. 8-12-44

Another popular feature at the Center is the monthly birthday party held on the fourth Wednesday of each month. GIs who had birthdays during the month are guests and receive gifts. The soldiers, especially those far from home, thoroughly appreciate and en- the delightful evening planned for them.

...ces have proved to be one of the mainstays of the Center and a second one is held during the week on Saturday night. This time the hostesses come from the local Tri-Shore Unit of the AWVS. The success of many of these dances is due largely to the support of these local groups.

Added Attractions

The modern game room on the second floor of the Center has also turned out to be quite popular with the GIs. It now boasts five pool tables in addition to the ping-pong tables, juke box, settees, lounge chairs, and convenient writing and reading sections. 8-12-44

Of the more than 60,000 servicemen and women who have used the Center's facilities, few have missed enjoying the free sandwiches and cakes served at the snack bar, which is well-kept and which has yet to come up short on a cold bottle of pop.

Germans Call It "League of Lonely War Women"
Afro American — Baltimore, Md.
10-28-44

By MAX JOHNSON

AFRO War Correspondent with U.S. Troops in Eastern France

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

WITH INVASION FORCES IN EASTERN FRANCE—(Censored)—If womenfolk on the home front are about to conclude that theirs is almost an unbearable lot because their GI Joe has been away for a year or more, they should be reminded of how the German women are faring. The desperate circumstances to which the trend of war has forced them uncovers an old situation with a new name. These women call it "Verein Einsamer Kriegerfrauen"—(League of Lonely War Women).

Max Johnson

Here is a copy of a circular distributed in German areas:

"THE GERMAN WOMAN AT WAR

"DEAR FRONT SOLDIER:

"When will you come back on leave?

"When will you be able again to forget the hard duties of a soldier and exchange them for a few days of joy, happiness and love? Back at home we know of your heroic struggle; however, we do understand that even the bravest gets tired and that he needs a soft pillow, tenderness and healthful pleasure. 10-28-44

"WE ARE WAITING FOR YOU!

"For you who have been compelled to spend your leave in a foreign town; we are waiting for you whom the war has robbed of his home, waiting for you stands alone in the world without a wife, without a fiancee, without a flirt.

"WE ARE WAITING FOR YOU!

"Cut out our badge on this letter. Display it visibly on your glass in every tea room, in every bar which is in the vicinity of a railway station; soon a member of our League of Lonely War Women will take charge of you, and the dreams you dreamt in the front line and the longings of lonely nights will find fulfilment. . . . 10-28-44

"It is you we want, not your money; therefore ask for our membership card at once. There are members everywhere, since we German women understand our duties toward our country and towards those who defend it.

"Naturally, we are not unselfish—for years and years we have been separated from our menfolk, surrounded by all those foreigners; naturally we long to have again a real German boy to press him to our bosom. Don't be shy; your wife, your sister or your sweetheart is also one of us.

This is the badge which German women ask their soldiers to display in bars and tea rooms.

"We think of you but we also think of the future of our country. He who rests, rusts.

(Signed)
"League of Lonely War Women (Verein Einsamer Kriegerfrauen)."

Somebody is going to be awfully surprised and maybe a little confused when I begin displaying the above badge—just for the hell of it.

The Negro In Latin America
Amsterdam News — New York, N.Y.
10-7-44

By HAROLD PREECE

Argentine War Plot Against U. S.

On Sept. 7th, Secretary of State Cordell Hull told a press conference that Argentina was the "headquarters" of "the Fascist movement in this hemisphere" as well as "a potential source of infection for the rest' of the Americas." 10-7-44

On September 8 I received from trusted sources, this secret war memorandum of the GOU fascist clique headed by Dictator Juan Peron, which rules Argentina.

This is the first time that the note has been published in English. It shows conclusively that the present Argentine government, dominated by the GOU, plans to attack the United States in a battle for hemisphere supremacy once that she can "soften up" our strongest Latin American ally, the partly Negro republic of Brazil.

Meanwhile, Argentina has already won some of the objectives set out in this infamous plot. She has won over Paraguay and Bolivia. Chile is wavering between Argentina and the United States. Brazil's position is none too secure since the dismissal of pro-United Nations Foreign Minister Aranha and his replacement by a man said to be friendly to the Argentine GOU.

I believe that this note is as important as the notorious Tanaka memorandum, drawn up by Japan long before Pearl Harbor, and revealing exactly what was to happen when the Tokyo military clique took to the war path. 10-7-44

Remember when you read this notice that Argentina hopes to build a great "Aryan" empire at the expense of Latin America's Negro-Indian majority. Remember and act if you don't want your boys fighting a Third World War before the blood has dried from this one. The note says:

"On June 4, 1943 the GOU (United Official Groups) talked of war against America.

"The war has demonstrated clearly that individual nations cannot defend themselves individually. The era of the 'nation' is being replaced, little by little, by the era of the 'continent'. Yesterday, feudal states united and formed the 'nation'. Today, nations must unite to form the 'Continent'. This is the finality of the war. 10-7-44

"Germany is effectuating a titanic force to justify the European Continent. The largest and best prepared nation will have to govern the destinies of the Continent in formation. In Europe this nation will be Germany.

"In North America the controlling nation will be, for a time the United States. But in South America, there does not exist a nation sufficiently strong so that its hegemony may be admitted without discussion. Today only two nations could assume this hegemony: Argentina or Brazil It is our mission to make our tutelage possible and indisputable."

Knew Dies' Constituents

To the Editor of The Courier-Journal.

This letter is in answer to your editorials and newspaper articles, inferring that Martin Dies is dead politically.

I practiced medicine in and near his Congressional district for twenty years. I was thrown with dozens of his constituents daily. Every single man, woman and child in that neck of the woods loves him whole-heartedly, respects him and will go all the way for him. The opposition to him is composed of imported Eastern radicals; people of foreign birth, C.I.O. and Northern Negroes in the Beaumont, Orange and Port Arthur shipyards.

In conclusion I will add that the veterans of World War I and American Legion in that district are for him 100 per cent, tooth and toenail.

All the exposures of scandal, traitors, un-American activities, brought to the public eye are truth and you and everyone else know it.

Whitley City, Ky. P. S. TAULBEE.

GETS RED CROSS OVERSEAS POST
Interracial Review — Staten Island, N.Y.
12-21-44

DANIEL W. CHESTNUT, 1937 graduate of Atlanta University School of Social Work, who has just been appointed to overseas duty by the American Red Cross. Mr. Chestnut is a graduate of South Carolina State A and M college and has been employed in the social work field in St. Louis, Mo., where he also served as a member of the mayor's racial relations commission.

Bob Weaver's WMC Position Filled At Last

Call - Kansas City, Mo.
10-13-44

But Job Still Is Subordinate

WASHINGTON, D. C. — (NNPA) — Appointment of Benjamin F. Wilson of Gary, Ind., as chief of the Minority Group Service of the Bureau of Placement for the War Manpower Commission last week fills the long-existing vacancy which occured when Dr. Robert C. Weaver resigned to accept the directorship of the mayor's committee on Race Relations in Chicago last January.

One of the reasons given by Weaver for his resignation was the futility of trying to accomplish a worthwhile job so long as the Minority Group Service was kept in a subordinate position in the agency. There has been consistent demand that the position he added to the Commissioner's staff, where it would be in position to work more effectively for the utilization of minority groups in war industries. WMC Commissioner Paul V. McNutt and his staff have resisted all pressures for such a change.

The job was turned down by three Negroes to whom it was offered because of refusal of the agency to elevate the position to a place in the agency where it could be effective.

Mr. Wilson, the new appointee, has been identified with civic, religious and interracial matters in Indiana for a number of years. In 1941, he served on the governor's committee dealing with fair employment of Negroes in Indiana industries. 10-13-44

He has been an active member of the Gary Council of Churches, and is a member of the Indiana Bar. Much of his time has been devoted to postwar planning as a member of the Gary Plan commission. A member of the American Legion, he is chairman of the employment committee of the Legion of the First District of Indiana.

He is a graduate of Boston university School of Law, and attended Howard university for three years after his discharge from the Army in 1919. He is a native of Brinkley, Ark.

The appointment of Wilson takes effect immediately.

D.C. Interracial Canteen Is Victory for Democracy

Afro American — Baltimore, Md.
12-16-44

At the Labor Canteen's Institute, Thursday evening in the auditorium of the Agriculture Department, Washington, hostesses were given certificates. Shown are, left to right, Misses Dorothy Shatson, Ruth Weinrich, Lillian Taylor and Jeanette Gillerman, making the presentations. They all work together in racial unity.

WASHINGTON city like Washington represents a victory of democratic force "The existence of a successful interracial canteen in a Southern he realization of some of the things for which we are fighting," said Miss Dorothy Shatson, white, this week.

Said Miss Shatson:

"The canteen welcomes service men and women and provides hostesses for them, regardless of race, creed, or color. This idea simply horrified many of our 'important people.' That such a center not only has existed for 10 months, but actually continues to expand and grow, has been a surprise to them. What this simple fact means in terms of the community is obvious."

In giving a summary of meetings a recently held canteen institute, soldiers told of their ideal hostesses. 12-16-44

It was brought out that service men should be approached by hostesses in a warm and friendly, but not a domineering way.

Prejudice Dispelled

The subject of "interracial unity" it was brought out that whatever is done, either in dispelling the prejudices of white servicemen who attend the canteen or in providing an oasis of true democracy for the colored service men is a worthwhile contribution toward the goal of American unity.

Maritime Union Canteen Free from Discrimination

Afro American — Baltimore, Md.
12-16-44

The National Maritime Union Canteen, at 346 W. Seventeenth Street, is unquestionably the most democratic one of its kind in the city of New York today.

Operating without the slightest trace of prejudice or bias in its relations with merchant seamen and their relatives who crowd the hall every Saturday night, this canteen is effectively following the regulations laid down by its parent, the NMU, in that no discrimination because of race, creed, or color is allowed at any time.

The dancers mix freely here, where at the more famous Stage Door Canteen, only two or three mixed couples at the most were seen by the AFRO on the dance floor. There's no restraint . . . no timidity at all. The AFRO found more than 75 per cent of the couples were members of opposite races.

No Individual Tables

At the Stage Door Canteen, it was also noted that colored service men usually sat at individual tables, but at this Canteen this was not seen.

Miss Terry Penman, national director of the Women's Auxiliary, told the AFRO that one-third of the hostesses are colored. 12-16-44

"That's not because we have any fixed quota," she laughingly added. "For our part, they could all be colored . . . but they were the largest number we could get to volunteer for this work.

"We've been very fortunate in getting the best of entertainment every week. Cafe Society has been very generous, and so have many other Broadway entertainers. We always have a good orchestra because we know seamen love dancing."

Lew Ogull, assistant publicity director, told the AFRO that the canteen opened up only last September and that he had sent publicity releases to white newspapers about it.

One Up on Stage Door

"Strangely enough, none of them assigned any reporters to do a story on the canteen," he said. "I can't understand why, especially when the Stage Door Canteen gets all the publicity. Our racial policies are far superior to theirs. They attempt to eliminate prejudice, while we don't know such a thing exists here." 12-16-44

It isn't difficult to understand why this canteen operates this way. With merchant seamen all over the world freely associating with, working, and fighting alongside peoples of other races, they are learning that jim crow is as stupid as it is vicious. Also, with men like Capt. Hugh Mulzac, of the Booker T. Washington, sailing the seas and preaching and teaching tolerance, it's small wonder that seamen behave as they do when they reach shore.

Other canteens sponsored by the USO and civic-minded organizations can never hope to achieve the same level the NMU canteen has attained, as long as our fighting men are taught in the camps and on the battlefields that it is right to discriminate, and that it is a just part of our American way of life.

Canteen officials know this, and are handling the situation very delicately. However, this treatment is a detour from the road to freedom and equality.

95 Recreation Buildings Built By FSA For Race

Daily World — Atlanta, Ga.
11-1-44

Atlanta Servicemen's Center Houses Over 3,000 Monthly

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(SNS)—Since Pearl Harbor, ninety-five community recreation buildings partially or wholly financed by Federal funds have been constructed or programed for Negroes, the Recreation Division of the Office of Community War Services, Federal Security Agency, reported this week. These buildings are situated in 29 States and the District of Columbia and involved an expenditure of more than $4,500,000.

Seventy-two of these buildings were programed by the United Service Organizations, twenty-three programed by local authorities responsible for recreation. All will benefit by the Community War Fund drive now in progress.

Each building constructed with Federal funds has to meet certain specifications as to size and service. Buildings constructed for the military are of standard type in four sizes varying from an area of 10,700 to 3,680 square feet of floor

No accurate figures are available at this time as to the number of persons who visit these centers annually, the Community War Services reports says, but the work, in several cities was cited as typical of that being done at these centers. The Atlanta, (Ga.) Soldiers' Service Center showed a monthly attendance of 3,000, half of whom were soldiers, sailors and marines. In many cities, the recreation center has become a sort of "Town Hall" for the entire community. 11-1-44

As valuable as these buildings now are, and as effective as they seem to be in serving wartime recreation needs, their serviceability will be enhanced in the rehabilitation days ahead when the returning veteran and the war worker come back home to take up the pursuits of peace, the report points out.

471-1944

The Globe Trotter

Daily World 6-11-44

Another Barrier To Be Broken

Atlanta, Ga.

VETERANS OF World War I have really missed the boat by not conducting during the past quarter century a vigorous, unrelenting, uncompromising campaign for full integration into both of the major veterans' organizations, the American Legion and the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

It is a mistake, which if not immediately rectified by an insistent, determined drive for justice, might well defeat all of our hopes and desires of being accorded the status of first-class citizenship in the post war era.

MACKAY

For at the end of this war the most powerful political group in America will not be labor, nor the farm bloc, industry, liberals or conservative. It will be the veterans, numbering more than twenty million men and women of voting age, returning from the wars.

WILL GET RESULTS

Whatever these veterans decide they want, they will get it. Make no mistake about that. Whichever political philosophy they decide to support, be it liberal or conservative, that philosophy will prevail in post-war America, for they will have the votes to place in power those candidates who will back up their wishes. 6-11-44

They will be strategically organized and the organization which will spearhead their political activities will be the American Legion.

That the two million or more Negro veterans will have comparatively no voice in this powerful political bloc can be blamed wholly on the thousands of Negro World War I veterans dwelling in the South, who during all these years have not stood up and militantly fought the racial limitations Southern states have placed on membership in the American Legion.

DENIED MEMBERSHIP

The refusal of American Legion state adjutants in Mississippi, Georgia, South Carolina, Texas, Alabama, Florida and Arkansas to issue Negro veterans charters to form American Legion posts is more vicious in its display of hateful racial arrogance than the outlawed, but still unbroken white Democratic primary.

It is more vicious for it perniciously and bluntly says to Negro veterans in those states which furnished almost seventy per cent of all the Negroes in the Army during the last and this World War, you are good enough to go out on the field of battle and fight; you are good enough to bleed and die, but because your face is black, you are not good enough to share any of the benefits that might accrue as the result of your service to your country.

That this deliberate and foul discrimination can and must be smashed and now goes without saying. For its implications on the position of not only our boys and girls now going through unmitigated hell in the all-out campaign to defeat the arch race-hater, but on the very future of our status in the post war period is all too clear. 6-11-44

VETERANS MUST LEAD

Here is a field that needs as much attention as we now give to making real the Supreme Court's unequivocable decision on the white primary. It is a fight that by its very nature must be spearheaded by veterans of World War I, but which should have the whole-hearted support of all.

The full integration of Negro ex-servicemen into these veteran's organizations, particularly the American Legion, could mean the difference between victory and defeat in our home-front campaign.

Two million Negro veterans with full representation would form a potent voice crying out for justice not only for the black man who saw service, but for full equality for all Americans, irrespective of color.

COULD CHANGE TREND

They could by joining with the more liberal elements of the Legion push that organization away from its conservative trends of the past and place it on the side of those forces which are trying to make America all that its leaders profess to the world it is.

They could enlist new friends in the unrelenting fight we must wage to remove the stigma of second-class citizenship with which we have been cursed for lo these many years. They could get across to white veterans to whom it probably has never occurred that if a man is good enough to fight for his country, he is good enough to work for it. 6-11-44

All of these things and more could become reality in post-war America to those of us who have worked so long and hard for them if veterans of the last war combine their efforts with veterans already released from service in this war to demand their right to membership in an organization created for all of the people by the Congress.

It is a fight well worth the effort, one which could mean a short cut to the achievement of all the just demands made by black Americans for the past three quarters of a century.

American Legion

47L-1944

American Legion

Negroes Organize New Legion Post

Danville, Va., Register

The formation of a new colored American Legion post at Chatham was announced last night by G. K. Linkous, state department membership chairman.

Post 71 already has 33 members and leaders are expecting several more to join in the next few weeks.

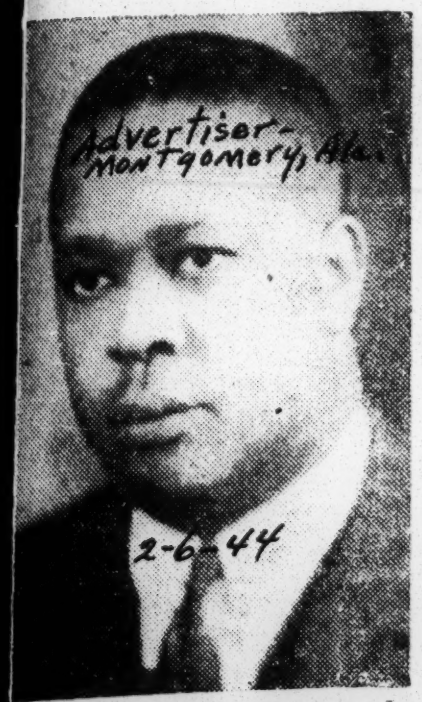
Officers of the new post include: Hughes Dillard, commander; Matthews Johnson, first vice commander; Thomas Lovelace, second vice commander; C. A. Cook, adjutant; Robert Berger, finance officer; James Miller, chaplain; A. C. Cook, service officer; L. A. Thomas, historian, and George Fuller, sergeant at arms. January 11, 1944

Members of the executive committee are: Roy Clement, William Adams and John Hodnett.

Those credited with the organization work were Distirct Vice Commander E. T. Jones of Danville, and Legionnaires Linkous W. L. McCollum, G. B. Wagner J. I. Yates, F. W. Kappas, all of Post 10; B. O. Henderson and J. S. Flood of Danville's colored Post 26, and District Commander L. M. Menefee from Rocky Mount.

Linkous stated that this puts the Fifth District farther ahead in the state membership race.

Friends Made



James A. Johnson, commander of Britton G. McKenzie Post No. 150 of the American Legion, Tuskegee Institute, Ala., is receiving from service men overseas letters and cards of thanks for the smokes which were sent by the Post through solicitation to which the public generously subscribed. Sgt. Richard Wilson, 34150052, APO, 525, care of Postmaster, New York City, New York, was the first to write after receiving the smokes. He said: "Thanks a million for the cigarets. They were enjoyed by all.

LEGIONNAIRE

Lieut. Willa B. Brown of Chicago, was made a member of the Theodore Roosevelt Post No. 30, American Legion, at a special ceremony in Omaha, Neb. Lieutenant Brown is an outstanding aviatrix, secretary of the National Airmen's association, director of Coffey Aeronautical School and only colored flight leader of the Civilan Air Patrol.

Delegates Chosen For State Legion Meeting

TUSKEGEE INSTITUTE, ALA., June 18.—The Britton G. McKenzie Post No. 150, of the American Legion, has named the following Legionnaires delegates to the State Legion Convention which will be held in Montgomery, Ala., July 3-4: James A. Johnson, commander; Capt. James A. Kennedy, first vice commander; E. H. Cravens, adjutant; Capt. R. S. Darnaby, publicity director; G. B. Love, second vice commander; Milton Hicks, G. C. Washington, Robert E. McDonald, past commander; Jeff Russell, sergeant-at-arms; Guy R. Pickett, service officer; Walter A. Vines, finance officer; Alto B. Fleming, veteran of World War II; R. S. Springfield, Archie Williams, Willie Gage, Bennie Braziel, Ledyard Sampson, J. E. Butler and James May. Alternates named are James Story, Elwood Rhodes, Samuel Anderson, C. Hall and J. J. May.

The Britton G. McKenzie Post has a membership of 301. The Post will have representation at the national meeting which will be held in Chicago in September.

47L-1944

Auxiliary Policemen

THEY ARE MAKING A FINE RECORD

Daily World — Atlanta, Ga.

4-29-44

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn.—(SNS) — Above is a crack group of Chattanooga Auxiliary Policemen, who have been making a very fine record since they were organized and appointed by Chief of Police. Homer D. Edmondson. Reading from left to right front row, are: A. G. S. Gaines, C. Boston, John McDonald, W. M. E. Thornhill, A. J Thomas, U. S. Brown, E. Hickman; Back row, L. V. Haley, George Powell, E. D. Slaughter, R. T Thompson, Goe Gyons, F. F. Johnson and E. Wilson. This group handled successfully the mammoth throng of people that attended the National Baptist Regional Convention, here March 14-16, at the Memorial Auditorium, the Mt. Paran and Emanuel Baptist Church.

They also handled the crowd at the Play Land Shaw Carnival that was at Lincoln Park, April 10-15. Much favorable comment has been heard about this group of Policemen, for their manner of dealing with the public. They are courteous, polite, but yet positive. Many of the officials of the National Baptist Convention praised the group highly for the manner in which they went about their duties at the Convention. Mr. Wilcox, owner of the Playland Show, said, he was highly pleased with the work of the Chattanooga Colored Auxiliary Police. 4-29-44

It was one of the finest groups that he had met. This group, with a few additions, patroled the Lincoln Amusement Park during the 1943 season, and the conduct there during the season was the best in History, according to a statement by those in a position to know. They are scheduled to patrol Lincoln Park again the 1944 Season.

47L-1944

Women of Harlem AWVS Fight Waste

PM - New York, N.Y.

Nothing will be wasted in Harlem if the women of the Harlem Workshop can prevent it.

Remnants, worn and torn clothing, even pillow ticking, are sure to be rescued and made into something useful at this branch of the Colonial Park Unit, AWVS.

All sewing and renovating is done at the headquarters, a rent-free store at 266 W. 135th St., which is open every day and some evenings, too.

During the past year, more than 750 children's garments were made there which were distributed through various agencies.

Because of the high price of material, however, there probably will be a lot less new clothing made in Harlem this year. 1-13-44

Although much of the material which is made into children's clothes is donated by the AWVS, a great deal must be bought outside as well as thread, tape, needles and other materials.

1-13-44

Old clothes are salvaged, cleaned, mended and pressed. Mrs. Mable Miller is putting finishing touches on a pair of boy's pants.

Patchwork type of baby blanket is being made from odds and ends by Mrs. Hamilton Travis. 1-13-44

Photos by Wilbert H. Blanche, PM

At the Harlem Workshop, necessary garments for children are made. Mrs. Rebecca Heath (left) and Mrs. Helena Jackson are cutting a baby's gown. 1-13-44

Mrs. Helena Jackson, member of the Workshop who does most of the buying, told this department that prices had gone up in Harlem as much as 60 per cent on some materials. A standard width of cotton batting, for instance, which was 69c a yard, is now 98c a yard. Sateen, formerly 29c, is now 49c.

As a result, she is forced to go out of the neighborhood to do her shopping. In order to get good buys, she said, she has to travel to the East Side or shop "under the bridge"—a section from 110th St. to 116th St., where goods are sold out in the open.

Since membership of the Harlem Workshop is rather small and most of the members hold full-time jobs and do their sewing in the evenings, the time that goes into the actual making of the garments is extended. Despite this, however, the work gets done. 1-13-44

Not only do these volunteers help to alleviate the shortage in children's clothes, they also learn how to conserve and remake clothing so that they can apply the knowledge in their own homes.

Hats Off!

PM - New York, N.Y.

7-27-44

Hats off today to Mrs. Daisy C. Reed, director of the AWVS Corona Teen-Age Club, for her vision and persistence in bringing into reality a healthy social plan for the youngsters of her community. Mrs. Reed, a former child-care worker for 30 years, was directly responsible for the first AWVS-sponsored Teen-Age Club in New York. The idea proved so worthwhile that other AWVS centers picked it up with marked success.

47L-1944

NAACP Buys $40,000 In Bonds Honoring 99th Pursuit Pilots

AFC — New York, N.Y. 7-8-44

At a war press conference Saturday in the Army Public Relations Office, 90 Church street, Walter White announced the purchase of $40,000 worth of Fifth War Loan Bonds for the NAACP in honor of the two distinguished 99th Pursuit Squadron pilots, Captains, Charles B. Hall and Lemuel Rodney Custis, Mr. White said:—

"The N.A.A.C.P. is delighted to purchase through Captain Charles B. Hall and Lemuel R. Custis $40,000 of the Fifth War Loan bonds. We wish, however, to emphasize not the purchase of the bonds, which every American should purchase to the limit of his ability. Instead we wish to pay tribute to two gallant American soldiers who incidentally happen also to be Negroes. 7-8-44

"It was my privilege recently as a War Correspondent to see the 99th Pursuit Squadron in action in Italy. We are proud of the D.F.C. which Captain Hall won. We are proud also of the brilliant record of Captain Custis and of the other three Negro fighter squadrons now playing so important a part in the battle of Italy.

"It is our hope that America will show these and others of the 700,000 American Negroes now fighting in the war that the democracy they fight to preserve will be more fully given them and other minorities than has been proved in the past. One question asked me anxiously by colored soldiers on all the battlefronts I have visited is. "To what will we return in America? Will it be only to shoeshining jobs and the Ku Klux Klan?" 7-8-44

"What will America's answer be?"

Mrs. FDR Answers Dixie Solon On CIO Canteen

Courier- Pittsburgh, Pa.
2-26-44

By HARRY McALPIN, NNPA Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON, D.C.—The recent opening of the Washington Labor Canteen for servicemen here, sponsored by the CIO, which was attended by Mrs. Roosevelt, was the subject of an attack by Representative McKenzie (Democrat) of Louisiana, who criticized the "co-mingling" of the races.

Mrs. Roosevelt, in replying to the criticism, said Representative McKenzie "seems to be misinformed."

"Apparently," she said, "the congressman doesn't realize both white and Negro members compose the unions sponsoring the canteen. It is sponsored by the Industrial Labor Council of that area. Naturally, if whites and Negroes work together, their union, when it sponsors a canteen, cannot put out one group of its members. As usually happens, the people choose their own friends."

UNDERSTAND HARDSHIPS

She also declared that in order that there shall be no cleavage between our returning servicemen and the people at home, Americans on the home front must make an effort to understand the hardships endured by our fighting men.

Representative McKenzie inserted his criticisms into the Congressional Record, and included a clipping from the Washington Post, which said Mrs. Roosevelt had attended the opening ceremonies and had congratulated the CIO's Union Council on establishment of the canteen. 2-26-44

He said he was "shocked" and "stunned' by the Post item which said there were both white and Negro girl hostesses at the event.

"How can anyone," he declared, "be a party to encouraging white girls into the arms of Negro soldiers at a canteen dance while singing 'Let Me Call You Sweetheart'?"

CONDEMNS ACTIVITIES

"I wonder if the sponsors really believe in the co-mingling of the races and the resulting evil of co-habitation.

"Have these people no regard for the traditions of the South or the culture of the white race?

"Do these people honestly believe that the white people of this nation have reached such a low point of moral and social decadence that they have no pride in race or family and willing to accept all comers?

"Don't these people understand that such activities do not contribute anything to the uplift or culture of the Negro race, but do tend to mongrelize the white race?"

He said no good could come of such co-mingling — "not even political." "I deplore and condemn with all the intensity of my soul the promotion of such activities," he added.

Backward State's Congressman Wails for Race Bars at Canteen

Tribune - Washington, D.C.
2-26-44

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, whose consistent attempts to practice the ideals of true democracy have drawn ire of race-baiters, faced a new attack last week by a Congressman from one of the most backward States of the Nation.—Rep. Charles E.McKenzie, native of Monroe, La.

(Ed. Note—Believe it or not, but figures say Louisiana, Lousyana, is more illiterate than Mississippi, home State of Senator Back-to-Africa Bilbo, "mayor" of Washington. Reports say that Louisiana had 1,204,647 persons aged 25 and over, and that 154,482 had only first grade schooling; Mississippi had 1,043, 584 aged 25 and over, and 69,119, with first grade education.)

"Seems Misinformed"

When McKenzie last week criticized the "co-mingling" of the races at the recent opening of the Washington Labor Canteen at 1212 Eighteenth Street, Northwest, for all servicemen, regardless of race, Mrs. Roosevelt, honor guests at the event, replied politely that McKenzie "seems to be misinformed."

The race-baiting Congressman injected his criticism into the Congressional Record, and included a clipping from the Washington Post which said Mrs. Roosevelt was present and that there were both Negro and white girl hostesses at the affair.

"How can anyone," he asked, "be a party to encouraging white girls into the arms of Negro soldiers at a canteen while singing 'Let Me Call You Sweetheart'"? "I wonder if the sponsors really believe in the co-mingling of the races and the resulting evil of cohabitation. Have these people no regard for the traditions of the South or the culture of the white race?" he ranted on.

"Don't these people understand that such activities do not contribute anything to the uplift of culture of the Negro race, but do tend to mongrelize the white race?" 2-26-44

McKenzie declared that he deplored and condemned "with all the intensity of my soul the promotion of such activities."

Chose Own Friends

Mrs. Roosevelt was quoted as saying in reply:

"Soldiers who come there have been in unions composed of both white and Negro members and naturally, if whites and Negroes work together, their union, when it sponsors a canteen, cannot cut out one group of its members. As usually happens, the people chose their own friends."

The First Lady also observed that the hostesses at the canteen were colored and white girls who are workers and members of unions having members of both races.

In reply to the criticism, Joseph Phillips, president of the CIO Washington Industrial Union, operator of the canteen, is quoted as saying:

"We of the CIO in Washington are very proud that we could open the first effective non-Jim Crow canteen in Washington. The CIO has always opposed Nazi theories of racial superiority. We believe that one aim of this war is to eliminate such theories. Our Commander-in-Chief has so expressed our policy.

"When people come to our dances they dance with whomever they choose. Only the reactionaries will fear to leave this strictly personal decision to the individual."

FIRST NEGRO CANTEEN TO OPEN ON FRIDAY

'Garden Grove' Located In LeMoyne Community Center

"Garden Grove," Memphis' first negro teen-age canteen, will be opened formally in the LeMoyne Garden Community Center annex building at 8:15 Friday night, with Mayor Chandler making the dedicatory address.

T. O. Fuller, negro manager, and Hamilton Smith, negro assistant manager, said the canteen will be dedicated to the negro youth of the city. It is sponsored by the Memphis Housing Authority and the Tenant Association of LeMoyne Garden in co-operation with the Memphis Park Commission.

Garden Grove will have a game room in which there will be ping pong, billiard and game tables and a snack bar for soft drinks and sandwiches and a lounge room with magazines and a radio.

Negro boys and girls will supervise the canteen under direction of adults of the Tenant Association. Amateur nights and forums also will be conducted at the center.

J. A. Fowler, executive director, and Walter Simmons, finance director, both of Memphis Housing Authority; John Vesey, chairman of Memphis Park Commission, and others have been invited to participate in dedication of the canteen.

47L-1944

Civilian Defense

NATIONAL COMMENT:

Constitution—Atlanta, Ga.

A REAL PATRIOT

(Lee County Bulletin, Auburn, Alabama)

He was just a little Negro urchin, a ragamuffin, but he stood out in our estimation as one of the greatest patriots Auburn ever produced.

Passing along the tin can bin on College street early one morning, we saw this little urchin emptying a paper sack containing four empty cans. He was doing his bit to make the world a fit place in which to live.

7-25-44

And what an example he set for the rest of us!

Those four cans had no intrinsic value. That little Negro could not have sold them for even as much as a stick of candy. They were worthless, except as an agency of peace. They could spell the doom of a nation; they could contain enough tin to make the shot that some day might send a Tojo or Hitler to his grave; they could shape the destiny of the world, save broken hearts, turn world chaos into tranquil peace, write finis to the worst tragedy man's history will ever record, bring loved ones back to weeping mothers, and restore brotherly love to its place in a world torn asunder by greed and hatred. Who knows?

$3,000,000 spent in recreational work for Negroes

Tribune — Los Angeles, Calif. 8-7-44

WASHINGTON — The Federal Government has expended more than $3,000,000 through the office of Community War Services in assisting 166 community-planned recreation programs for Negroes since 1941, James W. Geater, recreation specialist of the OCWS told the State Recreation Conference and Workshop for Negroes at Tugaloo College, Jackson, Miss. this week.

Under a program of mutual assistance, Mr. Geater said, 79 community recreation buildings have been constructed or renovated and staffed and programmed for Negroes. He further declared:

"Under this program the 166 communities have drawn Negro personnel into their community planning program. These representatives serve either on the authoritative overall committee or are members of a functional committee. Through this representation and active participation, Negro responsibility is enlisted which contrbutes to community well-being."

8-7-44

The Mississippi Workshop for Negroes is the third recreation conference in which the OCWS Recreation Division has shared the sponsorship. The first was held in Florida under the State Defense Council, the second in North Carolina, under the State Recreation committee and the University of North Carolina.

471-1944

General

Negro Jurist Assails 'Peace Now' As Pro-Hitlerites Invade Phila. Churches

Magistrate Rainey Exposes Pacifist Disguise of Group

The Worker
New York, N.Y.
2-13-44

By Walter Lowenfels

(Special to The Worker)

PHILADELPHIA. — The pacifist division of Hitler's peace-now front was assailed this week by a Negro jurist as it attempted to smuggle its poisonous propaganda into the ranks of the Negro people. The Negro leader was Magistrate Rainey.

Last Sunday evening, A. J. Muste, peace-now ringleader, invaded one of Philadelphia's leading Negro churches, the Mt. Olivet Tabernacle Baptist Church. Using the Jim Crow issue as an entering wedge, Muste made a peace-now plea.

Muste spilled his defeatist poison after Rev. Marshall Shepard, the pastor and former State Representative, had left. When one of the assistant pastors heard Muste's treacherous talk, he spoke up against it.

Sunday afternoon, Muste and Rustin were the stars at an inter-racial conference held in Fellowship House, which half a dozen outstanding Negro leaders unwittingly attended. Among the white participants was Mrs. Winifred Chambers, chairman of the committee on Race Relations and Minority Problems of the Women's International League. She boasted:

"As the war gets more and more unpopular we hope to recruit more and more members."

However that same Sunday Magistrate Joseph Rainey, denounced the organizations which are actively propagandizing for a Hitler peace and raising money for it, under a pacifist barrage.

Magistrate Rainey named the following pacifist and pacifist-dominated group[s], many of whose members oppose a negotiated peace, but who are allowing their organizations to be used for Hitler's purposes:

The American Society of Friends, the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom; Committee to Oppose Conscription of Women; Fellowship Foundation; Fellowship of Reconciliation, headed by Muste; and the National Council for the Prevention of War, the Libby-Taft organization.

Magistrate Rainey spoke at an emergency conference at which the American Youth for Democracy launched an attack on the negotiated peace forces. Another speaker, who warned the trade union movement to be on guard from peace now representatives, was John Brown, vice-president of the big New York Ship Local 1 of the CIO Shipbuilders union. 2-13-44

Sunday night, Dr. Henry J. Cadbury, long associated with the American Friends Service Committee, and now professor of Divinity at Harvard University, brought forth all the Norman Thomas, Hartmann arguments for a Hitler-peace without victory before a small audience at the Friends Race St. Forum.

Climax of a week-end in which Hitler, while taking it on the chin on the Eastern Front, got a lot of help behind the lines in the U.S.A., came Monday morning when Dr. Albert Palmer, president of the Chicago Theological Seminary, apologized for Japanese atrocities at a United Peace Chest fund meeting sponsored by Negotiated Peace leaders in the Bellevue Stratford Hotel.

Said Dr. Palmer to a group of about 100, mostly middle-aged ladies:

"Unfortunately, the powers that be found it necessary to have Japanese atrocity stories at this time to sell bonds. People are swallowing their bait, hook, line, and sinker."

Said Francis Paul, executive secretary of the AYD: 2-13-44

"Frederick Libby, one of the pacifist peace-now ringleaders, admitted at the Bellevue Stratford meeting this week that their aims are the same as the Hartmann-American First 'Peace' group which has been exposed as accepting Nazi supporters. However, the peace-now pacifists present a respectable veneer,

"They don't call themselves Peace Now' but advocate it under different names, as Magistrate disclosed. Their camouflage has deluded and confused some well-meaning people. We expect many patriotic organizations will join our youth movement in exposing and defeating the sinister peace now propaganda that the Peace Strategy Board has organized under various fronts at its Philadelphia headquarters, 1924 Chestnut St."

City's Request For Negro Center Again Refused

Jefferson City
Centerville, Miss.

Mayor Omer Carroll wishes to bring to the attention of the public the letter reproduced below. Mayor Carroll states that he has written four times to the Federal Works Agency, Atlanta, Ga., citing the tremendous need in Centreville for recreation facilities for negro servicemen. Each time his request has been turned down by the War Department because the project has not been "justified as being essential to the war effort."

The letter follows:

REGION 3
20 Fifth Street, N. W.
Atlanta, Georgia

Project No. Miss. 22-194
Recreation Facilities
(Colored) Centreville, Miss.
PP&C; FLK; ep

Honorable Omer Carroll
Mayor, City of Centreville,
Centreville, Mississippi

Dear Mayor Carroll:

Reference is made to your application for Federal assistance in the construction of recreation facilities for negro service men. 6-30-44

In accordance with your request, the application has again been referred to the War Department for recommendation as to the construction of the facilities; however, the War Department would not recommend the project as being essential to the war effort. The project has, therefore, again been deferred until such time as the project can be justified as being essential to the war effort. 6-30-44

Assuring you of my cooperation, I am

Sincerely yours,
O. T. RAY,
Regional Director.

Negro Kids Get Salvage Award

Negro children in Public School 157, St. Nicholas Ave. and 127 St., were given special awards yesterday for their record set in the wastepaper salvage campaign.

Grover A. Whalen, chairman-director of the Civilian Defense Volunteer Office, presented the awards to the kids, who collected 40,000 pounds of wastepaper during the past month. N.Y., N.Y.

The first WPB-CDVO Salvage Division buttons were given by Whalen to the individual children who collected as much as 175 pounds of paper. Two grand prizes of $5 each, donated by Blumstein's Department Store, were given to Herbert Campbell, 12, who brought in 1,000 pounds of wastepaper, and Dolores Blake, 12, who collected 300 pounds.

Morale Jumped as R. C. Girls Served Fighter Pilots in Italy

Afro American—Baltimore, Md.
12-16-44

By ART CARTER

AFRO War Correspondent with U.S. Troops in Italy

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

15TH AAF AIRBASE IN ITALY — The morale of the Fighter Group was elevated by leaps and bounds recently when two petite girls stepped from a clubmobile to serve refreshments to fighter pilots just returning from a long-range escort mission into enemy-held territory.

The two workers, first colored to operate clubmobile service in the Mediterranean Theater of Operations, are Miss Edith Cheatham, 27, 32 Hunter Street, Ossining, N.Y., and Miss Katherine Austin, 26, 10918 Pasedena Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio. 12-16-44

Prior to arrival overseas, they were assigned to Aberdeen Proving Grounds in Maryland and also to the Service Center in Washington, D.C. Miss Cheatham was a business student at New York University, and Miss Austin, student at West Virginia State College, majoring in sociology, prior to employment by the Red Cross.

U.S. Gives Up Haitian Rubber Project, Land

Afro-American, Balt. Md.
5-27-44

WASHINGTON — (ANP)—The U.S. government, acting through its Rubber Development Corporation, has written off $8,000,000 as a total loss in its Haitian cryptostegia rubber project, according to official reports this week.

The land, formerly used for the rubber project, will be returned to the natives. However, an experimental station at Gonaives, as well as several other stations in various other areas, will be con[illegible]d this year under an appro[illegible]ion of $100,000.

Tribune-Chicago, Ill.

Wide World photo

HOSTESSES AND GUESTS at the snack bar of the CIO canteen in Washington.

Harlem-Riverside CDVO Does a 100% Community Job

Daily Worker — New York, N.Y.

By LOLA PAINE 8-18-44

The Harlem-Riverside Civilian Defense Council at 3502 Broadway has become a real neighborhood center—and the neighbors go for it in a big way. So do the kids.

Almost any day you can go around the corner at 147th St. and see Spanish, Greek, Negro, Catholic, Russian, Italian and Jewish kids working away at their CDVO Victory garden. They're raising peas, string beans, tomatoes and lettuce where an old rubbish lot used to be.

Back at the office you can take a look at the monthly reports which this CDVO branch sends to headquarters. You'll find that during June and July its volunteers sold $51,193 in bonds and sent 1,500 magazines and 800 books to the armed forces. Since its inception a year ago, it has sent a total of 10,000 books, all collected by the kids.

Sure enough! They've discovered a stringbean. Alfred Lindo, 10-year-old Negro gardener, Tony Maneates, 12 years and Greek, and Anthony Moga, 11 and Spanish, are pleased as punch over their stringbean patch. Alfred's father works at Stage Door Canteen and his mother works for Postal Telegraph. Tony's dad works in a shipyard. Anthony swelled with pride over his brother Emanuel who's a bombardier in Italy —DW Photos.

WHAT IT MEANS 8-18-44

"Civilian defense," said Mrs. Bernice Feinne, executive secretary of the Council, "means a lot when you really think about it. Civilian defense means keeping up the morale and the war effort of your neighborhood. We have a big job to do because there are no centers or clubs in our entire area—which spreads from 110th to 155th Streets and from river to river."

Some of the work that Harlem-Riverside is doing? Aside from bonds, gardening, books and interracial work, there's a whole string of other neighborhood activities. For example, even the kids took part in getting ballot applications to soldiers. They made a sign saying, "Come in for Official Election War Ballot Applications," and plenty of soldiers walked in asking for bundles.

CHORAL GROUPS 8-18-44

This council has already helped to establish three interracial choral groups—one in a church, one with the Girl Scouts and one with a synagogue. It has become a center where soldiers' families come in to ask about allotments and the dozens of other questions on their minds. It has sent hundreds of volunteers to OPA, the Harlem Hospital, the Red Cross and to the Treasury during the Fifth War Loan drive. It is a clothing depot for Russian War Relief.

Miss Miriam Shapiro, secretary of the Broadway branch, told us that no other organization can "reach the people as we can. If we want to call 200 parents of 100 children we know, the parents come readily.

Summing up the work of the Harlem-Riverside Council, Mrs. Feinne said, "Our ideas don't go to the files. They go to the community."

Calls Tampa's Aux Policemen A Crack Unit

Journal & Guide
Norfolk, Va.
1-29-44

400 Uniformed Men Included In Four Companies

WASHINGTON, D. C. — A crack Negro auxiliary police unit is included among nine companies of Hillsborough county's auxiliary police force in Tampa, Fla., John H. Spencer, director of auxiliary police training, said in his annual report to the Office of Civilian Defense, OCD has announced.

The report, also submitted to Police Chief McClelland in Tampa, said that the full organization of more than 400 men included four companies in a mobile battalion, two in traffic patrol service, and one on motorcycle duty patrolling military routes. Another, a medical unit equipped with a trailer, stretchers and first aid equipment, is manned by a doctor and male nurse.

EQUIPPED WITH UNIFORMS

All members of the auxiliary force are now equipped with khaki uniforms, side-arms and other regulation equipment and are required under the police training program to perform an assignment once a month. All must complete 30 hours of service to receive a certificate of training. Each company meets once a week for military drill and instructions in first aid and bomb and gas emergencies. 1-29-44

During 1943, the report said, auxiliary police reported for duty 1,091 times and accumulated 10,088 man hours of service, the equivalent of 1,261 eight-hour days which based on police pay would have cost the City $7.318.

The report praised Mayor Albert R. Knapp, commanding officer of the auxiliary force whom Spencer credited with the high record of efficiency that has been attained since the force was organized. Spencer, pointing out the extensive service given the city, recommended that plans be made for a continuation of an auxiliary police department after the war.

Commenting on the report, Chief McClelland commended Major Knapp and all members of the force for their cooperation.

Crystal Fauset Out Of OCD—Gets Democratic Post

Defender
Chicago, Ill
1-29-44

(Defender Washington Bureau)

WASHINGTON — Missing from the limelight of publicity since Mrs Eleanor Roosevelt withdrew from active participation in the administration of the Office of Civilian Defense, Mrs. Crystal Byrd Fauset, former race relations director of that office, is again in the public view.

Authentic reports are that Mrs. Fauset is now a field representative for the National Democratic committee—the only Negro and the only woman holding an official position with that committee.

Mrs. Fauset's withdrawal from the OCD was unattended by the fanfare that accompanied the resignations of Judge William Hastie and Dr. Robert Weaver from their government positions. The OCD has been inactive in the field of race relations for many months. Her new position, however, promises to put her in a position of strategic importance.

She has been a leader in the Democratic party in Pennsylvania for a number of years. Considerable rivalry for control of the Democratic machinery among Negroes has existed between her and Dr. William J. Thompkins. Dr. Thompkins has been ill for some time.

Negro Men Wanted

FROM 75 to 100 Negro men are required for volunteer aides in St. Philip, Dooley and Community Hospitals, and the Office of Civilian Defense, under whose auspices volunteers are being recruited, is anxious that this number make themselves available.

Richmond is the first and only city in the United States to train colored men for service as hospital volunteers, and there is a great need for such workers. PRESIDENT W. T. SANGER, of the Medical College, and ROBERT SYCLE stressed this need at a recent meeting attended by Negro air raid wardens. Thus far, only 15 have signed up for the classes which are to be offered next month, so that many more are needed. Those desiring to apply should communicate with the Volunteer Service Bureau in the Allison Building, dial 2-0144, and thereby aid in relieving the serious shortage of help in the St. Philip, Dooley and Community Hospitals.

Richmond has pioneered in this effort, and our colored population will certainly wish to respond to the appeal in a measure commensurate with the emergency which exists. Under the plan, Negro men are given a chance to alleviate the suffering among their own people in local hospitals. It is a worthy objective, and one fully deserving of their wholehearted support.

471-1944

Frances Williams Made Race Relations Officer

Argus — St. Louis, Mo.

Chester Bowles, OPA Director, has announced the upgrading, or the promotion of Miss Frances Harriet Williams to the office of Administrative Assistant OPA Consumer's Division Race Relations. 8-25-44

Miss Williams has been with the OPA for some time, during which she has done some field work, but her chief interest has been the integration of Negroes in OPA work. The fact that eleven per cent of the employees of the OPA in Washington are colored people, many of whom are in the highest salary brackets, speaks eloquently of her activities in their behalf. Her new position is a reward for efficient service.

Miss Williams is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank L. Williams of St. Louis and was formerly on the National staff, Y.W.C.A., from which she has a leave of absence.

OPA Ends Office of Racial Adviser

Afro American — Baltimore, Md.

WASHINGTON

As a part of the announced policy of the Office of Price Administration to decentralize its activities, Administrator Chester Bowles has announced that the functions of the Office of Racial Relations Adviser of OPA will be transferred to the various field offices and to other operating divisions of the agency. 8-12-44

Mr. Bowles said that this step was taken, along with the transfer of a number of activities of the field, in order to assure more direct, immediate and effective operation of the price control, rent and rationing programs in colored communities.

Miss Williams Promoted

"Miss Frances Williams of St. Louis, Mo., who has been on the OPA information staff and the various units which antedated this body since July, 1940, will act as my personal assistant in this field," Mr. Bowles said. "She will be assigned for administrative purposes to the office of the executive officer." 8-12-44

The transfer of the functions of the Racial Relations Office will be made "in such a manner as not only to assure no loss of our program, but rather to provide direct responsibility for effective action in each of the program fields," Mr. Bowles said.

47L-1944

OPA

Name 1st Negro to New Harlem Rationing Board

Daily Worker - New York, N.Y.
3-24-44

Alan L. Dingle, noted Negro attorney, was sworn in yesterday as volunteer chairman of the newly formed Harlem War Price and Rationing Board by Daniel P. Woolley, regional office of Price Administrator. Simultaneously, OPA announced the opening of another board in the Bedford-Stuyvesant area, which Judge Myles Paige of Special Sessions Court, is expected to head.

The establishment of boards in depressed Negro areas comes after a year-long campaign for effective community control of prices and rationing.

Dingle is the first Negro board chairman in New York State. Both boards will begin functioning next week.

The Harlem board will be located at 144 W. 125th St., with Franz Byrd as chief clerk. All personnel, Negro and white—will be selected from civil service lists. It will cover the territory bounded by 110th St. to 155th St., from river to river and will service approximately 600,000 persons. This area was formerly handled by OPA boards at 1775 Broadway or at 1130 St. Nicholas Ave. Harlemites, however, found these boards inconveniently located. For a while, a price branch operated in the 136th St. branch of the Public Libary. This office was unable to handle cases properly. 3-24-44

The Stuyvesant-Bushwick board will serve a population of 350,000 in Brooklyn and will operate in the Brooklyn College of Pharmacy, 265 Nostrand Ave.

Judge Paige's appointment awaits Mayor LaGuardia's final okay since no city employee may accept a post without his sanction.

'Through these new boards," Woolley said, "we hope to bring more effective compliance with the OPA regulations in sections of the city which have been far removed from previous OPA centers of activity, and from which have arisen many complaints of inadequate protection."

The campaign to get a Harlem board was speeded up last year after the outbreaks in Harlem, due in large part to widespread unrest over high prices and black markets.

Tell OPA More Negroes Needed

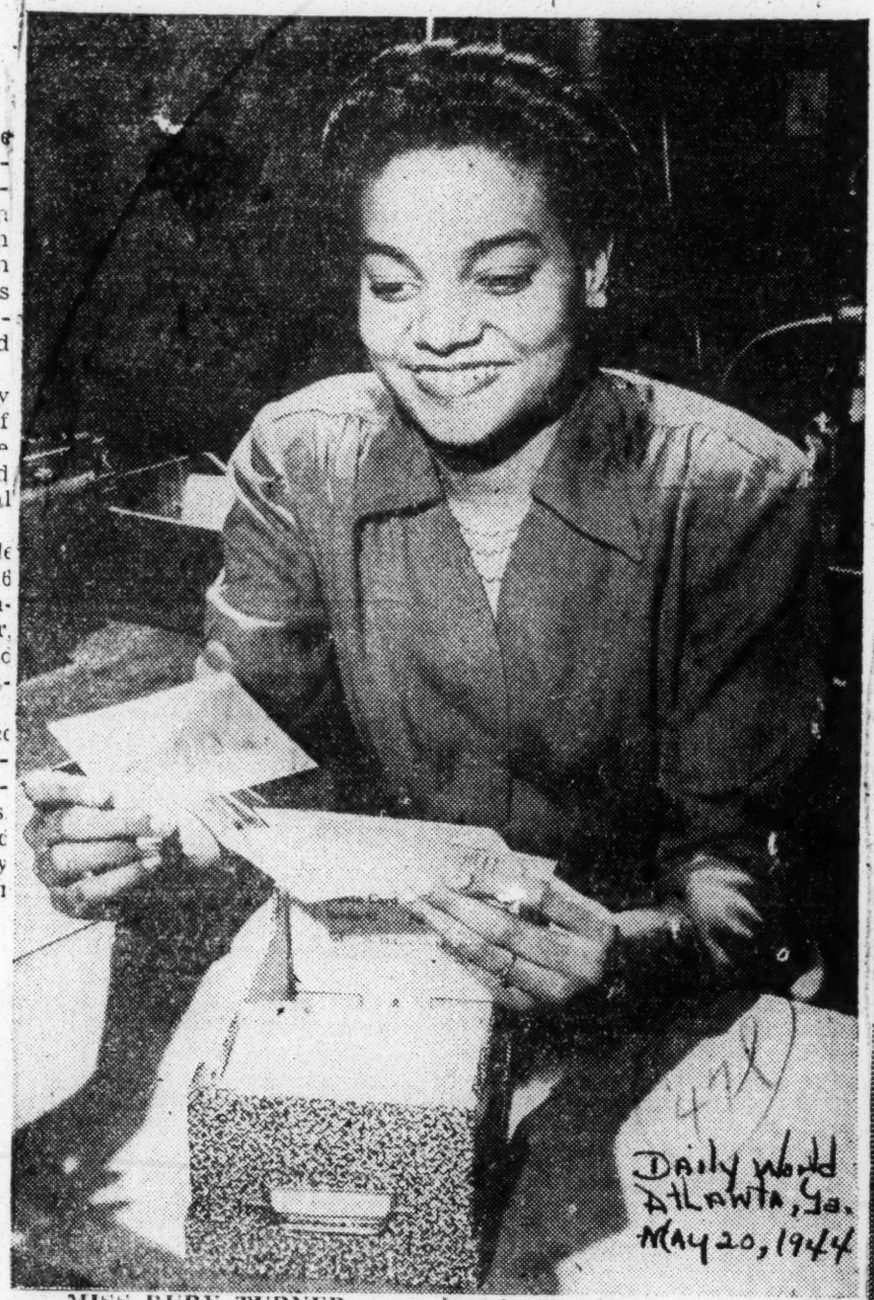
WASHINGON—(A N P)—The National Consumer Advisory committee has advised Price Administrator Chester Bowles that an increase in Negro personnel on war price and rationing boards in district and regional OPA offices is necessary as a means of ensuring that information on price and rent control reaches the Negro.

The consumer advisory body also recommended recruitment of additional Negro members for price panels and as price assistants, and asked for increased informational services to the Negro press.

The recommendations were made after the meeting March 15 and 16 of the full committee of 26 members which include Miss Ella Baker, New York, NAACP official, and Mrs. Grace Townes Hamilton, Atlanta Urban League. 3-26-44

The committee also reiterated its stand in favor of dollars-and-cents price ceiling urging that extension of flat retail price ceilings which consumers can recognize and help to enforce, to hardware, dry goods, work clothing and similar items.

Her System Eases OPA Work



MISS RUBY TURNER

Commodity clerk in a Saginaw, Mich., local rationing board worked out a system for keeping track of applications for extra shoes which saves time for both the board and families filing application. The system, which was reported to National OPA headquarters in Washington, D. C. may be adopted by other boards — Harold Boucher Photo from OWI ed by many of the members of its local offices.

Miss Ruby Turner, the Saginaw commodity clerk, among her other duties, processed applications for supplementary shoes. Families with a number of small school children are the most frequent applicants. The Genesse county Board No. 1 found one of its chief problems to be determination of the merits of the needs for shoes.

The system Miss Turner devised enables her to see at glance how a family's shoe leather should hold up. Previously, the clerk would have to go through a number of application forms.

Miss Turner used ordinary filing cards and filled out one for each family applying for extra shoes. On the back of the card, she listed all members of the family and on the front she made notations as to when each member was issued a supplementary shoe stamp. This saved hours of time and eliminated a search through hundreds of applications.

The new system was put into operation several months ago by Miss Turner and is being watched by other boards, which may adopt it. The members of her board were impressed with Miss Turners' initiative and efficiency and the local daily newspaper published a picture and a feature story on her work.

Record Plan Aids Officials In OPA

Daily World, Atlanta, Ga. 5-20-44

WASHINGTON, D. C. — (SNS) —How one Negro girl, a commodity clerk for a war price and Rationing Board in Saginaw, Mich., worked out a system for keeping track of applications for extra shoes, easing the burden of the ration board and saving time for the families who apply, is a well known story in her community, the Office of Price Administration said.

The OPA national office in Washington released the story this week as an example of the type of community service being perform-

Heads OPA Board

Daily World - Atlanta, Ga.
7-7-44

7-7-44

JAMES M. NABRIT, Jr.

An outstanding chairman of an important War Price and Rationing Board in Washington, D. C., James M. Nabrit Jr., executive assistant to the president of Howard University, presides over the 12

Daily World
Atlanta, Ga.

Arnold Hill Functions

8-8-44

The OPA this week is face dilemma in meeting the of Congress in its recently ed budget to broaden its field.
tions with no increase in funds. It has decided as one step in this direction to discontinue its race relations office, but is frantically trying to avoid any appearance of -suggestion at this politically im-

Office Will Be On Way Out Of

Continued

Atlanta

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(CNS)

Nat'l OPA Office

Negro and white members of Local Board, Number 34, serving a mixed population of 65,800 in Washington's Northwest section. Mr. Nabrit, who has been board chairman since 1943, is especially proud of the work done by his price panel. He is the son of the Rev. James M. Nabrit, former pastor of Mount Olive Baptist Church, Atlanta.

portant time of curtailing its program of fair-dealing and its interest in the success of its program in Negro communities.

Standing out like a sore thumb in the picture is T. Arnold Hill who on July 15 of last year was named special assistant to the OPA administrator to handle race relations, by Prentiss Brown, then heading the OPA. Mr. Hill was formerly assistant director of the Office of Negro Affairs in the National Youth Administration under Dr. Mary McLeod Bethune and prior to that had spent 25 years with the National Urban League. 8-8-44

Mr. Hill has been advised by letter over the signature of Chester Bowles, present OPA administrator, that after review of the functions of the various offices in the national headquarters and the need for cutting out 300 positions, it has been decided to transfer the functions of his office to the operating divisions and the field. Mr. Bowles says he and his staff will assume full responsibility for policy .The change is to go into effect August 15.

But the labor groups, both AFL and CIO, and the politicians are opposed to Hill. They have turned a deaf ear to his pleas and are urging the OPA to turn over the functions of Hills' office to Frances Williams, employed in the Consumer division of the agency.

Other race relations advisers in the government, desiring not to be quoted have expressed the opinion that the important thing is preservation of the race relations functions and the principle. They see the OPA move as one to get rid of Hill and not the function of race relations. 8-8-44

Hill feels he is the victim of an inside job and that he has been knifed in the back."

Hill Defjnitely Out Of O. P. A.

Daily World—Atlanta, Ga.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(NNPA)—That T. Arnold Hill, race relations adviser at OPA, definitely is to be terminated was indicated here this week by R. R. Brooks, assistant to the administrator, who told the NNPA that an office has been set up in "administrator's row" for Miss Frances Williams, who Chester Bowles has announced will be a special assistant to him to integrate the Negro into the functions and programs of the OPA. 8-27-44

The decision to discontinue the race relations office and transfer the functions to the operating divisions and to the field service was revealed in an NNPA story of two weeks ago. Hill's efforts to get the agency to change or modify its decision, through conferences with the administrator, were of no avail.

Mr. Hill is at present confined to the hospital. He will, according to Mr. Brooks, be given ample opportunity to find another position. Rumor has it that he may go to the United Nations Rehabilitation and Relief Agency.

47L-1944

Bias Charged To Red Cross In Africa, Mid-East

Daily World
Atlanta, Ga.
2-23-44

Official Denies Assertions Of Former Aide

NEW YORK—(A N P)—The Red Cross is accused of being responsible for the jimcrow policy against Negro soldiers in North Africa and the middle east. The charges were made by John H. Faulk, a white former American assistant field director stationed at a camp in Cairo.

In an interview, the former aide said he is convinced that Negro service men have formed a universal distrust for the organization supposed to be their big brother because it refuses to permit them to attend dances and admits them to clubs at furlough centers with a condescending "do come in, you're colored." He termed the policy as one of "passing the buck."

2-23-44

Faulk, a former English instructor at the University of Texas, was rejected as an enlistee in the armed forces because of an eye defect. He jointed the Merchant marine and served on a tanker for eight months. Prior to his entrance into the army he was a Rosenwald fellow and devoted his time to collecting Negro folk lore in rural Texas and Louisiana. He called his recently resigned post with the Red Cross, "useless."

PREJUDICED SUPERIORS

"While the Red Cross makes every effort to disclaim official responsibility for its inability to wipe out discrimination," he said, "I found to my surprise many of my superiors had decidedly prejudiced views toward the Negro soldier."

"There are many Red Cross men overseas who do not approve these practices. But they are seemingly in the minority. Consequently, it was my impression that the Red Cross is trying to make the best of an unhappy situation without taking a definite stand against discrimination."

Faulk said he was constantly reminded by his superiors that he had been sent overseas by "American money to maintain the 'status quo!' "This, he said, was most apparent in the instances of Negro servicemen.

2-23-44

Explaining that joining up with the Red Cross seemed his only chance to get overseas with the troops, the former Red Cross worker explained that upon his arrival overseas he asked to be stationed with Negro troops, "because through my work I had become deeply interested in Negro problems."

NOT GIVEN PREFERENCE

The authorities approved he said, but did absolutely nothing about planning him where he wanted to be. He was stationed instead, with white troops to keep them informed on homefront happenings and to encourage the soldiers' families to write.

"No one in this country knows American boys overseas are going through, soldiers of all ancestry—Negro, Jew and Gentile," he declared, and added, "and it would be doubly hard for anyone to understand what Negro troops have to put up with."

2-23-44

In comment on Faulk's assertions, Harold G. Anthony, Red Cross publicity director in Washington, said that the former English instructor had arrived in North Africa about the time Red Cross activity was being dismantled along with the closing down of the military theater there.

"As to his second charge," Anthony said, "our clubs are open to white and Negro alike. That's definitely Red Cross policy.

"It is disagreeable to the white soldiers when Negroes enter the clubs. That is not our fault. If things are as bad as Faulk says they are the Red Cross is not responsible for the situation."

TUSKEKEE SCHOOL OPENS

TUSKEGEE, June 20.—The second annual Red Cross leadership school at Tueskegee opened Monday, with an enrollment of more than 100. Members of the military personnel from five U. S. Army camps are among the enrollees. They will be housed at the Tuskegee Army Air Field, according to Capt. Fred Minnis, special service officer at the air field.

Post Chronicle
6-20-44

Red Cross

5,000 Yank Troops Greet 47 Red Cross Nurses, 'Somewhere In New Guinea'

Defender - Chicago, Ill.
1-1-44

AT AN ADVANCE BASE SOMEWHERE IN NEW GUINEA.—This place is very much like a small country town where the arrival of the train is the hyperdermic for daily conversation which is otherwise limited to the state of one's health, the condition of crops and the weather. The arrival of each boat brings either fresh news from Australia or the good old United States—and it is welcomed. But nothing yet has excited this jungle full of Yankee troops more than the recent arrival of 47 women. Had Roosevelt, Stalin and Churchill arrived on the same boat, their presence would have been overlooked just as much as the disembarkation of two chaplains and a Red Cross field director passed unnoticed.

Efforts were made for the soldiers to meet the young ladies, but for all the good intentions of those handling matters, everything went wrong.

The girls arrived unheralded one afternoon and that night more than 5,000 soldiers jammed the inadequate Red Cross Recreation Hall to meet them. The best that could be done that night was to allow each girl to stand on the refreshment counter so she could be viewed by all and introduce herself over a loud speaker system.

The next day was the busiest in the history of the Red Cross here. From morning until 10 p.m., when the girls retired to their double fenced, well guarded compound tired and weary, the recreation hall seethed like a bee's nest. It was impossible for Red Cross officials to estimate the number of men who visited the place during that day.

The next day brought even better news. There was to be a dance that night—in fact, two of them, for a later announcement stated that the eight Negro girls would entertain in the recreation hall of a quartermaster unit for Negro troops.

Anyone knowing how hungry these soldiers are for female companionship can easily imagine what happened. At each affair the girls were outnumbered 200 to 1 by soldiers in well scrubbed khakis, glistening faces and plastered heads. The press was so great that there was no room for dancing—in fact no room for all the soldiers who tried to push into the two buildings. And the number of soldiers steadily increased until fear was expressed for the safety of the girls. So the MP's were called and the young ladies escorted to their compound.

The next suggestion was better. it was decided that the girls, in small groups, would visit various outfits in their own areas. This was all right except that before they got around to visiting them all the girls were shipped to various clubs throughout the Southwest Pacific.

* * *

Meet Johnny Jukebox, the animated Wurlitzer. You call the number, he sings the tune. It all started one night when Pvt. Joseph Johnson of Brooklyn, crawled into his cot in a tent adjacent to mine and began singing one popular tune after another. Next morning I told him how I appreciated his serenade. Next night as he started singing the jukebox idea struck me, and I started requesting tunes by numbers. There was some confusion at first, but we soon had that ironed out by adopting the automatic hostess idea. Now I drop my nickle in the "machine," similating the sound of a coin falling into a slot, and request my selection by number. Johnny knows what I want to hear, and after clearing his voice, occasionally making one or two false starts, he gets on key and begins to sing.

1-1-44

In the army he's a linesman in the communications section for which work he has a good background. In high school he took an electrical course and then worked several years in a plant manufacturing electrical appliances.

He sang a little too. Not professionally, just for his friends at parties. He has a good baritone voice and encouraged by the requests he gets from others who have adopted the jukebox idea, he's taking his singing seriously.

* * *

Every soldier in our outfit has become an amateur physician since the issuance of jungle kits. Intended for use by soldiers when separated from their units and medical facilities are not available, the kits contain five yards of one-inch waterproof adhesive plaster, a can of footpowder, 200 halazone tablets for the disinfection of drinking water, a solution for athlete's foot, five grams of sulfanilamide, a small first aid dressing, two bottles of "Skat," an insect repellent; 30 atabrine tablets, 24 aspirin tablets, a jar of salt tablets, eight sulfadiazine tablets, 16 1-inch adhesive absorbent compresses, and two iodine applicators.

* * *

One does not live as effortlessly in the jungle as at home where we resort to the medicine chest only when we're ill. Here there is a daily medical ritual which must be observed if one wishes to survive the many tropical enemies of man Here's what we have to do. Every other day take an atabrine tablet which offsets malarial symptoms; put a salt tablet in each canteen of water; check water to see that it's chlorinated; wear leggings as protection against scrub typhus bearing ticks; avoid bathing in streams which have not been checked and approved by medical authorities; keep a coating of oily, foul smelling insect repellent (which also repels your friends and sensitive nostrils) on all exposed body surfaces; wear long sleeves and close collars after dusk; sleep under a mosquito bar; sterilize mess gear before and after eating; have all cuts, bruises, scratches and sores attended to promptly and regularly; wear respirators when driving riding or walking along dusty roads; keep feet, armpits and crotch clean, dry and powdered and finally don't miss a meal.

1-1-44

* * *

Saw the following sign in front of a shack inhabited by several officers:

WELCOME
SUNOVA BEACH HOTEL rates
$1 with straightjacket
$5 without
SECLUDED
10,000,000 miles from everywhere

* * *

I took one of my inflation bags, intended to increase my buoyancy when fording streams, blew it up and found it makes a nice pillow.

* * *

The curiosity of these soldiers in a jungle full of weird insects and rodents has taken a scientific turn. One group, erecting a tent, came across a snake about four or five feet long and little thicker than a broom handle. Instead of killing it, as some were inclined to do, they got strings and pegs and staked it to the ground, speculated on its source, its sex, its name, its species. its usefulness, its attitude toward friendly human beings and its diet. This done, they forced an atabrine tablet down its throat and waited. Nothing happened. They opened a jungle kit and fed it one of every kind of tablet they could find. Still nothing happened. A soldier lugging a five-gallon can passed, saw the crowd and stopped to watch. The can contained gasoline. They took some and poured it down the snake's throat. The snake didn't die. Someone suggested making a pet of it. An argument developed over whose snake it was. Someone said look and pointed at the snake It was dead. Now they're wondering what killed it.

1-1-44

* * *

My five-foot friend, Pfc. Clarence Brown of Camden, N.J., working with pick and shovel the other day, told me that the army is like a big WPA project.

Gets Red Cross Overseas Post

Weekly Review - B'ham, Ala.

2-5-44

47

Washington, D. C.—James E. Jackson (right), first Negro to be appointed as accountant by the American Red Cross, is congratulated by Jesse O. Thomas, assistant to the Red Cross administrator of general services. He will serve as club accountant for Negro-staffed Red Cross clubs in Great Britain.

Mr. Jackson was formerly employed as finance officer by the Philadelphia regional office of the War Manpower Commission, assigned to the National Youth Administration in the State of New Jersey.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(SNS)—First Negro to serve the American Red Cross as an accountant, James E. Jackson, of Camden, N. J., has arrived safely in England, the Red Cross announced this week. In his overseas post Mr. Jackson will act as accountant for several Negro-staff Red Cross clubs for servicemen on leave in the British Isles.

Before his Red Cross appointment, Mr. Jackson was employed as finance officer by the Philadelphia regional office of the War Manpower Commission, assigned to the National Youth Administration in the State of New Jersey. His home was in Camden, N. J., where his wife, Mrs. Alma Gray Jackson, is a public school teacher.

He was graduated from high school at Fairmont, W. Va., and studied accounting at West Virginia State College, at Institute, W. Va.

1-30-44

In joining the Red Cross staff, Mr. Jackson followed the lead of his former supervisor in the War Manpower Commission, Howard M. Stoner, who is a Red Cross assistant field director. In his new job he sees an opportunity for his "most effective contribution to the war effort and to the betterment of relations between the races." He is one of many Negroes serving in Red Cross clubs in all theaters of war.

Accountant With Red Cross

Daily World, Atlanta, Ga
1-30-44

WASHINGTON, D. C. — James E. Jackson (right), first Negro to be appointed as accountant by the American Red Cross, is congratulated by Jesse O. Thomas, assistant to the Red Cross administrator of general services. He will serve as club accountant for Negro-staffed Red Cross clubs in Great Britain.

Mr. Jackson was formerly employed as finance officer by the Philadelphia regional office of the War Manpower Commission, assigned to the National Youth Administration in the state of New Jersey. 1-30-44

Jersey. (Photo by Jerry Waller).

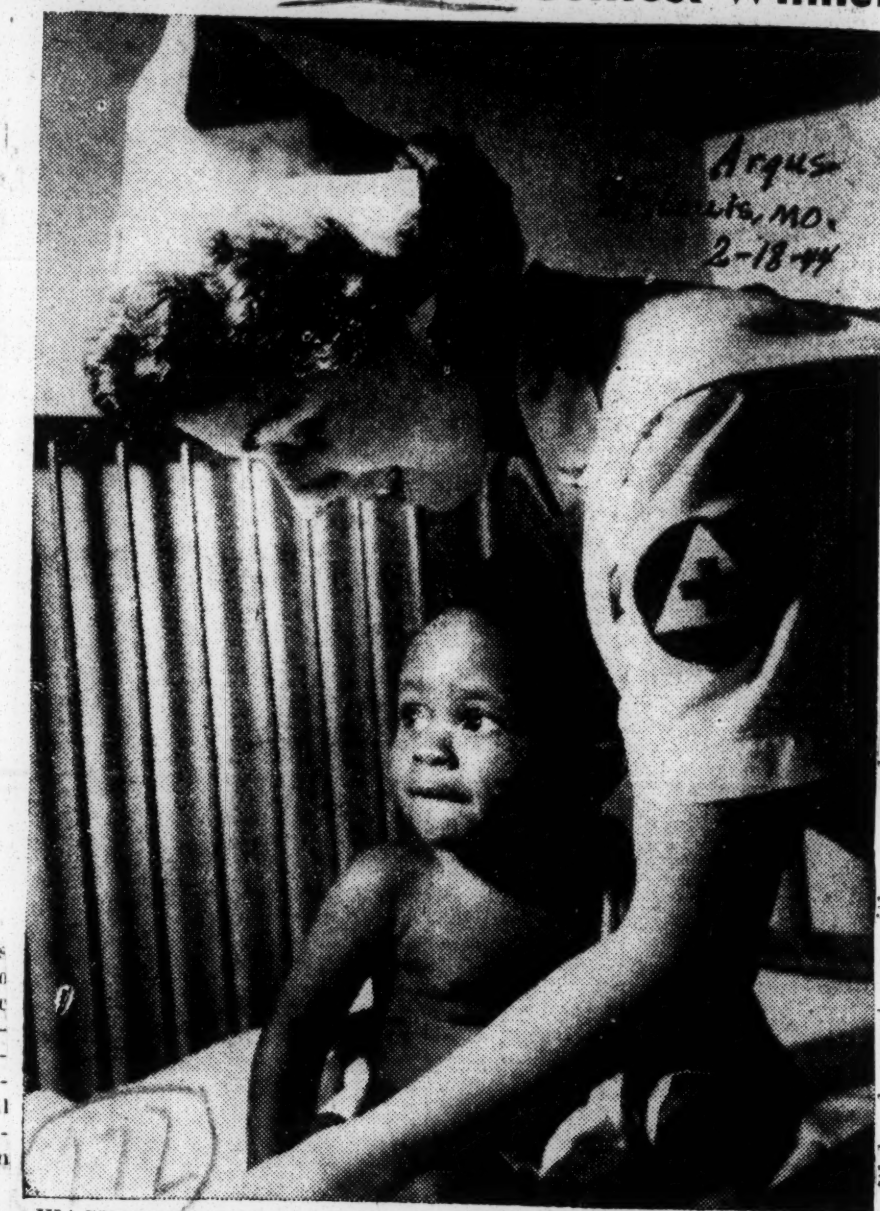
First Accountant

Daily World—Atlanta, Ga.

Is With Red Cross

1-31-44

2nd Place Red Cross Contest Winner



Argus-St. Louis, Mo.
2-18-44

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Second place in the monthly contest of the National Photo Awards of the American Red Cross went to Toni Frissell, 480 Lexington avenue, New York City, for her entry entitled "Nurse's Aide," showing a Red Cross Nurse's Aide bathing a baby in Bellevue Hospital.

The award included a $100 War Saving Bond, contributed by the Photographic Society of America, to the winners. 2-18-44

The Red Cross will soon launch a gigantic drive for funds to carry on its important service.

—Photo from American Red Cross, Washington, D. C.

EX-AID MAKES CHARGES

Argus-St. Louis, Mo.

Says Bias Exists In Fighting Zones

2-18-44

NEW YORK, Feb. 16—William Fisher, former U. of Texas instructor and former American Red Cross assistant field director in a Camp in Cairo charged in an article in the New York P.M. Feb. 15, that the Red Cross had allowed itself to be associated with Jim Crowism in the minds of soldiers serving throughout North Africa and the Middle East.

Faulk said while the Red Cross disclaims official responsibility for its inability to wipe out discrimination, he found to his surprise many of his superiors had decidedly prejudiced views toward the Negro soldier. He stated that he was constantly reminded by them that he was sent overseas by U. S. money to maintain the status quo, and was denied his request to be stationed with Negro troops.

Cites Attitude

He reported one of his superiors as saying to him: "You don't understand the nigger problem, although you're a Southener. You have to make them sweat." The superior, existed "an universal distrust in Faulk said, had been a Brooklyn policeman. "It would be hard for anyone to understand what Negro troops have to put up with," he said.

Faulk said he had talked with hundreds of Negro service men regarding "do come in, you're colored," which, he said, was as in keeping with Negroes enter the away as barring them Faulk collected Negro folk lore in rural Texas and Louisiana on Rosenwald fellowship before shington, Harold G. An- Red Cross Publicity Di- the war.

s quoted as saying "our e open to white and tend dances.

Admits them to clubs at fur-clubs

rector is quo

2-18-44

471-1944

Red Cross

At Birthday Party On Guadalcanal

Atlanta Daily World ATLANTA(3), Ga

11-28-44

GUADALCANAL — Celebrants receive presents at a birthday party sponsored by American Red Cross for enlisted men in service club here. The men are, left to right, Jimmy Golightly GM 3/c, Oklahoma City, Okla; Sgt. Louis August, Miami, Fla.; Truman Wayne Flood, S 1/c, Tulsa, Okla.; Pvt. Clarence Thomas, Detroit, Mich.; Pfc. Hozel Florence, Miami, Fla.; Sgt. Mitchel Wahlen, Chicago, Ill.; Sgt. John H. Scott, St. Louis, Mo.; Miss Mabel Tibbitts American Red Cross, Marquette, Mich.; Sgt. Elvan Whiteleather Effingham, Ill.; Pvt. Mike Maples Youngstown, Ohio.

American Red Cross Service Club Opens In English Town; Jesse Chiles Heads Staff

2.4.N.Y.

HULL, England.—"We made it!" beamed American Red Cross Club Director Jesse Chiles, 835 Beecher street, Walnut Hill, Cincinnati, Ohio, to a bleary but happy, only half an hour before the official opening ceremony at a large, new Red Cross club in this seaport town.

Newsweek 9-2-44

In 24 hours, Chiles, with his American Red Cross staff of two, Miss Wilma Smith, 1320 Burdette avenue, Cincinnati, and Miss Helen Bruce, 528 Ninth street, Muskogee, Okla., had completely closed down one club in the same city, and reopened full scale operations in another.

The old club could no longer accommodate the hundreds of GI's who had homesteaded there. Consequently it was a matter of pride to the club staff that they could accomplish the Herculean task of changing the club from one location to another without depriving American soldiers of a place to eat and sleep for one single day.

The official opening ceremony, at which the club was turned over to the U. S. Army, entailed elaborate preparation, and was attended by a large number of British townspeople who had assisted in the breakneck conversion project. Flowers were showered on the staff, and were massed in every corner of the spacious canteen and recreation hall.

Highlighting a varied two-hour program of music was Mrs. Margaret Simms, American Red Cross entertainer known in the States as the "Songbird of the South." Chaplain W. L. Bell, 82 Weeden street, Augusta, Fla., led a made chorus of Negro enlisted men. Rounding out the afternoon's show were soloists and choral groups from the city.

A formal speech of acceptance was made by Lt. Col. G. C. Heldenfels, of Beeville, Texas, U. S. Army Port Commander, in reply to Mr. H. H. Palmer, Skowhegan, Maine, American Red Cross zone executive, who turned the club over to the Army.

Included among the large cross-section of enthusiastic allied boosters present at the opening were the Lord Mayor and Lady Mayoress of Hull; the Sheriff and Sheriff's Lady, and other city officials; representatives of the British Army and Navy; members of the British Red Cross; representatives of the Ministry of Works, Food and Labor, the clergy and a large corps of British volunteers.

9-2-44

Here's A Busy Nurse's Aide

Amsterdam News — New York, N.Y.

11-25-44

11-26-44

MRS. ROSEBUD MARTIN, Red Cross volunteer nurse's aide, helps this young patient of Pittsburgh's Presbyterian Hospital get well and strong again with devoted care. Mother of two children, Mrs. Martin makes time in her busy schedule for community service outside the home. She serves as a nurse's aide from 7 p. m. to 11 p. m. daily, and has given a total of 648 hours to this service at Presbyterian Hospital. She is now recruiting a new class for Red Cross nurse's aide training in her community. In addition, Mrs. Martin is chairman of the House Committee and a member of the Committee on Management of the YWCA, and a sponsor for the Girls' Friendly Society of the Holy Cross Episcopal Church.—American Red Cross pohto.

ENLISTS RED CROSS WORKERS

Pittsburgher Kansas City
12-29-44 Kansas

Washington, D. C.—Mrs. Mary Cheney, newly appointed assistant to the Director of Employment, American National Red Cross, will assist in recruiting Negro personnel for overseas assignment.

Before joining the Red Cross staff, Mrs. Cheney was secretary to Mrs. Izetta Jewel Miller, Federal Works Agency, in Washington. Prior to that, she was women's page editor of the Chicago News-Ledger in Chicago, and a correspondent for the Chicago Defender in New York City. She served as personnel director of an educational survey sponsored by the U. S. Department of Interior, and was personnel supervisor of the Federal Theater Project, both in New York.

Mrs. Cheney is a member of Phi Delta Kappa sorority, New York chapter, and has been an active volunteer worker for the NAACP in New York. (Photo by Dan Riordan, Red Cross Photographer.)

CHICAGOANS MEET LORD MAYOR IN ENGLAND

Chicago Defender Ill. 12-23-44

Ligon Buford, front row left, and Miss Josephine Matson, front row right, American Red Cross workers stationed in England, were recent guests of the Lord Mayor of Lancashire and his wife, front row center, and friends. Lord Mayor Eccles congratulated Buford and Miss Matson on the great job they are doing in Manchester conducting a Red Cross club for American and Allied soldiers. Buford, who recently returned to the U. S. on leave, and Miss Matson are both Chicago residents. — Harry Wilkinson photo.

St. Louisan Among Six New Red Cross Aides Overseas

Argus — St. Louis, Mo.
5-12-44

WASHINGTON, D.C.— Safe arrival in England of six women for assignment to Negro-staffed clubs was announced this week by the American Red Cross. The group includes one assistant club director, one personal service director and four staff assistants. They are: Minnie Mae Street, assistant club director, 2308 W. Chestnut street, Louisville, Ky.; Marie Cathryn Wilburn, personal service director, 4201 Cook avenue, St. Louis, Mo.; Ida Billee Wood, staff assistant, 306 S. Maple street, Somerset, Ky.; Alice Rae Meatham, staff assistant, 1919 3rd street, N.W., Washington, D.C.; Margaret Cormick Lamb staff assistant, Hampton Institute, Hampton, Va.; Grace Smith, staff assistant, 717 Dennison street, Dayton, Ohio. 5-12-44

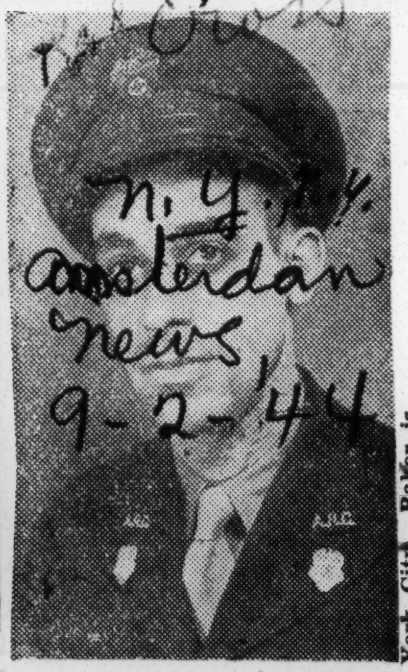
Miss Wilburn is a graduate of Stowe College, St. Louis, Mo., and Atlanta University School of Social Work. She taught school in Clayton, Mo., and later was employed as a clerk and placement secretary by the St. Louis Urban League.

5-12-44

MARIE CATHRYN WILBURN, 4201 Cook avenue, St. Louis, Mo., personal service director, whose safe arrival in England is announced by American Red Cross.

On Duty In India

N. Y. Amsterdam News 9-2-'44



BLANCHARD A. BAKER, American Red Cross club director, whose safe arrival in India was announced last week, is a resident of 555 Edgecomb Avenue, New York City. Baker is one of 150 Negroes now serving overseas with the Red Cross. Before his Red Cross appointment, Baker was YMCA Boys' Secretary in Montclair, N. J., and previously directed a USO club in Portsmouth, Va., was activities secretary for the Harlem Y.M.C.A., New York City, and executive director for the Stamford, Conn., Negro Community Center. Mrs. Baker will remain in New York during his service overseas.

471-1944

Red Cross

Drives Red Cross Jeep Over In England

World - Memphis, Tenn. 10-20-44

ENGLAND—At the wheel of a Red Cross jeep is Elizabeth McDougald, of New York City, director of an American Red Cross Club in Great Britain. Miss McDougald arrived in England early in 1943 as a personal service director and was assigned to London's first Negro-staffed club, the Duchess. She was formerly a social service worker on the research staff of Fisk University. She is the daughter of Cornelius McDougald, New York City, and Mrs. Gertrude E. Ayer.—Photo by American Red Cross.

Hero's Wife Won't Help Red Cross

Afro American
Baltimore, Md.

NEWARK, N.J. — "I will have nothing to do with the Red Cross," said pretty, plump brown-skin Mrs. Grace Gibson of 94 Barclay Street. 3-18-44

As she talked, she looked at the photograph of her husband, Cpl. Carl Gibson, who is hailed as a hero for leading a rescue party through a drenched minefield near Rome to save twenty-four wounded men.

"I am proud of my husband. I hope nothing happens to him. I ...pporting the war effort 100 ...n' but

"By segregating the blood of colored people and white people, the Red Cross is helping to keep alive the very thing our soldiers are trying to destroy.

Don't Give Best Protest

"The best form of protest against the Red Cross jim crow is not to support it at all. That is the stand I believe my husband would want me to take despite whatever aid the Red Cross is giving soldiers on the battlefield.

"Our men are fighting to destroy the ideal of racial superiority. They are fighting and dying along with men of other races because they believe in freedom and equality."

The Gibson's 9-year-old son cuddled up to his mother as she spoke. 3-18-44

Corporal Gibson was cited by Capt. Benjamin Bender, medical officer, for going through the mined field to carry wounded men out.

"I know he would something like that," Mrs. Gibson said. "When he was home he was always helping someone."

Former Insurance Man

Prior to induction the corporal was special officer for an insurance company. He was inducted in May, 1942, and has been overseas a year. His home town is Newport, R.I.

Mrs. Gibson is the former Miss Grace Watkins of NYC. Two other Gibson boys are William, with the Merchant Marine, and John, in the Army.

Red Cross Club In North Africa Has Mixed Staff

Defender, Chicago, Ill
3-25-44

SOMEWHERE IN NORTH AFRICA—(ANP)—There is one spot where the armed forces go in North Africa that they find a true picture of democracy at work. That is in the popular "Oasis" Red Cross club where Clifford Minto is serving as acting director and as field director also.

There are four professional workers, all American, working in this club under Minto's direction. Two are white and two are colored. One of the white girls is a graduate of Hunter college, New York, where she received her A.B. degree. She was formerly employed by the public welfare department in New York City. The other has both an A. B. and A. M. degree from the University of Michigan, is a writer and has had stage experience as well. 3-25-44

One of the colored workers is a graduate of West Virginia State college; the other has an A. B. from Columbia university and was formerly a teacher in the public schools of Washington, D. C.

There are a number of non-professional members in the staff. These include French, Arabs and Jews. Cooperation and effective work has been the record of the club.

Tells Of 20 Months Overseas With Red Cross Club Workers

Argus - St. Louis, Mo.

Interested listeners crowded every available space of the lecture room and hallway at the Wheatley YWCA last Sunday afternoon to hear Miss Geraldine Dyson, returned Red Cross worker on rotation leave, tell of her oversea observations. 8-18-44

Graphically and dramatically related were her experiences from the sea-sick passenger bound for parts unknown to the greeting in London by Sidney Williams and of her work in Africa and Italy. After weeks of internship she was sent to historic Casablanca, where she, with her co-workers, set up a Red Cross Club from "scratch." Despite the difficulty of acquiring necessary equipment (a period of months being often required to secure paper napkins) they soon had a library, snack bar, game room, and lounge to serve thousands of G.I. Joes. 8-18-44

The same thing was done in Italy and in both clubs they met the same type of problems: keeping the drunkest drunk contented (they were never turned away) serving as very competent M. P.'s, being the mother to them, counseling them about family difficulties, dancing and entertaining them, and in every way trying to keep the soldier happy.

"Homesickness," said Miss Dyson, "is the hardest thing for the G.I. to endure" and she encouraged the folk back home to write cheering letters to the soldier over there and to write them often.

American Red Cross Club In Naples, Italy — New Yr. E., All-Negro Staff, Free From Discrimination

6-10-44

NAPLES, Italy. — During an inspection tour of all American Red Cross club installations, here recently, Major General Arthur R. Wilson, in command of the Peninsular Base Section, manifested particular interest in the latest addition to the list. This was the Liberty Club for enlisted men, which continues the name and tradition of a similar club which until recently the Red Cross operated in Casablanca. Though the new Liberty Club in Naples has an all-Negro staff, as in the case of all Red Cross clubs, its use is not restricted to Negro troops; and American enlisted men of all races frequent it in numbers.

Another point of interest for the General was the ...ning of its elaborate program of movies, stage shows, concerts and walls by the GI discussion groups, are: Assistant ...rees, Pvt. Roy B. Director Geraldine Dyson, 4128 En...cock street, Brook... right avenue, St. Louis, who for... Cpl. Singleton L. merly taught physical education in ...Dickson street, St. the public schools there; and Sara ...though Pvt. Hewitt R. Johnson, 12 Upton street, Cam... the employ of a bridge, Mass., who served with the ...painting firm, Cpl. Boston Soldiers' and Sailors' Recre... ...er before done any ation Committee during 1941-42. ...work. Neither man 6-10-44 "You've done a fine job here, and ...d a mural before. I'm delighted." was General Wil... for the most part son's comment as he finished his in... ...orous side of Army spection of the club. His special in... ...e considered terest in it dates from the time when ...he officiated at the opening of its Cross Workers, and was under ...Sidney Williams, predecessor, the Casablanca Liberty ...verseas for the Red Club. The latter, like the one in ...did social work in Naples today, was staffed by Negroes ...the same direction, Sidney Williams and his assistant, Miss Dyson make cannot disturb patrons who want to magazines in the library drowse and dream in luxury of an upholst...

followers on by themselves in a great lounge, converted from the kind of paraded cell the noise they

6-10-44

Seven More Red Cross Workers Arrive Safely in Italy; One a St. Louisan

Call — Kansas City, Mo.
7-7-44

AMY ANN BOOTH

7-7-44

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Safe arrival in Italy of seven more Negro Red Cross workers was announced this week by American Red Cross National Headquarters. Five women and two men are in the group, which includes:

Ethelyn A. B. Adger, staff assistant, New York City.

Amy Anna Booth, recreation worker, St. Louis, Mo.

William H. Eberhardt, program director, Greensboro, N. C.

Elizabeth Jackson, recreation worker, Chicago, Ill.

Marie M. Leach, recreation worker, Montclair, N. J.

Raymond Miller, program director, Bridgeport, Conn.

Katherine Richardson Tyler, recreation worker, Dawson, Ga.

Mrs. Adger served as dean of hostesses at the Harlem Defense Recreation Center until her Red Cross appointment, and previously was a buyer for Mme. L. Boses in New York City. 7-7-44

Before joining the Red Cross staff, Mrs. Booth was health recreation secretary for the St. Louis Y. W. C. A. She previously directed recreation for the USO in Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., was a teacher in the Brentwood, Mo., schools, and girls' director of Wesley House in St. Louis. She is a graduate (A.B.) of Lincoln university, Jefferson City, Mo.

Mr. Eberhardt was employed by the Federal Works Agency, Washington, D. C., and previously was a juvenile court worker in Greensboro, principal of Elk Park, N. C., high school, and principal of Cerro Gordo, N. C., elementary school. He is a graduate of A. and T. college, Greensboro, and attended Howard university, Washington, D. C. Mrs. Eberhardt will reside in Washington during his overseas service.

Before her Red Cross appointment, Miss Jackson was a physical education instructor, Chicago Park District, Ill. She is a graduate of Wilson Junior college, Chicago, and Johnson C. Smith university, Charlotte, N. C. She also attended the University of Chicago and George Williams school, Chicago. 7-7-44

Miss Leach was employed by the Social Security Board, Baltimore, Md., before her Red Cross appointment. She attended Pratt Institute, Brooklyn, N. Y. She is the daughter of James E. Leach, of Montclair, N. J.

Mr. Miller, who recently returned to this country after a year's service with the Red Cross in North Africa, has been reassigned. He came to the Red Cross from the Bridgeport, Conn., Y. M. C. A., where he was in charge of work with Negro members. He was program director and later headworker at the Wharton Settlement House in Philadelphia between 1932 and 1942. He attended the University of Iowa, Springfield (Mass.) college, Temple university and Howard university. Mrs. Miller will reside in Philadelphia during his overseas service. 7-7-44

Before coming to the Red Cross, Miss Tyler was a recreational and social hostess at Eglin, Fla. She is a graduate of Allen Normal school, Thomasville, Ga., Knoxville college and Atlanta university.

OTHER PAPERS SAY—

Defender — Chicago, Ill.
6-25-44

THE RED CROSS
(The St. Louis Argus)

The Red Cross organization is now in a drive to raise funds for its annual budget. The service of this organization to humanity is well known to the public. Its service has been and still is of great benefit to the men and women in the armed forces of the United States as is attested by thousands of men and women of our race who have benefited because the Red Cross has answered their appeal for assistance in so many ways. The unborn baby is depending on the Red Cross to carry the news of its arrival to "daddy" overseas; the mother is depending upon the Red Cross to administer to her needs.

Help the Red Cross that it may in turn help those who cannot help themselves.

Of course we do not approve of the attitude of the National Red Cross in the matter of the blood bank and shall continue our fight against its undemocratic practice, but despite its attitude toward the blood bank it is rendering a service we need. Help the Red Cross drive.

A Tribute To Race Troops

Courier — Pittsburgh, Pa.

Red Cross Opens New Liberty Club In Italy

By OLLIE HARRINGTON, Courier War Corespondent

NAPLES, Italy—The American Red Cross formally opened its new Liberty club in the shadow of the famous Garibaldi statute, the bomb-spattered memorial to Italy's great liberator. The new club is staffed entirely by Negro personnel and it situated in an area predominantly occupied by colored troops. 5-6-44

Director of the new club is Sidney Williams, on leave of absence from the Cleveland Urban league. Mr. Williams is to be assisted by Miss Geraldine Dyson, St. Louis, Mo., and Miss Sarah Johnson, Boston, Mass.

MURALS CARRY THEME

They opened the first Liberty club in a badly damaged movie theatre which had been completely reconstructed by members of a colored Engineer Battalion under the direction of 1st. Lt. Thomas W. Jackson Harrisburg, Pa. Mural decorations for the building were executed by Cpl. Singleton Harris, St. Louis, Mo., and Pvt. Roy Hewlett, Brooklyn, N. Y. Theme of the murals is the part colored Americans have played in the fight for liberty and democracy since Crispus Attucks fell on the Boston Common. 5-6-44

The new club was dedicated last Sunday. A large group of the civilian population of Naples was entertained along with hordes of G.I.s. All people employed by the club are Italian civilians and are under the supervision of T/Sgt. Robert Smith, Washington, D. C., Pvt. George Pottinger, Brooklyn, N. Y., and Pvt. Sam Reed, St. Paul, Minn., brother of Dwight Reed, of football fame.

Red Cross Workers Report On Services In Three Different Theatres Of War

Age — New York, N. Y.
6-3-44

WASHINGTON, D. C.—American Red Cross operations overseas were reported this week by four Red Cross workers recently returned from duty in three different theaters of war, the Office of War Information said. The workers were Mrs. Dorothy B. Hamilton, of Greensboro, N. C., who served as staff assistant with the Red Cross in Great Britain; George W. Goodman, of Washington, D. C., who was director of the Great George Street Club in Bristol; Raymond E. Miller, of Bridgeport, Conn., club program director in North Africa, and Sylvester Lee Reeder, Washington, D. C., field director in the South Pacific.

The four are among a total of 139 Negro men and women (50 men and 89 women who have been on assignment with the Red Cross in Nergo-staffed clubs and with service men on active duty in four theaters of war. Of these, 31 are in Australia, seven in the China-Burma-India theater, 77 in Great Britain, and 24 in North Africa. They include six field directors and assistant field directors; one assistant field director (recreation); eight recreation workers; 21 club directors; 19 assistant club directors; 22 program directors; 18 asistant program directors; 16 personal service directors, and 28 staff assistants. 6-3-44

Mrs. Hamilton served in two clubs during her eight-month stay in Great Britain. In addition, she was on special assignment for a while with the 200-voice Negro choir which toured England and Scotland. Before joining the Red Cross staff, she was Girl Reserve secretary in Atlanta (Ga.) YWCA, and prior to that, served as Dean of Freshmen Women at Bennett College in Greensboro, N. C. She received an AB degree from Bennett College and a M.S.W. degree from Atlanta University School of Social Work. 6-3-44

Mr. Goodman, for 16 months the director of one of the largest Red cross Clubs in Great Britain, was executive secretary of the Washington Urban League for three years before he accepted the Red Cross post. For ten years before coming to Washington, he served as executive secretary of the Boston Urban League, and, prior to that, as membership secretary of the Pine Street YMCA in St. Louis and as field executive on the national staff of the Boy Scouts of America. He is a graduate of Lincoln University in Pennsylvania; attended the New York School of Social Work, and received an M. A. degree from Boston University in 1933.

Mr. Miller, who has been on duty in North Africa for the last 12 months as program director of the Red Cross club in Oran, came to Red Cross from the Bridgeport (Conn) YMCA, where he was in charge of work with Negro members. He was program director and later head worker at the Wharton Settlement House in Philadelphia, between 1932 and 1942. He attended the University of Iowa, Springfield (Mass College, Temple University, and Howard University. 6-3-44

Mr. Reeder, who has spent 18 months with the Red Cross in the South Pacific, served as both field director and acting club director in that theater. For 12 years before going overseas, he was employed at national headquarters of the Red Cross in Washington, D. C. He attended Storer College, Morgan College, and Howard University.

Red Cross

Liberia's Women Give $1,000 to Red Cross Work

Globe & Independent
Nashville, Tenn.

Donors Laud Fine Service American Institution Is Performing Abroad

10-27-44

Washington, D. C., (OWI)—Women of the Republic of Liberia, West Africa, gave tangible evidence of their interest in the peoples of war-stricken areas this week when they made a contribution of $1,000, through the National Red Cross of Liberia, to the international work of the American Red Cross.

A check for this amount was brought to Washington this week by Lester A. Walton, United States Minister to Liberia, who is now in this country on official business, and presented to Dr. Louis I. Dublin, assistant to the chairman of the American Red Cross, acting for Richard F. Allen, vice chairman in charge of insular and foreign operations.

10-27-44

Mr. Walton took the occasion to thank the Red Cross for the work that organization is doing for service men in foreign fields. He told Dr. Dublin:

"The broad humanitarian work the Red Cross is doing among our armed forces all over the world is one of the bright spots in an otherwise somber picture."

The minister to Liberia spent four days in Washington conferring with and reporting to officials of the State Department. It was his first trip home in almost two years and he was warmly greeted by many friends in Washington.

10-27-44

A letter from the National Red Cross of Liberia to the American Red Cross, signed by Mrs. Jannette L. Howard-Cooper, president, was presented to Dr. Dublin along with the check.

When Jo Baker Visited Red Cross Club

Daily World — Atlanta, Ga. 11-10-44

SOMEWHERE IN NORTH AFRICA — Josephine Baker and party are shown here with American Red Cross officials when she visited the Victory Red Cross Club in Africa. Seated, left to right, are Capt. Gaston Hanbuck, French Army; Edward R. Rodriguez, Washington, D. C., Club Director; Josephine Baker; Stewart L. Williams, American Red Cross) Red Cross Director for North Africa. Standing left to right: Condine Chonez, Elizabeth Jackson, Chicago, Club Program Director; Violette Jaquimini; Chequita Lonewolf, secretary, Washington, D. C., an unidentified member of Miss Baker's party, and Rachel Windsor, Weston, Mass.—(Photo from:

11-10-44

Red Cross Women Cheer Ledo Boys

World — Memphis, Tenn.

11-10-44

By EVELIO GRILLO

WITH THE U. S. ARMY IN CHINA, BURMA AND INDIA — (ANP)— Since Director Blanchard Baker and his staff of Red Cross workers took over the enlisted men's club at Ledo base, things have been jumping.

Things, of course, were bound to jump when the Red Cross sent Jeanette Dorsey of Cuthbert, Ga.; Willie Lee Johnson, Austin, Texas; Virginia Bailey, Boston, and Fay Sandifer, New York, to work among the builders of the Ledo road.

They were the first of our girls that many of the men in this area had seen in over two years. Although the girls have been rushed off their feet since they arrived in Assam, it has not prevented the development of a well-rounded and popular program of recreational activities for the GI's that crowd the club each day.

Take, for instance, the first weekly cabaret party, a real innovation in entertainment up this way. I walked in on Jeannette, Wil Virginia and Fay, just as th were putting the finishing touc ed to decorations for the evenit

The men of Company "B" f the new well-known "Hairy Ears" unit were the guests at the inaugura party. This was the first time since leaving the states that this group has had the opportunity to dance with American girls.

No cabaret party could merit the name, without a floor show, and Program Director Felix Payne of Washington, D. C., and his soldier assistant, 1st Sgt. Arthur Bowles also of Washington, saw to it that a first rate program was on hand.

11-10-44

Other members of the band included Cpl. Courtland Carter, Pvt. James Buxton, and Pvt. Samuel Nelson, all of New York; Paul Gonzales, Rhode Island; Cpl. Walter Gordon, Calif.; Cpl. Ernest Cotton, Tenn.; Pvt. Albert Graves, Kansas; Pvt. Joseph Drew, Chicago; Pvt. William Goosbie, Penn.; Pvt. Albert Richardson, Indiana; Cpl. Aldridge Gibson, Penna.; Sgt. Roy Lomba, Mass.; Pvt. Ronnie Lewis, Texas and Sgt. James Mann.

Adventures in a Red Cross office

A MAN at the Brooklyn Chapter of the American Red Cross phoned us last week and said we ought to do a story about Mrs. Sady Williams, intake supervisor at the Williamsburg branch office. Most residents of that section were very poor and the additional burdens that war has thrust on its wives and mothers have very often been just a little too much to bear. "Mrs. Williams," he explained, "is mothering half the community out there."

So we took down the address, 60 Graham Ave., and went out. It is a neighborhood where old frame buildings look as though they should be haunted and where signs on dusty shop windows are lettered in many tongues. We climbed the stairs to the second floor of the red brick building where the Red Cross offices are and landed in a large, gloomy reception room.

Bed in an office

Some 50 men and women were sitting in chairs lined against one wall, facing a row of tiny offices where interviews were going on. Most of the sitters had letters or government forms in their hands and they sat silently.

We were directed down the hall and Mrs. Williams, a round-faced Negro woman wearing glasses, welcomed us into her small, bare-walled office. It was equipped with two old-fashioned chairs, three desks and a bed. We asked why the bed was there. "We have to have it," she said, "for women who faint." She explained that the fainters usually were women who had received telegrams from the War Department about sons who had been killed or wounded.

"They seem to come here the minute they get them," Mrs. Williams told us. "Often they are hysterical before they get to the door. We can hear them coming up-stairs."

We asked if any recent case had stuck in her mind as dramatic.

"Oh, my, they're all dramatic," she said. "This is a place of crisis." She thought a moment, then added: "There was a girl in here not long ago who had us all worked up. Everybody was simply straining to help her. She was a charming little thing and in bad trouble.

Ticket to happiness

"She was pregnant and unmarried. Her soldier boy friend was in a Southwestern camp. She said she was too embarrassed to come right out and ask him to marry her. He didn't know of her condition. desperate.

"We wired our field man at the camp to see her to and learned that the boy had been alerted by his parents had and was due to ship out at any moment. She was

Mrs. Sady Williams, intake supervisor for Williamsburg branch of Brooklyn Red Cross.

He told our man he would gladly marry the girl, whom he said he loved, if he could get home. This, of course, was impossible. We bought a train ticket for the girl and rushed her off to his camp.

"Here in the office we were holding our breath, fearing she would be too late. She just made it. They were married down there by the chaplain. When she came back she came in to thank us. She was so pretty and happy we hardly recognized her. We sure got worked up about that girl." Mrs. Williams's face broke into a warm grin.

Through the thin partition we had been hearing other voices and we noticed that Mrs. Williams was giving them half an ear. Suddenly she said, "That worries me," and excused herself. She was back in a few minutes, looking relieved.

She told us a serviceman's wife had just phoned; her baby was ill with pneumonia and she was ill, too. The doctor had just said he would not visit her again because she was unable to pay him.

We asked what the Red Cross would do.

"We're phoning the doctor and guaranteeing payment of his bill," she said. "Then a case worker will call on the mother and see what else is needed."

Problems were piling up. What were some of the others that had come into the office that day, we asked. Here are a few Mrs. Williams told us about:

Hundreds of troubles

First thing that morning a man who was slated to enter the Army had come in with this story: When he passed his physical he thought he would be inducted soon, so he quit his job. But the call to the colors hadn't come when he had expected, and now his money was gone and his family destitute. The Red Cross arranged to take care of his family until his Army check comes through.

A mother who hadn't heard from her soldier son in three months came in distracted. The boy's name was referred to the Foreign Correspondence Bureau, which will report back.

A discharged veteran who couldn't get his old job back because his service had affected his health got help in filing a claim. He wil get further help in obtaining disability compensation if he's entitled to it.

Then Mrs. Williams went through some papers on her desk and came up with a chart. "We handled 645 cases like that last week," she said. "We had a few unmarried mothers who had borne children to servicemen. I'm proud of the job we do with cases like that. The men nearly always want to do the right thing, sending back money and promising marriage as soon as they get home."

Inherited a need

Did all these problems, we asked, carry over into Mrs. Williams's private life. Her brow puckered. "You know, that worries me," she said. "I forget the office the second I leave it. We've done our best, so I don't worry. Now, that isn't right, is it? All the people who get along seem to think about their work 24 hours a day."

We said she seemed to be getting along pretty well, and asked what had led to her appointment as intake supervisor. She dropped her head to one side and appeared to be thinking. At last she said: "You want to give a service, and you want to give it so badly you keep trying and trying, and finally a way will come for you to give it."

What was behind this need of hers to serve?

"Oh, nearly everyone has it. I think," she said. "In my case I suppose I inherited it from my father. Before his death, he owned two shops in Washington where he made special shoes for people suffering with foot deformities. He felt he was helping humanity a little that way."

Mrs. Williams, who is the wife of Dr. Joseph A. Williams, a dentist with offices in Brooklyn and Manhattan, was graduated from Teachers College, in Washington, D. C., and then got a teaching position in Harlem.

"The inability of some children to meet the educational standards worried me," she said, "so I began to study child welfare and child psychology so that I could do something about it."

She has worked as a home relief supervisor, and in the children's division of the Department of Welfare, but has been with the Red Cross for the last two years. She also is president of the New York Chapter of the Negro Business and Professional Women's Club of America and edits Responsibility. She has two grown daughters.

Her guiding principle, she told us, was that "The best way to make sure I get what I need is to see that my neighbor gets what he needs."

"Has your color ever been a hindrance in your work?" we asked her.

"I just don't think about being a Negro," Mrs. Williams said. "That seems to make other people forget it, too. My color certainly hasn't stood in my way at the Red Cross."

Just then our photographer got set, and he interrupted with his request to "Look pleasant."

Mrs. Williams turned toward him with an easy smile and said, "I always try to."

Works For Our Boys

AT THE WHEEL OF A RED CROSS JEEP, Miss Elizabeth McDougald, well known New Yorker, works at her job of directing the Red Cross Club in Great Britain. Miss McDougald arrived in England early in 1943 as a personal service director and was assigned to London's first Negro-staffed club, the Duchess. The daughter of Mrs. Gertrude E. Ayer and Mr. Cornelius McDougald of this city, she was formerly a member of the research staff at Fisk University.

Arrive In Australia

10-28-44

WASHINGTON. — (ANP) — Three Negro American Red Cross workers have arrived in Australia, it was announced at Red Cross National Headquarters this week. All three previously served with the Red Cross at Ft. Huachuca. They are: Alma M. Priestly, hospital social worker, 4827 Chestnut street, New Orleans; Elizabeth P. Green, hospital recreation worker, 1333 Monticello street, Pittsburgh, and Esther Bakker, secretary, 1709 Before her Red Cross appointment in April, 1943, Miss Baker was employed by the Southern Pacific Railway company, San Francisco, and Merchants Express corporation, Oakland. She is a graduate of Urbana high school and attended the University of Illinois.

Miss Green, daughter of Mrs. Lillian R. Green, joined the Red Cross staff in October, 1942, when she was assigned to Ft. Huachuca. She was employed previously by the Juvenile Aid bureau, New York City, and by the New York Department of Welfare. She is a graduate of Westinghouse high school. Pitts-

E. P. Priestley, has been in Red Cross service since August, 1943. Before the she was employed by the War Production board, Washington, and by the New Orleans Housing authority. She is a graduate of Xavier high school, Xavier business college and Xavier university, A.B., 1934.

Red Cross Women

Defender—Chicago. Ill

Ex-Omaha scholar directs Red Cross club in London

Tribune-Los Angeles, Calif.
6-26-44

LONDON.—Lucyle McAlister of Omaha, Neb., has finshed her job as director of Negro work for the USO after visiting 37 of the 48 states, and has joined the American Red Cross as assistant director of operations at the Red Cross' Duchess Club here.

Miss McAlister, who is Mrs. Emment Avant of Omaha, in private life — has been busy at the Duchess Club setting up the machinery for various phases of club life. Her latest job was organizing the club library. It's finished now and a neat catalogue of library books, plus a card index for names of boys who take them out, awaits the Negro soldiers on leave in London.

Honor graduate of Omaha's Central High School, Miss McAlister took her teacher's training at the University of Nebraska and served as principal in schools in Kentucky for six years. During summer holidays she woked in banks, insurance companies and law firms.

After serving as supervisor of the model school at Kentucky State College and holding the same responsible position at the Kentucky State Feeble-Minded Institute, she went back to college and took her B.A. at Louisville Municipal College and her M.A. in Sociology at Fisk University.

6-26-44

The scope of her educational background is suggested by her Masters thesis on "Prominent Persons of Negro Blood in Brazilian Society," in four languages: Portuguese, English, French and German.

will bring to his audiences a first-hand account of the operation of Red Cross clubs there. As director of the Great George Street Club in Bristol, Mr. Goodman has supervised the provision of recreational eating and sleeping facilities for thousands of servicemen on leave in that area. Operation of such clubs, as well as the continuation of many other Red Cross services to the armed forces, constitute the major part of the Red Cross program. The Red Cross War Fund campaign, which will open March 1, has as its national goal the sum of $200,000,000, ninety per cent of which will be spent for services to the armed forces. 2-12-44

Mr. Goodman attended high school in Hartford, Conn., and holds degrees from Lincoln University and Boston University. He also attended the New York School of Social Work. He served for a short time as field secretary for the Boy Scouts of America in New York City, and as membership secretary of the Pine Street YMCA in St. Louis, Mo. After ten years in the employ of the Boston Urban League, he came to Washington, D. C. with the Urban League, where he served until his Red Cross appointment.

While in this country, Mr. Goodman may be reached through national headquatrers of the American Red Cross. Organizations desiring to secure him as a speaker should contact the executive officers of the local Red Cross chapter.

George Goodman Back From England; Speaks For Red Cross Fund

Age-New York, N.Y.
2-12-44

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Among overseas Red Cross personnel returning to the United States for speaking assignments in major cities prior to and during the Red Cross War Fund campaign, is George Goodman, director of one of the Negro-staffed Red Cross clubs in Great Britain. Mr. Goodman, former executive secretary of the Washington (D. C.) Urban League, will spend the months of February and March in this country, according to an announcement by Mr. Jesse O. Thomas, assistant to the administrator of general services, American Red Cross.

Having served in Great Britain since October 1942, Mr. Goodman

Wisdom Dictates Support Of Red Cross National War Fund Campaign

Tribune-Philadelphia, Pa.

THE American Red Cross is currently engaged in a nation-wide campaign to raise $200,000,000, the largest goal it has ever set itself. Philadelphia's quota of this fund is $6,543,000. 2-19-44

We believe that colored Americans can give to this drive in this city and elsewhere and, at the same time, continue their strenuous protest against the stupid, undemocratic and un-American policy of collecting and depositing the blood of colored and white donors in separate "banks."

In all fairness to the Red Cross, it ought to be said that the "blood bank" policy is forced upon them by the Army, for whom the blood is being collected. Nevertheless, it is regrettable that not a single Red Cross policy-making official, in Philadelphia or elsewhere, has had the courage or the decency to protest against the Red Cross being used to prosecute a program which has caused such bitter resentment on the part of 15,000,000 loyal citizens.

After all, however, the collection of blood is but one aspect of the Red Cross activities and is a temporary one, occasioned by the national emergency. Its other services have been, in most if not in all cases, available alike to all citizens, irrespective of color.

With these two facts in mind, we believe that colored Americans, in Philadelphia and elsewhere, would be doing themselves a disservice by failing to help the organization achieve its goal; especially when it is understood that such cooperation is not indicative of any lessening of the resentment against the insult implied in the separate "banks," or any letting up in the protest against discriminatory practices of the Red Cross, whether forced on it by the Army or due to some short-sighted Red Cross official who prefers to be un-American and undemocratic. 2-19-44

Let us support the Red Cross drive in Philadelphia even if, as was done in a nearby city, we attached to our contributions a printed slip declaring our relenting fight against the organization's discriminatory policies, whether forced upon it by the Army or arising within the organization itself.

Red Cross Film Makes Apes of Our Soldiers

Afro American-Baltimore, Md.
3-4-44

By MARGARET LEWIS
WASHINGTON

Stooping far below its professed international policy of good-will toward all men, the American Red Cross has aimed another slap at colored service men through a current movie entitled "By His Side," distributed by the War Activities Committee of the War Department.

The only close-up scene of colored soldiers in the reel, depicts them in a stereotyped ante-bellum role, each of the ten or twelve men wearing apish grins, clapping their hands and "yassuhing" as one of their number does a bang-up job on some limehouse boogie-woogie in an ARC club.

Contrast this scene with others in the film, which runs about 12 minutes, where Red Cross nurses are tending the sick and wounded (white only), showing men how to enjoy themselves, writing letters for the seriously wounded who cannot write for themselves, giving material and oral counsel and handing out doughnuts, coffee and phonograph music from clubmobiles, and white soldiers going about normal chores occasioned by war and you get the picture.

Shown as Stevedores

Purportedly made by the March of Time, the only other scenes where colored appear are in the background, loading and unloading trucks, and serving as stevedores. 3-4-44

Not a single colored Red Cross club director, program director, field assistant, or other administrative person is shown. If there is any mixing of the races in ARC Clubs, it is not shown in "By His Side."

Newsmen of the capital were shown the film at Lichtman's Republic Theatre on Wednesday, as guests of Shep Allen and Rufus Byars.

The consensus was that the War Activities Committee and the Red Cross ought to hear the protests of colored Americans to the showing of the race in so contrasting and incongruous a role with that of other soldiers.

Our Fighting Men Should Come First

Journal + Guide—Norfolk, Va.

OPENING of the Red Cross campaign to raise $200,000,000 for war work brought up for renewed discussion the Red Cross policy of segregating the blood of Negro donors to plasma banks. From Washington announcement was made that the policy would be continued. This, we hope, will not cause anyone to withhold a contribution of cash or blood from the Red Cross.

To do so would not result in a change in the policy. It might easily result in the adoption by the Red Cross of a measure of indifference to the needs of our boys in the armed forces. Such a policy is not inconceivable in an organization that would let a white boy die for the want of new blood rather than give him the precious plasma distilled from the fluid of a healthy Negro's veins. 3-11-44

This sort of stigmatization of race in the present global warfare is one of the rejections of the facts of science and of the principles of human brotherhood which must wait on time for correction.

It is something that points up the extremes to which race prejudice may lead. Let us continue to register our astonishment and our disapproval, but let us not demonstrate the same prejudice and cruelty to which we are subjected in this instance. The total welfare of our kin who must do their share of the fighting and the suffering of the horrors of war should come first.

3-11-44

Reports from overseas are to the effect that the Red Cross is ministering in many ways to the health and comfort of all soldiers, regardless of race. These reports have been brought back by responsible members of the race who have witnessed these acts of mercy. Our contributions will serve to get something done that is necesarry now. Remember that behind the racial policies of the Red Cross are the racial policies of our government, of our army and our navy. We deplore these policies, we will do everything in our power to replace them with more civilized action, but we must not do anything now which will bring unnecessary suffering to our men who are out there in the fighting and who are in need of what the Red Cross has to offer them.

Cooking Guide For War Prisoners Ready

Courier, Monroe, La. 4/4
7-11-44

American Red Cross national headquarters has indicated," said Capt. Walter J. Love, recently appointed Prisoner of War representative for the Tuskegee Institute Chapter of the American Red Cross.

TUSKEGEE INSTITUTE, Ala., July 10.—"If American prisoners of war aren't exactly in a position to 'cook with gas,' at least they will get some help on how to cook with supplies at hand.

being shipped in bulk for distribution to prison camps in Europe. standard food packages. American prisoners are Captain Love stated. The is not for general dis-, but one copy is alloted group of 20 to 30 men in camps.

booklet contains recipes structions on how best to

Red Cross Opens More Jobs To Race

Daily World Atlanta Ga. 8-18-44

The American Red Cross is now hiring Negroes as junior and senior corespondents and stenographers, Jesse O. Thomas, Assistant to the Director of General Services of the national organization, revealed in Atlanta Thusday.

This marks another step forward by Negores in the Red Cross organization, which generally had followed a policy of hiring no Negroes on the national staff until Mr. Thomas' appointment.

Mr. Thomas explained that the increased staff was the result of an expanded program in the Red Cross organization which is charged with maintaining the majority of contacts between service men and women and their families. Matters of casualty notification, requests for increased compensation or loans and other numerous personel problems are now handled by the agency. 8-18-44

A short time ago, Mr. Thomas met with directors of the Red Cross and recommended that with the increase in responsibilities and duties of the enemy, Negroes should be employed as correspondents and stenographers. His recommendation was accepted and a directive sent out to the Red Cross employment setup opening up these capacities to Negroes.

Mrs. Vashti Norwood Chandler of Philadelphia, Pa., a graduate of the Atlanta University School of Social Work, was appointed Senior Correspondent and located in Washington. Her first job is to recruit other correspondents and stenographers. Qualified stenographers interested in the $150 monthly jobs with the American Red Cross may contact Mrs. Chandler at headquarters, 18th and "E" Streets, Washington, D. C.

Mr. Thomas revealed that since his appointment to coordinate Negro relations with the Red Cross setup, Negroes hae been named to the staff in such numbers that their yearly pay approaches the $500,000 mark. He stated that there are now open 73 positions for overseas appointments to the Red Cross staff.

Red Cross Head To Continue Old Policy

Atlanta Ga. Daily World 8-15-44

NEW YORK — (SNS) — In response to a letter from Basil O'Connor announcing continuation of the blood plasma segregation policy, Walter White expressed sharp disappointment about the attitude of the newly appointed Red Cross head. In a communication to the latter, Mr. White said: "I had honestly hoped that you would show more courage and forthrightness in your approach to what is one of the most shameful episodes and practices in this war for human liberation."

Referring to the southern orgin of the United States Surgeon General responsible as a single individual for the establishment of the unscientific policy now being protested on all sides, Mr. White pointed out "It had been our hope that the American Red Cross would have the moral courage to admit that it had made a mistake and that it would have initiative enough to say frankly to the Honorary president of the American Red Cross, the President of the United States, and to the Army and Navy that it could not be a party to a practice and doctrine which savors more of Hitler's theory of a "master race" than of a democracy." 8-15-44

Denouncing the excuse made by Basil O'Connor that "From the point of view of all the people of the United States, the present arrangement is the best possible in all of the circumstances," Mr. White declared in closing, "It is this same lack of moral courage which is responsible, from my personal observations in four war theatres of operations, for the surrender to and the spreading by the Red Cross of patterns of segregation and discrimination which hold it not only up to question of its bona fides, but America as well."

Red Cross Club Opens In Cherbourg For Negro Soldiers; Gen. Benj. O. Davis Accepts Honors

Age-New York, N.Y. 8-26-44

CHERBOURG, August 9 (Delayed) —The American Red Cross Liberty Club, officially opened here last night and accepted on behalf of the soldiers by Brig. Gen. Benjamin O. Davis, is staffed by one of the first Negro Red Cross workers to arrive in France.

Club Director Claude Walton, 3015 California street, Denver, Colo., and his assistants, La Verne Birch, 106 Harrison street, Roxbury, Mass., and C. Gladys Martin, Rural Route 2, Topeka, Kan., will operate the club.

Gen. Davis was flown from England in order to be present at the opening ceremonies. Also participating were Lt. Gen. John C. H. Lee, commanding Service of Supply; Maj. R. L. H. Nunn, representing the British Army; and Dr. Paul Renault, Mayor of Cherbourg.

Speaking for the enlisted men who will use the club, Gen. Davis said, "I am sure I convey to the American Red Cross and to the American people your thanks for this gift that gives us somewhere to come to relax." 8-26-44

Gen. Davis pledged to the Americans, to "our allies, the English, and to our hosts, the French," that "the men for whom you are making this club available are going to join with you and give you everything we've got."

To the soldiers themselves, he said, "I have found in the American people a great majority joining with you to see that you get the benefits you deserve from this great struggle. Under conditions of combat and adversity, people become more tolerant. All Americans are going to return home with a feeling of comradeship that has grown here and congealed into mutual respect."

Mr. Walton, Miss Birch and Miss Martin then turned the club over to the soldiers. 8-26-44

Representing them, Pfc. Herman J. Humble, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Humble, 1314 S. East Street, Lebanon, Ind., accepted the club, getting an ovation rivalling the General's from the crowd of soldiers who jammed two floors of the building that had been Cherbourg's largest department store.

Six Negro Women Arrive In England For Red Cross Duty

Informer-Houston, Texas. 8-26-44

WASHINGTON.—(ANP)— Safe arrival in England of six women for assignment to Negro-staffed clubs was announced this week by the American Red Cross. The group includes one assistant club director, one personal service director and four staff assistants. They are: 8-26-44

Minnie Mae Street, assistant club director, 2308 W. Chestnut street, Louisville; Marie Cathryn Wilburn, personal service director, 4201 Cook avenue, St. Louis; Ida Billee Wood, staff assistant, 306 S. Maple street, Somerset, Ky.; Alice Rae Meacham, staff assistant, 1919 3rd street, N. W., Washington, D. C.; Margaret Cormick Lamb, staff assistant, Hampton institute, Va.; Grace Smith, staff assistant, 717 Dennison street, Dayton, O.

Red Cross Employs First Negro Help As Professionals

Amsterdam News New York, N.Y. 10-14-44

WASHINGTON, (ANP)—The National Red Cross has employed Negroes in professional categories in the home service division for the first time in its 62 years of existence, according to an announcement last week.

High praise has already been given the six women senior correspondents employed here in what is known as the Printcraft building. The high calibre of these women is said to be stimulating favorable comment concerning not only their unit production, but their unusual training for the positions they occupy. Jesse O. Thomas, assistant to the administrator of general service, was also lauded for his social engineering skill and the integration of qualified colored employes into the Red Cross service.

Within the near future a colored person may be honored as guest speaker during the graduation exercises of overseas trainees, it was reported. These classes are composed of both Negro and white trainees and are conducted at the American University here.

SOMEWHERE in New Guinea—Trained as a psychiatric social worker, Clara Erline Wells is on duty as a personal service director at American Red Cross Club No. 5. At the club, at remote encampments and in hospitals in this theatre, Miss Wells devotes herself to filling the needs of servicemen far from home.

—American Red Cross Photo

witness as "a perfect example of co-ordination of the Red Cross tradition of immediate action in emergency and of the will of the American people to help those who have been struck by disaster."

R. C. Worker

Amsterdam News 7-1-44 New York, N.Y.

Praise Red Cross For Work In Port Chicago Disaster

Courier—Pittsburgh, Pa. 8-5-44

PORT OF CHICAGO, Calif.—Rehabilitation of damaged homes in this area, wrecked in the twin ship explosion here on July 17, is under way with estimates being gathered by American Red Cross to determine the amount of rebuilding needed to restore families to pre-disaster status. The splendid co-ordinated work of the Red Cross in bringing relief to the military and civilians suffering injuries in this appalling explosion has drawn praise up and down the West Coast.

Although injured, Navy and civilian personnel on the base—many of them Negro men—were cared for by the Navy, the full facilities of the Red Cross were offered and meals were provided for a full detachment of Marine guards whose mess hall had been leveled by the blast. In addition, feeding utensils and equipment for sons were supplied, and stores of blood plasma, initially

Red Cross chapters throughout the area were placed on the alert for disaster personnel and preparation in case of need. Red Cross provided 150 cots and blankets so that the home-less of the Port of Chicago might have a place to sleep. To further the operation of the town, the Red Cross furnished four portable light units Coleman lanterns in the area were placed in operation on a 24-hour basis, and several Coleman stoneman, the shelter and feeding center set up by the Canteen Corps. The entire operation of the Red Cross was described by one eye-

ON SCENE IMMEDIATELY

A few minutes after the Port of Chicago disaster struck, volunteer Red Cross chapter were on their way to the devastated town with relief supplies. Among the first to arrive were Don Cramer, acting director of the Pacific area; Lawrence Woods, field director at Camp Elizabeth McNeily, field representative of the Red Cross Service for the Pacific

471-1944

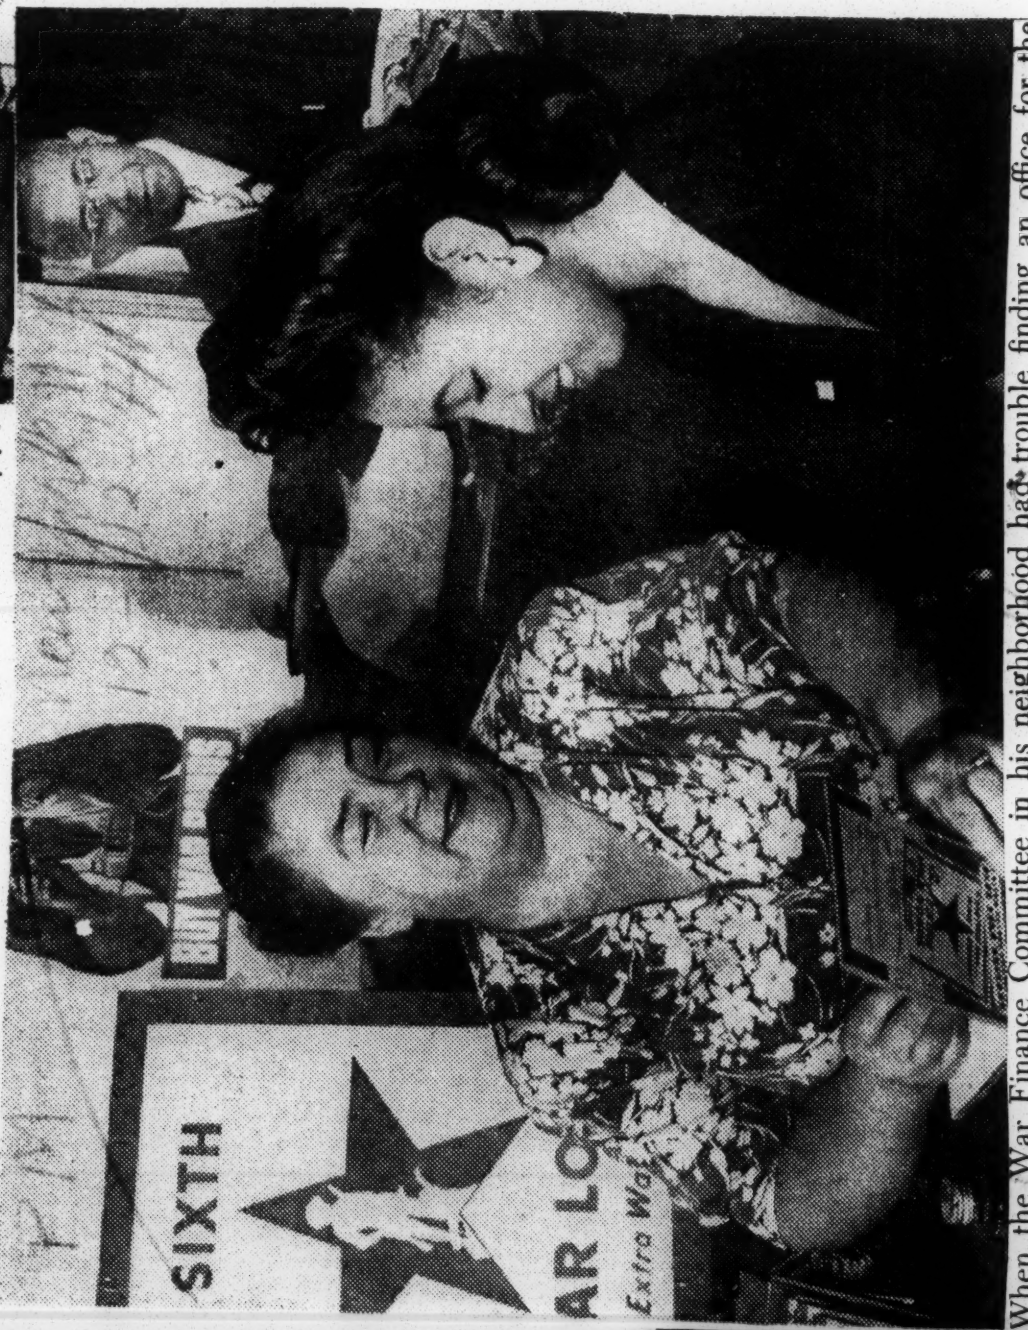
Sixth War Loan Campaign

NEVER TOO LITTLE—Four-year-old Jean Colun, of 2487 Griggs, gets an appreciative grin from Frank N. Isbey, head of the Michigan War Finance Committee, after she presented him with a check for $15,000 in the Sixth War Loan campaign. The check represented a War Bond purchase by the Children's Division of the Metropolitan Funeral System of Detroit.

Call — Kansas City, Mo. 11-24-44

COMPOSE SONGS FOR SIXTH WAR LOAN CAMPAIGN.—Recordings of two songs by Negro composers to be used in the Sixth War Loan drive which began Monday, November 20, have been made by the radio division of the War Finance division. These songs are, "The War Bond Man by Andy Razaf (right), which is sung by Frank Sinatra, and "Thats Why I Buy War Bonds," by J. Rosamond Johnson (left) which is sung by Bob Hanson.

—OWI Photo.



When the War Finance Committee in his neighborhood had trouble finding an office for the Sixth War Loan Drive, Cyril Henry, who operates a tailor store at 433 Edgecombe Ave., offered them half of his shop as an office. While Mrs. Katherine Williams, left, area chairman, and her secretary, Gloria Carol, concentrate on selling Bonds, Henry goes about his business in the back part of the store. (Have you bought your extra Bond in the Sixth War Loan yet? If you havent, get that money up today!)

471-1944

United Seamen's Service

Prince George Hotel Open to Negro Seamen

Norfolk, Va., Pilot
7-18-44

Taken over only yesterday by the United Seamen's Service, the Prince George Hotel, Eighteenth and Church streets, last night was offering rooms to Negro merchant seamen at nominal rates comparable to those charged at the U. S. S. Fairfax Hotel on City Hall avenue, Harold C. Crandall, port area director, announced.

Some 50 seamen can be housed there, and the building was found to be in such fine condition that delay for remodeling will not be necessary. On an advisory committee headed by Horace Christopher, port area executive committeeman and executive secretary of the Huntton YMCA, are J. Eugene Diggs, P. B. Young, Sr., John H. Ward, David E. Longley, W. L. Hamilton, W. T. Mason, F. W. Lewis and David Austin.

Known as the U. S. S. Prince George Hotel Residential Club, the building will provide a snack bar in the section which once was a night club, and volunteer workers will offer entertainment and recreation. Personal services for seamen guests will continue to pass through the port area personal service office in the Taylor building.

7-18-44

Among First Taken Over

Crandall said the Prince George is one of the first hostelries to be taken over by USS for housing Negro seamen. Upwards of 100 such facilities are in operation throughout the world for the service of merchant seamen.

B. E. Davis, owner and proprietor of the Church street hotel, will continue to manage the establishment and will retain his present staff.

"The port area committee," Crandall said, "has realized for some time the pressing need for suitable accommoodations for Negro merchant seamen. We believe, after an extended survey, that we have an ideal facility, and one which will be appreciated by the seamen."

471-1944

UNRRA

6 On UNRRA Overseas Staff

Argus—St. Louis, Mo.

11-19-44

WASHINGTON, D. C. (NNPA)—Six Negroes have been appointed to the overseas staff of the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration, at salaries of $5600 each, according to a recent announcement of the agency naming three additional administrative assistants.

The last appointees are A. L. Kidd, of Tallahassee, Fla., former registrar at Florida A. and M. College; Maxwell Bohanan, of Minneapolis, Minn., formerly connected with the Minneapolis Board of Welfare; and Julius Jerome Robinson, until recently the race relations adviser of the Farm Security Administration.

All of these appointees receive orientation training at the University of Maryland and are expected to receive their assignment in about eight weeks.

Negro prepares to serve UNRRA overseas soon

Los Angeles, California Eagle

11-20-44

WASHINGTON—Earl Pruitt, of Louisville, Ky., has been appointed an administrative assistant for the European mission with the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration, the agency announced this week in Washington.

Mr. Pruitt went to UNRRA from the Louisville Municipal Housing Authority where, since 1938, he has been manager of the Beecher Terrace Housing Project.

He was born in Louisville in 1901 and received his education at the Louisville Municipal College and Simmons University, from which he received an LLD degree.

Mr. Pruitt is taking the UNRRA orientation course at the University of Maryland and expects to be sent overseas in about 6 weeks.

47L-1944

USO

Miami, Florida Gets Spacious USO Center

47 Daily World Atlanta, Ga. 2-19-44

MIAMI, Florida. — (SNS) — Hall Crowder, Program Director of Officer's Candidate John D. Silvera, is telling the six hundred and fifty men and women who witnessed the opening of the new USO Center in Miami. "What the USO Means to the Service Man." Mr. Silvera hails from New York City and expects to receive his bars within the next two weeks. He is active in public relations.

2-19-44

Other platform guests are Honorable J. Finley Wilson, IBPOE of W., who gave the main address, Honorable Leonard K. Thomson, Mayor of the city of Miami, who brought the city's greetings to the cheering crowd; also Brigadier General L. A. Lawson, Commanding Officer Army Air Training Station No. 1, who spoke for the Army, welcoming the USO as a fine addition to the ciyt's efforts to make the service man feel at home; Judge C. S. Robertson Chairman of the USO Council in Miami is the presiding officer. The Judge is well known for his interest in the personnel of the Armed Forces, and draws no line when there is an opportunity to make himself felt by helping.

2-19-44

In the backgrounds are Mrs. W. F. B. Ward, wife of the Director of the USO-YMCA operated unit at Homestead, Fla.; and Mrs. Tressie

FIRST LADY AT USO EXHIBIT

Age-Herald, Bhm. Ala. 2-12-44

WASHINGTON — Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt and Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune, former director of Negro affairs of the National Youth Administration, are shown visiting the National Museum to see the exhibit of Arts and Crafts objects made in USO workshops. Mrs. Mary Tobias Dean (left), USO Arts and Crafts program specialist, explains the mural painting loaned the exhibition by the Phyllis Wheatley YMCA in Washington. The mural is the work of Private Percy Ricks and Miss Doris Brown, last year's prize-winning students at the Howard University School of Art.

The USO Second Anniversary

Atlanta Daily World Atlanta, Ga

The Atlanta Service Men's Center for Negroes, located at 1000 Hunter Street, will climax its second anniversary observance today with a number of gala events, designed to give wholesome and home-like entertainment for our boys away from home. Dr. D. H. Stanton, Secretary of the Atlanta Division of the American Bible Society, will bring the anniversary message. The famous Reception Center Chorus at Fort Benning, Georgia, will give special numbers on the closing program today, together with other music to be furnished by Chief Specialist Graham Jackson and Mrs. Elsie Foster Evans. 6-4-44

Looking back to the time when the Center was first proposed, citizens can well recall the strenous objections to such an undertaking so near the Washington High School, where the girl students would be thrown into intimate touch with the soldiers. Against the wishes of many of the citizens, the better judgment of some of our leading citizens, officials proceeded with the Center, and today, it has become an established institution and a vital force in the entertainment for soldiers and a meeting place for our most careful citizens.

Not only do we boast of the fact that no scandal, killing or stabbing has been reported at the Center, but we are proud of the favorable impression it has made upon the soldiers who gather there from time to time as they sojourn in Atlanta from their various army posts. It is reputed to be not only one of the finest in the country for Negro servicemen, but along with it soldiers have repeatedly remarked that the Atlanta citizens are the most hospitable of any group of citizens anywhere they have chanced to visit. 6-4-44

That is as it should be. Who among us would dare deny the indisputable fact that the soldiers make up the very cream of our nation's crop, not only as physical specimen but likewise in idealism and future promise? Indeed these boys come from our very homes and they, each of them, is some mother's son.

We congratulate the officers and the management of the Center on their record and wish for them and the soldiers every good luck which can come to those thus engaged.

47L-1944

USO

Miami, Florida Gets Spacious USO Center

47 Daily World Atlanta, Ga. 2-19-44

MIAMI, Florida. — (SNS) — Hall Crowder, Program Director of Officer's Candidate John D. Silvera, is telling the six hundred and fifty men and women who witnessed the opening of the new USO Center in Miami. What the USO Means to the Service Man." Mr. Silvera hails from New York City and expects to receive his bars within the next two weeks. He is active in public relations

2-19-44

2-19-44

2-19-44

Other platform guests are Honorable J. Finley Wilson, IBPOE of W., who gave the main address; Honorable Leonard K. Thomson, Mayor of the city of Miami who brought the city's greetings to the cheering crowd; also Brigadier General L. A. Lawson, Commanding Officer Army Air Training Station No. 1, who spoke for the Army, welcoming the USO as a very much needed addition to the city's efforts to make the service man feel at home; Judge C. S. Robertson Chairman of the USO Council in Miami is the presiding officer. The Judge is well known for his interest in the personnel of the Armed Forces, and draws no line when there is an opportunity to make himself felt by helping.

In the backgrounds are Mrs. W. E. B. Ward, wife of the Director of the USO-YMCA operated unit at Homestead, Fla.; and Mrs. Tressie

FIRST LADY AT USO EXHIBIT Age-News York, N.Y. 2-12-44

WASHINGTON — Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt and Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune, former director of Negro affairs of the National Youth Administration, are shown visiting the National Museum to see the exhibit of Arts and Crafts objects made in USO workshops. Mrs. Mary Tobias Dean (left), USO Arts and Crafts program specialist, explains the mural painting loaned the exhibition by the Phyllis Wheatley YMCA in Washington. The mural is the work of Private Percy Rickta and Miss Doris Brown, last year's prize-winning students at the Howard University School of Art.

The USO Second Anniversary

Atlanta Daily World Atlanta, Ga

The Atlanta Service Men's Center for Negroes, located at 1000 Hunter Street, will climax its second anniversary observance today with a number of gala events, designed to give wholesome and home-like entertainment for our boys away from home. Dr. D. H. Stanton, Secretary of the Atlanta Division of the American Bible Society, will bring the anniversary message. The famous Reception Center Chorus at Fort Benning, Georgia, will give special numbers on the closing program today, together with other music to be furnished by Chief Specialist Graham Jackson and Mrs. Elsie Foster Evans. 6-4-44

Looking back to the time when the Center was first proposed, citizens can well recall the strenous objections to such an undertaking so near the Washington High School, where the girl students would be thrown into intimate touch with the soldiers. Against the wishes of many of the citizens, the better judgment of some of our leading citizens, officials proceeded with the Center, and today, it has become an established institution and a vital force in the entertainment for soldiers and a meeting place for our most careful citizens.

Not only do we boast of the fact that no scandal, killing or stabbing has been reported at the Center, but we are proud of the favorable impression it has made upon the soldiers who gather there from time to time as they sojourn in Atlanta from their various army posts. It is reputed to be not only one of the finest in the country for Negro servicemen, but along with it soldiers have repeatedly remarked that the Atlanta citizens are the most hospitable of any group of citizens anywhere they have chanced to visit. 6-4-44

That is as it should be. Who among us would dare deny the indisputable fact that the soldiers make up the very cream of our nation's crop, not only as physical specimen but likewise in idealism and future promise? Indeed these boys come from our very homes and they, each of them, is some mother's son.

We congratulate the officers and the management of the Center on their record and wish for them and the soldiers every good luck which can come to those thus engaged.

Goes to New York

Advertiser - Montgomery Ala.

REV. W. E. HOGAN

Rev. W. E. Hogan, pastor of the First Congregational Christian Church, and director of the USO Club, 215 Monroe St., has been selected religious consultant of all negro USO clubs in the United States operated by the Young Men's Christian Association. This new assignment places Rev. Hogan on the national staff of the YMCA with headquarters at 347 Madison Ave., New York, N. Y., taking him from the pastorate of the church. 7-5-44

Hearty appreciation and thanks to him for his liberality in helping maintain regular church services, and his thoughtfulness of those unable to attend, are being extended by the members.

Ad-Advertiser, Montgomery Alabama 7-16-44

MISS ELIZABETH LEMON

The National Board of the Young Women's Christian Association announces the appointment of Miss Elizabeth Elaine Lemon as director of Negro work at the USO Club, which it operates at Enterprise Highway. Miss Lemon succeeds Mrs. Ophelia Ligon, who will direct Negro activities at the USO Club in Elkton, Md.

Miss Lemon holds a degree in English and social studies from Ball State Teachers College in Indiana, and M. A. from Teachers College, Columbia University in New York City. She has been a physical education teacher in Winston-Salem, N. C., and a teacher and principal of the Atlanta University Laboratory School. She joined the USO division of the National YWCA a year ago.

Miss Lemon is skilled in organizing and directing groups in folk dancing, dramatics, art and crafts, and public speaking

Across The Desk

By LUDLOW W. WERNER

3-11-44

USO ABROAD — Tom Johnson, of the Overseas Division of the USO, sent a most interesting letter to this desk the other day from Hawaii where he is stationed. The letter should make interesting reading because so many of our boys from Harlem are stationed in the Hawaiian area. Age — New York, N.Y.

"I have just completed a maze of personal identification which is absolutely necessary in this part of the world or should I say in this part of the United States," Mr. Johnson wrote. He continued: "In between my finger print processing and completing personal history forms I have sandwiched in a few of the sights of Honolulu, which is said to be the largest city in the world embracing some 540,000 square miles. This beautiful rambling city by the sea with its even year round temperature and an annual rainfall of about 30 inches is just draped in the most beautiful species of multi-colored plants and flowers. The green lawns, beautiful parks and hillsides are actually lovely.

"The city is most progressive with its modern buildings, boulevards, schools, piers, sewers, public utilities, police department, public recreation and playgrounds, social agencies, hospitals, etc. The rural plantation areas are very large and most modernistic. Really, the plantations are small cities within themselves with their ultra-modern community recreation centers, kindergarten, hospital, stores, barbershop, post office, etc.

"After traveling around the island and seeing the huge, in fact the largest pineapple plantation in the world about 20,000 acres, an orderly, green and almost endless panorama on the rich plateaux around Wehiewa in addition to many others, you can hardly imagine that in the mainland pineapples, processed, are on the ration list. One of the largest pineapple canneries in the world is also located on the island of Oahu. In addition to the large pineapple industry, fields of sugar cane reach out all over the island.

"There are many things to see in Hawaii, but with everyone hard at work producing toward winning the war you hardly have time to cover all of the special points of interest. Many of the peace time sights are no longer available but are now restricted areas. 3-11-44

"I am just getting under way here and have been assigned to the USO Central Office Staff serving as a coordinator and public relations persons for USO in the area of special services to Negro troops stationed in the Territory.

"The services of the Overseas Division of USO are just about like those given in the Mainland — personal services, housing, canteen services, informaton, sports and athletics, social recreation, mobile service to detached troops, camp shows, etc. The general problem here is a real shortage of hostesses to serve in the USO Clubs. The number of men to women is terrifically out of proportion as far as USO is concerned; however, everybody concerned accepts the situation with a smile and carries on in the next best way.

"The spirits of the men are high and they really appreciate what USO is trying to do for them. Our men, like other soldiers here, are making a real contibution to the total war effort and seem to be taking things in their stride. I have had the opportunity of visitng the camps and areas where our men are stationed. In talking with them they are anxious to know how things are back in the states, when do you think the war will be over, are there many 'jodies' left and what they expect to do when they get back home. Very frequently I cross an old acquaintance and we generally have a real 'gum session' about things back home.

"Lieut. Faulkner Watts and I had a long chat about the Harlem YMCA, the staff, and also about some of the spots around town. Sgt. Ollie Edinboro, of the Harlem Boys Club, is leading his basketball squad in two of the local basketball leagues; Sgt. Major Dick Wales, of Franklin, Ind., stopped by to say hello. Pvt. Sonny Jeffers, of the Washington Grays, is coaching a baseball team in the Honolulu league and a star pitcher in the fast Hawaiian league. 3-11-44

"We had a real session covering our experiences in the Negro National League while he was with the forces of Cum Posey and I ran around with the Philadelphia Stars. I was also lucky enough to get a long chat with Colonel Chauncey Hooper, of New Yrk City, a few days ago out on the field.

"Our men here are receiving very fine treatment by the native people and generally speaking are getting along fine. All public places of recreation, hotels, etc. are open to them and for the most part the men are taking very good advantage of these opportunities.

(Editor's note: The next seven lines of the letter were censored)

"Really what the USO wants to do is to make things as pleasant for our troops as humanly possible. I have made some recommendations as to how the scops of services to our men might be broadened and I feel we are making some real progress. Various special group activities: tours, horseback riding, boating, deep-sea fishing, good old fashion picnics and barbecues, private dances and a wide range of sports and athletics, are getting special attention from the various units. Camp Shows are beginning to reach our gang. Speaking of shows, the men are more than anxious to get some of our top radio, stage and screen stars out this way. They are anxiously awaiting the day when the Army or USO Camp Shows or someone can send out Lena Horne — or some of our other top stars."

Ad Service here, all colored, was set up 22, 1943. The Western s of Alabama donated the which was furnished by visor, Mrs. Pearl Bell. Mercedes J. Hopkins, di- the lounge, joined the s staff in July, 1942, as colored case worker in Creek, Mich., and has Fayetteville, N.C., five months.

ory committee and staff of the USO Travelers' Aid Service, Tuskegee, Ala., has announced the formal opening of the USO Troops in Transit Lounge here, Thursday, with open house from 8 to 12 midnight.

AFRO-AMERICAN BALT., MD.

Lounge for Traveling GI's to Open in Ala.

CHICHAW, Ala.—The advis. The office for the first USO 11-18-44

471-1944

USO

Cast of Streamlined "Porgy and Bess"

Defender Chicago, Ill.

Here is the first and only picture of the USO Camp Show Company of "Porgy and Bess," posed on the steps of Radio City, where the group went just a few minutes before their final passport check-up. This is the first and largest production of this type to be sent overseas by USO Camp Shows to entertain service men. It was produced and directed by Dick Campbell, with music directed by Eva Jessye. From left to right are: First row—Catherine Van Buren, Frances Brock, Dick Campbell, director and producer; Eloise Uggams, Elizabeth Scott, Gladys Goode; Second row—Thomas Moseley, manager; Audrey Vanterpool, Carmine Brown, Julia Latimer, Robert Woodland, George Narshall; Third row—William Veasey, Josiah Albright, John Garth, Bobby Johnson, David Davies and Sol Bryson. — (Solomon photo.)

3,000,000 VISITS PER MONTH MADE TO USO'S BY NEGROES

Christian Recorder

1944

NEW YORK—Visits to the USO service centers by men and women of the armed forces increased from 1,000,000 monthly this time last year to 3,000,000 this year, it was revealed this week by Henry W. Pope, national director of services to Negroes, at the organization's national headquarters in the Empire State Building.

In order to keep pace with the increased demand for recreational facilities for service men and women in the states, the USO increased its centers which cater exclusively to Negroes from 118 last year to approximately 300 this year. This does not include the more than 100 local community centers in the country which receive substantial grants from the USO to enable them to serve men and women in uniform.

The USO is a member agency of the National War Fund, which comprises 22 war emergency agencies. The National War Fund is supported by the American public's voluntary contributions to 10,000 local community war fund campaigns.

1944

Mr. Pope, who supervises the work of the centers serving Negroes, made it clear that the 300 centers mentioned above do not take care of all the Negro soldiers, sailors, and Wacs, for many of them stationed in northern areas are served in USO centers that service all service men regardless of color.

More than 2,400 paid trained professional and non-professional Negro workers are employed at the centers, Mr. Pope said. This represents an increase of at least 33 per cent over last year in personnel. Negroes are employed in capacities having local, regional, and national responsibilities. With pride and public gratitude, Mr. Pope revealed that approximately 75,000 persons, largely women, volunteered their services to USO centers zeal to deliver mankind to a fuller life, he took unlimited risks. His courage was so keen that it needed no bolstering of dark passion. In facing the conflicts of life he stood dauntless. Either for or against. His contribution to the A. M. E. Church is inestimable. By the power of the Giver of every perfect gift, he leaves to carry on, a son, Rev. J. M. Nelson whom people highly esteem; J. W. Nelson, Jr., a son, who is with the army serving his country as a true and brave citizen; a daughter, Mrs. E. J. Larry, who is highly affiliated with the educational world and is also the wife of a minister; a wife, Mrs. B. F. Nelson, who [illegible] hostesses and other workers during the past twelve months. This figure represents an increase of 25,000 volunteer workers over last year.

Calloway heads servicewoman canteen

Los Angeles Tribune

NEW YORK—The newly-formed Negro Entertainment Committee has named Cab Calloway chairman of its proposed Canteen for Negro Wacs and Waves. Present plans call for two canteens to be located in New York City and Chicago. Until now there have been almost no adequate recreation facilities for Negro servicewomen. "It is the purpose o this committee", stated Mr. Calloway, "to remedy this condition."

Other members of the committee include Paul Robeson, Duke Ellington and Lena Horne.

Mississippi Mayor Urges USO For Negro Soldiers

Informer — Houston, Texas
6-17-44

CENTERVILLE, Miss.—(ANP) —A peculiar twist was added to the protracted fued which reportedly has simmered between the white citizenry of Centerville, and the Negro soldiers, stationed at Camp Van Dorn, when it was revealed this week that Omer Carroll, mayor of Centerville, has twice addressed communications to O. T. Ray, regional director for the Federal Works agency, at Atlanta, Ga., urging the establishment of a USO for Negro soldiers in Centerville.

Those who recall the widely-publicized riot last year in Centerville, involving local police officers and Negro soldiers, may have developed the conviction that the entire white populace of Centerville became permanently prejudiced against improving the welfare and status of Negro soldiers at Camp Van Dorn. This possibility then doubly highlights the significance in the action of Mayor Caroll who, when interviewed as to the probable reactionary feeling of hostile Centerville whites as to his campaign for a Negro USO, exclaimed that he "didn't care a 'hoot' about them."

6-17-44

Initial efforts at securing a Negro USO building in Centerville were rejected by the FWA upon the grounds that there was a "lack of war connected needs." Accordingly, Negro soldiers, at Camp Van Dorn, have been compelled to seek recreation at the Baton Rouge USO and Southern university, over 30 miles distant.

Sensing these conditions, on May 29, Mayor Carroll again wrote Ray stating that the lack of proper recreational facilities for colored troops in as small a town as Centerville creates a serious condition both for the military authorities and civil authorities to handle. I was in conference last week with one of the authorities who handles a large share of these colored soldiers, with reference to a method of cooperation between our officers and theirs in handling this situation to keep down as little friction as possible, and I was forcibly impressed with their problem, as well as ours, due principally to the lack of recreational facilities. I am wondering if there is possibility of getting a review of our application in light of the increased number of colored soldiers now located at Camp Van Dorn?"

6-17-44

Mayor Carroll gave evidence of his genuine interest in the proposal by promising to donate personal land as a site for the colored USO building. The rest now is up to the Federal Works agency.

Negro Artists Make Up One-Tenth of USO Shows

Tribune — Washington, D.C.
10-7-44

One-tenth of the entertainers who are giving performances to servicement on the USO-Camp Shows circuit are Negroes, it was revealed last week by Dick Campbell, director of Negro shows. Currently there are 175 colored performers employed in the United States and on foreign soil, he said.

There are at present seventeen colored shows operating in the country and two overseas.

USO-Camp Shows is that branch of the USO, a member of the National War Fund, which supplies live entertainment to the armed forces both at home and abroad. It was established at the request of military authorities in November, 1941, and is supported by contributions to 10,000 community war funds representing the National War Fund.

10-7-44

Listeners Range to 5,000

Negro artists are participating in practically every form of entertainment, Campbell stated. Servicemen and WACS at home and abroad have been entertained by a variety of performers, from Cab Calloway, the Hi-de-ho swing king, to Marian Anderson, top-ranking concert artist.

These colored artists, like the white artists, play to audiences ranging from 500 to 5,000 eager listeners in uniform. They play also to white and colored audiences. They serve at salaries much lower than they would normally earn in commercial show business, it was pointed out.

They have gone out for months at a time, not knowing their final destination, placing themselves in the hands of the War Department with the knowledge that they are fighting the war in the way they know best. They have played in all sorts of temperatures and weather, often putting on their shows to the competition of roaring guns and raiding planes.

10-7-44

They play on an average of nine performances a week for months at a time. During the period of a year, these 175 Negro performers play to an estimated audience of 8,800,000 service men and women.

NEW POST—Hugh Gloster of Atlanta, Ga., has been appointed USO assistant regional executive in charge of services to Negroes in Region 7, according to Mark L. Entorf, USO regional executive.

Pittsburgh, Pa.
Hugh M. Gloster

Made USO Aide

8-12-44

ATLANTA, Ga.—Hugh Morris Gloster, professor of English at Morehouse college, a professor on leave, has just taken over as associate regional executive, in charge of USO services to Negroes in Region VII. The announcement was made by Mark L. Entorf, regional executive, at USO headquarters here this week.

"We are fortunate in securing the services of Mr. Gloster," said Mr. Entorf. "His record as a student and educator, and as program director of a USO club in Huachuca, Ariz., during the past year, have eminently qualified him for his present position."

3,000,000 monthly visits made to USO'S by Negroes

Tribune — Los Angeles, Calif.
9-11-44

NEW YORK—Visits to USO service centers by men and women of the armed forces increased from 1,000,000 monthly this time last year to 3,000,000 this year, it was revealed by Henry W. Pope, national director of services to Negroes, at the organization's national headquarters in the Empire State building.

In order to keep pace with the increased demand for recreational facilities for service men and women in the States, the USO increased its centers for Negroes from 118 last year to approximately 300 this year. This does not include the more than 100 local community centers in the country which receive substantial grants from the USO to enable them to serve men and women in uniform.

9-11-44

The USO is a member agency of the National War Fund, which comprises 22 war emergency agencies. The National War Fund is supported by the American public's voluntary contributions to 10,000 local community war fund campaigns.

Mr. Pope, who supervises the work of the centers serving Negroes, made it clear that the 300 centers mentioned above do not take care of all the Negro soldiers, sailors and Wacs, for many of them stationed in northern areas are served in USO centers, that service all servicemen regardless of color.

More than 2,400 paid trained professional and non-professional Negro workers are employed at the centers, Mr. Pope said. This represents an increase of at least 33 per cent over last year in personnel. Negroes are employed in capacities having local, regional, and national responsibilities. With pride and public gratitude, Mr. Pope revealed that approximately 75,000 persons, largely women, volunteered their services to USO centers as hostesses and other workers during the past twelve months. This figure represents an increase of 25,000 volunteer workers over last year.

9-11-44

cilities for Negro service men and women were limited should be open to them as well as whites. Another suggestion for improving other relationships was that Negro-white YMCA and YWCA organizations be given greater financial support by their communities, to enable them to afford more recreational opportunities to Negroes of the communities, as well as those at nearby military establishments.

It was also suggested that Negro churches assume a greater share of the responsibility than they have heretofore, and that they broaden their programs to meet the needs of a greater proportion of youth and adult groups in their communities.

9-23-44

Reports from labor study committees of widespread discrimination against Negroes in employment in the Trenton and New Brunswick areas were received at last night's session. A report on the Trenton area said many industries needing women still refused to hire Negro women, despite an acute labor shortage which had put some pro-

Jerseyites Attack Alleged Segregation In USO Centers

Amsterdam News — New York, N.Y.
9-23-44

TRENTON—Alleged discrimination against Negro service men and women in USO centers, and against Negroes in recreational centers generally, was protested last Tuesday by members attending the first session of a two-day Central New Jersey inter-racial clinic.

Mayor Andrew J. Duch, of Trenton, told the meeting that such discrimination was one of the "most critical and crucial problems of our time."

Speakers urged that USO clubs in communities where recreational faduction six months behind schedule.

The meeting urged establishment of a permanent national fair employment practices committee, and also a State committee of similar nature.

The Very Rev. Frederick M. Adams, dean of Trinity Cathedral, and chairman of a committee to study the housing and health problems in Trenton, had charge of this phase of the discussion and presentation of data. Dean Adams was assisted by Robert Queen, George W. Hancock, the Rev. Frank S. Niles, F. Harold Johnson, Mrs. Marie Pickens and Mrs. Ira Dickerson.

Devotional services were conducted by the Rev. Harry B. Pine.

Dr. George E. Haynes, director of the clinic, gave the statement of purpose and procedure of the meetings. Case reports were given from four committees. John Morrow, of Bordentown, served as co-ordinator at the Tuesday morning session.

Mrs. Bennett Cooper was chairman of the Tuesday afternoon session, when the clinic discussed "Leisure Time Activities for Civilians and Soldiers." Speakers and leaders at the afternoon session were James W. Geater, of the FSA, Washington; Hilmar Jensen, Mrs. Lillian Jackson, Mrs. Elizabeth Herron and the Rev. Canon Robert D. Smith. The Rev. Clayton Lime led the devotional period. 9-23-44

The session Wednesday evening was in the First Presbyterian Church with Karl G. Hastedt, president of the Council of Churches, presiding, and devotional services conducted by the Rev. Edward Allen Morris. The clinic discussed "Employment and Labor."

HERE TO YONDER

By LANGSTON HUGHES

Center of America: Fort Riley

I AM WRITING this column in Texas where spring has already come in full warmth and blossom. Folks are walking around in their shirt-sleeves and the red-bud and flowering peach are in brilliant bloom. The purple iris are in flower and the grass is green. There are even flies buzzing already at screen doors.

Last week end I spent most enjoyably as a guest of the Pawnee Place USO club at Junction City, Kans., serving the Negro soldiers of Fort Riley where I saw the shaft marking the geographical center of the United States within the confines of the Fort. I grew up in Kansas so I sort of felt back home. The club's director, the rotund and jovial William J. Neal, met me at Topeka with the station wagon, accompanied by a charming WAC, Lt. Aurelia Harris with a rich pink-brown complexion exactly like Josephine Baker's. Also there to greet me was Miss Velma Ellis, pretty hostess of the Whitside Service club in her snappy blue uniform.

Langston Hughes

First thing we did was have lunch in the Union Pacific station, then we headed westward toward the home of the old 9th and 10th Calvary, where our late great Col. Young held forth. And where more recently, Joe Louis took his basic training. And where now many youngsters of color, both male and female, yet to make a name for themselves (for numbers of them are still kids) are learning what army life is all about.

Variety of Services

A TWO HOUR drive over the rolling Kansas plains brought us to Junction City and the Pawnee Place USO club, named after the Federal Housing project for colored families nearby. It was mid-afternoon and the club was quiet, so Mrs. Lena V. O'Neal, the assistant director, Miss Lela Aska, program aid, and Miss Nadine Foster, the secretary, showed me about the large, well-kept, and beautifully equipped club, the largest of the three USO clubs in town and the only one with its own new and complete building—for the two white clubs are housed in portions of other old buildings not especially designed for the purpose. The Pawnee club has a large combination auditorium-dance-hall and game room, a delightful lounge and snack bar, a library, and furnishings, offices, and rest rooms.

The club is under the auspices of the Salvation Army and members of the armed forces of all races are welcome, but its guests are mostly colored. I was amazed at the variety of services it offers from movies, games, and dancing to the care of babies when army wives gather for club meetings or bridge parties. Mr. Neal and Mrs. O'Neal—no relation—the "O" separates them—told me that the club stages shows, sponsors a series of out-door Sunday vespers, promotes boxing matches, lends books, plans trips through its volunteer Travelers' Aid service which also helps finds rooms for soldiers or their guests visiting in town. The club also gives language classes, encourages art and literary expression, promotes a Victory Garden contest and canning bee among soldier-wives and townspeople, has a girls' chorus, has a Christmas gift committee which makes and distributes gifts at holiday time, especially to hospital patients, and helps soldiers struggling with Christmas parcel wrapping or last minute gift selections for the folks back home.

The staff does its best to bring special entertainment to the soldiers, taking advantage of theatrical and other celebrities appearing in Kansas City or nearby towns. They have brought to the club, Lou Swartz, eminent woman monologist of St. Louis, the Lincoln University Mixed chorus, the Kansas City Baptist Choral group, the soloist, Betty Wilson, and that charming young singer studying at the University of Kansas, Nadine Brewer. But, with Junction City being slightly off the beaten track, they find it hard to induce artists to visit them, so they help the boys create their own entertainment.

Fifty Hours' Service

MRS. O'NEAL pinned on my lapel as I was leaving a little USO pin denoting fifty hours volunteer service to the USO—in my case, service through poetry for, by the time these lines reach print, I shall have read my poems before soldier audiences in USO clubs from Harlem to Fort Huachuca, Arizona. In the New York and Hollywood areas, Negro stage and movie celebs have been most generous in entertaining our folks in uniform. But the South and Middle West receive but little of outside fame and frolic. So listen, Rochester, Hazel Scott, Ethel Waters, Marian Anderson, Dorothy Maynor, Roland Hayes, Rex Ingram, and others often going back and forth to Hollywood! Stop off for a day at Fort Riley or Fort Sill or Fort Leonard Wood and give the boys and WACs at the heart of America a break with your genial talents. You'll have one of the grandest audiences in the world who'll show their appreciation in a big way. And the folks who run these USO clubs are most cordial hosts. I wish I was as funny as Rochester, as musical as Hazel Scott, and as dramatic as Rex Ingram—what a show I could put on then!

Benning USO Attracts 75,000 G. I.'s Weekly

COLUMBUS, (ANP) — With a weekly average of 75,000 soldiers pouring into Columbus from nearby Ft. Benning, the USO colored army-navy YMCA, general headquarters for these soldiers, last week celebrated its fourth birthday.

The USO, officially opened July 27, 1941, is said to be the only one of its kind functioning as an army and navy project for Negro men of the armed forces. Opening of the center brought felicitations from outstanding leaders the country over, including a telegram from Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt.

The moving spirit behind this smoothly operated project is E. E. Farley, executive secretary. Farley, who has had more than 19 years experience as worker among Negro soldiers, is considered an authority on soldier problems.

Bethune, Spaulding On National USO Council

NEW YORK—(ANP)—Mrs. Mary Bethune, founder and president of the national council of Negro women, and C. C. Spaulding, president of the North Carolina Mutual Life Insurance of Durham, are serving as members-at-large on the newly formed national USO council.

The council, headed by Mrs. Maurice T. Moore, is made up of USO chairmen and vice chairmen from every state and a group of civic and business leaders serving as members-at-large.

47L-1944

USO

USO SERVES WAR WORKERS OF COAST INDUSTRIAL AREA

Tribune — Los Angeles, Calif.

7-24-44

1. K P treat—a group of convalescent sailors come to dinner of real home cooking which they help prepare. 2. Renetta Rembert sketches a sister shipbuilder at weekly art class. 3 & 4. Sewing and knitting classes at the USO-NCCS Club help women war workers relax after a hard day's work in the shipyards.

WAR Production workers in Vallejo, California, one of the largest shipbuilding centers in the country, depend on the USO, member agency of the National War Fund, for many of the home-like pleasures and companionships which they could not otherwise enjoy in this gigantic temporary industrial city. Vallejo, once a quiet town adjacent to the Mare Island Navy Yard, has boomed in population and shipbuilding activity since Pearl Harbor.

7-24-44

Especially do Negro women workers look to the USO-NCCS at 1209 Georgia Street, Vallejo, for leisure-time recreation and friendships. This club serves as a rendezvous after hours for the majority of the 3,000 Negro workers — mostly women — employed in the city's shipbuilding industry. The club also serves Negro members of the armed forces stationed nearby.

Arts and crafts, a well-attended sketching program, cooking classes, sewing groups, bingo parties, "Mix 'N' Mingle" hours, Saturday night dances, Sunday night songfests and community sings are among the facets of the club program. On Monday nightsing the National War Fund, opwomen visiting the club have aerates approximately 3,000 units nourishing, home-cooked mealfrom Alaska to the Caribbean there and spend the evening atand from Nova Scotia to Hawaii. sports and other recreational games.

7-24-44

Recently the Women's Industrial Organization, composed of war workers from the Mare Island Navy Yard, invited a group of 50 sailors wounded in the South Pacific to be their guests for the evening, including supper at the club.

Women war workers comprise the majority of the 200 junior and senior hostesses at the club, maintained by the USO. They not only attend the dances and work with the director on special hobby groups, but also travel to three of the largest camps and naval bases nearby for post parties.

7-24-44

The USO which is financed by contributions of Americans in every town and hamlet throughout the country, through local community war funds represent-ing the National War Fund, operates approximately 3,000 units from Alaska to the Caribbean and from Nova Scotia to Hawaii.

C.I.O. Booklet on 'Races of Mankind' Called 'Weapon'

Register, Des Moines, Iowa March 14, 1944

New York—The board of directors of the USO Friday upheld the ban imposed by the organization's president, Chester I. Barnard, on distribution of the popularly written scientific pamphlet, "The Races of Mankind," to servicemen through USO centers. Some of the board members voted against Barnard's stand, and for resumption of circulation of the pamphlet by the USO.

The vote followed an appeal by Irving Abramson, chairman of the National CIO War Relief Committee, who appeared at the session on the invitation of the USO's executive committee. Abramson described the booklet as a major weapon in the war against bigotry and racial tolerance.

"I am very grateful to those members of the USO board who upheld the position of those desiring to propagate the democratic principles outlined in "The Races of Mankind," Abramson stated after the meeting. "While we regret the majority's decision, the CIO will continue as before to support the USO. However, it will also continue its fight for democracy and inter-racial understanding."

In his address to the board members, Abramson replied to the position of President Barnard, who was previously reported as having said that "The American people . . . cannot stand behind (the USO) if we attempt to promote the special political or social interests of churches, races or national and economic groups," by saying:

Stands by Statement

"I stand by that statement and adopt it, in fact, in support of our position because the book is not attempting to promote the interests of any one race, but to support them all and to show they are all equal."

The disputed pamphlet is a study of racial questions prepared by Ruth Benedict and Gene Weltfish, Columbia University anthropologists, and published by the Public Affairs Committee, a non-profit educational organiaztion. It attacks race prejudice which it calls "a comparitively modern disease," by an exposition of the common history of mankind, and contends that intelligence tests show no difference between the races when economic and educational advantages are equal.

The CIO committee's chairman pointed out that the USO is currently distributing, and has in the past distributed, other pamphlets issued by the Public Affairs Committee, dealing with other social and economic problems. He found it difficult, he said, to understand why the board prohibited this one, which deals with tolerance.

"Our organization feels very strongly about this issue," he added, "since it involves the fight against Hitler's Aryan race creed, which brought about this bloody conflict. Is it not important to inform servicemen of the evils of bigotry, intolerance, and racial hatreds, and to teach them the principles of democracy?"

The CIO, which began distribution of the pamphlet to members of the armed forces on its mailing lists after Barnard had demanded its removal from USO centers, is one of the largest contributors to USO activities through the National War Fund.

Gloster Named USO Associate Executive

Daily World, Los Angeles August 31, 1944

Hugh Morris Gloster, Professor of English at Morehouse College, presently on leave has just taken over as Associate Regional Executive, in charge of USO services to Negroes in Region VII. The announcemnt was made by Mary L. Entorf, Regional Executive, at USO headquarters in Atlanta Wednesday.

"We are fortunate in securing the services of Mr. Gloster," said the Regional Executive when interviewed in his office concerning the appointment. "His record as a student and educator, also as program director of a USO Club in Huachuca, Arizona during past year have eminently qualified him for his present position."

Gloster later attended At-versity and for the Ph. D. he received at that institution.

Gloster earned his A.B. degree at Morehouse College, Atlanta University where he earned two scholarships along with a A General Education Board fellowship's degree — achievementslow during his years of work, 1938-which paved the way for post 1939, for the Ph.D., Mr. Gloster, in graduate work at New York Uni- the summer of 1940, was an Alpha Phi Alpha research fellow. Throughout his graduate study, too, he maintained a straight-A average in his field of specialization. 8-2-44

Always interested in literature and languages, this young man, whose father and mother, Professor and Mrs. John R. Gloster, were pioneers in Negro education in West Tennessee, founded and became the first president of the Association of Teachers of Language in Negro colleges.

HUGH M. GLOSTER

Born in Brownsville, Tennessee, he was, during years of residence in Memphis, a member of the Board of Directors of the Community Welfare League (National Urban League affiliate) and of the Executive Committee of the NAACP. He also served as co-director of the YMCA Literary Guild, co-chairman of the LeMoyne College Building Campaign and as general chairman of two annual Boy Scout financial drives.

In 1943, securing a leave from Morehouse College, Mr. Gloster attended the USO Orientation Institute at Columbia University and was elected chairman of his class composed of representatives of the six USO agencies. 8-2-44

Assigned to a club in Fort Huachuca, Arizona where he was program director, Mr. Gloster received the commendation of Army and USO officials for his work in program, publicity, and Post and community relations.

Mrs. Gloster, his wife, the former Louise Elizabeth Torrance, and their daughter, Alice Louise, born January 6, 1943, live at 562 Pulliam Street, Atlanta.

Roosevelt-Bethune Pic Barred as 'Controversial'

People's Voice - N.Y., N.Y. 4-1-'44

WASHINGTON—The USO recently barred from the "white" press a picture of three of the nation's leading women, Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, Mrs. Mary McLeod and Mrs. Mary Tobias Dean, USO arts and crafts program specialist, simply because of mixed colors. It was disclosed that the incident occurred at a USO exhibit of arts and crafts in the national museum here the latter part of January.

Among the visitors at the exhibit were Mrs. Roosevelt and Mrs. Bethune. After much hesitation a USO press agent permitted his photographer to shoot the picture of the women grouped along with Mrs. Dean. The photo was subsequently sent to E. V. Hale, USO publicity director, who said that its release to "white newspapers would be too controversial.

TOO CONTROVERSIAL

"I decide on any picture and make decisions as they arise," Hale commented. Distribution was not made to the white press, he said, "because I felt that it might stir up prejudice in certain communities in which USO has for a long period of time been striving to achieve certain practical results in cooperation between Negroes and whites.

"Anything which tended to stir up such prejudice in these communities would, in my opinion, do more practical harm to the USO and to the Negroes there than all the good that publication of the picture might conceivably accomplish elsewhere." 4-1-44

It is recalled that the USO, a few months ago, branded the pamphlet, "The Races of Mankind," a scientific study about mankind and equality of the human races, as too "controversial" for the boys who come to USO centers to read.

Two Officers' Wives Appointed Hostesses in Boston Canteen

BOSTON(ANP)—Early this week the appointment of two colored senior hostesses was announced at the Boston Stage Door canteen. This action by the Theatre wing was just the opposite of the policy followed by the Boston Commons Buddies Club-USO, which does not allow the intermingling of colored hostesses with white servicemen.

The two women are Mrs. Mabel Sandridge and Mrs. Alezia Gourdin of Boston, wives of Maj. Henry Sandridge and Col. Edward O. Gourdin both of the 372nd Infantry Regiment stationed in New York City. Both women are well known in Boston social circles.

Ray W. Guild, Boston civic leader, led the earlier fight against the discriminatory policy of the Buddies Club on the Boston Commons, and this action by the Stage Door Canteen followed conferences by Julian D. Steele of the Boston NAACP and Mrs. Osgood Perkins, director of the Boston Stage Door Canteen. In taking this forward action, the canteen has already enrolled over 20 colored hostesses. The plans call for at least two on duty at all times with no restrictions of any sort being placed upon them or the participation of colored service men who use the facilities.

Lounge for Traveling Gl's to Open in Ala.

Afro-American Baltimore, Md. 11-18-44

CHEWHAW, Ala.—The advisory committee and staff of the USO Travelers' Aid Service, Tuskegee, Ala., has announced the formal opening of the USO Troops in Transit Lounge here, Thursday, with open house from 8 to 12 midnight.

The office or the first USO Travelers' Aid Service here, staffed by all colored, was set up December 22, 1943. The Western Red Cross of Alabama donated the lounge, which was furnished by its supervisor, Mrs. Pearl Bell.

Miss Mercedes J. Hopkins, director of the lounge, joined the USO TAS staff in July, 1942, as the first colored case worker in Battle Creek, Mich., and has served in Fayetteville, N.C., five months.

'PORGY AND BESS' GROUP SET FOR OVERSEAS

Defender—Chicago, Ill. 10-28-44

This is the first and only picture of the USO Camp Show Company of "Porgy and Bess," posed on the steps of Radio City, where the group went just a few minutes before their final passport check-up. This is the first and largest production of this type to be sent overseas by USO Camp Shows. It was produced and directed by Dick Campbell, with music direction by Eva Jessye. From left to right are: first row, Catherine Van Buren, Frances Brock, Dick Campbell, director and producer, Eloise Uggams, Elizabeth Scott, Gladys Goode. Second row: Thomas Moseley, manager, Audrey Vanterpool, Carmin Julia Latimer, Robert Woodland, George Marshall. Third row: Wm. Veasley, Josiah Albright, John Garth, Bobby David Davies and Sol Bryson.—Chick Solomon Photo.

10-28-44

47L-1944

USO

Pamphlet Denouncing Racial Prejudice Is Banned By U. S. O.

Daily World - Atlanta, Ga.

Publication Is Considered 'Too Controversial'

1-23-44

NEW YORK—(ANP)—Circulation of a pamphlet, "The Races of Mankind," a recent publication by Ruth Benedict and Gene Weltfish, anthropologists at Columbia University has been banned from YWCA-operated USO units, as "too controversial."

The pamphlet, prepared for the Public Affairs Committee, a non-profit, educational organization sponsored by the Alfred P. Sloan foundation, explains certain facts concerning mankind and the equality of races; it presents information about man's origin and makeup, and describes race prejudice as a "comparatively modern disease caused by fear."

The trouble began when the YMCA, with the organization's funds, purchased and distributed through its army and navy committee, 50,000 copies of the booklet in YMCA-operated USO units. Chester I. Barnard, USO president upon reading the bare truths of the pamphlet, immediately contacted the YMCA and asked the organization to stop distributing it; later, the USO Board backed its president in his request.

Although the YMCA complied with Barnard's request, under USO Board pressure, the point was stressed that the organization does not agree with the philosophy back of it.

1-23-44

The pamphlet, which urges Americans "to clean house and get ready for a better 21st century," is used by the American Baptist Home Mission Society and Federal Council of Churches, the Jun'o League of America, and many schools and colleges.

More than 125,000 copies of the book have been sold to date.

Brooks Memorial Canteen Serves All:

Westchester Women Act Following USO Jimcro

People's Voice - New York, N.Y.

1-22-44

America is up in White Plains—that is, that part of America which truly believes in the credo, "without regard to race, creed or color." Dixie is up in White Plains, too—Dixie which flourishes on the fascist doctrine of race separation and race superiority. It is Dixie that refuses hospitality to Negro soldiers billeted in Westchester camps. And it is America that motivated a little band of Negro women to organize the Brooks Memorial Volunteers a couple of years ago to serve all men in the Armed services of the country.

Up until two years ago, our boys stationed in Westchester camps—our boys who were about to spill their rich, young blood in the cause of democracy—had no recreational facilities open to them nearer than NYC. Even before Pearl Harbor, the USO service center at Depot Plaza, White Plains, was entertaining boys from New York and all nearby places; but then, as now, failed to invite Negro soldiers to dances and parties. When USO officials were approached about this condition—when it was pointed out to them that their club was supported by public funds—they said that the Negro boys were "welcome." But that was as far as they went. They never turned a finger to make them welcome.

IDEA BECOMES FACT

Incensed at the situation, Mrs. Eunice H. Wolfe of White Plains invited thirteen women to her home on February 19, 1942. Out of the conversation they had that day, the Brooks Memorial Volunteers of Westchester was born. Scarcely two weeks later, with the aid of other sympathetic people in the community, these courageous women, who had no previous experience in such an organization, opened a completely furnished recreation room for soldiers—American soldiers—"without regard to race, creed or color," at 118 Martine av, White Plains.

That was nearly two years ago. The idea caught on like wildfire. Today there are thirteen units of the Volunteers, with a total membership of 1,200, throughout Westchester county and canteens in Mt. Vernon and New Rochelle. Seven thousand kits have been made and given to soldiers and more than 10,000 servicemen have been entertained at the various canteens. Hostesses are furnished at Camp Shanks and Camp Eastview and parties of women regularly visit and entertain veterans sationed at Castle Point.

1-22-44

WORK WITH USO

"We are not fighting the USO," Mrs. Wolfe, executive chairman, and Mrs. Edna Williams, vice-executive chairman, explained to PV.

"As a matter of fact, we never fail to work with them. (Mrs. Wolfe is on the Board of Management at Camp Shanks). But we do feel that since colored Americans are contributing to city funds out of which the USO gets its quota, and inasmuch as we carry on among boys in the service, we are entitled to our share."

Brooks Memorial is entirely supported by voluntary contributions, mostly by the members themselves, who are taxed $1 monthly, and from proceeds of bridge parties and dances. When they get in a "tight spot," the women said, their husbands help them out.

Letters from all over the world—India, Africa, Australia, the Southwest Pacific, the Solomons, Sicily, from boys who have been entertained at Brooks Memorial, make their sacrifices more than worthwhile, the two women said.

LETTERS FROM BOYS

One from "Frank" on behalf of Co. E of the 372d Infantry which was stationed at Camp Eastview, enclosed a check for $65.17 for the "furtherance of your splendid program." Every man had emptied his pockets and given whatever he had—from seven cents to $3.

And another from Sgt. Pat Capone, an Italian-American in the Armed forces who had enjoyed the hospitality of Brooks Memorial wrote: "At exactly one-half hour ago, I received your swell package (the kit which is given every soldier at departure) of very useful articles. I want to thank everyone of you for your thoughtfulness. You can't imagine how good it makes us feel to know that our friends back home are behind us during these times."

1-22-44

The boys in uniform are grateful for this bit of America in Westchester. They go away feeling that they have, in truth, something to fight for. We on the homefront are grateful, too, for the splendid example of Americanism displayed by heroines who do not march to the beat of the drum.—[MJC].

USO on Fence; Bars Pamphlet From Centers

Peoples Voice - New York, N.Y.

1-22-44

Servicemen frequenting USO centers will be deprived of an opportunity to learn a few facts about race relations, because the USO board of directors decided last week to ban distribution of a pamphlet titled The Races of Mankind. Written by two Columbia University anthropologists, Ruth Benedict and Gene Weltfish, the breezy, popular style.

pamphlet is a scientific, impartial Called "too controversial" by attempt to present facts about USO directors, the booklet had man's origin and makeup in a been purchased in large numbers by the YMCA through its Army and Navy Committee and distributed through the same agency. Fifty thousand copies were placed in YMCA-operated USO units. The Races of Mankind was prepared for a non-profit, educational organization called the Public Affairs Committee, sponsored by the Alfred P. Sloan Foundation. Its standing. The booklet stresses immediate racial understanding as necessary to United Nations unity. statement: "Withdrawal of the policy is "to present facts on portant social and economic tions." Preparation of the let was under supervision of American Association of Scie Workers, including, beside authors, Professor L. C. Dunn, of Bell Telephone Company, zoologist; Professor Otto F berg, psychologist, and Dr. M Smith, anthropologist.

The booklet states facts sc has learned and verified races — showing similarities origin, and pointing up the unity existing among all hu "Urging all peoples to "clean and get ready for a better tw first century" the authors say that fear is a basic reason for prejudices, and that freedom fear will make for better u discontinued further distribution in USO clubs. The YMCA continues to distribute the pamphlet to its regular YMCA and is fostering its use among its members." 1-22-44

The more than 125,000 copies of The Races of Mankind already sold are in use by the following organizations: American Baptist Home Mission Society and Federal Council of Churches, the Association of Junior Leagues of America, and in many schools and churches.

The Smallness of USO

Amsterdam News - New York, N.Y.

The smallness shown by the USO in banning the pamphlet "Races of Mankind" published by the Public Affairs Committee is just the kind of thing that makes one wonder, what are we fighting the war for? "Races of Mankind," a purely scientific treatise by the well known and thoroughly established anthropologist, Ruth Benedict of Columbia University, stated in simple, lay language what a preponderant number of scientists have long since proven and averred: all races are scientifically equal, mentally and otherwise; no race is better endowed than any other. 1-29-44

Intended primarily for use by U. S. soldiers in USO's, the pamphlet was banned because Chester Barnard, USO head, feared that the truth in it would injure the feelings of Southern whites. If the USO is willing to bar any scientific truth because it is concerned about the way it will be accepted by Southerners or Northerners, then the USO is certainly not serving its purpose. On the other hand, it is serving to perpetuate ignorance and prejudice. 1-29-44

We sincerely hope that the USO will see fit to lift its ban on "Races of Mankind" for the information of the benighted and thereby prove to the nation that it itself is not bigoted.

This Story Will Pluck Your Heartstrings...

People's Voice - New York, N.Y.

A TRUE STORY for a New Year. 1-8-44

This is a simple tale of two souls who lived on opposite sides of the tracks. One was a little brown miss from White Plains. The other was the mangled wreck of what once had been a white man.

She wanted to do her bit for her country. She thought the best thing she could do was to make the last hours of the men of the armed forces happy. So she journeyed over to the neighboring White Plains U.S.O. center to enlist as a hostess. White Plains is guarded by Negro soldiers but the U.S.O. center does not admit Negro soldiers. She would not let this change her. Once or twice a week she journeyed to New York City to the Stage Door Canteen on Broadway—the place that knows no color line. It is one of the few strongholds of practicing democracy.

He had already been in the fight. Somewhere in the South Pacific storming some Jap-held bridgehead he had had his face blown to bits. God had been kind and preserved his body. But had God been kind? All the art of plastic surgery, all the inches of skin taken from his body and the bodies of his comrades couldn't remake that face into the normal features of a human being. Had God really been kind?

He was grotesque.

A hole where a mouth had been. Two holes where a nose once breathed. Deep inside of him there was still a heart and a mind and a soul. So he recovered. He forced the army to take him back. He was sailing the next day—sailing to some unknown bridgehead, to some rat-infested rampart of fascism. He wanted to have a final minute of happiness. He wandered into the Stage Door Canteen. 1-8-44

This Thing made in the image of God with his features destroyed by the hatred of man, asked the hostesses for a dance but they turned away—terrified! No one would dance with him. His heart agonized for that brief moment, more than his body had ever hurt. Then the pert little brown lady of Westchester stepped forward and said, "I'll dance with you."

He sailed that night. Weeks went by. Just the other day she received a letter—"somewhere in Italy," and it went something like this:

"My dear Helen:

I will always remember that last night at the Stage Door Canteen. You were so kind and yet what you did you did it without showing you were kind. I appreciate it more now than my humble pen can tell. You see it's like this—our ship went directly to Italy, right into action. I was among the first that landed. I will always remember that last night at the Stage Door Canteen for it was the last time I danced and it was the last time that I ever will dance. That morning we landed I was slightly unlucky — both my legs were shot away.

Yours for a People's Victory at home and abroad.

HARRY."

Now They're Entertaining Our Servicemen 5-19-44

This photo was taken before this quintet sailed overseas, where they are now entertaining our troops in the New Caledonia area. Under the auspices of USO-Camp Shows, they are accompanied by a band when they perform. l. to r., they are: Julie Gardner, accordionist; Kenneth Spencer, singer; Ann Lewis, blues singer, and Ferdie & Flo, comedy team.

47L-1944

USO Stops the Y From Distributing Race Relations Pamphlet at Centers

PM-New York, N.Y.
1-13-44

'Races of Mankind,' Prepared by Scientists, Is Barred as 'Controversial'

By Evelyn Seeley

PM Exclusive

Facts about mankind and the equality of the races apparently aren't fit fare for the boys who come to the USO centers for more than the standard coke and cake.

PM learned today that The Races of Mankind, a popularly-written scientific statement by Columbia University anthropologists, Ruth Benedict and Gene Weltfish, has been banned from USO centers as too "controversial."

The pamphlet was prepared for the Public Affairs Committee, a non-profit, educational organization sponsored by the Alfred P. Sloan Foundation, as part of its policy "to present the facts on important social and economic questions." These facts about man's origin and makeup were prepared under the supervision of a committee of the American Assn. of Scientific Workers, including, beside the authors, Prof. L. C. Dunn, zoologist; Prof. Otto Klineberg, psychologist, and Dr. Marion Smith, anthropologist, all of Columbia.

The ban came about in this way:

The YMCA purchased and distributed through its Army and Navy Committee, 50,000 copies of the pamphlet in YMCA-operated USO units. Chester I. Barnard, who left the presidency of N. J. Bell Telephone to serve without compensation as USO president, came upon the pamphlet in a USO center. 1-13-44

He looked at this popularly-presented exposition of the basic facts about races which finds race prejudice "a comparatively modern disease" caused by fear, got in touch with the YMCA and asked them to stop distributing it. He backed up his request shortly with action of the USO board. The pamphlet, whose use in USO centers was being paid for by YMCA funds, was banned.

A Better 21st Century

This booklet states some facts science has learned and verified about races, showing their equality

USO

This Is What USO Calls 'Controversial'

From 'The Races of Mankind'

There Is No Jewish "Race."

An American Brought Up in China Will Speak Chinese.

of origin, their likenesses and their fundamental unity. It says that freedom from fear is the way to cure race prejudice, sums up constructive things being done to combat it, urges us to "clean house and get ready for a better twenty-first century." It relates the need for racial understanding to the immediate experience of the United Nations.

"The reason we asked the YMCA to discontinue distribution is that the booklet seems to bear on the decision of the racial problem," said E. Z. Hale, USO publicity director, when PM queried him about the ban. "It is not the USO's function to decide problems. It is not proper USO policy to attempt to take sides. The withdrawal of the book doesn't imply criticism of the pamphlet—we simply don't want to put out material on either side of a debate. It might be all right to distribute the pamphlet around here, but down South there's a lot of feeling on the matter." 1-13-44

YMCA's Policy

The YMCA assented to the request, under USO board pressure, but not to the philosophy back of it. Eugene E. Barnett, general secretary of the National Council of the YMCA, said today:

"The YMCA has long-established policies which support active efforts to improve race relationships. Mr. Barnard, president of the USO, asked the YMCA not to distribute this material in USO clubs for the reason that literature which could be regarded by a substantial portion of the public as controversial could not properly be distributed by the USO. Mr. Barnard submitted the matter to the executive committee (of the USO) which approved this view. Out of respect for this request the YMCA discontinued further distribution in USO clubs. 1-13-44

"The YMCA continues to distribute the pamphlet to its regular YMCAs and is fostering its use among its members."

These were the official versions of the banning of the Public Affairs pamphlet on race. They did not reflect the storm of protest PM learned arose at the YMCA when the request to ban the book was made.

Chester I. Barnard

Army Uses Pamphlet

USO action on the pamphlet will be taken up at next Monday's meeting of the Public Affairs Committee. More than 125,000 copies have been sold and are in use in all sorts of organizations ranging from the American Baptist Home Mission Society and Federal Council of Churches to the Association of Junior Leagues of America, and in many schools and colleges.

Army Special Services sent it overseas in at least two sets of "assembled discussion materials" for voluntary use.

The Army and Navy Committee of the YMCA has been the largest user of the booklet.

Second Center Will Be Operated Here

Negro Citizens Will Back Center For Service Men. Also Plan Scout Conference Sunday In Reidsville.

Feb. 1944

operation of a Service Center for Negroes in military service. Pattern for the project is to be along lines similar to those for the downtown Service Center for white men already established here and leadership is under direction of Dr. A. Bryce, chairman.

Dr. Bryce said last night that the Negro Center, in a building on South Main street next to Moonglow cafe, will be first used this Friday when a group of Camp But-Negro soldiers and sailors ner Negro soldiers comes here for the Bond auction at two o'clock at Person County Training school, new Center will be an attractive Person and Roxboro Negroes to citizens, it was learned today, will be in soon, probably next week, the but a formal opening of the Cen- place for men of the be Planned for this Sunday, February is another Negro civic activity, and inter-racial meeting of Boy Mrs. H. H. Scout leaders in Cherokee Council ding for the Cen- in Reidsville. Among those ex- n rent-free by the pecting to attend are Dr. Bryce, ude Trotter. It is Scoutmaster Jones, T. C. Tillman e new Center will and C. J. Ford. Also to attend are voluntary contribu- S. M. Ford, W. Wallace Woods and downtown Court Thomas J. Shaw, Jr., members of n, although some the Inter-racial ted will come from Person district. ady made at time The Negro Scouts of the Cherokee Council join all Scouts in ar Fund drive. America in the celebration of the have already con- and more will 34th Anniversary of the Boy Scouts ling to Dr. Bryce, Movement, February 8-14. be in operation Sunday morning February 13, all ds. A number of Scouts and Cubs will attend church (where services will be held in ob- d sailors have servance of the anniversary. regularly, says On Sunday afternoon, all Scouts is felt that the and Scouters of the Negro Division e an attractive of the Cherokee Council will meet e better type. at Washington High School, Reids-ter is not expected until next week.

Working with Dr committee composed Claude Trotter and Fountain. Building ter is being given owner, Mrs. Claude planned that the be operated on volunt tions, as is the dow street institution, al funds it is expected contributions already of the United War Fu

Many citizens have tributed furniture an be needed, according The Center will be only on week-ends.

ville, for the special program in observance of Boy Scout Week. Dr. Stanley A. Harris, National Director of Interracial Scouting, will be the main speaker on this program. The program will begin at 4:00 p. m.

G. C. Thompson, Negro Field Scout Executive, has announced that a large delegation is expected from each division of the council. These divisions are Alamance, Caswell, Dan River, Person, and Reidsville.

All Scouts are asked to wear uniforms if they have them. The public is cordially invited to attend these services.

USO Refuses to Accept Jim Crow, Delays Parley

Daily Worker - New York, N.Y. 1-28-44

The ominous shadow of Jim Crow, falling across plans for a regional United Service Organization Conference in Chicago Jan. 31-Feb. 3, has caused postponement of this meeting of regional USO officers, many of whom are Negroes.

1-28-44

Ned Hale, USO director of publicity, said yesterday that the week-end conference was being put off because of inability to arrange for equal treatment of Negro and white USO workers in Chicago hotels. Those hostelries which agreed to house Negro guests refused to allow them dining-room facilities.

"The conference was postponed in accordance with our policy to treat our Negro and our white personnel equally," Mr. Hale said. "Their pay is the same, and so is their training and all their facilities, under the USO, whether at our clubs or elsewhere. We will stand for no less than that when we meet for our conferences."

1-28-44

Teachers Hit USO On Race Book Ban

2-9-44

PM - New York, N.Y. 2-9-44

The New York Assn. of Biology Teachers has protested the barring of the pamphlet, The Races of Mankind, from USO centers.

In a letter to Chester I. Barnard of the USO, the Association said:

"Denying the use of the pamphlet which popularizes authoritative work of scientists on the problem of races on the ground that it is controversial, is comparable to those historic situations when others refused to sponsor publications containing facts advocating vaccination against smallpox, or disproving the concept that the earth is the center of the solar system.

"Science believes in the equality of races; that the conduct of any race is the result of forces it has been exposed to. We trust that you will restore the pamphlet to the centers inasmuch as the U. S. Army has decided to use it in its orientation courses."

Army Uses Race Booklet Barred at Clubs by USO

PM - New York, N.Y. 1-30-44

Morale Division Orders 55,000 Copies for Use in Orientation Courses'

PM Exclusive

Soldiers, who can no longer pick up a copy of The Races of Mankind at their USO club, will find it part of their required Army training.

The Public Affairs Committee, the nonprofit, educational organization which published the pamphlet, announced yesterday that it had received an order from the Morale Division of the U. S. Army for 55,000 copies, "for use in orientation courses."

On Jan. 13, PM disclosed that the pamphlet, a popular presentation of the facts about mankind and the equality of the races, written by Ruth Benedict and Gene Weltfish, Columbia University anthropologists, had been banned from USO centers as too "controversial." This action was taken after Chester I. Barnard, USO president, came across it in a YMCA-operated USO club, and brought pressure on the Y to stop distributing it in the USO centers. The Y, however, has continued to distribute it throughout its regular YMCAs.

Third Printing

Up to now, the Committee disclosed, over 190,000 copies of The Races of Mankind have been distributed throughout the country—to churches, schools and clubs—and the pamphlet is entering its third printing. 1-30-44

A resolution expressing regret at the action of the USO, and calling for reconsideration of its decision, was adopted yesterday at a meeting of the Board of the Public Affairs Committee.

Making clear that the pamphlet contains only facts generally accepted by cultural anthropologists, and has the approval of the U. S. Army, as well as religious and educational organizations, the resolution pointed out that "the stated objectives of the USO include meeting the educational needs of service men."

"One of the basic reasons for which the present war is being waged is to combat the myth of a superior race," the resolution said. "It is an accepted principle of democracy that facts on all important issues affecting the public welfare should be freely discussed."

Sloan's Statement

At the same time, the Committee made public this statement by Harold S. Sloan, executive director of the Alfred P. Sloan Foundation, one of the sponsors of the Committee:

"While the Foundation assumes no responsibility for the publications of its donees, I am frank to say that I consider it grossly unfair to call the pamphlet, The Races of Mankind, 'controversial' or to infer that it 'takes sides.' It is a statement of race facts as science knows them. 1-30-44

"Of course, if you happen to believe that the earth is flat, you will find every book on geography 'controversial.' I fear that epithet is used by people who don't like to have the facts presented. It is a paradox that the USO should wish to withhold from our service men a statement of the facts on which our democracy is based, and for which they are fighting."

Army Orders Booklets To Curb Race Ignorance

Daily World - Atlanta, Ga. 2-4-44

Scientific Facts About Peoples Are Explained

NEW YORK — (ANP) — The pamphlet, "The Races of Mankind," which was recently barred from USO centers by Chester I. Barnard, USO president, will be used by the army when it was learned this week that the morale division had ordered 55,000 for use in orientation courses.

Written by Ruth Benedict and Gene Weltfish, Columbia University anthropologists, the booklet explains scientific truths about peoples and races, upsetting the general idea of many miseducated white Americans about the superiority of races. The Public Affairs committee, a non-profit, educational organization, publishes the booklet.

Even though Chester I. Barnard, USO president, barred the pamphlet when he picked up a copy at a YMCA operated USO last month as being "too controversial," the committee disclosed that over 190,000 copies have been distributed throughout the country to churches, schools and clubs and that the pamphlet is entering its third printing. 2-4-44

"While the foundation assumes no responsibility for the publication of its donees, I am frank to say that I consider it grossly unfair to call the pamphlet, "The Races of Mankind," 'controversial' to infer it 'takes side,' " declared Harold S. Sloan, executive director of the Alfred P. Sloan foundation, one of the sponsors of the Public Affairs committee. "It is a statement of race facts as science knows them."

"Of course, if you happen to believe that the earth is flat you will find every book on geography 'controversial,' " Sloan said. "I fear that epithet is used by people who don't like to have the facts presented. It is a paradox that the USO should wish to withhold from our service men a statement of the facts on which our democracy is based, and for which they are fighting."

When the board of the Public Affairs committee met a few days ago, a resolution expressing deep regret over the action of the USO, was written. 2-4-44

"One of the basic reasons for which the present war is being waged is to combat the myth of a superior race," the resolution said. "It is an accepted principle of democracy that facts on all important issues affecting the public welfare should be freely discussed."

In the meantime, the YMCA has continued to distribute "Races of Mankind," which will enlighten service men on the scientific facts about races and peoples.

Negro Units For USO

New Masses - N.Y. 1-4-44

SOME nine weeks ago USO Camp Shows, Inc., assembled the first Negro unit for overseas work. This group toured the islands of the Caribbean and upon its return was invited to give a press report. The unit consisted of actors, singers, and musicians—Willie Bryant, Kenneth Spencer, Roger Juan Ramirez, Betty Logan, and Julie Gardner. Several facts emerged from the report—the thousands of Negro and white, American and British servicemen, voted this program the best in two years' entertainment; the officers and men were most solicitous for the performers' comfort and did everything possible to assure them a pleasant stay. 1-4-44

Further, what struck the members of the unit as the fact overriding all others was the complete absence of Jim Crow. Willie Bryant said that at St. Thomas, Virgin Islands, the reception given the group demonstrated "pure democracy." White and Negro officers and men mingled in true camaraderie. Spencer, the sole Negro actor in Bataan, was recognized all through the Islands for the fine job he did in that film. The most popular song in his entire repertory was Langston Hughes' "Freedom Road."

One of the things that made the soldiers think most of home was "Ram" Ramirez' Boogie-Woogie piano-playing. I believe this statement, as much as any thesis, proves the integration of the idiom of popular Negro music, blues, and jazz in America's cultural life. Spencer stated further that the most popular entertainer who visited the Islands was a Miss Atwell, British Negro concert pianist. The British troops clamored for her constantly. 1-4-44

There is a shortage of entertainment, both Negro and white, and the hunger for USO programs is incalculable. Implicit in everything these artists said was the regret that the number of Negro entertainers is not in proportion to the total number used ertainers will soon follow. One Negro unit in two years of overseas entertainment is scarcely commensurate with the ever doubts might have existed on that score would have been speedily dissolved. I ous understand that this same unit is to be sent ng- to Africa, Italy, and other places. The at- overseas troops hope that other Negro en-

JOSEPH FOSTER.

471-1944

Nearly Half-Million Bonds Sold By Negro Division In First Week Of Loan Drive

World — Memphis, Tenn.
6-20-44

The Negro Division of the Memphis-Shelby County War Finance Committee wound up its first week of Fifth War Loan sales with a mammoth parade and mass meeting at the Salem-Gilfield Baptist Church, corner Florida and Iowa, at 3 p. m. Sunday afternoon.

The incomplete records of the Division's workers show that almost $300,000 have been reported at their headquarters, 390 Beale Avenue.

The most outstanding individual sales effort was made by Matthew Thornton, Sr., (Mayor of Beale Street), who has led in all previous war loan drives in individual sales. Thornton's record for the first week of the current drive showed a sale of $12,500.

Following in second, third, and fourth places respectively were Beale Street Elks Daughter Ruler Blanche Jackson, Robert Davidson, insurance man, and Dr. U. S. Walton, dentist. Each had sold in excess of $2000 in bonds.

The first church recorded for the Fifth War Loan bond purchases was the Shiloh Baptist Church.

The first Negro soldier to buy a bond in the drive was Sgt. Willie Williams, who is stationed in England, but sent money back to his mother to purchase a bond in the Fifth War Loan.

The Union Protective Assurance Co., bought $7000 worth for the first week and promises another purchase soon to make its total for the campaign $20,000.

Units for the parade assembled at 2 p. m. at Beale Avenue Auditorium and moved off in two section. The first section, Bugle Crops, Girl Scouts, Boy Scouts, Gorine Beauty School, Foote Homes, and Coca-Cola Courtesy Club. The second section was led by the Beale Street Elks Drum Corps, followed by the Elks' Marching Club, the Past Exalted Rulers Council and Lodge members, Moss Beauty Salon, R. S. Lewis Co., LeMoyne Gardens, and the Southern Funeral Home.

6-20-44

Marshalls for the parade were: Maurice Hulbert and Dr. S. B Hickman.

Principal speaker at the mass meeting was Captain (Chaplain) S. A. Owen, pastor of the Metropolitan Baptist Church here, who has just been placed on inactive duty after two and one-half years of Army service. He based his bond appeal on the needs of service personnel in camp and overseas.

Other attractions planned by the Negro Division for the Fifth War Loan will be a great "Song Festival" at Ellis Auditorium on June 30.

Lt. G. W. Lee, head of the Negro division said, "Eighteen Memphis churches will accept, one each, of 18 Negro soldiers of this community known to have been killed in action, and sell bonds to be dedicated to their memory. During the festival the auditorium lights will be turned off, while a bugler sounds taps. When the lights come on again, the bonds sold by each church group will be dedicated to the memory of those who made the supreme sacrifice for their country . . . then, a singing group of soldiers, who will come all the way from Fort Benning, Ga., and the locally famous Southern Male Chorus, will swing into action, and a hundred voices will echo like winged music through ternity."

Admission to the reserve seats at the Auditorium for the festival will be by bonds. All other seats to the public and to prospective bond-buyers will be free.

The drive will close with a colorful amateur midnight bond show, sponsoored by the Negro Junior Chamber of Commerce and directed by Nat Williams and John Arnold, Jr., at the Beale Avenue Palace Theater. Bonds will also serve as admission to the show, with sales sponsored by 150 USO Lounge hostesses in addition to members of the Junior Chamber of Commerce.

Benning Chorus Will Sing Here

Montgomery Advertiser
Ala. 12-13-44

The Fort Benning Reception Center Chorus whose voices have helped raise more than six million dollars in war bonds, will be heard at the City Auditorium during the bond rally staged by Montgomery's Negro Sixth War Loan Committee, Friday at 8 p.m. No admission will be charged.

The singers will present negro spirituals and a repertoire of other selections in the patriotic vein.

Chaplain Isaac I. McDonald, of Fort Benning, will appear with the chorus. S. J. Phillips, of the U. S. Treasury Department War Finance Division staff is also to be heard on the program.

The chorus is directed by Sergt. Willis Brown, of Minter, Ala., and Sergt. Varnell Ford, of Knoxville, Tenn., is piano accompanist.

A reserved section of the auditorium has been set aside for whites.

6th War Loan Sales Here Go To $115,000

Advertiser-Montgomery
12-22-44

Negro Division Reports $7,000 In Purchases At Monday Night Rally

E Bond sales of $32,500 made in Montgomery on Monday, opening day of the Sixth War Loan brought the total for the drive to $115,000 at the last count, it was announced yesterday at the Office of the War Finance Committee.

At a meeting sponsored by the negro division Monday night at Dexter Avenue Baptist Church, $7,000 was invested. It was reported that the negro population of Montgomery has accounted to date for nearly a million dollars in bond purchases.

Howard E. Pill, manager for the eighth district, announced yesterday that "Here's Your Infantry," a realistic show depicting the part played in battle by the infantryman, would be shown at Cramton Bowl on Dec. 12 with a cast made up of combat veterans. Army tactics and demonstrations of weapons will be shown, and admission will be to those who have bought bonds since Nov. 1.

Mr. Pill also announced that the war bond office was in receipt of two short films, "Road to Paris," and "Photography Fights," available to any organization that would like to show them.

11-22-44

More show windows on Dexter Avenue are being added daily to the list of those with displays promoting the Sixth Loan. Among those now giving window display space to the bond drives are the Capitol Clothing Store, Bronson's, Silver's and Woolworth.

drove into Vicksburg where they participated in a bond rally and sang over station WQBC to stimulate the sale of $21,625 in bonds.

In Meridian, Mississippi, the people heard the famous aggregation "Stout-hearted Men" and contributed to the Sixth War Loan Drive through the purchase of bonds.

Leaving Meridian, Miss., the famous chorus started on the last leg of the long trip, stopping at Mobile, Ala. Pensacola, Florida, and Montgomery, Tuskegee and Birmingham, Ala.

At Mobile, Ala., listeners over radio station WALA heard them sing patriotic songs and when the bond rally was held at the Big Zion Baptist Church the response was tremendous when the war-minded citizens purchased $600,000 in bonds.

The bond rally in Pensacola, Fla., netted the sale of $8,475 in bonds while the citizens at the city auditorium in Montgomery purchased $67,000 worth.

APPEAR AT TUSKEGEE

At Tuskegee Institute, Saturday evening, the famous chorus sang their most popular features: "It Ain't What You Do," "The Glory Road," arranged by the chorus baritone, Wm. A. Long, "Stout-Hearted Men," and "All Alone" to encourage the sale of $500,000 worth of bonds.

12-26-44

The last appearance of the Reception Center Quarter resulted in the sale of $787,975 in war bonds when they sang at bond rallies held at the Sixth Avenue Baptist, enthusiastic and enjoyed the Church and the Sixteenth Street Baptist Church.

On their return to Fort Benning, 3rd the sale of bonds in the Sixth War Loan Drive. Chaplain McDonald stated that, on the whole the Chaplain Isaac I. McDonald who accompanied them on the second people in the various cities were half of the tour starting at Knox- most hospitableto them. Prior to ville said that the men were cheer- Chaplain McDonald joining the group, Chaplain Cato H. Pierson of

Benning Choir Sells More Than $8,000,000 In War Bonds On Tour

The Memphis World Tenn.
12-26-44

Travels 4,000 Miles In Seven Southern States

FORT BENNING, Ga. (SNS)—More than $8,000,000 in war bonds were sold in rallies featuring the famous Ft. Benning Reception Center chorus during its 30-day jaunt covering more than 4,000 miles in seven southeastern states, it was learned upon its return to the Post Tuesday afternoon.

The twenty-four members of the chorus made more than 10 public appearances including 20 radio broadcasts in the 25 cities which they visited. Audiences in churches, city auditoriums theatres and nine Negro colleges heard the singing soldiers sing patriotic and popular songs to boost the sale of bonds in the 6th War Loan Drive.

The chorus participated in bond rallies in Tallahassee, Florida, in Orangeburg, S. Car., Goldsburg, Raleigh and Greensboro, N. Car., an Savannah, Ga. Durham, N. C. bond purchases amounted to more than $4 000,000 and were credited to the appearance of the famed grou during the first week of the four. In Raleigh an audience filed the Memorial Auditorium and bought $2,006.162 worth of bonds when the chorus appeared on the nation-wide network featuring Dr. I. Q. In Durham, N. C., the North Carolina Mutual Insurance Company purchased $2,000,000 in bonds to be credited to the famed singers in honor and appreciation for the colored men and women serving in the armed forces all over the world.

IN KNOXVILLE

The thirteenth stop of the famed G. I. Concert and radio artists netted $1,205.543 in the purchase of war bonds by the citizenry of Knoxville, Tenn. The members of Rotary Club alone in this war-alert city contributed $1,033,600 to the program of the war through the purchase of bonds credited to the chorus. Capt. Richard E. Tukey, Fort Benning Public Relations Officer was present at the Rotarian luncheon and extended greetings to the patriotic members in behalf of Brig. Gen. William H. Hobson, Commanding General of Fort Benning, and Colonel John P. Eddleman Commanding Officer of the Reception Center through whose courtesy the chorus participated in aiding state and local finance committees in the promotion of the sale of war bonds.

The chorus appeared on the campus at Tennessee A. and I. College located in Nashville, Tenn., where it sang to the students of the institution. No bond rally was held. From Nashville it journeyed to Mehphis, Tenn., where it boosted the sale of bonds by $510,300 in bond rallies held at Manassas and Booker T. Washington High Schools and the Ea Trigg Street Baptist Church.

At Greenville, Miss., the chorus made several appearances at auditoriums and over radio station WOPR to stimulate the sale of $55,000 worth of war bonds. The singing slodresi bonds p 0 eled the chorus bus driven

471-1944

Nearly Half-Million Bonds Sold By Negro Division In First Week Of Loan Drive

World — Memphis, Tenn.
6-20-44

The Negro Division of the Memphis-Shelby County War Finance Committee wound up its first week of Fifth War Loan sales with a mammoth parade and mass meeting at the Salem-Gilfield Baptist Church, corner Florida and Iowa, at 3 p. m. Sunday afternoon.

The incomplete records of the Division's workers show that almost $300,000 have been reported at their headquarters, 390 Beale Avenue.

The most outstanding individual sales effort was made by Matthew Thornton, Sr., (Mayor of Beale Street) who has led in all previous war loan drives in individnal sales. Thornton's record for the first week of the current drive showed a sale of $12,500.

Following in second, third, and fourth places respectively were Beale Street Elks Daughter Ruler Blanche Jackson, Robert Davidson, insurance man, and Dr. U. S. Walton, dentist. Each had sold in excess of $2000 in bonds.

The first church recorded for the Fifth War Loan bond purchases was the Shiloh Baptist Church.

The first Negro soldier to buy a bond in the drive was Sgt. Willie Williams, who is stationed in England, but sent money back to his mother to purchase a bond in the Fifth War Loan.

The Union Protective Assurance Co., bought $7000 worth for the first week and promises another purchase soon to make its total for the campaign $20,000.

Units for the parade assembled at 2 p. m. at Beale Avenue Auditorium and moved off in two section. The first section, Bugle Crops, Girl Scouts, Boy Scouts, Gorine Beauty School, Foote Homes, and Coca-Cola Courtesy Club. The second section was led by the Beale Street Elks Drum Corps, followed by the Elks' Marching Club, the Past Exalted Rulers Council and Lodge members, Moss Beauty Salon, R. S. Lewis Co., LeMoyne Gardens, and the Southern Funeral Home.

6-20-44

Marshalls for the parade were: Maurice Hulbert and Dr. S. B Hickman.

Principal speaker at the mass meeting was Captain (Chaplain) S. A. Owen, pastor of the Metropolitan Baptist Church here, who has just been placed on inactive duty after two and one-half years of Army service. He based his bond appeal on the needs of service personnel in camp and overseas.

Other attractions planned by the Negro Division for the Fifth War Loan will be a great "Song Festival" at Ellis Auditorium on June 30.

Lt. G. W. Lee, head of the Negro division said, "Eighteen Memphis churches will accept, one each, of 18 Negro soldiers of this community known to have been killed in action, and sell bonds to be dedicated to their memory. During the festival the auditorium lights will be turned off, while a bugler sounds taps. When the lights come on again, the bonds sold by each church group will be dedicated to the memory of those who made the supreme sacrifice for their country . . . then, a singing group of soldiers, who will come all the way from Fort Benning, Ga., and the locally famous Southern Male Chorus, will swing into action, and a hundred voices will echo like winged music through ternity."

Admission to the reserve seats at the Auditorium for the festival will be by bonds. All other seats to the public and to prospective bond-buyers will be free.

The drive will close with a colorful amateur midnight bond show, sponsoored by the Negro Junior Chamber of Commerce and directed by Nat Williams and John Arnold, Jr., at the Beale Avenue Palace Theater. Bonds will also serve as admission to the show, with sales sponsored by 150 USO Lounge hostesses in addition to members of the Junior Chamber of Commerce.

Benning Chorus Will Sing Here

Montgomery Advertiser
Alex. 12-13-44

The Fort Benning Reception Center Chorus whose voices have helped raise more than six million dollars in war bonds, will be heard at the City Auditorium during the bond rally staged by Montgomery's Negro Sixth War Loan Committee, Friday at 8 p.m. No admission will be charged.

The singers will present negro spirituals and a repertoire of other selections in the patriotic vein.

Chaplain Isaac I. McDonald, of Fort Benning, will appear with the chorus. S. J. Phillips, of the U. S. Treasury Department War Finance Division staff is also to be heard on the program.

The chorus is directed by Sergt. Willis Brown, of Minter, Ala., and Sergt. Varnell Ford, of Knoxville, Tenn., is piano accompanist.

A reserved section of the auditorium has been set aside for whites.

War Bonds And Stamps

6th War Loan Sales Here Go To $115,000

Advertiser—Montgomery
11-22-44

Negro Division Reports $7,000 In Purchases At Monday Night Rally

E Bond sales of $32,500, made in Montgomery on Monday, opening day of the Sixth War Loan, brought the total for the drive to $115,000 at the last count, it was announced yesterday at the Office of the War Finance Committee.

At a meeting sponsored by the negro division Monday night at Dexter Avenue Baptist Church, $7,000 was invested. It was reported that the negro population of Montgomery has accounted to date for nearly a million dollars in bond purchases.

Howard E. Pill, manager for the eighth district, announced yesterday that "Here's Your Infantry," a realistic show depicting the part played in battle by the infantryman, would be shown at Cramton Bowl on Dec. 12 with a cast made up of combat veterans. Army tactics and demonstrations of weapons will be shown, and admission will be to those who have bought bonds since Nov. 1.

Mr. Pill also announced that the war bond office was in receipt of two short films, "Road to Paris," and "Photography Fights," available to any organization that would like to show them.

11-22-44

More show windows on Dexter Avenue are being added daily to the list of those with displays promoting the Sixth Loan. Among those now giving window display space to the bond drives are the Capitol Clothing Store, Bronson's, Silver's and Woolworth.

drove into Vicksburg where they participated in a bond rally and sang over station WQBC to stimulate the sale of $21,625 in bonds.

In Meridian, Mississippi, people heard the famous aggregation "Stout-hearted Men" and contributed to the Sixth War Loan Drive through the purchase of bonds.

Leaving Meridian, Miss., the famous chorus started on the last leg of the long trip, stopping at Mobile, Ala. Pensacola, Florida, and Montgomery, Tuskegee and Birmingham, Ala.

At Mobile, Ala., listeners over radio station WALA heard them sing patriotic songs and when the bond rally was held at the Big Zion Baptist Church the response was tremendous when the war-minded citizens purchased $600,000 in bonds.

The bond rally in Pensacola, Fla., netted the sale of $8,475 in bonds while the citizens at the city auditorium in Montgomery purchased $67,000 worth.

APPEAR AT TUSKEGEE

At Tuskegee Institute, Saturday evening, the famous chorus sang their most popular features: "It Ain't What You Do," "The Glory Road," arranged by the chorus baritone, Wm. A. Long, "Stout-Hearted Men," and "All Alone" to encourage the sale of $500,000 worth of bonds.

12-26-44

The last appearance of the Reception Center Quarter resulted in the sale of $787,975 in war bonds when they sang at bond rallies held at the Sixth Avenue Baptist, enthusiastic and enjoyed the Church and the Sixteenth Street contribution they had made toward the sale of bonds in the Sixth Baptist Church.

On their return to Fort Benning, War Loan Drive. Chaplain McDonald stated that, on the whole the Chaplain Isaac I. McDonald who accompanied them on the second people in the various cities were most hospitableto them. Prior to half of the tour starting at Knox- Chaplain McDonald joining the ville said that the men were cheer-group, Chaplain Cato H. Pierson of

Benning Choir Sells More Than $8,000,000 In War Bonds On Tour

The Memphis World—Tenn.
12-26-44

Travels 4,000 Miles In Seven Southern States

FORT BENNING, Ga. (SNS)—More than $8,000,000 in war bonds were sold in rallies featuring the famous Ft. Benning Reception Center chorus during its 30-day jaunt covering more than 4,000 miles in seven southeastern states, it was learned upon its return to the Post Tuesday afternoon.

The twenty-four members of the chorus made more than 10 public appearances including 20 radio broadcasts in the 25 cities which they visited. Audiences in churches, city auditoriums theatres and nine Negro colleges heard the singing soldiers sing patriotic and popular songs to boost the sale of bonds in the 6th War Loan Drive.

The chorus participated in bond rallies in Tallahassee, Florida, in Orangeburg, S. Car., Goldsburg, Raleigh and Greensboro, N. Car., an Savannah, Ga. Durham, N. C. bond purchases amounted to more than $4,000,000 and were credited to the appearance of the famed group during the first week of the tour.

In Raleigh an audience filled the Memorial Auditorium and bought $2,006.162 worth of bonds when the chorus appeared on the nation-wide network featuring Dr. I. O. In Durham, N. C., the North Carolina Mutual Insurance Company purchased $2,000,000 in bonds to be credited to the famed singers in honor and appreciation for the colored men and women serving in the armed forces all over the world.

IN KNOXVILLE

The thirteenth stop of the famed G. I. Concert and radio artists netted $1,205,543 in the purchase of war bonds by the citizenry of Knoxville, Tenn. The members of Rotary Club alone in this war-alert city contributed $1,033,000 to the program of the war through the purchase of bonds credited to the chorus. Capt. Richard E. Tukey, Fort Benning Public Relations Officer was present at the Rotarian luncheon and extended greetings to the particic members in behalf of Brig. Gen. William H. Hobson, Commanding General of Fort Benning, and Colonel John P. Edgerl, Commanding Officer of the Reception Center through whose courtesy the chorus participated in aiding state and local finance committees in the promotion of the sale of war bonds.

The chorus appeared on the campus at Tennessee A. and I. College located in Nashville, Tenn., where it boosted the sale of bonds by $510,300 in two rallies held in Manassas and Washington High School and Booker T. Washington High Schools and the Eastside Trigg Street Baptist Church.

At Greenville, Miss., the chorus made several appearances at auditoriums and over radio station WOPR to stimulate the sale of war bonds. The singing slodresi bonds p 0 $55,000 worth the Reception Center accompanied them to Knoxville.

Sgt. Willie Brown, director of the chorus, said that the singing soldiers were enthused over the trip and were anxious to go on another to stimulate a greater sale of bonds.

99th HEROES GET OFFICIAL WELCOME; RALLY ENDEARS GOAL

Journal & Guide-Norfolk, Va.

12-23-44

NORFOLK — Six veteran officers of the 99th Fighter Squadron made a triumphant tour of Norfolk last weekend, participated in two bond rallies, one for high school students and one for adults, which netted $37,000 in bond sales, were greeted by the mayor, city manager and city councilmen, were interviewed and photographed by three local papers, and enjoyed a crowded weekend of activities.

In addition, one of the fliers, Capt. Charles B. Hall of Brazil, Ind., the most famous of all Negro aviators, was interviewed by Blair Eubanks on a radio program over Station WTAR.

The six visiting Air Corps men were: Capt. Hall, Capt. Howard L. Baugh, Petersburg, Va.; Capt. Herbert E. Carter, Amory, Miss.; Capt. Maurice Johnson, Washington, D. C.; 1st Lt. Willie H. Fuller, Tarboro, N. C., and 1st Lt. Price D. Rice, Montclair, N. J.

12-23-44

All but Capt. Johnson are fighter pilots who have a combined combat mission total of about 450 missions and who hold numerous decorations for heroic action against the enemy in the skies including the coveted Distinguished Flying Cross, which was worn by Capt Hall and by Capt. Baugh. Capt. Johnson is one of the few Negro flight surgeons in the Army Air Corps and was the flight surgeon of the 99th from the time it went overseas until June of this year.

Norfolk extended these fliers a real heroes' welcome and for three days and nights they kept going on a continuous stream of activities. Highlight of these appearances was the talk of Capt. Hall who was the first Negro to shoot down an enemy plane and who was three victories.

12-23-44

The fliers landed at the Norfolk Army Airbase on Thursday afternoon at 5 p. m. They flew to Norfolk in three advanced training ships with which they instruct air cadets at Tuskegee Army Air Field where they are stationed.

The three ships were piloted by Lt. Fuller, former 99th assistant operations officer and present instructor at TAAF, who led the flight from Tuskegee; Capt. Bauch, who just returned from overseas and had been given no assignment at Tuskegee; and Capt. Hall, who is cross country flight leader at the advanced training base. Lt. Rice, who was Capt. Hall's wingman on most of his overseas missions, and who is assistant engineering officer at TAAF, flew with Capt. Hall. Capt. Carter, TAAF engineering officer, flew with Capt. Baugh. Capt. Johnson, flew with Lt. Fuller. Capt. Carter and Lt. Rice, both of whom are pilots, could assist the lifts of their ships by using the dual controls. Capt. Johnson is not a pilot.

The aviators were met at the airport by Lem Graves Jr., Guide war correspondent who spent several months with the 99th in the Italian theatre and who was chairman of the special events committee for the Sixth War Loan Drive, and Thomas W. Young, Guide war correspondent, who first went overseas with this outfit. The fliers were invited to come to Norfolk by the special events chairman, Mr. Graves.

12-23-44

STUDENT RALLY SUCCESS

On Thursday night, the fliers were photographed by the Virginian-Pilot, local daily. The busiest schedule of activities was on Friday. Following a picture and interview for the Ledger-Dispatch, the local afternoon paper, the fliers went to the Booker T. Washington High School where they spoke at an enthusiastic student bond rally. The auditorium was jammed and nearly $3,000 was raised at this rally, a feature of which was the auction, by Van Buren Luke, of an autograph book containing the signatures of the visiting heroes. The book was sold for $800.

At the noon assembly hour at Norfolk Division of Virginia State College, the fliers were enthusiastically received. They then visited the Journal and Guide office.

Mayor J. W. Reed, City Manager Charles B. Borland and the members of City Council received the fliers in the mayor's office in City Hall at 3:30 p. m.

Mayor Reed welcomed the heroes to the city with impressive and sincere remarks during which he offered the facilities of the city to the fliers and wished them a pleasant stay. He paid tribute to the contributions made by the Negro in this war and specifically praised the air heroes for their pioneering efforts in the Air Corps. Col. Borland remarked that he was an old Army officer and that distinctions such as these men had won were not just given away for the asking.

12-23-44

Capt. Hall went on the air two hours before the adult bond rally which was held Friday night in the Booker T. Washington school auditorium.

The rally itself netted $70,000 in War Bond purchases which put the uptown committee several thousand dollars above its quota of $100,000 for the Sixth War Loan drive.

Music for this program was furnished by the Army Base Band of the Hampton Roads Port of Embarkation under the direction of M/Sgt. Arthur E. Smith. The Rev. Richard H. Bowling, pastor of First Baptist Church, offered the invocation. Mr. Graves presided. Mr. Young introduced the fliers, each of whom described some aspect of his overseas experience.

WINGS BRING $7,000

John T. Belden, a member of the War Bond committee, conducted the auction of the many rationed articles which were offered for sale. Later, Lt. Rice auctioned off his flying wings for $7,000 with the wings going to P. B. Young, president of the Guide Publishing Company. Two Coast Guard veterans of many invasions, Steward First Class Abram Ellison and Steward Second Class Theodore Raney, were introduced. Mrs. Jessie Smith Sydnor, chairman of the uptown committee on the Sixth War Loan drive, made the closing remarks.

12-23-44

Social activities provided for the fliers included: dinner Thursday night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Graves; a reception Thursday night at the home of Dr. and Mrs. J. T. Sydnor; a party, sponsored by the War Bond committee, Friday night at the Seamen's Hotel; the Journal and Guide's annual Christmas banquet, at which they were honor guests, on Saturday night, at Eureka Lodge; an impromptu party given by Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Rivera at the Seamen's Hotel, which Mr. Rivera manages, also on Saturday night; and numerous other small affairs feting the distinguished visitors.

The fliers left the Army Air Field here Sunday at 1 p. m. flying back to Tuskegee.

ATLANTA DAILY WORLD

Howard Students Sell $40,000 In War Bonds

ATLANTA, GA.

12-13-44

Atlanta's biggest patriotic story of the year broke out Monday at the David T. Howard Junior High School, where Charles L. Gideons is principal.

This is the story:

More than 3,000 enthusiastic students, loyal patrons and friends turned out enmasse Monday afternoon in the Wheat Street Baptist Church at a huge War Bond sales rally in connection with the Sixth War Loan Campaign and reported the grand sum total of $40,000 in War Bonds and Stamps sold by students of the school to patrons, friends and various business establishments of the city, with expectation that the fund would total $50,00 by noon today with several reports still out.

12-13-44

YOUNG BATTS HIGH MAN

High man in the sales of Bonds and Stamps was James A. Batts, Jr., who was crowned 'King of Howard" in a contest staged by the students as a result of having reported a total of $10,400, due to the generosity of the Afro-American Life Insurance Company, of which his father is the Atlanta manager.

12-13-44

Highest girl sellers, who were jointly crowned "Queens of Howard" were Misses Ruth and Betty Fuller, daughters of Bishop W. E. Fuller, of the Holiness, who reported a $1,000 war bond sold to their father. Others who ranked high in sales from the student body was Jas. Johnson, who sold a $500 bond to Warren R. Cochrane, executive secretary of the Butler Street Y. M. C. A.; T. M. Alexander, Jr., who reported $400 through his father's insurance offices, and Chief Petty Officer Graham W. Jackson, of the USNR, who reported $5,000 in bonds sold to the Pilgrim Health and Accident Insurance Company, thru the president of the company, S. W. Walker.

Other high scorers with reports were Samuel Kelsey, Walter Cook, Willie Dorsey, Barbara and Frankie Lowe and scores of others, all who are thanked for their patriotic gestures in raising a fund to aid in the continuance of the fight on the enemies of war. Miss Frankie Lowe was named "Elementary Queen," and Willie Dorsey, was declared "Elementary King."

UNCLE SAM AND STATUE EXHIBITED

12-13-44

Gracing the platform neatly and atractively attired as the Statue of Liberty was Miss Marjorie Burney, and on hand dressed as Uncle Sam was Walter Reid, both who drew favorable comments from all because of their display.

Presiding at the feature event was W. L. Calloway, general chairman. The "Star Spangled Banner" was sung, followed by invocation by Rev. W. J. Rowe, and music by the Howard band. Speakers heard were Mr. Cochrane, C. L. Harper, NAACP local chapter president; V. W. Hodges, associate editor of the Atlanta Daily WORLD; T. M. Alexander, of the Alexander and Company Insurance firm and G. L. Chandler, professor of English at Morehouse College. Appearing also were the Naval Air Station band the Howard band and giving final words of thanks and gratitude to all for the part they played in the large success of the project was Principal Gideons.

12-13-44

Present at the program were members of the AWVS who assisted in disposing of the bonds. The Howard band sales elementary; F. Waites, Kenneth Days, E. Bradley, L. P. Jones and M. Baker, junior high, S. M. Dickerson, M. R. Austell, and R. M. Taylor, business contacts; C. M. Gibson, individual contacts; P. E. Johnson, publicity; W. S. Banks, S. M. Smith and M. C. Watson, F. M. Garnett, bondHubert, ceremony and W. L. Calla- chairman.

12-13-44

earlier in the day was not held due to inclement weather.

47L-1944

War Bonds & Stamps

Florida Women Sell $385,000 War Bonds

The Florida State Federation of Negro Women took an active part in the Fourth War Bond drive, acting as the Negro committee in communities where no Negro organization had been set up, and in the larger cities coordinating their efforts with existing War Bond committees. Mrs. Nell Hunter, of the Interracial Section of the National Office, spent 2 weeks making a tour of the State with Mrs. Fannie H. Ponder, president of the Federation, which itself made an investment of $1,000 in the Fourth War Loan drive. Total sales traceable to the activities of these women amounted to $385,000. Photo shows G. D. Rogers, president of the Central Life Insurance Company of Tampa, presenting check for $50,000 to Mrs. Ponder, as his company's investment in the Fourth War Loan drive. His daughter, WAC Sgt. Johnnye Marie Rogers, now stationed at Wendover, Utah, and Mrs. Nell Hunter, of the Washington office, proudly look on.

$106,000 Bond Salesgirl

Gloria brown, a Washington, D. C. student, who was credited by the Treasury Department with $106,250 in War Bond sales during the Fourth War Loan, receives a receipt from Elmer F. Harloff, of the District of Columbia War Finance Committee, for $525 worth of Bond sales on the opening day of the Fifth War Loan. Gloria is 15 years old and a student at the Garnett Patterson Junior High School. She lives with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Antho / A. Brown, at 1515 Caroline street, N.W., Washington.

7-1-44

Negro Division Completes Plans For 5th War Bond Drive Stressing Invasion

Memphis World — Memphis, Tenn.

6-13-44.

Plans for the Fifth War Loan drive for the Negro Division of the Memphis-Shelby County War Finance Committee were completed Monday evening at 6 o'clock at the office of Lt. G. W. Lee, member of the local War Finance committee and chairman of the Negro unit.

Lieutenant Lee said, "D-Day has at last arrived. Our fighting men have leaped across the English Channel and battered down the gates for freedom for millions of people. Thousands of them are making the supreme sacrifice on lonely beachheads. Thousands of them are plunging up the slopes of glory to plant the American flag on the formost ramparts of the enemy. In this, the greatest battle the world ever saw, black men and white men are fighting and dyilg for the great cause of freedom. Thus, this Fifth War Loan drive will be the most significant of all the bond drives yet launched. I can think of no excues that any of us can make for failing to back the attack with War Bonds. Because all that we are, and all that we hope to be is is due to our country."

Chairman Lee also announced the names of the Executive Committee of colored citizens who will direct the 5th War Loan campaign as follows: Dr. O. B. Braithwaite, Robert Wright, Prof. B. T. Hunt, Prof. J. A. Hayes, Raymond Lynom. Rev. W. H. Brewster, Rev. A W. Womack, L. C. Sharp, J. A. Swayze, Dr. A. N. Kittrelle, Dr. W. O. Speight, John Arnold, Nat D. Williams, R. S. Lewis, Jr., S. W. Qualls Jr., Beniamin Bell, Dr. S. B. Hickman, Matthew Thornton, Sr., Maurice Hurlburt, L. A. Snell, W. P. Nabors. T. H Hayes, Jr., Rev. Ed Stewart, Dr. W. A. Bisson, Dr.U. S. Walton, Harry Cash. The Women's division of the Negro unit is in process of organization under Elks Daughter of Ruler B. Jackson who plans to have a committee of one hunded women to make business and house-to-house canvasses.

The first big War Loan rally is planed by the Beale Street Elks for Sunday evening, June 18, at Gilfield-Salem Baptist Church. Principal speaker for the occasion will be Captain (Chaplain) S. A. Owen, pastor of Metropolitan Baptist Church, now on inactive duty after having returned from more than two years service in the Army and now at home to resume his pastorate at the local church.

A mammoth parade compdised of many civic and fraternal units will precede the meeting at Gilfield Salem. The meeting will be held at 3 P. M.

6-13-44

Th Negro Junior Chamber of Commerce headed by L. A. Snell will stage near the end of the drive a midnight "Amateur Bond Show" at the Beale Street Palace Theatre.

While the Inter-Church division under Rev. W. H Brewster will organize a huge song-festival for bands at Ellis Auditorium around June 30.

Highlighting the bond drive will be the Reception Center Chorus comprising more than a score of soldier singers with a Memphian Sgt. William Washburn, as narrator, from Fort Benning, Ga., which will be presented in a recital. This will be built around W. C. Handy, Father of the Blues, Mr. Handy who has just recently recovered from a serious illness, has agreed to come back to his first love, Memphis, and give what he can from his feeble storehouse of energy to make the local Bond Drive a success.

NEGROES' BOND RALLY READY

Post — Birmingham, Ala.

7-7-44

20,000 Persons Expected To Attend Legion Field Function Sunday

More than 20,000 persons are expected to attend he Negro music festival and War Bond rally at Legion Field Sunday, H. D. Coke, of the committee arranging the event, announced today.

Chairman A. G. Gaston, of the Negro division of War Bond teams, today called on drive leaders to redouble their efforts to surpass the Negro quota of $1,000,000, as plans for the rally were being completed. 31 quartets on the program, which will begin at 5 p. m. There will be 5000 Legion Field seats reserved for white patrons.

The Negro bond total in Jefferson now amount to $800,000, the chairman says.

7-7-44

A big parade, led by the 60-piece band of Tuskegee Air Base will precede the rally.

The second annual statewide contest for Negro quartets will feature the gathering. There will be

Patriotic Negroes Back 5th War Loan Drive

Daily World - Atlanta, Ga.

6-17-44

Negro citizens from every section of the nation are planning active support of the 5th War Loan Drive June 12 to July 8 just as they have in past drives. No. 1—shows the purchase of a $10,000 War Bond by the Right Worthy Grand Council Independent Order of St. Luke, Washington, D. C. The check is being presented to Willard W. Allen of the inter-racial section, War Finance Division, Treasury Department. Shown left to right are Mrs. Marie E. Campbell, president Health Unit No. 1; Mrs. Mary E. Smith, organizing deputy; Mrs. Susie B. Smith, district deputy; Miss Grace E. Hall, Right Worthy Juvenile Messenger, and Mr. Hall. No. 2—Dr. William Pickens, of the War Finance Division, sells a $1,000 War Bond to James Reese Europe-American Legion Post No. 5. Shown, left to right standing, are George B. Hunt, post commander; Walter A. Jackson, finance officer; George B. Rygraw, chairman of the board, and Jesse O. Thomas of the Treasury staff. Mr. Pickens is seated. No. 3—Victory tea and War Bond party presented by the Women's Army for National Defense Chicago which assisted in financing the building of a $2,000,000 Liberty Ship in honor of the late Robert S. Abbott, editor and founder of the Chicago Defender. No. 4—Shown here, center, is Mrs. Olivia Jones, War Bond champion mother of Memphis, on the arm of Bishop R. R. Wright of the AME church. Also shown in the picture are George W. Lee, director Memphis branch of the Atlanta Life Insurance Company and Nat Williams, Memphis newspaper man. Mrs. Jones is presented with a $200,000 check for War Bonds dedicated to her nine sons in the armed services. No. 5—Shown here is George W. Lee, chairman of the Negro War Finance Committee of Memphis, shaking hands with "Rochester" Anderson at a War Bond rally. Also shown at the left is E. L. Simon, assistant director of agencies for the Atlanta Life Insurance Company.

National Negro Insurance Men Buy $2,763,000 In Bonds

Informer — Houston, Texas

7-15-44

WASHINGTON. —Fifth War Loan purchases by members of the National Negro Insurance Association amounted to $2,763,000, according to C. L. Towns, chairman of the Association's War Finance Committee in a report to the Treasury Department this week. The bond purchases featured the opening day of the association's annual convention held in Memorial Hall, Louisville, Ky., the week of June 20.

He Buys Extra $100 Bond

Daily World Atlanta Ga.

8-18-44

Perry Rogers, 70, who works in the roads and grounds section of the Post Engineer, Camp Wheeler, Ga., is pictured here buying a $100 war bond in addition to 37.56 per cent of his monthly salary which is invested in bonds. No Rogers didn't save the money in any special way, just putting what amount he could into a bag until he had enough for the $100 bond. Cpl. Earl A. Betz, of Falls Village, Conn., clerk in the Finance Office, made the sale.—(Signal Corps Photo)

WASHINGTON TRIBUNE D.C.

Treas. Has 11,000 Negroes Aiding in War Loan Drive

12-2-44

Substantial purchases of war bonds and stamps are expected to be made among the more than 11,000 Negro employees of the Treasury Department during the period of the Sixth War Loan Drive. Four bureaus of the department alone have an average percentage of 31.75 Negro personnel, according to a study of Negro employment in war agencies.

These anticipated purchases will be of extra bonds, apart from those obtained through regular salary deductions.

Charles S. Bell, administrative assistant to the Secretary of the Treasury, last week, gave out figures on Negro employment in the department.

The Bureau of Engraving and Printing, he said, has 46.40 per cent Negro personnel; the Treasurer's office has 44.23 per cent; the Foreign Funds Control Office has 20.36 per cent, and the Public Debt Office has 15.92 per cent.

These percentages, according to Mr. Bell, apply to the 7,969 who work here in Washington. To make up the total as of July 31, 1944, there are 3,156, who are assigned in the field. This record of integration is believed to be unsurpassed by any other branch of the Federal Government.

War Bond Savings Clubs For Negroes To Be Organized Throughout U. S. By Committee

WASHINGTON, D. C. — To acquaint Negroes of the United States with the necessity for thrift and economic freedom through the medium of the Treasury War Bond Program, a score of leading American Negroes met here recently and devised plans for forming War Bond Saving Clubs throughout the United States.

Albon L. Holsey, executive secretary of the National Negro Business League, Tuskegee, Ala., was named secretary of the organizing committee in charge of the operation.

In opening the one-day session, Dr. J. E. Walker, president of the National Negro Business League, Memphis, pointed out that Negroes have won high places in every activity of American life except in the field of economics and finance. He referred to the field of letters, music, art, science and sport. In all of these, he said, the American Negro can look with pride and satisfaction, but in the field of economics and finance the American Negro has yet to find his place.

The War Bond Program, he said, offers an ideal medium for Negroes to learn the ways of economy and thrift and it is hoped will light the way to the eventual release from economic thraldom into which Negroes have allowed themselves to drift.

The plan which will be used as a model for the War Bond Saving Clubs is that already established at Pittsburgh, Pa., through the efforts of P. L. Prattis, executive editor of the Pittsburgh Courier and originator of the plan. Under this method, a specified number of citizens organize for the purpose of saving enough money each month to buy War Bonds in whatever denomination their purses will allow. Each individual makes his own purchases in the manner prescribed by law and then present his or her War Bond with the secretary o fthe club for safekeeping. In this manner each organized group can see the economic strides being made through the medium of War Bond Savings and thus is spurred on to greater efforts for thrift.

The Washington meeting was held under the direction of James L. Houghteling, director of the National Organizations Subdivision of the War Finance Division; Dr. William Pickens, chief of the Interracial Section, and Willard W. Allen, chief executive officer of the Interracial Section of the War Finance Divisions.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—A veteran flier of the 99th Pursuit Squadron, a prisoner of the Germans after his plane was forced down over Bulgaria, addressed 3,000 government workers at three midnight war bond rallies sponsored by the Public Buildings Administration, Federal Works Agency, in Washington, D. C., during the Sixth War Loan. He is Lieut. Henry A. Wise, Jr., 24, of Cape Charles, Virginia. The Russian advance in Bulgaria freed the allies fliers, but 3500 American airmen and 350 aircraft had been lost while bombing the Ploesti oil field and refineries. The young flier told of visiting one hospital overseas in which only amputation cases were handled. "After you've seen that," he declared, "you wonder whether you're doing enough with your two good hands and your two good legs to win this war and you know that buying an extra bond or stamps is the least you can do." All War Bonds sold to December 31st count towards the 6th War Loan E Bond quota.

SOAPBOX

by Adam Clayton Powell, Jr.

ARE YOU TIRED of buying war bonds? Read the following excerpt from a letter from 1st Sgt. Morris L. Murray, a lad of Washington, DC, now in the 907th Air Base Security, who has been in the thick of it overseas for more than two years, and who has seen service from the shores of North Africa, on up through Italy and France, and is now Heaven knows where.

"It has been said that there are two wars: one of maps and strategy fought in Washington; and the dirty, cruel one fought on the battlefields. But I know of a third war: a silent one that's fought within the soldier himself, from the moment he leans across the rail of a troop transport and sees America fade out of sight. The combined Chiefs of Staff and the five-ocean battle fleet cannot win this war, for it is not a war of steel and motors.

"The army is winning this third war and is sending men back into this life of killing, waiting and sweating, with much of the ache gone from their hearts and the courage to see it through. The secret weapons used by the army to fight this third war are the Rest Camps, scattered about behind the front lines. When a soldier is sent to a rest camp it is like taking him out of Death Valley and dropping him at 42nd and Broadway.

"An army rest camp is not army at all. There are no tents, no water bags, whistles nor barking sergeants. No long chow lines, movie lines, candy lines. It's a soldier's paradise thousands of miles from home—a sort of dress rehearsal for coming home.

"I happened to spend seven days at one of the camps located in one of the main cities of Italy. I was in a 12-story modern apartment house with venetian blinds, marble stairways, elevators and balconies which overlooked some of the most beautiful scenery in the world.

"I slept on real beds, and shaved at real mirrors that were large and clear. I bathed in a white bathtub, with gadgets that you turn, and water that ran both hot and cold. I pushed buttons on walls and lights came on, and they stayed on until I wanted them out. I ate real American food—steaks, ham and pork chops with gravy. I sat at a table dressed in linen and had salt shakers with salt in them. I had cup after cup of smooth hot coffee and pitchers of real cream. I drank out of dainty china cups, and the lovliest girls in all Italy put the food on my table and asked me if I wanted more.

"I spent seven grand days with guys of all races from the front: guys who had killed and been shot at; guys who talked first hand of the Anzio Express, of Volturno River and Cassino. I rubbed shoulders with guys who fly over Germany day after day and who talk of ME 100's, JU 88's, flak and ceilings. I lifted glass after glass of cognac and champagne to guys who keep 'em flying. I strolled the main drags with guys who unload ships, guys who drive the supplies up to the front.

"I whistled at the girls with all the guys. I just sat and basked in the sun with all the guys. I bought souvenirs with all the guys. And at night I slept in a bed and snored with all the guys.

"We saw street cars and listened to the music of their rumble. We saw civilian clothes, cute babies in baby carriages, couples strolling arm in arm. We saw orange juice stands and decorated store windows. We went to beautiful churches and heard glorious organ music. We read newspapers—late ones. We heard radios. BY GOD, WE LIVED.

"And when the close of the week had come we had won that third war. If it's your bonds that are keeping these camps going, keep buying 'em, America, keep buying 'em."

Exclude Local War Loan Workers From Regional Meeting Here; Snub Felt

New Orleans, La.—Negroes connected with the War Finance Division of the United States Treasury in the sale of war bonds, were excluded from the regional meeting including workers from ten Southern States which was held at the Roosevelt Hotel in this city October 11 and 12. Leaders in the war finance committee in Louisiana stated that they did not even know that there was to be such a meeting until newspaper accounts revealed the fact to them. These leaders further stated that efforts to have the Negro group contact the Secretary of Treasury of the United States, Mr. Henry Morganthau, Jr., who was in New Orleans to address the meeting, failed entirely. Mr. Taylor stated that he had personally contacted Mr. Leon G. Tujaque, state administrator, as well as Mr. J. J. Knecht, executive manager, both of whom failed to do as requested and both of whom had also failed to explain why even a Jim Crow engagement with the treasury's secretary was impossible.

The Negro division of the War Finance Committee in Louisiana has functioned actively through three drives, the third, fourth and fifth. In New Orleans alone these drives among the Negro group by the committee resulted in the sale of nearly two million dollars worth of bonds. It is estimated that the committee was responsible for more than two million dollars of sales in other sections of the state during the drives.

In other Southern states there are Negroes who have been chosen as associate directors or as coordinators. In Louisiana O. C. W. Taylor was designated as coordinator and placed on the dollar per year basis. The leaders state that they will continue to work in their various capacities but they resent the attitude of the Southerners who seem to be anxious to obstruct the efforts of the United States Treasury.

15-Year-Old Washington School Girl Sets Record in Fifth War Loan Sales

It was a record of some kind, and no one would dispute it except Gloria Brown herself. Here it was, opening day of the Fifth War Loan, and here was Gloria, a 15-year-old student at the Garnett Patterson Junior high school, in Washington, D. C., checking in with $525 in War Bond sales, and the drive hardly under way.

She said that the excitement of the invasion, and the thoughts of what our boys were undergoing over there, had helped her to sell some of the neighbors quickly, but she didn't think the amount was so much. However, considering how hard it is to sell bonds to one's neighbors, or Christmas cards for that matter, everybody thought that Gloria was doing swell.

That is, except Gloria.

"For the Fourth War Loan I sold $106,250 worth," she said. "I want to do better this time, but this start doesn't look encouraging."

A bystander thought he hadn't heard correctly. "You mean you sold $106 worth to start the last drive," he said.

But Gloria shook her head. "The correct figure," she said, "is $106,250." And with that she pulled out a letter of commendation from the Treasury department's War Finance Division.

Yes, sir. There was the proof. And she had another letter from the District of Columbia civilian defense organization, which explained it all. As a messenger in the defense organization, she had been authorized to collect pledges from prospective bond buyers. Neighbors accounted for $6,000 worth, and a bank executive, impressed by the sincerity that Gloria had put into her sales talk, had signed up for a $100,000 bond."

COMMENDED

When the pledges were collected, Gloria received her letter of commendation from the Treasury. Anybody who wanted to could read it. It was right there in black and white, and it brought her much belated recognition. A radio announcer gave her a mention in one of his broadcasts, and the same was true of the Capital's leading newspapers.

All in all, Gloria confided, it adds up to the resolve that she will continue to do her best. "After all," she agreed, "the Fifth War Loan is still young and there's still time to find another banker."

Gloria and her two younger sisters live with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Anthony A. Brown, at 1515 Carolina St., N.W. She is tall for her age and her teachers says that she is exceptionally bright.

Negro Women of Florida Sell $385,000 in War Bonds

U. S. Treasury Photo from OWI.

The Florida State Federation of Negro Women took an active part in the Fourth War Bond drive, acting as the Negro committee in communities where no Negro organization had been set up, and in the larger cities coordinating their efforts with existing War Bond committees. Mrs. Nell Hunter, of the Interracial Section of the National Office, spent 2 weeks making a tour of the State with Mrs. Fannie H. Ponder, president of the Federation, which itself made an investment of $1,000 in the Fourth War Loan drive. Total sales traceable to the activities of these women amounted to $385,000. Photo shows G. D. Rogers, president of the Central Life Insurance Company of Tampa, presenting check for $50,000 to Mrs. Ponder, as his company's investment in the Fourth War Loan drive. His daughter, WAC Sgt. Johnnye Marie Rogers, now stationed at Wendover, Utah, and Mrs. Nell Hunter, of the Washington office, proudly look on.

Colored Women of Florida Sell $385,000 In War Bonds!

4-27-44

The Florida State Federation of Negro Women took an active part in the Fourth War Bond drive, acting as the Negro committee in communities where no Negro organization had been set up, and in the larger cities coordinating their efforts with existing War Bond committees. Mrs. Nell Hunter, of the Interracial Section of the National Office, spent two weeks making a tour of the State with Mrs. Fannie H. Ponder, president of the Federation, which itself made an investment of $1,000 in the Fourth War Loan drive. Total sales traceable to the activities of these women amounted to $385,000. G. D. Rogers, president of the Central Life Insurance Company of Tampa, presented a check for $50,000 to Mrs. Ponder, as his company's investment in the Fourth War Loan drive.

WAR BOND AIDE—John W. Mitchell, of Hampton, Va., has been appointed to the staff of the inter-racial section of the War Finance Committee, the Treasury Department has announced. Mr. Mitchell will be a special consultant in promoting the sales of War Bonds among Negro farmers in connection with his work as Federal Extension field agent for the Department of Agriculture.

An intensive campaign is being planned for participation of Negro farmers in the Fifth War Bond Campaign, which begins on June 12, the Treasury Department said.

War Bond Parade And Rally Nets $52,000 In Sales

7-15-44

Dr. George Snowden of Dillard University and principal speaker at the Special Activities Committee's 5th War Loan Parade and Rally at Shakespeare Park last Sunday afternoon, eloquently urged Negroes to struggle for full citizenship rights. Dr. Snowden's inspiring talk had telling effect for the committee's secretary, John Simon, reported of $52,000 War bonds being bought as an indication. The significant act about the activity was the report that the subscribers were real bond purchasers in majority. A patriotic sense of duty pervaded the throng that participated in the parade and merit the praise of all for the wonderful spirit of cooperation that the rally a success. James Addison Holtry, co-chairman of the committee and president of the Good Citizens insurance company, said "Organization and cooperation are the keys to success. Unless the entire community realizes the importance of cooperating in the winning of this war, the sacrifices made by the young men and women of the Negro race will mean nothing". To show the spirit of the Good Citizens in backing up the men and women in the armed forces, Mr. Holtry purchased $20,000 of War Bonds in the Rally on Sunday afternoon.

Dr. P. T. Robinson, of New Zion Baptist Church, purchased fifty dollars worth of "E" bonds at the Sunday "War Bond Rally" which amounted to an aggregate sum of nine hundred and thirty-seven dollars or more. R. L. Johnson, vice-president and general manager of the Good Citizens, purchased $500.00 of bonds. Miss Neotha Bennett of the Neotha Beauty Salon, purchased $500.00. Hundreds of persons bought bonds in denominations of $100.00 to $25.00.

7-15-44

Greetings were expressed by Mrs. Naomi Borikins, direitor of the Fifth War Loan Drive. Ernest Scott of Transport, Workers of America (CIO), William Spooner, Longshoremen's Union (CIO); Dr. A. B. Menilik, of Defense League, were on the program. Ernest J. Wright acted as master of ceremonies.

Retired Farmer Makes Purchase Of $10,000 Bond

7-15-44

Baton Rouge, La.—The Fifth War Loan in Baton Rouge was boosted July 5 by $10,000 when Pompey Squires, retired Negro farmer, made this purchase, the second such purchase made by him since World War II started. Mr. Squires, who has been on the retired list since 1922, when he sold the major portion of his large farm to the Standard Oil Company of Louisiana, which located there-

Crippled Children Sell $2,022 Worth of War Bonds to Buy a Field Ambulance

7-15-44

chairs and crutches proved no ob-Wheelstacle to 76 children in the na-chases of U. S. War Bonds.

tion's capital who raised $2,022 in War Bonds and Stamps as their contribution to the Fifth War Loan.

The story of how they did it, in spite of physical handicaps which compelled them to receive school instruction either at home or in District Hospitals, was brought to light this week by the Treasury Department.

The children, with the aid of the Visiting Teacher Corps of Freedmen's hospital, sold War Saving Stamps to relatives as well as to doctors and nurses. They swelled the total by making articles for sale, and in this manner raised the $2,022 which was earmarked for purchase of a field ambulance.

Wednesday was an important day in the lives of these shut-ins. The new ambulance, sleek and shiny, was dedicated. It rolled up to the grounds of the Freedmen's Hospital Annex and was greeted with cries of surprise and admiration from the juvenile onlookers.

Donald Clark, 11, a victim of infantile paralysis, could not contain himself. "Gee whiz," he said, "she's bigger than I thought."

George Bryant, 14, was equally enthusiastic. Confined with arthritis, he showed promise of becoming a good business man. "She'll make a good truck after the war is over," he told a bystander. "If the government will sell it cheap we might buy it back."

7-7-44

Following the dedication ceremonies, Mrs. Ida Z. Alphin, supervisor of the Visiting Teachers Corps, had this to say: "The children were almost heartbroken because they could not buy the ambulance in time for the big invasion. However, you can see for yourself, they're all happy today."

NEGRO DIVISION SALES IN 5TH WAR LOAN DRIVE SOARS CLOSE TO $600,000 SOLD

Weekly — New Orleans, La.

7-15-44

Returns of the Fifth War Loan drive, which were still coming in on Tuesday, had raised the total in bonds sold well above the city's quota, with incomplete returns showing that the Negro division had sold $564,978 in bonds, it was announced through official sources.

Of that amount $51,400 of bonds were sold at a rally in Shakspeare Park on Sunday, Jas. A. Holtry and Ernest J. Wright, co-chairmen of the special activities committee of the Negro Fifth War Loan group, announced.

Figures released Tuesday disclosed the following amounts of bonds sold through various committees:

7-15-44

Insurance executives' council, W. G. Carradine, chairman, $166,947; professionals, J. L. Procope, chairman, $8,000; special activities, James A. Holtry and Ernest J. Wright, co-chairmen, $51,400; athletic committee, J. V. Hamilton, chairman, $4,000; civic groups, Miss M. D. Coghill, chairman, $12,500; benevolents, Emile Labat and Frank Grimes, co-chairmen, $15,851; labor, J. Harvey Netter, chairman, $42,600; defense industries, James N. Brown and Rev. E. H. Columbus, co-chairmen, $195,725 (Higgins Industries $75,000 and Delta Shipyards $15,500, with returns not yet completed); business committee, Mrs. Ethel F. Turner, chairman, $57,350.

Total war bond sales in the state of Louisiana in the Fifth War Loan drive stood at $137,785,195.50, or 109.3 per cent of the state's quota, it was announced Monday.

7-15-44

From a national standpoint, America had smashed over the top in the $16,000,000,000 Fifth War Loan drive Saturday and returns indicated that the quota would be well exceeded, Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau announced that day.

The New Orleans Negro Division of the Fifth War Loan drive was directed by Mrs. Naomi Richards Borikins, with George Longe as parish chairman.

Several outstanding features added much interest to the Fifth War Loan campaign. Among these were the show held at Booker T. Washington Auditorium which presented Muriel Rahn, famous Broadway actress; Dean William Pickens and Negro aviators fresh from the combat zone; the rally and parade held by the special activities committee in Shakspeare Park on Sunday and the boxing benefit carnival held at the Coliseum Arena Sunday, July 2.

The boxing carnival, which presented many ring stars of bygone years, was sponsored by the Athletic Committee, the Veteran Fighters and the Hollywood Boys, with the cooperation of Promoter Louis Messina, and Matchmaker Louis Chattard. J. V. Hamilton was chairman of the affair, which sold $4,000 in bonds.

7-15-44

Others who cooperated with the boxing carnival were Joe Provenzano, Joe Pecoraro, Heard Ragas, who donated the use of the Coliseum Arena, and Chief of Police George Reyer.

The total amount of bonds sold through the Negro division of the Fifth War Loan campaign does not represent the total amount purchased by Negroes of New Orleans, but merely the amount sold through that division.

7-15-44

Bonds purchased by New Orleans Negroes employed by various business establishments and government agencies were reported through other committtees.

New Orleans Negroes Raise $1,000,000 In Fifth War Bond Drive

Age — New York, N.Y.

9-14-44

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Negroes in New Orleans, La., purchased nearly $1,000,000 worth of War Bonds in the Fifth War Loan drive, according to the final report of Mrs. N. R. Borikins, chairman of the Negro Division, which was made public last week by the Treasury Department.

The drive began with a public mass meeting and program at Booker T. Washington High School, which featured Muriel Rahn, Broadway singing star, late of the operetta "Carmen Jones", and Negro flyers of the 99th Pursuit Squadron recently returned from active duty in Italy. These included Capt. Clarence Jamison and Lt. Allen Lane, who were interviewed.

Addresses were made by William Pickens, head of the Inter-racial Section of the War Finance Division of the Treasury; Leon Tujague, state chairman of the War Finance Committee; C. W. Taylor, State coordinator of the War Finance Committee; John Dane, Orleans Parish director of the Fifth War Loan drive; E. Kirby Newburger, chairman of the New Orleans War Finance Committee and Mrs. Naomi Borikins, chairman of the Negro division. This effort netted $30,000 in war bond sales.

8-19-44

What Negroes Are Doing

BY OSCAR W. ADAMS

The Negro Division of the War Finance Committee is promoting a mammoth bond rally at 3 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 17, at Sixteenth Street Baptist Church. This is the last, and it is hoped the crowning event of the Sixth War Loan drive. The division quota of $1,000,000 in the Sixth War Loan drive has not been reached.

This bond rally will be the biggest of its kind ever staged in Birmingham. Special feature will be the choral concert given by the Reception Center Chorus of Ft. Benning, Ga. All of the singers of this "soldier chorus" were well-known artists of note and distinction as civilians before induction into the Army. Since this choral ensemble was formed at the reception center at Ft. Benning, they have become famous for their unique arrangements and distinctive renditions of classical music as well as that of the beautiful and beloved Negro spirituals. So well liked is their music that a Columbus, Ga., radio station features them over the air each week. During the Sixth War Loan campaign the chorus has traveled extensively throughout the Fourth Service Command, giving concerts to assist in the sale of War Bonds. Through their efforts over $7,000,000 have been invested at the various places they have appeared.

Birmingham should be proud to turn out Sunday afternoon for the concert, for one of her native sons, Sgt. William Long, is a featured soloist of this famous singing group. In the group with Sgt. Long will be noted singers from other cities throughout the South.

Another feature of the combined bond rally and concert Sunday afternoon, will be the appearance of two Negro boys who saw active duty in England, France, Africa and Italy, who will relate their experiences on these battlefronts and assist in the bond rally. They are Sgt. Frank Jordan, native of Albany, Ga., who has been in service two years and served overseas six months. He was in chemical warfare in England and France, and was wounded at Cherbourg, France, June 30. Since Aug. 21, Sgt. Jordan has been in Northington General Hospital at Tuscaloosa, Ala., and Pfc. George Larkins, a native of Tallahassee, Fla., who has been in service for two years, 18 months of which has been service overseas in Africa and Italy. He was wounded in Italy May 8 and arrived at Northington General Hospital Oct. 3.

Admission to the bond rally will be free, but complete arrangements will be provided for the sale of War Bonds of all denominations.

Chairman A. G. Gaston, of the Negro Division, urges every Negro citizen of Jefferson County to come to the bond rally and help boost the Negro Division over the top.

The reception center chorus is under direction of Sgt. Willis Brown, Minter, Ala., with Sgt. Varnell Ford, Knoxville, Tenn., as accompanist and Sgt. William Washburn, Memphis, Tenn., as narrator. Traveling with the chorus on this tour are Chaplain Isaac I. McDonald of the reception center, and S. J. Phillips.

* * *

MEMBERS AND FRIENDS of the Metropolitan A. M. E. Zion Church, corner of North 16th Street and Fourth Avenue, will welcome the new minister for this outstanding A. M. E. Zion Church on Sunday morning, Dec. 17, when Dr. J. A. Babbington-Johnson takes charge as pastor.

47L-1944

War Bonds & Stamps

Negro Committee Appointed to Aid in Fourth War Loan

Augusta, Ga., Herald

W. S. Hornsby, prominent citizen of Augusta, has been selected to head the Fourth War Loan Drive among Negroes in Augusta. In commenting on the willingness of local Negroes to cooperate in the Fourth War Loan Drive, Dr. Hornsby stated that Negroes were glad to cooperate and were anxious to "back the attack" by investing in government bonds.

The following outstanding Negro citizens compose the steering committee:

W. S. Hornsby, chairman; Dr. J. A. Evans, Rev. W. R. Mack, Rev. L. A. Pinkston, A. M. Carter, Rev. A. W. Vincent, Rev. M. J. Sherard, John Strother, W. C. Ervin, Dr T. W. Josey, Rev. A. C. Griggs, E. S. Pinkerton, Rev. G. H. Carter, Rev. R. C. Calhoun, J. W. Wallace, W. M. Carpenter, W. S. Harris, Rev. A. R. Cooper, Dr. A. E. Maxwell, Rev. W. D. Morman, W. H. Mays, Dr. J. E. Carter, Dr. J. S. Outler, Rev. Y. L. Yancey, S. M. Jenkins, L. D. Perry.

The following outstanding citizens compose the contact committee:

Mme. S. S. Johnson, Mme. Mary Beasley, Mme. W. W. White, Mlle. Louise Laney, M. Wallace, L. Wallace, M. Anderson, Rev. M. J. Whitaker, W. M. McKinley, Dr. J. C. Collier, T. Bowman R. M. Martin, V. Lowe, T. Williams, T. Kelley, A. Hollman, D. W. Willis, W. S. Hornsby, Jr., Mme. J. B. Jennings, W. J. Mason, I. Abney, Mme. Z. Wigfall, C. L. Wigfall, M. M. Hamilton, Ed Lee, William Grady, W. M. Harris, Joe Robinson, Mme. C. Green, Mlle. R. Gray, Mlle. W. J. Hibler, Deacon E. A. Searles, S. B. Thomas, C. B. Nichols, J. S. Perry, Y. E. Myers, C. W. Johnson, Mlle. Fannie Smythe, Mme. C. E. Jenkins, I. Washington, C. Butler, G. M. Johnson, C. Hickson, J. A. Thomas, J. T. Walker, Mme. M. W. Brown, W. H. Hilborn, J. A. Singleton, H. G. Gaulden, M. Scott.

In the initial meeting of the steering committee, $50,000 worth of bonds were pledged as a starting point in the drive. Both of the above committees have indicated their willingness to cooperate 100 per cent in the Fourth War Loan effort and do all in their power to reach the quota.

Augusta

TWO NEGRO SCHOOLS 100 PERCENT IN THE WAR LOAN CAMPAIGN

Two colored schools have rated 100 per cent in cooperation in the Fourth War Loan drive, according to announcement of Superintendent S. D. Copeland.

These are the Springfield School, of which Frances Smythe is principal; and the Fifth Ward School of which Clara Jenkins is principal.

Grades of various other schools turning in a record of 100 per cent compliance are as follows:

Houghton, grade 3-A, Miss Myrtis McKenzie, teacher, 38 on roll; grade 4-B, Mrs. Leila Bruce teacher, 39 on roll; Grade 7-B, Miss Lavinia Tyler, teacher, 22 on roll; Grade 6-B, Miss Mina Lee Rubenstein, teacher, 31 on roll; Grade 2-A, Miss Irene Philpot teacher, 32 on roll.

William Robinson School: Grade 1-A, Miss Margaret Sheron, teacher, 40 on roll; Grade 4, Mrs. Lena Boyd, teacher, 38 on roll; Grade 6 Miss Ruth Capers, teacher, 44 on roll.

Monte Sano School: Grade 1 Miss Annie Gercke, teacher, 41 on roll; Grade 2, Miss Walden, teacher, 28 on roll; Grade 3, Miss Marian Smith, teacher, 34 on roll; Grade 5, Miss Helen Steed, teacher, 29 on roll; Grade 3 B-2, Miss Virginia Hallman, teacher, 34 on roll.

Martha Lester School: 3-B, Miss Jane McGouirk, teacher, 37 on roll.

John Milledge School: Grade 5, Miss Anne Skinner, teacher, 38 on roll.

Emma Stoughton School: Grade 2, 40 on roll; Grade 3, 24 on roll.

C. T. Walker School: Grade 4, Dolly B. Givens, teacher, 53 on roll; Grade 7-3 R. F. Pinckney, teacher, 31 on roll.

BOND DRIVE SUCCESS AMONG COLORED

Last Monday vening a group of colored citizens were entertained at a concert at the Colored School by the 173rd Army Band of Fort McClellan. At that time $816.00 was pledged in War Bonds and Stamps.

The meeting was arranged by the Negro Business and Professional Men's Club, of Anniston, and the local school board. There were several inspiring speeches by the Rev. H. B. Banks, and other members of th Club. This was the first gathering of this kind among the colored people of Jacksonville and the sponsors of the movement have commended them highly.

Citizens who did not attend the meeting and who wish to buy Bonds are asked to report to Eugene Reid, Jewell Greer or C. L. Wilson so that this amount may be increased.

The following bought bonds: Rev. J. W. Greer, $25; Eugene Reid, $100; Will Jackson, $25; Willie Collis, $25; Tom Leavell, $10; R. T. Morris $18.75; T. B. Foxx, $200; Geneva Caldwell, $18.75; Madge George, $25; William Weaver, $18.75; Bessie Williams, $50; Van D. Jackson, $18.75; J. D. Greer, $18.75; F. D. Stringer, $18.75; Ora Washington. $1.00 Stamps; Henry A. Smith, 18.75; Gilbert A. Jones, $18.75; Jennie T. Fox, $18.75; Anne Glover, $18.75; Harrison Oden, $37.50; Joe Oden, $18.75; Ed Leavell, $18.75.

NEGROES MAKE CONTRIBUTION

Yazoo, Miss. Sentinel

February 25, 1944

$50,542.75 WORTH OF WAR BONDS PURCHASED IN DRIVE

Afro-Americans Purchased $27,000 Worth—Other Buyers Are Listed

Yazoo City, Feb. 24—The Negro people of Yazoo County have made an outstanding co ribution to the success of the Fourth War Bond Drive.

According to a statement issued by D. W. Lindsey, Chairman for the Negro Finance Committee, a total of $50,342.75 (cost price) worth of bonds have been purchased so far in the drive.

The Afro-Americans purchased $27,000 worth to bring their total War Bond purchases to $93,000.

Chairmen of Beat Committees and the amounts sold by each are as follows:

Beat 1—Alma Johnson, $15,330.25

Beat 2—Audubon Elem, $1,083.75.

Beat 3—T. J. Huddleston, Sr., $30,625.00

Beat 4—Lucius H. Harris, $2,054.50.

Beat 5—Simon Burnette, $1,464.25.

Beat Chairmen and their helpers are to be highly commended for their untiring efforts in encouraging their people to respond to the call of their government during this emergency.

Greenville, Ala., Advocate

January 20, 1944

Colored Citizens Are Cooperating In Drive

In keeping with the meeting recently held at the court house, under the direction of Col. Jeff P. Beeland, County Chairman, War Finance Committee, the Colored County Committee, of which D. B. Bennett is chairman, and Elliot Robbins, Negro County Aagent, who has been designated to direct the activities of the Fourth War Loan Drive among the colored population, are making an urgent appeal to every colored citizen to do his best by buying War Bonds and Stamps during this drive.

Rev. Bennett and Agent Robbins make joint statements to the colored people of Butler county: "We have accepted as our quota, $12,000.00, to be sold in bonds and stamps to the colored people of Butler county. We know that you will not fail us in this effort, as everyone responded wholeheartedly during the Third War Loan Drive. In this effort, we are asking the same committee to serve in each community as you did so efficiently during the last drive."

The colored teachers of Greenville are thanked for assisting in getting out some 1,200 circulars to the colored people pertaining to this drive. The following are members of the County Committee, who will assist in all activities of the drive: W. M. Jarrett, H. Z. Franklin, M. I. Brewer, James Herbert, A. B. Carter, W. C. Patton, Rev. E. P. Pugh, and Dave Marlow.

Negro Bond Rally Most Successful

Dr. Hicks Reports Fine Response At Gathering As Well As In Campaign

Sponsored by Dr. J. L. Hicks, Lauderdale county war bond chairman for the negroes, an enthusiastic war bond rally was held Tuesday afternoon at Slater school and bonds to the amount of $5,700 were purchosed. This amount is only the bonds purchased at the rally, as a total of $31,010.15 was purchased during the fourth war loan drive, which closed February 15.

Through the cooperation of Superintendents J. W. Powell and W. Herschel Walker all city and county negro schools were closed at noon in order that the students have the privilege of attending the victory rally.

Prominent on the program was the widely-known negro contralto singer, Nell Hunter, who came prior to the rally and rendered every assistance possible in making the drive a success. She is not only a singer, but leader of the famous Hall Johnson choir of stage and screen and her music on this occasion was greatly enjoyed by all who heard her. Another feature of the rally was the 20-minute air carnival by three army planes piloted by negro pilots from the base at Tuskegee, who dropped leaflets from the sky in recognition of the bond rally effort. The newly organized band from Burrell and Slater schools made its initial appearance and rendered a short program of music.

To The Colored Citizens of Ocilla And Irwin County

Ocilla, Ga., Star

February 10, 1944

Those of you who have read the Ocilla Star of Feb. 3, 1944, under the caption: "Japs Wantonly Tortured, Killed Soldiers on Bataan; Everyone Asked to Buy Bonds to Put an End to the Japanese Brutality."

If you haven't read that article I am asking that you secure a copy from the Star office and read it in order that you might know how our boys are suffering to preserve this country of ours. Most of us are to oold to go, but there are so many ways in which we can help.

Our group is lagging in the purchase of War Bonds. We can't afford not to buy Bonds in this drive if you would help these boys. If every colored person of Irwin County would buy just one Bond that would go a llong way in helping our boys to put an end to the Japanes brutality.

The colored citizens in Ben Hill county have organized the 4th War Bond Drive. Let us show Mr. A. S. Harris, County Chairman, that we are 100 per cent behind the 4th War Loan.

I am asking each colored preacher to tell his people about this War Loan. Each teacher, each businessman and businesswoman, will you please tell the people and encourage them to buy Bonds?

Under Direction of Dr. Long

Colored Business And Professional Groups Buy Bonds

Palatka, Fla., Daily News

February 7, 1944

Emphatically advising the local bond committee that "We are not through yet," the colored business and professional group under the leadership of Dr. J. A. Long and

Sell Over $10,000 Worth

We could easily lend the government some of our surplus money. It will go a long way in helping in this great struggle that we are now in.

As president of the Irwin County Colored Civic League, I am asking all colored citizens to meet at the Ocilla Colored High School at 4 o'clock Feb. 20th. I will have Mr. Harris or one of his representatives to talk with you about the 4th War Loan.

Buy a Bond, will you?

E. C. COLSON, Sr.

Professor A. J. Polk have turned in their initial bond orders totaling $10,000.

The following have purchased to date in the amounts indicated; Ira Ellis $5000.00; Dr. J. A. Long; $2000.00; Dr. C. C. Long, $1000.00; Ben Ellis $200.00; Harold Osgood, $150.00; Dr. N. B. Hester, Mary Lawson, C. S. Belton, William West, Amos Sermon, Clarence Hall, Annie Mae Banks, Amos Brown, $100; Azalea Grocery and J. T. Smith, $50. The following purchased the $25.00 bond: Coney Gray, Roberta Bryant, Marguerita Hill, Carrie Williams, Clarence Singleton, Bob Moorhead, William Hunter, Ollie May Green, Claud Wilson, Fred Bartell, Preston Ruth, Mattie Brewer and Carrie Watson.

When this drive is over the local committee feel that the colored group will have set up a very commendable record.

"Keep Us Flying" Poster Printing Numbers 150,000

Journal & Guide
Norfolk, Va.
1-29-44

WASHINGTON, D. C. — The Fourth War Loan poster, "Keep Us Flying," which depicts a Negro aviator and his parachute pack, has met with popularity wherever displayed, according to Willard W. Allen, chief of the interracial section of the Treasury's War Finance Division.

The poster is reproduced from the painting by Mrs. Betsy Graves Reyneau, of Brooklyn, N. Y., whose model was Lt. Robert W. Deiz, University of Oregon graduate and formerly a member of the Portland Symphony.

DONE IN 1942

She met him in 1942 at Tuskegee Institute, Ala., where she was doing a portrait of the late George Washington Carver, noted Negro scientist. Deiz was in training at the Army's 66th Flying Training Depot, located near the school. He received his wings that September.

Deiz is now on duty in Italy. he saw his first action in a dive-bombing raid last September on the harbor of Pescara, on the Adriatic sea. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. C. Deiz, 2254, Thirty-fifth Place, Portland, Ore. 1-29-44

The original supply of 100,000 posters, according to Mr. Allen, was quickly exhausted by demands that followed circularization of a few hundred samples. An additional 50,000 posters had to be run off to take care of the increased demands from thousands of Negro churches and educational institutions, social and fraternal organizations and business establishments throughout the country.

Negroes In Leading Role In 4th War Loan Drive

Defender - Chicago, Ill.
1-29-44

WASHINGTON—Negroes are not only participating in the Fourth War Loan drive as purchasers of war bonds, the Treasury Department announced this week, but they are also helping to sell bonds in larger numbers than ever before.

At present, four full-time executives and a clerical staff in the national office of the War Finance committee are assisting the drive on the national level, and 15 Negro leaders throughout the country are serving as dollar-a-year members of their war finance staffs.

The Inter-racial section of the Defense Savings staff, which later became the War Finance Committee, was set up in May, 1941, under the supervision of James L. Houghteling, assistant to the Secretary of the Treasury, and with Dean William Pickens, noted orator and publicist, as head of the unit. Mr. Pickens began work with one assistant in the main Treasury building, but in a short while two clerks were added and one additional executive, Jesse O. Thomas, field secretary of the National Urban League.

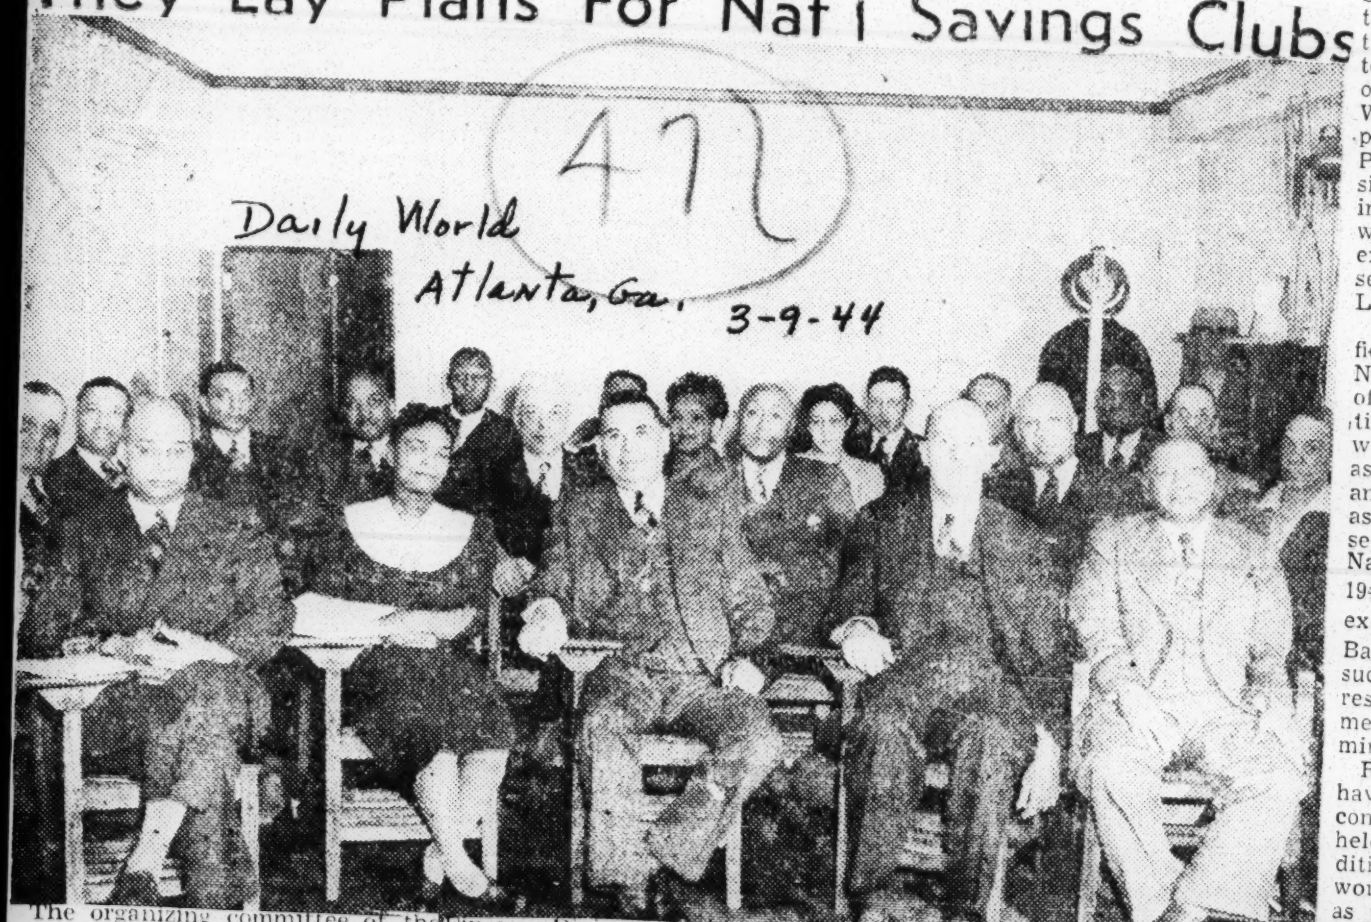
Shortly after Pearl Harbor, two field workers were added. Mrs. Nell Hunter, former staff member of the National Youth Administration, began work among Negro women, and John W. Whitten was assigned to work among fraternal and labor groups. After Mr. Thomas had served the Treasury for seventeen months, he went to the National Red Cross on April 1, 1943. Willard W. Allen, insurance executive and fraternal leader of Baltimore, Md., was appointed to succeed Mr. Thomas. Mr. Whitten resigned recently to become staff member of the Office of Price Administration. 1-29-44

Representatives of this group have spoken before every Negro convention, religious and secular, held in the past two years. In addition, they have addressed the workers of many large war plants, as well as many fraternal groups.

They Lay Plans For Nat'l Savings Clubs

47

Daily World
Atlanta, Ga.
3-9-44



The organizing committee of the War Bond Saving Clubs with Treasury officials in Washington last week to complete plans for the organization of War Bond Savings Clubs among Negroes throughout the country. Among those present were l to r, front row, P. L. Prattis, Pittsburgh Courier; Mrs. Martha B. Goldman, War Finance Division; Willard W. Allen, chief executive officer, National Organization Division War Finance Division; James L. Houghtelling, director, Nat'l Organization Division; Doctor J. E. Walker, national chairman. Back row, l to r Albon Holsey, Tuskegee; G. L. Townes, Richmond; C. A. Scott, Atlanta; Claude A. Barnett, Chicago; T. M. Campbell, Tuskegee; Jesse H. Mitchell, Washington; Dr. F. D. Patterson, Tuskegee; Mrs. Nell Hunter, Washington; John W. Dobbs, Atlanta; Pickens, Washington (Owl Photo) 3-9-44

Finance Divison; James L. Houghton, Ed Mayl, War Finance Committee; Lester B. Granger, New York City; Charles A. McLean, Winston-Salem; Jesse O. Thomas, Washington; Charles Crain, Washington and Mrs. Rosa Brown Bracy, Tuskegee. Not shown on photo, but present were J. Finley Wilson, Washington, Bishop James A. Bray, Chicago, and Dr. William

Mary Bethune heads bond rally for S.S. Harriet Tubman

WASHINGTON — The Negro citizenry here will have a big War Bond rally July 13, the Treasury Dept. announced this week. It will be held at Griffith Stadium under the auspices of the National Council of Negro Women as part of the council's effort to sell $2,000,000 worth of war bonds to cover the cost of the Liberty ship Harriet Tubman, first ship to be named for a Negro woman.

According to the council's announcement, the program will include a baseball game between the Homestead Grays and the Bushwick Nine, of Brooklyn, N. Y., led by the Tuskegee Clellan Army bands.

The principal address was by the Honorable Luther Patrick. Other speakers at the rally were Oscar W. Adams and James E. Kelley.

Negro division headquarters. A. G. Gaston, chairman, announced bond sales in the fifth drive to total $1,292,000 to top its goal by more than a quarter of a million dollars.

NEGRO VOLUNTEER WORKERS WILL TAKE the field again Monday to sell more War Bonds, Jefferson County is more than $1,000,000 behind its goal in the Fifth War Loan drive, and Chairman A. G. Gaston of the Negro division has asked every volunteer to redouble the efforts. 7-23-44

In this call Chairman Gaston is asking every citizen to place their savings, and as much from their current earnings as possible, into the purchase of extra War Bonds.

Last Sunday afternoon and evening thousands of persons assembled at Legion Field to take part in the War Bond rally, staged by the Negro division of the County War Finance Committee. A colorful parade preceded the program at Legion Field, and was

Calloway Writes Jive Bond Song

Daily World - Atlanta, Georgia
5-20-44

NEW YORK CITY—(SNS)— At the special request of Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgantheau, Cab Calloway has composed the first war bond song in jive, titled, "Rackin 'em Back."

Combining jive-talk with a contagious melody, "Rackin 'em Back" urges bondholders to "stache your bonds away" which means "hide your bonds for safe-keeping." This advice coincides with the Treasury Department's current campaign to dissuade bond-owners from cashing them in before maturity.

3-20-44
Cab will introduce "Rackin 'em

WMC Adopts Program To End Job Discrimination

People's Voice - N.Y. N.Y. 2-12-'44

Special

WASHINGTON, D. C. — The War Manpower Commision has adopted a special new Employment Office Training Program to eliminate discrimination against Negroes seeking jobs, it was learned here this week. The program, under the heading of The United States Employment Service and the Negro Work Applicant, will be inaugurated the latter part of this month. Already prepared in the form of a handbook, it will go to each of the 1,500 USES (United States Employment Service) local offices throughout the country, from Maine to Mississippi and from Seattle to San Antonio.

Approximately 20,000 USES receptionists, interviewers, employer-contact and related personnel will receive two 4-hour training sessions for thorough indoctrination. Emphasis is placed on eliminating, among the USES personnel having direct contact with work applicants, any tendencies toward discrimination on the basis of race or color. Accompanying the handbook will be an Instructor's Guide.

This marks the first time in governmental history that any specific training material dealing with the handling of Negro work applicants has been sent out under an official stamp.

Author of the plan is Lt. Lawrence A. Oxley, Senior Technical Representative, Bureau of Placement, War Manpower Commission. Lt. Oxley, a veteran of World War I and connected with the Department of Labor for the past ten years, started work on the plan last July. Prior to its final acceptance, the program was tried out by him in Detroit, Louisville, Ky., and Cleveland, O., as a laboratory experiment. It will be formally introduced in each of the twelve WMC regions throughout the country under his supervision.

The program aims to provide USES personnel "with practical tools for coping with the placement of racial minority groups, with special reference to the Negro applicant." It stresses the role of USES representatives in conforming with government non-discrimination policies in placement of workers.

The simple, basic problems of minority groups are explained thoroughly and ways to overcome these problems are a major part of the plan.

Prepared in plain, frank language, the handbook discusses race theories and the race question briefly but thoroughly. The vital need for the employment service worker to drop his or her personal prejudices is stressed, and ways this can be accomplished are outlined.

WMC Adopts Employment Office Training Program To Alleviate Bias Among Negro Applicants

Age - New York, N.Y.

2-12-44

(By Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The War Manpower Commission has adopted a special new Employment Office Training Program to eliminate discrimination against Negroes seeking jobs, it was learned here this week.

The program, under the heading of "The United States Employment Service and the Negro Work Applicant," will be inaugurated the latter part of this month. Already prepared in the form of a handbook, it will go to each of the 1,500 USES (United States Employment Service) local offices throughout the country, from Maine to Mississippi and from Seattle to San Antonio.

Approximately 20,000 USES receptionists, interviewers, employer-contact and related personnel will receive two 4-hour training sessions for thorough indoctrination. Emphasis is placed on eliminating, among the USES personnel having direct contact with work applicants, any tendencies toward discrimination on the basis of race or color. Accompanying the handbook will be an Instructor's Guide.

from other governmental orders, manuals and instructions.

This marks the first time in governmental history that any specific training material dealing with the handling of Negro work applicants has been sent out under an official stamp.

Author of the plan is Lt. Lawrence A. Oxley, senior technical representative, Bureau of Placement, War Manpower Commission. Lt. Oxley(a veteran of World War I and connected with the Department of Labor for the past ten years, started work on the plan last July. Prior to its final acceptance, the program was tried out by him in Detroit, Louisville, Ky., and Cleveland, O., as a laboratory experiment. It will be formally introduced in each of the twelve WMC regions throughout the country under his supervision.

Practical Program

The program aims to provide USES personnel "with practical tools for coping with the placement of racial minority groups, with special reference to the Negro applicant." It stresses the role of USES representatives in conforming with government non-discrimination policies in placement of workers. 2-12-44

The simple, basic problems of minority groups are explained thoroughly and ways to overcome these problems are a major part of the plan.

Prepared in plain, frank language, the handbook discusses race theories and the race question briefly, but thoroughly. The vital need for the employment service worker to drop his or her personal prejudices is stressed, and ways this can be accomplished are outlined.

The handbook contains a wealth of information about the Negro in relation to the nation's industrial and ecnomic life, including a comparison of the extent of Negro participation in government, war industry and the armed forces during World War I and the current period of World War II.

The actvities of community organizations, such as the National Urban League, the NAACP and the National Council of Negro Women, are introduced as sources of aid in eliminating discrimination against Negroes, and cooperation with such groups is urged. 2-12-44

Also included in the handbook are full text copies of Executive Orders 8802 and 9346 under which the FEPC (President's Committee on Fair Employment Practices) operates; the Operating Agreement between WMC and FEPC on the Non-Discrimination Program; the WMC Management-Labor Policy Committee Resolution Pertaining to Racial Conflicts, and pertinent excerpts

47L-1944

Waste Paper Salvage

Negros Organize For Waste Paper Campaign

Reidsville N. C. Review

A committee has been formed and plans have been worked out to begin immediately the waste paper drive for Reidsville and vicinity, in order that every person in the city might be reached and participate in the waste paper drive.

The project carries a twofold objective: (1) A means of sharing the war effort; (2) Supporting municipal project, in that the proceeds will go for the erection of bleachers in the stadium now under construction.

The city and rural communities have been mapped off in zones. Branch street and Washington High schools will be organized and competition will exist between classes, under the supervision of the principals. A waste paper station will be located in a vacant shed on Lambert street, under the supervision of E. M. Townes. The Boy Scouts will be under the supervision of Scout Master E. L. Price and Commissioner H. K. Griggs, and their dates are likely to be on Saturdays, for collecting and depositing waste paper. There will also be a station at the McLaurin Funeral Home, for those persons in the business section of town, of which E. M. Townes will supervise.

All papers and magazines are asked to be tied in neat bundles before depositing them so they can be handled with ease.

After the paper has been weighed or estimated L. H. McLaurin's truck will come for it, provided there is enough at the various stations and deliver it to the central station, next to The Review building.

Members of the committee as appointed by are: L. H. McLaurin, chairman; A. N. McCoy, booster and secretary; E. M. Townes, supervising business sections; C. C. Watkin and R. L. Hannon, supervising rural communities, and S. E. Duncan, organizing schools.

47m-1944

GI Mechanics Do Miracles

Defender — Chicago, Ill.

n Invasion Repair Shops

8-12-44

By EDWARD B. TOLES
(Defender War Correspondent)

WITH THE FIRST ARMY IN ORMANDY. — There's a modern I. automobile shop here manned some of the finest mechanics in business that the folks back me would just love to tow those l jalopies into.

t's located in the largest cow sture I've seen in Normandy to te and all parts of jeeps, ducks, ks, trucks and practically any- ng mobile can be repaired here nothing flat.

'Only seven miles away, they're hting like hell pushing damn ns back further each day which ans we should be on the move fore long," said Sgt. Wilson Mal- d, 4312 Michigan Ave., Chicago, mer soda-jerker and cook at rsky's 43rd St. and South Park- y drug store.

'All those South Parkway taxi owboys' I used to serve all night ny, I didn't think that I'd be orking on auto motors so soon." learned from the sergeant how his huge swimming truck worked s he taxied me around the pas- ure. It actually floats without olts just as easy as when I was eing transported in water.

Does Big Business

This outfit is a medium automo- ve maintenance company which as welding units capable of re- airing any damaged automotive ehicle. Busy with trucks, these rease-laden soldiers were under rucks taking out differentials, rear nds, straightening axles and doing jam-up" jobs just like any A-1 ga- age back home. 8-12-44

Considering the vehicles that am each other on the narrow oads here, one can see how this stablishment does such a big busi- ess. Added to this number are hose broken-down on bombed-out oads, and those disabled from lain wear and tear or the seas of aud for which Normandy is noted his season.

Unlike home garages, a full 24- our schedule takes the place of nion hours and Sunday holiday eisure days. If these soldiers can't ork in the open at night because f blackouts, they retire to mobile achine shops and continue to re- air truck parts for the next day's laylight work. There are two weld- ng units, one motor supply unit, nd a motor parts unit constantly urning out finished repaired vehi- les. Arranged around hedgerows ike any modern garage, you are net at the headquarters camou- aged with netting where com- plaints are listed, numbered and shot immediately to the appropri- ate repair unit where men place hem on the waiting list or obtain nechanisms instantly according to he urgency of the situation.

Sgt. Julius Caesar, Jr., 607 N. Sixth St., Waco, Texas, took me over the unit just as if he were in his own shop back home. He told me there were three other compa- nies with Negro personnel handling motor mechanics. He pointed out how proud these men were of rec- ords made in turning out finished products. "They're all trained, hav- ing been to some of the finest mo- tor schools in the U.S. Army.

At the end of the pasture were cleverly camouflaged trucks, hardly discernable from a distance, cer- tainly not from overhead. Here was the small arms section of the com- pany where all types of guns, ri- fles and light artillery are made workable again. 8-12-44

We soon found that this is im- portant work for when I began making inquiries of Cpl. Ivan Ware, 423 Myrtle Ave., Neptune, N. J., about the accuracy of a partic- ular gun he was assembling, out jumped a captain who asked for my credentials. All the weapons that the men were working on at the time were especially being typed as they were captured from the enemy.

"This one," said Cpl. Ware, "is a German machine gun which is very intricate and very cheaply con- structed. Here is a French gun used by the Nazis. All guns came in rusty and covered with mud. In many cases, they were found be- side the bodies of dead soldiers where they had lain until salvaged by us." 8-12-44

Meets Chicagoan

Pvt. Walter Allen, 207 11th Ave., Phoenix City, Ala., held aloft a bright burnished steel machine gun, "Just as good as new and it was brought in yesterday as rusty and muddy as it could be. Now it's ours and will go right back into ac- tion to mow Nazis down."

Near the end of the hedgerow, I found Sgt. Eric Bogle, 5647 Wabash Ave., Chicago, who recently receiv- ed commendation for excellent service while in England. Proudly displaying clipping taken from The Chicago Defender and sent to him by his mother, Mrs. Francy Mc- Kinley, he expressed the opinion that the soldiers' morale is defi- nitely heightened by visits of old Chicagoans with news from home.

There was a momentary sadness as I had to take leave of these good friends but there are other hedgerows ahead filled with boys just like these who although they are not fighting furiously on front lines are nevertheless a hell of a big cog in this wheel that rolls on unceasingly against the enemy.

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md. 9-2-44

Stewart Describes Triumphant Entry

First Americans in Paris Are Colored Truck Drivers

By OLLIE STEWART

PARIS--The first time I saw Paris her heart was old, and she was not very well fed, but oh, how gay! The heart of France, in fact, was mad with joy because American had arri- ved.

I entered along Avenue De Fontain- ebleau Saturday morning at eleven with Cecil Carnes of the Saturday Evening Post, Tom Henry of the Wash- ington Star, and Dave Baylor of Ra- dio Station WGAR, Cleveland, Ohio. Our jeep was driven by Pvt. Arthur Holton of Lee, Mass.

Our arrival concluded three days and nights of camping on the out- skirts of the city waiting the mop- ping up of the last pockets of Ger- man resistance.

Along the broad boulevards, we saw many vehicles overturned and sandbagged which the enemy had used as barricades in their last stand on Friday, but in a few places where road blocks had been, we saw workmen already making repairs.

Hang Nazis in Effigy

Dummy Germans were hanged in effigy in two places but all signs of organized resistance had disappeared. Americans in ar- mored vehicles in control of cer- tain areas in other FFI (or Fight- ing French or the Interior) were in charge. 9-2-44

Beautiful women dashed into the streets to kiss dusty GI lads, to throw flowers and to offer wine and fruit.

Thousands of bicycles filled the boulevards and crowds lined the streets to wave and shout wel- come.

We set out to enter Paris on Wednesday but were held up about fifty miles away and slept Wednesday night almost in the laps of the enemy. Thursday we tried again but had to turn back, so we took over a deserted cha- teau, bought chicken eggs and had a feast. Friday we rushed the Seine south of the city but 88 shellfire forced us to retreat to the rear of an armored column storming strong-points outside the city, and just ahead of us 200 Nazis were captured after having been shelled into a daze. Friday night, we slept in the open coun- try with our rations almost gone.

Early Saturday, we headed for Versailles but were cut off and rode into Paris without an escort. We found the greatest collection of correspondents in history from every part of the world. Many of them were veterans of former campaigns who expect to return home soon. 9-2-44

This is the city that they have waited for and this is the day that the French nation prayer for. After all, there is but one Paris.

My hotel room was just vacat- ed a few days ago by a German officer who took the key with him. Signs in German still re- main in many parts of the city but the gray Nazi horde is fast retreating toward Berlin which is the last stop on the liberation parade.

Miracle Wrought

A miracle has been wrought here since June 6 and every American family represented in France today can feel proud.

Throughout the tough weeks that I have followed the fighting men from the Normandy beach- head to Paris, I have seen col- ored troops always in the van- guard. Their work has been praised by everybody who has profited by their efforts. This morning on the outskirts of the city I saw a lone truck driven by a colored lad who waved at me as he passed our jeep. I wish that I knew his name but maybe I shall see him again, maybe in Berlin.

First Americans in Paris Were Drivers

By OLLIE STEWART
AFRO War Correspondent with Invasion Forces in France

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

PARIS (By Cable).—On Sun- day I met the first four Ameri- can soldiers to enter the city of Paris. Members of a company of drivers mentioned previous- ly, they were specially chosen on this occasion to drive Gen- eral De Gaulle's party into the liberated French capital.

They are, Cpl. Arthur Russell, NYC; Cpl. Lawrence Dixon, De- troit; Cpl. Leonard DeMary, Chi- cago, and T/5 Freddie Brown, New Orleans. 9-2-44

Said DeMary, "We were as- signed to French troops enter- ing Paris. Two of us drove the De Gaulle party and the others drove American liaison officers. Bitter street fighting was in progress, but none of us was hurt.

GI Alaskan Highway Builders Honored With Battle Streamer

Amsterdam News — New York, N.Y.
11-25-44

Fine Record of Men of 93rd Drew Praise From Officials

FORT LEWIS, WASH.,—There was plenty of spit and polish for the 93rd general service engineer regiment recently, when its members, dressed in their finest, stepped out smartly on th Fort Lewis Army Service Forces Training Center parade ground in cadence to martial airs, and were honored with a presentation from the war department of their own unit battle streamers.

Maj. Gen. Joseph D. Patch, commander of Fort Lewis, made the presentation. He was assisted by Col. Frank S. Besson, engineer commander, Col. Charles F. Baish, commanding the 12th group, and the 93rd Regiment commander, Col. Walter H. Hodge.

Famed Regiment Cited

The famed Negro regiment, now stationed at Fort Lewis, was cited along with 16 other units in war department general orders for meritorious conduct in the construction of the Canadian-Alaskan military highway during the period from March to October in 1942.

General Patch personally carried the streamers to the regiment's color standards and attached them.

"I have knowledge of your fine record in Alaska," he said to the soldiers lined up in formation before him, "and you have made a fine record here with us. Good work. Keep it up," he concluded..

The order, published by the War Department and circulated throughout the army, states that the Alaskan project had to be completed "with all speed within the physical capacity of the troops." The route selected for the highway lay across "vast areas of almost impenetrable wilderness vaguely mapped and but little known."

11-25-44

They Made History

A suggestion of the hardships endured by members of the regiment in carrying out their assigned job is contained in the regimental historical annals. Men lived in tents. The temperature was usually around 60 degrees below zero. Tents had to be chopped up from the frozen ground with hand axes when moved.

Some of the areas through which the road was to go had never been traversed except by dog sled or on foot. The engineers were forced to overcome great difficulties imposed by mountainous terrain, deep muskeg, torrential streams, heavy forests—and always bad weather.

Before the battle streamers were presented, Colonel Besson awarded Good Conduct Ribbons to 108 men of the regiment, and congratulated each personally on winning the government honor.

11-25-44

After the streamer presentation, the entire regiment passed in review before General Patch, his staff and other high-ranking Fort Lewis officers. Music for the occasion was provided by the 362nd Army Service Forces band.

An Excellent Job

The regiment set a record of building a strip of road 69 miles long in one month and 12 days, or slightly more than a mile and a half a day. After four months about 240 miles of highway across some of the worst country in Alaska had been completed.

11-25-44

Brig. Gen. Clarence L. Sturdevant, assistant chief of engineers in Alaska, said it was "the best section of road on the Alaskan highway."

The Aleutian Islands were the next stop on their trip ticket. Here, members of the regiment tackled even more difficut construction projects under equally trying conditions.

Early last summer the crack outfit returned to the United States, and is now undergoing additional training designed to further its usefulness. It awaits America's call to any part of the world.

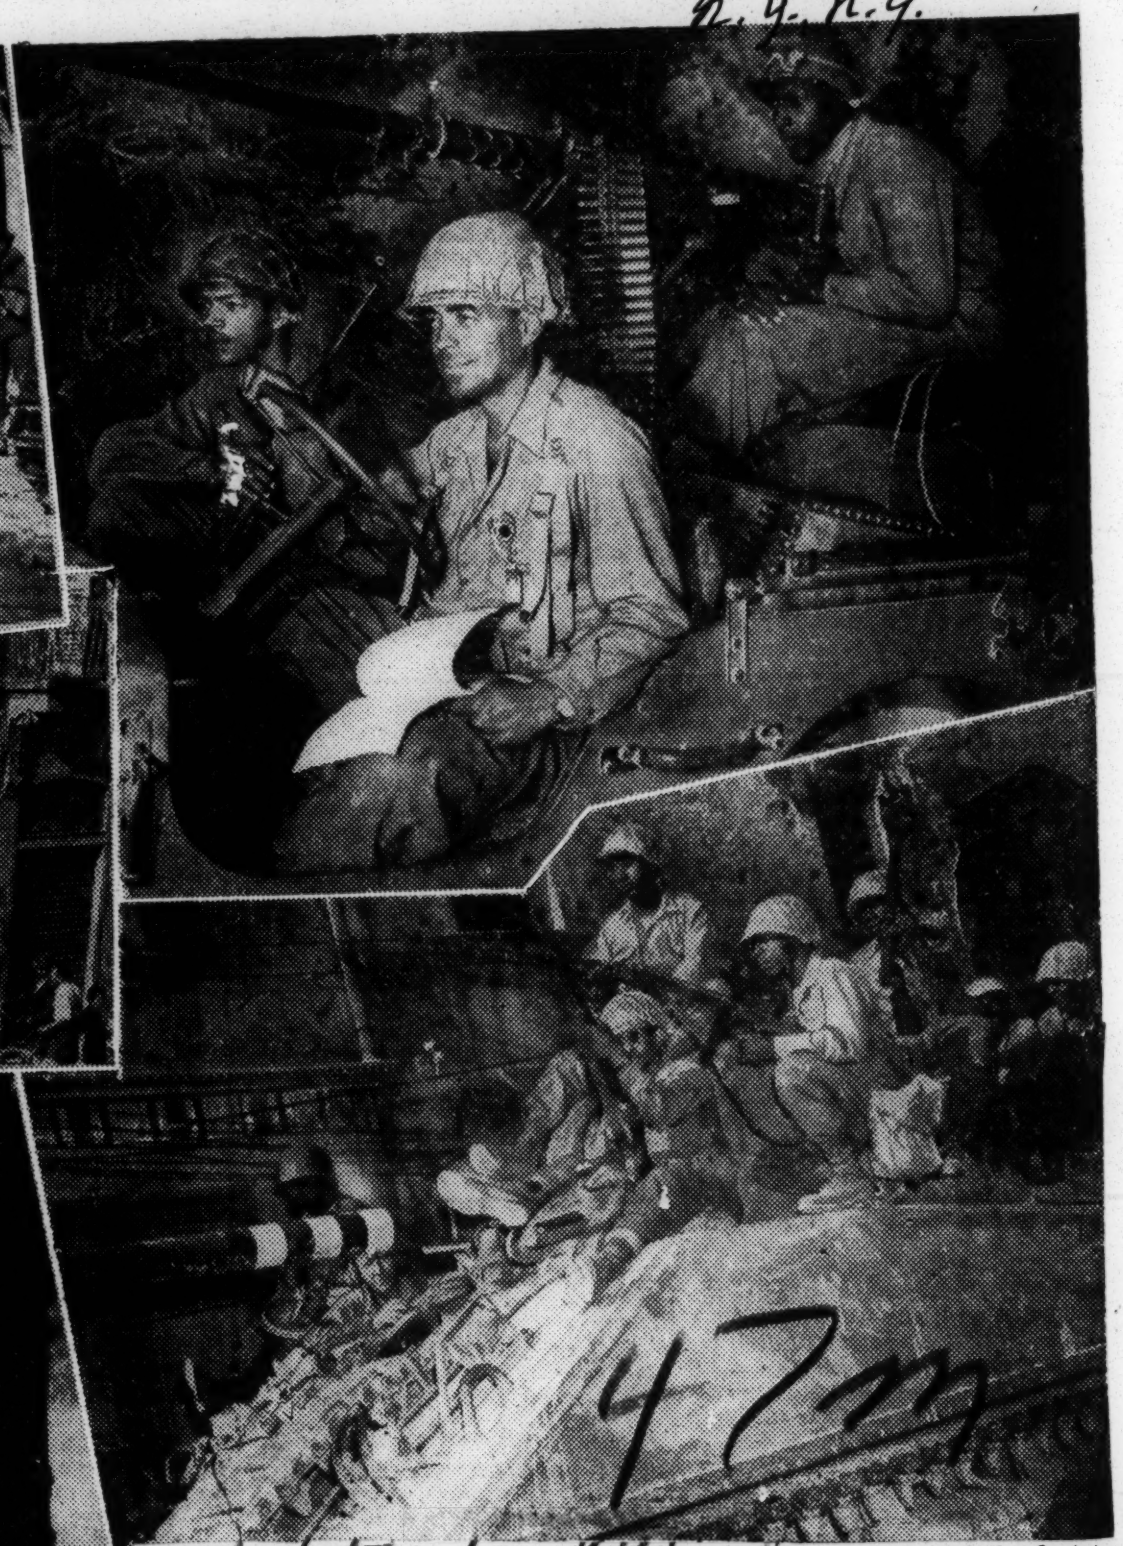
47m-1944

Germans Taste Brown Fist Near Gothic Line

N.Y.N.Y.

New York Amsterdam News 9-23-44

N.Y.N.Y.



TAN YANKS SLUG IT OUT WITH NAZIS ALONG THE ARNO RIVER. Top, left: The first patrol of the 92nd Division to cross the Arno River and return with prisoners, during action with the Fifth Army in Italy. Top, right: Captain Charles F. Gandy, commander of a company of the 92nd Infantry Division, is pictured in his jeep with First Lieut. R. A. Montgomery (left), and Pvt. Harold E. Clemens, of 56 West 127th St., New York City. Captain Gandy has just received orders to take his company across the Arno River near Pontederra. The night before one of his patrols was the first to cross the Arno and return with prisoners. Middle, left: Troops of the 92nd Division riding on tanks on their way to cross the Arno River. Bottom, left: A 105-mm howitzer of a field artillery unit of the 92nd Division, first Negro artillery outfit in Italy, is being fired at German positions across the Arno River. Bottom, right: Troops of the 92nd Division, riding on tanks of an armored division, stop to "take a break" on their way through the Arno River area to the Gothic Line. —U. S. Army Signal Corps Photos

ROGERS SAYS:

The U. S. Is the Only Place Where the Ability of the Negro Soldier Is Questioned

By J. A. ROGERS

Courier, Pittsburgh, Pa. 4-1-44

SECRETARY STIMSON'S excuse to Hamilton Fish for keeping Negro soldiers largely labor battalions has been completely answered by others; still, I feel that a few more words might be added. First, the trouble began when the Army decided to have jim-crow regiments in order to appease the exploiters of Negro labor in the South, thereby preventing the natural, commonsense course of selecting the most capable men, regardless of color, for those posts calling for technical skill.

Mr. Rogers

I do not think that even the most rabid professional Southerner will deny that there are numbers of white men incapable of doing the work that Secretary Stimson alleges that Negroes, as a group, are poor at doing. In fact, the number of white men in the Army who would be fit only for labor battalions, certainly exceeds the total number of Negro soldiers, competent and incompetent. Why have we not heard anything from Secretary Stimson on the mentally unequipped white men? The reason is that white, able and unable, are lumped together. In the present set-up the incompetent white soldier belongs to the same caste as the ablest white general; while the ablest Negro belongs to that of the Negro farthest down. America is actually fighting her war along color lines, yet, should anyone dare to say that this is a "race" war, he'd immediately be branded as a traitor.

COMPARISON OF TWO WAR RECORDS

There is little doubt that the percentage of Negroes capable of filling high positions in the Army is higher than whites able to do the same because the whites have had better educational opportunities. The report of the Bureau of the Census, June 20, 1942, says on the educational level of men of military age, "Educational attainment, the study indicated, was highest among whites and lowest among Negroes . . . Very great gains in education in the last two decades, however, have taken place in the Negro group. Among Negro men aged 35 to 44 (most of whom had finished their education 20 years ago) only 13 per cent had received one year or more of high school education, while among Negro men aged 20 to 24, 26.2 per cent had attended high school. Data on the educational level of Negro selectees in the present war when compared with similar data from the last war also show a great increase. Thus, 11 per cent of the Northern Negro selectees and 33 per cent of the Southern Negro selectees had attended high school as compared with 14 per cent of the Northern Negro draftees and three per cent of the Southern draftees in the last war."

IN World War I the whites had only 16 per cent of selectees who had any high school training and 79 per cent of grade school and no schooling. That is, the whites then were four times lower in high school training than Northern Negroes are now and twice lower than the Southern Negro now. Yet although the Negroes have advanced greatly against odds that no one with a white epidermis is called on to face, the utterly unjustified talk about their alleged inferiority remains the same. In fact, it is worse because Secretary Newton Baker did at times speak warmly in favor of Negro citizens.

NO CHANCE FOR COMBAT RECORD

4-1-44

Had Secretary Stimson said that the percentage of whites capable of filling technical positions in the Army is higher than that of Negroes, I, for one, should have agreed with him. But had he said that, he would still have to explain why capable Negroes are kept in labor battalions.

THE only place in the world I know of where the ability of the Negro soldier is questioned is the United States, and that only when some new war is on. From the days of ancient Egypt until now the Negro soldier has won renown. I can name scores of great military leaders who were Negroes in Europe, Asia, Africa and South and Central America. In the United States not a single one. As soon as a Negro graduates from West Point, he is promptly shunted off to some Negro college to train students. What military experience can one get from that? In the Navy, he is, or has been only a messman. What chances of being a trained Naval commander from that?

RACE NONSENSE GOES ON FOREVER

The fight against the Negro soldier in the United States has a history all its own. George Washington, to placate the slave masters, issued an order that no Negroes be inducted into the Army. Later, he was glad to use them. Abraham Lincoln, hoping to anger the South less, opposed the use of Negro troops for two years. Later, he too, used them and had to admit that without them the North would have lost. The last war I heard these same old arguments, only to hear again at its end the same high praise of the Negro soldiers. Now comes Secretary Stimson to turn the same old racial wheel in an evident attempt to placate Southern politicians like Eastland and the members of the South Carolina Legislature who declare that this war is being fought to maintain white supremacy and are working to make it that.

MEN may come and men may go, but this race nonsense, like Tennyson's brook, "goes on forever." It matters not a whit that after each war since 1776, the Negro soldier has won high praise. Each new war brings back the old talk of inferiority.

White Journal + Guide Reports To Norfolk, Va. War Dept.

5-27-44

Fourteen Points Suggest Way to Bolster Morale

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Fourteen recommendations, ranging from lectures to American white soldiers to a special board of review for courts-martial cases, were made by Walter White in a report to the War Department, it was revealed last week.

The report was based upon White's 15-week, 20,000-mile tour of military installations in the European Theatre of Operations, in North Africa, Italy, and the Middle East as an accredited foreign correspondent for the New York Post newspaper.

OFFICIAL RELEASE

An official release of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, of which White is secretary, listed the 14 points as follows:

1. OFF LIMITS—That General Eisenhower's directive to abolish "off limits" of towns and pubs (taverns) be enforced in all areas. Negro soldiers were found to resent bitterly the off limits orders or orders setting "odd" and "even" nights for white and colored troops to visit towns and places of amusement. White observed that some commanding officers who took a positive stand for fairness had very little trouble in their localities. 5-27-44

2. COURTS MARTIAL—A special board of review of courts-martial cases was recommended by White who said "great unhappiness" has resulted among Negro soldiers "because of their belief that they are punished more quickly and more severely than white soldiers." After citing a number of cases detailed to him by Negro prisoners with whom he was permitted to talk freely, white urged that the special board of review include an eminent Negro lawyer, who would be brought in to serve with appropriate rank.

3. COMBAT TROOPS—The department is urged to send Negro combat troops to England. White said stories were being circulated that there are no Negro combat troops in England because "Negroes are afraid to fight." White termed as "unfortunate" the fact that, with the exception of some anti-aircraft units, only Negro service troops had been sent to the European theatre. "The Negro troops in the ETO," said his report, "have little or none of the excitement of war necessary to raise the spirits and to give a sense of participation to men engaged in waging war." 5-27-44

4. MIXED BOMBER UNITS—Also recommended was that Negro medium bomber crews be sent to England "to fly in non-segregated units," and that Negro service troops now stationed there be given refresher courses in the use of combat weapons as "many of these troops will closely follow the assault waves of invasion, will be under fire, and need to be made competent in the use of weapons."

Supporting his recommendation for more combat troops, White cited the improved atmosphere in the Mediterranean as a result of the exploits of the 99th Pursuit Squadron. He recommended that Negro and white fighter squadrons function in the same group; and he also urged reconsideration of the conversion of the 2nd Calvary division into service troops.

5. RANKING OFFICERS—In connection with the moral value of the presence of Negro combat troops, White also urged that more Negro officers above the rank of captain be sent to England.

6. ANTI-NEGRO RUMORS—Some Negro soldiers abroad have taken the spreading of vicious and fantastic rumors about Negroes as a joke, but some have resented these stories deeply, said White, in recommending that G-2 (Army Intelligence) try to track down and scotch morale-sapping stories. 5-27-44

White reported less anti-Negro propaganda in the Mediterranean than in England, but suggested that Army Intelligence run down the people who were issuing leaflets, placards and other material seeking to poison Italians against Negroes. Upon inquiry one such placard was found to have been issued by a non-existent organization and signed by a fictitious person.

7. MILITARY POLICE — White found the same complaint abroad on Military Police that has been made in some parts of America, namely that white MPs are armed, but Negro MPs are not. He recommended that no MPs be armed except when guarding payrolls.

8. PATERNALISM — Paternalistic attitudes on the part of white officers is resented, White reported, saying that both well-educated and less-educated Negroes resent being treated as "boys." Abandonment of the idea that southern white officers are best for Negro troops because they "understand" Negroes was urged by White, who, however, said many white officers from the South are fair and decent in their treatment of Negroes, while there is no guarantee that a man will be free from prejudice just because he happens to be from the North.

9. LECTURES—Lectures to American white troops aboard ships as they near England on the difference between the British and American attitudes toward color, together with lectures to British troops by competent Americans on America and the true place of the Negro as a citizen of his country would be helpful, White declared. 5-27-44

10. MEDICAL OFFICERS—A connection between the venereal disease rate among colored troops and the attitude which has barred them from normal association with respectable families was seen by White, who quoted a soldier as saying they were more and more restricted to women picked up in pubs. White suggested that a Negro physician be attached to the office of the Chief Surgeon.

11. ENTERTAINMENT—More Negro actors and singers were recommended for the entertainment of both white and Negro troops.

12. RED CROSS—After praising the American Red Cross for doing "in many respects a superlative job," White deplored the "white" and "Negro" Red Cross clubs located in many areas as not only introducing segregation to the British, but denying white and Negro American soldiers the opportunity to know each other better. He cited the non-segregated pattern of one club as a model for the Red Cross everywhere. 6-27-44

13. CENSORSHIP—More news and more sympathetic handling of news dealing with Negro troops by the censors would be very helpful, said White, as it would give Negro civilians a better picture of the contribution of their men to the war.

14. LAGGING BEHIND — White's concluding recommendation was a suggestion that the War department policy on race "lags behind that of much of the personnel of the Army."

47m-1944

Army Wipes Out Nearly Full Infantry Division as Negro Soldiers Increase

The Call, Kansas City, Mo. 5-19-44

BY ERNEST E. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON. — (ANP) — The war department has wiped out about a full division of Negro soldiers in infantry during the past six months in the program of conversion, although the total strength of Negro soldiers has climbed.

This is revealed in the figures made public last Friday dealing with the numbers of Negroes in the army and giving some breakdown on their distribution according to branches of service.

The report shows that there were 664,066 men in the army as of Feb. 29, contrasted with 582,861 last August. They were distributed as follows:

Infantry	44,022
Coast field artillery	58,328
Cavalry	9,043
Engineers	106,514
Air Force	77,335
All others	376,197

The August report showed there to be 57,323 men in infantry, a drop of 13,301 in the present report. The decrease in coast and field artillery was from 58,328, or 7,373 less men.

The number of commissioned officers increased to 4,979 representing 968 more persons than six months ago. One of these increases was in the field of army nurses where in August they were 202 in number, they are now 219.

The present report says there are 284,664 men serving overseas in all categories. Six months ago there were 153,000.

Too-Young GI Wasn't Himself for 18 Months

P.M. New York, N.Y.

Soldiered as Someone Else; Army Caught Up, But Forgave

By Roi Ottley
Staff Correspondent

PM Exclusive

WITH THE 332D FIGHTER GROUP, 15TH AIR FORCE IN ITALY, Nov. 27.—The Mediterranean edition of Stars and Stripes broke a story the other day of a Negro youngster, Amos Holton, barely 17 years of age who decided he wanted to join the Army and became a guest of Uncle Sam for more than 18 months, including an eight-month visit in Africa and Italy.

It was a dizzy merry-go-round for Holton but also for a guy named Shotwell. It all started when Amos, posing as 18 years old, registered with the draft board in his home city, Detroit. His mom discovered that he wanted to join up and tipped off the draft board, which rejected him because he was under age. He joined the Michigan State Guards which apparently didn't care about his age and got a uniform like a G.I.

Drew No Pay

One day, Holton spotted some dog tags belonging to a soldier named Shotwell. He trotted off to Selfridge Field to inquire, but no one knew anything about Shotwell.

So, Amos Holton disappeared from his Detroit neighborhood haunts and turned up at Selfridge Field as "Shotwell."

Months went by without incident. No one at Selfridge seemed to notice that Shotwell was not drawing any Army pay. He had put the bite on a few guys but that was natural and Amos was much too honest to take Government money under false colors.

One day as he emerged from a movie an MP asked to see his pass. Amos was unable to produce one and was hauled off to jail. He was court-martialed for being AWOL and, to his amazement, was busted form staff sergeant to private.

Then Shotwell nee Holton was given a stiff dose of infantry training and in short order was shipped overseas as an engineer replacement. He landed in Africa last April and hooked up with an engineer unit which was on its way to Italy.

Real Shotwell

While stationed near Naples, he went to one of the airfields to visit some friends from Selfridge Field. He was introduced there to a Yank named Shotwell. Amos was about to acknowledge the introduction when an MP happened by and asked to see his pass. He did have a pass this time and could have shown it, but hardly with this Shotwell standing within earshot. So it was back to the jug for Holton.

Actually, the real Shotwell had been shipped overseas months before and was tower operator for an air base of the 332d Fighter Group, all-Negro unit.

Eighteen months after Holton became "Shotwell" someone in Washington began to shuffle through the files and things began to happen. The commanding officer of the 332d Fighter Group began to receive reports from Washington informing him that "Shotwell" was AWOL. The real Shotwell never got any rest from almost daily trips to the orderly room to report his presence.

Ten months of replies informing Washington that Shotwell was with his unit very much in the flesh made no impression. But, then, Mom Holton back in Detroit concluded that if Amos was to be in the Army some pay should be forthcoming.

She wrote the CO to this effect. The Army discovered Holton was not Shotwell.

Once the paper clips and triplicate copies were cleared away, the Army decided to forgive and forget. Amos has become a full-fledged soldier.

Amos, incidentally, will get a whole pile of back pay since his induction is retroactive to last January.

Storms Mountain Barrier In Famed Gothic Line

Journal + Guide—Norfolk, Va. 10-7-44

Casualties Increase As Infantrymen Push Forward

By John "Rover" Jordan
Guide War Correspondent
(Copyright. Reproduction forbidden)

WITH 92nd INFANTRY IN GOTHIC LINE, ITALY—(Via Wireless) — After ten days of the bitterest kind of fighting, the combat infantry units of the Famous 92nd division captured bloody Mt. Castellaccio, the first prepared fortification in the Gothic Line north of Lucca, on Tuesday of this week.

The 92nd is now pushing forward on a wide front over the most difficult mountain terrain.

The Germans on Mt. Castellaccio fought desperately from elaborate fortifications. They engaged the bronzed 92nd warriors in a fierce battle which become a historic chapter in the history of the great Buffalo division.

10-7-44

The Nazis staged a sudden withdrawal from their previous positions on the Mediterranean flank of the Gothic Line on September 25 and the combat team pursued them relentlessly through barbed wire, over mine fields, and across rivers where the bridges had been thoroughly wrecked.

ESTABLISHED SUPPLY ROUTES

With their forward units far into the mountain strongholds of the Gothic Line, the unit's engineers worked long hours to establish supply routes to service these advanced troops.

When it was discovered that jeeps and trucks could not reach units, mules were tried but they too, failed, because of the difficult mountain terrain. Then it became necessary for men to carry supplies on foot, marching from one to three hours up the difficult grades. It took two days of this marching supply the men with enough material to keep them fighting.

The engineers did a miraculous job in improving these supply routes so that our troops could continue to probe for enemy contact.

SUFFERED HEAVY CASUALTIES 10-7-44

In this bitter fighting when the Germans threw everything they had at the Buffaloes, this unit suffered its heaviest casualties so far in the Italian war. But these casualties are still regarded as comparatively light for offensive operations.

Units under command of Lt. Col. Clarence Doggett, of Jacksonville, Fla., led the initial offensive into the Gothic Line pushing into the valley under intense fire from all sides.

EMPLOY SKILL 10-7-44

The infantry units have probed deeply into the Gothic defenses using all their skill to advance steadily forward in a ring of flaming steel thrown around them by the Nazis.

Performing valiantly in this thundering inferno were troops led by Lt. Jesse E. Jarman, Indianapolis, a company commander, Lt. Alfred O. Dempsey, Aliquippa, Pa., and Lt. Noble Greenidge, of New York City. The latter two are platoon leaders.

CASUALTIES

Our troops suffered some casualties from cleverly concealed mines planted by the retreating Germans.

This reporter toured some of

332ND FIGHTER GROUP GROUNDED BY WEATHER

ITALY—The 332nd Fighter Group was grounded last week by bad flying weather.

10-7-44

the mined mountain fortifications with winding trences and tunnels cleverly entwined in the orchards and vineyards which fringe the mountainside.

HAD PERFECT O. P.

From the top of the mountain the Germans had a perfect observation post and Nazi cannons easily swept the valley the Buffaloes occupied.

After viewing the combat area from the mountain-top, I wondered how troops could even occupy the valley below to say nothing of mounting an offensive from that exposed position.

The smell of the German dead fouled the mountain air in a sickening way. The gallant Negro troops continued to take Nazi prisoners. Two prisoners taken by patrols told this correspondent that Nazi soldiers greatly fear colored troops because German propaganda insisted that Negro soldiers were brutal half-animals who do not take prisoners. The Krauts especially fear the 92nd patrols.

USA TAKES STEPS 10-7-44

The fact that the United States Army quickly counteracts any such false German propaganda concerning Negro troops was evidenced when leaflets assuring the Nazi soldiers of just treatment as war prisoners no matter what American units capture them were dropped across the German lines from airplanes. These two captured prisoners had these leaflets in their pockets when they were brought in. 10-7-44

PLENTY OF DANGER

Hollywood

Heroes; A La

Just being in a battle area is plenty dangerous to all. We don't only have to worry about the over-thundering German artillery but we are constantly exposed to the clever anti-personnel mines planted so profusely all over the battle area. This correspondent travelled tion.

10-7-44

These two heroes were: Pvts. Henry S. Roberts, 433 Avondale avenue, Toledo, Ohio, and Charles J. Patterson, 2620 Taylor street, Ft. Wayne, Ind.

These men were members of a platoon which was advancing up a mountain through barbed wire, when they were fired upon by a machine gun from a church yard.

They continued their advance until pinned down by another gun on their right flank.

STOP GUNS

Seeing danger to the whole platoon and without any orders, Patterson and Roberts crawled forward in the face of machine gun and artillery fire and dropped hand grenades into the emplacements, killing two Nazis and forcing the others to retire.

Meanwhile the platoon leader had been wounded. Patterson immediately moved down the mountain, took command, and brought the platoon up to maintain the objective.

10-7-44

While Patterson was bringing up the platoon, the Germans again attempted to man the gun, but Roberts, who remained concealed near the gun threw more grenades forcing the Nazis to retire. He then reached down into the emplacement and lifted the machine gun from the tripod and pulled it back through the opening thus capturing the weapon to make sure it wouldn't again threaten his comrades. In this manner the objective was taken.

CHAPLAIN UP FRONT

Chaplain Allen Johnson, who believes his place is always with the troops in the front lines, continues to distinguish himself by bravery feats under fire. Recently the chaplain evacuated a wounded soldier who could not be reached by his comrades.

10-7-44

Because of the intense enemy fire the chaplain daringly made his way to the spot where two men lay, one wounded and one dead. He lifted the wounded man to his back and brought him to safety. Later he assisted in the removal of the dead soldier. This is an example of just one of the brave deeds performed by chaplains.

The valor displayed by our soldiers such as related are merely several in the amazing cavalcade of courage by our troops in this scenic wonderland of Italy which offers the world's bloodiest battlefields.

Army will Use Negroes On Staff At Vet Centers

WASHINGTON D. C.--Plans are well under way in the War Department for using Negro personnel in proportion to numbers in Army separation centers and hospitals, the NNPA learned this week.

The plan has received the blessing of the brass-hats, and has been put into the mill in the operations sections with instructions to perfect it within a stated time limit. Little delay is expected, in view of previously known attitudes of persons in the operations sections, who were prevented from carrying out many worthwhile plans because of lack of authority issued from the top.

The names of several Negro officers and enlisted men are already compiled for use in these centers, to which overseas veterans will be brought before being discharged and returned to civilian life.

Defender--Chicago, Ill. 10-7-44

Briton Lauds Race Troops In Letter To Defender

Defender — Chicago, Ill.

8-12-44

Praising the "spontaneous humor" and high "moral and spiritual code" of Negro troops based in Norfolk, England, H. F. Howard, an Englishman, wrote last week to the Chicago Defender to tell "how much we Britishers in this locality appreciate contact with the colored lads from America."

Mentioning engineer William Henry Mitcham in particular, the writer urges the Chicago Defender as "champion of the colored people of America (and elsewhere)" to do all it can "for the benefit of these grand fellows now living in this locality."

"You will be well repaid for any effort made in their behalf," he continues. The letter, addressed to the editor of the Chicago Defender, said:

8-12-44

"It may interest you to hear how much we Britishers in this locality appreciate contact with the colored lads from America. Personally I have been in close touch with men from many American states and invariably found them fine fellows. Intellectually they are of a high standard. Their high sense of duty shame many of us. Their friendliness is a joy to behold.

"Their spontaneous humor is decidedly pleasant to note. Their moral and spiritual code is of a very high order. Their response to kindly and understandable approach is to me something beautiful.

8-12-44

"From them I have learned many valuable lessons. I am told you are the champion of the colored people of America (and elsewhere). Well, sir, I wish you joy and great success in your campaign. Do all you can for the benefit of these grand fellows now living in this locality. You will be well repaid for any effort made in their behalf.

"Among those with whom I have become friendly are several I shall always be pleased to call 'my friends.' Men who can enter any social scale and add lustre thereto. Men whom it is an honor and privilege to be associated with."

Stuck at Gun During 3 Attacks

Call—Kansas City, Mo.

11-17-44

'Killer Moe' Commended

For Courage

By FLETCHER MARTIN

War Correspondent in South Pacific

WITH 24TH DIVISION, ORMOC BAY SECTOR, PHILIPPINES. — (By Cable, Nov. 13.)—Manning a machine gun with an all-white unit, Pvt. Ralph Hueca of Chicago became the first colored unofficial member of the Texas division, volunteering to fight because he considered truck driving monotonous.

Fighting side by side with white troops, Hueca manned his weapon in the midst of three enemy banzai attacks, taking it over after four gunners had been bayonetted to death. His company suffered heavy casualties when it was isolated and the Negro stuck at the gun for an hour. Hueca has received two written commendations.

11-17-44

Hueca was leaning against his truck as the Infantry passed, and some one yelled: "Hey, fellow, you want to fight?" The Chicagoan answered "That's what I'm here for" and immediately joined the unit. He has been with the unit more than a week in which the division has seen the toughest fighting in the Pacific.

During the first night Hueca served in the rifle pit, and during the second night as enemy resistance grew with their suicidal threats, he took over the machine gun with three others and held out until reinforcements arrived. During the enemy banzai charges, four gunners were killed. The unit finally withdrew and Hueca stayed on with troops and at present is back in the middle of the fight.

The Commanding Officer of the unit stated he has nicknamed Hueca "Killer Moe" and wished that the Negro could remain with the unit. At Hollandia, a Negro sailor wanted to do the same thing. Three times he left his ship and joined in the battle with the unit, and three times was forcibly taken back to his ship. When asked why he wanted to join the Infantry, he replied: "They're the guys who do the fighting."

At the sector front of the tenth corps, I found Negro units servicing the 24th and first cavalry. Division units were commanded by colored officers including Lieutenants Leon Weston of Columbia, S. C., Becro Flater of Los Angeles, James Kimbrough of Chicago, Clarence Laws, former Urban League secretary of New Orleans.

Enemy snipers attacked our party repeatedly as we got within 100 yards of the front. We passed stiff, bloated dead bodies along the trail. The intensity of the artillery fire signified that Japs were in the sector in large numbers. This promised to develop into one bloody scrap.

Despite the fact that most Negroes in the area are moving up ammunition, there is one somewhere in there slinging it out—"Killer Moe."

47m-1944

Chinese Girls, Negro GIs Cut Rug At 'International Barn Dance'

Defender — Chicago, Ill.

10-28-44

By ENOC P. WATERS
(Defender War Correspondent)

SOMEWHERE IN THE SOUTHWEST PACIFIC.—For three days I felt like a delegate to an international convention. In all of my life I have never been in the company of people from so many different parts of the world at one time.

All about me were people speaking with thick accents and weird dialects which made English sound as strange as a corrupt form of Arabic. I imagine, however, that I was unintelligible to many of them as they were bewildering to me.

It all began Saturday night when I went to a dance at the Chinese Youth Center. That afternoon I was to have gone to a Dutch hospital as the guest of a group of Javanese seamen patients. But I met some American soldiers who had an oversupply of beer which they invited me to help them consume. Feeling that my first duty was to my countrymen, I, of course, went to their rescue. 10-28-44

Then Sunday I attended a reception given by the International Youth Council and met representatives from 16 nations. Monday I visited the monthly meeting of the United Nations Assembly where I was impressed by a German who argued that the United Nations' Relief and Rehabilitation Administration should operate in Germany to aid victims of the present war.

Chinese Friendly

But to begin at the beginning. I've never seen, at one time, so many pretty Chinese girls. They were eager to be friendly with the six Negro soldiers in our party and may have been responsible for the orchestra's decision to play music for barn dances in which there was a free exchange of partners.

There were four Australian Chinese air corps men and two Chinese Australian soldiers who joined in the dances with the Chinese civilian men. But the four Chinese-American soldiers and the six Negro American soldiers remained fixed to their seats like barnacles on an old sailing ship. 10-28-44

They were confirmed jitterbugs and the barn dances, the jazz waltz and the change partner business was as strange to them as a Bohemian polka or a Cambodian native dance.

Tommy Sing, who used to be a bartender in San Francisco, said he'd like to know the girls better, but with that funny sort of dancing he'd never get a chance to meet them. The Negro soldiers complained that the music was lousy.

Jive Begins

Well, the Americans—both Chinese and Negro—might have remained rooted to their seats for the duration of the affair and the whole purpose of the dance might have been missed, had the orchestra not been tipped off to play some jump numbers. The musicians immediately went Basie, the Americans launched a frontal attack on the pretty Chinese maids, drove the Australians to the sidelines and soon had the situation under control. 10-28-44

As for the Chinese girls, they were equal to the sudden animation of the Americans. They seemed to enjoy being tossed halfway across the floor, spun around like tops and lifted from their feet. They seemed to know what it was all about. Evidently, they had met Americans before.

In our party were two Chinese speaking non-Chinese girls whom I urged to speak in the mother tongue with the Chinese present. After circulating about the floor for more than an hour, they reported that no one in the room could speak Chinese.

I struck up a conversation with an old Chinese gentleman too old for jitterbugging, who told me that all the Chinese in the room except him were born in Australia.

Very few Chinese have come into this country in the last 25 years, he said. "So few speak the mother tongue today. The parents don't think it's important to teach the young ones." He looked so sad. I introduced him to my two Chinese speaking non-Chinese friends and the three jabbered away the rest of the evening happily.

International Day

The next night I went to the YMCA where I presented my invitation and a contribution for admittance to the International Youth Day celebration of the International Youth Council.

Prof. K. L. Chau, director of information for China in Australia, delivered the principal address. Miss Norma Yin, a Chinese pianist, performed; Ken Hacker, a young Austrian, deeply interested in the Boy Scout movement, gave a sleight-of-hand exhibition, and Rita Nennas, a Greek soprano, sang some of the folk songs of her native land. 10-28-44

The chief concern of all the young people seemed that of making future wars impossible. A Russian summed it up. Said he: "Young people fight the wars and young people can prevent them." An Indian agricultural expert named Vaidyanathan, was the presiding officer.

They were all interested in the United States and were eager for information about the American Negro and promised to look me up if they ever get to Chicago. (I'm going to need a hotel to entertain all the people who have planned to be my guests.)

Send Regrets

Monday night I whisked the cigarette ashes off my uniform and went to the United Nations Assembly at the Hotel Australia where I walked into a gathering of bald pates and gray hair from all four corners of the world.

They were discussing the UNRRA and practically all of the scheduled speakers sent excuses. The consuls for France, Belgium and Holland sent apologies and I was pressed into service, as an American, to read a typewritten message from a representative of the U.S. Office of War Information, who also sent his regrets.

But the program still had an international flavor. A Polish war correspondent, a Czechoslovakian, a Chinese, and a European Jew urged full support of th UNRRA and told of the work the agency had done in their countries.

Really Bad Off

When one speaker said that the purpose of UNRRA was to help people to help themselves, an American sitting near me scribbled on a piece of paper, "Sounds like an international WPA project." 10-28-44

Though I didn't understand half of what was said to me because of the heavy European flavor of the English used, I was conscious of a very sincere effort on the part of everyone to be friendly.

Mrs. Fabian Chau, of China, told the group that facing the UNRRA was caring for 87,000,000 discommoded Chinese. Forty million tons of supplies, she said, will be needed for the job of rehabilitation in her country. 10-28-44

I'm beginning to realize that there are peoples in this world who are much worse off than those mostly neglected in the states.

698,911 NEGROES SERVING ON THE U. S. ARMY ROLLS

Argus — St. Louis, Mo.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—There were 698,911 Negroes serving in the Army on June 30, 1944, the War Department announced. This indicated an increase of 34,845 above the February 29, 1944, total of 664,066.

The announcement revealed a sharp rise in the number of Negroes assigned to overseas theaters, with other principal increases occurring in components of the Army Service Forces.

Since August 31, 1943, the Army had accepted 116,050 additions to its Negro personnel. 8-26-44

Following is a partial breakdown:

Infantry	44,869	Commissioned Officers	5,957
Coast and Field Artillery	38,517	Including:
Cavalry	1,473	Dental Corps Officers	102
Engineers	108,789	Nurses	213
Air Corps	72,027	Other Medical Corps Officers	508
All others	196,236	Chaplains	239
TOTAL	698,911	Serving Overseas	361,456

British Train Mixed Combat Unit In U. S.

Informer — Houston, Texas

6-17-44

By HARRY McALPIN

WASHINGTON, D. C. —(NNPA)— While some of our American troops and officers have endeavored to transplant to England the racial prejudices typical of deepest Mississippi and of the nation's capital, the British have brought to America an example of democracy-in-action from which our War Department could well learn a lesson.

The first British unit to train on United States soil, since before the Revolutionary War, an infantry line unit composed of volunteers, has been recruited in the Caribbean and Bermuda, consolidated here and is training for eventual overseas duty.

The existence of the new combat unit, called the First Caribbean Regiment, was made public here for the first time last Thursday in connection with a ceremonial parade by the troops in celebration of the birthday of King George VI.

The regiment is a mixed unit of white, colored and black men. (The West Indies observe the triple designation). The percentage of Negroes is about the same as the populations of the territories, islands and garrisons represented. No distinctions are made in the unit, because of race or color, in the training, opportunities for advancement, quarters, mess, etc. The mixing exists in the officer ranks as well as in the enlisted personnel. One Negro is a major, next to the highest ranking officer among the natives who is a lieutenant-colonel, and is white. 6-17-44

Trinidad, with about 22 per cent of the volunteers, has the largest representation. Next in order come Jamaica (including the Turks and Caicos Islands,) Barbados, British Guinea, Bermuda, the Windward Islands, the Leeward Islands, British Honduras and the Bahamas.

The unit, which has its own supporting weapons, including Bren guns, mortars and anti-tank guns is expected to take its place as a full fledged line unit along side of other regular British infantry. .. ..

Lt. Gen. G. N. Macready, commander of the British Army staff in Washington, reviewed the unit and presented to its commanding officer, Lt. Col. Hugh Wilkin, special messages from the British secretaries of State for War and the Colonies Sir James Grigg and Col. Oliver Stanley. Senior U. S. Army officers also took part in the ceremonies. 6-17-44

Members of the regiment were said to be enthusiastic in their praise of the cooperation of U. S. Army officers and enlisted men. Particularly appreciated, several of the troops recalled, was the reception given the contingents at the dockside upon their arrival by a U. S. Army band and Red Cross workers.

The regiment was established on April 1, and early that month small parties from outlying islands gathered at local centers until their numbers were complete. The first contingent to arrive in the U. S. was from Bermuda. Their place of training in the U. S. was not disclosed.

Allied Lines Of Communication

Negro Signal Unit Knits

Examiner — Houston, Tex.

Soldiers of these outfits throw up forces in one area of En
WITH U. S. SUPPLY FORCES, telephone poles and string wires
In France.—Knitting Allied lines between many of the war's most im-of communication into a tight web portant command posts, frequently of humming telephone wire often using captured enemy equipment, under the sledge-hammer blows of all kinds of weather.
enemy artillery and the crackle of small arms fire, is the business of Negro Signal Construction Companies here. 10-28-44

of England. Their "One of the historic organizations al commendation of the United States Army, this unit eneral command was the first Negro Signal Construc-Base section. "The tion Company activated, in May, k," said the gen- 1941, at Ft. Leonard Wood, Missouri.
rit of the person- It was the first one sent overseas.
ed to the success- "Frankly, I think this is the Army in mount- best darned Signal Construction annel operation." company in the Army" declared work drew special co from a brigadier genera Southern Base se
ing the quality of the work," eral, "and the spirit of nel, has contributed to ful mission of our Arm ing the cross-channel

Installs Communication Net

One such unit installed the communication net for the invasion

the company commander, Captain Henry G. Shopfer, Jr., of New Orleans, La. 10-28-44

"The first three graders show the ability of commissioned officers in handling the men and the work. I'd put this company up against any battalion."

It is from the ranks of this group that cadres for many other Negro Signal Construction outfits have been drawn. The men who organized the first Negro Signal Aircraft Warning company also were products of this pioneer unit. No man in the company had any experience in the field prior to his Army training.

The honor of having set up one of the highly secret phone circuits used by General Eisenhower in England is held by Staff Sergeant Alfred Perry, 29, 994 Reer Avenue, Memphis, Tennessee.

"As I walked out of one end of the headquarters tent, the general walked in the other," said Sergeant Perry. The phone had been installed in record time. 10-28-44

The company's first commander, now Lieutenant Colonel William A. Joyce, was a West Point classmate of Colonel Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., son of Brigadier General Benjamin O. Davis. Lieutenant Colonel Joyce, then a captain, headed the unit at the outbreak of the war, when it was stationed in the Panama Canal Zone.

In record shattering months the Company laid 350 miles of open wire through dense tropical jungle, binding together United States Army airports throughout the Isthmus. 10-28-44

Youngest member of the unit, 19-year old Corporal Clarence Bruce, 566 Panke avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa., put his finger firmly on the reason for the company's excellent performance. "It's team work around here," he said. "The officers, non-coms and men work together. It's a swell outfit."

Members of the company are:

TEXAS: Beaumont—Pvt. Dallas D. Deville, 23, 947 Market; Cooper—Pvt. Obie D. Walker, 28; Hillsooro—Pvt. Jessie J. Rigsby, 23, 220 S. Church street; Liberty—Master Sgt. Orphieus L. Cabbel, 26, Route 1, Box 48. 10-28-44

LOUISIANA: Convent—Pvt. Andrew Jacques, 23; Coushatta—Sgt. James S. Clark, 24, Route 1, Box 120; Franklin—Pfc. Paulfrey Johnson, 25, Star Route B, Box 151; Garyville—Pvt. Clarence Batiste, 24; Hilly—Pvt. Charlie Davis, 33, Route 1; Ida—Pvt. Roy Henderson, 29, Route 1, Box 111; Lafayette—Pvt. John S. Pai ge,21, 219 Lassel St.; Lake Charles—Sgt. Elzy Evans, 27, 519 Mill street; Roseland—Pvvt. Alfred James, 22; Williams—Pvt. Eddie Sawyer, 23.

Army Needed Trained Men 'Now', So They Went to Service Units

Tribune — Washington, D.C.

4-15-44

Well, Sir, the War Department has at last admitted that the two renowned Negro regiments created by an Act of Congress, the 9th and 10th Cavalries, have been converted into service troops.

In a letter to Roy Wilkins, acting secretary f the NAACP, John J. McCloy, Assistant Secretary of War, included copy of a letter to Senator Robert A. Taft in which it was explained that the 9th and 10th—although not designated by name—have been used "to provide certain additional service units to meet an early requirement of the highest importance."

Here's How It Happened

In explaining the conversion of the famous old fighting regiments into service troops Mr. McCloy wrote Senator Taft: 4-15-44

"Unfortunately currently constituted service units were all committed to definite tasks. They could not be withdrawn from these tasks without seriously interfering with planned operations, and the short time available for the organization and training of the needed units made it imperative to utilize previously trained personnel.

It was found that the only available source for such personnel was certain uncommitted combat units, including the Second Cavalry Division.

Wanted "Trained" Personnel

"As mentioned previously, the military situation demanded that trained personnel in considerable numbers be made immediately available. 4-15-44

Since the Second Cavalry Division was the only source from which such personnel could be withdrawn without delaying the war effort, the War Department was compelled to effect this change in its utilization. Needless to say, the decision would necessarily have been the same had this division been composed of white personnel."

The 9th and 10th formed part of the Second Cavalry Division which had been training in Ft. Clark, Texas.

Fears Confirmed

Mr. McCloy's letter was in reply to a direct inquiry of the NAACP under date of March 23, as to what had become of the 9th and 10th Cavalry Regiments.

Following Secretary Stimson's letter of February 19, to Congressman Hamilton Fish, many rumors floated about the country on the conversion of Negro combat units into service troops. The War Department was mysteriously quiet about the 9th and 10th Cavalry Regiments. 4-15-44

Rumors as to the conversion of these troops became so persistent that the NAACP wrote the War Department with the result that Assistant Secretary McCloy has confirmed the rumors that the 9th and 10th are no more as fighting regiments.

Race Troops Praised For Aid In Pacific Campaign

Daily World — Atlanta, Ga.

11-8-44

Men Work Twenty-Hours Daily To Keep Supplies Moving Up

BY CONRAD CLARK

SOMEWHERE IN NEW GUINEA November — (ANP) — Thousands of Negro and white troops stationed at this Base, were assured of a speedy entrance into the Philippines, by Maj. Gen. James L. Frink, chief of the service of supmiles here in the Southwest Pacific area, in an address last week.

The general was accompanied by members of his staff and base officials on a tour of the island, and complimented all units for the work they are doing in keeping the chain of supplies a-moving.

Reminding the men that while the work being done here seemed dull and not exciting, so far as combat on the front was concerned, every man was just as important for the work he was contributing to the successful carrying out of Gen. MacArthur's plan of invasion on the Phillippines. 11-8-44

HELP UNLOAD SHIPS

Less than 300 miles behind the actual lines, the men here at this base, both Negroes and whites, are daily helping to load and unload tons of supplies that are playing such a vital part in keeping the men on the front lines going.

The slogan of the transportation corps, "we keep the bullets, beans and bread moving," seems to be the slogan of the troops here that are made up of all types of units.

Twenty-four hours a day, seven days a week, Negroes, whites, Mexicans, Chinese, and what have you, are sweating side by side in steamer holes, on the docks, lumber piles, ordnance and ammunition dumps, warehouses, all American soldiers doing their share to assure the continued freedom of these United States for all her citizens, regardless of race or creed.

MORALE LIFTS 11-8-44

With the coming of Gen. Frink and his staff to the base, there has been a great lifting in the morale of the men, and the knowledge of the part they are playing in the war helps the speed-up of the supply lines.

With the taking of the Philippines, the Japanese life line of supply from the Dutch East Indies and Malaya to Japan will be cut and Japanese troops in the con-

92nd Soldiers Get Another Citya

ROME, Italy—In continuous bat... Italy, with the Germans fighting like fanatics for every inch of ground they yield, and in bad weather typical of the winter season, the 92nd division fighting with the new Army i... North gains like... tured Monte Castig... portant Monte Castigl... road to the West coast of Italy and to the important naval base of La Spezia, about 25 miles away. The elevation is five miles southeast of the Tuscany town of Massa.

Negro M.P.'s patrol Paris

WITH THE U.S. FORCES IN FRANCE—(ANP)—Twenty Negro soldiers from the Military Police battalion on duty in London, have arrived in Paris and are now on patrol duty there.

Negro Soldiers In World War II

Asheville, N.C. Citizen

Daily Worker:

Editor, Daily newspaper here. The Citizen, in an editorial of Dec. 13, pays tribute to the Negro soldiers in this war. It refers particularly to the 761st Tank Battalion and the 452d Anti-Aircraft Artillery Battalion, mentioned recently in the report of the War Department. Of these battalions it says: "They have sustained their share of casualties and have received their share of decorations."

It says that Negroes should be proud of the record of their sons and brothers in this war. It's to be hoped that the recognition of this truth will lead southern papers like the Asheville Citizen to come out for decent American rights for the Negro people, for these very soldiers fighting and dying for democracy.

A. T. McM.

Officer Opposes Order Against Segregation

FORT BENNING, Ga., —(ANP)—Joining hands with white civilian forces in the Southland against the recent War Department order banning racial segregation in army camps last week was Col. J. T. Edgerly, commanding officer of the reception center here. He went on record of defying the War Department's edict when he addressed a body of his men here, then used his Negro troops as targets of his race slander.

47m-1944

New Times

The Worker magazine

Mercy Has No Color

by Benjamin J. Davis, Jr.

I HAVE just read a moving article by Walter Lippmann, in his column of Dec. 19, in the Herald Tribune, pointing out the desperate need of more nurses for our wounded soldiers. It is a problem of such magnitude and urgency, and has such direct bearing upon the military aspects of the war, that Mr. Lippmann calls upon the whole American people to pitch in and solve it without delay. It is also such a vivid reminder that the war is not yet over that every citizen, Negro and white, will feel a keen sense of responsibility to assist in the solution.

On the same day, in the New York Times, I saw an equally impressive item which is intimately connected with the same question, and may, indeed, provide an important partial answer to the appeal which Mr. Lippmann has transmitted to the American people. It was a letter from Mrs. Mabel K. Staupers, executive secretary of the National Association of Colored Graduate Nurses, headed very aptly Negro Nurses Would Serve.

* * *

MRS. STAUPERS stated: "The National Association of Colored Graduate Nurses is deeply concerned lest the public misunderstand the reason for the small number of Negro nurses in the services. We do not want the impression given that in a crisis and at a time when nursing service is vital to the needs of the military, the Negro nurse had failed her country. Although Assistant Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson has stated that there never has been any limitations in the admission of Negro nurses to the Army, we have not found this to be the case.

"Negro nurses are still being accepted in very small numbers and are still restricted primarily to the care of Negro troops and war prisoners. None has been accepted by the Navy. A large number of civilian hospitals, both public and voluntary, are using Negro nurses satisfactorily. These nurses are caring for patients regardless of race, color, creed or national origin. If the need is as great as we are told, then the Army and Navy might well follow the example which has been set by these civilian hospitals."

I AM sure neither Mrs. Staupers nor Mr. Lippmann had any meeting of minds before their messages appeared on the same day. But one has nevertheless stated the problem, and the other has brought forward a partial solution. The only hitch is Jimcrow. And the victim is our soldiers—white even more than Negro. They must run the terrible risk of being inadequately attended, often in pain, because someone high up among our war leaders places Jimcrow above the needs of these suffering men.

It is true that certain important democratic principles have been won through President Roosevelt in respect to discrimination in the armed forces, including the recruitment of nurses. But not enough have been won—nor have those won been put into actual practice.

When Communists raised most clearheadedly the elimination of Jimcrow as an essential part of the fight for a speedy victory, some were quick to say that it was to "disturb" the war effort, or to spread "propaganda." When the Negro people, and sections of labor raised the same demand, it was brushed off as a narrow "racial" or "class" demand. Often it was said that it would take "years of education" to grapple with discrimination, or that to tackle it in the armed forces would "disrupt morale and routine." It seems to me that the shortage of nurses explodes all these arguments. What would a wounded American soldier—yes, a white boy—say if he is told that it will require "years of education against discrimination" before he can get an available nurse—who happens to be a Negro woman—to dress his wounds and relieve his immediate pain? I will leave that painful question to some of our war authorities to answer.

Prejudice may unfortunately linger in some people's hearts. But the actual discrimination, which comes from that prejudice, has to be outlawed and ended now. That's what the wounded soldier says; for he, not the prejudiced person, is the principal victim of the discrimination. And when he is the victim, America pays in casualties, deaths, blood and tears, and perhaps in a longer war. It is only a small part of the Negro's problem—it is the much larger problem of the war authorities, and the whole American people.

Here are Negro women, as Mrs. Staupers says, who are ready to serve, but who are denied the full opportunity to give services when they are desperately needed by their country. Negro women alone, of course, could not end the enormous nursing shortage, but they could helpfully reduce it. How bad is this need? Obviously, Mr. Lippmann, or the "responsible commanders" of whom he spoke in his column, ought to talk to Mrs. Staupers.

Fate Of Small Nations Weighed In Balance At Dumbarton Oaks

N.Y. Amsterdam News

By A. M. WENDELL MALLIET

N.Y.N.Y.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull struck a high note regarding the importance to future generations of the three-power conference now in session at Dumbarton Oaks, Washington. Speaking to 55 reporters at his press conference last week Mr. Hull said:

"I wish I could burn this into your minds and memories for the next 50 years at least. That is that the human race at this hour, this day, this week, this year is confronted by the gravest crisis in its experience. And we who are here on the scene of action have the responsibility of saying which way it is going for the next 50 years."

It is a strange thing that the three leading nations and their statesmen who are sitting in conference to shape the so-called new world order should become living contradictions, not only in their roles but also in relation to the historical policies of their respective nations, particularly in connection with the rights and privileges of small nations.

Stalin For Small Nations

Between the period beginning with the October Revolution and ending with Nazi attack upon the Soviet Union, Marshal Stalin seemed to have believed in the right of small nations to unmolested existence; Great Britain has always stood against efforts and attempts to liquidate small nations, and the United States has never failed, regardless of her occasional adventures into imperialism, to uphold the rights of small nation-states. The Monroe Doctrine is the most emphatic American declaration in defense of small nations, and Mr. Hull likes nothing better than to be considered a defender of small sister nations.

Yet, at the Dumbarton Oaks conference every step taken so far has been in the direction of the traditional Germany policy of world rule and domination by the big and powerful nations. The United States, Great Britain and the Soviet Union have met, with China waiting in an ante-room, while they formulate their plans of agreement. And at that, the sessions are strictly private, regardless of public opinion.

United Nations Should Know

The members of the United Nations have a right to know what is taking place behind the barred doors at Dumbarton Oaks; more than that no decisions made by the Big Three should be allowed to stand, unless they are fully consistent with the rights and aspirations of every member of the United Nations. Furthermore, the preliminary discussions among Russia, England and the United States may lay the foundations for race and economic wars than for world peace. If the plan of the Boer leader, Marshal Smuts, for regional overlordship is to become part and parcel of the new world order, why should such an important decision be made without the knowledge of the nations and peoples concerned?

Why should it be necessary for the United States, Great Britain and the Soviet Union to meet in conference to discuss and take definite action on world problems of the future without the active participation of France, China, India, Ethiopia, Poland, Czechoslovakia, Mexico and Brazil?

Asks of "Inside Deals"

What are the "inside deals" to be pulled and agreed upon before the victims get an opportunity to speak for themselves and organize opposition or support?

Are these nations—the Big Three—interested in world peace and prosperity on the basis of the Atlantic Charter, or are they determined to split the world into spheres of influence for the strengthening and expansion of imperialism and economic exploitation?

What about the rights and aspirations of nations and peoples now held and exploited as colonies, under the new world order? Is there to be no hope for the brutalized millions of Asia, Africa and the West Indies, particularly as a result of their sacrifices in blood and money for a United Nations victory?

Is the Dumbarton Oaks conference the fulfillment of the pledges, promises and pronouncements of Great Britain and the United States to the world of small nations and oppressed and exploited peoples, or is it to prove a star chamber where the miseries of the unfortunate are made more intensive and of longer duration?

Are we about to substitute Great Britain, the Soviet Union and the United States of America as the "bully" nations of the world in place of Hitler's Germany, Il Duce's Italy and Tojo's Nippon?

Imperil Blacks, Browns, Yellows

It is said that coming events have a way of casting their shadows before them. The Dumbarton Oaks three-power conference, in the opinion of some observers, presages the ordering of a world in which liberty for the small nations and oppressed peoples of the world, most of them are of the black, brown and yellow races, will be forced to do the will and obey the orders of the big and powerful nations.

It is clear that with the three greatest white nations organized to control the affairs and destinies of the world, with America and Britain more closely in agreement on the question of race and color, the black, brown and yellow races can hope for little, if any, degree of understanding in relation to their aspirations for self-rule and internal industrial development with the aid of foreign loans.

How important the question of race and color is to Great Britain and the United States is recounted by Yusuke Tsurumi in an informative article in "The Yale Review" for the Summer of 1932, entitled "Japanese Policy and Opinion." Mr. Tsurumi said:

Wanted Race Equality

"In 1919 at Paris, the Japanese peace delegation proposed to insert a clause of racial equality into the Magna Charta of the peace—the Covenant of the League. They were pressing not for immediate enforcement of the idea but for its acceptance in principle. It obtained the majority of the vote, but was opposed by Lord Cecil, representing Great Britain, on the ground that it was not practical. It was ruled out later by President Wilson on the ground that for the adoption of such a principle there must be a unanimous vote."

That was in 1919, when the problems of race and color had not taken on the challenging and menacing aspects that the diabolical Hitler and the Japanese have

"Spirit of justice at Dumbarton Oaks, if World War II shall not have been fought in vain.

Gen. Eisenhower Lauds Negro Troops

Journal + Guide — Norfolk, Va.

8-5-44

ADVANCED COMMAND POST, SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, AEF—How with daring and precision, Negro troops, in the face of intense enemy opposition, landed in France on D-Day and have since performed remarkable soldier work in Normandy is succinctly told by Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, who has issued an official commendation to the men of an anti-aircraft balloon battery and a quartermaster truck company.

8-5-44

Speaking to the anti-aircraft troops, the supreme commander said: "Your battalion landed in France June 6, under artillery, machine gun and rifle fire.

"Despite the losses sustained, the battalion carried on its mission with courage and determination and proved an important element of the air defense team which was maintained for five weeks. I want you to know that I appreciate your splendid work. Your accomplishments are a source of gratification to me and to your Army commander."

The cheerfulness and devotion of its officers and men have been commented on by personnel of other units. This report is most gratifying to me. I commend you and the officers and men of your battalion for your fine efforts which have merited the praise of all who have observed it."

8-5-44

TO QUARTERMASTER COMPANY

Commenting upon the heroic landings of the quartermaster company, under enemy fire, the General said:

"Nevertheless, you salvaged most of your equipment at once and, within three days, 90 per cent of your vehicles were operating on a 24-hour basis, a scale

47m-1944

They Are Serving Proudly And Well

N.Y. Amsterdam News 4-9-

N.Y., N.Y.

Women In Uniform Combat Race Prejudice

Their Records In The Services Outstanding Example Of Ability

By CONSTANCE CURTIS

Uniforms from all over the world are a common sight in any large city, and certainly here in New York there is no lack of them. On a recent tour of Harlem itself, which is no small city in its own right, the number of women in uniform was astonishing.

Among the outstanding services for women who are working in the war, there are the Women's Army Corps (WAC), the Red Cross, American Women's Voluntary Services (AWVS), Cadet Nurse Corps, Civilian Defense Volunteer organizations and the Army Nurse Corps. Absent from the ranks of the uniformed are Negro WAVES, SPARS and Marines. These latter three services still consistently refuse to admit Negro women to their ranks. In those services in which Negro women do take an active part, prejudice is still apparent. With them, just as with men in uniform, there is the problem of serving one's country under a jim crow system.

Much Discrimination

In the WAC, the same discrimination current with our soldiers prevails, since Negro women serve in separate units, find difficulty in promotions because of the same system, and are denied the right to serve overseas. They serve in the majority of cases in camps which are predominantly Negro, since the Army policy seems to be never to replace a white soldier with a colored woman.

The Army Nurse Corps, which is made up of young nursing students being trained in hospitals all over the country as registered nurses, seems at the present to suffer least of all of the services from the virus of race prejudice. Qualified Negro girls are accepted for training without question, and their only problem at the present time is one in which they have difficulty in admission to nursing schools which have in the past drawn the color line. At the present, however, the need for trained nurses is so great, opportunities are opening for their schooling in institutions which before the war never thought of admitting a Negro woman.

Nurses' Problems

The scarcity of nurses has recently also had some effect upon the treatment of Negro women members of the Army Nurses Corps. Up until this past week, they were mainly assigned to areas where there was a heavy concentration of Negro troops, such as Tuskegee and Fort Huachuca. Although one unit served for a time last year in Liberia, no Negro nurses had been sent to the European area, where nurses were desperately needed until this past week. The assignment of the women to the European theatre of war at this time would seem to indicate that necessity has once more been the opening wedge in the thick armor of racial discrimination.

The American Women's Voluntary Services, and the Civilian Defense Volunteer organization, the two women's volunteer organizations, have racial prejudices that are more subtly handled. Although women in these services work together, there is a duo-organization, with This then is the story of prejudice as it affects the American Negro woman in uniform. It is in many ways discouraging, especially when even quick glances are taken at the women's services in other countries. In England, for example, members of the women's services, whether they are from London or from some of the British Dominions, work together without the election of necessity show women serving in the Canadian armies. In other ways.

Red Cross Prejudice

Of all the war services which admit Negro women, perhaps the one carrying the greatest amount of controversy as to its treatment of the globe it would appear that Ne- their prejudices in oth

What the Record Shows

While these conditions exist, and seem to be firmly entrenched in the American way of life, the women who are serving in the many uniforms of our nation are doing a splendid job in undermining the foundations of racial prejudice. In their hard and well-done work, in the ways in which they bear themselves in their uniforms, and the all-out manner in which they have joined these services in spite of the restrictions placed upon them, they are building up a lasting and new respect among other races for the Negro woman. Beyond any amount of talk that can be done, they have shown the readiness and need for the American Negro being given full citizenship.

closes September 9. Addresses of the nearest salvage depots may be learned by calling the Salvage Department, AWVS Greater New York, PLaza 3-6487. A pair of tickets will be given each person bringing in 30 pounds of waste paper.

Through this offer the AWVS, which has collected thousands of pounds of waste paper to be used in the war effort, hopes to reach a new group of salvage collectors, to meet the increased demand for paper salvage brought about by the intensive war drive during the fourth quarter of the year. Need for more paper has been stressed by the War Production Board in a recent statement in which attention was called to the almost one-half million tons of ammunition being produced at this time.

Famous Cavalry Regiments Changed Into Service Units

Courier Pittsburgh Pa

NEW YORK—What has become of the famous Negro cavalry regiments, the Ninth and Tenth? This is an important question in the minds of those who have watched recent movements in the War Department. The report persists that the famous Regular Army regiments, with many years of distinguished service, have been broken up into service units.

It is known that the Ninth and Tenth were part of the Second Cavalry Division, which, until recently, was in training at Fort Clark, Texas. The Second Cavalry Division has disappeared and while no formal statement has been made by the War Department, the report is being circulated that the Ninth and Tenth have been made into service troops.

REPORT FOLLOWS STIMSON'S CHARGE

On the other hand, the First Cavalry Division, composed of white troops, has just won honors for itself by completing the invasion of the Admiralty Islands.

The report on the Ninth and Tenth comes hard on the heels of the admission by Secretary Stimson of the War Department that Negro combat units are being broken up and converted into service units.

A nation-wide outburst of indignation followed Secretary Stimson's letter to Congressman Fish and this anger is expected to mount to new heights when Negro Americans understand that two of the four Regular Army Negro Regiments, the Ninth and Tenth, have been added to the list of those made over into service troops.

NO REPORT ON NAACP INQUIRY

The NAACP, which led the nation-wide protest in 1932 on the breaking up of the Tenth Cavalry into three units stationed at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, West Point, New York, and Fort Myer, Virginia, where they became grooms and hostlers attending to the horses of white officers, has taken the lead in the protest to Secretary Stimson on the present demotion of the famous old regiments.

No reply has been received as yet from a letter to Stimson inquiring for verification of the persistent report that these regiments have been converted into service units.

THE HORIZON

The People Must Be Careful To See That Army and Navy Do Not Forget Source of Authority

By P. L. PRATTIS

Courier, Pittsburgh, Pa

WE want to support our Army and Navy in every way possible. We must do that. We must suffer to help the Army and Navy to succeed. We must work harder, give more and complain less about our petty, personal privations. The biggest job before us is the job the Army and Navy are undertaking to perform. But this does not mean that we can afford to overlook the basic fact that the Army and Navy are instruments belonging to the American people.

Mr. Pratdis

When there is no war, we keep (or should keep) the Army and Navy in good condition, ready to be called upon when we are confronted by the task for which we create and maintain them. But, in time of peace, when there is no great use for the Army and Navy, we carry on as a Nation. In time of peace, other instruments (such as the Department of Agriculture, the Department of the Interior, the Department of Commerce, or the Postoffice or Labor departments) may be more important. Each of these instruments, these departments, is designed to serve the Nation. It is but a part of a system of Government created by the people to serve them in case of need. Each is, or should be, subservient to the Chief Executive, the Congress and the courts. Each is supposed to take its orders from popularly elected representatives of the people. These departments, or their agents, are not expected to tell the people what to do. The people tell them.

BOSS CREATOR

IT is important that we should remember this. The chances are that no one person, or set of persons, in the Department of the Interior or the Department of Commerce, would take their jobs so seriously that they would think they should be running the Nation. Usually, the leadership in these agencies fit easily into the positions designed for it and stays put. But that is not so true of the Army and Navy, particularly when they have been called into action. Theirs is a tremendous job involving, at times, the life or death of the Nation. It is perhaps understandable that sometimes they should come to feel that their creator belongs to them just because their creator has to use them. The bureaucracy in civilian departments doesn't begin to possess the potential dangers of bureaucratic Army and Navy leadership. This bureaucracy, conscious of its importance because of the job it has to do and favored by the dramatic qualities of its work, is all too often prone to regard with obvious disdain the people for whom it works. Armies and navies make or break nations. The laboratory test before our eyes is in South America where, from time to time, the armies effect changes in government and seize control. Batista, army sergeant, led the uprising in Cuba. Ramirez, army general, seized control in Argentina. Bolivia was recently upset by an army coup.

IN OUR WORLD

THE chances are that our Army and Navy leadership does not think in the above terms, not too seriously. But one cannot be too sure that our Army and Navy are amenable to the direction of the people whom they serve. It is easy to gain the impression that the Army and Navy bureaucracy believes its business to be its business—not the people's. These departments operate within a world of their own and under a government of their own. Practically their only gesture to the people is made when they ask the Congress to turn over to them the money of the taxpayers. Every other contact the people seek is barred on grounds of military security.

Thus when the Army and Navy make a mistake, it is not considered the people's business. The people are not told unless special pressures are exerted. The people of the Nation have been told that the conquest of Sicily was a glorious adventure. That was not true. There are fundamental blunders in the Sicilian campaign which should have been marked by the removal from service of those responsible for them. If anybody has been punished, the people have not been informed. The people have not even been told what happened.

DON'T FIRE GENERALS

THE danger from this disposition of the Army and the Navy (as in the Coral sea engagement) to withhold knowledge from the people resides in the fact that the Army and Navy might be losing the war for us and we would know nothing about it until the conqueror was on our shores. When an aide to Secretary of the Interior Ickes was caught in a little alleged forgery, he quickly lost his job. But what has happened to the high officers responsible for the shooting of American paratroops at the beginning of the invasion of Sicily? Why did the Army have to be forced to release the Patton story? Why was Kwajalein taken so easily and Tarawa at such heavy cost? How are we to know when the high command does wrong? The Russians have, figuratively, chopped off the heads of generals who failed in campaigns. So have the Germans. So have the Japanese. So have the British. Are we to presume that all our generals have been so successful that no axe has been merited?

That may be true. God knows we all hope it is true. But the Nation cannot survive on hope alone. The Army and Navy must not be allowed to drift away from their proper controls which are civilian in nature. The citizen is still the component part of this democracy and such authority as the Army and Navy enjoy are limited by the will of the people.

There doubtless is no such thing as a military democracy. But we must be careful in such times as these that no such tendency gains headway. The Army and Navy must be given as much freedom as possible to do their jobs, but it must never be forgotten that this freedom is a grant, rooted in the people. The disposition of Army and Navy men to grow big in their own sights is one reason we should curb our enthusiasm to make an admiral or a general President.

47m-1944

The SEPIA SOCIALITE New ORLEANS, LA

FIRST OFFICIAL DEATHS REPORTED FROM NEGRO TANK UNIT IN FRANCE

12-16-44

With the U. S. Third Army.—The War Department has officially released information on the first deaths in the all-Negro 761st Tank Battalion, now pushing its way into the Reichland, with Lieutenant General George S. Patton's Third U. S. Army. The first deaths reported were a private, a first sergeant and a second lieutenant.

The first man in the first Negro combat unit to hit front lines in France was Private Clifford C. Adams, of 1615 N.W. 2nd Avenue, Miami, Florida, a member of the medical detachment, who died from wounds received on November 8, the D-day for the battalion. He was wounded as he gave aid to an injured member of a tank crew, while under heavy German shellfire, and died later the same day.

The next deaths reported were the result of strictly combat action, both men being killed in action, at Morville-les-Vic, on November 9. They were Second Lieutenant Kenneth W. Coleman, of Washington, D. C., and First Sergeant Samuel J. Turley, of 815 Trinity Avenue, the Bronx, New York City.

Lieutenant Coleman and First Sergeant Turley died the death of heroes, for they were together in the act of removing the .50 caliber machine gun from their disabled tank, in order to pour fire on German AT gun emplacements, and rocket-launcher spots, as their company, commanded by Captain Irvin McHenry of Leavenworth, Kansas, was immobilized facing an anti-tank ditch in the bitter fight for Morville-les-Vic, the toughest spot in the battalion's first battle action.

They were mowed down as they pulled the deadly weapon from its moorings on the tank, and started to get under the tank to begin firing. A hail of fire from German guns in the center of the fighting area, and from a point to their right, tore into the pair and both were killed.

Both were veteran members of Company C, under Captain McHenry, and First Sergeant Turley had won the reputation of being "the best first sergeant in the battalian." He is survived by a sister, Mrs. Sophie Montgomery, 5145 Prairie Avenue, Chicago, Illinois.

Ack Ack Units Free American Carry Fight

11-25-44

Destroy Pill Boxes, Tanks During Wait

2ND FOR ACCURACY

Baltimore, Md.

Rain, Snow, Mines Make Life Difficult

By OLLIE STEWART

AFRO War Correspondent with Invasion Forces in France

[Copyright, Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

WITH THE THIRD ARMY IN FRANCE—Most people think that the ack ack boys sit on their guns waiting for enemy planes to swoop down before they go into action.

In isolated cases this may be true, but it certainly does not apply to an outfit I met for the second time a few days ago in Northeast Nancy.

Back in Normandy while guarding beaches, bridges and roads, this unit had little activity, but now in the drive that is slowly encircling Metz with a band of steel, the story is vastly different. These deadeye gunners now carry the war to the Germans.

Nearly a Dozen Planes

Their record shows almost a dozen planes shot out of the sky in France and of all the ack ack outfits in this area this battalion stands No. 2 on the list where accuracy is concerned.

The troops still talk about the time one of their guns took only a very few shots to send a Nazi plane down in flames.

I found out why the lads have gained so much respect in the present drive when I reached battalion headquarters. Various batteries were attached to artillery units and, instead of waiting in the rear for planes, were up front blazing away, destroying tanks and pill boxes.

Almost a Tank Outfit

The outfit is practically transformed into a tank destroyer battalion, but it makes no difference to the men, according to T-Sgt. Leonard Bryant, Litchfield, Ill., master gunner.

Said Bryant, "Our guys are so bloodthirsty they don't care whether they shoot at planes or tanks. All they want to do is shoot."

Recommended for Bravery

An officer handed me a sheaf of recommendations for medals of one sort and another. "Bravery under fire" was the phrase that appeared on almost every page.

The battalion now has as its chaplain, Capt. William T. Green, Jr., Galesburg, Ill., who rides continuously in an effort to get around to the scattered batteries. Green had the distinction of being drafted, promoted to corporal then commissioned a first lieutenant on the day after his promotion.

Life within the batteries is rugged and really in the raw. Almost daily, guns move to new positions and are arranged according to a pattern for the most effective fire coverage in a specified area.

Must Dig Emplacements

I stood around shivering while one crew dug an emplacement for a 40-mm. gun. The toil was back-breaking despite the rain-soaked ground.

The hole was roughly ten feet by fourteen and three feet deep, but unhappily after the gun was pushed in, the soil was so soft and muddy that the gun promptly sank and a new site had to be chosen. The digging started all over again.

The next morning while they were cleaning and oiling the gun, orders came to move out. Everybody felt like crying, but they swore and hopped to the task of getting the gun out of the hole.

Our gun was untouched by artillery fire but another in the battery received a terrific pounding with some casualties.

Since coming to France, the battalion has probably dug up several acres of soil for gun positions. Often the new sites have not yet been demined, and I saw dead men lying around, smelling to high heaven on two occasions. Add to this, cold rain and snow to make life completely miserable.

Make Life Pleasant

Still, the soldiers find ways to amuse themselves. One group called "Four Boys and a Guitar" gave a swing recital for me that had a professional touch.

It included Pfc. Alton Hawkins, 1305 Susquehanna Avenue, Philadelphia; Pvt. Charles Pace, 1620 Madison Avenue, Baltimore; Sgt. Adolph Graham, Cleveland, and Sgt. Leonard Galloway, Columbus, Ohio. Helping out when needed were Pvt. Harold Garner, St. Louis, and S-Sgt. Robert Rogers, Alexandria, La.

Medics Protect Stewart

When I caught cold from exposure with the battery, Pvt. Alvin Johnson of Norfolk, Va., combat medic, gave me medicine and fed me. T-Sgt. William Remberton, Brentwood, Md., supply sergeant, dug up some extra handkerchiefs.

Three soldiers from New Orleans, Sgt. Wilson Joseph, Pvt. Herbert Burns, and Sgt. August Taylor, did much to make my stay comfortable, while Pvt. Thomas Smith, Bronx, N.Y., Sgt. George Easlick, Carlsbad, N.M., and S-Sgt. Edward Eagles of St. Louis assured me that the unit is worthy of all the recognition possible to obtain.

In another outfit is Warran Officer Bernard Nash, 3100 Barclay Street, Baltimore, Md., a former teacher and Morgan State College graduate, who hopes that Morgan wins the CIAA championship this fall.

Oh Negro Nurses!

12-29-44

Dear Editor:

Reading Albert Deutsch's article, "Bias Bars Needed Nurses From Bedsides of Wounded," made me stop and wonder what we are fighting for. My fellow patients are of the unanimous opinion that trained Negro nurses should be alongside white nurses in Army hospitals wherever they are needed. If wounded and sick servicemen require special care, why should they be denied it just because of the racial prejudice of a few "higher ups" who are blinded by their Jim Crow method of thinking? Let's have this barrier smashed now and give those colored angels of mercy a chance to apply their skill in treating and curing our wounded servicemen.

PVT. E. B.

Ft. Monmouth Hospital

Negro nurses staff British hospital

Los Angeles TIMES CAL.

12-29-44

ENGLAND—In the oldest hospital in the United Kingdom, the first Negro nurses to arrive in the European Theater of Operations are now on duty, the War Department reported today.

On Sept. 16, the 63 nurses reported to the 170-bed hospital. Captain Mary L. Petty, chief nurse, hailing from Chicago, Ill., appointed 16 nurses to take charge of wards and assigned others to the operating room. With 7 years' nursing experience, Captain Petty is being trained as surgical supervisor.

22 Hampton Cadet Nurses Capped

HAMPTON, Va. — Twenty-two student members of the U.S. Cadet Nurses' Corps were capped during ceremonies last Friday night at Dixie Hospital auditorium with Miss Beulah M. McClammey, acting superintendent of nurses, presiding.

Miss Pauline Epps, nursing arts instructor, was mistress of ceremonies for the musical program preceding the capping. C. W. Mangum, administrator, extended greetings on behalf of the hospital; Miss Mary Reilly on behalf of the alumni; and Ruth Heywood, senior student nurse, on behalf of her associates.

According to Chaplain Harvey E. Johnson, of Eudora Wallace, pre-cadet student, Georgia, the morale is at dent nurse, responded for the class, which was addressed by Dr. Chester D. Bradley of the medical staff. Miss Clara Krueger, director of nursing education, administered the Florence Nightingale pledge.

Negro Tank Destroyer Battalion Sees Action With 95th Division

SEPIA SOCIALITE New Orleans, La.

12-16-44

Commanded by Lieutenant Colonel Frank S. Pritchard, 2535 Forest Avenue, Lansing, Michigan, and composed of four companies completely staffed by Negro officers, the unit completed its training for battle training for tanks and tank destroyers in March, 1943. In the area. August, 1944, the unit landed in France. With the U. S. Third Army in the Normandy Peninsula, the first line troops in the Metz area, during the sector in which Negro Tank Battalion is not far from the fall of Metz.

The battalion has already seen action since October 8, when it awaited the call to action. It took its place with the all-Negro troops in the Metz area, during the sector in which Negro Tank Battalion is not far from the fall of Metz.

It awaited the call to action. It took its place with the all-Negro troops in the Metz area, during the sector in which Negro Tank Battalion is not far from the fall of Metz.

Well-equipped for battle and keen for action, members of the unit exhibited great eagerness to move into action after their arrival in France.—The first U. S. tank destroyer battalion made up of Negro soldiers has already seen action since October 8, when it awaited the call to action. It took its place with the all-Negro troops in the Metz area, during the sector in which Negro Tank Battalion is not far from the fall of Metz.

Well-equipped for battle and keen for action, members of the unit exhibited great eagerness to move into action after their arrival in France.—The first U. S. tank destroyer battalion made up of Negro soldiers has already seen action since October 8, when it awaited the call to action. It took its place with the all-Negro troops in the Metz area, during the sector in which Negro Tank Battalion is not far from the fall of Metz.

Well-equipped for battle and keen for action, members of the unit exhibited great eagerness to move into action after their arrival in France.—The first U. S. tank destroyer battalion made up of Negro soldiers has already seen action since October 8, when it awaited the call to action. It took its place with the all-Negro troops in the Metz area, during the sector in which Negro Tank Battalion is not far from the fall of Metz.

Well-equipped for battle and keen for action, members of the unit exhibited great eagerness to move into action after their arrival in France.—The first U. S. tank destroyer battalion made up of Negro soldiers has already seen action since October 8, when it awaited the call to action. It took its place with the all-Negro troops in the Metz area, during the sector in which Negro Tank Battalion is not far from the fall of Metz.

Well-equipped for battle and keen for action, members of the unit exhibited great eagerness to move into action after their arrival in France.—The first U. S. tank destroyer battalion made up of Negro soldiers has already seen action since October 8, when it awaited the call to action. It took its place with the all-Negro troops in the Metz area, during the sector in which Negro Tank Battalion is not far from the fall of Metz.

Well-equipped for battle and keen for action, members of the unit exhibited great eagerness to move into action after their arrival in France.—The first U. S. tank destroyer battalion made up of Negro soldiers has already seen action since October 8, when it awaited the call to action. It took its place with the all-Negro troops in the Metz area, during the sector in which Negro Tank Battalion is not far from the fall of Metz.

Well-equipped for battle and keen for action, members of the unit exhibited great eagerness to move into action after their arrival in France.—The first U. S. tank destroyer battalion made up of Negro soldiers has already seen action since October 8, when it awaited the call to action. It took its place with the all-Negro troops in the Metz area, during the sector in which Negro Tank Battalion is not far from the fall of Metz.

Well-equipped for battle and keen for action, members of the unit exhibited great eagerness to move into action after their arrival in France.—The first U. S. tank destroyer battalion made up of Negro soldiers has already seen action since October 8, when it awaited the call to action. It took its place with the all-Negro troops in the Metz area, during the sector in which Negro Tank Battalion is not far from the fall of Metz.

Well-equipped for battle and keen for action, members of the unit exhibited great eagerness to move into action after their arrival in France.—The first U. S. tank destroyer battalion made up of Negro soldiers has already seen action since October 8, when it awaited the call to action. It took its place with the all-Negro troops in the Metz area, during the sector in which Negro Tank Battalion is not far from the fall of Metz.

Well-equipped for battle and keen for action, members of the unit exhibited great eagerness to move into action after their arrival in France.—The first U. S. tank destroyer battalion made up of Negro soldiers has already seen action since October 8, when it awaited the call to action. It took its place with the all-Negro troops in the Metz area, during the sector in which Negro Tank Battalion is not far from the fall of Metz.

Well-equipped for battle and keen for action, members of the unit exhibited great eagerness to move into action after their arrival in France.—The first U. S. tank destroyer battalion made up of Negro soldiers has already seen action since October 8, when it awaited the call to action. It took its place with the all-Negro troops in the Metz area, during the sector in which Negro Tank Battalion is not far from the fall of Metz.

Commanded by Lieutenant Colonel Frank S. Pritchard, 2535 Forest Avenue, Lansing, Michigan, and composed of four companies completely staffed by Negro officers, the unit completed its training for battle training for tanks and tank destroyers in March, 1943. In the area. August, 1944, the unit landed in France. With the U. S. Third Army in the Normandy Peninsula, the first line troops in the Metz area, during the sector in which Negro Tank Battalion is not far from the fall of Metz.

Commanded by Lieutenant Colonel Frank S. Pritchard, 2535 Forest Avenue, Lansing, Michigan, and composed of four companies completely staffed by Negro officers, the unit completed its training for battle training for tanks and tank destroyers in March, 1943. In the area. August, 1944, the unit landed in France. With the U. S. Third Army in the Normandy Peninsula, the first line troops in the Metz area, during the sector in which Negro Tank Battalion is not far from the fall of Metz.

Commanded by Lieutenant Colonel Frank S. Pritchard, 2535 Forest Avenue, Lansing, Michigan, and composed of four companies completely staffed by Negro officers, the unit completed its training for battle training for tanks and tank destroyers in March, 1943. In the area. August, 1944, the unit landed in France. With the U. S. Third Army in the Normandy Peninsula, the first line troops in the Metz area, during the sector in which Negro Tank Battalion is not far from the fall of Metz.

Commanded by Lieutenant Colonel Frank S. Pritchard, 2535 Forest Avenue, Lansing, Michigan, and composed of four companies completely staffed by Negro officers, the unit completed its training for battle training for tanks and tank destroyers in March, 1943. In the area. August, 1944, the unit landed in France. With the U. S. Third Army in the Normandy Peninsula, the first line troops in the Metz area, during the sector in which Negro Tank Battalion is not far from the fall of Metz.

Commanded by Lieutenant Colonel Frank S. Pritchard, 2535 Forest Avenue, Lansing, Michigan, and composed of four companies completely staffed by Negro officers, the unit completed its training for battle training for tanks and tank destroyers in March, 1943. In the area. August, 1944, the unit landed in France. With the U. S. Third Army in the Normandy Peninsula, the first line troops in the Metz area, during the sector in which Negro Tank Battalion is not far from the fall of Metz.

Commanded by Lieutenant Colonel Frank S. Pritchard, 2535 Forest Avenue, Lansing, Michigan, and composed of four companies completely staffed by Negro officers, the unit completed its training for battle training for tanks and tank destroyers in March, 1943. In the area. August, 1944, the unit landed in France. With the U. S. Third Army in the Normandy Peninsula, the first line troops in the Metz area, during the sector in which Negro Tank Battalion is not far from the fall of Metz.

Commanded by Lieutenant Colonel Frank S. Pritchard, 2535 Forest Avenue, Lansing, Michigan, and composed of four companies completely staffed by Negro officers, the unit completed its training for battle training for tanks and tank destroyers in March, 1943. In the area. August, 1944, the unit landed in France. With the U. S. Third Army in the Normandy Peninsula, the first line troops in the Metz area, during the sector in which Negro Tank Battalion is not far from the fall of Metz.

Commanded by Lieutenant Colonel Frank S. Pritchard, 2535 Forest Avenue, Lansing, Michigan, and composed of four companies completely staffed by Negro officers, the unit completed its training for battle training for tanks and tank destroyers in March, 1943. In the area. August, 1944, the unit landed in France. With the U. S. Third Army in the Normandy Peninsula, the first line troops in the Metz area, during the sector in which Negro Tank Battalion is not far from the fall of Metz.

Commanded by Lieutenant Colonel Frank S. Pritchard, 2535 Forest Avenue, Lansing, Michigan, and composed of four companies completely staffed by Negro officers, the unit completed its training for battle training for tanks and tank destroyers in March, 1943. In the area. August, 1944, the unit landed in France. With the U. S. Third Army in the Normandy Peninsula, the first line troops in the Metz area, during the sector in which Negro Tank Battalion is not far from the fall of Metz.

Commanded by Lieutenant Colonel Frank S. Pritchard, 2535 Forest Avenue, Lansing, Michigan, and composed of four companies completely staffed by Negro officers, the unit completed its training for battle training for tanks and tank destroyers in March, 1943. In the area. August, 1944, the unit landed in France. With the U. S. Third Army in the Normandy Peninsula, the first line troops in the Metz area, during the sector in which Negro Tank Battalion is not far from the fall of Metz.

Commanded by Lieutenant Colonel Frank S. Pritchard, 2535 Forest Avenue, Lansing, Michigan, and composed of four companies completely staffed by Negro officers, the unit completed its training for battle training for tanks and tank destroyers in March, 1943. In the area. August, 1944, the unit landed in France. With the U. S. Third Army in the Normandy Peninsula, the first line troops in the Metz area, during the sector in which Negro Tank Battalion is not far from the fall of Metz.

Commanded by Lieutenant Colonel Frank S. Pritchard, 2535 Forest Avenue, Lansing, Michigan, and composed of four companies completely staffed by Negro officers, the unit completed its training for battle training for tanks and tank destroyers in March, 1943. In the area. August, 1944, the unit landed in France. With the U. S. Third Army in the Normandy Peninsula, the first line troops in the Metz area, during the sector in which Negro Tank Battalion is not far from the fall of Metz.

Commanded by Lieutenant Colonel Frank S. Pritchard, 2535 Forest Avenue, Lansing, Michigan, and composed of four companies completely staffed by Negro officers, the unit completed its training for battle training for tanks and tank destroyers in March, 1943. In the area. August, 1944, the unit landed in France. With the U. S. Third Army in the Normandy Peninsula, the first line troops in the Metz area, during the sector in which Negro Tank Battalion is not far from the fall of Metz.

Commanded by Lieutenant Colonel Frank S. Pritchard, 2535 Forest Avenue, Lansing, Michigan, and composed of four companies completely staffed by Negro officers, the unit completed its training for battle training for tanks and tank destroyers in March, 1943. In the area. August, 1944, the unit landed in France. With the U. S. Third Army in the Normandy Peninsula, the first line troops in the Metz area, during the sector in which Negro Tank Battalion is not far from the fall of Metz.

Commanded by Lieutenant Colonel Frank S. Pritchard, 2535 Forest Avenue, Lansing, Michigan, and composed of four companies completely staffed by Negro officers, the unit completed its training for battle training for tanks and tank destroyers in March, 1943. In the area. August, 1944, the unit landed in France. With the U. S. Third Army in the Normandy Peninsula, the first line troops in the Metz area, during the sector in which Negro Tank Battalion is not far from the fall of Metz.

Commanded by Lieutenant Colonel Frank S. Pritchard, 2535 Forest Avenue, Lansing, Michigan, and composed of four companies completely staffed by Negro officers, the unit completed its training for battle training for tanks and tank destroyers in March, 1943. In the area. August, 1944, the unit landed in France. With the U. S. Third Army in the Normandy Peninsula, the first line troops in the Metz area, during the sector in which Negro Tank Battalion is not far from the fall of Metz.

Commanded by Lieutenant Colonel Frank S. Pritchard, 2535 Forest Avenue, Lansing, Michigan, and composed of four companies completely staffed by Negro officers, the unit completed its training for battle training for tanks and tank destroyers in March, 1943. In the area. August, 1944, the unit landed in France. With the U. S. Third Army in the Normandy Peninsula, the first line troops in the Metz area, during the sector in which Negro Tank Battalion is not far from the fall of Metz.

Tubbs Witnesses Serious Operation

By VINCENT TUBBS

AFRO War Correspondent with U.S. Troops in the S.W. Pacific

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

BOUGAINVILLE (Via Air Mail) — We operated today (May 5) for about the most feared wound a fighting man can receive — a bullet wound in the face.

The soldier, a member of advanced elements of the 93rd Division, came to us an hour before we were to sit down for the evening meal.

Capt. George Porter, NYC, was short and cryptic with the order he gave after seeing the man on a litter in the receiving tent. "Take him over to surgery," he said.

Doctor's Assistants

With deft hands Captain Porter tied off broken veins, cleansed the wound thoroughly, talked sharply to his aides and to this correspondent as he explained each phase of the operation.

Standing about assisting the doctor were: Pfc. Arsuell Watson, Newark, Del.; T/3 Eddie LeSuer, 4543 Merriam Avenue, Philly, who administerd the blood plasma; S/Sgt. Isaiah A. Burton, 1903 Fifteenth Streeet, Washington, a surgical technician; and Sgt. Bernard Johnson, Bronx, N.Y., another surgical technician.

Operation Lasts Hour

The wound was a neat one, a clean little half-inch hole through the fleshy part of the jaw. Had it been an inch higher, lower or deeper, the doctor said, the man would have been killed.

We completed our operation in an hour's time. Our patient was bandaged up and put to bed. The doctor coolly suggested that we'd better hurry or we'd miss the evening meal. This was the nineteenth operation he had performed or assisted in since coming to the island.

93rd Division Has Score of 20 to 5

By VINCENT TUBBS

AFRO War Correspondent with U.S. Troops in the S.W. Pacific

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

BOUGAINVILLE (By Cable) — We are in a fight here, and although we seem to have won the first rounds by a score of better than 20 to 5, we still can't tell the ultimate outcome.

Reconnaissance troops made the initial contact with the enemy May 16 in a ravine surrounded by ridges between Saua and Reini Rivers. The patrol killed six Japs, explored a large bivouac area, and engaged in sharp fighting from which they have just been relieved.

N.C. Soldier Kills 3

Pfc. James Cofer of Washington, Ga., killed two; Pfc. Merton Giliam of Cincinnati, Ohio, got six; Pvt. Ernest Bailey of Bayonne, N.J., wiped out a machine-gun nest; and Pvt. Ernest Rhodes of Richland, N.C., got three.

Sgt. James Owens of Cleveland got two while separated from the patrol and returned after being listed as missing. This was one of the hottest engagements in which 93rd Division infantrymen have participated. The going is still dough but we are jumping the enemy with both feet.

Help Take Key City of Gaeta

Four Pilots Assist in Sea Rescues

BOMBERS DOWN

Quartet Find Crews, Summons Aid

By MAX JOHNSON

AFRO War Correspondent with U.S. Troops in Italy

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

ADVANCED ALLIED BASE IN ITALY (By Cable) — Twelve pilots of the fighter group commanded by Lt. Col. Benjamin O. Davis furnished air cover for naval vessels shelling coastal towns along the Italian Peninsula this week during a concentrated attack, and helped make possible an Allied advance to take the key city of Gaeta among other strategic points.

The group encountered little enemy opposition during this aerial protection of convoys and battleships, but a half-dozen flyers participated in exciting air-sea rescues.

Second Lt. John J. Suggs of Terre Haute, Ind., and First Lt. Dudley M. Watson of Lexington, Ky., twice aided in such rescues, once under enemy ack-ack fire.

Victims 35 Miles Out

The two were patrolling off Gaeta Point when ground controllers radioed them that a bomber had crashed thirty-five miles out at sea. Watson located the dinghy with one white American in it and four others hanging on its sides. He circled to prevent enemy attack while Suggs notified an amphibian rescue boat and directed it to the scene.

Poor visibility had hampered the would-be rescuers' observation until the timely co-operation of the two pilots. Earlier the same pair aided in the rescue of a white PVO pilot Capt. Robert B. Tresville. Second Lt. John F. Briggs aided in a similar rescue. They stood by until the crash victims were picked up by rescue boats.

Get Bronze Battle Stars

By BILLY ROWE

(Courier War Correspondent)

BOUGAINVILLE, South Pacific—For heroic actions in the treacherous jungle warfare against the wily Japanese, the forces of the 93rd division, fighting here, became the only Negro infantry division entitled to wear bronze battle stars. Several officers received promotions, and 2nd Lt. Charles R. Collins, Chicago, has been awarded the Purple Heart with an oak leaf cluster for having been wounded four times in five Japanese encounters.

Brigadier General Leonard R. Boyd presented Lieutenant Collins with his medal at an evacuation hospital here. Wounded four times in five encounters with the Japanese in actions between the Sana and Reini rivers, the cavalry officer is credited with one of the finest operations completed by the 93rd elements.

HOOSIER MATE

Teamed with Sgt. Rothchild Webb, Indianapolis, Ind., Lieutenant Collins led a force composed of parts of every element of the division in a purge of No Man's Land. When the lientenant was struck down by an enemy bullet, Sergeant Webb took over the leadership of the group and led them successfully through the engagement.

The attack was powered with the desire to avenge the deaths of Sgt. Nehemiah Hodges, Chicago, T/5 Moss Davis, Warrenton, N. C., and Pvt. Deormy Ray, who were killed in the final Japanese ambush. The only men killed in the five actions, they were caught in the first murderous machine gun blast from the Nipponese hidden in the dense jungle. Second and third in the line of march, Hodges and Davis never knew what hit them. Ray staggered forward in a final surge of power to kill at least two of the enemy before slumping to the ground.

ROUT JAPANESE

Picked scouts led by Lt. William L. Gurrant, St. Petersburg, Fla., formed several patrols. General Boyd inspired a hunt for the early mission which put the Japanese to flight on the wing.

In Lieutenant Gurrant's picked patrol were Sgt. Harry A. Robinson, Pittsfield, Mass.; Cpl. Robert C. Owens, Chicago; Pfc. Fred S. Anderson, Okolona, Ark.; Pfc. Andrew J. Beachum, Spring City, Tenn.; Pfc. Artie Breedlove, Aurora, Ill.; Pfc. Harold Green, Asheville, N. C.; Pfc. Loy D. Smith, Centre, Texas; Pfc. Algie Stribling, Chicago, and Pvt. Oscar Spooner, Oscar, La.

TRIO OF DEAD VICTIMS

After a short search this group found their dead buddies. They had died facing their enemy, many of whom lay bullet-riddled in front of them. The bodies of the men were half stripped, their weapons and shoes having been taken.

In their search, however, the group did not find Collins and Webb. With Webb providing care for his lieutenant and leading the remnants of his group, the men wandered for three days and nights through the jungle before finally reaching the American lines. Accompanying the searchers for the men was Capt. Robert McDaniel, a former Baltimore physician, who administered first aid to the wounded officer.

SPECIAL DECORATION

Collins will survive his wounds. They consist of a deeply lacerated left cheek, and several bullet punctures in the arms and left leg.

Thirty-six other men, however, who were wounded in action against the enemy have received the significant medal and many have been recommended for the bronze star medal for gallantry in action. At least one of the brave soldiers has been mentioned for the coveted DSC (Distinguished Service Cross). The elements in the mopping up campaign on Bougainville have won campaign ribbon stars for the entire division, which thus becomes the first all-Negro division entitled to wear the bronze battle stars.

LIEUTENANT PROMOTED

Eleven officers have been promoted from second to first lieutenants: Francis E. Elis, Chandler, Okla.; Charles W. Lawrence, Baker sfield, Calif.; Edward L. Richie Jr., Oakland, Calif.; William Sanders, Renfrow, Okla.; Walter B. Sanderson, Jr., Washington, D. C.; Walter R. Simpson, Indianapolis, Ind.; James E. Shelton, Nashville, Tenn.; John O. Trice, Topeka, Kans.; Durward P. Griffey, Berke-ley, Calif., and John W. Strong Pittsburgh, Pa.

First Lieutenant Wilson G. Kis Memorial Day, the entire elepert, Detroit, one of the four com ment massed and paid respect to pany commanders, received the their honored dead. twin bars of a captain. His company was a potent factor in the entire campaign waged by the el-

47m-1944

Crack Quintet Broken Up by Departure of First Officer

(Afro-American) Balt., Md. 5-27-44

Lieut. Palmer Leaves Italy on Rotation Plan; 4 Others Carry On Ordnance Work

By ART CARTER

AFRO War Correspondent with U.S. Troops in Italy

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

SOMEWHERE IN ITALY—(By Air Mail, Delayed)—One of the first officers to leave the Mediterranean theatre on the Army's rotation plan is 2nd Lieut. Charles W. Palmer, 27, of Atlantic City, N.J., whose aviation ordnance depot company—the first of its kind overseas—is entering its eighteenth month of foreign service.

His departure splits the company's crack official quintet: 1st Lieut. William O. Dickerson, 24, commanding officer, Glendolen, Pa.; 2nd Lieuts. Clarence E. Wilson, 25, and Charles R. Webb, 25, of Detroit, and Edward D. Hudson, 26, of Milford, Conn. depot storekeeper.

This quintet, like a smooth-working basketball team, has kept the complex work of an ordnance depot unit moving efficiently since its first commanding officer, 1st Lt. Nolan R. Best, Washington, D.C., was injured in North Africa last August and returned to the States.

A loyal, hard-working enlisted personnel has kept supplies moving to the numerous 12th and 15th Air Forces aviation groups within a 500-mile strip in Southern Italy.

The unit, which landed at Oran December 26, 1942, handles everything technical an aviation squadron uses (except the heavy bombs); taking the cargo off the ship or plane, uncrating supplies, filling requisitions by delivering the goods.

It handles everything from a sponge to automotive vehicles. Whenever a spare part is missing, this unit supplies it.

The value of the property in the motor pool alone runs into many millions of dollars, as do the thousands of articles at the depot.

Lieut. Wilson is chief at the motor pool, while Lieut. Webb is in charge at the depot. Both former students at Wayne University, Lieuts. Wilson and Webb were born within a block of each other, and entered the Army together.

Lt. Hudson is transportation officer while Lt. Palmer handled all convoys, with Lt. Dickerson supervising the whole show.

Top Enlisted Men

Among top enlisted men are M-Sgt. John Watson, Jr., chief clerk, Cincinnati, Ohio; M-Sgt. Donald M. Peronneau, Bronx, N.Y., chief shipping clerk, and M-Sgt. John A. Jackson, former Lincoln University football star, Charlottesville, Va., who is chief

The "top-kick" is 1st Sgt. Millard C. Russell, ex-Alabama State College track captain, of New York City, and a Baltimorean, T-Sgt. Walter W. Farabee, 710 N. Carrollton Avenue, is mess sergeant. To celebrate the first anniversary overseas, T-Sgt. Farabee barbecued a pig purchased from the natives.

Easterners in Company

Easterners in the company are:

WASHINGTON — S-Sgts. George T. Bennett, chief clerk at the tires and tubes department and drummer in the battalion band; Charles S. Rogers, Jr., Cpl. Tyson E. Ross, Pfc. Ulysses Price, Pvts. Lorenzo J. Burnett, Arthur Sullivan;

BALTIMORE — Sgts. Edward M. Carter, 601 N. Calhoun Street; John F. Faulkner, 1020 Sterling Street; James E. Queen, 1500 McCulloh Street; Cpls. James E. Barnes, 205 Myrtle Avenue; Hurp I. Hill, 325 E. Twenty-third Street; Charles H. Thompkins, 405 N. Bond Street;

COLLINS IN UNIT

Pfcs. Robert L. Collins, 607 S. Fremont Avenue; Horace Tanner, 766 Vine Street; Pvts. James W. Carter, 1503 Saratoga Street; Walter Combs, 1402 Carroll Street; Merrill J. Sampson, 1406 Division Street;

PHILADELPHIA — T-Sgts. Leonidas A. Allen and Samuel Roots; Sgts. John Batiste and Claybrook R. Woods; Pfc. Benjamin C. McCauley; Pvts. John M. Mosley, Charles L. Pitts, William L. Terrell.

Other Pennsylvanians include Sgt. Thomas J. Still, Holicong; Sgt. George H. Young, West Chester; Cpl. William I. Lee, Belle Vernon; Cpl. Andrew Riser, Pittsburgh;

NEW YORK — S-Sgt. Thomas L. Anderson, Jr., Brooklyn; Sgt. William H. Gilreath, NYC; Sgt. Otis Gilliam, Brooklyn; Pvt. Joseph N. Wright, Brooklyn; and Sgt. Ford Storall, Buffalo, and Pfc. James Ingram, Mt. Vernon.

Sgt. Robert E. Palmer, Frederick, Md.; Pvt. William D. Lomax, Forest Glen, Md., and Pvt. James R. Harris, Galena Kent, Md., wanted the folks at home to know that everything is okay with them, while additional Easterners making similar requests included:

FROM MASS. AND CONN.

S-Sgts. Joaquim M. Roderick, New Bedford, Mass.; Edward D. Turner, Hartford, Conn.; Sgt. Robert T. Bacon, Concord, N.H.; Cpls. McKinley Franklin and James E. Harris, Roselle and Port Harris, N.J., respectively;

Cpl. Thomas H. Smith, Boston, Mass.; Pfc. Alfred P. Clark, Hartford; Pfc. Gerald Fletcher, Providence, R.I.; Pvts. John Davis, Waterbury, Conn.; Pvts. James R. Pollard, New Haven, and Milton S. Ross, Hartford.

S-Sgt. Cedell Pearson, Middletown; Pvts. Robert Miller, Akron, and Wiley L. Brown, Columbus, Ohio, and Pvt. Willie Moore, Cairo, Ill.

5,461 INCREASE IN THE INFANTRY

(Philadelphia Tribune, Pa.)

And 32,053 In Non-Combat Outfits

12-21-44

ONLY 876 REMAIN IN THE CAVALRY

WASHINGTON, D. C. (NNPA) Almost three quarters of a million Negroes are serving in the army of the United States, according to an announcement this week by the war department. As of September 30, there were 701,678 Negroes enrolled.

The infantry had 49,483; coast guard and field artillery, 36,302; cavalry, 867; engineers, 133,180; air corps, 73,686, and all others (mostly service troops) 408,160.

While the total number of Negroes has increased since the war departments announcement of May 15, 1944, of figures as of February 29, 1944, from 664,066 to 701,678, there is an interesting comparison of the numbers in the various categories of service. 12.21-44

Enrollments in the cavalry dropped from 9,043 to 867, the result of the disbanding of the 9th and 10th cavalries which were converted to service troops.

The air corps dropped from 77,335 to 73,686. Coast guard and field artillery dropped from 50,955 to 36,302.

Increases were noted in the infantry—from 44,022 to 49,483, and "all others," meaning service troops) from 376,197 to 408,160.

The number of commissioned officers increased since February from 4,979 to 5,804.

Show Combat Skill In Scrap Near Belgium

(Journal + Guide—Norfolk, Va.) 10-14-44

German SS Units Had Superior Weapons In Battle

WITH THE U. S. FIRST ARMY—At the end of a furious scrap in a litle French town near the Belgian border, a Negro ordnance ammunition unit's 62 man "clean-up" squad had slain 35 Nazi SS troopers, and wounded three more, while cleaning out an isolated pocket of German resistance.

The scrap occurred as the unit was preparing to move its ammunition depot into position to supply units of the First Army, hammering against the Siegfried Line. The Germans had "dug in" at the village, and their presence was made known to the unit commander, Captain Jack Carstarphen, 239 Bailey avenue, Fort Worth, Texas, by members of the French Forces of the Interior. 10-14-44

ARMED WITH CARBINES

Captain Carstarphen divided his unit into three sections of 20 men each, under command of First Lieutenant Loyal Price of Decatur, Ill., Second Lieutenant Seymour Goodstein, of Brooklyn, N. Y., and himself. A personal reconnaissance of the area was made, and Lieutenant Price deployed all three sections, moving them in from different directions.

The men were armed only with carbines and rifles, and a few incendiary hand grenades. The Germans were using automatic machine pistols, in addition to their other weapons.

Lieutenant Goodstein, who spoke German, worked his way towards a barn where the largest group of Germans was hiding, and asked them to surrender. He was met with volleys from the machine pistols, and fighting began. 10-14-44

VOLUNTEERS FOR JOB

The first victim was shot by Corporal Paul Wood of Chicago, Ill., who dropped the Nazi who had fired at Lieutenant Goodstein. The Germans withdrew to the interior of the barn, and blind firing began.

Technical Sergeant Harold F. Jackson, of 612-A West Walnut street, Milwaukee, Wis., volunteered to move in close to the barn door, and threw an incendiary grenade into the building. The building burst into flames, and the Germans came out fighting. The Negro soldiers opened fire on them.

VIRGINIAN KILLS 3

Private First Class Lindsay Carswell, 1226 Buffalo avenue, Jacksonville, Fla., and Private First Class Mason Hendricks, of South Boston, Va., each killed three Germans, with Carswell wounding one other. One shot by Hendricks was a Nazi officer. 10-14-44

Private Jim Scott, of 115 Robertson street, Shreveport, La., company orderly and bodyguard to the company officers, also killed two Nazis. Scott told First Sergeant Louis Reynolds, of 1319 South Kedzie avenue, Chicago, Ill.: "It sure did something to me to see one of our boys lying there wounded, with all those bullets flying around. I never did call on the Lord's name any more than I did right then."

Private William A. Wheatley, Hardingsburg, Ky., evacuated two wounded comrades, driving a three-quarter ton truck through the field of fire twice. Technician Fifth Grade Clark C. Calloway, 440 West King street, Bedford, Va., had carried water to the wounded as they lay on the ground, awaiting help.

LOST PRIZED SOUVENIR 10-14-44

On the lighter side, Staff Sergeant Matthew Geal, 1246 South Sangman street, Chicago, Ill., reported having lost a prized box of Copenhagen snuff, as he ducked violently to avoid the fire of a German aiming at him.

Among the other members of the unit who performed valiantly, before the Germans were subdued, were: Corporal Lewis Hinton, 117 North Wood street, Chicago, Ill.; Privates First Class Allen Ashbury, 218 West 141st street, New York City; Private First Class Alex Scott, 130 West Mill street, Chester, S. C.; Private James Bradley, 1940 Brown avenue, Evanston, Ill.; Private Marion Griggs, Macon, Ga.; Private Robert Murray, 2082 Eighth avenue, New York.

Colored Boys In Bradley's Texas Outfit Praised For New Charge

By OLLIE STEWART

With The Advanced American Forces in France.—Elements of Private Robert C. Martin, 1724 Hall street, Dallas, Texas, and Private Johnson Smith, of 2228 Fitzwater street, Philadelphia.

The men have been highly praised by Captain Carstarphen, who says that his is "the best damn ordnance outfit in the European Theater of Operations."

Our artillery and anti-aircraft lads are still making their presence felt in a great offensive, as it gathers momentum this week.

This push began Tuesday a week ago with gigantic air pounding by three thousands bombers. I watched fortresses and marauders pass overhead for more than an hour. The sight made us all feel better.

Saturday, after the fall of the Countances, I visited 155 Howitzer batteries and saw men from a nearby anti-aircraft unit.

They asked me to tell the world that they are "the ball."

Over a rough terrain, littered with carcasses, blasted tanks, guns, cattle and horses, I trotted with a guide who led me to hidden gun positions, where our boys were sounding off. As they fired, lines of dazed, dirty German prisoners trudged back to the stockades. The bombing and the shelling were so terrific that the Nazis mumbled incoherently and their guns were filled with dirt.

Sunday at Cherbourg there was the greatest gathering of colored war correspondents ever to be recorded in history. They included: Randy Dixon, Courier; Edward Toles, Defender; Roi Ottley, P. M.; Rudolph Dunbar and Allen Morrison, Stars and Stripes; and Ollie Stewart, Afro and Informer.

The Nazi subterranean forts visited still smelled of slaughter. Nearby there was supposed to have been a launching for pilotless planes which the Germans had sent over Southern England. The planes were almost unbelievable in size and ingenuity.

The Red Cross workers were on hand. Among those seen were; Caluse Walton, Denver, Colo., director. Mr. Walton was assisted by Misses Gladys Martin, Topeka Kansas, and Lavern Birch, Boston, Mass.

It is significant that at the U. S. O. show of the U. S. Navy audience there are equally as many colored as there are whites, whereas in the Cherbourg area, there are actually more colored troops than there are white. No one hesitates to give full credit to our lads for the prominent part that they played in France.

Sgt. Robert Huntley, Anguilla, Miss., who dug up two thousand mines in two weeks says, "the Germans always plant mines in patterns, and when you find the first mine, the rest are easy to locate."

AFRO-American

93rd Has Just Begun to Fight

Now at Bougainville, Plan March to Tokyo

BEAT JAPS' BEST

Baltimorean Directs Forward Aid Station

By VINCENT TUBBS

AFRO War Correspondent with U.S. Troops in the S.W. Pacific

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

BOUGAINVILLE — Elements of the 93rd Division "have just begun to fight" and these boys are primed for the fight of their lives against their enemies — all of whom they are determined to beat into ignoble submission.

Their recent victories over the Japs have given them the experience and confidence necessary to assure them a parade position in the marches on Manila and Tokyo, and they are beating the jungle enemy with endurance, self-sacrifice, initiative and pure, unadulterated guts.

Lick Best Jap Troops

In their fire action, elements of the 93rd met and beat members of the crack Jap 13th Infantry, a part of the infamous 6th Division that perpetrated the rape of Nanking and showered themselves with Nipponese glory as fighting men.

They are the only Jap soldiers permitted to wear a red shoulder patch, signifying they are the emperor's best. Men of the 93rd proved better.

Patrols that have carried the blue helmet men far into enemy territory have failed to flush the enemy during the past three weeks. The only enemy trooper encountered was a wounded one who had been left behind as his comrades fled the wrath and fire power of our boys and their guns.

Jap Fanaticism Gone

The patrol disposed of the Jap immediately to bring the division's score to 107, took over and destroyed a large store of ammunition, then went on with its mission of discovery without contacting the Japs who are proving more fleet-footed than fanatical.

Patrols are combing the island, daily, begging for a fight, but the only signs of the thousands of enemy troops known to be hereabouts have been evidences of hasty retreat.

The strong outposts on seven hills which our boys are holding are in the densest part of the jungle. To live in such God-forgotten country is a feat worthy of undying respect, admiration and acclaim.

The men are dug in on the hills in pillboxes they constructed themselves from the materials at hand. Three trunks form the walls above the earth and bark, sometimes covered with a lean-to, serves as a roof to keep out part of the incessant rainfall.

Their floors are the soggy earth, and, after nightfall, there is nerve-wracking vigilance for the sneaky, unpredictable enemy.

Food at the outposts is canned. The practical fare is C ration — cold beans and bits of meat with hard biscuits.

The 93rd is in this thing up to the hilt and the men are improvising and inventing like every army unit put into the field on its own must do. Their dugouts and foxholes are encouragingly homey. They are orderly and some even have pin-up girls on the earthen walls.

Men Make Beds

In one sector they are making beds by crossing two long and two short saplings and weaving a mattress in between with telephone wire.

The food is improved with cooking and the luxury of hot coffee into which the hard biscuits are dunked.

During the days the boys pass the time improving their homes, digging drainage ditches or other dugouts in more desirable spots.

In some dugouts the men can be heard indulging in rich barber shop harmony. Our boys are at war all right, the worst possible part of it — jungle war, but they are equal to it and they are better men than any enemy they face in the Pacific.

Among Men Seen in Area

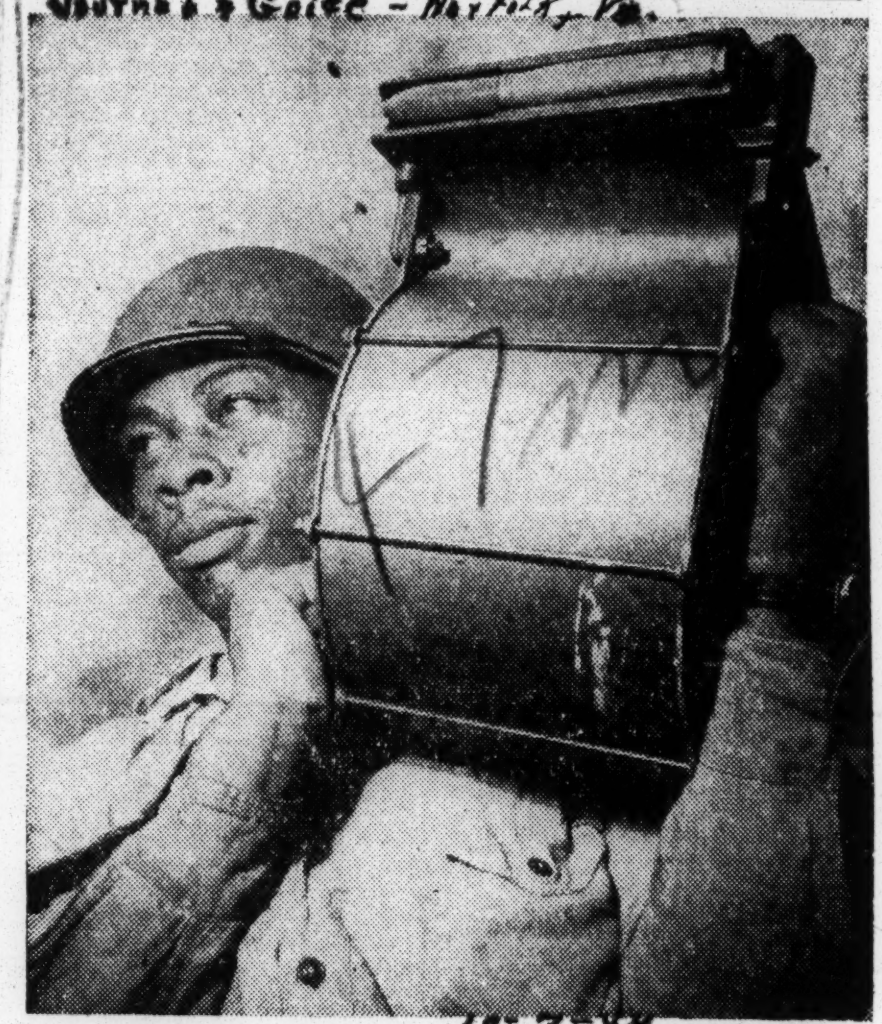
Seen on repeated tours of front-line positions have been Lieuts. H. O. Estes, Charlottesville, Va., who commands a machine-gun and mortar outfit; Charles Lynn, Lincoln, Ill., former CIAA discus champ at A. and T. College; Chester Boles, Lynchburg, Va., whose company held Hill 150 during the toughest days and who earned the monicker, "Mushroom of the Jungle," because of his fighting tenacity.

Baltimoreans Interviewed

Capts. Robert McDaniel, 1737 E. Preston Street, Baltimore, who is in charge of a forward aid station; Andrew Johnson, Cleveland chaplain, who lives with the men on Hill 501; Lieuts. John Sarazen, Chicago, and Emanuel Stewart, Ocala, Fla., whose men hold the hill.

Among enlisted men seen on the front are: Sgt. Earl Spruill, 952 Harlem Avenue, Baltimore, whose schoolteacher wife gave birth to a son while he was at sea; Pvt. Harold Poe, Pelham, N.C., who was cutting the hair of Pvt. William Moore, Raleigh, N.C., outside their heavy machine-gun dugout; Pvt. John Woods, Westfield, N.J., who was writing to his cousin, Miss Mozelle Vaughn, 1112 Eaton Road, Southeast, Washington.

Steward Has To Shoot, Too



A FARM BOY DOES JOB OF WAR—Miles Davis King, steward's mate second class, 19-year-old farm boy from Gilmer, Texas, carries a loaded magazine to his 20 mm. gun aboard the USS Tulagi on its way to Southern France on the August 15 invasion day. He intends to return to the farm as soon as the shooting's over. ((Official U. S. Navy Photograph)

60,000 from Miss. in Armed Forces

Afro American - Baltimore

WASHINGTON

Claim of the Jackson, Miss., director of Selective Service that there are more colored 18-25-age youth in the Army than white is not borne out by the facts.

In Mississippi the races are evenly divided, there being a million colored and a million white people. Since the President stopped voluntary recruiting in December, 1942, some 60,000 colored and 60,000 white have been inducted.

Enlistment Bias Hurt

This would be one State where the number of colored and white men in the armed services would be entirely equal save for the fact that from 1941 to 1943 whites enlisted voluntarily and colored were restricted.

The total number of white people in the armed services from Mississippi to date is nearly 60 per cent and the number of colored, 40 per cent.

47m-1944

Coast Guard First to Confirm News Of Negro Troops' Invasion Role

People's Voice — New York, N. Y.

6-17-44

As Allied forces were meeting and overcoming fierce German resistance to pound deeper into France this week, PV received the confirmation from reliable Washington sources, Monday, that approximately 100,000 Negro troops were in France or "poised in England" either taking part or waiting to take part in the greatest military mass movement in history.

In spite of almost complete lack of information in the daily press of the part Negroes were playing, from other sources news came. The Associated Negro Press stated that "a continuing series of background conferences and discussions of tactical operations with officials of the various branches, has enabled ANP to give some picture of what has happened so far."

ANP's findings, without garnishment or "glamorizing" by war correspondents, and checked by PV, reveal the following:

6-17-44

● Negro soldiers established a new system of telephone exchanges and lines in a 300-mile area contiguous to the French coast which was to be the "initial point of contact." In one section alone, they laid down three new landing fields and extended seven more for the air force;

● these troops have been identified as quartermaster, air force, ground crews, service troops and some anti-aircraft units;

● after the H-Hour arrival in France of airborne American troops which had been flown over the Channel, heavier weapons than those carried by the first fighters who landed, were brought in by Negro quartermaster and service outfits. Negro engineers moved in at the same time. All of these operations were carried out under strong enemy fire; 6-17-44

● Negro port battalions, were, at last report, alerted to be ready a moment's notice to establish docks when the positions taken thus far by the Allies are "sufficiently assured" to allow the building of the dock-landings for the heavy seagoing craft. These men will be working against time and in constant danger of attack both from the air and land;

● although there were rumors that Negro paratroopers were among the first to land in France, there was no War Department confirmation of this as late as Monday, June 12; 6-17-44

● no Negro fliers took part in the invasion; the 99th Fighter Group and 332nd Fighter Squadron were in action over Italy.

COAST GUARD ACTION

The United States Coast Guard, long the most liberal branch of the American armed forces, was the first to officially confirm the participation of Negroes in the invasion, with the brief announcement:

"Negroes are serving on every type of craft in the Coast Guard, and we have every type of craft in the invasion area."

This meant Negroes were serving on attack transports, LSI (landing ship, infantry); LST (landing ship, tanks), and cutters. It was revealed that "Negro gunners were at their positions firing away." 6-17-44

Negro Coast Guardsmen figured in the vital rescue work that took place in the choppy, wave-tossed Channel when many soldiers, weakened by sea-sickness, floundered helplessly in the water before they could reach the beaches.

NAVY'S REPORT

From the Navy Department came word that on the three battleships and two cruisers that saw action, Negro seamen did their part. ANP named the battleships as the Nevada, Arkansas and Texas, and the cruisers as the Augusta and Tuscaloosa.

There were brief daily press reports at the end of the week of Negro soldiers guarding captured Nazi prisoners, and burying the dead.

Prior to the invasion last Tuesday, General Dwight D. Eisenhower saw to it that highly-trained Negro units were ready. Able to handle many kinds of complicated weapons of modern warfare, thousands of these men, according to ANP, went through rigorous training in the towns and hills of Britain. How many of the troops saw action as actual COMBAT outfits in the landing in France, is still open to question. 6-17-44

One anti-aircraft battalion made up of four batteries admittedly was given intensive instruction at a British school to learn the latest methods used by British gunners in shooting down German raiders over Britain. In view of the fact that there has been official admission of participation of some Negro anti-aircraft, these outfits probably saw combat action.

93rd HQ Unit Well Trained

Afro American
Baltimore, Md.

15 College Men, 3 Ex-Teachers Among Staff

6 GOV. WORKERS

Also "Housekeepers" for Division HQ

8-19-44

AFRO War Correspondent with U.S. Troops in the South Pacific

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

By VINCENT TUBBS

SOMEWHERE IN THE SOUTHWEST PACIFIC (Via Air Mail) — Fifteen college men, at least half a dozen former government employees in Washington, a former NYC Urban League employee and three former school teachers are among the enlisted personnel of the 93rd Division Headquarters and Headquarters Company.

Howard University is represented by four stalwarts, Lincoln University (Pa.) has two and Morgan State College has one.

S/Sgt. James H. Smith, Trenton, N.J.; T/5 Joseph Burrell and Cpl. Lawrence Bailey, Washington; and T/5 Willrowe Martin, Philadelphia, are the Howard men.

M/Sgt. from Morgan

T/4 John B. Thompson, NYC, and T/5 Edwin Wilson, Columbus, Ga., are the Lincoln men. M/Sgt. Cornell Vandaye, 544 N. Fifty-sixth Street, Philly, carries the banner for Morgan State.

Other men and the colleges they represent are: 8-19-44

T/4 Sylvester Barber, Wilkesboro, N.C., Winston-Salem Teachers' College; T/4 Russell Bradley, Richmond, Hampton Institute; Cpl. Harry Johnson, Elkins, W.Va., Fordham U. and W.Va. State College; T/5 John A. Jones, NYC, Virginia Union University;

T/Sgt. Robert Raiser, Huntington, W.Va., State College; T/4 James Olphin, Richmond, Virginia Union University; T/Sgt. Brown Pinkney, Baltimore, Alabama State Teachers' College; Sgt. David Sams, Columbia, S.C., Allen University; S/Sgt. Leon Saunders, Fayetteville, W.Va., Bluefield Teachers' College.

Former Washington workers are: T/5 John Piner, Philly; M/Sgt. Earl Armstead, Cpl. Lawrence Bailey, T/5 Joseph Burrell, T/5 Theodore Lewis and S/Sgt. William Pitt who finished Peters' Business College.

Sgts. Sanders and Smith, and Cpl. Johnson were schoolmasters before Uncle Sam beckoned. T/3 Goulbourne Blackett, NYC, was an employee of the National Urban League before induction.

Do Needed "Paper Work"

On one of the Pacific Isles where the 93rd is up to the hilt in the business of knocking the foundations from under Japan's greater East Asia co-prosperity sphere, these men are the bulwarks of taht necessary evil referred to as "paper work."

Clersk, typists, file clerks, etc., they handle the maze of papers that expedite the movement of supplies, requisition ammunition and food, issue clothing, announce awards, and keep the records straight in a million other ways—including the payment of allotments. 8-19-44

Not all members of Headquarters Company are white-collar workers, however. Some are what they call "housekeepers for Division Headquarters."

HQ Maintenance Men

They raise the tents for HQ personnel, keep the offices clean, keep the water bags filled, maintain HQ vehicles, empty the waste baskets and garbage pails.

But, most important of all, said one soldier, "We salute the one-bar officers that are so much overshadowed by the heavy brass that they would feel bad if they didn't have us around to render the proper military courtesy."

Included in the clerking and house keeping groups are, besides those mentioned:

M/Sgt. Clarence Cummings, Newton Square, Pa.; M/Sgt. James Vinson, Braddock, Pa.; T/Sgt. Anthony Hatfield, Corona, N.Y.; S/Sgt. Cornelius Brooks, Brackenridge, Pa.; T/4 Thomas Freeman, NYC; John Scott, NYC; Charles Wade, Wilder, W.Va.; 8-19-44

T/4s Victor Bowser, Elizabeth, N.J.; George Fowler, NYC; James Hopewell, Worcester, Mass.; Joseph Howe, Summit, N.J.; Emmett Johnson, Lexington, Va.; Edward Moultrie, 1219 Kimball Street, Philly; Thomas McDonald, Imperial, Pa.;

T/4s William Robertson, 1827 Fourth Street, Northwest, Washington; Deotha Rankin, NYC; Franklin Reeves, Providence, R.I.; T/5s Arthur Mitchell, NYC; Robert Rainey, Harrisburg, Pa.; Marvin Sutton, 2018 Nineteenth Street, Philly; Clarence McMillan, St. Paul, N.C.;

SPARTANBURG REPRESENTED

T/5s John Askerneese, Farrell, Pa.; Fletcher Crawford, Jamaica, N.Y.; James Delaney, Dover, Del.; William Ferguson, NYC; Roscoe Mayers, Spartanburg, S.C.; Earl Horton, Sanford, N.C.; Walter Reed, Carlisle, Pa.; Othel Werts, McCormick, S.C.; Randy Walters, NYC;

T/3s William Murray, NYC; Edward Corley, NYC; Cpls. John Givens, NYC; Lester Levine, Brooklyn; Wesley Smith, Philly; Pfcs. William Wofford, Asheville, N.C.; Herbert Wright, Wilmington, Del.; Willie Nelson, NYC; Brooks Jackson, Portsmouth, Va.; 8-19-44

T/3s Beatty Glenn, Union, S.C.; Levander Ford, Sumter, S.C.; Velma Exum, Farmville, N.C.; David Avery, Nyack, N.Y.; Pvts. Thomas Burton, Trenton, N.J.; James McMillan, St. Pauls, N.C.; and Ray Scott, Asheville, N.C.

NEGRO NURSES AND THE ARMY

Defender — Chicago, Ill.

Necessity plus the militant campaign by the National Association of Colored Graduate Nurses have achieved an outstanding victory for democracy. The army has decided to recruit Negro nurses without following the quota system under which they were previously accepted. 8-12-44

This step was decided upon when a well organized drive in the recruiting of nurses failed to meet the minimum requirements of the armed forces. In New York City, the drive failed to produce the added quota of 500 white nurses, while at that time there were 800 registered Negro nurses in that city ready and eager to serve. These 800 qualified nurses were ignored because the army's quota of colored nurses was already filled. The 219 Negro nurses in the daily, this need of qualified nurses has become acute. The problem is not one of "protecting the segregation system," but rather is whether white soldiers shall die because of the lack of enough Florence Nightengales. Into this breach will step trained Negro nurses who, despite their original snubbing, will wholeheartedly train and perform the armed forces were regarded as ample to fill the army's need, as they were used only at segregated hospitals and only for Negro troops. It took the Brass Hats a long time to realize that a wounded serviceman wants only medical cares not as a white or black face. 8-12-44

With the war increasing in tempo arduous t sks that accompany their vocation: From this unselfish performance of duty will surely come an improvement in race relations that will carry over into civilian life.

When a soldier is convalescing, he will have a great deal of time to clearly think of the issues of democracy that face his country. He will remember his former training in matters pertaining to race. Then he will weigh it against the kind and skillful service that is given him by the Negro nurses. After this comparison the demagogues are going to have a lot of difficulty in taking G.I. Joe back to his former state of prejudice. 8-12-44

The victory in the acceptance of nurses by the army can be chalked up as one step on the long road for real democracy. The stupid segregation of blood by the Red Cross blood bank, despite all scientific proof of its fallacy, is the next obstacle that must be removed at once. The final achievement is the breaking down of barriers, and the integration of all soldiers into one army without restrictions because of race or color.

War Department Admits 9th and 10th Cavalry Regiments Are Service Troops

Call-Kansas City, Mo.
4-14-44

NEW YORK. — The 9th and 10th Cavalry regiments, famous Negro regular army units, have been converted into service troops, it has been admitted by the War department.

In a letter to Roy Wilkins, acting secretary of the N.A.A.C.P., John J. McCloy, assistant secretary of war, included copy of a letter to Senator Robert A. Taft in which it was explained that the 9th and 10th—although not designated by name—have been used "to provide certain additional service units to meet an early requirement of the highest importance." In explaining the conversion of the famous old fighting regiments into service troops Mr. McCoy wrote Senator Taft:

"Unfortunately currently constituted service units were all committed to definite tasks. They could not be withdrawn from these tasks without seriously interfering with planned operations, and the short time available for the organization and training of the needed units made it imperative to utilize previously trained personnel. 4-14-44

It was found that the only available source for such personnel was certain uncommitted combat units, including the Second Cavalry division.

As mentioned previously, the military situation demanded that trained personnel in considerable numbers be made immediately available. Since the Second Cavalry division was the only source from which such personnel could be withdrawn without delaying the war effort, the War department was compelled to effect this change in [illegible]. Needless to say, the decision would necessarily have been the same had this division been composed of white personnel."

The 9th and 10th formed part of the Second Cavalry division which had been training in Ft. Clark, Texas. 4-14-44

Mr. McCloy's letter was in reply to a direct inquiry of the N.A.A.C.P. under date of March 23 as to what had become of the 9th and 10th Cavalry regiments. Following Secretary Stimson's letter of February 19, to Congressman Hamilton Fish, many rumors floated about the country on the conversion of Negro combat units into service troops.

The war department was mysteriously quiet about the 9th and 10th cavalry regiments. Rumors as to the conversion of these troops became so persistent that the N.A.A.C.P. wrote the war department with the result that Assistant Secretary McCloy has confirmed the rumors that the 9th and 10th are no more used as fighting regiments.

"We Lived in Hell...!"

Afro-American-Baltimore
8-26-44

Musician, Held by Nazis in Prison Camp, Subsisted on Soup and Tea

NEW YORK—"We learned to live in hell and got used to it."

These words summed up the experiences of Maceo Jefferson, music arranger, who arrived here recently from France where he, an American, was interned in a Nazi civilian prison camp for two and a half years.

Mr. Jefferson, who is now employed arranging scores for a number of outstanding orchestras, had made his home in Europe since he went there with the famous Lew Leslie's "Blackbirds," starring the immortal Florence Mills. 8-26-44

In a recent interview, Mr. Jefferson explained that he was among the American prisoners exchanged for German prisoners, and came over on the last trip of the Gripsholm. He was in France when America declared war on Germany and was incarcerated in Frontstlag 122, about 70 miles from Paris.

No Racial Discrimination

Between 1100 and 1200 civilian prisoners were imprisoned in the camp, among which were a good number of colored people, but there was no racial discrimination, the musician said. They were guarded by German soldiers, kept behind barbed wire and six machine gun nests were perched above the camp grounds. They were permitted to have visitors for ten minutes only, every fifteen days, and had to talk to them through mesh wire.

Having been taken prisoner early in the war, these first groups suffered from lack of recreational facilities, and, of course, the food was merely something to eat. They had soup once a day and herb tea once or twice. A common food like oatmeal was a treat. It was served every Friday afternoon, he said.

After days of inertia and boredom, recreational material began to arrive from American through the War Prisoners' Aid of the YMCA, he explained. Musical instruments, baseball sets, punching bags, other athletic equipment and books. The men had to fill in the trenches that had been dug by the French in order to make a baseball diamond.

France's Negro Soldiers Are The First To Enter Liberated City of Paris

Weekly — New Orleans, La.
9-9-44

(By The Associated Negro Press)

Paris, Aug. 30.—The late Gov. Felix Eboue's French Equatorial African army, composed of Senegalese, Moroccans and native tribes recruited in the Lake Chad territory and the Cameroons, made a triumphant entry into this liberated city last week. They were the first allied soldiers to arrive here on the heels of the fleeing Nazis.

Armed with modern American weapons, they were members of the 2nd French Armored Division. Their battle-marked tri-colors bore the Cross of Lorraine as they marched down picturesque Champs Elysees to the tune of "Le Marseillaise," enroute to the Arch de Triomphe to honor the grave of the Unknown Soldier.

Fighting under the command of General Jacques LeClerc, these veterans are fearless fighters. They have been seasoned by the rigors of the African campaign, where they distinguished themselves for effecting a juncture with the allied forces in North Africa in Tunisia. They marched 1,700 miles across the hot sands of the Sahara Desert from Chad to Tunis to reach Paris. 9-9-44

Parisians gave these black sons of the French republic a wild welcome. Women, men and children lined the boulevards to display their appreciation for their heroes who rallied to the appeal of Eboue and the Cross of Lorraine in France's most crucial moment.

30,000 Africans on Duty in Italy

Baltimore, Md.
12-31-44

ITALY—Over 30,000 Africans from British protectorates and colonies of lower Africa, plus several thousand work troops from the Union of South Africa, are serving with the British Fifth and Eighth Armies here. 12-31-44

Africans from the French territories are also fighting here. French colonial troops of the Second Armored Division, under General LeClerc, were the first to enter Paris when that city was liberated on August 25.

Other French African troops made up the main forces which successfully stormed Toulon, Marseilles and other cities in Southern France. British West and East African troops have also seen several months of hard jungle fighting on the Burma front.

2 Battalions in Afro American African Stockade

Baltimore, Md.

BALTIMORE — The imprisonment of two battalions of colored soldiers in a prison stockade upon their arrival in North Africa was reported this week by a soldier who saw service in that area.

The incident, according to the soldier, took place before the surrender of the Italian armies and the men were kept in the stockade for two weeks. 8-12-44

Iatlian prisoners who promenade outside the stockade fence thought the colored Americans were French prisoners, and when told otherwise, were amused to know that they—actual prisoners of war—had more freedom than the colored soldiers.

SHIPS LOADED BY SOLDIERS

Times — 12-31-44

Skilled Negro Troops Speed War Cargoes at Philadelphia

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 30—Sol-immediately. 12-31-44

The WMC announced that it would upgrade freight car loaders now on the job to stevedores and raise their pay from 85 cents to $1.20 an hour in an effort to meet next month's crisis.

dier stevedores loaded war supplies on ships at Philadelphia docks today and Army and War Manpower Commission officials said they expected the bottleneck in the movement of material destined for American fighting men to be broken next week.

The troops, members of an especially trained Negro unit, were brought here at the request of Col. Alexander B. MacNabb, commandant of the Philadelphia Port of Embarkation, who said that otherwise the shortage of longshoremen was so critical as to delay sailings.

Wirning of the greatest delivery test in the port's history next month, Colonel MacNabb appealed to all-longshoremen and stevedores who are still celebrating the holiday season to get back to work

47m-1944

14 Points on Negro Troops Abroad Given War Department By White

Bystander — Des Moines, Iowa

6-8-44

Report to Washington Lists Recommendations As Result of Fifteen Weeks Observation Overseas

Washington — Fourteen recommendations, ranging from lectures to American white soldiers to a special Board of Review for courts-martial cases, were made by Walter White in a report to the War Department, it was revealed here last week.

The report was based upon White's 15-week, 20,000-mile tour of military installations in the European theatre of operations, in North Africa, Italy and the Middle East as an accredited foreign correspondent for the New York Post newspaper. The fourteen points included:

6-8-44

Off Limits—That General Eisenhower's directive to abolish "off limits" of towns and pubs (taverns) be enforced in all areas. Negro soldiers were found to resent bitterly the off limits orders, or orders setting "odd" and "even" nights for white and colored troops to visit towns and places of amusement. White observed that some commanding officers who took a positive stand for fairness had very little trouble in their localities.

Courts Martial—A special board of review of courts-martial cases was recommended by White who said "great unhappiness" has resulted among Negro soldiers "because of their belief that they are punished more quickly and more severely than white soldiers." After citing a number of cases detailed to him by Negro prisoners with whom he was permitted to talk freely, White urged that the special board of review include an eminent Negro lawyer, who would be brought in to serve with appropriate rank.

6-8-44

Combat Troops—The department is urged to send Negro combat troops to England. White said stories were being circulated that there are no Negro combat troops in England because "Negroes are afraid to fight." White termed as "unfortunate" the fact that, with the exception of some anti-aircraft units, only Negro service troops had been sent to the European theatre. "The Negro troops in the ETO," said his report, "have little or none of the excitement of war necessary to raise the spirits and to give a sense of participation to men engaged in waging war."

Also recommended was that Negro medium bomber crews be sent to England "to fly in non-segregated units," and that Negro service troops now stationed there be given refresher courses in the use of combat weapons, as "many of these troops will closely follow the assault wave of invasion, will be under fire, and need to be made competent in the use of weapons."

6-8-44

Supporting his recommendation for more combat troops, White cited the improved atmosphere in the Mediterranean as a result of the exploits of the 99th Pursuit Squadron. He recommended that Negro and white fighter squadrons function in the same group; and he also urged reconsideration of the conversion of the 2nd Cavalry Division into service troops.

In connection with the moral value of the presence of Negro combat troops, White also urged that more Negro officers above the rank of captain be sent to England.

Anti-Negro Rumors—Some Negro soldiers abroad have taken the spreading of vicious and fantastic rumors about Negroes as a joke, but some have resented these stories deeply, said White, in recommending that G-2 (Army Intelligence) try to track down and scotch morale-sapping stories.

White reported less anti-Negro propaganda in the Mediterranean than in England, but suggested that Army Intelligence run down the people who were issuing leaflets, placards and other material seeking to poison Italians against Negroes. Upon inquiry one such placard was found to have been issued by a non-existent organization and signed by a fiictitious person.

6-8-44

Military Police—White found the same complaint abroad on military police that has been made in some parts of America, namely that white MPs are armed, but Negro MPs are not. He recommended that no MPs be armed except when guarding payrolls.

6-8-44

WALTER WHITE

Paternalism—Paternalistic attitude on the part of white officers is resented, White reported, saying that both well-educated and less-educated Negroes resent being treated as "boys." Abandonment of the idea that southern white officers are best for Negro troops because they "understand" Negroes was urged by White, who, however, said many white officers from the South are fair and decent in their treatment of Negroes, while there is no guarantee that a man will be free from prejudice because he happens to be from the North.

Lectures — Lectures to American white troops aboard ships as they near England on the difference between the British and American attitudes toward color, together with lectures to British troops by competent Americans on America and the true place of the Negro as a citizen of his country would be helpful, White declared.

6-8-44

A connection between the venereal disease rate among colored troops and the attitude which has barred them from normal association with respectable families was seen by White, who quoted a soldier as saying they were more and more restricted to women picked up in pubs. White suggested that a Negro physician be attached to the office of Chief Surgeon.

More Negro actors and singers were recommended by the entertainment of both white and Negro troops.

Red Cross — After praising the American Red Cross for doing "in many respects a superlative job," White deplored the "white" and "Negro" Red Cross clubs located in many areas as not only introducing segregation to the British, but denying white and Negro American soldiers the opportunity to know each other better. He cited the non-segregated pattern of one club as a model for the Red Cross everywhere.

6-8-44

Censorship—More news and more sympathetic handling of news dealing with Negro troops by the censors would be very helpful, said White, as it would give Negro civilians a better picture of the contribution of their men to the war.

Lagging Behind—White's concluding recommendation was a suggestion that the War Department policy on race "lags behind that of much of the personnel of the Army." He said an advanced position would meet opposition, but would be approved by "a much larger percentage . . . than the War Department appears to believe possible."

6-8-44

"The time and field are ripe for progress. Continuance of segregation and discrimination is in part responsible for a less determined spirit in the army than is necessary to meet the very crucial days which lie ahead before this war is won. Vision to see the situation as it is and courage to surmount difficulties and opposition in the implementation of that vision are greatly to be urged upon the War and Navy Departments, and upon all others charged with the prosecution of the war."

Tests Law for Nurse Training

Call — Kansas City, Mo.

White Hospitals Can Refuse Negro

3-17-44

WASHINGTON.—(ANP) — In the first case of discrimination growing out of the Bolton nurse training bill enacted last spring, the general counsel of the Federal Security agency, at the request of the U.S. Public Health service, ruled that discrimination is indicated only when funds are denied an institution on account of race, creed or color, and not because of the refusal of a white institution to accept a Negro applicant for training.

The instance was disclosed by Leslie Perry, legislative representative of the NAACP last week, and deals with the experience of Mrs. Virginia Parsons of Keokuk, Ia. Mrs. Parsons, it appears, applied to the St. Joseph's hospital of that city for training last fall. The hospital is a private institution.

3-17-44

"Apparently Mrs. Parsons met all requirements except that of color," according to the NAACP. "The hospital authorities submitted the question of her admission to the hospital to the student body which voted not to accept her."

It was the late Sen. Warren Barbour of New Jersey who presented the amendment to the Bolton bill barring discrimination "in the administration of the benefits and appropriations made under the respective provisions of the act on account of race, creed or color." However, when the Keokuk branch of the association took the matter up with public health, the ruling was requested.

The decision of Jack B. Tate, general counsel for FSA, was that "the requirement of the act will be complied with if in the administration of the act no plan is disapproved or payment denied to

3-17-44

[Whereas the Nurses' Education, Iowa, the nearest being Missouri, association lists 32 state accredit the Keokuk branch was inform ering what action it shall take in Perry said. is now consid line with the problem presented. any institution on acount of the stu race, creed or color of the dents, teachers, or other person ed schools which admit only Ne ed. groes. none of these schools is in The association is n

VIEWS and Reviews

By GEORGE S. SCHUYLER

(This column represents the personal opinion of Mr. Schuyler and in no way reflects the editorial opinion of The Pittsburgh Courier.—The Editors)

George Orwell, who pens a salty column in "The Tribune" of London, England, recently wrote a scathing piece on the arrogance and bad manners of the American armed forces in England, who, too often act as if England were a colony of America or, worse, an occupied country, thus making bad friends wholesale. In the course of his diatribe, Orwell went out of his way to say that the best-mannered Americans in England, by general agreement, are the American Negroes. In the main their conduct is gentlemanly, and that reason is appreciated by the English who, at home, are a friendly, urbane and courteous people. From many sources in England I have learned that because of their general exemplary conduct, the American colored soldiers have made as many friends as the white American soldiers have made enemies. In consequence, a great sympathy for the Aframerican has been engendered, and there is widespread resentment against the white American over there because of their snide treatment of their colored colleagues.

* * *

There has, for example, been scathing denunciation by English editors and others concerning the insistence by American military authorities that Negro soldiers be barred from certain public places frequented by white Americans—especially those places where white women are to be met. There is resentment also because American authorities have used their influence to have British military authorities advise their men not to fraternize with Americans of color. But the worst storm of indignation has arisen over te "railroading" to death of Negro soldiers by prejudiced American courts-martial for the alleged crime of rape. This offense does not draw more than a 10-year sentence in England, even when the accused is undoubtedly guilty. In the case of several accused Negroes, the evidence was shockingly skimpy—as it usually is where the accused is black and the judge and jury are white Americans, and the woman is white. "The Tribune" recently published the complete text of testimony in one case, and this has aroused nation-wide indignation over American legal terrorism. No matter what American propagandists may say about the high ideals motivating American world adventuring, the English people will not forget that these same Americans sent fellow Americans to their death or to life imprisonment with diabolical calculation.

* * *

I think it is extremely significant that the English are finding colored Americans to have better manners than white Americans. They have discovered what is quite obvious also in this country. For all the hoodlumism and bad language used by a minority of Negroes here to the detriment of race relations, the fact remains that taken section by section, city by city, Negroes native to those parts are better mannered than their white brethren. Not only that, but it is my considered opinion that by and large, class for class, our colored folks are more urbane, tolerant and sophisticated. Certainly, I have met more civilized colored people here, in proportion to their number in the population, than I have white folks. Europeans visiting these shores have told me that they found the Negro sections more like European cities spiritually than they did the areas outside the ghettos.

* * *

If true, what is the answer? Does it lie in the fact that the colored Americans are more realistic and less naive by virtue of their position and experience in American society? Certainly the average Senegambian in the U.S.A. knows more about the facts of this civilization—the real facts—than the average white person. And in the degree that he has penetrated the illusions and fictions which becloud the vision of the average white American, he is a far more civilized man. In the main, he has no desire to injure white people, to prevent them from making a decent living, from going where they choose or from living wherever they can afford the rent. He is, in the main, a modest fellow willing to live and let live, and only asks to be let alone. He has no desire to bend others to his way of thinking and doing, and his ire is only aroused when others seek to prevent him from doing so. When white folks enter his localities, he treats them generally with courtesy bordering on deference.

Obviously, such a fellow going to England or elsewhere on the Continent would naturally make friends everywhere because the Europeans understand and appreciate his good manners. It is significant that while anti-Semitism rages in Germany and elsewhere, the colored brother is received with tolerance and sometimes with enthusiasm.

The white American, on the other hand, is welcomed chiefly for his money. He is quick to criticize foreign ways and to offer suggestions for improvement of the places where he alights. Worse, he invariably insists on telling Europeans how they should treat his colored fellow countrymen. It is understandable that the English are fed up with our white folks and pleased with our colored brethren.

Negro Field Artillery Unit Aided In Fall Of St. Malo

Journal + Guide — Norfolk, Va

9-2-44

By RUDOLPH DUNBAR
Associated Negro Press War Correspondent

WITH THE ALLIED ARMY IN FRANCE, (ANP)—Going up to the front line, I encountered some interesting and pathetic experiences.

All along the route up the front there were white and colored soldiers repairing railway tracks, communications and roads. They were also driving the wounded from the front to the collecting point, and were directing traffic. I counted 24 trucks overcrowded with Nazi prisoners coming down from the front. There were no signs of regret or frustration registered on their faces. Among the prisoners were boys of 16 and 17 years of age.

I saw trucks carrying French women, men and children with remnants of their belongings that had been salvaged from the bombardment. There was a weeping and gnashing of the teeth. The French people of these remote towns are bewildered. They stand and gaze at the endless stream of army vehicles moving in all directions. They were once told that France had the greatest army in Europe.

9-2-44

That great army was crushed in four weeks. The Germans came along with their form of invincibility and now they see the Americans tearing the guts out of them. But this time the Americans are writing the finale. They all say the same thing, "We have been waiting for you for four years."

DOING HIGHLY TECHNICAL JOB

Some of the towns are in complete ruins. For example, St. Lo, which had been pounded unmercifully by the 9th American Air force. The town of Avranches is also in ruins. This colored field artillery took part in the bombardment of these towns which were stubbornly held by the Germans. In actual fact, the survey section of this battalion was shelled by German 88's at point blank range while they were surveying for "fire missions." The survey section is doing a highly technical job worthy of the highest comment.

The men are S/Sgt. Gilbert L. Eldridge, East Orange, N. J.; T/4 Charlie Scott of Louisiana; Cpl. Eric Dixon, New York City; Pvt. Leon Mincy, Florida; Ephram Edwards, Alabama, and Pvt. Irving Brown, Mississippi.

9-2-44

Ali along the route there was an incredible spectacle of knocked-out tanks, shot-up jeeps, overturned farm wagons, burned-out half tracks, burnt-out automobiles and hundreds of dead horses.

At this time the colored batteries were pumping their projectors into regions of space on a mission of destruction. And when I say destruction, I mean that in all its implications. This battalion is writing glorious pages in history and I am happy to chronicle the event. Their accuracy on all targets is astounding. A roving German 88 gun cunningly concealed in a building, and which had caused considerable trouble, was destroyed by "A" battery.

9-2-44

This gun was ingeniously operated on a track which forced it out of doors to fire on its objective. Immediately after the fire mission the gun rolled back into the building with amazing swiftness. For a while the gun mystified all the batteries. But as soon as our observer solved the mystery, the gun was silenced.

OUTFIT COMMENDED

A brigadier general, the executive officer of the division that this Negro field artillery unit is supporting, visited the forward observation post and commended the outfit for its accurate firing and for having successfully accomplished its mission which was to destroy German concrete fortifications and pillboxes.

9-2-44

Thus, it can be authoritatively stated that this Negro field artillery played a major role in the fall of St. Malo which was so fiercely contested by the Germans.

NEED FOR NURSES GREAT BUT ARMY BYPASSES NEGROES

Globe + Independent
Nashville, Tenn.

6-23-44

NEW YORK, June 22—(ANP)—While the ban on Negro nurse recruitment was lifted here in November, and even though nurses are greatly needed in the North Atlantic and Pacific areas as well as here on the home front, the supply at hand of Negro nurses has hardly been touched, comes a recent report. The more than 800 Negro registered nurses here are completely ignored by the war department.

In a protest against such army bias, Mrs. Mabel Staupers, executive secretary of the National Association of Colored Graduate nurses, said she thought the army would have far less trouble recruiting nurses if it opened its ranks more liberally to Negroes.

"In the entire Army Nurse Corps, there are only 219 Negro women," she explained. "All of them are located in the south with the exceptions of one group in Des Moines and one unit in New Guinea."

Supervises Work of German Prisoners

6-23-44

CAMP BLANDING, Fla.—Del. Taylor, a graduate of Clark University, Atlanta, Ga., has charge of a group of German prisoners detailed to work in a salvage warehouse. They separate items of equipment which have been classified, laundered, and repaired for reissue.

47m-1944

Gets First Casualty

9-2-44

Gen. Clark Confers Combat Badges On Two Men; Predicts Brilliant Future For Outfit From 92nd Division; Soldiers Eager

By JOHN "ROVER" JORDAN
Journal and Guide War Correspondent
(Copyright. Reproduction Forbidden)

SOMEWHERE IN ITALY—Via Wireless—The crack Negro combat team, composed of elements of the famous 92nd Buffalo division which was such a vital factor in the winning of World War I, are now in combat with Lt. General Mark Clark's Fifth Army on the Italian West Coast front.

This marks the first time in this war that the Nazis have met American Negro infantrymen in battle, and a parallel to 1918 when the Germans found themselves face to face with the original Buffaloes, has been established.

The combat team suffered its initial casualty last week and two of its soldiers were cited by General Clark in a special ceremony.

The unit's first casualty came last week when a colored officer of this combat team—the first self-sufficient infantry team in Army history—went to the front ahead of his unit which was assigned to reconnaissance work. He was reported killed in action. (His name will not be released until next of kin are notified.—Ed.)

TOUGH AND SMART

When interviewed, the commanding officer of the unit declared: "In our assignment, we will see plenty of fighting action and this is right down our alley. The men in this outfit are tough and they're smart. They would be a credit to any Army in the world." 9-2-44

In special ceremonies on Monday of this week, Lt. General Clark conferred the combat infantry badge upon two soldiers of the combat team. They were: S Sgt. Paul Wilson, Youngstown, Ohio; and Sgt. Nolan Reed, St. Louis.

This badge is only awarded to infantrymen who are actually serving in front line combat at the time of the incident which merits the award.

PRAISED BY CLARK

In his remarks to the unit at the front, just before it was committed to combat, General Clark related the glorious history of the Fifth Army from Salerno to Florence and then said: "I know how carefully you have trained. I know your fine leadership, your discipline and the proficiency with which you used the weapons of your branch.

"You are better equipped than any Army in the world. You have joined the big leagues now. You are with professional fighters and with your background you have every opportunity to make a great name for the 92nd division.

"You have nothing to fear from the Germans. In fact, they will be afraid of you. You will defeat him and annihilate him in every place you find him . You will prove that he is inferior to you and that you are superior to him in every way."

TO BE IN ON KILL 9-2-44

Concluding, General Clark said: "Take this opportunity, as I know you will, to cover yourselves with glory. You men of the 92nd will be in on the final battle when we completely crush the enemy thereby bringing victory to our great nation. Good luck and God bless you."

The rugged men of the new combat infantry team are proud masters of the improved weapons of war. These bronzed warriors have the highest morale and have excellent equipment They have an eagerness to wade in and slug it out to a finish with the Germans They have trained for this job for over two years. 9-2-44

WELL EQUIPPED

The majority of the officers of the unit are colored. 1st Lt. Phillip Grayson, 292 Bartham avenue, Columbus, Ohio, assistant personnel officer, told this reporter: "We are equipped with everything we could ask for. If we had another piece of equipment, I think it would be excess."

1st Lt. Allen L. Johnson, of Jackson, Miss., team chaplain, affectionately called "the fighting, shouting chaplain," previously served several months in the Pacific. He said: "I am proud of these boys. They're the best I have ever seen."

Other chaplains are: 1st Lt. Ernest D. Thompson, Des Moines, Iowa, and Ist Lt. Herbert C. Jones, Chattanooga, Tenn.

1st Lt. Charles Bailey, of Easton, Md., member of the headquarters staff declared: "Our boys are ready. I believe they can take care of themselves in any situation."

PORTSMOUTH SOLDIERS

2nd Lt. Robert Brooks, platoon leader who was previously an enlisted man in the engineers in North Africa, returned to the states, went to officer candidate school, and was reassigned to the Buffalo division. Another officer of the unit is 1st Lt. Charles "Cutes" Carter, former Hampton Institute athlete.

1st Lt. John W. Brown, of Portsmouth, Va., told this writer that "We are here now. Bring on those Jerries." T/Sgt. Robert E. Bazemore, also of Portsmouth, said: "Keep an eye on these boys. We are going to make news."

Action At Last!

Courier — Pittsburgh, Pa.

With the crack 24th U.S. Infantry in action on Bougainville Island, Negro combat troops have finally entered the war for which they have been training for years.

Every American Negro is gratified at the news and especially pleased to know that his boys have distinguished themselves. 3-25-44

One sour note in the news is the information that these Negro troops are not being officered by Negroes, although the War Department propagandists boast that there are many times more colored officers today than there were during the last war.

If we are to have separate racial regiments, then there is no excuse for them to be officered by white men, unless colored officers are going to be assigned to command white men.

As a matter of fact, the Army has connived to place a preponderance of colored officers in service units, and promotions of Negroes above the grade of first lieutenant in the Negro combat divisions have been exceptional.

At the same time, transfer of white officers to Negro combat units has been an easy ladder to promotions for those who might not otherwise have gained them so readily. 3-25-44

It is to be hoped that these wrongs will be righted before long, because nothing whatever must interfere with the intelligent conduct of the war . . . a war which in many ways has just begun.

Toles Sees Chicagoans Blast Nazis In Brittany

Chicago Defender

Chicago, Ill.

By EDWARD TOLES
(Defender War Correspondent)

WITH THIRD ARMY IN BRITTANY.—Pounding with murderous accuracy German pockets situated in islands near Saint Malo, this Negro artillery battalion has made a remarkable record. It is one of the first of six Negro combat artillery teams to fight in France. In Brittany they have been blasting daily as a part of a unit of artillery which has 155 long-toms and eight-inch Howitzers.

9-2-44

Edward Toles'

Firing eight-inch Howitzers, this Negro unit is repeating the triumphs gained in Normandy when, two days after landing, their big shells began battering the strategic heart of Hitler's defenses in the Lessay-Periers region.

The big artillery didn't come shore until it was needed to blast and rout the enemy from long distances. The men got here in the middle of July and have been moving ever since their arrival. I have been with this unit for four days, moving with them once, and am now preparing to move again.

Even as I write, just behind the radio communications car, I can hear our plane observer by radio giving directions to fire direction control at the command post.

"We just knocked the back door out of the telephone exchange. Mission completed. Cease firing!"

The mission was a telephone exchange and the voice on the radio was our plane observer flying over the target directing our gunfire and observing our hits.

Never See Target

I can now hear the terrific explosions of guns firing; the whistling, whizzing sound of shells flying through the air to hit miles away. This is long range artillery firing, where the men at the battery never see the target and fire only by directions from plane observers flying over the target and observations headquarters, which is central communications. Brain trust in fact, where all orders and commands for firing are given.

Each of our four batteries, having four guns each, are directly turned by radio telephone communication. The set-up is mostly Greek to me, but I am being tutored in the fine points of long-range firing by Sgt. James Mitchell who is in charge of one of the units. 9-2-44

Sgt. Mitchell, a Chicagoan, lived at 435 East Forty-fourth street, at the time of his induction. He is a graduate of the Ashburne trade school, subsequently attending the army radio school. It isn't long before you're convinced that Sgt. Mitchell is all wrapped up in his present duties and very proud of the guns with which he works. He's a real artillery man.

Says Sgt. Mitchell: "Laymen will have one helluva time understanding the science and mechanics of modern artillery warfare. To them this noisy business is all just a lot of big guns booming away hazardly at objectives too far removed for smaller weapons to reach. The layman figures that we throw a lot of shells at the enemy and hope that some of the projectiles find their mark.

"That ain't the idea at all, course. These gun crews are trained ing instructions to ourmost devastating gun of the war. you can bet your life. My eyes roved over the near-by shell is going to landfire-control room of the battery to what it was aimed at near which we were standing. The the second or third round, ground trembled violently every e're landing all into the time one of those guns let go, and it doesn't take many of already I began feeling sorry for -inch babies to blow hell the guys on the receiving end of ning man ever built." this gruesome game.

ened to Sgt. Mitchell, I appreciation for his be- toms, described as the these points and by the time they

Chicagoan In Control

In the control room is another Chicago man, Pvt. Harry Lawton, 3637 Giles avenue. He sits with feet dangling into a slit trench, earphones clapped securely onto his head, and rapidly communicates directions to the batteries. Working with Private Lawton were Privates Othalia Tomkins, Fort Worth, Texas; Fletcher Morgan, Bay City, Texas; Fred Mosely, Mexia, Texas, former student at Prairie View State college; Harold Wallace, New York City, and Corp. John Dixon, New York City.

At the firing table, with indicator giving measurements for gun target, was Sgt. Henry L. Smith, Brooklyn, N. Y. He was being assisted by Privates Moses Ward, New York, seated on the ground and sending and receiving fire instructions by radio.

In the meantime our observation plane is circling high overhead keeping the guns informed on the effectiveness of their salvos, now falling into the midst of targets in St. Malo and an island objective.

Word comes that the batteries have just "blasted the back door" off an enemy observation post and that the guns at this point seem to have been silenced.

I glow with pride at the prowess of these gunners when the observation plane shortly informs us that German pill-boxes on the island miles away are being churned to pulp by the Americans' fire.

Those Allied soldiers up front, who have been catching some rough treatment from these enemy entrenchments, must be shouting with joy at this moment.

Lt. Col. Gilber Barnes, Milwaukee, commanding these gun units, beams with satisfaction as the plane pilot informs him that that last salvo just hit an ammunition dump on the island and it looks like the entire enemy emplacements are erupting in violent explosions. Col. Barnes turns to proudly inform me that these gunners' record for firing accuracy and shell output has been acclaimed by every infantry headquarters with which they have fought.

Colonel Barnes said: "My brother, Lt. Col. Hubert Barnes also was in command of a Negro artillery unit, and his outfit was the one that smashed the strong German forticications near Vannes during those early Allied landings in France."

Leaving Col. Barnes I hop into a jeep and am driven hurriedly over to another of the batteries. Here I meet Sgt. Fred Gibson, Salem, N. J., who tells me about the hell his unit raised the night before in softening up the enemy for today's advance. "Why, we threw 27 rounds under Heinie's britches in less time than it takes to say scat and right onto the target I mean, too! Are we good? Well, the government wouldn't let us bust that many 8-inch shells at $200 per crack unless we knew what we were doing and DID it," exclaimed the sergeant.

Back into the jeep and I am driven to company headquarters where I bump into Robert Walker, 4235 Langley avenue, Chicago. The outfit seems to be loaded with Windy City boys who fire questions at me concerning the old hometown. Walker's brothers, Lt. Charles Walker and Air Cadet James Walker, are preparing to get into the thick of this business. James is now at Tuskegee where he is studying bombing tactics.

I also met Cpl. Andrew Hopewell, Worcester, Mass., whose sister, Madeline, is a nurse with the Canadian army. His brother, Robert, also with the Canadian army, was killed in the assault on Dieppe.

While Cpl. Hopewell and I stand gazing up at squadrons of twin-engined bombers streaking towards enemy territory, we are joined by commando Sgt. Henry and Sgt. Joseph Jamerson, the latter of New York. Both are serving with Canadian forces now in France.

As I get off this dispatch from headquarters I can still hear our boys up front blasting away with their long-toms, laying it on the line with every shot.

Let me repeat: These boys are GOOD. Everybody say's so, and everybody can't be joking.

Young Mississippi Negroes In Service Outnumber Whites

JACKSON, Miss., — June — (ANP) — Mississippi Negroes beeween the ages of 18 and thru 25 years in the armed services outnumber whites by more than 2,000, it was announced Tuesday by Col. Lawrence W. Long, state director of selective service.

Figures released by Col. Long showed that a total of 11,209 Negroes between thees age groups had been inducted, while only 9,088 white boys of the same ages had donned uniforms.

The statistics served to refute the oft repeated statement of the Mississippi politicians that a proportionate number of Negro males were being taken nto the armed srevics. Col. Long in explaining the differential asserted the armed forces in the past refused to acept Negro colunteers for the service.

Negro Infantryman From Age — New York, N.Y. 92nd Division Decorated

ROME, Italy — Lieut. General Clark personally visited a wounded Negro infantryman and awarded him a Purple Heart Saturday as the 92nd Infantry Division killed its first Germans and suffered its first battle casualties in the Fifth Army's drive between Pisa and Florence.

Break All Records Unloading Shells

Daily World — Atlanta, Ga.

BY SGT. CHARLES R. VANERGRIFT

SAIPAN, Marianas Islands—(Delayed)—"Praise the Lord and pass the ammunition" became an actuality here when a Negro Marine unit including two men whose ambition it is to enter the ministry and who conduct religious services for the unit, moved in with the assault troops to set a record in unloading artillery shells for the front lines.

The Negro Marines suffered their first battle casualties of the war when one was killed and four were wounded. They were thrown into front line fighting when Japanese threatened American lines and knocked at least one Jap machine gun out of action an killed several of the enemy—the first Japs sent to their ancestors by Negro Marines in this war.

DIVE IN FOXHOLES

Members of the unit stacked the "big stuff" in neat rows and dived into over-regulation foxholes when the Japs pattern-fired the beach with mortar and artillery shells.

"I haven't got time to think about anything but the Lord," said 19-year-old Private Edward H. Seals, son of Mrs. Emma Calhoun, 1728 Germantown Street, Dayton, Ohio. He explained that this was prompted by the crash of a Jap plane,—bested in a dogfight with Naval aircraft—150 feet from him the night of D-day.

"I prayed night and day after that," he said.

The Negro Marines set what Second Lieutenant Howard E. Tucker, son of Mrs. J. E. Deardorff, 1236 Fifth, East, Salt Lake City, Utah, a platoon leader, believes to be a record of unloading several thousands of tons of ammunition in 38 hours.

OFFICER PLEASED

Besides the two prospective pastors, Private First Class Fred Washington and Private First Class Augustus Witcher, the unit contained a former professional boxer, a dance band leader ,several defense plant workers a former electric washing machine salesman, and others with a wide variety of pre-Saipan occupations.

"I'm very pleased with the way they worked," said Captain Louis P. Shine, son of Mrs. Frances Shine (no street address), Osage, W. Va., unit commanding officer,

Said the 26-year-old Guadalcanal veteran:

"I was plenty scared myself. We'd dig in our foxholes when the firing got heavy. Sometimes the men were almost completely buried in showers of sand.

"I'd kid them and tell them, 'What are we doing here! Come on let's get back to work where we belong.' Then I'd start back to the boats. They came right after me.

"They worked around the clock and did a swell job. Several officers congratulated us on the way we had the ammunition they wanted already when they wanted it."

All of the dozens of types of ammunition had to be stacked separately. They ranged from huge aerial bombs to rifle ammo. Now divided between scattered inland dumps, the boxes and road system approximate the business districts of several small communities.

The unit unloads all ordnance from incoming ships. They handled it for the Second and Fourth Marine and 27th Army Divisions during the Saipan campaign. Although still working on a 24-hour schedule, they're about caught up and are looking forward to a little well-earned rest.

Neither Private First Class Washington nor Private First Class Witcher is actully an ordained pastor, but both hope to be after the war.

Washington, son of Mr. and Mrs James Washington, Magnolia, Ark. conducts regular Sunday night services, reporting an average attendance of 60 to 70. Witcher leads the singing for the Sunday service and holds a prayer meeting and song service each Wednesday evening.

"I held first services here on D-plus-10," said Washington, "using the story of Daniel, because I thought it fit in best, both from a morale standpoint and because it showed that protection is simultaneous with danger."

WORKED AS WELDER

Washington lived at 3317 Stanford Avenue, Los Angeles, Calif., California Ship Yard before entering the service October 10, 1943. and worked as a welder for the For several months, he was an assistant pastor at the Zion Hill Baptist Church, 1319 East 22d St., Los Angeles, conducting services at least once each month. He was studying prior to entering the Baptist Seminary Theological school at the time of his induction.

"Everybody was happy—it seemed kind of like a big football game," said Witcher of his D-day landing. "When we were near shore a Jap mortar shell landed in a nearby 'alligator.' The singing and joking stopped.

"We dug foxholes and then started unloading ammunition. When the explosions got too close we'd dive into the holes until it slackened up. My fox hole was only about two feet deep to start with, but it was double that depth before the first night was over."

Witcher, 20, son of Mrs. Olive Witcher, 910 Anderson Street, Charlottesville, Va., hopes to enter Virginia Union University, Richmond, after the war to study for the pastorate.

DESCRIBE EXPERIENCES

Here's a sample of the experiences others had.

Private First Class John M. Jenkins, 20, son of Mrs. Berlina Jenkins, 1218 "C" Street, S. E., Washington, D. C., knocked out a Jap machine gun with hand grenade.

"They moved us up to the front to help halt a counter-attack," he said. "This gun opened on me from close range. It must have thrown 20 shells as I jumped into a ditch .

"I could see three Jap moving about the gun. After pulling the pin on a grenade. I got to thinking they'd have time to throw it back, so I held it a few seconds and let it go. It landed right on the gun. Guess it got 'em all."

FORMER BOXER

Back in 1942, at New Orleans, another of the Marines, Leo Mann knocked out Lew Jenkins, former welterweight champion. Mann, 21, son of Mrs. Daisy Mann, 1308 Heiner Street, Houston, Texas, is now a sergeant. He directed one of the unloading groups.

"I jumped into my foxhole when the mortar shellls began moving in, for about the 10th time," he said. "One thudded down right beside me. I covered my head. When I look up, I was lying outside the foxhole. Guess I was blown out." Sergeant Mann, who fought variously as a light, welter, and middleweight won 24 of his 27 professional bouts.

Patrons of the Barn, unique Cincinnati night spot, recall a Negro who nightly tried to tear a sturdy piano apart. Here he manned a .30 caliber machine gun during a brief Jap Charan-Kanoa counter-attack.

"Don't know or sure whether I hit any Japs or not, but I shot up a lot of ammunition," said Private First Class Robert Payne, 20, son of Mrs. James Brown, 418 Cutter Street, Cincinnati.

47m-1944

Nazi Propaganda Takes Beating

Pittsburgh Courier 8-5-44

Black, White, Red Brazilian Troops March, Socialize Freely In Naples

By OLLIE HARRINGTON, Courier War Correspondent

NAPLES, Italy—The agile-tongued Nazi radio propagandists suffered a major defeat on the streets and byways of this Italian city July 22, when the First Brazilian Expeditionary Force marched its completely unsegregated units ashore on a short liberty leave before going into further combat training. Small, intimate groups, strolling arm in arm along the Via Roma and crowding the many sun-bathed sidewalk cafes, startled the ogling Neapolitans with the unprecedented spectacle of white, black and red troops obviously unconscious of any racial differences and enjoying the delights of this beautiful city.

To the U. S. Negro troops walking in the streets in self-conscious clusters, the arrival of the Brazilians came as a welcome breath of fresh air in the near stifling atmosphere filled with grave doubts.

BRAZILIANS VISIT NEGRO RED CROSS CLUB

At the American Red Cross Liberty club, a refuge for Negro engineer and port battalions in the vicinity of the monument to Garibaldi, the great Italian liberator, I met several of the new arrivals. Their smiling Latin American amiability soon captivated every Negro GI as groups gathered about the snack bar and billiard tables.

In spite of the language difficulties, the atmosphere of the club was pervaded with friendliness and a new element of comradeship. An all-Negro band played contagious Latin American rhythms with just a touch of irrepressible Harlem jive. Our venerable Senators Bilbo and Rankin would have been extremely unhappy over the situation, but to the American troops, many of them recently back from the hellish war fronts, it was like a refreshing draught.

BRAZILIANS WOULD FACE JIM CROW IN AMERICA

Three Brazilian sergeants, Carlo Gradulich, whose father found refuge in Brazil from Polish pogroms, Vincio de Aguiar of Indian-Spanish descent and Jose Maria da Silva, who would be forced to ride the solitary coach behind the engine in Mississippi, were very anxious to discuss their army with this correspondent, but their profuse Latin explanations would require too much space during these days of newsprint shortage.

They summed up the situation perfectly, however, when one of them said: "There is only one Brazilian army. It is composed of Brazilians." With that statement Nazi propaganda, that rather neglected front, suffered a major defeat in the streets and bars of Naples.

GI Killing At Claiborne Adds To Growing Unrest

Courier — Pittsburgh, Pa.
9-16-44

The fatal shooting of a colored soldier by a white officer at Camp Claiborne, La., and unconfirmed reports of other incidents in which Negro soldiers are said to have been dealt with unjustly, added emphasis this week to the growing unrest among race troops stationed at Army camps in various sections of the country.

According to an official report from the provost marshal's office at Camp Claiborne, 26-year-old Pvt. Leonard R. Washington of New Orleans was fatally wounded by a white officer (1st Lt. Kermit Bates), the night of September 4, near the Turtle Creek bivouac area, southeast of Claiborne. Funeral services were held Thursday for the slain man.

The report from the provost marshal's office alleged that Private Washington broke arrest, attacked two officers and attempted to escape in a Government vehicle. The report claims Washington was shot when he attacked the lieutenant after being rearrested.

TENSION AROUND AREA

Considerable tension has existed around Camp Claiborne for several months, the bivouac area being the scene of a recent disturbance in which four other colored soldiers were reported shot, but not fatally.

A report not yet confirmed by Army authorities claims nine soldiers at Camp Van Dorn, Miss. were court-martialed and given sentences ranging from 15 years to life imprisonment, following an exchange of gunfire between the 518th Quartermaster Regiment and the 1697th Engineer Combat battalion.

TWO REPORTED WOUNDED

The unconfirmed report says the clash occurred during July (two men were wounded), and the nine colored soldiers tried on charges of "inciting and creating a riot," with an officer and a non-commissioned officer of the 1697th taking part in the prosecution over the protest of the Negro soldiers. Those reported sentenced were:

S/Sgt. Fred R. Hunter, S/Sgt. George Ford, T/4 Louis Lavent, Cpl. Johnnie Gilbert and Pfc. Johnnie Felton, life imprisonment; Pfc. Johnnie O'Neal, Pfc. Dempsey D. Perry and Pvt. Jimmie Evans, 20 years and Pfc. John Mendes, 15 years.

9-16-44

ANOTHER CLASH REPORTED

Report of another racial clash at Fort Francis E. Warren, Wyoming, early this month, was denied by the post commander. The report claims colored and white soldiers exchanged gunfire after a white officer cursed, slapped and kicked a Negro soldier. The post commander told The Courier:

"There was no disorder at Fort Warren September 2. There was a minor disturbance in the camp, occasioned by the arrest of a drunken colored soldier. It was a minor incident, of the type that may be expected to occur in any of the larger camps following pay day."

Also unconfirmed is the report coming out of Camp Sutton, N.C., concerning the arrest by civilian police of a colored soldier alleged to have been found with a white woman. The report says colored soldiers threatened to use force when military authorities refused to intervene, but such action was prevented when Negro soldiers were ordered out of the post on a 10-day forced march.

DENIES SOLDIER KILLED

Maj. E. C. Branniff, public relations officer at Fort Jackson, S.C., told The Courier this week that "No soldier of the 1700th Combat Engineer Battalion or any other soldier on this post has been killed recently."

9-16-44

The major's statement was in reply to a question asking information on a report claiming a soldier had been killed by a military policeman September 1.

Each of fifty accused to testify

Tribune — Los Angeles, Calif.
10-9-44

YERBA BUENA—Attorneys for the 50 Negro sailors accused of refusing to load ammunition, this week continued the long, drawn out process of calling the accused seamen to the stand to testify in their own defense.

The trial, now in its 21st day, was highlighted last week by a near legal brawl between Lt. Commander Frank Coakley, judge advocate in the mutiny trial, and the defense counsel, Lieutenant Gerald Veltman.

Coakley leaped to his feet and charged Veltman with inspiring in his witnesses a personal insult of the judge advocate following testimony of Seaman Second Class Alphonso MacPherson that Coakley had told him to "come clean or I'll see that you get shot."

Veltman denied that his witnesses, most of whom said the Port Chicago disaster nearby had made them leary of the ammunition, were rehearsed. Coakley countered with charges that MacPherson had made his story up "out of whole cloth".

10-9-44

MacPherson, who was injured at Port Chicago and claimed that he is still suffering from internal injuries received at the time, testified that on the 9th day of the work stoppage, he had told his commanding officer he was willing to obey orders, but had admitted that he was afraid.

The division officers Lt. J. E. Tobin, wouldn't let him finish, MacPherson said, and told him to "get over with the other cowards", the men who had consistently refused to obey the order to load the ammunition.

The testimony Tuesday of Ernest T. Brown, skilled electrical worker whom the Navy has been using as an unskilled laborer, was considered one of the week's most sensational bit of evidence.

Brown, 37, testified that before and after the Port Chicago explosion, he had suffered from dizzy spells and severe headaches and had always been afraid of ammunition because he could not feel that he was physically capable of handling it safely.

10-9-44

He said that he had asked for a change of duty which was refused.

When asked if any officer had insisted that he make a statement after the work refusal. Brown stated, "Well, sir, I'd say that they were a little persuasive." Brown had refused to make a statement without having counsel present.

Julius Dixon, 19 year old messcook, also testified as to physical inability to load ammunition for 9 days before being made a messcook and that his refusal to load was made on the basis of physical incapacity.

Coakley based most of his cross-questioning on a "statement" which he inferred was Dixon's own statement.

10-9-44

On redirect questioning, Defense Attorney Gerald E. Veltman secured the statement from Coakley and revealed that it was written completely in the third person and elected from Dixon the claim that most of the statements attributed to him had been put to him in the form of questions and that in almost every case, his "no" answer had been twisted into a yes-

Colored Seabees Help In Peleliu Landing

Pittsburgh Courier 10-14-44

(Delayed)—Two colored Seabees from Atlanta, Ga., played a big part in keeping the famed First Marine Division supplied with ammunition, food, water and other supplies during the invasion of Peleliu.

By Sgt. Harold E. Foreman
A Marine Corps Combat Correspondent

PELELIU, Palau Islands—

The men, Coxswain Walter Jones and Fireman First Class Andrew G. Toles were two of the Seabees who kept supplies coming in a steady stream.

Coxswain Jones was in charge of 15 men, all colored members of the Seabees unit. Toles worked as a driver for the Campbell Coal Company of Atlanta before joining the Seabees. 10-14-44

Supplies were taken from transports, transferred to LCT's and then to Amtracks that brought the supplies across the coral reefs to the beaches.

Casualties among Seabees during the first three days of fighting on Peleliu were estimated at approximately 20 killed and 20 wounded.

Stimson Reveals Combat Toll In Praising Troops

Courier – Pittsburgh, Pa.
7-8-44

WASHINGTON—"Negro troops on the beaches, and in the landing operations did their duties excellently under fire and in zones of heavy combat," declared Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson at his Pentagon Building press conference here last Thursday. "They suffered heavy casualties," he continued.

The War Secretary was referring to the work of Negro combat engineers, quartermaster and supply units that were among the first waves of invasion troops to hit the beachheads of Normandy. His comment was the first confirmation of Nazi broadcasts several weeks ago that Negro troops had been encountered by advance German elements in the sector of the Normandy front southeast of Isigny.
7-8-44

At the same time the War Department released pictures of units of Negro combat engineers on the Normandy beaches.

Military observers here pointed out that the Negro engineer and quartermaster detachments were bound to have suffered even heavier casualties than infantry troops, the reason being that their work had to be carried on under fire and without foxhole cover available to infantrymen engaged in combat operations.

Finds Mixed Units at Work

Afro American
Baltimore, Md.

AFRO Writer Tells of Activity in Normandy

HEADS FOR FRONT

Our Boys Playing Big Role in Invasion

7-10-44

By OLLIE STEWART

AFRO War Correspondent With Invasion Forces in France

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

IN NORMANDY—(By Cable, Censored).—So this is France, this thrifty, beautiful land with red poppies and red-and-white roses on hundreds of hedges enclosing battered but clean cottages. On Sunday I went inland from the beach, in the direction of the front. The beach was the scene of beehive-like activity as I left, with a colored barrage balloon outfit commanding a series of silver balloons protecting ships, which are constantly coming and going, from dive-bombing enemy planes.
7-15-44

Ollie Stewart

Our Boys Drive "Ducks"

Like frantic ants, the amphibian barges or "ducks," driven by our lads move back and forth between ships and shore in a never-ending stream.
7-15-44

Since D-Day, immense quantities of vital supplies and many of the troops headed for the front have been ferried to land by colored duck drivers, clad in life jackets and raincoats which are very useful when the boat is loaded and spray covers them.

On the beach, a pen of German prisoners is guarded by a mixed MP force. Twenty-four hours daily, fleets of trucks leave the beach, packed with troops or piled high with gas, ammunition, food, and medicine.

Here Since D-Day

A large proportion of these men have been here since D-Day, working twelve-hour shifts. Our transportation of supplies and equipment when and where needed was a factor largely responsible for the swift crushing of scattered enemy forces.

Correspondents and officers who have seen our GI's rolling stock in many lands marvel at the tremendous amount of equipment now here at our disposal. It seems miraculous.

Heading toward the front you ask directions to some village, and troops always tell you, "Straight ahead." Another oft-repeated expression here is that German bombs are so big that even their echoes make holes.

Pass Nazi Target

Close to Carentan, members of our party notice a brownish haze over nearby hills which have recently been taken by the Allies. A sign on the road to St. Lo says that a bridge is being shelled ahead. We approach cautiously and an MP waves us impatiently to move faster, so we cross the bridge with a zip.
7-15-44

The driver says, "When I was here yesterday, the Germans had just lobbed a few shells near the bridge and I had to wait." Later we pass Isigny, around which there was terrific fighting in the early days of the invasion.

Military Crews Mixed

All along the road, bearded, sweating soldiers—white and colored—operate pneumatic drills and spread asphalt to make the roads passable, despite the constant flow of military traffic.

Signal corps crews, stringing wires for vital communications, operate along the highway and across fields to camouflage commando posts.

On one post the wire stringer is white; on the next he is colored. This procedure differs from what I noticed in other theatres, so I visit other outfits to find equally amazing evidences of true democracy in this type of war.

A quartermaster unit has two medical officers, one white and one colored; two warrant officers, ditto. Mixed truck companies are in action and mixed MP forces are on duty in some places.

French civilians hold up fingers in V-sign at the approach of our troops, and children already hold up hands for life-savers and chocolate.
7-15-44

On the trip with me is Rudolph Dunbar, British writer for the Associated Negro Press and a well known musician, now accredited to the American Army.

Sees 2 Baltimoreans

In the thick of things are two Baltimoreans, S/Sgt. Edward Thornton of 2314 Druid Hill Avenue, and Pvt. John M. Walters, 513 Burgundy Street, who sends love to his wife, Clara, and two children.

Others include:
7-15-44

Pfc. John Scroggins, 7322 School Lane, and Pfc. Frederick Triplett, 7326 Sycamore Avenue, both of Philadelphia; S/Sgt. Walter Douglas, New Haven, Conn.; Sgt. Wesley Thomas, Ridgewood, N.J.; Cpl. Richard Locke and Pvt. William Taylor, Louisville; Cpl. Alonzo Evans and Cpl. Willis Knowles, Cincinnati; Cpl. Charles King, Kimball, W.Va.; Pfc. Allied Grandy, Indianapolis, Ind; M/Sgt. Bill Lewis, Clarksburg, W.Va.; S/Sgt. Homer H. Davis, Charleston, W.Va.; Cpl. Gus Lenear, Gary, Ind.; Cpl. Willis Noels, Cincinnati; Cpl. Randolph Merriweather, Louisville; T/Sgt. Preston Tolliver, Charleston, W.Va.; Cpl. Carl Triplett, Cincinnati; Pvt. Kenneth Givens, Los Angeles; Cpl. Joseph Lee, Roxbury, Mass.; S/Sgt. Franklin Marshall, 4310 Woodland Avenue, Philadelphia; T/Sgt. Herman Pennington, Scranton, Pa.; Pvt. Alphonso Akerhart, Louisville; Cpl. Melvin Busby, Fort Worth, Tex.; First Sgt. John H. Cheek, Willow Grove, Pa.; Pvt. Robert Thomas and S/Sgt. Edwin White, Cleveland; Cpl. Charles Brown, Chillicothe, Ohio; S/Sgt. Robert Donnell, Greensboro, N.C.; Sgt. Rock Washington, Memphis; T/Sgt. William Rutherford, Jacksonville, Fla.; Pvt. Jimmy Little, St. Louis; S/Sgt. Freddie Bacon, Savannah, Ga., and Sgt. William Ames, Bridgetown, Va.

Lt. Ben Johnson hasn't had a chance to use the knowledge he acquired in the Anti-Aircraft Artillery School in Camp Davis. Here he is shown inspecting a P-38 model in the school's Target Recognition class.

NAZIS CAPTURE FIRST U. S. NEGRO TROOPS

Argus – St. Louis, Mo.
6-23-44

Berlin Broadcast Tells Of Taking Men In Invasion

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 19—(OWI Wire Release) — The Nazi controlled Netherlands Home Service which broadcasts news in English for a Dutch radio station reported on June 16 that the first American Negro troops had been taken prisoners south of Isigny in Normandy. The reports, accredited to German war correspondency, stated that the soldiers belonged to an Infantry Regiment. The broadcast report was recorded by government monitors and reported to the Office of War Information. The report has not been confirmed by any United Nations.
6-28-44

CERTAINLY, JOIN THE WACs

A reader asks: "Should I join the WACs? The answer is: "Certainly."

Afro American – Baltimore, Md.
3-18-44

First, your country needs you, and you can take the place of a man who will be relieved for overseas service.

Secondly, your pay is $50 a month and all expenses, with a chance of promotion and an opportunity to get married if it's wanted.

Women need also to think of post-war problems. A New York shopkeeper, asked last week how his colored operators are getting along, said: "They are splendid. Often do better work, wish I could use more of them. But what am I going to do with them after the war is over?"

After the war is over, this country will be run for forty years by those who fought its battles. WACs, like soldiers and sailors, will have pensions, bonuses, free hospitalization and first choice at Federal, State and municipal jobs.

So far WACs are being recruited for home service only. Even though they are asked whether they are willing to serve overseas, the War Department has no present intention of sending them abroad. Foreign service is for whites only.

This is a kind of jim crow that will be ended as the war increases in fury.

47m-1944

'Red Ball Express' Wins Eisenhower Citation

Defender — Chicago, Ill.

9-30-44

By EDWARD TOLES
(Defender War Correspondent)

PARIS—Negro troops operating the famed "Red Ball" highway, 400-mile supply lifeline from channel and ocean ports to combat areas, were told in a congratulatory message from General Dwight Eisenhower this week, that they are shaping the war's destiny as greatly as any combat troops.

Last Friday, highballing to the front, stopping for nothing, the Red Ball express came to a sudden, unauthorized halt. No scheduled stop, no regulation ten-minute break and no breakdown, mused Cpl. Robert F. Bradley, driving the lead truck, with the familiar red disc priority signal flashing. Pulling to the side of the road, he poked his head out of his cab, to be greeted by Gen. E. S. Hughes, representing General Eisenhower, who decorated him with the bronze star medal for meritorious service.

None of the men were aware of what was to occur and all were surprised at the halt, as the Red Ball highway has uninterrupted one-way traffic. 9-30-44

General Hughes told the surprised Red Ballers he "would like to give them all a medal," but Bradley was chosen as a representative of the whole Red Ball highway, including the men who repair the roads, build bridges, build railroads, i rt battalions who unload, signal units who string wire, and all the men who do service work in the rear.

Road To Victory

"General Eisenhower realized that you men seldom get the same recognition as soldiers at the front line and wants you to know the part you are playing is vital. His message is for every man engaged in this vast project. The troops at the front could not do without you."

Four times as long as the famed Burma Road, this two-way all-truck highway network known as the Red Ball Express highway is America's "Road to Victory." Sixty-seven per cent of the personnel working the Red Ball are Negro troops who load and unload, keep the vehicles in repair, string communication wire, and drive 36 hours following the fast-moving fronts. 9-30-44

Approximately 20,000 soldiers ride the Red Ball day and night, speeding ammunition, gas and food, to the steadily advancing men at the front. 9-30-44

Inaugurated August 24, 200,000 tons of supplies were delivered to the Western Front in the first 26 days of operations. Thousands of vehicles and men comprising 147 quartermaster truck companies, consuming more than a million and a half gallons of gasoline daily, are used daily in transporting meat, butter and eggs to combat troops.

Doing Great Job

Of the Red Ball Express, Eisenhower said, "Some military strategists have been amazed at the speed with which the Allies thrust forward, and had expected a slow push to consolidate their gains, thus letting their supplies catch up with them.

"Truck companies are working without relief to keep supplies pouring behind the swift advance of the American tank columns. The supply units are doing a great job."

Dashing through Paris with a convoy, commanded by Lt. James Stamps, 6748 St. Lawrence avenue, Chicago, I heard him tell how the unit operates. Stamps, still wearing the artillery insignia on his collar, was attached to an anti-aircraft artillery battalion commanded by Lt. Col. Theophilus Mann of Chicago. Mann was attached to a port unit, while the artillery battalion was attached to trucking companies.

Stamps said, "I am glad the efforts of the Red Ball are recognized as the men are under a heavy strain driving day and night following the moving front. At first, before the break through at St. Lo, it was a difficult job to make the trip from the beaches to the troops, but now our trips are three days as the front expands. 9-30-44

36 Hours Of Driving

"We leave the ports and beaches loaded to go to our bivouac area where drivers are changed. That's the first leg, which takes nearly half the trip. We are spaced at intervals, maintaining a speed of 25 m.p.h. All trucks halt ten minutes to the even hour for a break. We never rest during 36 or more hours driving other than a break.

"Night driving gets you some time, but the convoys roll on. Sure, I would rather be firing anti-aircraft, but we are winning the war with supplies."

"Paris is wonderful," said Pvt. Willie Doss, Memphis, Tenn., as he jumped out of the cab here in Paris for a stretch. Pvt. Ed L. C. Jefferson, Dallas, Texas; Cpl. Stanley L. Muldren, Little Rock, Ark., and Pvt. Percy Williams, Asbury Park, N.J., said, "Wish we could be leaving our loads here at the Eiffel Tower. This is the place we'd like to see, and not from the cabs of our trucks, but we are shortening the war with fast-moving supplies."

Seldom do the trucks return from the front empty, as thousands of tons of captured enemy material, consisting of food and clothing are brought to the rear for prisoners of war.

10,000 Move Up In Night

Recently more than 10,000 troops were moved up in one night via the Red Ball, while another convoy of 465 trucks carried barracks bags. A week ago I met other former members of the artillery unit now attached to trucking companies, who have been driving and hauling troops since their arrival here on July 16. 9-30-44

I saw Lt. Thomas S. Holmes, Newark, N.J.; Charles S. Smith, 768 Dawson street, New York City; Darrell M. Bennett, 4446 Hancock, Brooklyn, N.Y.; Arthur E. Harris, 1306 McCullough, Baltimore, Md.; August Gibson, Brooklyn, N.Y.

Chicagoans were Cpls. Richard Johnson, 6501 Eberhart; William T. Lewis, 5125 Indiana; Andrew Sims, Garfield boulevard; Edgar Mohern, 5949 Michigan, and Cliff Williams, 6025 Prairie.

"Driving at fast clips is not tough, but after hours and hours, it gets you," said Cpl. Costie Harris, 2663 Washington boulevard, Chicago. "But officers and men do this job no matter under what conditions. Sometimes we were strafed. Then again, Cpl. Cleveland Wilkins, of Nashville, driving a load of troops had a narrow escape when an axle rolled off, but he just turned his truck off the road and the convoy moved on." 9-30-44

Driving back from the front, Lt. Zebedee Chaney, New York City, stopped here in Paris, stating, "It is good to know we are being recognized. Some of our units have experienced the shock of driving through towns not even captured, but the Red Ball Express keeps moving, following the front line."

Negro Troops Run Supplies To Front Line

PM — New York N.Y.

They Get Tribute From General Eisenhower

9-25-44

By ROI OTTLEY
Staff Correspondent
(Copyright, 1944, by Field Publications)

PM Exclusive

PARIS, Sept. 25.—The 25,000 American soldier truckers, who are daily traveling the "Red Ball Express" 400-mile supply line from port to combat zone which is 14 times as long as the famed Burma Road, were paid high tribute Friday by Gen. Eisenhower for a contribution to the war as significant as that of the combat troops.

Sixty per cent of the soldier truckers are Negroes. Details of the vast transportation of ammunition, petroleum products and food were revealed at a press conference here by chiefs of the communication zone who planned and control the super highway. They disclosed that how soon a mass thrust into Germany could be launched depended upon the continued success of the Red Ball Express. 9-25-44

Corporal Decorated

Eisenhower's tribute to the supply men, Negro and White, was paid by proxy through Maj. Gen. E. S. Hughes, who drove to the outskirts of Paris to meet a line of trucks driven by Negro troops. Along the roadside in a symbolic ceremony he met and decorated Cpl. Robert Bradley of Lynchburg, Va., with the Bronze Star Medal for meritorious service. This award came as a surprise to Bradley and his fellow soldiers, who had been suddenly called to a halt and asked to gather nearby.

Said Gen. Hughes to the assembled soldier truckers: "Bradley was chosen as a representative of the whole Red Ball highway, including men who repair the roads and bridges, put up the telephone wires and do all the service work in the rear.

"Gen. Eisenhower realizes that you men seldom get the same recognition as soldiers in the front line and wants you to know that the part you're playing is vital.

'Road to Victory'

"His message is for every man engaged on this vast project. The troops at the front couldn't do without you." 9-25-44

I have traveled this super highway. It is a two-way all-truck highway, known through the communication zone which it traverses and the combat zone which it supplies as the U. S. Army's Red Ball Express and is America's road to victory in France.

It was inaugurated Aug. 24 because of the sheer necessity for supplies, following a breakdown at St. Lo. Now 24 hours a day, columns of trucks roll by on the two major highways, one eastbound, the other westbound. 9-25-44

Enemy Strafing

The first 26 days of operation saw the Red Ball Express deliver more than 200,000 tons of supplies to the Western Front. The Red Ball Express is one of the toughest jobs in the war. Men travel as many as 36 hours before resting. They are subject often to enemy strafing. Most of all, they fear the German snipers who have knocked off many of their comrades.

Road accidents have taken their toll of men and supplies. I talked with a haggard Negro lieutenant, Zebedee C. Chaney, Jr., of New York City, who commands a trucking company. 9-26-44

He told me that the success of the Red Ball Express largely depended upon men who are able to stand great exertion for long periods and were good map readers who kept convoys from getting lost. But the young lieutenant was more anxious to talk about the future. He said: "Negro troops under me seek no glamor. They are mainly concerned with doing things in this Army that will be useful to them in securing work in civilian life."

Men of 93rd Meet, Kill Japs, Smash Pillboxes

Afro-American — Baltimore, Md.

7-1-44

By VINCENT TUBBS

AFRO War Correspondent with U.S. Troops in the South Pacific
[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

BOUGAINVILLE—(Via Air Mail)—Actions in which elements of the 93rd Division have engaged on the beachhead have been in close co-operation with the crack American division which has already become something more than a tradition in the South Pacific.

The division's first large-scale engagement was the delousing of Guadalcanal after the Marines had been pulled out. Sent to the Fijis for a "rest" they underwent strenuous training for another crack at the Japs here.

Soon after their arrival on December 25, 1943, they got what they asked Santa to bring them, when the division was placed along the Torokina River extremity of our beachhead perimeter where they

Sons of the Rising Sun, but not without cost to themselves.

The battle centered around a tree which proved to be the highest priced tree in the world. The tree which proved to be 125 feet high at only 260 yards from the hill's opposite side from our lines, mortars and overlook-ing a ½-mile-wide stretch of the Torokina Valley.

The Japs were ingeniously entrenched in tunnels under the tree and, on the hill's side, and also had the tree wired for demolition. The wily Japs deserted the tree while the fire burned itself was no more, then scurried back into their pillboxes before the American could take over.

Finally, with fixed bayonets, they dug the tree clean. Later it was learned that the battalion had to the tree of the 13th Japanese Infantry, a

Our men even tried burning the tree by extending a banyan base, running gasoline into it and firing the petrol with phosphorous grenades.

During a 19-day engagement the Japs were trenched in tunnels and down the hill's side, and attempted to dislodge them with hand grenades.

Though the tree itself was no more than a tradition in the Japanese Army, the Japs deserted it only when the fire burned their lines, mortars before the American could take over.

Finally, with fixed bayonets, they dug the tree clean. Later it was learned that the battalion had to the tree of the 13th Japanese Infantry, a Disappointed because the Japs failed to delouse it.

Our men even tried burning the tree by extending a banyan base, running gasoline into it and firing the petrol with phosphorous grenades.

During a 19-day engagement the Japs were trenched in tunnels and down the hill's side, and attempted to dislodge them with hand grenades.

Though the tree itself was no more than a tradition in the Japanese Army, the Japs deserted it only when the fire burned their lines, mortars before the American could take over.

Finally, with fixed bayonets, they dug the tree clean. Later it was learned that the battalion had to the tree of the 13th Japanese Infantry, a part of the infamous Jap 6th Division that staged the rape of Nanking had been vanquished.

Killed 541 Japs (by count) 541 in 200 feet of pipe to

Killed 541 Japs (by count) 541 in 200 feet of pipe to

Secure Outposts

As Allied elements moved on beyond the Torokina to assault Hill 65, which took 6,000 yards beyond the East-West trail; thence to cut south and take over Hills, 165,155, 500 and 501, the 93rd Division troops moved in to secure and establish outposts on the series of knolls.

In patrolling around their positions to protect themselves against surprise attack, 93rd infantrymen got into several engagements with the enemy and, according to official statements, "deported themselves brilliantly."

Colored soldiers have not worked solely with elements of the 93rd, however, for Fijian scouts have operated side by side with them and the 24th Infantry joined the division recently in a push beyond Mavavia to a point near the Moy River.

Maj. Gen. Robert B. McClure, said the Tan Yank infantrymen did as good a job of mopping up with tank spuport as he has ever seen. 7-1-44

Smashed Pillboxes

The push netted a kill of 20 Japs, and 17 Jap pillboxes were smashed.

Major portions of colored soldiers composing the 37th and 93rd Divisions are now set up in a series of strongly fortified outposts where they are primed to stem to a total eclipse any repeat performance of a suicidal attack by Sons of the Rising Sun.

$106,000 Bond Salesgirl

Weekly Review—Birmingham, Ala.

7-8-44

Gloria Brown, a Washington, D. C. student, who was credited by the Treasury Department with $106,250 in War Bond sales during the Fourth War Loan, receives a receipt from Elmer F. Harloff, of the District of Columbia War Finance Committee, for $525 worth of Bond sales on the opening day of the Fifth War Loan. Gloria is 15 years old and a student at the Garnett Patterson Junior High School. She lives with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Anthony A. Brown, at 1515 Caroline street, N.W., Washington.

Chief Surgeon States Policy Remains As Is

Amsterdam News New York, N.Y.

Gen. Kirk Declares Only a Few Negro Nurses Are Wanted

4-8-44

By HARRY McALPIN

(The Atlanta Daily World & NNPA)

WASHINGTON—The pronouncement last week of Maj. Gen. N. T. Kirk, Surgeon-General of the Army, that he knows no reason why any change should be made in the policy of labeling and separating the blood of Negroes for blood plasma banks and that the Army policy is not to mix white and Negro nurses nullified any encouragement contained in the confirming announcement of Secretary of War Stimson that the famed 24th Infantry is being used in actual combat in Southwest Pacific at Bougainville and that the 93rd Division has arrived in the South Pacific and is in jungle training.

General Kirk made his statement at a press conference in answer to an inquiry from this correspondent. He was asked "Does the Army still insist on its policy of separating the blood of Negroes in the plasma banks? And if so, is there any consideration being given to changing this policy?" 4-8-44

He replied: "I don't know that it will be changed. I don't know why it should be, do you-"

General Agrees There'e No Difference

He was reminded of the findings of scientists that there is no difference in the blood of Negroes and any other persons, to which he said: "There is no difference. I perfectly agree with you. But we might get in worse water than we are in now if we swap around too much.

Only 202 Nurses

The general was asked whether the Army plans to use more Negro nurses, and told that only 202 are reported in the service.

"If we need them", said the General. And while he was saying it, the radios and newspapers were pleading for 30,000 nurses to enlist with the Army Nurse Corps, and rumors of a nurse draft was drawing a War Department denial.

"Up to now," he continued, "we have tried to use Negro nurses only where we have Negro troops. It has not been our policy to mix colored and white nurses throughout the Army." 4-8-44

These are the sentiments of General Kirk—the man who sets Army policy in this regard, and who was hailed as such an improvement over his predecessor, Surgeon-General McGhee. It was McGhee who established the Army policy reflected by the Red Cross of accepting no blood from Negroes when plasma banks were first started. 4-8-44

And Drew Gets Medal

All this happened in a week during which public announcement was made that Dr. Charles Drew, a Negro, has been awarded the Spingarn medal by the NAACP for creating the blood plasma technique now saving thousands of lives on the battlefields of the world.

Negro GIs Can Rest Now

PM—New York, N. Y.

The War Dept. today confirmed—rather grudgingly, it appeared—the fact that it had abandoned its plans to establish Jim Crow rest centers for battle-weary Negro soldiers returning from overseas.

As forecast in PM a week ago, the Hotel Theresa in Harlem and the Hotel Pershing in Chicago's Negro district, originally scheduled to be taken over as rest centers for Negro soldiers, will not now be used by the Army. Instead, Negroes will be admitted on the same basis as white soldiers to the centers already in operation at Lake Placid, N. Y., and Atlantic City and to a center to be established in Santa Barbara, Cal.

It was President Roosevelt's personal intervention in response to protests from prominent New York Negroes—headed by Walter White, Mrs. Mary McCleod Bethune and Dr. Channing H. Tobias—which wrought the change. 10-10-44

The War Dept. release announcing the new policy buried the news in the fourth paragraph, and put it in these words:

". . . In order to avoid taking over additional hotel facilities in housing shortage areas, Negro returnees will be processed with white returnees through existing Northern centers."

The last part of the sentence means that Negroes will not share hotel facilities with whites in the centers in Miami, Asheville, N. C., and Hot Springs, Ark. That's all right with the Negro soldier—since the idea of the rest center is to give the soldier some rest.

Negro-Staffed Hospital In Southwest Pacific

Call—Kansas City, Mo.

6-16-44

AT AN ADVANCED BASE, NEW GUINEA. — (ANP)—Less than six weeks ago, America's only overseas all-Negro staffed hospital opened here at this base, which is less than three hours plane ride back of the "fighting lines."

Headed by Maj. Arthur H. Simmons of Washington, formerly of the staff of Freedmen's hospital and of the faculty of Howard university Medical school, the hospital's staff includes 13 other medical officers and 15 registered nurses. In addition to the officers, there is a staff of enlisted men attached to the personnel, headed by Watt G. Saunders of Los Angeles, first sergeant, and Willie J. Yeldell of Stroud, Okla., sergeant major in charge of administration.

Mass of Bushes 6-16-44

A few months ago, the present hospital site was a mass of bushes, tall growing cocoanut and palm trees, and at height of more than 900 feet above sea level.

Today an area of about five or more acres, more than 17 buildings dot the hill-sides where before was nothing but a huge jungle. The buildings include about 10 wards, two mess halls, a dispensary, headquarters' office and quarters for the personnel.

There are movies five times per week, a recreation hall for all, and a beautiful green lawn. Overlooking the wide blue sea, which can be seen for miles with the various land and sea craft coming and going, this site is one of the most beautiful on the island.

That the war "without bullets" can be successfully waged and won by these "angels of mercy" is being daily proven here in this area and parents and relatives of the patients need have no fear for the safety and health of their sons who are helping to preserve the ideals of a free and a safer world.

To date there have been more than 172 patients including many from the fighting area, who are finding a haven of rest and security here. All cases are mostly general medical, with an occasional surgery case listed. One of the latter was a skin grafting operation which was successfully performed on Pvt. Fred Poole of one of the units stationed over here. The operating physician in the case was Capt. Arthur H. Thomas of Philadelphia, the chief of surgery and executive officer.

Before coming overseas, the entire staff-personnel was attached to a hospital at Fort Huachuca, Ariz. After spending about six months at a hospital somewhere in Australia, the staff arrived here about Easter to begin operations.

A visitor passing through the wards and the other buildings is amazed at neatness and general healthful atmosphere in a place at such an early start.

Comfortable 6-16-44

This was made possible by the health, doctors and nurses donning their "fatigue" clothes and becoming painters overnight, interior decorators, electricians, carpenters and general laborers, and assisting in the carrying on of the equiping and making the place, comfortable for the incoming "patients."

That the staff is well equipped through theoretical and practical work is shown from the file records of these Negro fighters of

Members of the staff are Maj. Simmons, commanding officer, from Howard U., and Meharry, and Johnceiving hospital, Detroit, and 1st Lt. Jackson, Tenn., chief of dental service, How-William C. Rogers, Philadelphia, Virlogy, Lincoln U., and Junior college, Chicago, ginia State college, Ettrick, Va., and W. Skinner chief of Barnett M. Rhetta, medidoctor of medicine from Howard. Brooklyn, Meharry and Nurses are 1st Lts. Birdie E. Brown, General medical ward, principal chief nurse, women's pavilion, Harard U. Wilson Junhospital; Jacob A. Frye of Harlem hospitad, a graduate of N.Y.U. and Meharry; Charles practicing physician at Harlem School of Nursing; Alberta Howard, and a prac- Freedmens' hospital; Arthur H. Thomas, a graduate of Lincoln U., Howard U. and Columbia Los Angeles, Montclair, Fisk U. and school of medicine, Howard U., and Louis Miller, Harradiologist and registrar, Talladega col- Brooklyn, Meharry and Lewis college, Chicago. lege and Howard; Lt. William S. Hen- Joseph of Brooklem hospital and state Health depart- dricks of Los Angeles, adjutant, Univ- Howard; Edward C. ment of Atlanta, Ga. Also 1st Lts. Barnersity of Colorado; Capts. Robert P. Ran- Second Lts. are Marjorie S. Mayers, commander and supdolph of Durham, N. C., chief of medi- W. Peters Business cal service, Virginia Union university, and Howard; Kenneth E. Fletcher of Lowell H. Burrell, a graduate of N.Y.U. 6-16-44

47m-1944

No Jim Crow as President Dines with

Afro American—Baltimore, Md.
8-19-44

47m

8-19-44

President Roosevelt (arrow) shown as he dined last week with soldiers, sailors and marines in their Quonset hut mess hall at an Aleutian Island base. Note that the men are seated without regard to race. Commanding officers of the base are on either side of the President.

Negro Troops In Midst Of Invasion

Call-Kansas City, Mo.
6-16-44

By ERNEST E. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON. — (ANP) — Spokesmen for the army, navy, and the coast guard are now able to confirm that when the great might of the allied forces was slammed against the German West Wall in the early hours of last Tuesday morning, Negro fighters on land and sea were contributing to the effort to establish, hold and widen beachheads along the Normandy coast of France.

In the plethera of front-line dispatches that have been constantly sent out since last week on a huge battery of teletype machines and carefully observed by the Associated Negro Press, little detail has come through on the landings and the drive inland, or of the makeup of forces engaged in the major operation. Even less has been said regarding participation of Negro soldiers.

But a continuing series of background conferences and discussions of tactical operations with officials of the various branches has enabled the ANP, at this early date, to give some picture of what has happened thus far. These findings have been, supplemental by dispatches that gave cues.

Elements of the allied expeditionary force had been deployed throughout a typical 300 mile area contiguous to the French coast which was to be the point of initial contact.

6-16-44

H-Hour Arrives

Negro soldiers, of which there were an estimated of 100,000 or more in the European Theater of Operations, had established a new system of telephone exchanges and lines were set up in this area. In one section alone they laid down three new landing fields and extended seven more for the air force.

The character of these soldiers is known to have been quartermaster, air force, ground crews, service troops, and some anti-aircraft.

When H-Hour arrived, airborne troops were flown over the channel, a heavy bombardment by naval guns was laid down to knock out enemy installations, and under this withering fire waves of Rangers and Commandos began to go ashore from landing barges. These first fighters carried with them as light a weapon as possible.

6-16-44

Gradually, heavier weapons were brought in by Negro quartermaster outfits and service troops. Engineers were going in simultaneously to begin cleaning up the mess. It was the responsibility of the assault troops to dislodge the enemy from gun positions.

Repair Damaged Installations

At the same time, the paratroopers were cutting communication bing.

Often mothers are so careful about the clothes that their children wear, but do they know that out of their influence of their lives is being woven for their children the garments of character?

Execute Colored Soldier Overseas

Courier—Pittsburgh, Pa.
6-3-44

LONDON—Last minute appeals to save an American soldier from the gallows failed when Pvt. Wiley Harris, Jr., was hanged May 26 for murdering a British civilian in Belfast, March 6.

On the eve of the hanging the Belfast Trades council appealed to the governor general of Northern Ireland and the prime minister to use their influence to have the soldier's sentence commuted.

Harris, 26, of Greenville, Ga., was convicted and sentenced by a U. S. court-martial for the fatal stab-

Nazi Prisoners Take Over Negro Guards

Defender—Chicago, Ill.
9-30-44

By EDWARD TOLES
(Defender War Correspondent)

PARIS — Five thousand cringing, cowering, subdued German prisoners, members of the "master race," last week got new "masters" and a complete shock to their superior race complex when Negro members of a port battalion were relieved of their dock duties unload-ing ships in Cherbourg and elevated to the position of guarding "supermen."

Jammed into a five-acre, barbed-wire enclosed pen, shabby, unshaven "herrenvolk" still in green, mud-stained uniforms, they were a motley group. Few still defiant, staring curiously at interviewing officers, but all of them snapped to attention when the pen with guns lowered, waiting officers.

A tall German prisoner who spoke English received the Negro officers, saluted smartly, then ordered the waiting men into the terms of the Geneva Convention, prisoners of war are required to salute but not required to curry favor and eager to curry favor and Nazis, partly from fear.

Fear Senegalese

Describing the unit herded their capture, Warrant Officer Waldo B. Clark, San Antonio, Texas, said, "They were stiff when scared nearly shortly after their capture these black troops. The unit was commanded by Major William E. Rabb, Atlanta, Texas, who ordered them to load into the trucks. They thought as, a former lawyer, who first members of the port plained, "These men are the first were Senegalese mem-unit selected to guard prisoners experimentally. Because of their unit was stricken, some wept and high intelligence, the Negro men from its port duties to guard or they had heard that taken from its port duties while they unload non-prisoners the Nazis while they unload combatant materials from the Maquis.

"With 5,000 port workers re-

Their high intelligence was apparent when M-Sgt. Harold Boykaw, 11360 Aberdeen street, Chicago, social worker, detailed the excellent treatment given the prisoners. "Under the rules of the Geneva Convention, they are not forced to work. All elect to work. They receive regular GI rations

Include Russians, Poles

lieved from dock duties to unload ships into ducks driven by Negro units, the supplies move faster to the front."

the same as our troops and money equal to four dollars a month without working, and twenty dollars a month is deposited for them if they work. They are given tents and fatigues, but they all choose their own green Nazi uniform, regardless how tattered or dirty."

Four hundred White Russians and 200 Poles are among the prisoners. They were members of German labor battalions whom the Germans forced into building pill boxes and fortifications. They said they were told to join the army or else. When they demurred, 50 were marched in front of thousands of Russians and Poles and shot down by machine guns.

They all volunteered, said a former lieutenant of the Russian Army, who pulled out a picture showing himself in a Russian uniform. He had been with a labor battalion building the German's West Wall. 9-30-44

"All chaplains join with the German chaplain in giving the prisoners religious services," said Chaplain Lewis Eichleberger of South Carolina, a Benedict College graduate.

Chicagoans on Guard

Warrant Officer John E. Batts, 356 W. 145th street, New York, said the German medical officers captured were being sent to administer the needs of the prisoners. The prisoners have disciplinary rules, but since the prisoners have begun unloading there have been considerable thefts of foodstuffs, candies and smokes, which had never happened when the unit was unloading. The prisoners are searched and those found pilfering rations are given harder duties in cages within the pens where the other prisoners mill about. 9-30-44

Chicagoans seen guarding the prisoners on the docks were Pvts. Bob White, Reuben Tutt, Rufus Lewis, Robert Taylor and Richard Thomas, 6401 St. Lawrence avenue, Robbins, Ill., seemed well represented as Sgt. Freeman Greene, son of Rev. Freeman Greene, pastor of the Robbins Methodist church, marching a group of prisoners to work pointed out the Robbins boys driving trucks packed with prisoners off to the dock. They were Jesse Ward, James Means, William Washington and Russel Bell.

"There's pretty tough going sometimes when the wehrmacht march through the streets, as occasionally the population, aroused against the criminal terrorists, have to be restrained from spitting in the faces of the Nazis. There is always a gauntlet through which we march the 'Krauts' silently, with women screaming 'Killers—murderers!'" 9-30-44

Last week a delegation of French citizenry protested "The Germans are treated too well. Why, they have Camel cigarettes."

I moved out in a jeep past the lookout tower built by the Germans, where, perched with a machine gun, was Pvt. Dan Starling, of Jasper, Fla. Ahead was a truck loaded with prisoners driven by Sgt. George Cunningham, 440 W. 56th street, Chicago.

"Supermen, bah, they're Dupermen!"

93rd Officer And His Men Cited For Bravery Under Fire In Pacific

Courier — Pittsburgh, Pa.
6-10-44

By BILLY ROWE, Courier War Correspondent

BOUGAINVILLE, South Pacific—(By Air Mail)—Company Commander Conway B Jones, first lieutenant from Washington, D. C., was the nucleus here recently of the most impressive jungle ceremony since fighting elements of the 93rd Infantry Division entered this war zone. Standing before his gallant troops, who had beaten off several enemy attacks their first time under fire the colored officer was verbally cited by Maj. Gen. Raymond G. Lehman, division commander, who presented him with written commendations from Brig. Gen. Leonard R. Boyd, elements commander, and Col. Everette M. Yon.

SOLEMNITY REIGNS

The hosannas for a well performed task were given in the heart of the jungle—in the midst of territory wrested from the enemy a short time before. As the sun crept over the mass of foliage below like a sheet of still water, even the insects were quiet. Only the excited coughing of men could be heard between pauses in the deepened voice of the general.

The sum and substance of all the laudatory remarks were woven around General Boyd's commendation for duty well done:

"It is with great pleasure that I commend you and your company for excellent performance of duty April 17, 1944, while conducting a combat outpost. It is gratifying to learn, from veterans of two arduous campaigns, that previously untried personnel of this unit are applying their training to combat in a highly creditable manner. Such praise reflects the excellent work you and your subordinates have performed and I rest assured that you will continue to make progress." 6-10-44

Praises from several white officers on observation duty with the cited company added spice to the heaped-up honors. They remarked that the operation and leadership displayed by its officers were on a par with the best veteran units.

JAPANESE STRUCK FIRST

Led by a roster of all-colored officers, Company "X" moved out early April 12 as part of a co-ordinated attack against the Japanese across the Torokina river. Working with a white infantry group and a Fijian company, its mission was to block the East-West Trail where, in the past, enemy operations were carried out on a large scale. Taking a defensive position in the cool of the evening, when the soft subtropical breezes relieve the parched earth, men and officers busied themselves in the establishment of a protective perimeter by digging into the good earth. As if waiting for the job to be completed and the security which comes with the halo of night, the Japanese struck their initial blow, giving the green troops their first taste of gun fire aimed to kill. 6-10-44

The next morning with the sound of gun fire ringing in their minds and still loud in their ears, green troops—now veterans—followed the sun as it cut a path over last night's battle field to count 35 Japanese killed and five Tan Yanks wounded.

CLIMAX REACHED

In a surge of combat might, Company "X" stemmed a daylight counter attack of Tojo's forces. For four days and nights this went on with the Japanese snapping and snipping like sparrows harrying a large hawk until they are killed. On the fifth day of the struggle, the enemy hit the group in force, catching the entire body off balance with 60-odd men out hauling rations and ammunition. With six machine guns blazing and 25-calibre rifle bullets cutting the morning breeze with a rhythmic zing, the Japanese attempted to cut through the company's first platoon, adding the brunt of the attack on the flank held by Second Lt. Walter B. Sanderson, also of Washington, D. C. It was then that a heroic legend was shaped by Sgt. Robert J. Scott of Hickory, Va. He tossed so many hand grenades that the Japanese cooled off after several of them had been killed. Company "X" had thus completed its mission. The East-West trail is no longer so dangerous. 6-10-44

Computing the score for the five days of fighting, there were 44 Japanese killed, 18 Tan Yanks wounded — none seriously. Since that time, five of them have returned to duty with only four evacuated to a higher echelon for more extensive medical care.

Lieutenant Jones is married to Mrs. Esther T. Jones of Washington, D. C., and is the father of a five-year-old son, Conway, Jr.

Negroes Suffer Many Invasion Casualties

Call — Kansas City, Mo.
7-7-44

WASHINGTON, D. C. — The War Department announced this week that Negro troops were used in the invasion. A statement on their participation follows:

"Pictures sent back from the invasion front, which have been widely published, clearly show the presence of Negro troops. Of course, we don't announce units in an operation. That is made by the unit commander when he thinks it proper. Except for making public the larger elements participating in the invasion, General Eisenhower has made no announcement giving the composition of his forces. But on the beaches, Negro Combat Engineers and other Negro troops, among those unloading the ships and handling the supplies on shore, did their duty excellently under fire in this zone of heavy combat. And they suffered many casualties."

Victory Life Buys $100,000 In Bonds In War Loan Drive

Amsterdam News
New York, N. Y.
7-15-44

Dr. P. M. H. Savory, chairman of the board of Victory Mutual Life Insurance Company, announced this week that the company has just bought $100,000 worth of bonds in the Fifth War Loan Drive. Declared Dr. Savory:

"Victory Mutual Life's purchase of $100,000 in war bonds shows the strength of our growing company and also our faith in the future of America."

Dr. C. B. Powell, chairman of the finance committee of Victory Mutual Life, said:

"This last purchase of $100,000 in bonds in the Fifth War Loan Drive is concrete evidence of our desire to aid in building a better America. We shall continue to do our share."

Engineer Units Go In Front

Amsterdam News
New York, N. Y.
6-10-44

SUPREME HEADQTRS., ALLIED EXPENDITIONARY FORCE — As American, British and Canadian airborne and seaborne forces swarmed upon the beaches of France in the early dawn of June 6, Negro troops were among the initial striking units, carrying the crushing war machine of the United Nations into battle on Hitler's own stamping ground. It is much too early to reveal the identity of all the units participating in the first assaults, but it is known that Negro contingents of anti-aircraft artillery, Coast Guard artillery, combat engineers, Air Corps ground forces, service and quartermaster outfits in great strength have been up front poised for invasion for many weeks.

In the logistics of battle, units of the above-mentioned forces are necessary in initial operations, and thousands of the Negro soldiers and sailors, therefore, are among the first to land in France, there to establish beachheads of the final drive to Berlin. 6-10-44

Supreme Commander, General Dwight Eisenhower's brilliant order of the day sending the men into the greatest amphibious assault in the history of the world was packed with drama, and appears to have had the effect of Lord Nelson's historic speech to his men just before the battle against the Spanish Armada when he said, "England expects every man to do his duty."

"Soldiers, sailors and airmen of the Allied Expeditionary Force: You are about to embark upon a great crusade toward which you have striven for these many months. The eyes of the world are upon you. The hopes and prayers of liberty-loving people everywhere go with you." Concluding he said, "Our home fronts have given us an overwhelming superiority in weapons and munitions of war, and have placed at our disposal great reserves of trained fighting men.

"The tide has turned. The free men of the world are marching together to victory. I have full confidence in your courage, devotion to duty and skill in battle. We will accept nothing less than full victory." 6-10-44

Men of the Allied command received this order after they had embarked. It was read by appropriate commanders to all troops. It proved electrifying!! The response was terrific as white men and black men, all determined to destroy the enemy digested the general's words and then turned their eyes to the ominous coast.

Publication of Soldier's Article on VD Ordered

Afro American — Baltimore, Md.
8-5-44

SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND—Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower recently ordered that a critique on veneral diseases written by a Massachusetts soldier be published by European Theatre Headquarters and distributed to commanding generals for their information.

The article was written by Sgt. Walter W. Bonner, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Bonner of New Bedford, Mass., who has been stationed with an engineer aviation battalion here a year this month.

The brother of Pvt. Charles D. Bonner, a senior at the Boston University School of Medicine, also a member of the all-colored chorus of 200 soldiers which recently toured England and Scotland. 8-5-44

Granted special permission by Sgt. Bonner has taught public schools and lectured on American history and government before working clubs and teachers' groups.

In Churchill Club

Sgt. Bonner was a junior high school teacher before his induction November 3, 1942.

He is one of the few enlisted men in the Churchill Club, which sponsors concerts, lectures and educational activities here.

A graduate of Lincoln University, Pa., Sgt. Bonner was presi-

47m-1944

Engineers in France Build City, 1,000-Bed Hospital

Afro-American Baltimore, Md.

By OLLIE STEWART

AFRO War Correspondent with Invasion Forces in France

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

8-12-44

SOMEWHERE IN FRANCE—It was like old home week. Randy Dixon of the Courier rushed up to shake hands with a husky first lieutenant whom he knew. The chaplain was smiling and talking in machine-gun spurts. Dinner was ready for our party—and I was ready for the dinner.

When the chaplain, Capt. Ralph R. King, Los Angeles, paused for breath, Lt. Alonzo Dodson, 26 N. Ruby Street, Philadelphia, got in a word edgewise, saying, "Ours is a general service engineer regiment. We can build anything and tear down anything.

Right now we're constructing a headquarters, a miniature city: laying out streets, building houses, putting in plumbing and wiring, laying pipe lines, whatever else may be needed.

Blueprint Experts

"Our men work hard, and I'm glad to see somebody come around to see that they get some credit. They even make the drawings and blue prints for what we construct. In civilian life they would be paid a lot.

Then the chaplain took us to see the commanding officer, Col. Warren N. Underwood, Sparrows Point, Md., who had been with the regiment only two weeks—and this was the first time he had ever commanded colored troops.

No Friction Among Officers

He said his men were tops. I asked if his white and colored officers got along all right. "Yes," he said, "they have let me neither see nor hear of any evidence of friction. I have thirteen colored officers, all lieutenants except the chaplain."

Then we ate — out of white plates and on a white tablecloth. And if you think that isn't worth mentioning over here in this wilderness, you should sit with us on the ground while we eat out of a mess kit balanced on our knees, day in and day out.

We had hot biscuits and butter. The mess sergeant, S-Sgt. John L. Woods, New Bedford, an old railroad, hotel and steamship cook, laid it on us until we cried quits. 8-12-44

Good Impression on Press

If they wanted to make a good first impression on the PRESS they went about it in the right way. Except for one thing: I've been war corresponding a long time now, and aside from the fact that I'm naturally suspicious, I always take a second look when I meet Greeks bearing gifts. I look a gift horse in the mouth more than I do any other kind.

However, this bunch of engineers turned out to be something worth seeing. As we went from company to company, we met the officers and all of them were anxious for their men to be complimented for the big jobs they had done in France and in England.

One of the officers I had met in London, a smiling, affable chap, was First Sgt. Joseph Turner, Moyock, N.C. The trio of first looeys was completed by Paul Singleton, 1032 Park Road, Washington, a Lincoln man.

Colored Officers Rare

It is worth noting that engineering officers have been somewhat of a rarity. This branch of service is one that was long kept quite esoteric; many people subscribing to the notion that precision, accuracy and big figures were too complex for a man to grasp if his skin was not white.

Second lieutenants included:

Oliver Arnold, Roanoke, Va., West Virginia State and Boston University; Clarence Finley, Niles, Mich.; Roscoe Turner, New Orleans, Xavier; Charles R. Johnson, West Jefferson, Ohio, Wilberforce; Richard H. Sewell, Bowling Green, Ky., Lincoln U. and Indiana;

Thomas H. Wiggins, Hazlehurst, Miss., Stowe Teachers' College; Washington C. O'Guin, Homer, La., Tuskegee; Joseph Daniels, Englewood, N.J.; Theodore R. Jones, Chicago, Howard University; and James W. Carlos, Pelham, N.Y.

Build 1000-Bed Hospital

The authorities wanted a 1000-bed hospital built. A few rectangles were jotted on a piece of paper and the demand sent to the plan and blueprint room.

In this room I found M-Sgt. William P. Graves, Pittsburgh, bending over a drafstman's board, with his co-workers, T-Sgt. Henry Nash, Starksville, Miss.; T-Sgt. Cleo Callahan, Texarkana, Tex.; and T-Sgt. Roger Talley, Gary, Ind. 8-12-44

Must be Ingenious

Said Graves, "All we get is a rough sketch. Everything else is done in here. Sometimes we have to bend buildings around trees, since we aren't supposed to cut down trees in France. But we get our job done in time."

I would have lingered longer, but this, please remember, was a conducted tour. Chaplain King should work for the Cook's Tour people after the war. Every time I wanted to talk to somebody, he prodded me along to see something else.

I do not wish to seem critical of my friend the chaplain. I think he's a swell person. But in the old days a war correspondent got his own stories the best way he could—usually by sitting down over a bottle of wine and letting a soldier warm up to his subject gradually.

There was never any of this new fangled procedure, such as, "Hey, soldier, what do you speak? Speak up—we don't have all day to wait. What's your story?"

Not Glorified, But Vital

But we got fleeting glimpses of hundreds of men making a big contribution to the war effort. When towns are taken, they won't be anywhere near. When parades march in victory, they won't even be allowed to show off. I for one will thank my stars for the engineers who are building some shacks for bodily comfort.

Here are the names of a few more men I said hello to before being yanked away:

First Sgt. James O. Hill, Norfolk, Va.; First Sgt. John A. Poynter, Franklin, Tenn.; S/Sgt. George Andrews, Troy, Ala.; Sgt. Clarenza Cook, Dennison, Texas; Pvt. Cloyd E. Suddoth, Chicago; Pfc. Beeler G. Adams, Nowater, Okla.; Sgt. John Hummons, Chicago, mail clerk; Pvt. Alvin Gonder, Macon, Ga., very fine pianist;

Sgt. John C. Shaw, St. Louis, Mo., clever entertainer; First Sgt. John B. Frazier, St. Louis, former newspaper distributor; M/Sgt. Boyle Stewart, Chicago, only Theosophist in the outfit; Pfc. George Tisdale, Carbondale, Ill.; Cpl. Wilbert Cunningham, Newport News; Sgt. James McQueen, Arcadia, Fla.; Cpl. Elmer Bowen, Egypt, Miss.;

Sgt. Huston Olden, Pittsburgh; Cpl. George D. Flowers, Detroit; Pfc. Joseph H. Nelson, 718 S. Randolph Street, Richmond, Va., organist, formerly of Union University; Pvt. Raoul J. Bogville, Los Angeles; Pfc. Eddie Bradley, Jacksonville; Cpl. Charles A. Scott, Gilmer, Texas; and Sgt. Othello Jordan, Brooklyn, N.Y.

93rd Infantry May Help to Hold Part of Solomons

Afro American — Baltimore, Md.

Replacements Sent to 24th Division as Men Get Rest Period After 26 Months Overseas

7-1-44

By FLETCHER MARTIN
NNPA Pool Correspondent

GUADALCANAL (By Courier) — After two months of combat, elements of the 93rd Division have been drawn back within the original Bougainville perimeter. American elements have twice struck at retreating enemy troops, however, action has been confined mostly to patrol clashes.

It is definitely known that the Solomons campaign tactically has drawn to a close, and future action is very unlikely. Admiral William Halsey, theatre commander, announced that an estimated 15,000 enemy troops had been killed in the northern Solomons campaign.

May Help Hold Area

However this vast command must be held "at all cost," and indications point toward colored combat troops with elements of white divisions being given this mission. One military authority stated that the entire area would be garrisoned.

The question of importance to colored personnel in this area is whether or not colored troops of a combat service nature are being used in Admiral Nimitz's thrust from Pearl Harbor. 7-1-44

It has been disclosed that a number of colored marines are stationed in the Central Pacific, and released pictures of the Tarawa area show colored sailors there.

No Long Rest Expected

Latest developments in no way lead to the belief, held in some quarters, that colored combat forces stationed here will be given a prolonged rest.

During one interview Major General Griswold, commander 14th Corps, stated that action by colored troops during their first encounter with the enemy had been of a superb nature. He added that serious times lie ahead and more likely all available troops would be used. 7-1-44

24th Gets Rest

The 24th Infantry Regiment, after twenty-six months of oversea service, is now being given a rest period. The regiment is kept at full strength despite those troops leaving on rotation. Replacements are added monthly.

Despite victories now being daily gained, military authorities still warn that the enemy is strong and casualties, and more casualties will result before we enter Japan's inner defenses.

Eisenhower Praises Ex-cellence Of Negro Soldiers In Invasion

New York Weekly

7-15-44

(By The NNPA)

Washington, D. C. — "Negro troops did their duty excellently under fire on Normandy's beaches in a zone of heavy combat," General Dwight D. Eisenhower, supreme commander of the allied invasion forces, has declared. The statement was contained in a greeting sent by the general to the NAAPC Wartime Conference meeting in Chicago.

According to General Eisenhower, the Negro troops suffered substantial casualties. This fact was disclosed week before last by Secretary of War Stimson in a pressconference.

Continuing his statement, the general said: "You may well be proud of the accomplishments of our forces in the European liberation campaign, they have made a new chapter in high sense of justice, observers find it difficult to understand why the general does not approve the admission of Negro WACs into his theatre of operations. The War Department insists that the approval of the theatre commanders is necessary before Negro WACs may be sent abroad.

7-15-44

Negroes when he reversed the sentence of Corp. Leroy Henry, convicted of rape and sentenced to death. He re-

Sec. Of War Stimson Confirms Fact Negro Soldiers In Invasion

Weekly — New Orleans, La.

(By The Associated Negro Press)

Washington, July 5. — Official confirmation of the role played by Negro troops in the recent invasion of France came Thursday from the lips of Secretary Stimson. While praising their performance, he revealed some were stevedore and engineer units, and admitted that they suffered high casualties.

In recounting the part played by Negro troops in the spectacular invasion, Stimson disclosed that Negro engineer outfits were on the beachheads where previous reports have indicated some of the heaviest losses were encountered.

The Secretary identified the assignment of the Negro units as "unloading ships and as engineers." The object of national criticism by his effort to smear the Negro soldier, Stimson praised the courage of the Negro units that were among the first allied soldiers to set foot upon French soil.

French See Negro Prove Battle Valor

Amsterdam News

Tan Yanks Are Waging All-Out War For Liberty Of All Peoples Everywhere

9-30-44

By GEORGE COLEMAN MOORE

SOMEWHERE IN FRANCE (ANP) Through the spotlight of bravery and daring, the heroics of this war seldom finds focus on those Negro troops collectively and individually who are quietly hurling knockout blows at Fascism under concentrated enemy fire. On every front they are waging savage war for the freedom of peoples everywhere.

Out here in France with major operations reaching their climax, America's colored soldiers continue their spectacular performances under a strange and disturbing cloak of anonymity.

However, scattered disclosures of their valor have seeped back from the fighting fronts. When the allied invaders took Cherbourg, Negro soldiers rushed in, rifes chest high, to shoot it out with heavily entrenched Germans. They braved the dreaded menace of snipers and smoked out scores of them from farm houses and pillboxes while Yank magazine photographers recorded their courage.

9-30-44

A Negro artillery group manning a 155 MM howitzer unit is now blasting strong German fortifications in the vicinity of Paris, shattering the mouthing of "Master Race" theorists, Stars and Stripes has reported on their smashing accuracy.

Lt. Col. Harmon S. Kelly, commander of the outfit, declares, "I'll put them up against any artillery outfit over here."

"General 'The' Eisenhower has cited two Negro organizations, one a QM truck company, the other an anti-bellum battalion, for their undaunted devotion to duty in the D-Day landings. He said the balloon troops hitting the beaches under machine gun, rifle and artillery fire completed their missions and proved an important element of the air defense team.'

The truck company, he revealed, salvaged most of the damaged equipment in the landings and in three days "90 per cent" of their vehicles were operating on a 24 hour basis, a scale which was maintained for five weeks." 9-30-44

Contributions of Negro troops to sweeping Allied successes are more vast than those isolated incidents indicate and few people outside soldiers in the field are aware of their deeds. Basically the sleazy status and contemptuous estimate of Negro troops remains a popular fallacy.

NEGRO TROOPS FIGHT GERMANS FOR HILL POSITIONS IN ITALY

Tribune — Chicago, Ill.

ROME, Nov. 5 (AP).—Activity on the Italian battle front was confined mainly to patrol operations, allied headquarters said today, altho both American 5th army and British 8th army troops made minor improvements in their positions. The weather over the entire front cleared somewhat after several weeks of heavy rains but mud and flooded streams still hampered operations. 11-6-44

Negro troops of the American 5th army in the central sector moved up on a 1,000 foot hill where the Germans are using a church as a strongpoint. Tribune

British troops on the Adriatic sector strengthened their positions, altho forward elements were under constant German artillery fire. The British gained control of the southern end of the Forli air fields in a 500 yard advance.

700,000 Colored Serving In Army

Tribune — Philadelphia, Pa.

8-12-44

SOMEWHERE In France —Brigadier General B. O. Davis told war correspondents there now are 700,000 colored troops in the United States forces, with approximately 5000 commissioned officers, and that he was looking to the day when there would be at least 10,000 colored officers.

Commenting on racial differences, General Davis said "When I was in London two years ago our own soldiers didn't get along so well with each other but now on this side, I have been told there is no racial unpleasantness." 8-12-44

The general said he had found morale among colored troops in Normandy "very high—I haven't heard a growl yet."

First Captain

Defender — Chicago, Ill.

11-8-44

CAPTAIN MARY L. PETTY

Army Nurse Corps leader of 5221 Indiana avenue, Chicago, Ill., who will supervise training at the first basic training center for Negro nurses recently established at Fort Huachuca, Ariz. The initial class will have an enrollment of 135 nurses, all of whom were recently commissioned second lieutenants. Captain Petty is the first Negro member of the ANC to hold the rank of captain.

Dumbarton Oaks Talks Avoid Two Issues of Special Interest to Colored Nations

Call — Kansas City, Mo.

10-20-44

By ERNEST E. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON.—(ANP) — The two matters of singular importance to colored peoples of the world, apart from the general principle of maintenance of peace, were left untouched by the Dumbarton Oaks conference, and the tentative proposals which are not being reviewed in the capitals of the United nations threw no additional light on the subject.

These matters are, first, the mandates system; and second, the question of an equality plank.

In making public the text of the proposals last week official quarters referred to it as being "90 percent complete." It was later freely admitted that the dispositoin of mandates was one of the matters falling within the category of the unfinished 10 percent.

Through conversations which the Associated Negro Press has had with various spokesmen in diplomatic quarters, several ideas have been developed regarding these two important questions.

The system of mandated territories was developed through the present league of nations. The conference recently closed here were primarily concerned with the maintenance of peace.

Consider Equality Plank 10-20-44

This does not mean that the delegates were not receptive to suggestion bearing upon other phases of world organization for peace. It does mean, however, that questions outside of this immediate scope were considered more suitable for discussion at a "full dress" conference on the entire document.

Since one of the unsettled questions is how to wind up the affairs of the league of nations, it will naturally follow that some disposition will have to be made on the mandates system authorized by the league.

As regards an equality plank, this too was considered outside the realm of the immediate discussions. It has been generally acknowledged now that the Chinese did make a proposal on the equality of races and nations. It is also true that proposals dealing with various cultural and economic problems came to the attention of the conferences. 10-20-44

In the drafting of the tentative proposals the delegates agreed upon a security council and a general assembly, and said that "the organization should have such subsidiary agencies as may be found necessary." In tailoring the security council in the fasihon it has been, the desire was to give it the responsibility and power to achieve the primary objective, namely, the maintenance of peace and the prevention of aggression.

Mindful that other questions of importance play a part, the general assembly was given the responsibility to act upon them. Chapter IX, section A, paragraph 1 has this to say:

"With a view to the creation of conditions of stability and well-being which are necessary for peaceful and friendly relations among nations, the organization should facilitate solutions of international economic, social and other humanitarian problems and promote respect for human rights and fundamental free doms."

10-20-44

Desire American Suggestion

This responsibility is vested in an economic and social council acting under the authority of the general assembly. It is here then that any equality plank which may be developed would most likely find enforcement or supervision.

In the very statement of purposes of the united nations, as the organization would be called, is the desire "to achieve international cooperation in the solution of international economic, social and other humanitarian problems." It is conceivable that even the question of mandates would fall within the scope of the work of the economic and social council.

Spokesman for the official American viewpoint have hastened to say that other suggestions are welcome. It is pointed out that had there been any tendency to give public attention to any one or more set of ideas, it would have appeared to the public that the delegates were working on these alone. To avoid premature controversy was an objective. An ensuing problem, however, has been how to stimulate suggestion from the American people. 10-20-44

The impression is conveyed that the time is now ripe to present all viewpoints on mandates or an equality plank so that they may be thrown into the general hopper in preparation for the full-dress conference which will more than likely be held early in 1945.

47m-1 4

General Praises Negro-Operated Amphibian Units

World - Memphis-Tenn. Sept. 1, 1944

CAMP GORDON JOHNSTON, Fla.—'Camp Gordon Johnston is for from the best known or most publicized camp in the United States and yet, the part you, and your comrades who trained here before you are playing in this war is second to none in importance," said Brig. Gen. William H. Holcombe, Commanding General of the Army Service Forces Training Center here in a recent dedicatory speech to colored troops.

Before companies massed on the newly surfaced Amphibian Truck Training Gruop parade ground, the General commended men of the camp's Third Area, predominately populated by colored troops, for their work in completing the services club, guest house, library, recreation hall, and chapel, all of which were dedicated to the Amphibian Truck Training Group men. Much of the work was done by contributed labor after duty hours. The dedicatory exercises began with an inspection of the new recreational facilities.

MADE HISTORY Sept. 1-44

In speaking to the men just before a colorful, retreat ceremony, Gen. Holcombe declared: "In Africa, in Sicily, in Italy, in Normandy, and in the far reaches of the Pacific, the Amphibian Truck has made history. As a weapon of war it has achieved highest rank. Without Amphibian Trucks and you men to operate them our success on the far-flung battlefields of the world might have been delayed or perhaps neutralized."

Acknowledging the hardships under which the ATTG have trained. Gen. Holcombe, further said: "I don't have to tell you that there is nothing soft or comfortable or pleasant about war. War is hell—whether you are actively engaged in combat duty or training here in camp. Your morale is important to me. Col. Savage (Lt. Col. Dale G. Savage, ATTG Commander) and I have wished we could have made things more comfortable for you."

PAYS TRIBUTE

"That is why it is gratifying to me to be here on this occasion. It is because of your spirit, your understanding of the great crisis that confronts our country, and your commendable response to the assignment we have given you, that we are gathered here today to pay tribute to you, not by mere words but by officially dedicating to you men of the ATTG your service club, your guest house, your library and your chapel.'

"I congratulate all of you whose labor made these buildings possible It was truly a labor of love. You who remain here will enjoy these buildings. You who are departing will have the satisfaction of knowing that your comrades are enjoying them."

A native of Washington, D. C., Gen. Holcombe was a member of Lt. Gen. Joseph Stilwell's party during the famous 1942 Burma Retreat. A victim of recurrent malaria, he remained in India until Christmas of 1943 as Deputy Commanding General of the Army Service Forces China-Burma-India Theater. He returned to the United States in January 1944, and took command of Camp Gordon Johnston in March.

Colored Troops Overseas Now Number 361,456

Journal + Guide Norfolk, Va.

79,000 In Air Corps; 44,000 Infantrymen

8-26-44

WASHINGTON, D. C.—There were 698,911 Negroes serving in the Army on June 30, 1944, the War Department announced this week. This indicated an increase of 34,845 above the February 29, 1944, total of 664,066.

The announcement revealed a sharp rise in the number of Negroes assigned to overseas theatres, with other principal increases occurring in components of the Army Service Forces. 361,456 men are serving overseas.

Since August 31, 1943, the Army had accepted 116,050 additions to its Negro personnel.

Following is a partial breakdown. 8-26-44

Infantry	44,869
Coast and Field Artillery	38,517
Cavalry	1,473
Engineers	128,789
Air Corps	79,027
All others	406,236
Commissioned Officers	5,937
Including:
Dental Corps Officers	102
Nurses	213
Other Medical Corps Officers	508
Chaplains	239
Serving Overseas	361,456

Mixed British Unit Training in U.S.

Mid-American Baltimore-Md.

WASHINGTON (NNPA) — A mixed British combat unit, composed of colored and white volunteers from the Caribbean and Bermuda, is training in the United States for overseas duty. 8-19-44

The existence of this unit, the First Caribbean Regiment, which has both colored and white officers, was made public last week in connection with a parade by the troops in celebration of the birthday of King George VI.

Trinidad Leads

Trinidad, with about 22 per cent of the volunteers, has the largest representation. Next in order come Jamaica, Barbados, British Guiana, Bermuda, the Windward Islands, the Leeward Islands, British Honduras and the Bahamas.

Lt. Gen. G. N. Macready, commander of the British Army staff in Washington, reviewed the unit and senior U.S. Army officers also took part in the ceremonies.

Praise U.S. Officers

Members of the regiment were said to be enthusiastic in their praise of the co-operation of U.S. Army officers and enlisted men. Particularly appreciated, some recalled, was the reception given the contingents upon their arrival by a U.S. Army band.

The regiment was established on April 1, and the first contingent to arrive in the United States was from Bermuda. Their place of training was not disclosed.

Non-Combat And Combat Army Units

Journal + Guide Norfolk, Va. 8-26-44

WORD from Washington, based on official figures, indicates that Negro units in the Army are continuing to undergo sharp reconversion from combat to engineer and other type of outfits not of primary combat nature. This is going on in face of the fact that the number of Negroes in the Army has increased since June 6 by 34,845 to a total strength of 698,911.

During this same period what amounts to more than a division of combat men was lost to non-combat work. Nearly one thousand men (847) were added to existing infantry outfits and 1,692 to the Air Corps.

In the infantry, coast- and field artillery, cavalry, and air corps there is a total of 164,806. In the engineers and "all other" types of Army units there is a total of 534,965. This is a ratio of almost five to one in non-combat and combat units.

There are 3,506 colored Wacs and 213 nurses in the Army. In the latter category the quota is woefully indefensible. No Wacs of the colored group are known to have been assigned outside the continental United States. This week the Army announced that sixty-odd colored nurses had arrived in the European theatre of operations. Previously some had been sent to Liberia (they are now returned) and more recently others have been sent to Australia and other Pacific bases. 8-26-44

In the Nurses Corps there are only three Negroes (captains) above the rank of lieutenant. The Wacs have two majors and several captains.

No one contends that non-combat outfits are not necessary to the war effort. It could not be won without them. But the Negro, with reason, objects to the high percentage of his men who are given the drudgery assignments, in contrast to those of other races.

That the Negro is a good soldier is beyond dispute. The latest testimonial to his fighting qualities was given earlier this week by Prime Minister Churchill of Great Britain. And he is in a position to know.

Patrol Of 93rd Cuts Jap Lines

Journal + Guide Norfolk, Va.

Outfit Once Again Breaks Into Headlines

9-30-44

Special to Journal and Guide

SOMEWHERE IN THE SOUTHWEST PACIFIC—The 93rd division, the first American infantry division of Negro soldiers to be committed to combat, which has not been in the news in the past weeks, made the headlines again recently when a patrol of these soldiers displayed heroic action in making their way behind the Japanese lines to set up an ambush and rip the Jap supply lines to shreds from a dangerous ambush position.

A 93rd patrol under the command of First Lieutenants John S. Walker of Chicago, Ill., and Linden A. Carding of Miami, Okla., stalked through the quiet and perilous jungle on a mission assigned to them by the commanding general of the division. After two days of wearily trudging through muck and mud, the patrol reached its goal far behind the enemy lines, where they set up a road block and made plans to ambush the Japs' main supply route.

SURPRISED JAPS 9-30-44

Each man realized the importance and danger of his mission. The strategic hill position they occupied was to be held while they struck hard into the Jap effort to supply their stranded forces in a native village. They were rewarded when they surprised a Jap patrol and engaged it in a fire fight. A concentration was laid on the Japs who fled in disorder.

The next morning, at the crack of dawn, another Jap patrol, evidently in flight from a heavy mortar barrage laid down by friendly forces the previous night, was caught in the American patrol's ambush. Cpl. James L. Vernon of Wilcoe, W. Va., and Technician Fifth Grade Harry S. Evans of Long Branch, N. J., crouched in their gun positions and allowed the Japs to creep within 50 yards. They spattered the area with deadly cross-fire from their automatic weapons. 9-30-44

REPEL COUNTER-ATTACK

They accounted for three Nips knocked out immediately. Then Sergeant James A. Hopkins of Baton Rouge, La., and Technician Fifth Grade Arlester J. Jefferson of San Antonio, Texas, spotted two more seeking conknew that the patrol was striking mercilessly in their territory and consequently, after a few hours, they attempted to make a hard-pressing counter-attack. The other as he was taking a quarry, cold as he crawled toward a tree. Jefferson stopped his bead on Corporal Vernon. By this time the Japs patrol withstood the assault with stiff resistance and suffered no losses.

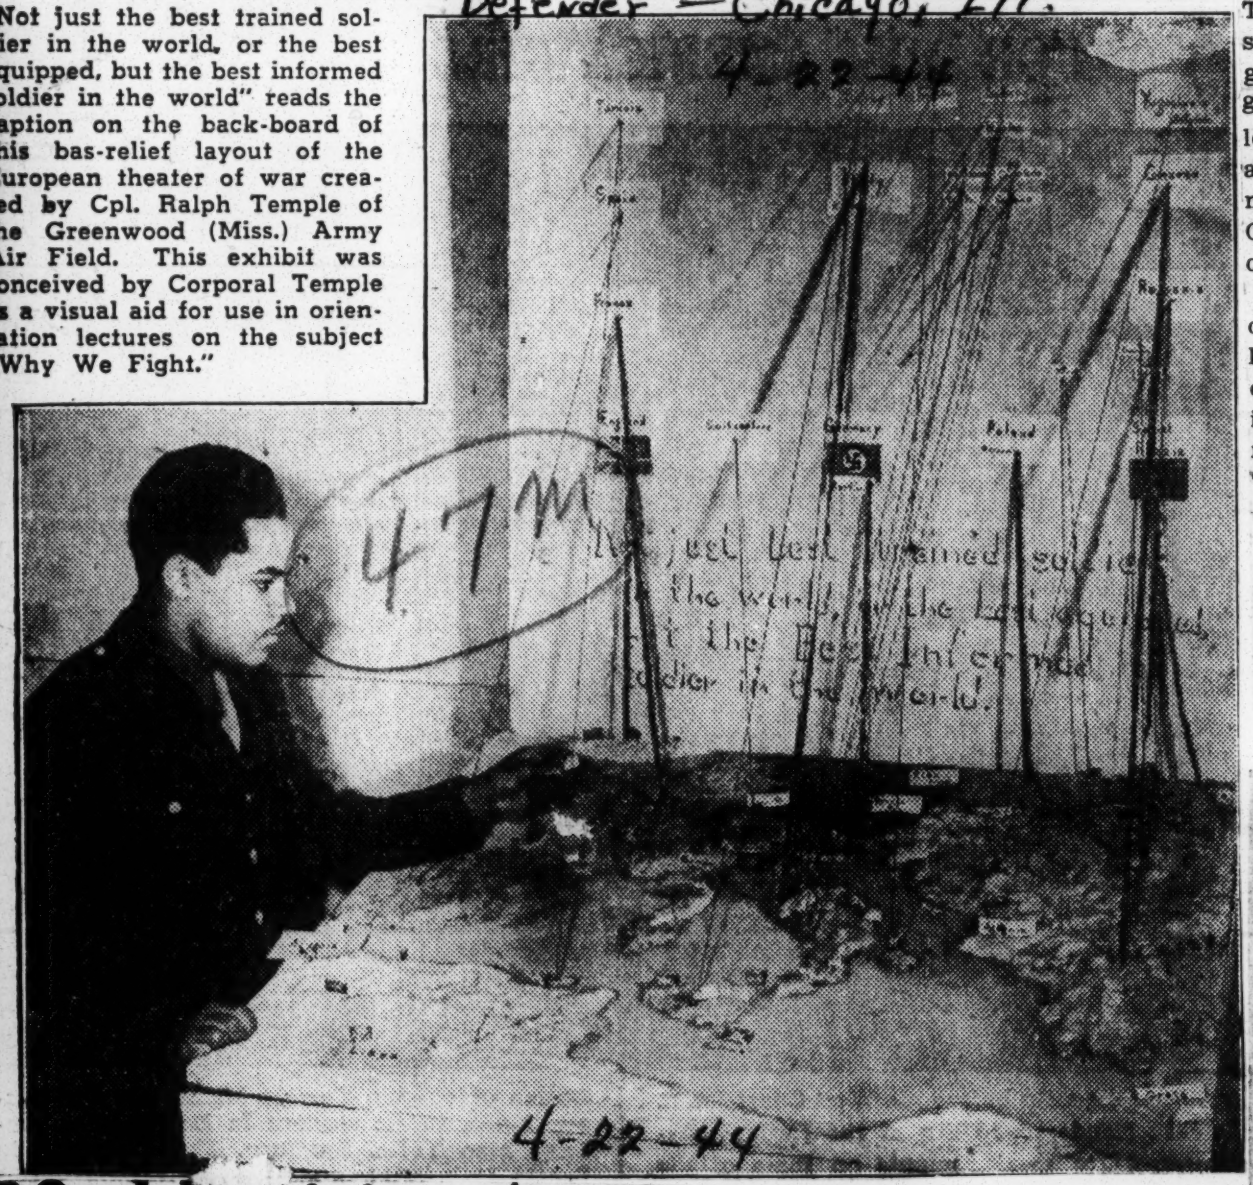
Later the leaders in command informed their men that their mission had been accomplished and ordered a strategic return to their command post. The entire patrol was commended for its excellent and effective work by Major General Robert B. McClure, commanding general of the division.

BEST INFORMED SOLDIER IN THE WORLD

Defender — Chicago, Ill.
4-22-44

"Not just the best trained soldier in the world, or the best equipped, but the best informed soldier in the world" reads the caption on the back-board of this bas-relief layout of the European theater of war created by Cpl. Ralph Temple of the Greenwood (Miss.) Army Air Field. This exhibit was conceived by Corporal Temple as a visual aid for use in orientation lectures on the subject "Why We Fight."



93rd Division Accounts for Many Japs at Bougainville

By Stander — Des Moines, Iowa.
5-11-44

Empress Augusta Bay, Bougainville, South Pacific—A Negro infantry unit of the 93rd Infantry Division fighting alongside the veteran American Division at Bougainville, has established a score of 99 Japanese killed and one taken prisoner the War Department announced today.

The presence of these combat troops in the South Pacific marks the first time that Negro ground soldiers have hunted down an enemy of the United States in this war. 5-11-44

"You don't have to worry about their ability to take care of themselves and beat the Japs at their own game," reported an Army combat correspondent who has been with the infantrymen since their initiation into the Bougainville campaign. This statement was reemphasized by Lieutenant Colonel James C. Roberts, San Antonio, Texas, who is intelligence officer of the 93rd division.

Stories of gallantry in action have trickled back from forward elements. Technical Sergeant Stephen H. Simpson, 23, of 1086 Grand Avenue, Nogales, Arizona, a medical corps surgical technician, who was detailed to lead a group into the jungle to evacuate a wounded man, has been commended by Major General Raymond G. Lehman, U. S. Army, Commander of the 93rd division.

Sergeant Simpson thwarted efforts of the Japanese to ambush his party, located and completed the evacuation of the wounded soldier, after destroying an enemy machine gun emplacement in which five Japs were killed. The rescue party suffered three losses in this encounter. 5-11-44

Asked what he thought of the future of Negro ground troops on Bougainville, Lieutenant Colonel Sammie I. Rossom, Sherman, Texas, a battalion commander said, "I think the men are going to get along alright."

54th Unit Praised For Routing Enemy

Monsterdam News — New York, N.Y.

Coast Artillery Elements Helped Bougainville Gain Title 'Gulch-Lined Graveyard of Pacific'

6-6-44

By FLETCHER P. MARTIN
(NNPA War Correspondent)—(Reproduction Prohibited.)

BOUGAINVILLE—(By Courier)—Working in harmony with the two Negro infantries here is the third member of the All-Negro team, elements of the 54th coast artillery. It has been this unit's handling of the heavy guns which have helped Bougainville attain the title, the gulch-lined graveyard of the blue Pacific. No site of battle shows more the effectiveness of artillery than yan's giant hand snatched them huge chunks of his base. Pill from the earth. Time and time boxes smashed beyond recognition. again the guns roared, baleful Installations pulverized. Trees orange flames leaping out. Dusty broken leaving splintered trunks. ground at our feet shuddered. Whole sections have been uprooted; Shell casings were snatched out— blistered craters remaining. cannoneers shoved new projectiles

Manning the 155 m. howitzers, home, gun commanders barked—these colored artillerymen are con- 'Battery ready, sir" stantly bludgeoning opposition. Fir- Intermittently the enemy coun- ing over open sights they have un- tered with a shell. One missile ex- mercifully barraged enemy posi- ploded 200 yards from us. Three tions with screaming, air-bursting men received flesh wounds, none shell fire. The 54th was the first considered serious. It was not many Negro unit to engage the enemy, days after until the enemy had (Feb. 17) and did not let up until ceased flying altogether.

the Japs fled beyond the ridge— The enemy is now in mad retreat leaving much ammunition. Recon- over the mountains. The infantry naissance showed the bivouac area and artillery are spurring him on— leveled, parts of bodies lined many at remarkable speed. At H-hour craters. during the night the guns strike,

During one twilight barrage, your devastation is great. The cannons correspondent watched sweating, old axiom is proven repeatedly— shirtless men at the helm of the there is no substitute for artillery. batteries fire 128 rounds at the Commanding the cannon-struck Ridge, 3,000 yards away. We could youngsters, is shrewd and well-read see dust clouding the air, trees Major R. W. Ely, Kansan. The only toppling over as though John Bun- Negro officer is Capt. Simeon

"Black Commandos" Get Burma Citation
Pittsburgh Courier
4-22-44

By GEORGE PADMORE
(London Correspondent)

They operated at night . . . making swift landings on enemy-held beaches . . . and returning with valuable information concerning Japanese strength and their positions.

LONDON—(Via Wireless)—"Black Commandos" from Nigeria, the Gold Coast, and Sierra Leone, all from the continent of Africa, were cited last week in London for the valuable support which they have given the British and Indian troops engaged in operations on the Burma front west

Gibson, Flint, Mich.; 1-Sgt. Ishmal
Cain, Arkansas City, Kansas; Master
Gunner, T-Sgt. Claude Kitchen, Jacksonville, Mo.; Gun Commander Sgt.
Edrean Holley, Norfolk, Va.; Searchlight operators, Sgt. David Smith, Mc-Keesport, Pa.; Pvt. Elwood Jones,
Philadelphia.

Cannoneers: Pvt. James Kinsey, Wake
Forest, N. C.; Pvt. Wilbert LeBlair,
Baltimore, Md.; Pvt. Rosbo Coleman,
Charleston, Miss.; Pvt. Dock Ervin,
Tarpoon Springs, Fla.; Ammunition
section, Pvt. Cyril Butts, Trinidad,
B. W. I.

guns in the face of Johnson, chaplain

Jersey—studious, tent. During one

Johnson watched pride. A piece of s overhead falling ne

piece of jaggered ir to remind himself

once came and how who man the guns flying shrapnel.'

Major Ely was a

troops, and especial

out: Gun com

Sgts. Major L.

Texas; DeWitt Robin

Jessie J. Jennings, E.

First Sergeant Rand

lumbia, Missouri; Ran

Ohio; Machine gunn

Beam, Louisville, Ke

chanic, Sgt. James H

ville.

Battalion Sgt. Ma

Major C-Sgt. John

plain of Roselle, New us, likeable, compe-

one barrage Capt.

his men with ed his

e of shrapnel whizzed

g near the chaplain.

t. Johnson keeps this ed iron in his pocket

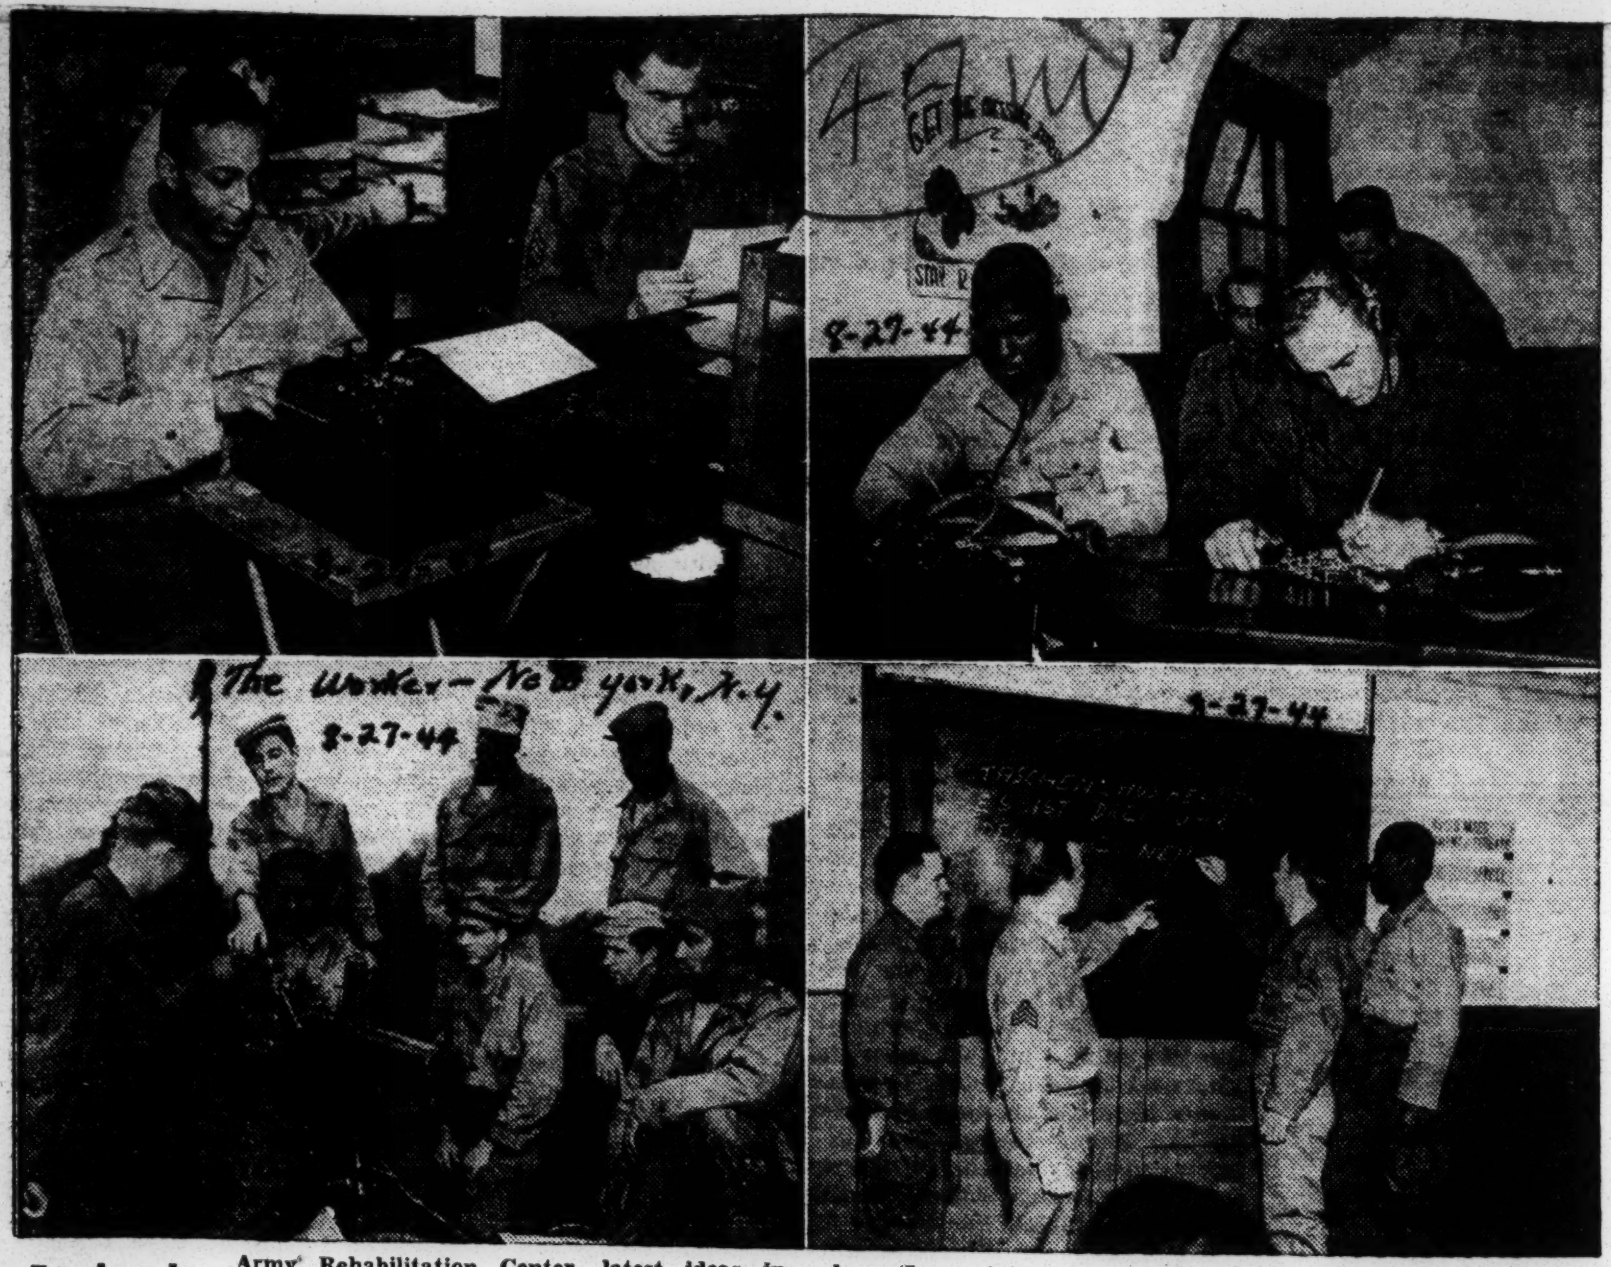
self how close death

d how men must feel

47m-1944



In England— Army Rehabilitation Center, latest ideas in medical science return 70 percent of the men to field duty within 60 days. Photos show (upper left) Pvt. Walter D. Seawright and T/Sgt. Chas. Uuksta working in hospital headquarters. (Upper right) Pvts. Claude Huey and Russell Cocklin in the Morse code class. (Lower left) A class in .30 calibre machinegun. (Lower right) Trainees get instructions in German. Left to right: Pfc. Lonnie Hughes, Sgt. Morris Hellman, S/Sgt. Litton Thomas and Pfc. Leroy Chatman.

698,911 Negroes in Army; One-Half Overseas

The Worker - New York, N.Y. 8-27-44

By JAMES W. FORD

The War Department's report on the number of Negroes in the armed forces of the United States and the part they are taking in the all-over fighting shows the big role they play in the defense of the nation. They are listed in all departments of the Army.

The report shows 698,911 Negroes serving in the Army on June 30, 1944. More than one-half—331,456—are serving overseas. This is 150,000 more than served overseas in the last war. There is a rise in the number of commissioned officers as compared to the last war. Negro soldiers are in every branch of Army service. This widely diversified use of Negro personnel never happened before in the history of the Army. Heretofore the policy was to regulate Negro personnel to non-combatant service, mainly laborers corps. 8-27-44

Negroes are performing heroically and brilliantly in the highest and most technical branches of the Army, notably the Air Corps.

NEGRO NURSES

The first contingent of Negro officers of the Army Nurse Corps has just arrived in the European Theater of Operations. The contingent was greeted by Brig. Gen. Benjamin O. Davis, America's ranking Negro officer. Capt Mary L. Petty of Chicago heads the contingent.

Serving under Capt. Petty are 63 officers from all parts of the country. They have a glorious record. Fifteen members of the unit have had previous foreign duty in the African campaign.

There are Negro Chaplains, serving both Negro and white soldiers.

There is Staff Sgt. John R. Gibson of New York City, whose company delivered the first cargo of supplies to Soviet Russia. He has just returned to the country after serving 18 months with a Quartermaster regiment in the Persian Gulf Command. 8-27-

MEANING OF DATA

A Negro processing unit is functioning perfectly at the Air Corps Command at Boca Raton, Fla.

The breakdown of the report on the Negroes in the Army shows 44,869 in the infantry; 38,517 in the coast and field artillery; 1,473 in the cavalry; 123,789 in engineers corps; 79,027 in Air Corps.

The balance, 406,226, are listed as "all others." It would have been well if these had been further broken down as to the number in the signal corps, marines and other branches of the Army.

These figures reveal a revolution in the use of Negro personnel by the Army. They show how extensive the process of the integration of Negroes is going on. It is a reflection of what is going on at the home front too: The Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes in Los Angeles voted to accept Negroes into the union. 8-27-44

It shows the democratization of the Army in reference to Negroes is making headway.

Credit is due our commander-in-chief, President Roosevelt, whose policies and leadership are forcing serious attention to this problem.

As one who served in the last war, I can say that the difference between the integration of Negro soldiers in the Army in the last war and today is the difference between night and day.

RIGHT TO VOTE

This report also reflects the patriotic response of Negro citizens in loyalty, in efficiency, in military elan.

If the integraton of the Negro soldier in the Army is to be further strengthened and morale of colored citizens on the home front raised, the right of Negro as well as white soldiers in the use of the voting ballot must be sustained and facilitated in time for them to vote in November. 8-27-44

Every obstructionist who Jimcrows Negro soldiers in the Army should be brought to task.

Jimcrow should be wiped out of the Army and full civil and military rights guaranteed to Negro soldiers.

It is inconceivable that a contingent of 689,011 Negro soldiers has only a complement of 5,987 colored commissioned officers. The Negro Army personnel should be increased in the number of generals, colonels, majors, captains, lieutenants and on down the line. Tens of thousands of lower rank soldiers carry officers' qualification in their knapsacks. 8-27-44

The breaking down of Jimcrow, stepping up promotions and the further distribution of Negro soldiers as full combatants will hasten the breaking of the back of the Hitler machine and the wiping out of Nazism. Full support of the commander-in-chief will help to bring about complete and full integration of Negroes into every phase of American life and make our Army truly democratic.

Units Chase Japs; One's Cut in Half

Amsterdam News New York, N.Y.

Hirohito's Boys Defeated At Their Own Game As Our Boys Win Furious Battle

By FLETCHER MARTIN
Amsterdam News Correspondent
(Representing the NNPA)
SOMEWHERE IN THE PACIFIC

Under the command of Lieut. Col. Arthur Amos, units of the 93d Division pulled a surprise on superior enemy forces at Bougainville last week and, after two days of fighting, the Japanese soldiers were driven back across the Laruma River.

In retreating, Hirohito's ground forces left 25 lifeless soldiers behind and probably 200 wounded.

The enemy was defeated at his own game. Our boys fought furiously and with great skill. Among the 93d dead and wounded, five pill boxes were blown to bits and much It was fought along the Numa Numa trail with our boys hurling grenades as accurately as the great Satchel Paige when the latter is tossing up strikes at Yankee Stadium.

Jap Cut In Half

One Japanese sniper was cut in half by machine gun fire when a 93d man began blazing away at the lower section of his body fell into a lake, but his grip on the troops across the Laruma River. The battle started early Monday tree limb remained firm until that portion of his body was liquidated by a grenade.

Most of the soldiers in the 93d units come from the South, especially South Carolina and Louisiana.

Lt. Col. Amos, a West Pointer, praised the men for their first showing in combat. Prior to their arrival, the men in the 93d had been trained for weeks and weeks in the technique of jungle warfare.

"If any man harbors any sentiment about killing," the commanding officer told his men, "I am warning you to abolish such thoughts. The only way to defeat the enemy is to kill him."

Admits Use Of 9th., 10th. As Service Units

4-15-44

NEW YORK — The 9th and 10th cavalry regiments, famous Negro Regular army units, have been converted into service troops, it has been admitted by the War department.

In a letter to Roy Wilkins, acting secretary of the NAACP, John J. McCloy, assistant secretary of War, included copy of a letter to Senator Robert A. Taft in which it was explained that the 9th and 10th—although not designated by name—have been used to provide certain additional service units to meet an early requirement of the highest importance."

In explaining the conversion of the famous old fighting regiments into service troops Mr. McCloy wrote Senator Taft:

"Unfortunately currently constituted service units were all committed to definite tasks. They cuold not be withdrawn from these tasks without seriously interfering with planned operations, and the short time available for the organization and training of the needed units made it imperative to utilize previously trained personnel. It was found that the only available source for such personnel was certain uncommitted combat units, including the Second Cavalry Division. 4-15-44

"As mentioned previously, the military situation demanded that trained personnel in considerable numbers be made immediately available. Since the Second Cavalry Division was the only source from which such personnel could be withdrawn without delaying the war effort, the War Department was compelled to effect this change in its utilization. Needless to say, the decision would necessarily have been the same had this division been composed of white personnel."

The 9th and 10th former part of the Second Cavalry Division which had been training in Fort Clark, Texas.

Trail Of Glory That Started In France Is Picked Up In Pacific

Informer — Houston, Texas

4-15-44

By FLETCHER MARTIN
(Informer-NNPA War Correspondent)
Copyright. Reproduction prohibited

BOUGAINVILLE — The 93rd division has seen its first action in World War Two. Picking up the glorious trail that ended in France, elements of the famous outfit went into action April 3rd when superior Jap forces opened mass infantry fire and were completely routed by the colored boys.

In its initial action the 93rd killed 25 Japs, blew up five pill boxes, and captured considerable enemy equipment.

For two days both forces fought with rage and skill on rain-drenched earth along the Numa Numa trail, in the vicinity of the Laruma river, just five thousand yards of the beachhead held by American forces.

The 93rd forces along the trail under heavy fire, and using automatic rifles, machine guns, mortars, grenades, and bazookas, drove the enemy from entrenchments in what was described as—unshirted hell.

4-15-44

The main mission assigned to the unit was to find and destroy huge enemy forces believed hiding along the Numa Numa trail in mountainous ridges, which gave them command of a strategic valley.

The trail ran down into Jap positions and it would have meant suicide for any troops to storm through the cleverly erected fortress, for the trail, led to a ridge that was covered by automatic fire.

Texan Is Hero

The 93rd forces, led by Lt. Col. Arthur Amos, a West Pointer crossed the Laruma river, and marching up the west bank, flanked enemy positions. Lt. DeWitt Cook, a colored officer of La Grange, Texas, carved a place in the glory niche for himself when he, along with Lt. Robert Banks, of Alburquerque, New Mexico, protected the troops with automatic fire.

4-15-44

Col. Amos reported that two snipers were torn from trees overlooking a small body of water, and one was cut in two by machine gun fire. After the coast was clear, the colored troops recrossed the Laruma to the enemy side and marched up a ridge to wage battle at close hand.

To silence menacing enemy pill boxes, Captain Frederick Douglas Rankins, of Alexandria, La., called up bazooka men, including Sgt. Will Morey, of Greenville, Miss., and they crawled along the bank to a point from where five emplacements were blown up with eight shots.

In one of the destroyed pill boxes two enemy officers were blown to bits. Col. Amos said such shooting deserves a special award and assured that he would recommend such.

Elements of a veteran American division fighting side by side with the colored troops expressed surprise at the ability displayed by the latter in their initial jungle fighting. 4-15-44

The Japs withdrew on the second day, leaving their dead. The 93rd suffered three slight casualties, but none were considered serious.

Troops Praised

As the troops returned, muddy and sweating, and resembling a bunch of youngsters who had just won the homecoming game, Col. Amos declared that they were up to any fighting men in the Pacific. Other officers expressed the same opinion. 4-15-44

Discussing recent developments on Bougainville in which Negroes have played a major part, Major General Oscar Griswold concluded that Negro troops have made an excellent start in jungle combat and will be well fitted to travel the tough road ahead.

The general emphasized that although the Japs were on the run after making futile attempt to wrest the beachhead from the Americans, there still remains thousands of them in the dark jungles.

He admitted that the Nips have proved good soldiers, especially the division that the 93rd is embattled with. It saw action in China, and helped in the "rape" of Nanking. He warned that if any American troops harbor sentiment over killing, such must be abolished, adding that killing is the only method by which the enemy can be defeated. 4-15-44

"Five thousand Japs have been killed here, but hundreds of thousands must be killed in days to come. I am glad Negroes are in the thick of it and that they started under my command," the grap, gaunt general asserted.

24th Digs In

The 24th Infantry, a menace to the Japs in recent weeks, are outside of the perimeter, holding a fort after digging in to secure the towering ridge that they waged a gallant fight ot win.

92d Division Fighting in Italy

Post — Washington, D.C.

8-29-44

Rome, Aug. 28 (AP).—Elements of the all-Negro Ninety-Second Division have been in action with the United States Fifth Army, and the division's first man to give his life in the Italian theater was a captain, commander of a company, who was killed by mortar fire while going forward in a reconnaissance mission.

The Ninety-Second activated in September, 1942, at Camp Breckenridge, Ky., arrived in Italy July 13 with its own artillery, antiaircraft and communications and supply.

The division was fed into the line within a fortnight after its arrival. The name of its commanding officer was withheld.

Negro Nurses Tend German Prisoners

LONDON — The all-Negro nursing unit which arrived in the United Kingdom last August, is devoting its attention to nursing German war prisoners in England, a recent report disclosed.

92nd Patrol First to Cross Arno

Afro American
Baltimore, Md.

By ART CARTER
AFRO War Correspondent with U.S. Troops in Italy
[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

9-30-44

WITH FIFTH ARMY IN ITALY (By Air Mail)—Looking back at the first successful effort of the combat team of the 92nd Division on September 1, when one of its reconnaissance patrols sloshed across the Arno River to spark the current Allied drive against the Gothic Line, the name of Lt. Jake Chandler, Toledo, Ohio, stands out.

Lieutenant Chandler, an ex-policeman of Toledo, led the patrol which made the crossing between Florence and Pisa—the initial crossing by any Allied men in strength. Among those in that first partol were:

Those in Patrol

First Sgt. Jack Ellis, Dayton, Ohio; Sgts. Ida Claiborne, Charleston, S.C.; William Harrison, Cleveland, Ohio; Eldridge Beverly, Washington, D.C.; Elvyn Davidson, NYC; Willis Kinney, Fulton, Ky.; Alonzo Cannon, Cleveland;

9-30-44

Cpl. Clarence Purnell, Norfolk, Va.; T/5 Robert Locey, a company mail clerk, who volunteered to go on the dangerous mission; Sgt. Bonnie Evans, Cape Girado, Mo.; Pvt. Leonard Reid, NYC; Pvt. John Toney, Milwaukee. Wis.;

Happy to Be in Attack

Pfcs. Frankie Pratt, Lompos, Texas; Clifford Banks, St. Louis, Mo.; Maxie Smith, Birmingham, Ala.; Jeff Jones, Greenville, S.C.; Shelton Seay, Memphis, Tenn.; Freck Reese, Akron, Ohio; Edward Washington, New Orleans, La.; Rufus Thomas, St. Louis, and Leroy Frank, Church Point, La.

After this patrol's success, other patrols sloshed through the mud and shallow waters all during the day, getting the offensive under way in a major manner.

Pfc. John H. Temple, Raleigh, N.C., remarked that all the men were "sure happy" to be in on the attack, and as a matter of record, they wanted everyone to know who made the initial crossing of the Arno.

Five Negro Soldiers Receive Transfers

Age — New York, N.Y.

8-19-44

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Negro soldiers are taking advantage of the new policy physically qualified of- applications for transfer approved: ville, Tennessee.

Private First Class James A. Perry, of Route 2, Austin, Texas.

Private First Class Ernest H. Roboblt, jr., of 2125 Druid Hill avenue, Baltimore, Maryland.

Private Nathaniel Jardin, of Atmore, Alabama.

Private Walter E. Chandler, of 1104 North Adams street, Knox-

To Parachute Unit

a opted only from personnel at In- men in critical a fantry and Artillery Replacement Following are the names of five Training Centers, but under the Negro soldiers who have had their ing accepted from all branches of Forces or Army S are eligible for the Army.

In the past, applications had been exception of certain highly skilled troops since the War Department announced that volunteers are be- opportunity to serve with parachute ficers and enlisted men under 32 years of age in other Army Ground Forces units for transfer, with the

47m-1944

First Negro Soldier To Kill A Jap

PRIVATE JAMES H. O'BANNER, young Sidon, Mississippi infantryman, the first Negro to kill a Jap on Bougainville Island, was recently congratulated by Maj. Gen. Robert B. McClure, commanding the veteran Americal (that correct—Americal) Division. O'Banner's outfit, a unit of the 93d Division, is attached to Americal at Bougainville. He bagged his Nip with a carbine shot at a range of ten yards during a jungle patrol shortly after Negro troops arrived on this northernmost Solomons Island. Talking it over with him above is Lt. Col. James C. Roberts of San Antonio, Texas, intelligence officer with the 93d. (U. S. Army Signal Corps Photo.)

C.-J. Photo.

PLANNING a glee club program are Wendell P. Talbert, left, director of the 272th Infantry Glee Club, Camp Breckinridge, and J. V. Norman, chairman of the Louisville U.S.O. Council, while the featured singer, Pvt. Charles M. Holland, standing, makes a suggestion.

292d Infantry's Glee Club Makes Debut Here Today

Courier—Journal—Louisville, Ky.
9-24-44

By JOE DUNCAN.

Forty-five rich-voiced Negro soldiers who "train all day day and sing all night" will appear here when Camp Breckinridge's 272d Infantry Glee Club makes its Louisville debut at 8 p.m. today at Memorial Auditorium.

The group, under the direction of Wendell Talbert, of the National U.S.O. Music Council, started last November with eighteen soldier-singers who, with a ten-day concert deadline to meet, presented a War Fund singing program that immediately had both the Army and the public asking for more.

Concert to Be Free.

Talbert explained that when he promised a glee club concert in ten days he really didn't have a single man. Today, he said, the organization is widely known through its coast-to-coast and short-wave broadcasts and its many phonograph recordings.

The group is being brought to Louisville through the co-operation of J. Van Dyke Norman, Jr., chairman of the U.S.O. Council here, and the Chestnut Street Street Negro U.S.O. Club. The concert will be free and open to the public. 9-24-44

Spirituals Scheduled.

The star soloist with the singers is Pvt. Charles Holland, young tenor well known to the prewar musical world through his screen appearances in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer pictures, and his radio performances. Two of his favorites, Sullivan's popular "The Lost Chord," and Talbert's original composition, "Honey," will be presented.

A portion of the program will be devoted to such spirituals as "Go Down Moses," "Roll Jordon Roll," and "Moan Chillun Moan." Other choral numbers include Sibelius's "Finlandia," Petry's "Asleep in the Deep," Talbert's arrangement of "Silvery Moon" and several other public favorites.

2 to 'Tickle Ivories'.

Hot piano solos—both classical and light—will be presented by Cpl. Charles Beal and Pvt. Gordon Anderson. First Lt. Fitzgerald Paul, officer in charge of the group, says he becomes just another singer when the men rehearse or tour Kentucky or Indiana at night or on week ends.

The glee club will appear on Sunday School and church service programs this morning at the Fourth Street Methodist Church.

$250,000 Mark Reached In Negro College Fund Drive

Journal & Guide—Norfolk, Va.
6-3-44

NEW YORK, N. Y.—In a nationwide campaign for $1,500,000 for maintenance of 27 accredited private Negro colleges and universities, the United Negro College Fund has reached a total of $252,000, it was announced this week by Walter Hoving, national campaign chairman.

"It has been encouraging to note the support given by corporations," Mr. Hoving said. The campaign in several cities is just getting started.

CITES NEED AS GREAT

Mr. Hoving pointed out that, were it not for these 27 Negro colleges, the greatest source for grammar school teachers throughout the South would cease to exist.

"Eighty-one per cent of college-trained Negroes work as teachers or in other professions directly for the enlightenment of their own people," he said.

The fund's national headquarters are at 38 East 57th street, New York City.

6-3-44

TRENT BROADCAST

William J. Trent Jr., executive secretary of the fund, spoke over Station WQXR recently. The Howard University Glee Club, directed by Warner Lawson, furnished music.

Mr. Trent urged support by all citizens, white and Negro, in the drive to raise $1,500,000.

white persons on the post inviting them to the white services which were to be held at Whiteside School. 7-29-44 The colored soldiers hold their services at Post Theater No. 1, where the 92nd Division will remain on that he will work under a white chaplain who is a Cnaplain Haynes was introduced that he had withdrawn at the initial services as the "new post chaplain."

to this:

Martin to Be Assistant

Chaplain Martin will remain on the post where he is stationed at present, as assistant chaplain, in charge of the colored services; that he will work under the new white chaplain who is a

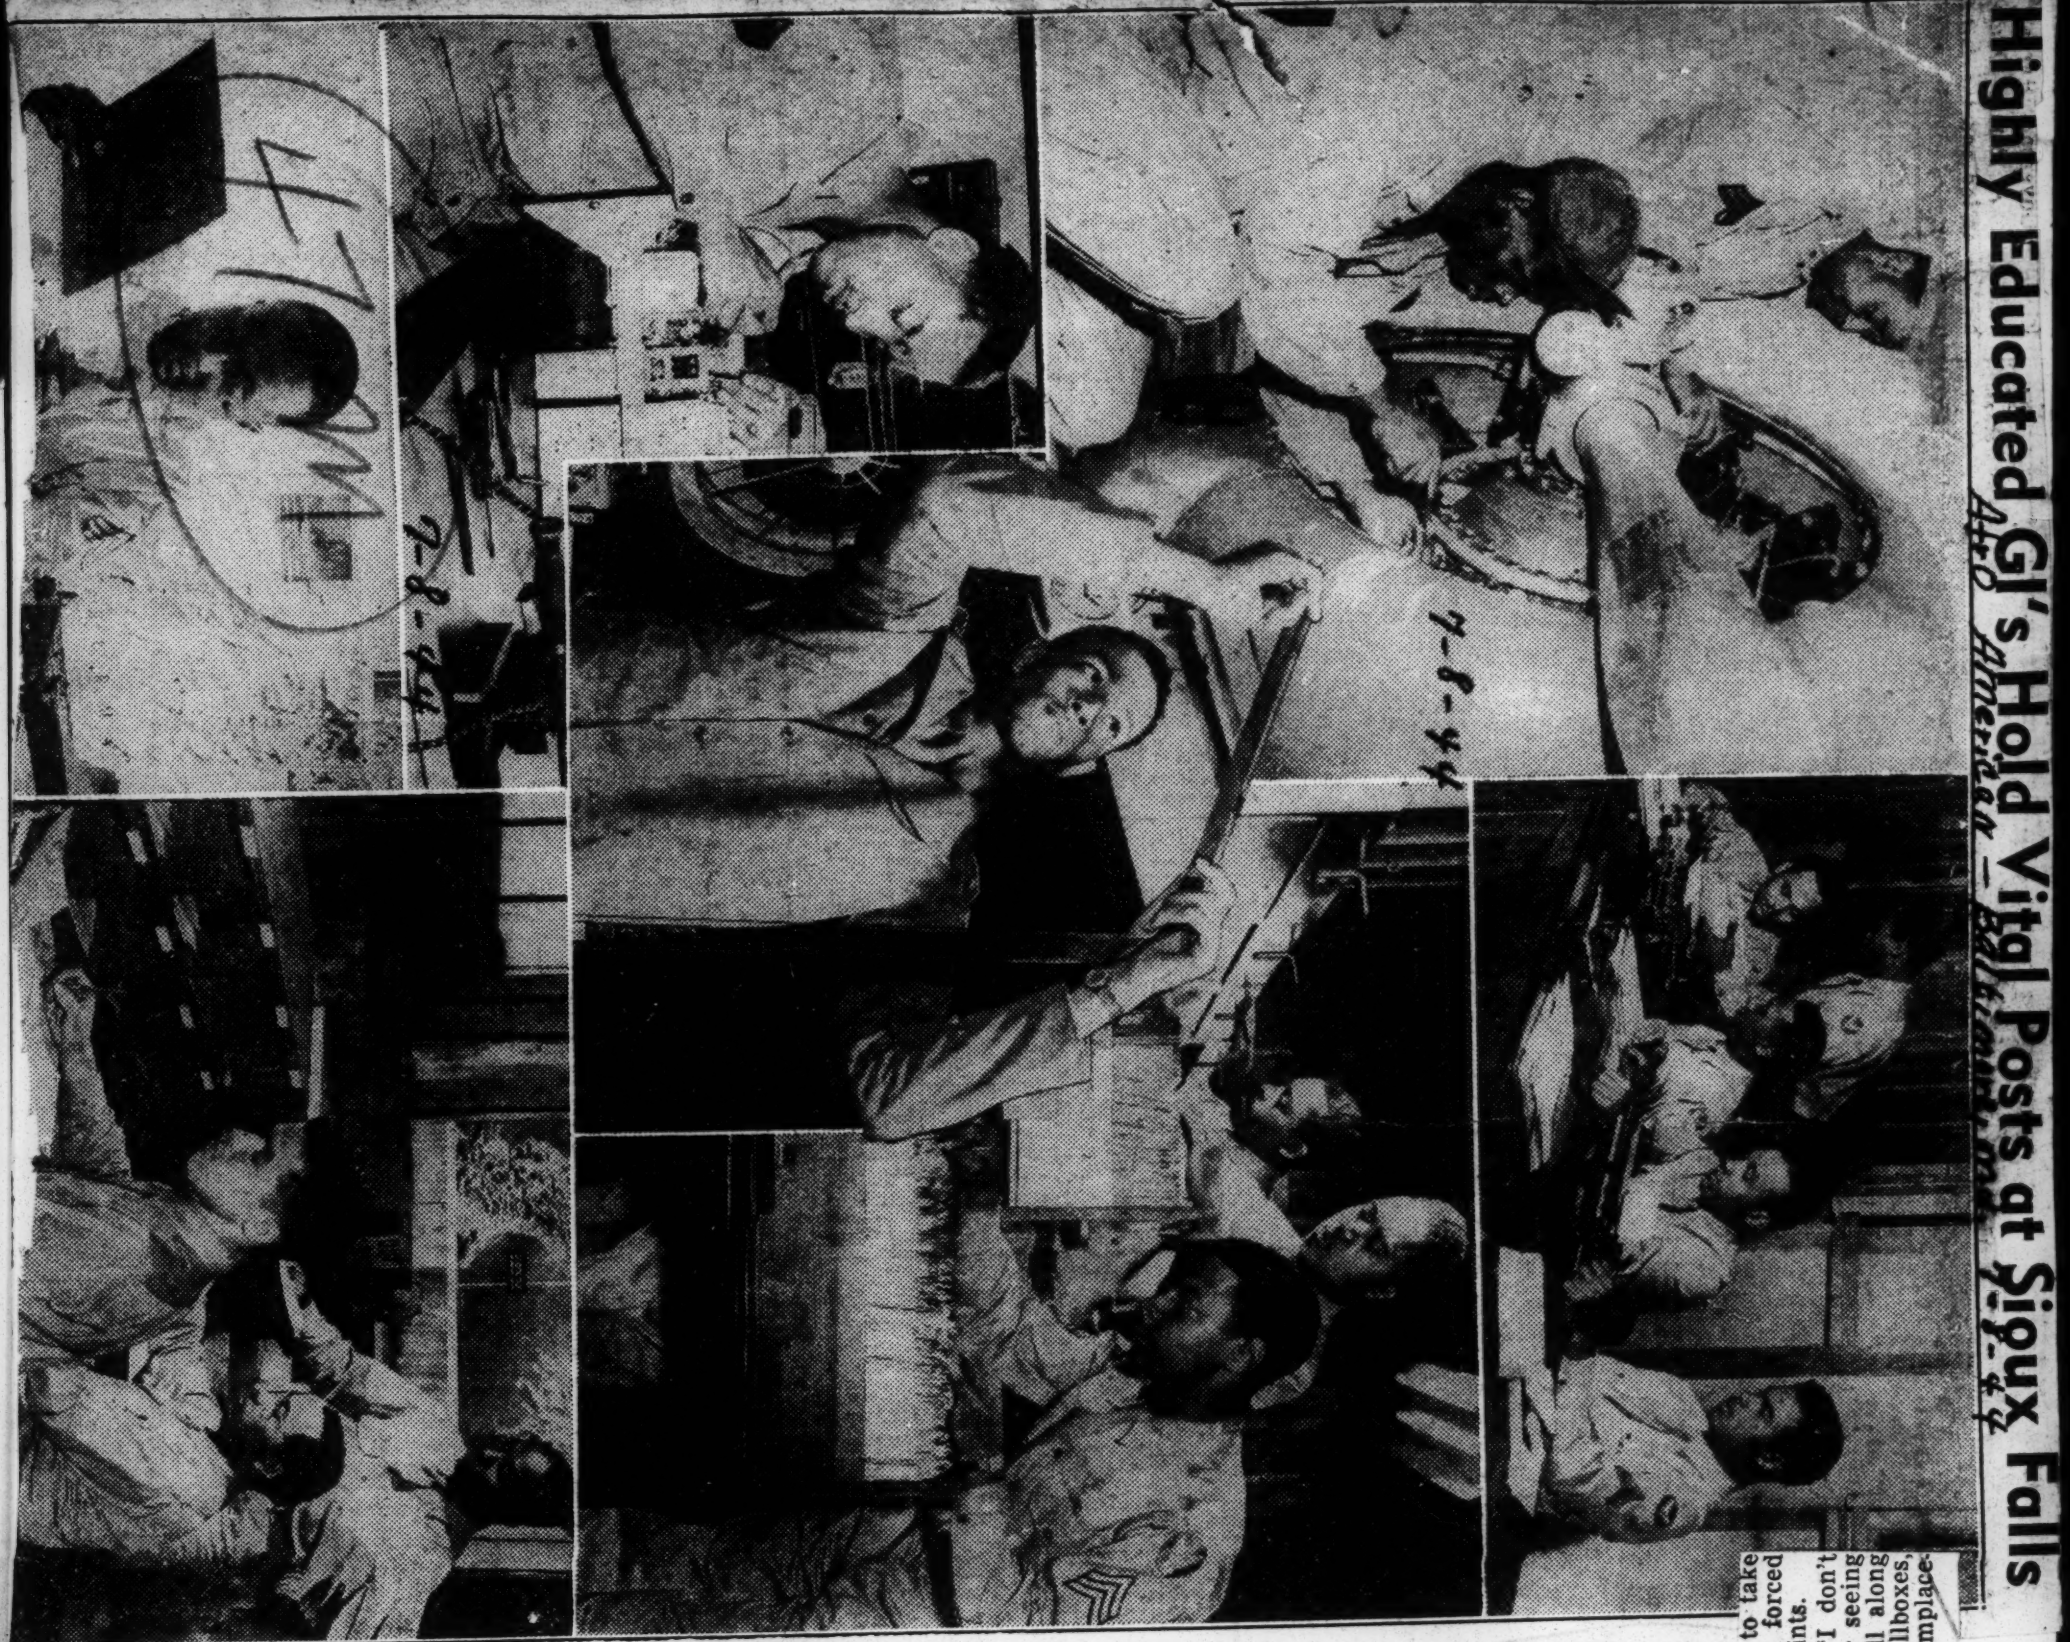
92nd Colored Division Given White Chaplain

Afro-American—Baltimore, Md.
7-29-44

FORT HUACHUCA, Ariz. — Chaplain Andrew H. Martin, whoa white chaplain assigned. The AFRO was unable to get Aubrey C. Haynes, white, has been relieved of his duties as post chaplain, and his request for transfer. Upon the arrival of Chaplain

Highly Educated GI's Hold Vital Posts at Sioux Falls

Afro American — Baltimore, Md.



7-8-44

Highly-educated and well-trained colored soldiers stationed at the AAF Training Command Radio School at Sioux Falls (South Dakota) Army Air Field hold many key jobs. Upper left: Sgt. LeRoy McCauley (seated), of Newark, N.J., and Sgt. Melvin Williams, of Philadelphia, check the "nose" of an AT-18. Upper right: (left to right) Pvt. Howard A. Cooley, Chicago; Cpl. Robert L. Allensworth, Terre Haute, Ind.; Cpl. Chicuella C. Hillman, Montclair, N.J.; Pvt. Arthur B. Sykes, Baltimore, Md., and Sgt. Frank D. Prime, Pittsburgh, process records of incoming soldiers. Center row: (left) S/Sgt. Leon M. Houston, Austin, Texas, repairs damaged radio set; (center) Sgt. Henry C. Kimbrough, New York City, examines film strip in Post theatre projection room; (right) Pfc. Jeffrey D. Chatman, New Albany, Ind.; Pvt. Sterling L. Charleston, Bluefield, W. Va., and Sgt. Wilbur B. Strayhorn, Chicago (left to right), check the files in the unit personnel office. Bottom row: (left) Sgt. Elmer T. Kemp, Washington, D.C., edits the Post history; (right) Pvt. Sheley F. Lymen, Frankfort, Ky.; Pvt. Lawrence C. Collins, Pensacola, Fla., and Pfc. Edward W. Harris, Inkster, Mich., sort mail in the message center. (Photos by Army Air Forces.)

Tan Yanks Earned Large Share of Invasion Glory

Afro American — Baltimore, Md.

7-15-44

By OLLIE STEWART

AFRO War Correspondent With Invasion Forces in France

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

WITH ADVANCED AMERICAN FORCES IN FRANCE — (By Cable, Censored)—Stories of heroic deeds by colored troops have come to me from every angle since my arrival on a Normandy beachhead exactly one month after departure from the U.S.A.

Leaving from England, colored soldiers loaded us on a boat, others accompanied us over, and still others unloaded us and much equipment on the beach they helped win from the enemy during the first few days of the invasion.

7-15-44

I am writing this beneath an apple tree by the roadside, with fat cattle grazing nearby, unmindful of the trucks rushing to the front with men and supplies, or of the incessant pounding of artillery not far up the road. 7-15-44

All last night, guns shook the ground on which I slept. Our long toms slugged it out with German 88's in a duel that has no end.

With QM Outfit

I am staying with a quartermaster outfit whose medical officer is Capt. Charles I. West of Washington, brother of Maj. John B. West. In the next tent is Warrant Officer Vincent Piedra of New York.

The outfit already has five purple hearts for wounds resulting from enemy action, awarded to Staff Sergeant Leo Chenault, Indianapolis; Pfc. Clordie Caldwell, Kings Creek, N.C.; Pfc. Wilfert Fox, Jonesboro, N.C.; Pfc. Arlander Barker, Chicago, and Pfc. Austin Anderson, Wilmington, Del.

Cpl. Downs Plane

Another unit has among its personnel Cpl. John Hawkins of Pine Bluff, Ark., who shot down a German plane on D-Day while landing under fire with a trucking company. Hawkins used a 50-calibre machine gun mounted on the truck to down the raider, which was attempting to strafe a troop concentration. 7-15-44

The Nazi pilot bailed out and was later captured.

Pvt. George McClain, 2263 E. 95th Street, Cleveland, Ohio, helped capture a German on D-Day soon after landing. The same day he went to the front before he knew it—driving a load of infantrymen up the road into a town still held by the Germans, but he made a quick turn and fled under fire by both sides.

Their trucks waterproofed, to take part in the assault that forced Jerry from his strong points.

Many are still saying, "I don't know how we did it, after seeing how Jerry was dug in." All along the beach were concrete pillboxes, barbed wire and gun emplacements.

Valor Tales Echo

7-15-44

Everywhere I go are tales of our lads who waded ashore in water up to their necks, with

Highly Educated GI's Hold Vital Posts at Sioux Falls

AFRO American — Baltimore, Md.

7-8-44

Highly-educated and well-trained colored soldiers stationed at the AAF Training Command Radio School at Sioux Falls (South Dakota) Army Air Field hold many key jobs. Upper left: Sgt. LeRoy McCauley (seated), of Newark, N.J., and Sgt. Melvin Williams, of Philadelphia, check the "nose" of an AT-18. Upper right: (left to right) Pvt. Howard A. Cooley, Chicago; Cpl. Robert L. Allensworth, Terre Haute, Ind.; Cpl. Chicuella C. Hillman, Montclair, N.J.; Pvt. Arthur B. Sykes, Baltimore, Md., and Sgt. Frank D. Prime, Pittsburgh, process records of incoming soldiers. Center row: (left) S/Sgt. Leon M. Houston, Austin, Texas, repairs damaged radio set; (center) Sgt. Henry C. Kimbrough, New York City, examines film strip in Post theatre projection room: (right) Pfc. Jeffrey D. Chatman, New Albany, Ind.; Pvt. Sterling L. Charleston, Bluefield, W. Va., and Sgt. Wilbur B. Strayhorn, Chicago (left to right), check the files in the unit personnel office. Bottom row: (left) Sgt. Elmer T. Kemp, Washington, D.C., edits the Post history; (right) Pvt. Sheley F. Lymen, Frankfort, Ky.; Pvt. Lawrence C. Collins, Pensacola, Fla., and Pfc. Edward W. Harris, Inkster, Mich., sort mail in the message center.

(Photos by Army Air Forces.)

Tan Yanks Earned Large Share of Invasion Glory

Afro American — Baltimore, Md.

7-15-44

By OLLIE STEWART

AFRO War Correspondent With Invasion Forces in France

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

WITH ADVANCED AMERICAN FORCES IN FRANCE — (By Cable, Censored)—Stories of heroic deeds by colored troops have come to me from every angle since my arrival on a Normandy beachhead exactly one month after departure from the U.S.A.

Leaving from England, colored soldiers loaded us on a boat, others accompanied us over, and still others unloaded us and much equipment on the beach they helped win from the enemy during the first few days of the invasion.

7-15-44

I am writing this beneath an apple tree by the roadside, with fat cattle grazing nearby, unmindful of the trucks rushing to the front with men and supplies, or of the incessant pounding of artillery not far up the road.

7-15-44

All last night, guns shook the ground on which I slept. Our long toms slugged it out with German 88's in a duel that has no end.

With QM Outfit

I am staying with a quartermaster outfit whose medical officer is Capt. Charles I. West of Washington, brother of Maj. John B. West. In the next tent is Warrant Officer Vincent Piedra of New York.

The outfit already has five purple hearts for wounds resulting from enemy action, awarded to Staff Sergeant Leo Chenault, Indianapolis; Pfc. Clordie Caldwell, Kings Creek, N.C.; Pfc. Wilfert Fox, Jonesboro, N.C.; Pfc. Arlander Barker, Chicago, and Pfc. Austin Anderson, Wilmington, Del.

Cpl. Downs Plane

Another unit has among its personnel Cpl. John Hawkins of Pine Bluff, Ark., who shot down a German plane on D-Day while landing under fire with a trucking company. Hawkins used a 50-calibre machine gun mounted on the truck to down the raider, which was attempting to strafe a troop concentration.

7-15-44

The Nazi pilot bailed out and was later captured.

Pvt. George McClain, 2263 E. 95th Street, Cleveland, Ohio, helped capture a German on D-Day soon after landing. The same day he went to the front before he knew it—driving a load of infantrymen up the road into a town still held by the Germans, but he made a quick turn and fled under fire by both sides.

Valor Tales Echo

7-15-44

Everywhere I go are tales of our lads who waded ashore in water up to their necks, with their their their

Red Cross Blames War Dept. for Britain's J.C.

Afro-American - Baltimore, Md.
1-8-44

Statement of Organization Head in England Says All Clubs Are Open to Colored

By MARGARET LEWIS

The American Red Cross has laid at the door of military authorities blame for discrimination in its clubs in Great Britain.

Harvey D. Gibson, commissioner for the Red Cross in Britain, in plain language has issued a statement of policy that colored troops serving in that area are "entitled to utilize all American Red Cross services provided for American forces."

He adds: "All members of the staff of the commission to Great Britain are, irrespective of race, class or creed, in relation to position to which assigned, of equal standing and entitled to the same American Red Cross consideration, privileges, benefits and advantages."

Orders from Army Officer

This would lend credence to the report that Truman K. Gibson, civilian aide to the Secretary of War, is attempting to straighten out with War Department authorities orders issued by a commanding officer in England to his subordinates to the effect that colored troops were to be treated in a certain manner, in addition to being jim-crowed in certain taverns, Red Cross clubs, bars and public places.

The lid on the situation was blown off several weeks ago by the mass resignation of colored Red Cross workers in London after these employees understood that John Dierkies, whose administration they liked, had been replaced in authority by five area directors. 1-8-44

Commissioner Gibson hastily acted to straighten the matter out, creating a policy board of five workers, on which there is colored representation, and giving employees the power to approach him at all times on any important unsettled issues.

47m-1944

Bond Rally

Adam Powell Addresses Times Square Bond Rally

People's Voice — New York, N.Y.
7-1-44

Harlem took over the huge "Cash Register" in Times Square Friday noon, providing entertainers and speakers

7-1-44

CONGRESSIONAL CANDIDATE Adam C. Powell, jr, (1) and Ralph Cooper, well-known emcee and entertainer, urge thousands swarming in the Times Square area last Friday, to support the Fifth War Loan—(PV foto).

as its share in helping the cash register to total up New York City's quota in the 5th War Loan Drive. A forceful plea for public purchase of war bonds was made by Adam Clayton Powell, candidate for Congress, as he was introduced by master of ceremonies Ralph Cooper.

The Abyssinian Baptist Church pastor told the Times Square throngs that in this national bond drive, there was no such thing as color, no such thing as race. "Harlem is as much a part of this bond effort as any other part of this great city of ours," he said, bringing out his point that Negro soldiers abroad are in there slugging with both fists, just like all other racial groups.

7-1-44

"There are 500,000 Negroes in Harlem," said Rev. Powell, "and they are behind this bond drive along with all New Yorkers. There are 1,000,000 Negroes in this war effort, wearing the uniform of their country."

Others on program included, aside from Powell and Ralph Cooper, several girls from the cast of Helen Goes To Troy, Cab Smith and his band from the Elks Rendezvous, Muriel Rahn, former star of Carmen Jones, and officials of the bond drive.

Race's financial institutions put $20,000,000 in war bonds

Tribune — Los Angeles, Calif.
7-17-44

WASHINGTON — Negro banks and insurance companies have invested upwards of $20,000,000 in War Bonds since the fall of 1941, the Treasury Department announced this week on the basis of a survey by the National Negro Business League.

As of May 1, the survey revealed 28 member companies of the National Negro Insurance Association with total war bond holdings of $12,953,196, and 10 Negro banks with holdings of $4,605,928. This survey did not include war bond purchases of $2,763,000 reported by the insurance association during the first two weeks of the Fifth War Loan drive.

7-17-44

Setting the pace among insurance firms was the North Carolina Mutual of Durham, N. C., with holdings of $3,075,400; the Atlanta (Ga.) Life Insurance Co., with $3,462,500, and the Supreme Camp American Woodmen, of Denver, Colorado, with $1,200,172.

Leading the list of War Bond purchases among banking firms was the Citizens and Southern Bank and Trust Co., of Philadelphia, with $1,307,678; the Citizens Trust Co., of Atlanta, with $963,269, and the Crown Savings Bank, of Newport News, Va., with $780,000.

NAACP Buys $40,000 In Bonds To Honor 99th

Defender — Chicago, Ill.
7-15-44

NEW YORK — The purchase of $40,000 worth of Fifth War Loan Bonds by the NAACP in honor of two crack 99th Pursuit Squadron pilots, Capts. Charles B. Hall and Lemuel Rodney Custis, was announced this week by Walter White, secretary of the NAACP.

Both flyers praised the current program of the NAACP to gain full democratic rights for Negroes. White stated that while serving as a war correspondent in the European area, the question asked by most colored soldiers was "To what will we return in America? Will it be only to shoeshining jobs and the Ku Klux Klan?"

47m-1944

54th Coast Artillery Also Blasting Japs

Daily World - Atlanta, Ga.

5-2-44

By FLETCHER P. MARTIN

(War Correspondent of Atlanta Daily World and NNPA

BOUGAINVILLE — (By Courier) — Working in harmony with the two Negro infantries here is the third member of the All-Negro team elements of the 54th coast artillery. It has been this unit's handling of the heavy guns which have helped Bougainville attain the title the gulch-lined graveyard of the blue Pacific. No site of battle shows more the effectiveness of artillery than huge chunks of this base. Pill boxes smashed beyond recognition. Installations pulverized. Trees broken leaving splintered trunks. Whole sections have been uprooted; blistered craters remaining.

Manning the 155 mm. howitzers, these colored artillerymen are constantly bludgeoning opposition. Firing over open sights they have unmercifully barraged enemy positions with screaming, air-burst ing shell fire. The 54th was the first Negro unit to engage the enemy (February 17) and did not let up until the Japs fled beyond the ridge — leaving much ammunition. Reconnaissance showed their bivouac area leveled, parts of bodies lined many craters. 5-2-44

THOROUGHLY TRAINED

There was some question whether this unit could be used as field artillery since its stipulated mission was coast defense. One fact was definitely known, the men had been thoroughly trained, they knew their weapons. Another factor, enemy troops were nearing the perimeter. The ridge, rugged and blue against the sky, was pregnant with Jap 75 mm. and 105 mm. weapons. They were hurling missiles into the bowels of the perimeter. The 54th pulled their guns inland, and with other batteries, pointed the ugly muzzles toward the knobs.

During one twilight barrage, your correspondent watched sweating, shirtless men at the helm of the batteries fire 128 rounds at the ridge 3000 yards away. We could see dust clouding the air, trees toppling as though John Bunyan's giant hand snatched them from the earth. Time and again the guns roared, baleful orange flames leaping out. Dusty ground at our feet shuddered. Shell casings were snatched out, — cannoneers shoved new projectiles home, gun commanders barked — "Battery ready, fire!" 5-2-44

Intermittently the enemy countered with shell. One missle exploded 200 yards from us. Three men received flesh wounds, none considered serious. It was not many days after until the enemy had ceased firing altogether. Most of his mountain artillery had been smashed, what remained he must have carted away. The firefright became a one-side affair. Our guns were turned on his infantry—firing point blank into thousands of befuddled enemy troops. Screams could be heard along the line as the enemy was blown apart.

ENEMY IN RETREAT

The enemy is now in mad retreat over the mountains. The infantry and artillery are spurring him on—at remarkable speed. At H-hour during the night the guns strike, devastation is great. The cannons fight with skill and valor. The age-old axiom is proven repeatedly — there is no sibstitute for artillery.

Commanding the cannon-stuck youngsters is shrewd and well-read Major R. W. Ely, Kansan. The only Negro officer is Capt. Simeon Johnson, chaplain of Roselle, N. J., studious, likeable, competent. During one barrage Capt. Johnson watched his men with pride. A piece of shrapnel whizzed overhead falling near the chaplain. Since, Capt. Johnson keeps this piece of jaggered iron in his pocket to remind himself how close death once came and how men must feel who man the guns in the face of flying shrapnel. 5-2-44

Major Ely was all praise for his troops, and especially did he point out: Gun commanders: Sgts. Major L. Barron, Malakoff, Texas: DeWitt Robinson, Gary, Texas, and Jesse J. Jennings, E. Columbus, Texas; First Sergeant Randall Henson, Columbia, Mo., Range Section, S-Sgt. Jesse Bay, Houston, Texas; Observer Captain James Thacker, Richmond, Va.; Plotter, T-5 William Hall. New Orleans; Radio operators, Pfc. Thomas Ezekiel, Columbus, Ga.; T-5 Mora

54th Coast Artillery

Powell, Detroit: T-5 Melvin Butler, Cincinnati, Ohio; Machine gunner, Sgt. Bishop Beam, Louisville, Ky.; Gun mechanic, Sgt. James H. Johnson, Louisville. 5-2-44

Battalion Sgt. Major S-Sgt. John Gibson, Flint, Mich.; 1-Sgt. Ishmal Cain, Arkansas City, Kan.; Master gunner, T-Sgt. Claude Kitchen, Jacksonville, Mo.; Gun Commander Sgt. Edrean Holley, Norfolk, Va.; Searchlight operators, Sgt. David Smith, McKeesport, Pa., Pvt. Elwood Jones, Philadelphia.

Cannoneers: Pvt. James Kinsey, Wake Forest, N. C.; Pvt. Wilbert Leflair, Baltimoer, Md.: Pvt. Rosco Coleman, Charleston, Miss.; Pvt. Dock Ervin, Tarpoon Springs, Fla.; Ammunition section, Pvt. Cyril Butts, Trinidad, B. W. I.

Evidence Disproves 'Struggle'

Soldier's Death Sentence Shock To British Public

Courier — Pittsburgh, Pa.

6-17-44

By GEORGE PADMORE, London Correspondent

LONDON—(Via Wireless)—One of the most sensational cases ever to result in the death penalty for a Negro soldier by a U.S. court-martial, has been ended here. The findings have aroused nationwide press and public reaction. The decision was based on the statement of a woman who alleged that she left her husband in bed and walked 100 yards, in her nightdress, to show a Negro soldier the way to the railway station, during which time, she further alleged, the Negro drew a knife and forced her to submit to his attentions.

The 30-year-old Negro, whose name is not disclosed, faced a court consisting of seven white officers and one Negro officer, with a colonel presiding. In charge of the prosecution was Captain Culinson, with Major Drew conducting the defense. The Negro's plea was not guilty.

6-17-44

WOMAN'S TESTIMONY

The woman, wife of a truck driver residing in Bath and the mother of two children, told the court that, on the night in question, she was asleep with her husband when she was suddenly awakened by someone knocking at the parlor door. Looking out in the moonlight she said she saw a Negro who asked the way to the Bristol railway station. She said she gave him the directions from her bedroom window.

Continuing her evidence the woman said: 6-17-44

"He asked me to write the directions on paper. I came downstairs, opened the front door and admitted him. I agreed to accompany him towards the station. I went back to my bedroom, put on knickers and an overcoat and told my husband that I was going to show a soldier the way to the station. My husband agreed to this. The time was then 11:30."

HELPED SOLDIER

After walking with the soldier in the direction of the station, the woman testified she told him: "I must reutrn home." He then thanked her and offered to walk back towards the house. On the way there, she said, he drew a knife on her.

"He picked me up and half lifted me over a four-foot wall," she testified. "I resisted and begged him to put the knife away. He threatened to kill me if I screamed." After the alleged attack, the woman said the soldier made her promise not to talk to anyone. When the affair was over the man went towards the station and she walked toward her house, she testified.

Before reaching the door, the woman reportedly met her husband, who asked the reason for her excited condition, whereupon she told him the soldier had assaulted her, but begged her husband not to pursue the man because he had a knife. The husband took her instead to an air raid precautions post, wheer his wife was examined by a British police surgeon.

EVIDENCE FOUND? 6-17-44

Giving evidence, the woman said: "One leg of my knickers was torn. I had never seen the tear before." She added: "When I was being taken to see the doctor we passed a colored soldier. I was sure he was the one who assaulted me by the shape of his back and also by his coughing and spitting. The soldier had his face 'all screwed up.' He asked me, 'What's this all about, lady?'"

Under cross-examination by the soldier's advocate, the woman admitted: "My husband said okay when I said I had better go down to see the soldier knocking at the door. My husband found me in the road because he had heard me directing the man to the railway station. I was away about 20 minutes. It was bright moonlight. The soldier held the knife in his right hand and I could feel it being pressed into my back."

NOT SURE OF IDENTITY

In reply to a query from a member of the court, the woman stated: "It was about 11:20 p. m. when the soldier called. I spoke with him for about five minutes at the window before opening the front door. I cannot now identify the soldier in court and neither would I be able to identify him if brought into court." 6-17-44

The husband next gave evidence. He said:

"My wife woke me saying that somebody was knocking at the door. I heard a conversation. The person said: 'I am sorry to trouble you at this time of night but I am absolutely lost. Could you tell me ways and means of getting to Bristol?'"

The husband continued: "My wife went downstairs after dressing and I heard her unlock the door and ask the soldier inside. After a few minutes there was silence. I waited a little longer and then, as I could not make out why she had not returned, I put on my trousers and went downstairs. I found the gas lighted and thought my wife was in the garden. When I found out she was not there I thought as she was explaining the way to the station my wife might have gone to show the soldier the way." 6-17-44

HUSBAND CONTINUES STORY

The man continued: "I went in the same direction and when halfway down the avenue I saw someone coming at top speed. It was my wife. I said: 'Whatever is the matter?' She replied: 'Oh, he's got a knife.' I said: 'Where is he?' She replied: 'Don't go. He will stab you with his knife.' She told me she had been assaulted. She was near collapse. I took her to the air raid post."

U.S. police investigators giving evidence said that the Negro had signed a confession. The police, however, admitted extracting the confession after the man had been made to stand at attention for 45 minutes during questioning.

SAYS HE HAD "DATE"

When called upon to testify in his own behalf the soldier denied the charge, saying:

"I had made a date with the woman between 8:30 and 9. She said she couldn't see me then, but would see me later. She told me to knock at a certain house and described the house. I went there after 11:30 and knocked. She stuck her head out of the window. I heard her talking to someone. She rushed downstairs and invited me in. I heard someone moving upstairs and asked her to direct me on the way to Bristol. I walked out of the door and she walked behind me." 6-17-44

PREVIOUS KNOWLEDGE

The soldier continued: "I went into the field. We had been there a couple of times before. I helped her over the wall. She lay down and unbuttoned her coat. She asked for two pounds ($9.60). I told her I had well over one pound. She walked off saying: 'I will get you into trouble.' I just laughed and walked off."

Testifying of his previous relationship with the woman, the soldier said:

"I saw her for the first time at the Cross Keys public house. I asked her if she knew any nice girls. Finally, I popped the question to her and she said: 'Why not?' She asked for one pound ($4.80) and I gave it to her. When they picked me up, it was the third time I had been with her. I walked slowly out of the field and did not see her husband."

Under cross-examination the soldier told the court: "I had had only one cup of tea and nothing to eat before the investigators questioned me. I didn't eat anything from Friday until 5 p. m. Saturday in the prison camp. It was after they had prepared a statement that the investigators called the captain." 6-17-44

DENIES MP'S CLAIM

The soldier alleged that the military police did not write down what he said and did not read their statement to him in the presence of the captain. The man also stated that the investigators had used profanity to him. At the time of the investigation no U.S. Army officers were present.

When a police investigator was cross-examined, the witness said: "The accused seemed normal and all right. It is correct that while being examined the accused had to stand at attention. While standing at attention the soldier fainted and fell down. Nobody touched him."

Another police witness said:

"I questioned the soldier continuously for 45 minutes. We finally secured a statement. It was written down."

When called to the stand the captain said: "I was present when the investigator read the statement in the presence of the accused."

The prosecuting advocate then read the signed statement to the court. 6-17-44

NO APPARENT STRUGGLE

Called to give expert medical testimony, Dr. Charles Robert Gibson, British police surgeon, said, in reply to questions put by the defending advocate, that he had found no evidence of a struggle, that the only injuries were superficial scratches on the woman's leg. "One cannot possibly say there was any evidence of a pronounced struggle. The scratches could have been caused by the woman's climbing over the wall."

Replying to a question put by the colored member of the court martial, the doctor said:

"I don't think there was any serious resistance, providing she was in a state of mind in which she could resist. The average woman struggles."

ADMITS "CONTACT"

Under cross-examination the doctor revealed that the woman had been suffering from shock. Her pulse was 112 instead of 70 or 72. In addition her pulse was of very low voltage. The only injuries were bruises and superficial scratches on the left leg, all below the knee. He had examined her thighs and abdomen and found no signs of bruising or scratching. She had had recent sexual connection.

Demanding acquittal, the defense counsel told the court martial: "This story by the woman is rather incredible. She gets out of bed in the middle of the night, leaves her husband in bed, then leaves home and walks off with a strange colored soldier to show him the way into town. It was not necessary for her to have gone at all. The doctor's testimony shows that no force was used by the man and the woman, according to her story, offered no resistance."

WITNESSES REFUTE KNIFE ANGLE

"It is not logical that a man who intended rape would have helped her over a fence and then spread his coat on the ground. That was not the act of a man committing rape. I have brought witnesses to prove that the soldier has never had a knife in his possession." 6-17-44

During the earlier proceedings, a Negro sergeant was called to give evidence concerning the knife alleged to have been used by the accused to threaten the woman. The sergeant said: "I have known the accused for 17 months and have never known him to possess a knife. He was very well liked by all the men with whom he works."

A corporal also gave evidence, saying: "I have known the accused for six months and have never known him to own a knife. He is not a fanatical individual."

MAJOR SIFTS FACTS

Continuing to address the court, Major Drew, defense counsel, said: "In order to prove rape, it is necessary to prove that the woman involved used all her powers of physical resistance against the act. In this case there was none offered. There were many chances when the woman could have called out in this very densely populated district. The wall was only four feet high and she could have screamed or done anything else."

Major Drew continued: "Another possibility is that the state of surprise she was in might have been caused by the fact that she was caught by her husband who was supposed to be safely in bed when actually he was only ten or 15 feet away from the spot where she had climbed over the wall. The mere fact that the soldier signed the statement is no indication of guilt. It was forced upon the accused, who didn't know what was going on and only after he had been threatened by the persons trying to get the statement from him." 6-17-44

After the prosecuting counsel, Captain Culinson, had addressed the court, the president, following a short retirement in camera, said: "We find you guilty and sentence you by the unanimous vote of every member present to be hanged by the neck until dead."

The case has roused the greatest public indignation. Protest letters have been pouring in to the U.S. Army authorities and to newspapers. A leading editorial in the London Daily Mirror reveals that it has received a large number of letters commenting on the case. The letters reveal widespread feeling of uneasiness at this man having to pay the extreme penalty.

The newspaper goes on to quote: "Having read the awful report of evidence we have no hesitation in saying that there are certain points in the case which would have inspired an element of reasonable doubt in the mind of a British jury. Popular sentiment would be much appeased if justice could be tempered with mercy in such cases and not in the least in cases where colored men are offenders. 6-17-44

"In America, which has a color problem peculiar to herself, clemency might not be possible. Here, we venture to hope, it may not be impossible as an act of grace to take a different view."

Printing verbatim the court proceedings, the leftish Tribune remarks: "We print it in full even at this critical stage of the war because one of the purposes for which our men are fighting is the defense or restoration of dignity and equality for all individuals whatever their color, race or creed." Other newspapers published similar comments.

Philadelphia Tribune

GI Gets Jailed For Operation Of Black Mart

Philadelphia Pa.

12-30-44

Private Merchel Maze, Jr., of 2nd street near Market, Chester, a soldier in France, was given a prison sentence of 15 years for participating in one of Paris numerous black markets.

The Army disclosed last week that the soldier, along with two companions, diverted over 11,000 packages of Army cigarets into illegal channels.

He was captured after moving into a Paris hotel with cigarets and smoking tobacco that he admits buying from an Army truck driver.

Hegyiest 93rd Unit Had Chance to Meet Enemy

American — Baltimore, Md. 9-9-44

Big Gun Outfit Ready, Itching for Battle; Philly Looie Among Easterners in the Group

WITH 93RD DIVISON IN THE SOUTHWEST PACIFIC — (Via Courier)—The heaviest 93rd Division artillery group has not yet had a chance to try itself against the enemy, but when its day

AFRO War Correspondent with U.S. Troops in Central Pacific

By VINCENT TUBBS

[Copyright, Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

comes, it will positively be ready.

Trained to fire the 155-mm. howitzer or 4.5-inch gun, some sections of this gun group have gotten ready to "fire for effect" within six minutes after a fire mission has been signaled to them. Normally a gun crew of this type requires eleven minutes or better.

To "fire for effect' 'means that the section of four or more guns is ready to start dropping the 98-pound, 2-foot long and 6 inches around high explosive shells directly on the target.

How Targets Are Spotted

This is done after a series of orders passed along to gun positions from a liaison spotter plane or from a forward observation officer. 9-9-44

The liaison plane may spot the target from the air while the observation officer may spot it from an observation post high in a tree or he may have come upon the target while patrolling with infantrymen.

In the latter case, the patrol withdraws a few hundred yards and the officer calls for artillery by speaking the words "fire mission" into a field telephone or walkie-talkie.

Back on the guns an executive officer shouts, "battery adjust," which is the artilleryman's way of saying get ready. With further information from the spotter plane or the observation officer, he goes on with his orders.

After a short interval, the cannoneer answers and then comes the order to fire. 9-9-44

The Men Behind the Scenes

Behind the cannoneers, gun pointers, ammunition passers and fire directors are still other men who, although they may never have a part in actually firing a gun, play an important role just the same. They make up what is called the service battery.

Their job is to play nursemaid to the remainder of the unit by providing its water, fuel, food, clothing and ammunition at the right time in the right place.

Since coming overseas early this year, this artillery group has handled more than 15,000 rounds of ammunition, fired 2,500 in practice; handled or consumed over 100,000 gallons of fuel and 300,000 rations—each ration representing 3 pounds of meat, bread and vegetables consumed by each man each day. 9-9-44

Currently, this part of division artillery is living like the infantrymen. On an island almost entirely its own where there is a daily miniature cloudburst and a series of nightly showers, the artillerymen are building themselves a home on the surface of waist-deep mud.

Officers in The Unit

Colored officers in the unit are:

First Lts. Warren J. Allen, Chicago; Ellis J. Diggs, Indianapolis; William George, Chicago; Allen M. Johnson, Houston, Tex.; Thaddeus B. McCray, Cleveland; Owen Walker, Columbus, O.; Scipio White, Philly.; Second Lieuts. Albert S. Cannon, Chicago; Julian Dawson, Chicago; George W. Jackson, Washington; Frank Readus, Chicago; Charlie Sanders, Atlanta; Russell Taylor, Chicago; Chief Warrant Officer Edward Yeatman, Chicago, and Warrant Officer (j.g.) Robert Deadman, Marshall, Texas. 9-9-44

Liaison pilots attached to the unit are First Lieuts. Leander A. Hall, Mobile, Ala., a Morgan State College graduate, and Welton I. Taylor, Chicago; Capt. Charles Lomax, Washington, is medical officer and highest ranking colored officer in the unit. He is a Howard graduate.

Easterners in The Unit

Among Easterners whose duty it is to fire the medium artillery pieces are:

T/Sgt. Robert L. Brooks, 414 Warner Street, N.W.; Washington; Sgt. Charles W. Williams, 1319 S. 47th Street; Cpl. Joseph A. Smith, 1623 Annin Street; Pfc. Jack Harris, 430 N. Holly Street, and Sgt. John Montgomery, 1541 S. Bouvier Street, all of Philly; Sgt. William H. Harris, 130 Winters Avenue, Baltimore; Sgt. Harry J. Morrison, 104 Sherman Avenue, and Pvt. Samuel Wooley, 18 Montgomery Street, both of Newark, N. J. 9-9-44

NEW YORKERS

T/5 Louis Cohen, T/4 Freddie Tanksley, Pvt. Ralph Aheano, Pfc. Crosby Campbell, Sgt. John Coleman, Cpl. John Dade, Pvt. Richard Lambert, Pfc. Angel Rosario, Pvt. Walon Plum, Pfc. Arthur Pegram, Pfc. Joseph Rhodes, T/5 Henry H. Riddle, Pfc. Edward Robinson, Pfc. Carl B. Nowlin, all of NYC.

